Panel fails to agree on urban college plan

By BARBARA PARNES State News Staff Writer

The Educational Policies Committee (EPC) released a preliminary report Tuesday saying it could not reach a consensus on whether the proposed College of Urban Development and Social Change is the best way for MSU to meet its expanding commitment to urban affairs.

The EPC, in a report to the provost brought before the Academic Council Tuesday as an information item, said it could reach no decision on the proposed college because of the complex issues involved and the time limitations on the committee's deliberations.

After considerable debate on the EPC report, the council passed a resolution recommended by the steering committee accepting EPC's conclusions and directing EPC to further study what might be the "most effective organizational structure" for MSU to meet a growing urban commitment.

Lester Manderscheid, EPC chairman, said the committee might be able to formulate a full set of recommendations by April. Gordon Guyer, steering committee chairman, assured the council he would call a special meeting of the council when EPC completes its work.

"We could not reach a general agreement," Manderscheid said. "We had a lot of people who felt they couldn't vote 'yes' or 'no' on some issues." He said the committee is finishing a full report listing areas of agreement and disagreement with the college proposal.

EPC began studying the urban affairs proposal in December at the provost's request. Development of the college proposal began nearly two years ago by the staff of the Center for Urban Affairs (CUA). During its deliberations, EPC sought views of faculty, students and other interested persons on the proposal.

Green urges black official at each Big Ten university

By CRISPIN Y. CAMPBELL State News Staff Writer

CHICAGO, Ill. — Robert L. Green, director of MSU's Center for Urban Affairs, called for the hiring of a black associate commissioner at each Big Ten school and for the establishment of a Big Ten Equal Opportunity Committee to examine the hiring policies at conference schools. Green's remarks were made at the Big Ten athletic meeting held here Tuesday.

Green spoke to the group of about 40 for one hour and 45 minutes. The discussion was closed to the public and press.

After the meeting Green said: "My perception is that the response from the athletic directors and the faculty representatives was positive. Mr. Duke (Big Ten commissioner) assured me after the meeting that they will give full consideration to each concern raised and recommendation offered through our report."

Green, along with Joseph H. McMillan, director of the Equal Opportunity Programs at MSU; Thomas Gunnings, asst. director of minority counseling and the coalition of black athletes at MSU presented a 20-page research-oriented report listing the issues, concerns and status of blacks in the Big Ten. The proposed black associate

ITT afraid of breakup, letter says

WASHINGTON (AP) — An attorney for International Telephone and Telegraph Corp. (ITT) was quoted Tuesday as saying government pursuit last spring of antitrust action against the giant conglomerate might have led to its court-ordered breakup.

Acting Atty. Gen. Richard G. Kleindienst cited a letter and accompanying memo from attorney Lawrence E. Walsh as giving the principal reason why the government postponed filing an antitrust action against ITT with the Supreme Court.

The documents were released at a Senate Judiciary Committee hearing reconsidering Kleindienst's nomination to be attorney general.

Walsh, an outside consultant to ITT, argued in the documents that the Supreme Court probably would agree to breaking up ITT and said such a judgment would lead to economic damage.

The government eventually reached an out-of-court settlement with ITT that allowed it to hang on to Hartford Fire Insurance Co. Columnist Jack Anderson says the agreement is linked to a $400,000 commitment by ITT to the Republican National Convention in San Diego this summer.

"Looking back at the results of government antitrust cases in the Supreme Court," Walsh wrote Kleindienst last April 16, "one must realize that if the government urges an expanded interpretation of the vague language of the Clayton Antitrust Act, there is a high probability it will succeed."

commissioner would have a major responsibility for implementing the recommendations made, and would work directly with athletic directors and faculty representatives in desegregating the Big Ten schools.

The committee would consist of two representatives, one black, from each conference school to be appointed by the university president with the advice of the athletic director, the faculty representatives and black and white athletes. These representatives would be appointed from outside the athletic structure.

Other recommendations include: • The hiring of blacks at every officiating level in each sanctioned Big Ten athletic event — particularly basketball and football — by fall 1972.

• A fifth-year plan of financial support to assist athletes in finishing their degrees after they have spent four years as athletes.

• That each athletic department post the names of athletes holding a summer job, their place of employment and salaries, and at each university post a list of summer jobs available through its resources.

• The hiring of black counselors to counsel athletes throughout the athletic departments, with special emphasis on the unique needs of black students.

The report also touched on job discrimination stating:

• No black clerical employes, secretaries, publicity directors, team physicians or any blacks are employed in any other capacity by the athletic departments except for a few black custodians. (A check of Jenison Fieldhouse revealed no blacks employed in any of the above positions.)

• Of the seven Big Ten schools surveyed, there were only two black trainers and a few black assistant or freshman coaches.

"Reflecting on the above information, the staff at every level in athletic departments throughout the Big Ten are virtually all white. This data conclusively indicates that employment segregation in the Big Ten is

New Hampshire vote favors Nixon, Muskie

MANCHESTER, N.H. (AP) — Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine held a commanding lead in the New Hampshire presidential primary Tuesday, out-distancing the Democratic field.

He was not rolling up the landslide percentage he said had been set out for him as a "phantom" opponent.

Sen. George McGovern was running second, polling a vote his supporters were sure to claim as a psychological victory for an invader from South Dakota.

President Nixon swamped two Republican challengers to win a towering GOP primary victory.

The National Broadcasting Co. said its projections showed Muskie the Democratic winner.

The Columbia Broadcasting System projected a 48 per cent winning percentage for Muskie, 33 per cent for McGovern.

With 30 per cent of the anticipated Democratic vote counted, Muskie had 10,560 votes, or 47 per cent of the total. McGovern was polling 7,141 votes, or 32 per cent.

Mayor Sam Yorty of Los Angeles had 8 per cent, Rep. Wilbur D. Mills of Arkansas 7 per cent as a write-in candidate, Sen. Vance Hartke of Indiana 4 per cent.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts, who said he would not be a 1972 candidate, had 1 per cent of the vote on write-in ballots.

With 15 per cent of the likely GOP vote tallied, Nixon had 10,216 votes, or 70 per cent.

Rep. Paul McCloskey of California captured 2,805 votes, for a 19 per cent showing.

McCloskey reaffirmed in Concord his intention to quit the race if he didn't make a 20 per cent showing, and run for re-election to Congress.

Rep. John M. Ashbrook of Ohio had 1,429 votes, a 10 per cent showing.

Cable TV could involve citizens in local affairs

By KRISTEN KELCH State News Staff Writer

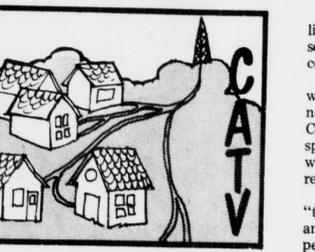

Community Antenna Television (CATV), currently in the embryonic stage at MSU, has the potential to involve more citizens in community affairs. Though no concrete plans have been made concerning the campus and cable systems, some suggestions have been put forth locally.

Presently, the married housing units — Spartan Village, Cherry Lane and University Village — pay an optional fee of $5 per month for service from the National Cable Company. This system enables those who wish the service to receive eleven television channels. Nine of these are programs from broadcasting stations in cities like Flint, Detroit, Grand Rapids and Bay City which are affiliated with the three major networks or are educational television and independent stations. Two channels have been left open.

Whether the system serving the married housing units is defined as a community antenna television system or simply a master antenna is a question which has been plaguing the National Cable Company, the East Lansing City Council and the University.

In 1969, the University entered into a 10-year contract with the National Cable Company which called for the company to provide "community television service to the married housing units" on an optional basis, under no obligation to the University.

Erling Jorgensen, director of Instructional Television, said that the University made the agreement in order to enable those in married housing to receive television signals. Prior to this agreement, married housing occupants could not get good reception because the housing units are built with steel girders. Jorgensen explained that the University did not realize the long-term potentials of cable TV, so possible benefits to the University were not explored before the contract was signed.

Last in a series

National Cable claims that it is serving married housing with a master antenna, not a cable television system. A master antenna is designed to serve only one customer and is not under obligation to provide all the services that cable is required to provide. However, because each subscriber in married housing, and not the University, pays a fee to the company, the question arises as to whether the system is indeed, cable. Cable systems serve more than one customer and therefore receive money from individual subscribers and not one source.

Regardless of whether the system is master antenna or cable, an expanded cable system could become a part of the University.

Edward J. Terdal, president of the Married Students Union, has a plan for this expansion. Terdal believes that the married students on this campus lack significant communication between themselves and with the University.

"We feel isolated out there in Spartan Village, even families are isolated from each other," Terdal said.

Terdal explained that one of the main purposes for organizing the Married Students Union was to promote better communication between this special group — living both in married housing and off campus — and the University.

The Married Students Union board would like to have partial control of a cable system serving them in order to solve some of their communication problems, Terdal said.

He explained that the first step in this plan would be to get the University to draw up a new contract with the National Cable Company. The contract would have to specify that the Married Students Union would receive a percentage of subscriber revenues.

"The system makes money," Terdal said, "the company is charging $5 a month now and is only covering about 50 per cent of the people in married housing," he continued. Married Students Union would use this money to pay for production facilities and ongoing production for married housing television.

Next, Terdal explained that the Married Students Union board would have to require that all occupants of married housing pay a cable fee as part of the rent structure. For those who do not have television sets, or prefer not to use the service, a refund would be possible.

Hooked up with different departments and schools at the University, the system could provide a variety of programming. At the onset of the operation, closed circuit television, the TV and Radio dept., WMSB and Continuing Education Service would have video tapes available to rely to the cable audience.

Terdal indicated that other departments and schools at the University would have an interest in being connected to the system. He said that educators in the School of Education, the Institute for Family and Child Research, the Day School and the Medical School have shown an interest in a cable tie to the married students.

Terdal said that programming of the cable system could include student government, cultural events, guest speakers, preschool child education, sports events, local news

Bids for convention reps due

By BILL WHITING
State News Staff Writer

Students interested in running for delegate seats to county political conventions should get their signatures before the end of the term, according to Al Flory, director of legislative relations for ASMSU.

The deadline for filing petitions with the Ingham County clerk in Mason is March 24, Flory said recently. Because this comes during the term break, it will be necessary for students to submit their petitions early if they intend to be gone, he said.

The petitions, which are available through the county clerk, the ASMSU Legislative Relations office, and local party organizations must be signed by 15 to 20 precinct residents. The only other qualifications are that the petitioner be a registered voter residing in the precinct where he is running.

"We are hoping that students registered at home will run for precinct delegate, too," Flory said. He estimated there are approximately 8,000 such students at MSU and pointed out that it is perfectly legal for them to run for positions in their home district.

"Up to 60 per cent of the precinct delegate seats have been vacant in the past and this number could be even higher this year," he said. "The primary bill, which repealed the one delegate per precinct law for Kent, Oakland, and Wayne Counties, also opened up thousands of seats that have never existed prior to this."

Last week Ingham County Democrats voted to establish a ration of one delegate for each 50 voters, based on the last election for secretary of state. Party Chairman Winthrop Rowe, estimated this will result in between 115 and 125 delegates from East Lansing.

Though Rowe speculated last week that approximately 25 seats could be won by students in East Lansing, Flory estimated that at least 40 will be occupied by students, while the number could run as high as 90. He pointed out that eight city precincts take in campus areas, while several others include the so-called student ghetto.

Roger M. Busfield Jr., Ingham County Republican party chairman, said Monday the the Republican delegate allocation was not yet finalized, though he was "sure there will be at least 50 delegates" from East Lansing. He pointed out that delegate allocations vary with each party, but that local representation will be considerably higher than the number previously sent to county conventions.

Busfield was critical of local officials for redistricting city precincts earlier this year, making it more difficult to accurately proportion the vote from previous elections. Whereas three to five delegates were apportioned for each of the 14 precincts in the past, the current 25 precincts will probably be allocated two or three.

"If they hadn't redistricted, it would have been real simple," he said.

While it is not legally binding, Flory recommends that petitioners have their petitions notarized. He said that he would accept notarized petitions which will then be forwarded to county clerk.

Flory explained that the election will be along with the April 14 primary. He pointed out that it will be possible to vote for different presidential candidates and convention delegates. "It is so little work to become a delegate, yet so important," he said. "Platforms and policies made by these delegates."

Rogers sees prospects for peace in 10-point plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State William P. Rogers said Tuesday 1972 holds fresh opportunities for peace, but he coupled a 10-point outline of foreign policy optimism with some hard words about the Soviet Union.

In his introduction to the State Dept.'s annual report on foreign relations, the secretary looked back on last year to say "few years will see the innovations or the fundamental changes of 1971. Nevertheless, I look forward to 1972 as a year of more than ordinary progress."

The 621-page report covered the same ground, although in more detail, as President Nixon's State of the World message.

Rogers, for instance, for the first time gave high U.S. official acknowledgement in writing that the former Pakistani province of East Bengal "is now separately governed." This, combined with his first use of the name Bangladesh indicated the Nixon administration is very near to recognizing the new nation.

In a briefing with newsmen, the secretary would not provide details on the considerations concerning Bangladesh recognition, but he said the presence of Indian troops was an important factor in determining the timing on recognition.

The report, sent to the House Foreign Affairs Committee and the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, signaled also that the administration wants to expand the concept of the current Strategic Arms Limitation Talks now going on with the Soviet Union.

"The initial agreements, as significant as they will be," Rogers said, "must be the start of a process of regulating nuclear arms in the interests of peace—a process now taking place primarily between the Soviet Union and the United States but one which should in time extend to others as well."

After saying Moscow showed responsibility in negotiating an arms control, restraint in the Berlin talks and cooperation in many other economic and social matters, Rogers added: "I cannot say, however, that the Soviet Union exercised great restraint in South Asia. It was not helpful in promoting peace in Indochina. And its record in the Middle East was at best mixed."

"Our relations will not be harmonious, therefore, until further evolution in Soviet thinking overcomes its temptation to exploit explosive situations for national advantage."

Faulkner appeals to Irish

Prime Minister Biran Faulkner appealed to the Irish Republic Tuesday for help in combating terrorism that left nearly 200 persons wounded in Northern Ireland in two days.

The British government, helping Faulkner in a fight against the Irish Republican Army's campaign, expressed concern that psychopathic killers may be emerging in this province.

Faulkner urged the neighboring Irish republic to cut off cross-border traffic in explosives and asked his own people to help a manhunt for guerrillas who bombed a crowded restaurant and movie theater in Belfast.

Two wounded in hijacking

Two men armed with shotguns and revolvers shot and wounded a pilot and an airline mechanic Tuesday in Miami, Fla. and hijacked a two-engine seaplane to Cuba.

They forced the copilot to take off following an exchange of gunfire with policemen on the ground.

Five passengers who had boarded the Chalk International Airline plane for its scheduled flight to Bimini, in the Bahamas, were aboard the craft, flown by copilot Bob Wallace.

A sixth passenger jumped off and sounded the alarm.

The hijackers shot pilot James Cothron, 49, and Douglas MacKenzie, 48, an electrical engineer, in commandeering the craft at the Chalk Airline's island station, between Miami and Miami Beach.

It landed in Havana two hours later.

Primaries called useless

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said Tuesday in Washington all state primaries are "useless and worthless."

"They are a waste of time, a waste of money, and a waste of energy," he told newsmen.

Mansfield has long advocated a proposed constitutional amendment that would require all state primaries to be held on the same day, to serve as a sort of national, preliminary straw vote.

Credit variation backed

The Federal Reserve Board asked Congress Tuesday in Washington to give the president authority to vary the investment tax credit in an effort to stabilize funds for the housing industry.

Allowing the president to vary the credit from zero to 10 or 15 per cent would enable use of the credit in times of economic slack to stimulate the economy and thus provide more money for lending, the board said in a report to Congress. The recently restored credit now stands at 7 per cent.

Meal cost reduction urged

President Nixon received a report from the National Advisory Council on Child Nutrition Tuesday in Washington urging a high priority effort to extend free and reduced-price meals for school children so that every one of the nation's schools will have such a program within three years.

Declaring that federal food assistance programs have expanded dramatically in the Nixon administration, the 13-member council also called for nutrition education to help close the gap in public knowledge about what constitutes an adequate diet.

Secretary of Agriculture Earl L. Butz and members of the council presented the report to Nixon, and Butz said the President is a very enthusiastic backer of this program and wants to move on to the unfinished task ahead.

INCREASES ROAD FUNDS

Bill called aid to county

By KAREN ZURAWSKI
State News Staff Writer

Ingham County will be "one of the big gainers across the board" from Gov. Milliken's transportation package, according to Earl Rogers, engineer-director of the County Road Assn. of Michigan.

Under the $83 million transportation package, Ingham would start out receiving $666,000 a year, which represents a 20.5 per cent increase over last year's funding. Ingham would also be one of 14 counties in the state, among Michigan's 83 counties, that would receive at least a 20 per cent increase in road funding from the package.

Rogers attributed Ingham's increase to the shift in the county road formula which recognizes urban needs now more than ever before.

"Up to now every needs study defined roads because they laid outside the city boundaries as rural," he explained. "The important thing now is that we're defining an urban area outside the city limits and giving roads an urban classification."

"I don't think there is any question of benefit," Rogers continued, referring to the more urban counties.

One of the biggest effects of the increased funding will be an expansion of some of the narrow two-lane county roads to four-lane. In some cases, 30,000 cars a day are operating on a road that was built for 9,000 a day, he said.

"No wonder there is congestion," he added. "It will only get worse in 10 or 15 years, and we can't wait with something like that."

Every county, under the package, will receive at least an 8 per cent increase in funds across the board, he said. In addition, counties would earn an extra $6,000 per mile on primary roads and an extra $1,000 per mile of local roads.

There won't be a great deal of change to be seen in the out-state areas, he noted. However, without the additional funds services would be restricted and construction slowed down, he said.

The County Road Assn. of Michigan was one of the few road groups which supported the idea of mass transit funds being provided out of the traditional highway user's tax.

"It is essential that we save our bus systems," Rogers said. "We are responsible to maintain mobility for people who don't have a car, or can't operate one."

Rogers also sees the mass transit supporters as a source of protection for the highway fund, once they become a part of it, from the encroachment of other people.

ASMSU-still seeks petitions' validation

ASMSU chairman Harold Buckner said Tuesday that he does not expect to have the petitions seeking to place the new constitution on Thursday's referendum validated in time for tonight's meeting.

The ASMSU board meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. in 102 Wonders Hall.

The board will be informed as to how many signatures have been collected, Buckner said. It will be up to the members as to whether they will decide to do anything with the invalidated signatures, he said.

Buckner said he is very pessimistic about the prospect of the constitution being placed on Thursday's referendum along with the proposed amendment to abolish ASMSU's duty to levy a student tax.

If the board decides not to accept the invalidated signatures, the signatures will still be sent to the Administration Building for validation, Buckner said. If there are enough signatures to constitute a referendum, one will be held at the beginning of next term regardless of the fact that the board might reject the signatures tonight.

"Out-state there is a protective support for it now," he said. "With the recognized fund of mass transit provided for in-state support increase."

Rogers disputes the idea roads cause urban sprawl. "Don't blame the highway for the automobile," he said. "The highway follows automobile."

He explained that a street start out as a gravel or black two-lane road. Then people move out and have greater distance to go to work there is a need for more roads it is expanded to five lanes.

Roads, he stressed, try to the traffic generated by urban sprawl, they are not the cause.

"Planners are saying that's is going to happen, and highway people have to see he said. "I don't think indicates we encourage it."

Rogers commented that auto generates low density development, and as densities increase, the city sprawls out.

"It's very seldom that you into extreme densities," he added that "land use control are not working."

"Some land use control has been observed," Rogers stated, very pessimistic that satisfied transit modes can be developed unless something like control is allowed, government or otherwise.

"But, I wonder if the suburban dweller will give up his lawn his swimming pool," he said. "Eventually he'll have to."

PIRGIM branch forms at MSU

By JANE SEABERRY
State News Staff Writer

The emergence of public interest research groups (PIRGs) across the country has resulted in the formation of the Public Interest Research Group in Michigan (PIRGIM) with a branch now established on campus.

Through proposed student taxes, these nationwide organizations will attempt to emulate the work of consumer advocate Ralph Nader, a - student operations. The campus-based PIRGIM workers are planning a leaflet, poster and speaking campaign to hold petitioning spring term for the proposed $3 yearly tax for the group. Jan Kondratuk, one of two MSU delegates to the state PIRGIM board, expects consumer business to begin next fall if the chapter is adopted.

The operations here would be patterned after those of the PIRGIM branch forming at U - M. After its fourth week of petitioning, the U - M branch received 700 petitions and 11,000 signatures, according to Ms. Kondratuk. Next week the petitioners plan to go before the Board of Regents to gain approval for the plan.

The U - M petition states as the purpose of PIRGIM "to articulate and pursue through the media, the institutions of government, the courts and other legal means the concern of students on issues of general public interest. These areas will include consumer protection, environmental preservation, race and sex discrimination, and the role and function of private and public institutions in the lives of the average citizen. PIRGIM shall be nonpartisan, nonprofit and student controlled."

The petition also states that $1.50 will be collected each semester and a refund will be granted if desired, during the third week of each semester. Although money obtained would be used by PIRGIM, the fee would be collected through the fee collection processes of the university.

So far, the MSU branch has 12 students working in their office at 23 Student Services Bldg. and hopes to recruit several hundred students to help with petitioning.

In Oregon, dozens of students worked for several months gathering students and administrative support for their PIRG.

At the University of Minnesota over 400 students worked for two weeks gathering 22,000 signatures by setting up tables in each building, canvassing door-to-door in residence halls, fraternities, and sororities and at bus stops. Since winning support and establishing itself on the campus, the University of Minnesota branch of the Minnesota Public Interest Group (MPIRG) has begun fee collecting procedures and is in the process of hiring a professional staff of 10 to 15 full-time scientists and lawyers. MPIRG is already working on a statewide food price comparison survey, investigations of permit applications for dumping wastes and an analysis of the Minnesota plan for implementing the Clean Air Act of 1970. It is also involved in voter registration, housing developments, preservation of wilderness areas, product safety, prison reforms, and snowmobile regulations.

The Portland State University branch of the Oregon State Public Interest Research Group (OSPIRG) has also initiated activities, with an investigation of the pumping of sulfite liquors into the Pacific Ocean. It has also begun work on a project aimed at disclosing the extent of water pollution in the state's river system with students at the 11 other OSPIRG branches helping with the study.

Though OSPIRG and MPIRG are presently the only two student PIRGs actively operating, students in more than 20 states have indicated interest in the plan.

ATTY. GEN. MAY NOT RULE

Tuition case up to court

By MICHAEL FOX
State News Staff Writer

The Michigan's attorney general's office said Monday the relationship between tuition residency and voting residency may be decided by the Michigan courts rather than an attorney general's ruling.

Eugene Krasicky, asst. attorney general, said a suit reportedly filed in Washtenaw County Circuit Court last week would "make it inappropriate" for the attorney general to rule on the domiciliary issue. The Washtenaw suit was filed last week by six University of Michigan (U-M) students who challenged the U-M's policy of charging out-state tuition to students who have established domiciliary in Michigan for voting purposes.

"If the Ann Arbor suit raises the same issue, we will need to consider it inappropriate to render an opinion. It is our policy not to issue opinions on issues which are being litigated in Michigan courts," Krasicky said.

The Michigan attorney general's office was asked on Jan. 24 by State Sen. Phillip O. Pittenger, R-Lansing, for a ruling on the domiciliary question. Krasicky said his office has not yet determined if the Ann Arbor suit is similar to Pittenger's request.

"If a student is considered a resident of the community in which he attends college for voting purposes (which was indeed ruled as fact by a recent Supreme Court decision) would the student also be considered a resident of the campus community when it comes to 'in-state' versus 'out-state' tuition," Pittenger stated in his request for a ruling.

The Ann Arbor suit is a class action on behalf of U-M students in a situation of having Michigan voting rights, but paying out-state fees. The U-M, like MSU, has continued to classify out-of-state students on the basis of initial acceptance information.

While University officials have refused comment on the domiciliary revisions which were tabled at the November board of trustees meeting, the administration reportedly would like to have the state legislature pass enabling laws to resolve the conflict between voting residency and tuition residency.

Vaughn to release law school report

A legislative report recommending placement of the state's next law school at MSU will be made public today, State Rep. Jackie Vaughn III, D-Detroit, said Tuesday.

Vaughn said he will hold a press conference today to release the report of the Joint Legislative Committee on Legal Education in Michigan. Vaughn, co-chairman of the committee, made this statement before a campus journalism class.

He said the report has already been forwarded to President Wharton. Vaughn said he urged release of the report now to dispel rumors that he has been delaying release in order to influence trustee approval of the proposed College of Urban Development and Social Change.

The special legislative committee to study legal education was established in summer 1971. MSU administrators and several state legislators met in September on campus to discuss the proposed MSU law school.

Legislative staff aides had office space in Fee Hall to study the feasibility of establishing the law school at MSU.

Bureau changes policy on inmate, news contacts

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Federal Bureau of Prisons has changed its policy on inmate contacts with the news media and says it now permits newsmen to send uncensored letters to inmates.

Carlson said letters to newsmen are to be forwarded "directly, promptly, sealed and without inspection." "Incoming correspondence from the news media," Carlson added, "will be inspected solely for contraband, or for content which would incite conduct which is illegal." The new policy went into effect Feb. 11. A bureau spokesman said no general announcement was made, but added "we've made the statement available to anyone who has asked."

The spokesman said informing prisoners of their new right has been left up to the wardens of the separate federal prisons.

The new policy statement says newsmen will not be permitted to interview inmates.

But it says newsmen are encouraged to visit federal prisons to report on conditions, institutional facilities, programs and activities.

Previously, federal prisoners have been allowed to send uncensored letters to "officials such as congressmen, judges and other government officials."

The bureau spokesmen said sealed correspondence with lawyers up to now has been prohibited, but that this policy, too, will soon be changed.

AAUP criticizes action of board in bias dispute

The American Assn. of University Professors (AAUP) passed a resolution Tuesday voicing its concerns with the board of trustees' handling of the Big Ten Conference controversy.

The resolution was passed unanimously by the MSU Council of AAUP. We fear that the statement of the board that it "... recognized the historical excellence of the administration of conference (Big Ten) policy ..." conveys an unwillingness to take seriously the charges raised by profs. Green, Gunnings and McMillan," the resolution said.

This is referring to a resolution by the board of trustees Feb. 24 condemning the recent actions of Robert Green, director of the Center for Urban Affairs; Joseph McMillan, director of Equal Opportunity Programs; and Thomas Gunnings, asst. director of minority counseling.

This action taken by the board of trustees prior to the meeting of the Big Ten representatives might be interpreted as endorsing the quo.

We feel that such a position on the part of the board again attempts the prerogatives of the faculty and of the administrators to have the responsibility for dealing with athletics within the conference," the resolution stated.

Urban affairs college:
don't confuse the issue

Four MSU trustees have stated in a letter to President Wharton that they oppose the College of Urban Development and Social Change as it is now proposed. Their opposition, though, seems to rest not so much in the academic merit of establishing such a college as in the personalities surrounding it.

Rationality cleverly evades the essence of the six questions raised by the trustees. First, the four took issue with whether there actually is a "body of knowledge" or "area of activity," which is exactly why the college should be established.

Secondly, the trustees question whether the study of race supplies a meaningful basis for the solution of urban problems. With the population of blacks increasing rapidly in the inner cities and with whites fleeing in droves to the suburbs, it would seem highly illogical to sidestep the question of race. In fact, race is one of the central matters to be considered in the urban crisis.

All black?

The four trustees also wonder whether the proposed college will "become primarily or preponderantly for blacks." Strangely enough, the four board members do not issue similar concern about whether the cities will "become primarily or preponderantly for blacks." Hopefully the college will be relevant to all races. The crucial issue at hand, though, is not whether the college should be black or white, but whether it can properly deal with urban concerns.

The four trustees' concerns for employment opportunities of graduates of the college are completely baseless. The University is not exclusively a job training center. It has a duty to society to research vital questions of the day. If the trustees are really worried about MSU grads getting jobs, then they should also focus their attention upon the College of Social Science multidisciplinary program and the entire College of Education.

The last two questions raised by the four trustees lack even more relevance. The four need only read the text of the college proposal to find out "what kind of faculty expertise, training and competence should we select for an attack on the problems of the cities" and "how is it possible to assign the entire faculty of CUA to the new college? What happens to the duties they are now performing?"

Objection

Throughout the entire three-page letter the four trustees issue but one logical, grounded objection to the college proposal. They claim that the usual search and selection process would not be used to name the dean of the college. Instead, they say, Dr. Robert Green would automatically be given the job. This should not be the case. The usual dean selection procedures should be conducted, at least for the sake of protocol.

The trustees' objection to the appointment of Green as the college dean has no root in protocol, however. Even should the search and selection committee choose Green for the deanship, these four trustees would still probably vote against the college. In the letter they stated "we are firmly opposed to naming Dr. Green the dean of any college." The college proposal should be evaluated on its merits alone, not on the personalities of its proponents. It is seriously doubtful whether the trustees dislike the idea of an urban affairs college so much as they dislike Robert Green.

Even though the college is, in essence, the child of Green, infanticide should not be committed because of the identity of the parent. MSU should approve the concept of an urban affairs college, if for no other reason than increased knowledge in the field is so desperately needed to combat the nation's growing urban crisis. The dislike four trustees may or may not harbor toward Robert Green provides no rationale for blocking the establishment of such a college.

Local bus station faced with terminal problem

East Lansing Mayor Wilbur Brookover has been petitioned by more than 60 East Lansing residents to help them obtain a more adequate bus terminal. The present terminal is open from 8:15 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., except on Thursdays and Fridays when it is open until 8:30 p.m.

A problem arises frequently, though, since buses from out of town have a penchant for arriving in the city of East Lansing after 8:30 p.m. Riders often have to wait for buses out in the cold wind, snow, rain, or whatever inclement conditions Michigan might offer that day.

Granted, this is not the most crucial issue facing the city at this time. However, the bus terminal situation presents a definite inconvenience which can be easily corrected.

Attempts should first be made to have the present bus station remain open later than at present. If this is not fiscally possible, arrangements should be made with a local business establishment which stays open late to provide space for those awaiting for buses. The petitioners suggest that the Kellogg Center be used for this purpose, an idea which the University should seriously consider. This clearly is an instance where the University could use its facilities for the good of the entire community.

Presently the East Lansing bus terminal does not serve the community to the fullest possible extent. By acting on the matter now, the East Lansing City Council can make it much more convenient for both East Lansing residents and visitors to the area to keep on busin'.

The Doctor's Bag

By Arnold Werner M.D.

Letters may be addressed to Dr. Werner at MSU Health Center. Names need not be included unless a personal reply is requested.

My gums bleed a little every time I brush my teeth which is two or three times a day. What gives?

Bleeding gums can be caused by a variety of situations. Certain medical illnesses, including some of the vitamin deficiencies (extremely rare) can cause bleeding gums. But, the most common cause of bleeding gums is poor dental hygiene. Many years ago when man did not cook his food well and ate a lot of rough stuff, it is alleged that he did not have the gum and teeth problems we have now since the stuff he ate scraped away any accumulations of food on his teeth. Of course, our primitive relatives never lived long enough to worry about their teeth falling out either.

Modern man's diet of soft foods leaves material accumulating at the margin between the gum and the tooth. This is most apparent in the space between the teeth. A very thin layer of organic material builds up at the juncture of the gum and the teeth. This material is called plaque.

Some undermining of the gum margin takes place and pockets form where bacteria can nestle and grow in the plaque, causing cavities. As the plaque builds up, gums become softer and the bony substance that holds the tooth in place can gradually become reabsorbed. This leaves loose teeth which eventually fall out. Once the tooth's foundation is reabsorbed, it is not produced again. This process is probably the major cause of toothlessness in this country. Thick layers of plaque are visible to the eye and appear as a hard, scaly substance which absolutely defies cleaning off with a brush. The usually invisible plaque can be demonstrated if it is stained with a biologic dye for this purpose available in drug stores. The gums themselves require physical stimulation in order to maintain an adequate blood supply and to stay firm and adherent to the tooth.

Following are suggested routines to be followed to avoid the build-up of plaque and the development of dental caries (cavities). Start with a visit to your dentist who will usually have a hygienist carefully scrape off all accumulated debris. Following this, at least daily brushing of your teeth, but primarily your gums, with a soft brush will provide the stimulation to the gums that is necessary to maintain them in a state of good health.

Now comes the tricky part. On a daily basis, you should use unwaxed dental floss to clean the area between the teeth and the junction of the tooth and gum (see above illustration) in case you haven't tried it, using dental floss should be approached as a challenge to your manual dexterity.

The following technique is recommended. Cut off an arm's length of the floss. Wind the floss up on the index and middle fingers of one hand and take one or two turns around the index and middle fingers of the other hand. Now, bracing the dental floss with your thumbs, slip it between your teeth. Pull the dental floss upward gently until it is in contact with the gum and then pull it sideways and back and forth over the surface of the tooth up near the gum margin; pull it sideways in the opposite direction to clean the other tooth. The floss will slip under the gum margin slightly. Try it on your front teeth first and then proceed laterally. The trick, of course, is to clean your molars or back teeth without getting your fist into your mouth. Long fingers and practice helps. As you move from tooth to tooth, you advance the dental floss along from one hand to the next so that you can use a clean section each time. If you are like I am and tend to gag a lot in the morning, you can do it in the evening.

Other techniques suggested to keep your gums in shape include the use of a gum stimulator which is a pencil-like widget with a pointy rubber tip at the end that you stick between your teeth up near the gums and wiggle around. There are also devices that spray a fine pulsatile jet of water with a fair amount of pressure. These are very helpful in cleaning debris out from between your teeth and in stimulating your gums but they should not be directed so they lift the gum away from the tooth. Some bleeding is normal when you embark on a program of gum cleaning. After a week or so, it usually ceases.

What exactly is "non specific urethritis." Is it a form of gonorrhea?

Something nonspecific is exactly inexact. Non specific urethritis refers to an inflammation of the urethra (the tube carrying urine from the bladder in the woman and the common exit for urine and semen in the man). Such a urethritis can be caused by a variety of organisms, but excludes the type of urethritis caused by gonorrhea. These inflammations are treated by antibiotics after a physician determines for sure that syphilis or gonorrhea is not present. Inflammations generally cause annoying itching, but are not dangerous. They should be treated, however.

Werner's gay column helpful

To The Editor:

The recent Doctor's Bag presented a most helpful and needed article. It clarified many misconceptions about gays but unfortunately may have created some confusion specifically in regard to the Gay Liberation Movement. The gay community will I hope respond to these inaccuracies. I will respond only to the doctor's remarks regarding and disregarding my letter to the State News of Feb. 3.

In that letter I commented on Dr. Werner's apparent side-stepping of gay issues and problems. (This observation is in part mitigated by Dr. Werner's "response" letter.) Still, I specifically cited a letter sent to the Doctor's Bag that deserved some comment from Dr. Werner in regard to the homosexual implications it contained. No mention is made of this letter in the recent "Doctor's Bag Special." However, Dr. Werner does state that he has received only one letter dealing with homosexuality in 700 consecutive letters.

If Dr. Werner deals as flippantly with all his letter patients, as I feel he did with the man who tried to rape his roommate, then his count of "one" seems suspect. How many other possible gay related questions go unnoticed in the file? I regret that my letter was needed to "break the ice," as Dr. Werner put it, on the homosexual issue.

Dr. Werner humorously (I prefer not to think derogatorily) refers to me in his response as "Name Withheld." May I point out Dr. Werner that letting one's superiors (those who can and will fire you -- even in this most beautiful academic "world") and one's family (those who love you when you are "good") know that you prefer a hairy chest to a pair of breasts is hard to do. Forgive me for not being totally free from the pressures of a society that you describe as having "prejudices against homosexual activity." I'm glad there are people -- loving straight people -- who are our "brothers and sisters." I know some are with us. But utopia is for the homosexual, as with most other minorities, a long way off. To many, a gay is a "queer" who just walked into the room.

In regard to my reference to Dr. Kinsey's "Sexual Behavior in the Human Male," Dr. Werner feels that I am twisting facts. I quoted Kinsey as saying "about 37 per cent of the male population above the age of puberty has had at least one overt homosexual experience to the point of orgasm." Dr. Werner clarifies my "twisting of facts" by noting that often this ONE experience is isolated and lasts no longer than three years! I did not expect the reader to read "hundreds" for "at least one" nor did I expect him to envision a three year orgasm! Although the idea is certain appeal.

I again call on Dr. Werner, as a bro to answer letters from homosexuals who receives them since they are apparently so few. (Are they any less numerous might ask than those dealing with universal male problem of lack of hair on the left side of the penis? -- See edition of the Doctor's Bag.)

Again thank you Dr. Werner for helpful "Gay Special." It cleared up of misconceptions about gays. We will continue to help us by giving representation in your column. Or is the perplexed penis (breasts or what you) of your heterosexual readers' material for commentary? More on the from the gay community are on the

for New Hampshire

WATERVILLE VALLEY, N.H. — Every four years 465,000 newspapermen and presidential candidates invade New Hampshire for the nation's first presidential primary. The citizens of New Hampshire welcome this diversion from an otherwise long, cold winter.

In Waterville Valley I spoke to Mr. Seth Corcoran, who waxes skis for a living when he isn't being interviewed by the press.

"I hope you don't mind if I ask you a few questions," I said.

"Don't mind at all. This is the fifth interview I've given today. Been on television 12 times this week, including all three networks and the BBC. What do you want to know?"

"I was wondering if you could tell me how it feels to have so much pressure on you? After all, the entire country is watching closely to see what New Hampshire does."

Seth said, "It's a tremendous responsibility, I'll tell you that. The problem is that we just don't have enough people in this state for all the candidates are running here. I've shaken hands with seven times, McGovern eight times, Yorty four times and McCloskey four times. Ashbrook is coming up this afternoon to shake hands with me, and I've got an appointment with John Lindsay to shake hands tomorrow. He already shook hands with me last week in Concord for CBS. His people say he wants to shake hands in Waterville Valley for NBC."

"That must keep you busy," I said. "Yup. But the primary brings a lot of people into the state, and if we don't shake hands with the candidates, they won't be here. Besides, shaking hands with candidates in the wintertime is very good blood circulation."

"It's great how you've taken all attention in stride, Seth."

"Wal, it's only every four years you shake hands with the candidates. The rest of the time no one gives a damn about shaking hands with candidates, they just want to shake hands with the candidates and the newspaper folk can bring a little happiness to the rest of the country, the heck with waxing skis."

"But it seems to me that the press is remembering all the candidates' faces very trying."

"You do get them mixed up a lot, but you shake hands with them four or five times, you manage to get them sorted out. The reporters want to know who they think of school busing, Nixon's trip to China, Phase 2 and the devaluation of the dollar. Now nobody in New Hampshire hoot about any of those things, but don't want to look ignorant on national TV. It ain't fun spending your nights reading about all that stuff, I'll tell you."

"What has been the highlight of this primary as far as you are concerned?" "I guess the greatest moment for me was when I saw Sen. Muskie cry in front of Manchester Union."

"You actually were there?"

"Yup. I was brought down by the Manchester Radio Free Europe. There I was standing right up front, with my hands outstretched when by gosh if he didn't burst into tears suddenly found myself part of history."

"Haven't you ever seen a candidate of New Hampshire before?"

"Yup, but never before the primary was here in."

Tax, levy, assessment or . . .

By JEFFREY D. SMITH
Libertyville, Ill., senior and TOM KUCZEK
Detroit junior

Ever since the presentation of the proposed constitutional amendment to eliminate the ASMSU tax, allegations have been made by ASMSU Chairman Buckner that the amendment would forbid ASMSU's charging for services such as Legal Aid and Pop Entertainment. These allegations are without basis in legal definition, popular interpretation, or intent.

To check legal definition, one uses, believe it or not, a legal dictionary. All references below are from "Words and Phrases," the most comprehensive book available in the reference section of the Library. The amendment would forbid ASMSU from levying a "tax or assessment of any nature," the allegation is that "assessment" includes charges for ASMSU services.

The first reference worth mentioning is the Missouri ruling that "Webster says the conjunction 'or' is often placed between different terms expressing the same thing or idea; as this is a sphere or globe. The word "assessments" and the word "dues" . . . declaring that a fraternal beneficiary association might make provision for the payment of benefits from a fund to be derived there without definition, and seemingly as meaning the same thing." This was undoubtedly the intention of the amendment's author in using the phrase "tax or assessment," and if this is believed unclear, check the passages in the U.S. Constitution requiring an "oath or affirmation" and not requiring a "census or enumeration."

But what of the rest of the entries? Many of them consider "taxes" and "assessments" as synonymous; the rest reserve "assessment" for a special levy for a particular project. Lest anyone perceive a parallel between this and the present allegation, let it be known that in none of these hundred - odd definitions is an "assessment" ever considered anything but involuntary.

For those still unconvinced, there are two fairly close parallels. The first involves a social club in Pennsylvania; the parallel with ASMSU will be clear. "The court ruled that a charge established for attendance by members at club dances, called a 'donation' and paid only by the members actually attending the dances, does not come within the exemption. It is obviously not 'membership dues or fees' and it cannot be considered as 'assessment,' which is a charge of a nonrecurring nature, upon all members of the club, for such purposes as expansion, payment of debt or other unusual circumstances."

The second makes the distinction between "fees" and "assessments" in the case of a membership corporation in New York. Under the incorporation, "providing that by - laws of any such corporation may regulate fees and dues of any member and termination of membership on nonpayment thereof or otherwise, such corporation did not have the power to levy 'assessments,' which implies a burden imposed in invitum (against an unwilling person), and a single act as distinguished from recurring acts; 'fees' being any amount paid for a privilege, voluntarily paid and not as an obligation."

Thus there is no legal basis for the allegations, as members of the Business Law Dept. upon first hearing and without recourse to dictionaries have agreed.

What impression have students received upon reading the proposed amendment? At least one of the undersigned was present for at least 80 per cent of the petition drive, and only one student expressed the opinion to either of us that this amendment would prohibit ASMSU from charging for its services. To those students who are surprised that this student happened to be the understandably partisan ASMSU chairman, we can only say "welcome to the real world."

Finally, as for intent, neither of the writers of this point of view and to our knowledge none of the other circulators, had the intent of abolishing ASMSU's charges for voluntary programs. But this leaves unanswered the question of why these allegations were made.

The only sensible answer is that Mr. Buckner is afraid of informed student opinion, and that the only hope for the defeat of the amendment lies with misinforming the students by the use of scare tactics. But once these allegations are seen for what they are; the issues of whether ASMSU is spending the students' money well and why ASMSU has a right to the students' money at all remain the ones that students should decide on.

Sam, a little restraint

Editor:
I have been following, with interest, the developments surrounding the press conference of Robert Green and others in respect to discrimination in the administration and at MSU, in the Big Ten, even at all levels of state sports in the country. At that conference, there has been some meaningful and dialog, and there also has been some "unfortunate" "mischanneled" "perceptions: All these are, by large, healthy offshoots of a delicate but realistic sense of a "status quo."

reported statement in the March 3 issue of the State News, that Dr. Wharton's objective, mature and honest appraisal of the Jenison Fieldhouse incident of a couple of Saturdays ago constituted (and I quote), "pure, unadulterated, concentrated bullshit" went too far beyond reason.

Fortunately, in the same paper, Prof. Green and colleagues exhibited high degree of rationality, committedness, and integrity by appealing for common sense on the original issue. Having read more enlightened and less emotional comments by Sam Riddle before, on similarly sensitive subjects, I was shocked by that statement printed March 3, alleged to be his. If, as a "spokesman" of the Black Coalition Council, Sam was expressing the feeling of the other members of that meaningful and laudable body, it is more unfortunate. Such a stand can only ulcerate rather than heal the situation. Furthermore, such an assertion cannot but serve as a positive catalyst for the buttressing of the 111-most motivated and obnoxious view of those callous individuals of this academic community that President Wharton is permissive, and same permissiveness "fueled the bellows of strife" during the spring of 1970, and continues to bless the irresponsible acts of vandalism every now and then on the campus. I am sure that no reasonable black or minority group will subscribe to such an outrageous view!

after the screening that typified the selection - process, it is just right that we give "honor to whom honor is due." Thus, rather than pride himself in chauvinistic emotionalism, Sam Riddle owes Dr. Wharton an apology; not only because respect for a capable and rational elder is proper, but more so because Dr. Wharton is the president for the whole of this academic community.

In conclusion, Sam will do well to remember the necessity for restraint in making public statements that could be misinterpreted and therefore help to alienate well - meaning sympathizers of a just cause, and moreover jaundice a worthwhile purpose.

Christians calling

Editor:
It is true that there are quite a few Christians living in London who have been considered a "Jesus" for quite some time. As you will notice, however, it isn't a majority of them. The rest of us are of having Christianity down our throats.

Have you ever gotten a phone call in the middle of the night from a "Christian?" He will tell you that "they" (ever that may be) are acting a survey and will be to interview you. There's no sense of whether or not you want to talk to them - they are anyway.

doesn't drive you out, the screaming and crying will. The "recent surge of campus evangelism" has become a door-to-door sales pitch. A couple of kids walk in, smile, and "Praise the Lord!" - it's started again. All you have to do is fill out a questionnaire and read an article about someone's finding Christ, and then they'll leave. Don't you think that that is a bit much? It's like selling Avon products door-to-door "Ding-dong! Christians calling!"

The final irritation lies in the fact that they call themselves "Christians." I thought we were ALL Christians. I guess I was wrong . . .

President Wharton became the president of MSU because, I am convinced, he is qualified for the post, and not because he is black. Since whoever holds that post deserves the respect that he has established by being appointed

There is a place for these people in our society if they will just leave others alone. You can be converted without door knockers calling all day long and little pamphlets stuffed under your door. It's defeating the whole purpose - I doubt very much if Christ would have pounded a beat looking for people who needed to be saved.

One more thing - please don't sign my name to this. I don't want more "Christians" calling me to tell me how wrong I am. I'm satisfied to continue in my hedonistic ways . . .

Insurance firms, lawyers debate no fault

By BETHANN MASALKOSKI
State News Staff Writer

As the no fault insurance battle rages, proponents of the concept — primarily insurance companies, and their adversaries — mainly the American Trial Lawyers Assn., exchange horror stories in order to win legislative support.

Not all lawyers are against no fault. The State Bar of Michigan does endorse no fault but urges safeguards and amendments be added to a no fault package to insure motorist protection against insurance companies.

One lawyer, who spoke at a Lansing hearing on no fault insurance, asked, what about a 20-year-old man who might be blinded as a result of an automobile accident? With a no fault system "he won't be able to recover anything for his blindness because he will be paid his weekly sum . . . I don't believe that that is what the public wants."

Under the present fault system of insurance this man could go to court and sue for the pain and suffering of never being able to see his child, the lawyer continued.

William S. Gibbs, a spokesman for the American Insurance Assn., replied that the blind man is probably worse off with the fault system "even though the potential is there for a million dollar verdict, the overwhelming probability is that he will have to settle for policy limits" which in most cases is $20,000.

Third in a series

"Policy limits in the overwhelming majority of cases are going to be far less than his out of pocket costs. When we talk of going to a no fault system we are talking about unlimited payment of economic loss," and no amount of money is going to enable a blind man to see his child, Gibbs said.

"The fault system chooses between families when it says 'alright you can get all the little bit at fault, or if you are alone in the car and you are seriously injured, you are out of luck. You better have bought

While the two sides play on emotion one fact remains. Understanding insurance is a difficult task and lawyers themselves admit that understanding insurance legislation is even worse.

Attorney Angelo Trogan, admits to reading Sen. Colman Young's bill (SB 520) many times and says he still doesn't understand it.

What this means for the average motorist is that he is even more confused. According to a Gallup Poll taken in 1971 in which 1,519 people were interviewed, only 19 per cent claimed to understand what no fault plans meant. The other 81 per cent were either undecided or uninformed on the issue.

What the average motorist who has been in a serious accident does know is that under the present fault system of insurance he has been underpaid for his losses. Those motorists who have not been in an accident are also angered because, like everything else, the cost of their insurance premiums rise annually.

Insurance companies and lawyers also agree something must be done about insurance, but differ on measures.

Proponents of no fault insurance point to Massachusetts with its limited no fault program and say the cost for the bodily injury portion of insurance is down 42.6 per cent.

Opponents of no fault also point to Massachusetts no fault and say benefits to injured persons are down by 85 per cent, and indicate that insurance companies are the only ones benefiting from no fault.

Which statistics are true? They both are but Massachusetts has its own unique problems. The state has been squabbling politically over insurance costs for five years.

Four years before Massachusetts enacted its no fault program on Jan. 1, 1971, the cost of insurance premiums were frozen. Between 1967 and 1971 the cost of living spiraled.

During this period many companies lost a lot of money. During hearings on no fault, many companies issued statements saying that no fault insurance would save the motorist 15 per cent on the bodily injury portion of his insurance premiums. This turned out to be a conservative guess.

In 1971, insurance claims all over the country were down, due in part to the slowdown of the economy. By the end of 1971, it became obvious that the saving under no fault was greater so that the rates for 1972 were reduced by another 25 per cent. Companies were also ordered to take as a credit on this year's premium an additional 25.4 per cent over excess profits that they generated last year. This brings the rate of the bodily injury portion of insurance to a 42.6 per cent average reduction.

To be fully covered a motorist must have insurance to cover property damage or collision insurance which has increased, so the actual saving on complete coverage is not an overall 42.6 per cent reduction. Under the fault system, adjustments are paid in lump sum payments. One check was all that a permanently disabled person received. Under no fault, a permanently disabled person receives payment for medical and wage loss by the week. Therefore, injuries sustained in 1971 will be paid for in 1972 and so on until the person is able to work. This is one of the reasons given for reduction in benefits paid out during 1971 in Massachusetts.

SET AT KELLOGG CENTER

Meet to probe transit needs

Not a single automated mass transit system, but rather a multimodal system is what Michigan needs if it is to solve its urban transportation problems. This, Ivan Bartha, director of research and demonstration projects, Bureau of Transportation, Michigan Dept. of Commerce, said Monday as he announced a seminar designed to bridge the mass transportation information gap for Michigan's city, county and state officials. Close to 200 local officials are expected for the first Michigan

Exposition and Seminar on Mass Transportation Technologies to be held March 14, 15 at Kellogg Center, he said.

Bartha, a native of Hungary, graduate of Michigan Technological University and a former traffic engineer with the Michigan Dept. of State Highways, has recently completed six weeks of intensive study of urban transportation on the European scene.

"In Europe they build one mode of transportation over another, providing a multilevel integrated transportation system," he said, pointing up mass transportation possibilities. Representatives are expected from Michigan cities, consulting firms and universities for the seminar.

The newest urban transportation systems utilizing small rapid-transit vehicles — suspended, elevated, propelled down a guideway or on an air cushion — will be discussed and demonstrated by use of models, slides and films.

Speakers will include the operator of the unique Sky-bus at Tampa International Airport and representatives of urban transit hardware manufacturers from across the country. Other authorities will discuss the evolution, application, economics and advantages of the newer mass transit systems.

The advantages include relief of congestion, parking and traffic hazards as well as delays in transit and pollution problems, Bartha notes.

The seminar is sponsored by the Michigan Dept. of Commerce, MSU and its Continuing Education Service.

Inquiries regarding participation may be directed to Bartha, or to Edward Farmer, seminar coordinator, 24 Kellogg Center.

Chamber assails coupon purchases

The East Lansing - Meridian Area Chamber of Commerce is discouraging the purchase of a coupon book, solicited by telephone in the East Lansing area, a chamber spokeswoman said recently.

"The Chamber of Commerce is not sponsoring these books but the company is using our name—we aren't promoting them because they aren't a good deal," Joann Cudnohufsky, spokeswoman, said.

The $14 coupon book, which includes coupons on purchases made at local stores and restaurants is advertised as being worth more than $300.

"The Wolverine Distributing Co. puts the book out and it can be sponsored by individual businessmen but the Chamber of Commerce has nothing to do with it," Ms. Cudnohufsky said.

The problem of the telephone solicited books is being referred to the attorney general's office which is presently gathering complaints and information to determine if the Chamber of Commerce is being misrepresented, a spokeswoman for the attorney general's office said.

Ms. Cudnohufsky warned consumers against any calls they receive concerning the coupon book.

"They'll call and ask you which hand does the Statue of Liberty hold her torch in and then tell you that you've won the opportunity to buy the book — don't and report the call to us," she said.

Young pianist to perform works by Schubert, Liszt

The highly acclaimed young pianist, Andre Watts, will be heard in a concert of works by Schubert and Liszt at 8:15 tonight in the MSU Auditorium.

Watts, only in his mid-20s, has already achieved an impressive concert career. He has appeared in Europe and throughout the U.S. as a recitalist and as a soloist with the top orchestras.

The concert is a Subscription Series "B" attraction in MSU's Lecture-Concert Series.

His MSU concert will include Schubert's "Waltzes, Opus 18, D. 145," "Sonata in A Minor, Opus 143," and "Fantasy in C Major, Opus 15 (The Wanderer)," Liszt's "Les Jeux d'Eau a La Villa d'Este" (The Fountain at the Villa d'Este), and "Concert Fantasy on Themes from Mozart's 'Don Giovanni.'"

A graduate of the Lincoln Preparatory School in Philadelphia, he is currently pursuing a B.A. degree at the Peabody Conservatory of Music in Baltimore.

Born in Germany, Watts lived in Europe until he was 8. He took his first piano lessons from his mother when he was 6. When the family moved to Philadelphia, he was enrolled in the musical academy there.

At 16, he made a spectacular debut on nationwide TV as soloist in Leonard Bernstein's New York Philharmonic Young People's Concert. On the strength of his TV appearance, he was engaged just 20 days later as a last-minute substitute for the ailing Glenn Gould at two regular Philharmonic subscription concerts. He was rewarded with "the season's wild ovation."

It Tobaccoconist trade booming I--I 'snuff' said

By BARNEY WHITE
State News Staff Writer

Smoking may be declining in the face of sterner health warnings, but tobacco use is not. A growing number of American young men are turning to an old habit of their grandfathers, the snuff box.

Modern knowledge of snuff from Columbus' second voyage to the New World in 1492 is not. A growing number of American young men are turning to an old habit of their grandfathers, the snuff box.

There are a number of recipes for snuff preparation. A typical one involves the manufacture of French "rappee." Tobacco leaves and stalks are moistened with salt water, pressed into cakes and allowed to ferment for about six months. The tobacco is then ground into powder and once again fermented, this time for a period of ten months.

Typically snuff is made from tobacco scraps and stems. The finer grades, however, come from choice leaf often grown especially for snuff manufacture.

future King George IV and his companion, the renowned Beau Brummell. Brummell had a passion for ornate snuff boxes. On one occasion George was so impressed with a container that he forthwith purchased it from the hapless Beau.

Alas the ascendancy of the cigar and the cigarette in the mid and late 19th century marked the eclipse of the gentle art of snuff taking. Through the first half of the 20th century the practice has lain fallow in England and the United States, the province of a few aficionados, until its recent resurrection at the hands of the Flower Generation.

Actually, there are two major varieties of snuff. The more "moist" varieties are chewed or inserted between lips and gum and gently sucked upon. The "drier" varieties are inhaled. It is this latter variety that is experiencing an upsurge in popularity.

In a pinch

A healthy pinch, a solid snort and Dr. Rumney's Mentholypus snuff will do its thing. The hands involved in stage seven of the deft procedure above are those of B. (Snuffy) White.

East Lansing merchants carry over a dozen varieties of snuff and "sniffing powder," a nontobacco flavored inhalant. Most are youth-oriented with correspondingly snappy packaging. Brands include "Cokesnuff," "Ozona" and "Snort," as well as the more prosaic, but equally enjoyable "Dr. Rumney's Mentholypus" and "Smith's George IV" mixtures.

"Scents," or "flavors" to the uninitiated, range from hyacinth and jasmine through cherry and orange to plain and medicated. Methods of snuff taking vary as widely as the scents of the pleasant powder. Many "addicts" prefer to dump a bit on thumb or index finger and charge first one nostril and then the other. Other sniffers place the substance in the hollow betwixt the same thumb and forefinger and either hit both nostrils simultaneously or utilize the standard one-two snort.

Dr. Arnold Werner, author of "The doctor's Bag" personally prefers what he describes as "the anatomical snuff box." This involves placing the tobacco powder in the hollow formed above the wrist by the major thumb tendon when the fingers are extended spray-like. While the good doctor was able to produce a most respectable "box" this reporter and one of Werner's associates were at a loss to follow his example, try as they might.

For the true connoisseur, however, "All About Snuff and Snuff Taking" lists "The true artistic method" for partaking of the sumptuous snort:

"Take the snuff box in the right hand.

"Pass it to the left hand.

"Open the box and inspect the contents.

"Present box to surrounding company with a courteous bow.

"Receive it back with the left hand.

"Gather up the snuff in the box by striking the side with middle and forefinger.

"Take a pinch with the right hand.

"Hold the snuff for a second or two between fingers before taking.

"Carry the snuff to the nose.

"Snuff with precision by both nostrils and without grimaces or distortion of the features.

"Close snuff box with a flourish."

While snuff's popularity is rising among the young, the range of partakers defies any ready definition. Bill Campbell, owner of Campbell's Smoke Shop, a local snuff emporium, indicates that all sorts of people, "straight" and "freak," frequent his snuff display. "There is even a middle-aged gentleman who drives all the way up from Detroit to buy a particular brand," Campbell says.

Bill Straight, proprietor of one of the mini-stores in the White Monkey, a local "head" shop, is less optimistic about commercial possibilities for the snuff market. The problem, he says, is that "it takes so long to go through a single container.

One can last for months," Straight believes that snuffing in East Lansing has reached a saturation point and that demand has, therefore, stabilized.

New governance setup for JMC called success

By LESLIE LEE
State News Staff Writer

Justin Morrill College's new governance structure, which has been operating for a little over a month as an experiment seems to be in good shape.

The attitude towards the new governing setup is optimistic and the morale good, Neil Cullen, a faculty member and secretary and systems observer of the council, said recently.

As with any experimental structure, he said, it is still going through a period of gestation, a time when the people are unsure and uptight about what they are doing because there are no real guidelines.

Several minor adjustments have also been made inside the Advisory Council. At this time there have been two amendments, one dealing with recall and one with referendums. One of the original student members had to drop out for personal reasons.

Instituted Jan. 25, the new structure's bylaws define a nonformal, nearly unstructured decision-making group called the Advisory Council. The main goal of this group is to devise yearly college plans.

The group, composed of 35 faculty and 12 students, is now investigating a system of modular scheduling for next year. Under this type of arrangement the term would be broken into three 3-week sessions during which one course would be taken and studied in depth.

Other actions of the council thus far include a statement of the mission of the college and procedures and guidelines for decisions on appointments, promotions, tenure and salaries of the college faculty.

Emphasizing the experimental nature of the college, the mission statement reads:

"The mission of Justin Morrill College is to experiment with alternate approaches to undergraduate education and to create and foster a learning community for students and faculty which helps them to become involved in thinking and feeling individuals in a changing society."

This is the goal against which all actions of the council, and hence the college, will be judged and is the basis on which the council will formulate a comprehensive plan for the college for the 1972-73 academic year.

The plan, which is of paramount importance to the council at this time, should be completed early spring term.

Panel backs police bill

By BOB NOVOSAD
State News Staff Writer

A Senate bill which would create a campus public safety officer has been unanimously approved by the Michigan State University Board of Trustees.

The bill, introduced in 1972 by Sen. Phillip O. Gilbert, R-Lansing, would create a campus public safety officer who would have jurisdiction over the campus and its buildings, lands, and property.

The board of trustees would also be able to provide that a violation of a University ordinance is a misdemeanor and is punishable according to the laws of the state. Also, the trustees would be able to prescribe the powers and duties and conditions of employment for officers of the Dept. of Public Safety.

questionable relative to contract negotiations with employees of the MSU Dept. of Public Safety.

In a letter sent March 1 to Sen. Gilbert Bursley, R-Ann Arbor and chairman of the Senate Committee on Education, the University Committee on Public Safety said that under the present arrangement the relationship between the county sheriff and the director of the campus Dept. of Public Safety could be tenuous and not conducive to positive interaction.

The University Committee on Public Safety supports the bill because the peace officer status of campus public safety officers could not be withdrawn or withheld at the whim of the sheriff if so desired, as is now possible under the present arrangement. The committee believes that MSU is in every sense of the word a city with a population of approximately 65,000, and ought to be considered a city in its public safety aspects.

The bill would prescribe the powers of the MSU Board of Trustees to authorize the adoption and enforcement of ordinances, to prescribe penalties, and to prescribe the duties and powers of the Public Safety Dept. ## OBA considers breakfast plan

The Breakfast Program operated by the Office of Black Affairs (OBA) may be extended, director James Weathers said recently. The OBA is the financial arm of the Black United Front.

"Our project was to be voted on again, but the ASMSU petitions froze any decision," Weathers said, referring to petitions signed by 3,234 students. The petitions will require a referendum to decide whether ASMSU will continue to tax the students.

The Breakfast Program was a Lansing based operation and coordinated by Ralph Hanson, Detroit junior. Approximately 50 elementary school aged children were fed at the West Side Drop-Off Center five days a week. The children of the program were fed juice, punch, toast, oatmeal, hot chocolate and cereal. BUF spokesman noted that the program was a voluntary operation and had the recognition and support of students administrators.

ASMSU cut the Breakfast Program from the Black United Front's original budget request in January. BUF appealed the decision until ASMSU showed renewed interest in the program and requested a speaker to re-explain the program and clear up board questions. The presentation was made by David Kinch, executive board member of BUF. Following discussion, a proposal was then sent to the agenda committee to be voted on again after an allocation was determined.

"Tax petitioning has changed the whole picture, but we are not caught unprepared," Weathers continued. "We are pursuing other ways to fund the program."
BUF's new found source is the Mortar Board, which has shown interest, but has not made promises.
Weathers emphasized the importance of the referendum. "Unless students turn out to vote down tax refusal, ASMSU cannot support the project because of its 'special program' status."
"Hungry children have to be fed," he said.

Union Board tells choice of officers

The Union Board made public its selection of new officers 1972-73 Tuesday night at its annual awards banquet. The new officers are: president, Gary Medler, St. Anne, sophomore; vice president, Candance Rosaen, Ann Arbor sophomore; secretary, Patricia Tarus, Bloomfield Hills sophomore; program director, Todd Aldridge, Snyder, N.Y. sophomore; and international affairs director, Patricia Kernick, Pittsburgh, Pa. junior.

In addition to the announcement of officers, the dinner held for the purpose of presenting the Union Board's annual student awards. The John L. Howard award for outstanding service leadership to the board was given to Ms. Kernick. A $200 scholarship goes with the award.

The two service awards were presented to Bruce Margan, Lansing senior who receives a $200 scholarship, and to Ms. who receives a $100 scholarship.
The board also presented its Community Service Award of the MSU Volunteers.

Department warns beef-buying public

A family in Spartan Village has decided to purchase a quarter beef because of the fabulous savings and suddenly discovers that bargain has become an $800 nightmare of monthly payments and interest for less than 600 pounds of beef.

The consumer protection bureau of the Michigan Dept. of Agriculture released information Tuesday about the growing practice of high pressure freezer beef plans which have been appearing in the state.

In most cases of complaint the companies have been operating in violation of Michigan advertising statutes, but the Dept. of Agriculture has found prosecution difficult.

In one case a violating firm in Grand Rapids closed operations disappeared following a warning from the department. The technique most frequently used is known as a "bait switch," in which the seller will bait the buyer with advertisement for extremely cheap beef and then switch to a more expensive side of meat when the prospective buyer comes to look at the beef.

The next surprise, the department release states, is finding there is a loss of 30 to 35 per cent of the hanging weight through removal of fat, bone and other waste material. The 60 cent pound price has now increased considerably. Though legitimate the seller purposely avoids telling the consumer of this fact.

The final burn the consumer accepts is financing of his purchase through a loan company which allows him no recourse for unsatisfactory purchase. The original 60 cent price per pound in many cases gone as high as $1.60 per pound.

Icers topple Duluth!

By CRAIG REMSBURG
State News Sports Writer

Defenseman Bob Boyd took his regular shift, Gilles Gagnon scored two goals and Jim Watt stopped 32 Minnesota-Duluth shots as the MSU hockey team defeated the UMD Bulldogs, 4-2, in the first game of round one of the WCHA playoffs before 1,537 persons at the Ice Arena Tuesday night.

For Duluth to win the series now, it must beat the Spartans by three goals when the two clubs meet tonight at 7:30 p.m. for the windup game. Mark Heaslip made it close with a goal at the 7:41 of the final period for UMD, but the MSU squad put some pressure on at the Bulldog end for the rest of the game to ice the victory.

Although the Spartans managed to get three pucks by UMD goaltender Jerome Mrazek in the opening period, the score could have been much higher. Mrazek kicked out 21 MSU shots, many of them from close-in, as the play stayed in the Bulldog zone most of the period.

Gilles Gagnon put the Spartans up 1-0 at the 2:40 mark of the first period with a power play goal. Bob Boyd faked a shot at the UMD blueline and zipped a pass over to Gagnon, who was stationed to the left of the Duluth net. Gagnon put a backhand into the right corner.

Playoffs

Round one of the Western Collegiate Hockey Association playoffs ends tonight, including the two-game, total goals series between Minnesota-Duluth and MSU at the Ice Arena. Game time for tonight's clash is 7:30 p.m.

Other series that will be decided tonight include Notre Dame at Denver, Michigan Tech at Wisconsin and Michigan at North Dakota.

Don Thompson was awarded a penalty shot with less than a minute left in the period as he was pulled down on a breakaway. Thompson skated in from the blueline and tried to deke Mrazek. The UMD netminder made a sprawling, stick save on the shot.

Boyd, looking like a fullback with a harness over his injured right shoulder, took a slap shot from the right point that beat Mrazek for the second MSU goal.

Thompson made it 3-0 with 23 seconds left. Zip skated behind the Duluth net to retrieve a puck and shot the disc from back of the net. The puck hit a UMD defenseman and deflected in.

It took the Duluth squad just 45 seconds after the first intermission to get on the board as Alan Young scored an unassisted goal. The puck slid under the side of the upended MSU net and went into the corner, to cause some confusion. Officials Sam Sisco and Bob Gilray conferred, however, and allowed the goal.

Gagnon notched his second tally of the night seven minutes later to make it 4-1 for MSU. It was an unassisted marker that went into the left corner of the UMD net.

Thompson squared off with Duluth's Pat Boutette near the end of the period as tempers began to flare. Boyd and Ernie Campe also joined in the fracas, which lasted for almost ten minutes.

BUCKS WHIP CAGERS, 92 - 73

MSU put pressure on Ohio State's faint Big Ten basketball title hopes for more than one half of play before being victimized by defenses lapses that the Buckeyes took advantage of en route to their 92-73 victory Tuesday night at Columbus.

The Spartans got off to a slow start, trailing 10-2 in the early moments, but pulled to within three points, 42-39, at halftime.

Spartan guard Mike Robinson, with a 30 point scoring effort, led all scorers and virtually sealed the Big Ten scoring championship. Ohio State's Allan Hornyak was second to Robinson entering the game, but was held to 17 points.

Robinson opened the second half converting two free throws to bring MSU within one point of the Bucks, 42-41, but State gradually took command of the game at one time built a 22 point lead.

The Spartans did not have any double scorers after Robinson's performance while Bucks displayed a balanced attack led by sophomore forward Wardell Jackson's 19, Luke Witte and Hornyak each added 17.

Brian Breslin scored nine points for MSU. Miller had eight points, all in the first half. Bill Kilgore was limited to four first half Athletic competition is often at its finest on the collegiate level, and the ultimate emotion of collegiate rivalry will be found in national competition.

The MSU wrestling team heads to the East Coast today to bid for the laurels and glories of the 42nd annual NCAA wrestling championships.

Men's IM

Building hours for the Men's IM over spring break will be from 9 a.m. - 7 p.m. The IM pool will be open from 11:30 a.m. - 2 p.m. Monday through Friday over break.

All those interested in crew club should meet at 8 p.m. tonight in 215 Men's IM Building.

College Park, Md., will host the three day tourney that, by Saturday night will have eliminated 35 of the country's top performers in each weight class. The entire field of 360 wrestlers will have been reduced to ten champions and the climax will come with the crowning of the team championship.

The Spartans won the national title in 1967 and have been the long Big Ten representative to even win NCAA wrestling honors. Big Eight teams traditionally dominate collegiate wrestling.

MSU's '87 title winning year broke a streak of 13 Big Eight NCAA titles, but Big Eight teams have continued to win in each of the past four years after MSU's interruption.

Iowa State is the Big Eight's favorite this year but any of three other teams could win the title. Washington handed Iowa State its lone defeat in dual meet competition and rates a contender as does perennial power Oklahoma State University which upset Iowa State for the Big Eight title two weeks ago.

And MSU, rated No. 2 to Iowa State all season long, rates as another serious contender.

"We have an excellent chance," Spartan Coach Grady Peninger said. "We probably have a better chance than most people give us credit."

MSU's strength lies in its roll call of five conference champions, two second placers and Kent State transfer Conrad Calander who finished fourth.

Greg Johnson (118), Pat Milkovich (126) Tom Milkovich (142) Gerald Malecek (167) and heavyweight Ben Lewis lead the Spartan parade of champions and are joined by Rick Radman, Dave Ciolek and Calander.

Johnson is MSU's most renowned wrestler and has established himself as the country's premier lightweight by winning NCAA titles in each of his two previous showings in national competition.

Johnson, a former Lansing Everett prep ace, owns a varsity career record of 54-5-2 with 17 pins and is favored to win his third NCAA title.

Perhaps the most solid prediction of the otherwise unpredictable tournament would be at the 126 weight where defending champ, undefeated Yoshiro Fujita, (48-0) of OSU, looms as a favorite to repeat.

But Peninger figures freshman Pat Milkovich is up with all other contenders for a high placing at 126.

Tom Milkovich, 18-0, placed fourth in the NCAA meet two years ago and will be relied on to finish high again this year. Milkovich is in the same weight as Washington's Larry Owings whose claim for fame came two years ago when he won the NCAA title by giving Iowa State's Dan Gable his only collegiate defeat.

Malecek is listed as one of the pre-meet favorites at 167. The Belle Plaine, Iowa senior is 21-2-1 this season with ten pins to his credit.

Ciolek placed fourth as a sophomore last season apparently is ready to go after ankle injury prevented him from continuing in his championship Big Ten match two weeks ago.

Lewis also places last year will be competing in the heavyweight division. Includes defending champion Wojciechowski of Toledo 400-pound favorite Chris of Iowa State.

Holding on

MSU heavyweight Ben Lewis, two time Big Ten champion and a fifth place finisher in the national last year, holds down the Michigan heavyweight. Lewis, as a senior, will be competing in his final collegiate matches in this weekend's nationals.

Spartan basketball
mums cage experts

Once again, good triumphs over evil; the white hats beat black hats; the good guys squelch the bad guys; and the University of Michigan crawls out of Jenison Fieldhouse in Michigan State does have a basketball team.

Early in November, the so-called basketball experts of Midwest gave Gus Ganakas cage crew about as much chance at equaling its 9-15 mark of last season as Gary Ganakas would be given in beating Kareem Jabbar at non-one. The experts could see only one respectable team playing out of the state of Michigan, that team being the Spartans.

But how attitudes have changes. The MSU team, that team that was a near unanimous choice to finish the Big Ten season at the lowest rung of the ladder, has sent its basketball players and teams spinning.

First the Spartans shocked Kentucky, a team ranked nationally in the top ten. Then Gus' boys took second place in a pair of tourneys - tournaments many people of the Spartans had no right playing in. Then came the Big Ten season and with it severe shock treatments for Iowa, Illinois and to the dismay of no East Sighting - Michigan, and the Spartans are assured of at least a 500 finish.

"You've got to give credit to the guys because they're so little," Ganakas praised. "They go out as the smaller every game and still put out 100 percent. They're a team and they've been playing gutty ball all season."

Gus had expressed concern for the welfare of his team prior to the Michigan game. The contest was originally scheduled to be played on Saturday night, but was changed to an afternoon time.

"Maybe that's better," Ganakas commented in a ecstatic vein. "Now the game will be over quicker."

It was funny at the time because Michigan was expected to level the Spartans and possibly imbed the smaller

Ganakas (R) talks to players

MSU team into the rubberized tartan surface. But instead, was Wilmore and Co. that suffered the humiliation that anyone had predicted for the Spartans.

The game with Michigan was in particular an early situation present for Spartan senior forward Pat Miller.

"Pat twice last year had shots in the final seconds that had won games for us and missed them both," Ganakas lamented. "He's been telling me this year that he was going to hit one of those shots and win a game for us. Pat saved what you might call his best for last. It wasn't one shot that won the game, it was a complete game won by Miller. I tip my hat to him for that."

Ganakas also went on to praise Miller's "invisible man" nature on the team.

"You've got to hand it to Pat," Ganakas said. "As a sophomore he had to play in the shadows of Ralph Johnson, and I've always said that the guys that suffer most are the guys that play with a superstar. Last year Rudy (Benjamin) did most of the shooting and this season Pat's stature to play with Miller could go out and get his 15-20 points a game but he's a team player and doesn't play like a star. He competes for the name of the school, not for his personal glory."

'S' power shows in track title

By GARY KORRECK
State News Sports Writer

In recent years it has been a big deal for Spartan teams to whip U-M. In anything. MSU trackmen have done it five times already this season, though, out-firsting the Wolverines in three relay meets, stomping them in a dual and burying them, in the Big Ten finals.

Only the wrestlers, whose Big Ten titles are almost expected, and the cross country squad - which used the legs of many of the current trackmen - have won conference crowns this season.

For the record, MSU overwhelmed its opposition in the Big Ten matchup, totaling 65 points to 42 for Illinois, its nearest challenger.

Defending champ Wisconsin struggled to third with 35; Purdue closed with 32 and U-M placed fifth with 25.

Indiana topped the second five with 23, followed by Ohio State (21), Minnesota (16), Iowa (9) and Northwestern (6).

Coach Fran Dittrich hailed the victory as "a total team effort that paid off" and he was quick to add there was little doubt as to the Spartans' supremacy.

"The turning point of the meet came when we scored our first point," he said.

Assistant coach Jim Gibbard added, "When Juice (Wisconsin's Greg "Grape Juice" Johnson) could get only fourth in the long jump, we knew we had them."

Johnson was one of the pre-meet favorites in the event.

Del Gregory, MSU's long jumper, soared 25-1 1/2 to place second behind Purdue's Jerome Belin (25-2 1/4) and John Ross catapulted to 24-5 1/2 to gain third.

"We broke their (Wisconsin's) back right there," Gibbard added.

One of the big heroes for the Spartans was long-legged sophomore Bob Casselman. The Grand Rapids sophomore ripped off his second straight Big Ten indoor 600 title with a 1:09.09 clocking and anchored the winning mile relay unit to a 3:12.1 first place finish in the final event on the program.

Pre-meet times showed MSU to be underdogs in both events. Dittrich admitted, some of the other schools were fired up

Mick still upset about Cy Young

LAKELAND, FLA. (UPI) - If you had the notion that Mickey Lolich was just popping off there last fall when he said he should have won the Cy Young Award instead of Vida Blue, forget it.

The Detroit Tigers' 25-game winner meant it then, he means it now, and the only guy around the Tigers' training camp here who is more emphatic on the subject is manager Billy Martin, who is still so upset he thinks the system of voting "ought to be changed."

"Blue's good, all right," concedes battling Billy, "but he was a half-year pitcher - he won 17 games in the first half of the season and only seven in the second."

"My man refuels about that time and can go on and on."

"There is no question in my mind that publicity won it for Blue," says Lolich quietly but firmly.

"Why, heck," Mickey said, "it got so he was in the headlines no matter what he did. When he lost, the headlines said, 'Wow - Blue finally loses.' Then when he won again, the headlines said, 'Blue's winning again.'"

"Just suppose," said Lolich, "There wasn't all this publicity during the season because there wasn't any such award. And then somebody came along and said, 'Let's have a Cy Young Award for the top pitcher in the league.' You'd go and pick a winner. And you know what the first thing is that you'd do?"

"You'd go and look at the record."

"And my record was better than his."

A brief glimpse at those records look like this:

Blue won 24, lost 8 - Lolich won 25, lost 14; Blue's earned run average was 1.82, best in the league - Lolich's era was 2.92, 10th best; Blue started 39 games and completed 24 - Lolich started 45 and completed 29; Blue pitched 312 innings - Lolich pitched 376, a major league record.

Council approves EPC proposal

The council adjourned at 6:15 p.m. with these items remaining on the agenda:

- A recommendation for an expanded Military Education Advisory Committee.
- Proposed changes to the Bylaws for Academic Governance with respect to permitting instructors to vote in academic governance.

Green talks to Big Ten

The three administrators requested an interim report from the Joint Group of Faculty Representatives and Athletic Directors concerning the issues raised, prior to the scheduled May 22-24 conference meeting.

Board approves wigs for firemen

BALTIMORE (AP)—Wigs will be worn by city firemen, provided they meet the same requirements imposed on natural hair.

The Board of Fire Commissioners ruled that wigs could be worn on duty if the hairline remained above the shirt collar.

Urban college

"I don't think anybody quarrels with the need for more attention," Cantlon said. The council defeated a motion offered by Clyde Best, student steering committee member, to have a special committee appointed by the steering committee and not EOC, examine MSU's urban affairs commitment.

Best said he believes EPC can not effectively assess the issue and has become "hung-up on the black-white issue." He said EPC is too emotionally involved with the college proposal.

James McKee, professor of sociology, made a plea for swift action on the college proposal which he said "tears at the guts of this University."

"The longer the matter sizzles, the more debilitating is the situation on this campus. And let's face it, this has been a goddam dismal winter," McKee said.

Cable TV

The cable idea that Tardal and the Married Students Union are interested in promoting, initially involves strictly married housing connected with different schools and departments of the University. However, Tardal said that phase two of the idea could be to connect the residence halls to a cable system. This would be a commercial cable company's system or one operated by the University.

Though Tardal feels that the National Cable Company might be receptive to the Married Students Union's idea, Robert Davis, Director of Instructional Development Service, does not. Davis does not think that the company will want to sell any rights that they have developed.

Convinced that the current rate structure is too high, ("Purdue University has its own system and charges married housing $1.50 per month.") Davis suggested that if a lower fee was required for all students, perhaps cable could be offered as a commercial service, just as telephone service is offered now.

A second alternative Davis suggested would be to have the University to operate its own system, charging the students accordingly in order to have the system pay for itself. However, this idea requires a substantial initial investment. Davis said it would cost the University a "few hundred thousand dollars" at the onset of the operation, plus a student rate fee. If the University wanted to set up additional production facilities, the rate fee would increase.

Davis said that currently no plans have been discussed by the University to establish a cable system in the residence halls.

County jail 'hypocritical,' ex-convict finds

By BILL WHITING
State News Staff Writer

The Ingham County Jail is generally recognized as a leader in the drive for reform in criminal institutions, but one MSU student has found it a disappointing hypocrisy.

For John Ford, a 48-year-old Honors College art major, the jail was only one more closed door slammed in his face because of a criminal record he has to carry for the rest of his life. Because he served 17 years in Jackson Prison for a felony conviction, Ingham County Sheriff Richard Preadmore refused to give him a position on the staff of his inmate rehabilitation program. According to the sheriff, Ford is an unacceptable risk which he is not prepared to accept.

It is a familiar line to Ford and others like him, but it is all the more stinging coming from a program which advocates the returning of criminals to productive, normal lives in society.

"How's an ex-convict supposed to get on his own two feet if he's going to be stopped?" Ford asks. "What he's doing is definitely wrong. He's telling the public one thing then doing another. It's not a program for Preadmore, it's a program for the people who are there."

Preadmore says it is that concern for the inmates that compels him not to hire former convicts.

"I don't need heroes in this place," Preadmore says. "This is, after all, a security institution. We try to get people with the finest minds and the finest education and we don't need an example of jail people in this jail."

"It's not my job to worry about him," he added. "I can't afford to gamble."

Preadmore directs an $800,000 model rehabilitation program at the Ingham County Jail in Mason which has received project funds from federal and state grants and Model Cities' programs in providing inmates with educational and training opportunities as well as treatment in drug addiction. Since this is the first program of its kind at a local level, Preadmore says he is in a vulnerable situation.

"Nobody else has ever tried this but me," he says. "I don't have to buy trouble."

Ford says that his situation is typical of many industries who refuse to hire ex-felons. However, he said he feels that his experience as an inmate would enable him to better communicate with prisoners than some others.

"Although I understand his feelings, being in a position of authority he has no reason to slam the door shut," Ford said.

At 48, Ford has got a lot going against him. First, he is a generation older than most of his classmates. He is black. And he has a record for his felony conviction.

But he does have determination and the will to succeed. Behind all the disappointments which confront him from time to time, he recalls the encouragement of his friends and his wife. That is his real strength.

"I've been very fortunate and I intend to hold on like a wildcat," Ford says. "As long as you help yourself, people are ready to help you."

Ford came to MSU in 1968, after his parole from the State Prison of Southern Michigan at Jackson, where he met and became friends with William Gamble, professor of art at MSU. Gamble made frequent visits to the prison, where he instructed inmates in art. It was under his direction that Ford became convinced he had a future in art, particularly in the hope that he could use his talent to benefit other inmates.

"Art is beneficial to everybody," Ford says with conviction. "There is no reason why art in different areas can't be used as a basis for obtaining training in different areas."

During his stay in prison and since coming to the University, Ford has channeled his efforts with the intention of going into prison rehabilitation programs and teaching inmates art and encouraging their skills by opening them up to new opportunities. He worked in such a program in Jackson for five years and was recognized for his "outstanding service to education" with an award from the Michigan Educational Assn. in 1964.

Further education courses and training at MSU, where he was admitted to the Honors College last year, did not help to erase the stigma of doing time, however, when he was refused a position with the jail rehabilitation program last June.

Despite an impressive list of credits and recommendations, including letters from the Michigan Dept. of Corrections and MSU faculty members, Ford was refused a position as art instructor at the jail. Preadmore even overrode the recommendations of his program director, Richard Poynton, in dismissing Ford's application because he was an ex-convict.

Ford said he had been told that a replacement for the art instructor position had been sought for some time and was apparently one of seven positions to be filled. Nearly 60 professionals and volunteers, including many people from the University, are involved in the various aspects of the inmate program from drug problem to vocational training.

All of Ford's training was aimed at just such a position. experience at Jackson included producing his own teaching programs for closed circuit television, with a special emphasis on art therapy. He has already developed a feeling of pride in his accomplishments of former inmates he has worked with, and is now working on the outside.

Since he came from the Detroit area, Ford has been involved with a wide variety of jobs, mostly in the field of auto mechanics. While this may be a far cry from his work in art, particularly painting, he says it has taught him useful techniques of working with materials. Through it all, he has produced nearly 100 paintings since he began experimenting in 1962.

Ford is critical, however, of the local jail program which generally has been hailed as innovative among county facilities. charges that Preadmore has diverted the program to suit his purposes at the expense of the inmates.

"If you go into a cell you'll find them spick-and-span, sterile can be. And a sterile environment leads to a lot of thinking."

Ford said that the program really doesn't accomplish what was supposed to because of Preadmore's interference. preoccupation with discipline. He says that inmates are not allowed to take materials to their cells to work and that the repressive atmosphere only widens the gulf between "the boss and the kept."

Despite what he believes to be Preadmore's intransigence his own current meager salary of $30 per week as an assistant art department, Ford says he is determined to fight, if for the sake of the other inmates who will be coming out of him.

"For 20 years I've been involved in this type of thing," said. "You can't chop 20 years of time out of a man's life. (Preadmore) can't feel that men who have gone through the rigors of jail are not equal, then who is?"

Officers stress fire safety rules

By LINDA WERFELMAN
State News Staff Writer

Student apathy toward and disregard of fire safety regulations are the main elements of danger in residence hall fires, according to Samuel C. Gingrich, MSU fire safety officer.

"Many students just think fire can't happen, but sometimes, of course, it does," he said. "There isn't too much interest until something happens and then there is a lot of interest for just a few days."

Douglas Zatechka, area director of south campus, agreed that "students think there are a lot of elaborate plans that seem meant to stymie people," especially regulations regarding fire drills and limiting certain types of room decorations.

"Sometimes people feel this is undue harassment, but most of the regulations are set up for the one time in 100 that something that really dangerous happens," he said.

Burning candles have started three residence hall fires in the last week, including one Saturday morning in East Wilson Hall which caused about $7,000 damage, Gingrich said.

Incidents connected with this fire illustrated many of the problems encountered by firemen in other residence hall fires, he added, emphasizing student reluctance to leave the building.

"The lobby was just jammed with students," he said. "People just do not want to leave the building; they do not want to go out in the cold, for one thing."

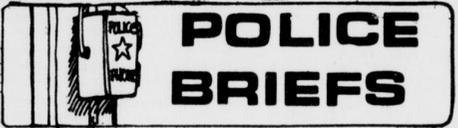

Zatechka agreed that "sometimes there are false alarms and people get tired of getting up for a prank."

The concentration of students in the lobby increased the firemen's problems in reaching the fire quickly, Gingrich said.

Water fights with fire extinguishers have decreased the level of liquid in the extinguishers, he added.

Zatechka, agreed that water fights and thefts of fire equipment have created problems. "The time it could take firemen to get another extinguisher could be too late," he said.

Use of electrical appliances or candles in rooms and the presence of decorations which could burn easily also contribute to possibilities for fires which spread more quickly, Gingrich said. "When you pump all of these things into a room, it burns like wildfire," Zatechka agreed.

A STUDENT WAS arrested for possession of what police believed to be a quantity of hashish at 11:10 p.m. Monday outside the Shaw parking ramp. Police said the student was stopped for driving under the influence of alcohol, and in a subsequent search the hashish was found in his coat pocket. His case has been referred to the county prosecutor.

while he was opening his room door. Police said the man was described as a black male with a stocky build.

ANOTHER STUDENT WAS arrested for being drunk and disorderly at 1:30 Tuesday morning when he came into the police headquarters and argued about a ticket. Police said the student used obscene language to an officer on duty and said he was lodged in jail overnight until he had sobered up.

A RATHER HALL coed told police that $15 in currency and a wallet were stolen between 9:15 and 10 p.m. Monday from her room. Police said the door to the room had been left partly open and said the empty wallet was found outside in the snow.

A $500 TAPE recorder was stolen from the lobby of Erikson Hall about 4 p.m. Sunday when a student was unpacking his car. Police have no suspects.
