Military sources said the ommunist command may be reparing for a major offensive. But entagon officials in Washington said

At the same time, the military situation in neighboring Cambodia remained serious. All highways to the capital, Phnom Penh, remained cut as Communist regiments tightened their noose around the city.

In the fighting in South Vietnam, artillery and ground attack at widely scattered points in what military sources described as "probing activity" to test Saigon's reactions and feel out weak links. Attempts by Canada and Indonesia on the International Commission of Control and Superivision to put a stop to the fighting bogged down in procedural wrangles with Poland and Hungary, the commission's other two members.

Hanoi radio claimed Viet Cong forces were fighting only in "defensive reaction" to what it called South Vietnam's "military operations to encroach upon and take control of liberated areas."

The broadcast charged that Saigon -"under American instructions" - had been responsible for 20,000 military operations in the last two months.

Government casualties in the four main clashes reported have climbed to more than 300 and field reports said one position in the central highlands, 18 miles from the provincial capital of Pleiku, was overrun.

Communist infantrymen stormed in behind an artillery barrage, driving out the company - size garrison and wounding 51 government rangers. The rest retreated toward the nearby Thanh Giao base camp but 34 still are listed as missing.

A company sent out to recover the position ran into artillery harassment, field reports said.

The Saigon command spokesman, Lt. Col. Le Trung Hien, reported that in the north, 11 miles west of the old imperial capital of Hue and 50 miles below the demilitarized zone, Communist gunners rained nearly 800 shells on an infantry position in 20

State House votes to keep bill on death penalty in committee

A resolution, calling for the implementation of the death penalty for the murderers of public officials, firemen and policemen suffered a temporary blow Thursday, as the Michigan House voted 56 - 50 to keep the bill bottled up in the Committee on Constitutional Revision and Women's Rights.

The resolution, sponsored by Rep. Joyce Symons, D - Allen Park, would amend the present constitutional language prohibiting the use of the death penalty for any crimes in the Supporters of the bill argued that release of the bill would allow further questions to be answered as well as provide an evaluation of its weaknesses and strengths. They also argued that by releasing the bill, the public would be able to provide better input and opposition to the resolution.

The resolution has also been introduced in the Senate.

"Just taking the bill out of committee does not mean that it becomes a law or that it will be implemented right away," Symons told her that the resolution has racial said. "But by keeping it in committee, the public is deprived of a chance to have a say on the resolution."

Opponents to the discharge of the resolution said that because the committee voted 5 - 2 to keep the bill, the House should respect this decision.

"The committee system is the very backbone of the legislative process,' Bobby Crim, D - Davison, and majority floor leader of the House said. "It is only as a last resort, when the committee has clearly neglected to hear the resolution, that we should vote to discharge it out of committee."

Symons was upset that the committee did not have a report from opinions as to their support or the Michigan State Police when it decided to keep the resolution in committee. The report in essence states that the state police are in favor of the resolution because of the rapid increase of crime in Michigan.

Symons also said a representative connotations because capital

U.S. diplomats in China

The first American diplomats posted to China in 24 years entered the People's Republic Thursday to open the United States Liaison Office in Peking.

Three members of an eventual staff of 30, together with another four on temporary assignment, took the train to Canton from where they were scheduled to fly to Peking later Thursday.

The group was led by Alfred Jenkins, who began his diplomatic career as a consular officer in Peking in 1946, where he served until 1948. He has been head of the State Dept.'s China desk during the last three years, where Sino - American relations began to thaw.

Alaska pipeline pushed

President Nixon ordered full administration efforts Thursday toward clearing the way for construction of the Alaska oil pipeline.

Nixon summoned Secretary of the Interior Rogers C.B. Morton to the Western White House for a 45 - minute conference on a sunny patio overlooking the Pacific Ocean.

Morton reported that the President said he "wanted me to go all out, working with Congress and with the other agencies involved in pursuing the construction of the trans - Alaska pipeline which he feels is vital to the national interest."

Papers did no damage

Donald S. Luce, who along with two American congressmen discovered the "tiger cages" in a South Vietnam prison in 1970, has told the jury at the Pentagon Papers trial that disclosure of information about the "strategic hamlet" and "pacification" programs in Vietnam did not damage those programs.

Luce said that the "strategic hamlets program was over by 1963" and that it became the "pacification" program, which in turn, by 1969, had become the Vietnamization program. He was called as a defense witness on three volumes of the Pentagon Papers that contained information on those programs.

Nixon vetoes water grant bill

WASHINGTON (AP) - A bill that would require the spending of an estimated $120 million for rural water grants was vetoed by President Nixon Thursday his second veto of what he galls "inflationary" egislation passed Congress.

Nixon, who ordered the water grants cut off last Jan. 10, said in his veto message Congress that the measure probably was unconstitutional. It raised the question, he said, of whether Congress can order the president to spend the full amount it appropriates for a program.

Such a mandate, Nixon, said "conflicts with the allocation of executive power to the president." Nixon's first veto of legislation he regards as budget breaking was exercised last Oct. 27 over a $2.6 - billion vocational rehabilitation bill. The Senate sustained the veto

To help familiarize readers with the workings of the State News editorial page, we would like to introduce the two national editorial cartoonists who are printed regularly on this page.

Pat Oliphant, born in Australia, is a cartoonist at the Denver Post. His cartoons are distributed by a newspaper syndicate to more than 200 other newspapers.

"The basis of my cartoon is humor; there is no better vehicle for satirical thought," Oliphant says. "In those instances where a particularly grim subject might indicate a straight approach, the contrast that humor affords thrusts the message home with fresh impact."

Nixon ignores his moral

WASHINGTON - President Nixon is in personal trouble over the Watergate case, not because there is any evidence that he knew about the conspiracy, but because he has not handled it in accordance with the candor and the fair moral principles he insists he represents.

When he talks, Nixon is a moralizer. the faithful son of Quaker parents and Quaker ideals, whose duty it is to summon the people back to their ethical and religious ideals. But when he acts, he is a tough, cunning and even ruthless operator, and he is in trouble over the Watergate precisely because his actions have not corresponded to his proclaimed ideals.

He says he is for an "open administration," and for open minds Work on the policy being and open doors, but he does not allow his White House staff to be questioned

This is no longer an argument between the White House and the reporters who exposed the links between the Watergate and the President's re - election committee, or even between the Republicans and the Democrats. Nixon is in trouble with the conservative spies, who were hired to break into the Watergate. They are now talking about who hired them. Nixon is also in trouble with conservative Republican senators, like James Buckley of New York, and even with the Republican leader in the Senate, Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania, who are insisting that all the facts in this conspiracy should finally be

Project Grapevine

To the Editor:

Some students follow what ASMSU does, and some students read The Grapevine Journal. But if one does both, as I have, an interesting juxtaposition of facts emerges which otherwise may not have been noticed. Fact one: ASMSU donated $3,000 to Project Grapevine at its Feb. 6 meeting. The allocation was reportedly made to pay off some outstanding debts Project Grapevine had.

Fact two: The format of The Grapevine Journal has shown a marked improvement; the variety and quality of headline type has increased and the columns are now straight and even. In short, it appears that, instead of the "cut and paste" method of layout employed by such low - budget papers as Joint Issue, The Grapevine Journal now can afford to use a linotype machine.

A few other facts: Printed posters are appearing around campus advertising The Grapevine Journal and Project Grapevine is advertising a rumor control center over the student radio network.

The irony is obvious: When asking for money from ASMSU. Project Grapevine was a struggling group fighting for its survival. But, judging by its activities, Project Grapevine now appears to be a prospering enterprise, able to afford all sorts of extra goodies. Which is the true situation? If the latter, it appears that the previous ASMSU board has been played for a

An argument might be made for the student government to give monetary support to a student paper which might perish without it. But I can see no justification for ASMSU "icing the cake" of various interest groups. I trust that the newly elected board will put a stop to this gravy train run at the students' expense.

Alcohol

In light of the findings recently released by the National Commission on Marijuana and Drug Abuse, I find the local support for the sale of alcoholic beverages at the Union very disconcerting.

I am not a teetotaler. I do not advocate abstinence from drinking alcohol, but I do advocate moderation. However, the prevalence of alcoholism seems to point out that many people cannot accept the responsibility that rational temperance places on them.

I do not believe we should revert to the days of Prohibition. The self righteous, moralistic standards of government during Prohibition are not the answer to curing drug abuse. But let's not expand the possibilities of creating abuse of alcohol by selling it in the Union or in campus residences. How convenient that bar owners in the East Lansing area don't object to the Union serving alcoholic beverages! The State News, last Friday quoted Rick Becker, manager of the Brewery. as saying: "Sure it would hurt our, sales initially, but it would eventually get some kids into the habit of drinking when they were opposed to it before.'

This statement shows the same concern for economic profit rather than for human welfare that is so widespread throughout American

I agree with columnist Tom Wicker (State News, Tuesday,) that President Nixon's get tough tactics are not the answer to curing drug abuse. What is needed is research on why we are so dependent on booze, pills, and pot. We need to develop new and better self awareness and self - understanding that will help us deal with our psychological motivation for dependence on drugs. We need to promote individual self - esteem and human dignity. This means educating people to become aware of the responsibilities for the care and control of their bodies and minds.

Perhaps it is expecting too much to ask people to carefully consider their own psychological and physical well being and to take note of new information concerning their total health. After all, President Nixon rejected the findings of the National Commission on Marijuana and Drug Abuse. Unfortunately, he reflects the attitudes of too many people in America today.

POINT OF VIEW

King battled bias with insight

By CLIFTON R. WHARTON, JR. MSU President

All of us, I am sure, have special memories of Martin Luther King, Jr. My own recollections are varied, but one image stands out from the rest an image of a deeply religious man, who, in the face of violence and hatred, maintained a steadfast devotion to the brotherhood of all men, even those who despised and abused him.

When I reflect upon Dr. King and the faith he lived, I recall a marvelous phrase from the "Book of Common Prayer": "an outward and visible sign of an inward and spiritual grace." Dr. King's "outward and visible sign" his term of life on earth - came to a tragic end. Yet his "inward and spiritual grace" lives on in the beliefs for which he struggled and died, the vision he left behind - a dream of a humane society dedicated to human dignity and justice for the individual.

As an educator, I continually discover the relevance of his dream for academia. Traditionally, education has committed itself to nurturing and transmitting not only knowledge, but basic human values as well. Has reality mirrored our ideals? Our school systems, colleges, and universities have become mega - organizations that dominate important parts of our lives.

The individual who must cope with these sprawling and frequently impersonal bureaucracies soon senses the persistent threat to his individuality, his humanity. In education, as in the wider society, the erosion of these qualities leads to a loss of any feeling of community, a failure of good will. Ironically, communications, the media, travel and urbanization have brought us physically closer than ever, while spiritually and emotionally we grow further and further apart.

White racism and black racism feed one upon the other, sparking interpersonal conflict and - all too often - violence. Dr. King, as we all know, rejected violence everywhere,

Dr. King was an evangelist of all humanity. He was a man of all people, but he was far too wise to fail to understand the plight of the poor white, as well as the poor black. He taught that man is one - in his nobility and his wretchedness, in his ambition and his apathy, in his wealth

I realize that asserting our belief in individual dignity, humane values, and the unity of mankind is far simpler than implementing these ideals in institutional and organizational behavior. It is a challenge not only to leadership in education and throughout each community - but to every individual in society. If we are to build a new world resembling the dream of Dr. King, education must be the cornerstone - an education that brooks no erosion of the ideals we

Secretary struggles for status

By MAUREEN MCDONALD State News Staff Writer

Refusing to make coffee for a boss can brew more than a little controversy. For Nancy Teeter, a secretary in medical education, her refusal meant her eventual dismissal.

Teeter caused wide attention last summer when she announced she would not make coffee or clean conference rooms after her bosses, because "grown men could perform the task as well as not." She felt she was paid to be a secretary, not a housekeeper, but her opinion was not widely held.

Teeter addressed a seminar last Saturday at the United Ministries for Higher Education offices, 1118 S. Harrison Road, to discuss the events which led to her dismissal March 30.

She explained her activity in MSU began when she moved to East Lansing with her husband.

The first question the MSU Placement Bureau asked was "Is your husband a student?" Teeter said. "On that basis they assigned a level. Temporary status is assigned to any student wife."

Miniskirt madness

, She accepted a job at the College of Human Medicine, and soon found herself in trouble with the nursing office for wearing miniskirts.

"They didn't pick on all the secretaries - just the ones with big busts," Teeter said.

Meanwhile, her boss accepted a job in private practice, and Teeter was left to find another job. Under University policy, secretaries are placed in any opening which exists, but Teeter wanted some choice in the matter.

Teeter filed her first grievance with Mary Sharp, who was then asst. director of the Office of Equal Opportunity. Teeter said Sharp told her there was nothing she could do but keep on fighting.

She found a job for herself in the Office of Medical Education Research and Development, two levels below the one she held formerly. She took the position with a personal agreement with her boss that she would have no hassles with hours or skirt length.

In January she asked for a raise and a promotion, but was told that "it was not a good time to ask for a raise."

After waiting until May with no raise, Teeter met with 10 other secretaries to make recommendations to improve the office operations. They vowed to strike if their requests were not met.

A committee was established to discuss team concepts, and she was told at this time to begin work at 8 a.m. along with the other secretaries, instead of 8:30 a.m. when her boss told her to start. She refused to comply.

Meanwhile her husband dropped out of school to accept a position with the Michigan Dept. of State and she realized she would be working as a permanent career.

Teeter went to Sharp again, pleading for her raise and promotion, which she said she had been promised. She also requested permission to see her file to shed some light on her case.

"I was really stupid then," Teeter said. "By the time I got to the file everything was missing - including my initial

She attended another series of meetings to petition for a raise, but was told each time that she should make coffee. Eventually, Teeter contacted Joseph McMillan, director Equal Opportunities Programs at that time, for help.

"He told me 'don't make coffee and don't tell anyone I told you that," Teeter "He also gave me forms to fill out to file a grievance against the University."

Later, the acting director of medical education withdrew Teeter's promotion and raise request on the basis of "adversary attitude," she said.

She said she watched a number of women get promotions above her, as she sat waiting for action on her two grievances. After some time she called Sharp, and was told her complaint was not done according to formal procedure.

Clerical -] echnical unio2 She started to organize a union of clerical - technical workers to gain power and filed another grievance, when told that the forms for filing a complaint had changed. By this time, Teeter had become spokeswoman for secretaries' rights. She still had no raise, nor promotion, but other women were calling her for advice on women's issues.

When she applied for another job within the University, seven people were on hand to interview her. "The main question they asked was why I wouldn't make coffee," Teeter said. In March, Teeter was informed that the research grant which funded her department would expire at the end of the month. Foreign studies eye funding cuts

By CHRIS DANIELSON State News Staff Writer

University officials are still assessing what effect the possible loss of all federal funds would have on MSU's African and Asian studies programs, Ralph Smuckler, dean of international studies and programs, said Wednesday.

The money, which constitutes over one - third of study programs' combined budgets, will be withdrawn if President Nixon's 1973 - 74 budget is approved by Congress.

The proposed budget cuts funds for the National Defense Education Act VI programs to $1.3 million from the current spending level of $15.3 million, Smuckler said.

Currently MSU's African studies program receives $54,000 in federal funding, while Asian studies get $35,000, he said.

The national program was begun in the late 1950s to support foreign language and foreign area studies at American universities, Smuckler noted. Programs at other universities deal with Latin America, the Middle East, and Eastern and Western Europe.

Smuckler said MSU has received federal support for African studies since 1960, with money for Asian studies being granted shortly thereafter.

About 1,000 National Defense Foreign Language fellows, including nine at MSU, could lose their government aid, Smuckler said. A number of courses and graduate assistants in the Dept. of Linguistics and Oriental and African studies also may have to be dropped, he added.

"The cutback will create a good deal of hardship on our graduate students" if it is approved, Smuckler said. The University may no longer be able to teach languages - such as Hindi and Hausa - for which there is only a small

of funding, however. Some universities stand to lose $200,000 to $300,000, Smuckler added. Smuckler criticized the President's action for being when it comes to this type so sudden that it permits no time for universities to obtain alternate sources of funding. He noted that a national shortage of over 1,000 Ph. D.s in foreign studies areas is predicted by

"It's important for us to have a certain number of people who have knowledge of the language and culture of all parts of the world,' Smuckler said.

Smuckler is the steering committee chairman of the Committee on the Future of International Studies. One of the purposes of the committee, which was founded two years ago, is to combat threatened funding cuts, he said.

A group of 29 volunteers who recycle newspaper in campus residence halls braved the rain and dismal weather to meet Wednesday evening and plan ways to attack the problem of recycling newspaper this spring and in the coming 1973 - 74 school year.

Some general problems encountered by recyclers this year include lack of containers to gather the paper in, the fact that paper has not been collected in central locations, lack of knowledge about pick - up times, the fact that paper has been loose and disheveled, the lack of students to help with the programs, and the general lack of understanding about Control Waste Authority recycling plans.

Fred Moore, recycling coordinator for the told authority, volunteers that pickups of paper would now take place on Saturdays because the authority has acquired its own truck to make pickups.

Mexican - Americans living in rural Michigan have unique obstacles to overcome in adjusting to their setting but now they will have the trained assistance of a person with a similar background.

Juan Marinez, recently appointed program leader in MSU Cooperative Extension Service, will have the task of designing programs to surmount the language, cultural and educational handicaps which Mexican - Americans often Marinez, a December graduate of MSU with a B. A. in social work, feels a close kinship with the people he will be helping because he grew up in a family of migrant farmers.

"I've been involved with Mexican - American grievances all my life and now I've been put in a position to do something about them.

"I want to make the doors available to them that were closed to me when I grew up and I think it takes a person with a similar background to understand the frustrations they face," Marinez said.

Besides Marinez, the only other Mexican - American currently working in the Cooperative Extension Service is John Lopez, recently appointed assistant for the state's 4 -H programs.

Two other Mexican - Americans who worked as special assistants to the director of the service, Marta Tienda and Fred Cavazos, resigned last year.

One of the grievances expressed in the lawsuit against the University filed by Sol de Aztlan, a local Chicano group, is that there are no Chicanos in key policy - making positions in the Extension Service.

the language differences.

When the ranch was sold, the family moved to Michigan and worked on a farm in Bath as migrants. A major problem Mexican - Americans must face when they settle in one area after being migrants, Marinez said, is

Marinez, the oldest of 11 children, grew up on a ranch in Texas where his ex - migrant father worked as the foreman.

"I learned English when I was very young because it was easier for the children to pick it up in school. But the adults usually don't have as good an opportunity so they tend to stick with Spanish," Marinez said. He will be working with the county agents of the Extension Service "to sensitize them to the language differences of the people. There is nothing demeaning about Spanish and the people should be helped to learn a new language, not give up the old one." Marinez will be developing such programs as aiding women in stretching their budgets, teaching them to shop for bargains, finding jobs for displaced farm workers and designing retraining programs.

"Cooperative Extension in the past has been used only in areas of agriculture but now we are looking at the people's needs. Since we already have the machinery set up in the counties to help them, we are in the best position to do some good," he said.

Marinez believes this special emphasis on Mexican -American problems of adjustment is a new focus which is just now being felt nationwide.

"Instead of just putting these displaced people on the already bulging welfare roles, we are beginning to look ahead to the generations that will come after them. This had to come eventually because the needs are so great."

It was surprising that Weisse's choruses omitted the final rubato. Rhythmic emphasis was totally sacrificed to Weisse's penchant for broad phrasing.

Despite the conducting difficulties mentioned, the choir produced a good performance. They sang all that incredibly complicated choral work in an admirable manner considering the limitations of the conductor. It is unfortunate, to say the least, that most of their volume was swallowed in the backstage of the Auditorium.

The other critic is a young man who demands that Lea Scot, as Adele, gives a tense, clipped performance which removes the degree of menace that Adele should be to the other members of the family. Scot is far too articulate in her role and as a result several of her scenes have an unconvincing tone to them. Some of this tension may have been due to opening night jitters, for there are moments in Scot's performance when she admirably hits raw nerves.

Eric Kilpatrick and Michele Shay as Bobby Parker and the young girl, respectively, share the same problem, for each is unable to convincingly submerge themselves behind their characters. Kilpatrick's maturity edges through his youthful Bobby and Shay's intelligence hampers her portrayal of the young dumb floozy.

"Ceremonies in Dark Old Men" is fine dramatic fare, well - mounted and presented. Unfortunately the production at the Vest Pocket needs a tighter reign by the director on both pacing and some of the performances.

The National Ballet of Canada, with the internationally acclained Russion star Rudolf Nureyev as guest artist will perform next Thursday and Friday in the Auditorium.

At 8:15 p.m. Thursday, the famous ballet, "Swan Lake' with Nureyev as the Prince, wil be presented as the final attraction in Series "A" ("University Series") of MSU's Lecture - Concert Series.

At 8:15 p.m. Friday, Nureyev will be featured in the solo ballet, "The Moor's Pavane," and will also dance the lead role in "La Sylphide." The performance will also include "Fandango" and the pas de deux, "La Loup" ("The Wolf").

A limited number of tickets remain available at the ticket office in the Union.

Nureyev began serious ballet study at Leningrad's Kirov Ballet School at the age of 17. After winning first prize at the Nation Student Dance Competition in Moscow, he was invited to dance opposite the Kirov company's top ballerina in "Laurentia" and was soon appearing in most of the company's repertoire.

Besides appearing in a number of ballets by various choreographers, he has mounted and partly choreographed 19 productions including his famous "Sleeping Beauty" which is being performed elsewhere on the tour.

Despite the fact that the portion of the consumer's dollar that goes toward food has increased to 17 or 18 per cent, Morris called it "a real bargain, not only here but around the world."

Dick Berg, president of Hygrade Food Corp. in Detroit, said consumers are not making great profits on meat.

"Consumers must realize they're not getting gouged and put some confidence into the workings of the market system," he said. Beef cattle producers are making little profit as well, the panelists agreed.

Weather conditions, inefficient and expensive feeding methods, and general unpreparedness were cited as partial reasons for increased meat prices. These, the panelists said, were also responsible for a supply of meat insufficient to meet rising international

"Beset with a large trade deficit, the U.S. is looking to agriculture to close that gap," Ferris said. "And with the devaluation of the dollar, the outlook is

Grain exports

Higher grain prices, a result of U.S. grain exports to the U.S.S.R. and China, have been only partially reflected in food and meat prices here, he said, keeping costs lower that they could have been.

Morris said the banning in January of DES, a chemical feed additive, on the grounds that it may cause cancer decreased feeding efficiency by 10 per cent, adding $2 to the cost of each 100 pounds of

Cattle deaths

Heavy rains, which bog cattle down on muddy feedlots, have caused extensive deaths among the animals, whom Morris said cannot adapt to highly humid conditions. This, he said, has also decreased supply and lowered producer profits.

Ferris admitted that though no one could have predicted the present crisis two years ago, more resources could have been spent on research into improving pastures, for example, to increase meat production while leveling

Student newspapers across the nation are urging their readers to join the meat boycott — and some are suggesting the possibility of making the boycott permanent.

The Purdue Exponent editorialized, "Show that you care about the food you eat and what you pay for it poycott meat until next Sunday."

(alling beef a "sacred cow" to most Americans, the Minnesota Daily argued that "meat processors, wholesalers, and grocers need to know that the public would rather abstain altogether from eating meat rather than support an inflated price structure."

The Daily Iowan in an editorial viewpoint column suggests that "maybe soybean burgers should become the in - thing for conscientious people to eat."

Johnny Glover, a 40 - year - old ex - convict running for president of the University of Minnesota Student Assn., says, he would be able to deal more effectively with the university's board of regents.

"It's hard to lie to a con because he knows when he's being conned," Glover claims.

Cage recruiting battle rages

MSU vying for quality pivot man

By CHARLES JOHNSON State News Sports Writer

This is the time of the year when collegiate coaches across the nation take on the dubious task of recruiting the top senior high school cagers with hopes of possibly landing a Kareem Abdul -Jabbar or Bill Walton.

Here at MSU the scene is no different as coach Gus Ganakas and his assistants Matt Aitch and Bob Nordmann by now have a pretty good idea of who's who in Michigan prep basketball.

With the departure of senior Bill Kilgore, the Spartans are desperately in need of a good pivot man and Ganakas sees that potential in Detroit Catholic Central's 6 - 10 center Tom LaGarde.

"We have hopes of getting LaGarde," Ganakas said. "But it's really too early to determine what any of our prospects will do because of the number of schools vying for their services.

"LaGarde has been flooded with so many offers until he has virtually put himself in a vacuum and doesn't want to talk to anyone," Ganakas added.

Although published reports have indicated that Notre Dame has LaGarde's eye, the high school all - American contends he is undecided about his collegiate plans.

Besides LaGarde, the Spartan staff is going after 6 - 8 Ben Poquette of East Lansing, 6 - 9 Tom Scheffler of St. Joseph, 6 - 9 Bob Elliot of Ann Arbor Pioneer, 6 - 7 Randy McLean of Walled Lake, 6 - 7 Greg Johnson of Saginaw, and 6 - 5 Edgar Wilson of Dowagiac.

Scheffler, a highly touted prep by collegiate scouts, has already eliminated MSU as a possible choice for school.

"I've brought my considerations down to two schools — Western Kentucky and Indiana," Scheffler revealed. "Basically my decision was based on the art programs of these two schools and the togetherness of the ball teams."

Wilson, a three sport man in high school, has also caught the attention of MSU's football staff who is interested in him as a punter.

MSU, which already has 16 ball players on four year basketball scholarships, will be directly affected by a new NCAA rule taking effect in Schools like Western Kentucky are becoming increasingly more popular with players in the north because of their elaborate facilities. Here at MSU we have to emphasize our great undergraduate program and friendly social campus as our main attributes." Gus Ganakas 1974, which states that a school can only have 18 tendered athletes at a time.

Since the Spartans only lose three players this season, there are only five scholarships available for basketball recruits during the next two recruiting seasons.

"We really don't have many vacancies to fill because of our large stock of returning forwards and guards," Ganakas remarked. "If we get a good center we'll be in good position."

Despite the Spartan staff's all out effort to recruit quality players, Ganakas isn't too optimistic.

"There's more competition in basketball recruiting than in any other sport," Ganakas reasoned. "There are a lot of basketball powers who emphasize solely basketball and have the facilities to attract good players."

Generally the Spartans are restricting their recruiting activity to the Michigan area, which poses the problem of convincing an athlete that MSU is better than any of the other neighboring

"The talent in Michigan is good, but there are so many schools that have to share the talent" Ganakas said.

He also cited the migration of basketball players to southern schools as a reason for his mild pessimism.

"Schools like Western Kentucky are becoming increasingly more popular with players in the north because of their elaborate facilities," Ganakas said. "Here at MSU we have to emphasize our great undergraduate program and friendly social campus as our main attributes."

No matter what happens in the Spartan's recruiting bid, Ganakas is hopeful of a prosperous

"If we get improvement from now until the season begins, we'll be in good shape," he said.

Stickmen face Illinois

By JACK WALKDEN State News Sports Writer

When making up a schedule in advance of any athletic season, it is difficult to tell how good or bad the schedule will turn out to be. In the case of this year's lacrosse schedule it couldn't have turned out better.

The Spartans host Illinois in a 2 p.m. game Saturday at the football secret practice field. The field is located across the street from Case Hall and has a tarp covering the field but don't let that keep anyone away.

The game will give MSU a chance to heal all of in wounds as Illinois is a non - league foe and one of the less opponents on this year's schedule.

"I'm glad Illinois is coming when it is," MSU coach Box Stevenson said. "Rob (Hebert) can get over his injury and Val (Washington) can break in his new stick."

Hebert injured his ankle last week against Ashland and the ankle swelled up to double the regular size this week. "If we were in a pinch then he could play, but And (Obelnicki) did such an excellent job while he was in la week that he should be able to do the job," Stevenson said Washington will be using a new stick this week after being forced to use a borrowed stick against Ashland whe his stick was broken in practice.

"Val used a borrowed stick last week and its tough in get used to a different stick. You get used to a certain crevice in the stick and its tough to get used to a new one. Stevenson said.

The Spartans have one other injury problem but not serious one. Steve Urbin has a couple of troublesom injuries. He has ankle and knee problems. Even though the won't keep him out of the game, they will slow him down

Stevenson singled out the play of the second midfield one of the bright points of the Ashland game. The second midfield is made up of Michael Richard, Roy Sgroi and Jef

"The second midfield put most of the pressure on las week," Stevenson said.

The first midfield was thrown off a little because of V and his borrowed stick."

Stevenson continued to complement all of the midfield "The offense this week has been very strong. I hope that continues into the game." In summing up the team's performance so far this seaso Stevenson said, "I think we're a better team than I though

I think we should've beat Ashland. If we played them the week I think we would beat them."

Stevenson said the lacrosse practices were open to the public and that "anyone is welcome to come and watch maybe even try out for the team."

punishment tended to punish minorities discriminately. She denied this accusation.

"This accusation came out in one of the committee meetings and I think it was uncalled for," Symons said. "This is not a racist amendment."

By refusing to discharge the resolution, the House has expressed some reluctance not only to override the committee vote, but also to act on the resolution without having further discussions on it.

Daisy Elliot, D - Detroit, and chairwoman of the Constitution Committee that considered the resolution, said she had serious reservations about the resolution because of the misguided intent of the sponsors in proposing it.

"I sympathize with people who are angry about the violent crime," she said. "But we must not strike out in blind rage by restoring a cruel, vicious penalty which has never been shown to make society safer. On the contrary, capital punishment and its sensational publicity sometimes actually causes murder and imitative crimes." After the vote, Symons said she would attempt to bring to a vote againn. Under House rules, she is allowed one more chance to attempt to bring it out of committee. If the House rejects this attempt, then the initiative will have to be taken by another representative.

Rep. H. Lynn Jondahl, D - East Lansing, who caucused vigorously on the floor to keep the resolution in committee, said he was not surprised at the House vote, but he was surprised at the number of votes cast rejecting the discharge.

"I am encouraged that we received the number of votes we did," he said.

Following the discharge defeat, a similar resolution, sponsored by Rep. Kirby Holmes, R - Utica, calling for the death penalty for all first degree crimes, was withdrawn by Holmes pending further action.

Brandt reaffirms ties with U.S., attacks foes

BONN, Germany (AP) - Allegations of anti Americanism in Chancellor Willy Brandt's party touched off a fiery parliamentary debate Thursday as he reaffirmed Bonn's friendship with the United States, weeks before he meets President Nixon in Washington.

In one of his most emotional lower house speeches, Brandt at times raised his voice to a near - shout.

He blasted opposition charges that neutralist, anti -Americanism dissidents in his party have strained relations with Bonn's main ally.

Accusing the opposition of basing their charges on phony press reports of U.S. - German discord, Brandt said not even German newsmen disseminating these "canards" from journalistic "poison kitchens" in Washington could harm the solidity of the transatlantic alliance.

The chancellor's remarks apparently were directed at anti - Brandt newspapers.

His speech came the day after a surprise announcem that he will fly to Washington for a May 1 - 2 meeting President Nixon, only 10 days before Soviet leader lan I. Brezhnev is expected to pay his first visit to Bonn talks with Brandt.

The news added fuel to opposition charges that m developments in Brandt's Social Democratic party offen the U.S. administration.

And West Germany's biggest - circulation tabloid anti - Brandt Bild Zeitung, bannered its main front story Thursday with the headline.

"Alarm in Bonn and Washington. Brandt Hurris Nixon."

The newspaper alleged that Washington fears Brandt "swing even stronger on an East course" after his man with Brezhnev.

The anti - Americanism issue at the center of Thursday debate focused on a group of young leftist radical Brandt's party.

They want him to cancel the offset agreement un which Bonn partly repays Washington for stationing so 200,000 troops in West Germany, and to withdraw then cut defense expenditure, castigate Washington - for role in Indochina and even protest any nomination Nixon for the 1973 Nobel Peace Prize.
