

Saving energy nothing unusual on MSU campus

By DIANE SILVER
State News Staff Writer

Like the rest of our energy devouring society, MSU woke up last week to the fact that the fuel shortage could cause us all to be in very cold water.

However, unlike some educational institutions, MSU is not a babe in the energy conservation woods.

The University's first experience with an organized conservation program came in 1971 in response to a financial crisis caused by slim appropriations from the state. Faculty, students and staff were asked then to voluntarily lower thermostats and turn off lights. Some $250,000 was saved in fuel and electricity costs that year.

Yet, by 1973 these savings were mostly eroded by increased fuel costs due to inflation and the return of consumers to their old wasteful habits, Ted Simon, Physical Plant director, said.

Last winter term, the pleas of one faculty member for energy conservation went unheeded because of University officials' fears that the MSU community would rebel if asked to conform to such measures.

The plan, proposed by Terrel Phenice, associate professor of anthropology, would have lowered the University's thermostats to three degrees below their normal setting.

Phenice estimates that $280,000 and 10 per cent of MSU's fuel consumption could have been saved.

Simon said that his office rejected the plan because they feared people would not cooperate.

"An order such as this at that time would have resulted in a flood of complaints," he said. "The campus population was not ready for such a drastic move. And let's face it, there has to be a real urgent and acceptable reason before such action would be followed."

"As recent as last week we heard from reasonable."

Simon added that the impact of the effort to cut the amount of fuel consumed will not be measurable for about two weeks.

But even if large savings are made, the problem of fuel shortage will still be around, he said.

"I cannot predict how much more will have to be done at MSU but we do not see any relief in sight," Simon said. "I'm not an expert on energy resources but from the newspaper reports I've read, I think we can expect the situation to get worse before it gets better."

Simon said he sensed a desire in people to solve the energy crisis and then briskly move on to other problems.

"But this is not that kind of problem, it is here to stay. Now, we are making the initial adjustments to it and in the future we will have to start planning seriously what to do in the next 10 years."

people complaining that they were too cool at 75 degrees and wanted their thermostats turned up," Simon said.

"Within the last three and four days we have seen signs of excellent response to Wharton's Nov. 8 announcement," Simon said. "As far as I'm concerned, people have always been cooperative in responding to anything that is

Senate ratifies amendment to suspend emission controls

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Thursday defeated a Democratic move to require President Nixon to order gas rationing by Jan. 15 and then adopted an amendment its sponsor said could slow clean air efforts by two years.

The clean air amendment to emergency energy legislation would allow temporary suspension of emission standards in order to permit the burning of dirtier fuels.

Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D - Maine, the sponsor, said it would "assure minimum disruption of air quality programs," but acknowledged that it could "in some instances delay the achievement of the emission reduction goals of the Clean Air Act by two years." It passed overwhelmingly.

The emission standards suspension is one of several powers President Nixon says he needs to meet the energy crisis.

A long list of amendments remain to be considered before action on the emergency energy bill can be completed.

Many of the amendments have been cleared by Interior Committee Chairman Henry M. Jackson, D - Wash., the floor manager of the bill.

President Nixon said Thursday he will sign a bill authorizing construction of an oil pipeline across Alaska despite what he said were objectionable features of the bill.

However, Nixon said he would ask Congress later to remove amendments attached to the bill in the Senate and approved by the Senate - House conference committee.

The riders to which Nixon objected were backed by Jackson, and grant broad new regulatory powers to the Federal Trade Commission, including the right to go to court to enforce its rules if the Justice Department fails to act.

Administration infighting over energy policies was disclosed Tuesday when Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz said some people were overreacting to the energy crisis and that gas rationing could be avoided.

His statement conflicted with Interior Secretary Rogers C. B. Morton and White House energy adviser John Love, who were saying rationing was about a certainty by the beginning of 1974.

Chairman Herbert F. Stein of the Council of Economic Advisers followed a day later by saying he thought the administration would opt for tax increases on gasoline, rather than rationing.

Proposals are being developed within the Treasury for a 30 - cent increase in the federal tax on gasoline, which would boost prices per gallon to about the 75 to 80 cent level, depending on the grade of gasoline.

If there is gasoline rationing, a large new bureaucracy would be needed and someone to run it and this logically would fall under Interior's new Office of Petroleum Allocation, already set up to administer the mandatory allocation programs for heating oil, jet fuel and kerosene.

But if the administration opts for a higher gasoline tax — and can get Congress to go along — Treasury would handle that since it already collects a four - cent gasoline tax and little additional new bureaucracy might be needed.

Fuel allocations are beginning to pinch public transportation in several of the nation's cities and more transit agencies expect cuts in December unless they get additional supplies.

The shortage is forcing some companies to scout for alternate sources of fuel supply.

"I'm confident that mass transit has the highest priority and in fact will get the fuel it needs," Transportation Secretary Claude Brinegar told the House Commerce Committee.

Bus rental plan for area struck by energy crisis

By LINDA SANDEL
State News Staff Writer

A plan to rent 10 buses from the Detroit Dept. of Street Railways (DSR), which would enable Lansing transit officials to implement an extension of the Lansing bus system, may be pinched by the energy crisis.

Frank Mossman, vice chairman of the Capitol Area Transit Authority said a plan for renting the DSR buses would solve the authority's problems of insufficient bus equipment which have delayed proposed route extensions for several months.

The proposed route would extend East Lansing's bus service to include north - south runs. Presently the city benefits only from east - west routes running along Grand River Avenue from the Capitol to Meridian Mall.

DSR Asst. General Manager Don Edmondson said Thursday that Detroit transit officials thought nearly two months ago that they would be able to lease the buses to Lansing.

"Earlier we thought we could spare ten buses easily," Edmondson said. "Now that we see the possibility of a real energy crisis coming, we tend to think we'll need every bus we can lay our hands on."

Edmondson says that higher gas prices are already forcing more Detroiters to use bus systems and that the trend should place greater emphasis on having many buses out on the streets.

Edmondson did say, however, that the energy crisis does not necessarily mean that the DSR will not be able to furnish Lansing with 10 buses.

He said that the DSR bus commission will probably withhold agreement on the proposed contract until the Dept. of State Highways formalizes plans to create a state - owned reserve fleet rolling stock of used buses.

Edmondson said that DSR would be willing to lease buses to Lansing if the highway department would be able, within several months, to take over the agreement and lease buses from its own fleet to the city. DSR, therefore, would not be deprived of its buses for long.

Joseph Corcoran, manager of operating services and grants in the highway department's Bureau of Urban and Public Transportation, said that energy shortages have forced officials to investigate the possibility of establishing a state - controlled reserve of buses which could be leased to cities needing mass transit equipment.

Corcoran said the department is urging the DSR to lease buses to the Lansing authority until the state can put the reserve fleet leasing idea into operation.

"We intend to set up a bus pool system," Corcoran said. "It will take some time however, because we may have to go to the legislature for some money."

Arnold Stieber, assistant to the chairman of the Lansing - area transit authority said he hopes to see the reserve fleet set up so that DSR can confirm the "gentleman's agreement" which the bus officials from both sides have been discussing.

Stieber said the Lansing authority

Spartan Stadium will have a new look next fall.

MSU Athletic Director Burt Smith announced Thursday that a new AstroTurf synthetic grass surface will be installed for next year.

Smith disclosed the signing of a contract with the Monsanto Company of St. Louis, Mo., for an installation cost of approximately $170,000 for the new covering.

The present Tartan Turf field was installed in 1969 at a cost of about $250,000.

The new cover will replace the current surface of approximately 75,000 square feet and will cover an additional area of about 10,000 square feet around the perimeter of the field. This means the new cover will present an artificial grass surface for the entire stadium floor.

"We have expressed continued dissatisfaction with the installation and subsequent deterioration condition of the present surface and recent engineering analysis has supported our concern," Smith said.

"In selecting Monsanto AstroTurf, we feel that MSU is now getting the best product available on the market," Smith continued. "There have been many improvements made in recent years and we will benefit from these."

"It's a decided improvement over what we had," he said. "The people who were with me were very much impressed with the AstroTurf."

"It has 85 more fibers per square inch which offers more shock resistance. The installation and product are much improved."

Smith was pleased with the final price agreement, but added that the budget would take a beating.

"After about four months of negotiations and in view of the price that they finally agreed upon, I'd say that it was a success," Smith said.

"However, the cost will have to be spread over a number of years as far as the budget is concerned," he added. "It's a pretty big chunk to come out of the budget at one time."

The installation of the new surface will take place next spring and will take about three to five weeks depending on the weather. Smith is hopeful that the surface will be installed in time for the Green and White intrasquad game.

The project is being paid for by the athletic department, but some saving may be made from the 3-M company, the installer of the original turf in 1969.

"I can't say whether there will be any compensation from the original installer, because I'm not sure at this time," Smith said.

With the recent injury problem involving AstroTurf that the National Football League players union brought up, Smith was asked if MSU was asking for more trouble with the installation of the new product.

"I talked to coaches in the Big Ten and they're not convinced that AstroTurf causes more injuries," Smith answered.

Milton Baron, director of the Dept. of Campus Park and Planning, uses a map to illustrate a point in favor of the proposed Kalamazoo Street project. Baron was one of several speakers who gave 20 - minute presentations on positive aspects of the plan at a Wednesday Building, Lands and Planning Committee meeting. Campus group representatives, most of whom opposed parts of the plan, were held to five minutes.

Local groups denounce proposed bridge project

By CHRIS DANIELSON
State News Staff Writer

More than 125 people, including three MSU trustees, heard representatives of eight on and off - campus groups question and criticize several aspects of the $700,000 Kalamazoo Street project at an informational meeting of the Building, Lands and Planning Committee Wednesday night.

Committee Chairman Anne Garrison said the two - hour meeting, called because of a large response by the campus community to the committee's tentative approval of the project last month, was the first meeting of its type ever held by any standing committee of the Academic Council.

Preliminary plans for the Ingham County Road Commission's construction project call for a 2,000 - foot segment of Kalamazoo Street to be widened from two to four lanes, with the existing bridge over the Red Cedar River to be replaced by a larger span 200 feet to the east.

The river would be rechanneled to pass under the new bridge, and at least 140 trees would be removed.

Since four acres of University property — mostly in the Red Cedar natural area — would be required for the rechanneling and additional right - of - way, the board of trustees must approve final plans for the project when they are drawn up.

Robert Schaeffer, chief engineer of the road commission, said tentative plans are currently being reviewed to study the feasibility of building the new bridge where the old one stands, eliminating the controversial rechanneling proposal.

"The existing structure has a very inadequate waterway. Each spring it jams up with dead trees, and our crews must work many hours to clear the channel and keep the bridge from washing out," Schaeffer said.

"When traffic levels reach 8,000 to 10,000 cars per day, it is time to think about a four - lane street," he added, noting that the traffic count was 8,290 on Oct. 20, 1970 — the day of a home football game against the University of Illinois.

Milton Baron, director of Campus Park and Planning, said the project is necessary because Kalamazoo Street is a major east - west artery from Lansing to MSU, and that it would benefit people living in University Village.

However, most of the group representatives who had been granted time to speak criticized the rechanneling proposal, and some said that the whole project would do more harm than good.

"Kalamazoo Street is nearly a nature path compared to Grand River Avenue, and is seldom overcrowded," said Steven Doud, representing MSU Married Students Union.

"The whole project is a detriment to the University Village area,"

Soldiers battle in Cambodia

Twenty Communist - led troops were killed when North Vietnamese and government troops clashed five times in 24 hours in the remote Cambodian frontier province of Quang Duc.

The Saigon command also said 100 North Vietnamese soldiers and five South Vietnamese soldiers were killed in hand - to - hand fighting along the border, some 125 miles north of Saigon.

Military sources say some 5,000 government troops have been committed to overtake three outposts overrun by the North Vietnamese Nov. 4.

The Viet Cong claimed 68 persons were killed in government aerial attacks against four Communist - held towns between Nov. 3 and Nov. 12.

To protest these attacks, the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese walked out of a meeting of the four - party joint military team, a Viet Cong spokesman said.

Indians, Eskimos halt land work

Indians and Eskimos won an injunction halting work on $6 billion worth of dams, powerhouses, airports and highways that they claimed would destroy their land and way of life.

Quebec Superior Court ordered developers of the hydroelectric project in the James Bay region to cease from trespassing in the area and said work could not continue without "prior agreement of the Indians and Eskimos."

Astronauts take final jet flight

The Skylab 3 astronauts took a final jet flight around south Florida on Thursday to help ward off motion sickness when they blast off for America's orbiting laboratory today at 9:01 a.m.

To avoid the motion sickness that plagued the second Skylab crew, the Skylab 3 astronauts - Gerald P. Carr, William R. Pogue and Edward G. Gibson - will spend their first night in space in the Apollo ferry ship and will take antmotion pills before launching.

Judge frees Hayward Brown

A concealed weapons charge has been dropped against Hayward Brown, 19, who was acquitted of killing a policeman earlier this year in Detroit's most intensive manhunt.

Brown was arrested June 14, 1972 and charged with carrying a concealed weapon after Detroit police said they found a pistol hidden under the seat of his car.

Detroit Recorder's Criminal Court Judge Samuel Gardner dismissed the charges because police officers could not identify the gun as belonging to Brown.

Brown, of Detroit, and two friends were sought by police last December after a police officer was killed and five other officers were wounded. The two other men were killed early this year in shoot - outs with police in Atlanta, Ga.

House minority whip to retire

Rep. Leslie C. Arends, 78, House minority whip, said he will not seek re - election to Congress next year.

He is the ranking Republican in both houses of Congress in terms of seniority after 39 years in Congress, of which 30 were spent as House minority whip.

Arends recently made a bid to replace Rep. Gerald R. Ford, R - Mich., as House minority leader when Ford was nominated to the vice presidency, but was unable to pick up enough support to overcome Rep. John J. Rhodes, R - Ariz.

FBI confiscates adult movie

Federal Bureau of Investigation agents confiscated three copies of the adult film, "The Devil in Miss Jones," from a suburban Detroit theater.

The films are to be used as evidence under a long - standing federal law prohibiting the transporting of obscene materials across state lines.

The U.S. Supreme Court earlier this year said individual communities should decide what is obscene. However, Asst. U.S. Attorney William C. Ibershof said he thinks the decision may be made under the federal interstate transport law.

Meanwhile, a television producer said only a minority audience chose to watch scenes from "The Devil in Miss Jones" in a West German television special called "Porno Made in USA." Most viewers chose to watch soccer or a Hitler impersonator.

Firm explains gift to campaign

ASSOCIATED PRESS

The former head of American Airlines said Thursday he illegally gave $55,000 in corporate funds to President Nixon's 1972 reelection campaign because he was afraid not to.

But another corporate chief, Russell DeYoung of Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., told the Senate Watergate committee that his company illegally gave $40,000 without pressure and "solely because we thought the re - election of the President was in the best interest of the country."

George A. Spater, who retired as board chairman and chief executive officer of the airline shortly after disclosing the illegal contribution, told the Senate Watergate committee that Herbert W. Kalmbach asked him in late 1971 for $100,000 and said $100,000 contributors "would be considered in a special class."

At the time, Spater noted, Kalmbach was the President's personal attorney and represented United Air Lines, American's chief competitor and strongest opponent of a merger between American and Western Airlines. Such airline mergers must be approved by the President, whose decision is not subject to court review.

Several Republican senators said that Nixon claimed former Atty. Gen. Elliot L. Richardson lied in sworn testimony about Richardson's role in the ouster of special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox.

The White House denied the President called

Richardson a liar.

Nixon made the claim, and raised a question of whether the Senate Judiciary Committee would seek action against Richardson for perjury, during a session with GOP senators Wednesday night, the senators said.

The senators who quoted Nixon as calling Richardson a liar declined to be identified.

According to three senators at the White House meeting, Chief of Staff Alexander Haig disputed Richardson's committee testimony that Richardson opposed a White House order for Cox to cease efforts in federal court to obtain tapes and documents in Watergate - related probes.

Haig said that, in fact, Richardson had been the originator of a proposal to limit Cox's probe, the senators reported.

Meanwhile, President Nixon pushed his Watergate counter - attack Thursday vowing anew to remain in office.

Appearing before an overflow crowd of seven thousand at the National Assn. of Realtors convention, Nixon accentuated the happy developments of the year, from his standpoints and soft - pedaled discussion of the Watergate scandals, which he referred to simply as "the problem of the campaign of 1972."

Egypt, Israel exchange first of 8,000 prisoners

TEL AVIV (AP) - Israel freed 375 Egyptian prisoners Thursday and 26 wounded Israeli captives came home to tears, cheers and flowers as Egypt and the Jewish state began exchanging more than 8,000 captives from the October war.

The military command said 375 Egyptians, about 125 of them wounded, were flown to Cairo on three Red Cross flights from Israel's Lod International Airport. The Israeli POWs arrived aboard a Swiss DC6 airliner and were taken to hospitals.

Defense Minister Moshe Dayan said Israel now urgently wanted to exchange 368 Syrian prisoners for an estimated 127 Israelis held by Syria.

The Syrian regime has refused to discuss a POW exchange and Dayan disclosed that "we have offered to allow 15,000 Syrian villagers to return to their homes in the area we have occupied" if the Damascus government would free the Israeli captives.

Israel has agreed to repatriate 8,221 Egyptian prisoners for 247 Israeli POWs which Egypt says it is holding.

Meanwhile, reliable informants said Thursday that Israel's break - through onto the west bank of the Suez Canal last month has led to severe rebukes and a shakeup in the Egyptian military high command.

They say the shock waves from the calamity are largely responsible for an official shakeup that included the firing of at least one army chief and the creation of an entirely new field command to plug a glaring weakness in the Suez Canal defenses.

Experts in Cairo tend to accept the report, not officially acknowledged by either side, that the Israelis achieved an additional edge by using Arabic - speaking soldiers riding captured Soviet - made tanks to fool the Deversoir defenders into thinking they were Egyptians returning from the front.

Once the bridgehead was secured the Israelis were able to pour across a force that in a few days reached 12,000 men.

The wrangling in Cairo, hidden from the public and officially unconfirmed, is an Egyptian counterpart to complaints in Israel that the Israeli armed forces were unprepared for the Oct. 6 attack that opened the war.

Unit streamlining report studied

By MIKE GALATOLA
State News Staff Writer
Like corporation lawyers reading the fine print in a contract, Academic Council members are carefully studying the report recommending a more streamlined council.

All except one of several council members contacted Thursday said they had just received, through campus mail the report the Ad Hoc Committee to Review Academic Governance which was released Wednesday.

The special committee recommended reducing the number of faculty representatives from 85 to 63 and increasing the number of student representatives from 35 to 38. The number of administrative members would be increased from 29 to 30 under the proposed composition of the council, but six of those members would lose their vote.

The committee also suggested reducing the 12 council standing committees to six, by reducing the 176 faculty and 100 student members to 49 faculty and 25 student members.

The University committees on Faculty Affairs, Faculty Tenure and Student Affairs would remain under the proposed composition, but the proposed committees on academic affairs, academic environment and academic governance would combine the duties of most of the current standing committees.

The proposed academic environment committee, for example, would combine the functions of the committees on Building, Lands and Planning and Business Affairs and Public Safety.

Anne C. Garrison, chairman of the Building, Lands and Planning Committee, said Thursday that while she could not comment on the report as a whole, she had already found an area of disagreement with the committee.

"I don't yet have a reaction to the report as I have just started to read it," she said, "but I believe I would want to define the purpose of the University in terms other than those the ad hoc committee used."

John R. Brake, Business Affairs Committee chairman, said Thursday that the council needed trimming.

"I think our present structure has reached the point where our committees are too large," Brake said.

The chairman of the Public Safety Committee could not be reached for comment.

Two elected Student Council members said that while a streamlined council could improve communication, the diversity of viewpoints might become limited.

"It's possible that streamlining the council might increase communication among council members," Ken Cole, at-large member, said, "but it's also possible that the number of different viewpoints will be lessened."

"The combination of committees could put a heavy workload on committee members and affect the diversity of opinions," Geoffrey Walker, James Madison College representative, said.

But MSU Provost John Cantlon said the present procedures for election would prevent such a lack of varying perspectives.

Increase reported in jobs for grads

By DIANE SILVER
State News Staff Writer

Unemployment among MSU students graduating during the 1972-73 school year decreased by 1.1 per cent from the previous year.

The Placement Services Follow-Up Report released Thursday, shows that unemployment has declined from 10.4 per cent in 1971-72 to 9.3 per cent last year.

The report, a listing of every 1972-73 MSU graduate's job and salary, indicates that underemployment has remained the same. A student is considered underemployed when he is working in a job, such as clerk or a waitress, that requires skills not gained from a college education.

Underemployment was higher again among graduates from the social sciences and liberal arts (15 per cent) than those from technical areas (6 per cent).

John Shingleton, director of Placement Services, said that underemployment is to some extent voluntary.

"We are finding each year an increase in this voluntary underemployment," he said. "This is usually of a temporary nature and may last only two or three years."

"Unfortunately, when a person does this, his bargaining position is eroded when he finally does go for a professional job," Shingleton added. He indicated that teaching positions have increased slightly in the past year.

"I describe the educational job picture as cautiously optimistic," Shingleton said. "You can't make a general statement concerning teaching jobs, but there are certain spots where there is a slight shortage. These spots include vocational education, business, music, sciences and journalism. The areas in low demand are still the foreign languages, social sciences, humanities, English, history and psychology."

Shingleton noted that the overall employment picture for this year is looking better.

"We are witnessing a 12 per cent increase in the number of employers coming here to interview, and those employers have also increased the number of graduates they intend to hire."

Bonus for veterans will not cover spiraling cost of college education

The state constitutional amendment proposed by Sen. Harry DeMaso, R - Battle Creek, to award Vietnam veterans a bonus is commendable, but the legislature should consider looking into other forms of aid to veterans.

DeMaso's bill involves a $185 million bond proposal which, if approved by the legislature, would go before Michigan voters in November 1974. The bill would give Vietnam combat veterans a $500 bonus and noncombat veterans $15 for each month in the service up to $360.

The proposal is similar to Proposal "E," a veteran bonus proposal turned down by the Michigan electorate last fall. The difference between the two proposals is that DeMaso's bill has no educational provisions, while Proposal "E" provided for as much as $2,000 in total veteran educational aid.

While DeMaso's bill is realistic in the sense that it may be more likely to pass on a referendum than proposal "E," it does not begin to scratch the surface of the financial problems of veterans, particularly veterans who are now students.

The Educational Testing Service of Princeton, N.J., found in a Sept. 19 report that of Michigan's 266,000 Vietnam - era veterans, only 41.5 per cent were using the GI Bill in any way and only 23 per cent were attending two - and four - year colleges.

The study also disclosed that even if a veteran were employed while attending a four - year college, in addition to GI Bill benefits, a single veteran would still require an additional $335 per year and a married veteran $488 per year.

Veterans also have a low chance of receiving federally sponsored aid programs to supplement their financial plight. In the United States last year, only 5.6 per cent of student veterans received the National Direct Student Loan and only 10.1 per cent had Guaranteed Student Loans.

It is obvious Vietnam - era veterans cannot meet the increasing cost of a college education on the present federal aid they are receiving. The state must take some responsibility in this area.

While DeMaso's bill is a beginning, it is just that. The state legislature should look into the possibility of guaranteed loans for student veterans and also into establishing a veteran scholarship fund.

The legislature should consider DeMaso's bill very carefully and then look into what additional educational benefits Michigan veterans should have.

Gas tax only a stopgap measure

President Nixon's proposal for a 5 - to 40 - cent straight tax on gasoline is not only a stopgap measure, but is also inherently unfair to poor people who could not afford gasoline at greatly inflated prices.

Such a move would only temporarily halt gas consumption, not solve the long-range fuel problem which faces this country.

The proposal is designed as an alternative to gasoline rationing, but if this measure is the only alternative, perhaps we would be better off with rationing. At least there would be some semblance of impartiality in rationing.

If this straight tax increase on gasoline is ever initiated, the only thing it would do is make sure people on lower incomes would have almost no chance to drive. Gasoline is expensive now, but if this tax is passed, gasoline will be out of the reach of common people.

On the other hand, those in the higher income brackets would be paying more for gasoline, but they still would be able to afford it. Perhaps they would not drive quite as much, but this tax would be no hardship, only an annoyance.

If Nixon were really serious about solving the energy crisis, he could limit trips to San Clemente and Camp David to cut down on fuel consumption. But what is really needed are some long - term solutions for the development of mass transit systems and also for alternative sources of energy.

Talent show to benefit needy kids

The Christmas spirit is starting early with the Office of Black Affairs and the Black Greek Council. The groups are co - sponsoring a benefit talent show at 7:30 tonight in the Union Ballroom to raise funds to clothe needy Lansing children at Christmas time.

The show, called Project Save, will include a performance by the Black Orpheus Choir, poetry recitations, band performances and modern dance recitals. Though there is no admission charge, a donation will be requested at the door.

Clothes purchased from the show's profits will be distributed by social workers from the Lansing community.

This is a commendable effort. The show should provide some good entertainment and help some kids at Christmas time, too.

POINT OF VIEW

Bonus not solution to vet plight

By THOMAS SPENCER
Sterling Heights senior

The day has arrived and long passed when the people of Michigan should have recognized the plight of today's Vietnam - era veteran. That day was Nov. 7, 1972.

On election day the people ignored the veteran by denying him the social benefits that could have been realized in Proposal "E" - a bill that would have awarded the veteran with a cash or educational bonus.

Few people were aware of the problems a Vietnam - era veteran faced upon returning home - problems such as unemployment, little or no use for his military acquired skills and social alienation. Naturally, veterans looked for relief and suggested Proposal "E."

Proposal "E" is history, the problems are today. The defeat of Proposal "E" left many legislators confused. Should they fund such a proposal differently or go the referendum route once again? Should the bill be changed? The apparent solution has been found in a $500 bonus for veterans, again subject to public referendum.

What ends will this measure serve? Will it approach the needs of the many veterans who, for the most part, are trapped in a vicious circle of poverty? Will it augment a grossly inadequate GI Bill, a bill that practically limits a veteran to only the lowest - cost institutions? Hardly.

In a recent independent study of the GI Bill mandated by Congress, the Educational Testing Service of Princeton, N.J., found the cost of education had increased fivefold since World War II. The GI Bill had only doubled.

To date the veteran has been making up the difference or not using the GI Bill at

"In a recent independent study of the GI Bill mandated by Congress, the Educational Testing Service of Princeton, N.J., found the cost of education had increased fivefold since World War II. The GI Bill had only doubled.

To date the veteran has been making up the difference or not using the GI Bill at all. The report further showed that states offering bonuses or educational assistance had substantially greater veteran enrollments in educational programs."

A politically and socially pragmatic approach is needed to address the veteran problem. The problem is one of veterans, crowding the unemployment lines, of veterans unable to rise above their social and economic entrapment and of veterans unable to effectively use their GI Bill.

A soaring cost of living and an uneducated public may spell defeat for any bonus proposal. Who will "give away" $500 when they cannot afford to buy meat? And a politician who fights for this will end up only as a profile in courage.

Asking the people of Michigan to pass a bonus or educational grant is futile. And the possible failure of another bonus proposal will only add insult to injury.

A vehicle veterans can utilize in addressing their problems is needed. A loan program to assist veterans in financing an education would approach the problem positively. Removing the demand for an adequate education from the realm of fantasy to that of reality can result in social progress. A bonus will not.

From a political perspective, the public would probably find this plan palatable. And from the social perspective, a veteran with initiative has an opportunity to escape his socio - economic predicament.

What a veteran needs is an opportunity to go forth on his own, not a World War II solution to a modern day problem.

Thanks for Veterans Day, now give us a break.

Bedpool to save on energy

WASHINGTON - Everyone is coming up with new methods of helping during the energy crisis. Some ideas are nutty, but others are very practical and should be called to the attention of the government.

Professor Heinrich Applebaum has been studying new methods of sharing heat and has just written a paper titled "Bundling and the Energy Crisis" which he presented to the Society of Thermostat Inspectors.

Applebaum told me after giving his report, "The place where we waste the most heat in our homes is in bed. America can no longer afford the luxury of having one person sleep in bed all by himself. If we can persuade people to voluntarily share their beds, we could turn down the thermostats in our homes seven degrees."

"Would these people have to be married?" I asked.

"In normal times I would say yes. But this is the biggest emergency our country has ever faced and I think people should be given waivers if they are not married, at least until the crisis is over."

"Then you consider bedpooling as a major solution to the heating shortage?"

"Absolutely. We must make Americans feel unpatriotic if they go to bed alone. We must instill a new spirit of bundling in this country."

"It sounds great on paper," I said, "but suppose people refuse to share their beds with others?"

Applebaum pursed his lips. "Then the government will have to step in and take forceful measures. These could include putting a surtax on citizens who insist on sleeping alone. This tax would be so high that it would be very unprofitable to refuse to bundle with somebody else. We could also give tax deductions to those who are willing to pool their beds. For example, if Bob and Carol and Ted and Alice were willing to bundle together, they would get 10 per cent off on their income taxes."

"What about people who have to sleep alone, such as policemen, doctors and newspaper reporters?"

"They would have a special sticker put on their beds exempting them from the bundling laws. This sticker would be given only to people who could prove their work is so essential they cannot bundle up with anybody."

"How do you think the American people will take to forced bundling?"

"I think the American people will be willing to share their beds with others once Nixon explains it to them. Body heat is still the greatest resource this country has, and we can get through the winter providing everyone - and I mean everyone - cooperates with each other."

"Suppose you have a large empty bed and no one to bundle with? What do you do then?"

"We hope to set up bedpooling information centers all over the country. All you would have to do is call a number and we would tell you who is looking for someone to share a bed. These centers would be open 24 hours a day."

"It sounds complicated," I said. "But I guess it's worth it."

Applebaum said, "It will work. To get the people to cooperate, we will have an advertising campaign on television."

"What will be your slogan?"

"Every time you share your bed this winter, something in an Arab sheik dies."

Fall legislative session inert

By PAUL VARIAN
United Press International

It's ironic that the most heated legislative battle of this rather uneventful fall session was over deer hunting.

For the next week, during their five-day Thanksgiving recess, that's what many of Michigan's 148 lawmakers will be doing — hunting deer.

Unless there is a flurry of action in the final two working weeks of the fall, the legislature will begin its 1974 election year session facing much the same issues that awaited action when the legislature convened on Oct. 16 and are still pending.

Commentary

Gov. Milliken and others had hoped to have several areas covered — particularly campaign reform — before the legislators got down in their own re-election efforts.

However, even the issue demanding the most immediate attention this fall — state aid to school districts shut down by teacher strikes when the annual fourth Friday pupil count was taken — remained unresolved Wednesday.

"We're not going to get anything done this fall," House Majority Floor Leader Bobby Crim, D - Davison, complained last week.

This sentiment was echoed almost verbatim by Senate Taxation Chairman Harry De Maso, R - Battle Creek, who had worked with Crim on a proposal to remove Michigan's 4 per cent sales tax on food. The measure currently is bottled up in a House committee.

Backers of the school aid proposal, essentially the Democratic lawmakers representing the districts in trouble — Detroit, Inkster and Flint Beecher — had hoped to implement an alternative means for doling out state funds to districts hit by strikes.

The proposed legislation would have provided for a student count Nov. 9 but Senate Republicans managed to stall action on the bill until Nov. 9 had come and gone and the bill must now be rewritten.

The only major piece of legislation to achieve final legislative passage so far this fall is a measure that will outlaw the use of studded snow tires in most of the state as of April 1, 1975. Northern sections of the state may be exempted from the regulations by the Dept. of State Highways, however.

The deer debate stemmed from Milliken's veto in August of a measure that would have banned the hunting of does and fawns in the Upper Peninsula. The Senate, in a surprise development, voted to override the veto, but the House fell short of achieving the necessary two-thirds majority.

Absenteeism in both houses of the legislature has been traditionally high during deer hunting season, and in recent years time has been set aside, usually around Thanksgiving, for just this purpose.

The lawmakers will be taking off the full week next week, will probably spend the next two weeks in session and are expected to adjourn for Christmas Dec. 7 — a week earlier than usual — and be gone until after the first of the year.

Woman elected to direct county Republican party

By TOM HAROLDSON
State News Staff Writer

The Ingham County Republican party finally settled a month-long dispute Wednesday night over the process of finding a successor to its resigning chairman and in so doing, elected the first woman to hold that post in the party's history.

In the open election of the county executive committee, Alfreda Schmidt, former vice chairman of the party and a long-time participant in county Republican politics, was elected by a 28-19 vote. She succeeds Roger Busfield, party chairman of 14 years, who resigned last month to accept a position as executive director of the Arkansas Hospital Assn.

Schmidt defeated state House Republican aide Robert Smart. To fill her vacated vice chairman post, Knight McKesson of Lansing, running unopposed, was unanimously elected.

Busfield ruled at the beginning of the meeting that the election had to be open, changing his previous position that Schmidt should automatically step up without an election. In doing so, Busfield avoided a potential inner turmoil from factions of the party who were unsatisfied with his earlier position.

Schmidt's election also avoided a legal hassle which revolved around a state law which requires the top two positions of a party to be filled by one man and one woman. He previously requested an opinion of the bill before he became aware that Schmidt was interested in the job.

She had told Busfield at his resignation, announced in October, that she intended to remain in her vice chairman position, thus forcing the party to find a man to fill the vacancy that the state law apparently dictated.

"By announcing that she was available and willing to accept the position, we avoided legal complications that were before us at the onset of this dispute,"

Busfield said.

Schmidt could not be reached for comment Thursday, but apparently her past refusal to accept the position was only temporary so that she could have time to clear up other responsibilities.

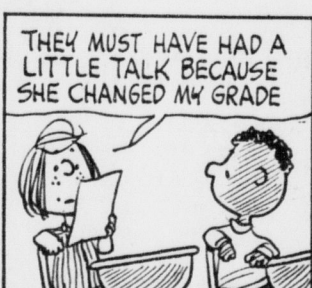

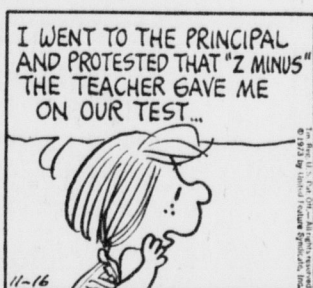

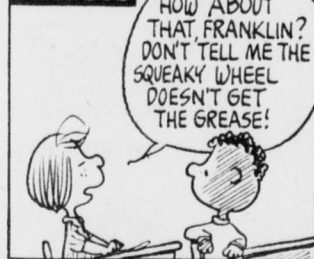

Busfield said the automatic elevancy dispute was settled after he checked a Michigan law that states the chairman's position must be filled by an open election, and not by an automatic elevation by the person second in command.

He said she received most of her support in the election from executive board party members and party officials, which was a sign that her election might bring some unity to the party. There have been reports that a party faction was potentially imminent because of a split between certain members possessing different ideologies and political dispositions.

"I can only hope, but not predict, that things might settle down now that this controversy has been settled," he said. "But in the realm of politics, nothing is predictable."

No recent developments reported in probe of death

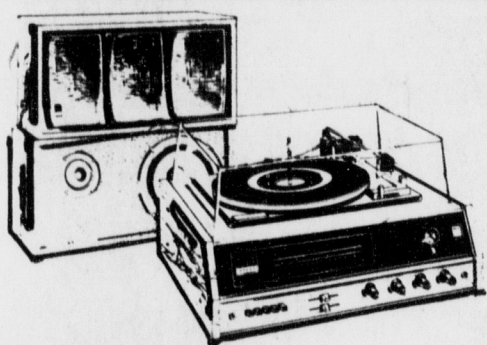

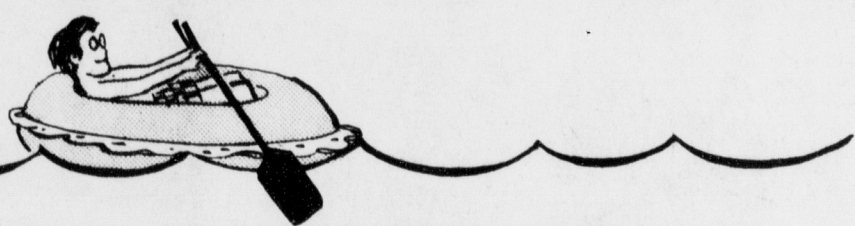

East Lansing police reported no new developments Thursday in the case of Nicholas DiSante, an MSU student who was dead in his room at 314 Evergreen St. Monday night.

No further information will be released, police said, until a toxicology report is completed. This report will be included with preliminary autopsy findings reported Tuesday.

Early reports pointed to a suicide. The calling in of a toxicologist suggested it was drug-related, but police emphasized they are making no statement regarding cause of death until the final report, expected early in the week, is in.

Poll finds deans against rotation

By STEVE ORR

A random poll of MSU deans and departmental chairs found overwhelming opposition to the MSU Faculty Association's proposal that deans be rotated in every two years.

All but three of the 15 deans and chairmen interviewed totally rejected the idea, saying the two-year period in office was too short.

At present, deans are not subject to any periodic review, and chairmen are reviewed by their deans every five years.

"Two years is about long enough to find the office," said Dean Edward Carlin of the University College.

James Pickering, acting chairman of the English Dept., said, "The students would be the greatest losers under this system. The chairmen wouldn't know how to help them."

"It took me three years before I could feel comfortable knowing how to handle their problems and who to call about them."

Frank Senger, chairman of the School of Journalism, called the proposal "nonsense."

"It takes a chairman a hell of a lot longer to find out what the job's about," Senger said.

William Callaghan, chairman of the Dept. of Philosophy, said the two-year plan held some "definite appeal" for him. Callaghan, who has been chairman for 15 years, said he preferred a shorter term, claiming the post left little time for scholarly pursuits.

Two chairmen said a two-year term would be possible for the smaller departments.

John Wakeley, chairman of the Dept. of Psychology, said the term length should depend on "the complexity of the job."

"A two-year rotation would make sense in some relatively small departments, but would result in never having a trained chairman in the larger departments," he commented. Bill Stout, chairman of the Dept. of Agricultural Engineering, detailed the handicaps of a two-year system.

"Being a chairman is an extremely complicated job," Stout said. "One of our most important tasks is recruiting faculty members. That takes more experience than you can get in two years."

"It also takes time to build up the contacts needed to help people, and you must learn what making a budget is all about."

William Weil, head of the Dept. of Human Development, believed progress of new programs would be hampered by a two-year rotation.

"Just about the time you're first getting a new program underway, your two years are up. It doesn't make a lot of sense to me."

H. John Carew, chairman of the Dept. of Horticulture, said, "I think that for some departments it might work very well, and for some it might not work at all."

British economist to address MSU's fall quarter graduates

Noted British economist Barbara Ward will speak at MSU's fall term commencement on Dec. 1 at 3 p.m. in the Auditorium.

She will be awarded the honorary doctor of laws degree.

Ward, Lady Jackson, wife of Sir Robert Jackson, has been a staff member of the British journal "The Economist" for several decades and from 1968 to 1973 was Albert Schweitzer professor of international economic development in the School of International Affairs at Columbia University.

Three others who will receive honorary degrees are Gwen Frostic, an internationally known Michigan artist, Glenn Lake, a leading figure in state and national dairy organizations and Charles H. Malik, Lebanese diplomat, author, theologian and former president of the United Nations General Assembly.

Citizens for Impeachment send Chamberlain 3,700 signatures

A group of local citizens circulating petitions which call for the impeachment of the president have sent 3,700 signatures to U.S. Rep. Charles Chamberlain, R-Lansing.

J. Schuck, administrative assistant to Chamberlain, said

Thursday Chamberlain has received about 1,000 letters on the impeachment issue with sentiments running 10 to 1 in favor of impeachment.

Schuck said about one-half of the impeachment letters are from the East Lansing area.

Chamberlain, himself, has not taken a stand on the impeachment issue. "He is awaiting the inquiry that comes out of the Judiciary Committee to see what direction they are going to take," Schuck said.

Meanwhile, the local Citizens for Impeachment has also sent letters to Republican Sen. Robert P. Griffin, Democratic Sen. Philip Hart and Rep. Peter Rodino, chairman of the Judiciary Committee, reported John Robison, the group's leader.

Robison said the petitions have been signed by members of the East Lansing community as well as MSU students. He said many of the petitions have been signed by people just walking down Grand River Avenue.

Kurt Manglos, 260 Snyder Hall, sophomore and member of the citizen's group, said the petition drive is slowing down.

"It's probably because Nixon hasn't really said anything lately. Usually when he says something he says it wrong and people start moving," Manglos said.

Planning group delays proposed rezoning

By DENI MARTIN

A final decision on the proposed rezoning of the Oakhill - Central area will be delayed for at least another month as the East Lansing Planning Commission approved a motion Wednesday night to restudy the proposed zoning ordinance.

Commission member Elinor Holbrook introduced the motion, which passed by a 4-3 margin, because there were several problems with "the general philosophy of the ordinance."

Though several amendments had been made to the original ordinance as a result of the commission's Oct. 10 public hearing, members of the commission and people in the audience voiced disapproval of the changes.

Most of the opposition was directed toward the rezoning of three specific areas in East Lansing. An area west of Hillcrest

Avenue and north of Grand River Avenue, a block of land between Center and Beal streets south of Oak Street, and the Delta - College street area were discussed. Action in all three areas involves increasing the number of dwelling units per acre. The conflict in this proposal is between present residents in these

C-T representation case to resume in state court

Oral arguments on a complex and long - delayed court case on representation of MSU clerical - technical employees will be heard at 10 a.m. Friday in the State Court of Appeals, Washington Square Building in Lansing.

The case began with the November 1972 election, in which the MSU Employees Assn. was contending with the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees for the role as representative of the University's clerical - technical employees.

After the election, the University challenged 179 votes on the basis that they belonged to supervisory personnel prohibited from voting in the election.

The University eventually withdrew 84 of the challenges, which put the MSU association ahead by eight votes. The Michigan Employee Relations Commission later determined that the University could withdraw all its challenges to the election as it had sought to do, though the final 95 votes were never counted.

areas and people wishing to rezone to compensate for future population growth with multiple dwellings.

Planning Director Michael Conlisk said the staff kept preservation and economic aspects in mind when reviewing the plans for the rezoning of the Oakhill - Central area. He indicated that the recent amendments to the ordinance were designed to preserve the East Lansing environment.

David Milstein, commission vice chairman, suggested that the commission notify all the interested parties of their decision in order to give them the opportunity to voice their opinion at the

Dec. 11 meeting.

The rezoning study was ordered by city council last year after residents of a rented house at 458 Evergreen Ave. proposed its proposed razing for the construction of an apartment building — which is permissible under current zoning provisions.

The house was torn down in August and 12 apartments have been constructed at the site.

In other action the commission voted unanimously to take the question of an overpass to be located near the Central Elementary School.

Plan to rent buses from Detroit snagged by energy crisis

would pay for the buses with operating assistance money it receives quarterly from the state. This money comes directly from the 2 - cent Michigan gas tax.

Mossman indicated the proposed East Lansing route extensions could go into effect immediately after rental agreements with DSR are made.

Mossman said the authority would lease the buses for $30 per day per bus, until it can get its own equipment into service.

Mossman said the authority would need over 20 buses to put the new route extensions into operation. At present the authority has 12 operating diesel buses. Four of these buses are new, three have been completely reconditioned and five are safe and usable. Originally the authority had hoped to use propane or electric buses on the East Lansing extensions. All eight propane buses and the seven electric buses are currently in disuse because of engineering and design problems.

'Cops' suspense lacking

By EDD RUDZATS
State News Reviewer

"It's a world of cops and robbers," so the title tune of "Cops and Robbers" by Michel LeGrand informs the viewer. "They're getting theirs/How are you getting yours?" Obviously not through this movie about two cops who plan the one big caper that will secure their future.

In fact, in the present political climate, the idea of drawing humor or any entertainment value from a situation in which policemen rob $10 million worth of securities called bearer bonds is like walking on thin ice.

And in "Cops and Robbers" almost everything falls through, for director Aram Avakian and screenwriter Donald E. Westlake seem to have been too lazy to have attempted anything more than an average comedy-crime story that exists on about the same level as some of the current TV shows of a similar nature.

Avakian has provided only serviceable direction that ultimately remains quite Robbers" could benefit from some exciting camera work but Avakian lacks a flair or feeling for chase scenes and is devoid of creativity when it comes to working with the suspense field. Not that there's much suspense in "Cops and Robbers," but there could have been, with Westlake's help, of course.

The best part of this terribly mild exercise in crime and comedy are the performances of Cliff Gorman and Joseph Bologna as the two cops who concoct this crazy caper. As the movie opens, Bologna has already robbed a liquor store during the credits and is surprised at how easy the whole thing was. When he tells his difficulties that marriage and a family has, not to mention the minimal salaries they feel they get from being cops. More than half of "Cops and Robbers" is devoted to the planning and execution of the heist itself and the rest to the problems the two run into while dealing with a Mafia fence.

While Gorman and Bologna work well with what they have, giving attractive and appealing characterizations, they have put their talents to much better use in other ventures than this mediocre production. Yet without them, who knows what the movie would have been like, for they have a snappy patter and delivery that provides the movie with what little laughs there are.

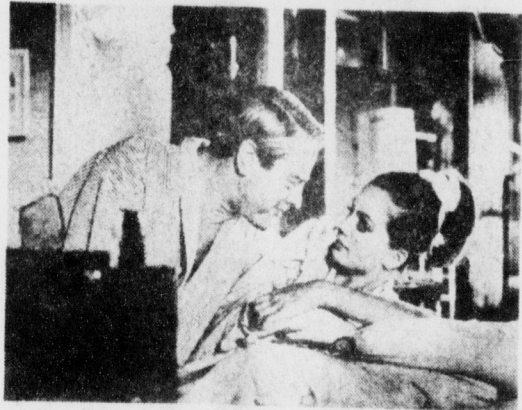

"Cops and Robbers" is currently playing at the Campus Theatre.

Teen Angel plays real rock 'n roll

By JACK BODNAR
State News Reviewer

He stalks the stage in a worn black leather jacket, a crinkled striped shirt covering his emaciated chest. His hair is piled high into a full pompadour while his eyes and teeth shine like jagged steel. The Teen Angel is scary.

Appearing for one night only at the Alle - Ey on Wednesday, Teen Angel and the Chevy Three were a ghost from the 1950s. Three of the kids in the group were young, but the Teen Angel and his rhythm guitarist have been white - socking - it since 1959. Packed with a wide array of people looking for a nostalgic trip to the past, the Alle was filled with screams and angelic looks everytime the Angel pouted or belched.

Some people in the audience actually thought they were seeing Elvis the Pelvis when the Angel came out with an Elvis Presley first set - complete with white body suit.

After the Elvis gig, the Angel suited up in his haggard 50s duds and burped his way into the hearts of countless dozens of Alle admirers. One couple jitterbugged on a table top while they chain - smoked a carton of unfiltered Camel cigarettes. The feeling was there.

"We play all over," said the Angel, alias Mike John. "We play high schools, concerts, bars, you name it. And would you believe that just before this 50s revival thing came back, we got kicked out of a bar for doing it."

The Angel sound is not very pretty, but it is not meant to be. The musical Allen brothers - Cy, Dan and Steve - and Darryl Harbison, play almost as good as a scratchy record that skips. The Angel's voice sounds like a Coke bottle recycled through a thresher. The group is not very lovable.

But they are fun, they are legit and they do play real rock and roll. A near - capacity crowd came out of the rain to see the Angel, though it was really a question of who was being entertained - the Alle crowd or the Angel.

Skaters describe life with ice

By MIKE LANOUE
State News Reviewer

The world is of ice and bright lights — of city to city and bus to bus.

And the 85 enduring travelers that make Holiday on Ice possible are usually very happy doing what they know best and enjoy most — skating under the bright colored lights and thrilling audiences from coast to coast.

One can see members of this traveling band at 4:30 and 8 p.m. today and at 2:30 and 8 p.m. Saturday at the Lansing Civic Center. Tickets are $5.50, $5, $4.50 and $3.50.

Rolona Rolland, one of the principal skaters in the show, said members of the show spent about three weeks working up the choreography and finalizing numbers at their home base in Bismark, N.D.

To Rolland, becoming a professional skater two years ago was "a dream come true." "I knew when I was eight that I wanted to be a professional skater," she said. "My parents were in shows 20 years ago and they encouraged me."

Rolland said many of the show members are superstitious about things like where they hang their skate guards or which skate they put on first and she added that this makes shows exciting.

Patrick McKilligan, 21, another of the show's principal

Concert

Members of Pop Entertainment said Thursday that they may book Peter Frampton and his Camel and Nicky Hopkins on a concert bill that includes the Steve Miller Band and the Guess Who. The concert will be given Nov. 27. Check the back page for more details.

skaters, has been with the Holiday on Ice for one year.

He said the experience he gets traveling with the show and meeting people from all over the country is equivalent or better than a college education.

McKilligan and Rolland said skaters average from two to five years on the road, but some members of the group have been skating in shows for as long as 30 years.

With the short-lived skating careers, McKilligan said that many professionals teach skating or work on external parts of ice shows when they retire.

"It's difficult sometimes to feel up to a show," McKilligan said. "But as soon as the lights go on, it's energy."

Both McKilligan and Rolland said traveling does not make them homesick but added that occasionally some do get lonely and leave the show.

"We have a very understanding organization; it's like a big family, so we can't afford to have unhappy people," Rolland said.

Stop one was the P-Bell at 1020 Trowbridge St. where we were met by a brown shirt and muscles that gritted a snicker and a "last call!" I said, "You've got to be joking" and he didn't smile. We walked back into the rain while he babbled something

The Whizz almost ate his upper lip when he discovered there weren't any vinegared hard-boiled eggs, as I ordered a couple of pitchers for quick consumption. The guy behind the bar was an old track buddy, and apparently he was saving his speed for the track. Two bargirls were picked up and three guys cleaned out at the pool tables before we got our brew.

Dagwoods was a disappointment, and so were its burgers. The kick-ass atmosphere of MAC's just wasn't there, and there were waitresses that waited and hovered for tips. But none were coming after the dismal cheeseburgers that Wilson P, the Kid and I devoured for twice the price of MAC's.

However, by that point Wilson and the Pickets couldn't see straight. The mugs of beer were being inhaled in stoney silence, and the waitress was still looking for her nonexistent tip.

When was the last time we had such a good time, I said, and the returned sour looks shut me up again.

But the silence was finally broken by Wilson P. when he started shooting imaginary baskets at the electronic basketball game in the far corner. "I used to be the King of Albion b - ball," said the ex-hoop star through his fuzzy 'fro. "I mean, like a shot like this was

With rain awash the Electra, we boated back to the house and warm fudge brownies. It was a good night filled with better times and a final drink before turning in. After all, college isn't like going to school.

Dances of America's past and present will be featured Monday in the program of the Heritage Dance Theater at 8:15 p.m. in the Auditorium.

The program includes such selections as "Texas Fourth," an Independence Day celebration of a small Texas town in 1936; "The Four Marys," a story of Mary, Queen of Scots as seen through the eyes of the Scots immigrating to the Southern Appalachians; and "A Rose for Miss Emily," a melodrama based on the William Faulkner story of the same name.

Agnes de Mille, who directs the company and who has done most of the choreography, is no stranger to dancing based on American themes. Her past triumphs include the choreography for "Oklahoma!," "Carousel," "Brigadoon" and "Paint Your Wagon" and the ballet "Rodeo." "Rodeo," seen recently on WKAR-TV, helped popularize American dances and themes on the concert stage.

The company of 40 dancers, singers and actors was in part trained by de Mille. The dancers are proficient in such diverse styles as classical ballet, jazz, tap and many ethnic styles of America's past.

Also-rans: Spartans, Hoosiers clash

By GARY SCHARER
State News Sports Writer
Michigan State's football team could finish with a fifth place Big Ten standing, about as well as anyone could have hoped for, but it needs wins in its remaining two games.

Those contests will be against Indiana at home at 1 p.m. Saturday and at winless Iowa next week.

Though the Hoosiers come here with a frustrating 2-7 record and a 0-6 mark in the conference, Spartan coach Denny Stolz warns against overconfidence.

"I think it's going to be a tough game," he said. "They have a lot more players than people know about."

"We have to move the football offensively, we have to overcome those three injuries (knee surgery to quarterback Charlie Baggett and offensive linemen Charlie Ane and Phil Smolinski). We certainly didn't do that last week against Ohio State."

The Spartans have been almost exclusively limited to a running game in recent weeks, but Stolz blames other factors for lack of a passing game.

"Last week we planned to throw 13 or 14 times, but the rush and the quarterback checking off and not having anybody open restricted us. (MSU passed twice against Ohio State.)

"We'll be passing one of these days," Stolz said. "We need some good weather. And you can't pass until you block, and you can't pass until you establish a running game. Against Ohio State we couldn't do those things, against Wisconsin and Purdue we could."

Stolz does not plan any personnel changes other than replacing junior linebacker Terry McCowry with his twin brother Pat. Terry will be lost for the remaining games after sustaining a shoulder injury last week.

Tailbacks Tyrone Wilson and Daymond Mays, both of whom have missed the last two games with nagging injuries, are expected to be ready for Saturday's game.

Spartan seniors including co-captains Mike Holt and John Shinsky will be playing their final home game for Michigan State. Both Holt and Shinsky reflected upon their careers here.

"It's quite a touching feeling to be playing in your last game," Shinsky said. "It's kind of sad. I wish I could stay around and play some more. I like playing with these guys. I know they will have good teams in the years to come."

"I'm sad that such a good system as we now have didn't get installed until my last year here," he added. "But I'm glad that I had one year under that system. The program is definitely heading into an upswing."

Shinsky, Michigan State's stalwart defensive tackle, indicated his disappointment that the Spartans could not have won more football games in the years that he was here.

"Yeah, well I wish we could have won more, but like I said, the system just wasn't up to par," he said. "At least I know the younger guys will have an opportunity to win some games in their careers here."

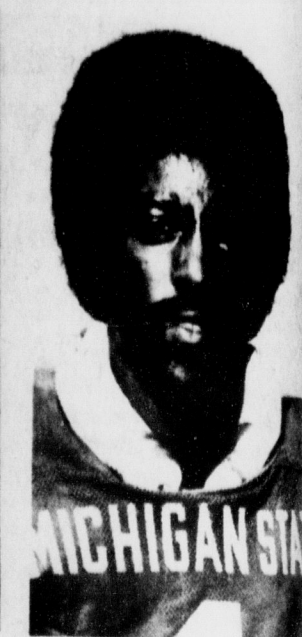

Holt, a speedy tailback from Detroit Henry Ford High School, said quite a bit of emphasis is placed on this final home game since it is the last chance to finish the season with a respectable record.

"You don't want to lose it," Holt said Thursday. "You want to establish a winning tradition, so to speak, that will carry over into next season."

"That's the most important thing for me as co-captain and a senior to do for this team."

SCORING CHAMP

Robinson cager captain

Mike Robinson has been elected captain of MSU's 1973-74 varsity basketball team.

Robinson, the 5-11 senior guard from Detroit Northeastern High, was the unanimous choice of his teammates, according to MSU head coach Gus Ganakas.

Mike has won two consecutive Big Ten scoring championships and has been an all-Big Ten first team all-star choice for the past two seasons.

If he wins the conference scoring title this winter, he will become the fourth player in Big Ten history to lead the scoring parade three straight years.

In two varsity seasons, Robinson has tallied a total of 1,202 points and needs only 176 more to become the MSU all-time leading career scorer.

Topping the list is Julius McCoy with 1,377 points accumulated during the 1953-54, 1954-55 and 1955-56 seasons.

music is what it's all about

At Tech Hifi, we follow every new development in audio technology with undamped enthusiasm. Still, we haven't forgotten that whereas music can exist without hifi, the hifi industry wouldn't be in existence if it weren't for the popular desire to listen to music. Our well trained salespeople can explain the latest terms to you, but even more important, they can demonstrate why one system is better suited to your musical tastes than another. The demonstration record collection at Tech Hifi stores encompasses just about every kind of music, from rock, to jazz, to classical, to folk, to country and western. In Tech Hifi listening rooms, the salespeople can perform A-B loudspeaker comparisons on our volume compensated switching systems that allow you to distinguish which speaker sounds better (not just louder) on your favorite music. After all... music is what it's all about.

BENJAMIN MIRACORD

Compare the initial cash outlay for a good component system against the tremendous amount of pleasure it can give and you'll wonder why you didn't buy one years ago. With 40 watts rms and a very capable am/fm tuner section, the Sansui 350a receiver delivers more pleasure than most. The Ohm C loudspeakers transform the music signal into beautiful, amazingly accurate sound. With speakers like these you may never have to go to another live concert again. Miracord's 625 automatic turntable plays your records at precise speeds so that they sound as good as they were meant to. An ADC 900 cartridge is included, as well as a base and dustcover. The pleasures of beautiful music await you... why put it off any longer?

Icers face U-M as rivalry continues

By STEVE STEIN
State News Sports Writer

MSU's hockey team will try to keep its early season momentum going this weekend as the Spartans face the University of Michigan tonight in Ann Arbor and Saturday night at the Demonstration Hall Ice Arena.

Game time for both clashes is 7:30 p.m.

The two teams are both undefeated going into the contests. The MSU icers sport a 2-0-0 Western Collegiate Hockey Assn. (WCHA) record and are 4-0-0 overall. The Wolverines are 1-0-1 in the WCHA and 3-0-1 in all games. MSU is also ranked third in the national collegiate hockey poll.

"Every time we play each other, it's an intense game," Spartan coach Amo Bessone said. "During the last six or seven years the games have always been fairly close. Everyone really gets up for the games."

The Spartans beat the Wolverines in all four games last season.

Bessone said he would be going with the same lines he has been using this year. Injuries to defenseman Chris Murfey and goalie Gary Carr are healing well, but neither one is expected to see action against Michigan.

Murfey is recovering from a wrenched knee and Carr suffered a deep cut on his right arm.

The Spartan defensive crew, Norm Barnes, Kelly Cahill, Uve Drews, Paul Pavelich and Greg Clugan, will once again be under a little more pressure with the absence of cocaptain Murfey.

Last week's winning goalies, Ron Clark and Tom Bowen, are expected to go against the Wolverines.

With his big performance against Notre Dame last weekend, Spartan center Tom Ross jumped into second place on the WCHA individual scoring list with seven goals and three assists for 10 points.

Ross is also tied for the most goals in the league.

John Sturges, Barnes and

Brendon Moroney all have six points, though Sturges has the only goal among the trio.

Michigan has a new coach

this season in 36-year-old

Dan Farrell, formerly an assistant at Michigan Tech.

"We have a lot of new personnel," Farrell said Thursday from Ann Arbor. "We have eight freshmen on the team."

"And, we feel we have the best goaltending in the WCHA in Robbie Moore."

"Our team doesn't have a great deal of finesse, but it's a hard-working, spirited bunch, and we're starting to put it all together."

Farrell is a little apprehensive about facing the Spartans, though.

"I couldn't believe that MSU could handle Notre Dame so easily," he commented. "I'm a little nervous. I see that they scored five power play goals Saturday. We had better stay out of the penalty box."

U-M moved into Yost Fieldhouse this season, which houses about 8,000 spectators.

In other WCHA weekend play, Wisconsin is at Notre Dame, North Dakota at Minnesota, and Colorado College at Minnesota-Duluth.

STATE TOURNAMENT

Volleyball team defends its title

By PAM WARD
State News Sports Writer

The women's volleyball team will host the biggest match of its history this weekend as 26 teams travel to east Lansing for the State Volleyball Tournament.

The tournament, which will determine the top three teams to travel to the Midwest

Regionals, begins today at 4 p.m. in the Sports Arena, Men's Intramural Bldg. The final competition will be held at 7:30 p.m. Saturday in Jenison Fieldhouse.

The Spartans, defending state champions, have been having a dismal 6-11 season and can anticipate a struggle to maintain their title.

"Any of six teams have a good chance for the title this year," Karen Peterson, coach of the women's volleyball team said. "Nobody has been consistently strong. There is no definite leader."

Though the championship appears to be up for grabs there are three teams which will give the Spartans their toughest test. Grand Valley has had an impressive record, losing only one of their games, and Eastern and Central Michigan universities have shown marked improvement in the last weeks of competition.

"Grand Valley may prove to be the strongest in the tournament judging from its season record," Peterson said. "But Central and Eastern have come on strong at the end of the season and could be rough."

Peterson is definite about what her team must do to keep its title.

"We are going to have to move," Peterson explained. "Our individual skills are coming along well and our hitting and positioning is fine. But we have had a problem of getting started early in the game."

"It's a mental problem," Peterson continued. "We've been cold at the start of our games. We have to get the ball moving earlier for this tournament."

Height could also prove to be an obstacle for the Spartan squad. The Spartans on the average are much shorter than their opposition and will have to rely mainly on their speed.

"We are going to have to move faster to compensate for our height disadvantage," Peterson said. "But I think we can do it, I think we are ready for the tournament. Everybody has to be up for this match and we can take the title again this year."

The tournament will be round robin competition and games will be played in the Women's Intramural Building, Jenison Field house and the Sports Arena in the Men's Intramural Bldg. Programs with listed times and places are available in any of the three places.
