Nixon refuses to release any more tapes

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House lawyer James St. Clair Tuesday said President Nixon has decided not to turn over any more Watergate tapes to the House Judiciary Committee.

St. Clair said he would proceed with his efforts to quash the subpoena for 64 recorded presidential conversations, but he would fight the subpoena to the Supreme Court if necessary, the lawyer said.

St. Clair said also that the President is willing to risk a constitutional confrontation with the House Judiciary Committee over its demands for more Watergate evidence.

St. Clair's spokesman for Jaworski said "we plan to continue with our fight." District Judge John J. Sirica gave a five-day extension to Nixon so that he and Jaworski could try to reach some accommodation over the subpoenaed information.

St. Clair said that Nixon reviewed the matter and decided Tuesday that he was "unwilling to make any further adjustment." "I do not believe it will be an impeachable offense," St. Clair said of Nixon's stand.

St. Clair said Nixon maintains that the release of the voluminous transcripts — some 1,300 pages — and other evidence already provided "is all that relates to Watergate" and that therefore the whole story has been told.

St. Clair made it clear that Nixon, however, still is willing to consider turning over additional evidence to the House Judiciary Committee dealing with political contributions by the dairy industry and the settlement of an ITT antitrust suit.

Nixon has taken the Watergate stand, St. Clair said, because he believes there would be a "never-ending" request for information and that he has to preserve the office of the presidency from such demands.

As for a Supreme Court confrontation over the issue of the subpoenaed tapes by the House Committee, St. Clair said, "I think it will stop on the floor of the House of Representatives."

But he said Nixon would oppose Jaworski's subpoenaed request on grounds of confidentiality and executive privilege and on this matter he would fight to the Supreme Court if necessary.

St. Clair said Nixon remained firm in his belief that only elected officials should be permitted to listen to the subpoenaed tapes to verify the transcripts. He has invited Chairman Peter W. Rodino, D-N.J. and ranking minority member Edward Hutchinson, R-Mich., to review the tapes, but still says that the committee staff lawyers will not be permitted to do so.

St. Clair said that if Rodino and Hutchinson listen to the tapes, "they will be satisfied the tapes are indeed accurate."

The special prosecutor got court backing on April 18 to issue a subpoena for 64 presidential conversations spanning a period from June 20, 1972 to June 4, 1973. The edited White House transcripts released last week cover some 20 of those conversations.

St. Clair filed his motion to quash the subpoena on May 1, accompanying it with a letter signed by the President that said the remaining 44 items sought "are confidential conversations between a President and his close advisers," and "that it would be inconsistent with the public interest to produce" them.

The White House transcripts released for the House Judiciary Committee last week covered mainly the conversations Nixon had with close aides in February, March and April last year, when Nixon said he had learned of the Watergate coverup.

Jaworski's subpoena, however, seeks a number of early post-Watergate talks the President had with counsel Charles W. Colson, one of those indicted in the coverup.

RA forced to quit for alleged failure to comply with hall policy on drugs

By PAT NARDI and MARY ANNE FLOOD
State News Staff Writers

A resident assistant (RA) was forced to resign this week in the first real test of the six-month-old Residence Hall Program drug policy.

An RA in Akers Hall, Jerome Jacobs, was asked to resign Friday by the area director of East Complex, for apparently not informing authorities that a student on his floor, whose marijuana stock was stolen, had been selling marijuana.

East Complex Director Douglas Zatechka would not explain the reason for asking Jacobs to resign because he felt the matter was confidential. However, Mark Squillace, another RA in Akers Hall, said that the resignation was forced because of failure to comply with the University's drug policy.

Jacobs, who was told to vacate his room by May 17, refused to comment because he did not want publicity.

Jacobs was the first RA to forcibly resign following the new policy statement on drug abuse issued last fall 1973 by Gary North, coordinator of Residence Hall Programs.

In this policy, North stated: "Hall staff are not protected by laws governing confidential counseling or therapeutic relationships, and as such, are obligated to report information pertaining to criminal activity."

Zatechka said he expects RAs to only inform authorities of people who sell marijuana and not of the casual users.

"I'm not taking a moral position on marijuana, but its presence attracts violence, including knives and guns in the residence halls, and I won't tolerate that," Zatechka said. "Fiddling with drugs is not a fun game. People get hurt, including the small seller."

He added that RAs should be "above reproach" and that they should make necessary changes in their lifestyles to fit the needs of their job.

The whole situation started when a student on Jacobs' floor was robbed at knife-point May 1 of about 10 ounces of marijuana. The victim was reluctant to report the crime, but Jacobs assured him that the police would not handle it to his disadvantage.

Later, the police reported the incident to Jacobs' residence hall complex director, who confronted Jacobs about his failure to report a marijuana seller as the residence hall drug policy demands.

Because of Jacobs' failure to comply with the policy, he was asked to resign or be fired.

Students on Jacobs' floor signed a petition Monday which was presented to Zatechka in a meeting with Squillace and three students from Jacobs' floor.

The Akers RA staff is writing a letter of disagreement with Zatechka's decision and organizing a committee to review the drug policy. Squillace spoke of some of the staff complaints about the drug policy:

"The policy is unrealistic," Squillace said. "It is made by people at the top with no credible understanding of the situation in the dorms."

Squillace said that Jacobs' forced resignation will make other students think twice before they report a robbery, knowing that they may jeopardizing their RA position.

"If the policy was really written to stop dangerous robberies, this is certainly not the way to do it," he said.

In a State News survey of MSU RAs, 10 of 15 interviewed said they would not turn in a pot seller on their floor. Six said they already knew of dealers that they have not reported.

"If Jacobs had lied he'd have his job today," Squillace said. "The entire policy enforcement is a sham, and Jacobs has been punished for being the one caught with the truth.

"I think the administration is using the robbery motive as an excuse to make RAs enforce the state drug laws."

Claude Hersh, University Student Affairs committee member, also thinks the University has an ulterior motive in the drug policy.

"It seems to be an anti-selling policy, not an anti-robbery policy," said Hersh, who asked committee chairman Larry Bartrem to reinstate a subcommittee study of the policy. A study was begun earlier this year by the student affairs committee but died for lack of time to do it.

"Even though RAs are not legal counselors, it is a conflict of interest for them to have to inform on people who use drugs on their floor," Bartrem said. "Probably 80 per cent of the students on campus smoke marijuana on any given night. It's ridiculous to expect the RAs to be narcs for the entire campus."

Bartrem said the committee may take the University to court on the issue.

North said that the number of robberies has decreased since the policy went into effect last fall, though he does not know that the decrease can be attributed to the drug policy.

Age change approved for offices in Michigan

By JOHN TINGWALL
State News Staff Writer

The state Senate Judiciary Committee unanimously Tuesday to approve a bill to open the offices of governor, lieutenant governor and state legislator to 21-year-olds.

House Resolution F, sponsored by Rep. Vaughn III, D-Detroit, must now have two-thirds Senate approval before appearing on the November ballot. The Constitution requirement that the governor and state representatives be 21 years old, but the governor and lieutenant governor be 30, would be amended if approved.

It doesn't anticipate any problem getting it out of the Senate," Vaughn said. "I think the unanimous committee vote is indicative of the way it will go in the Senate."

Sen. Robert Richardson, R-Saginaw, chairman of the Judiciary Committee, said there was some fear expressed in committee that the change in age requirement for governor and lieutenant governor "may sink the whole thing" if it appears on the November ballot.

"The people may very well defeat the amendment because they find the age change for governor and lieutenant governor too hard to swallow," Richardson said. "Although it could hurt the amendment, Jackie wanted it and we agreed to pass it."

"The whole question can now be discussed in the Senate," he said.

Richardson suggested that the bill, which was moved out of the House by a vote of 79-25, may face changes on the floor of the Senate.

Vaughn is currently speaking on television and radio to mobilize young people to ensure passage of the bill.

"This is the final right to be granted as far as the 18-year-old age of majority is concerned," Vaughn said.

Vaughn said that separating the age requirement for governor and lieutenant governor from that of legislators would be inconsistent with his determination to guarantee 18-year-olds their legal rights.

Hopefully this will accelerate young people's interest in government," he said.

The committee also reinserted language in the bill regarding felony convictions, partially upholding a House amendment that declares any political candidate involved in a breach of public trust ineligible to run for office.

FAVORS BOTH SIDES IN COLLEGE BOARD SUIT

Kelley unexpected ally of students

By JOHN LINDSTROM
State News Staff Writer

The Michigan Higher Education Student Assn. has an unexpected ally in its projected court battle with Michigan Atty. Gen. Frank Kelley — Kelley himself.

Kelley said Tuesday if the student association goes to court opposing his ruling — which prohibited students from sitting on University governing boards — then he will file one brief defending his ruling and another supporting the student association.

"The ruling was not my personal view but the legal view of the state according to the Constitution, and until the Constitution is changed either by amendment or through the courts then the ruling must stand," Kelley said.

"I have no objection to changing the Constitution, but until the Constitution is changed I have to follow it," he added.

Kelley also said that when he was a student at the University of Detroit in 1949 he served as a voting member of that school's governing board.

U of D is a privately run Catholic college.

Kelley's 1969 ruling prohibited students from sitting on the governing boards of the universities they attend because of possible conflicts of interest with students' interfering with their educations. Corporate law and contract laws involving students and universities were the basis of Kelley's decision.

The association announced on April 18 that it would go to court to try to have the ruling changed. Matthew Wirgau, chairman of the student association said Tuesday he hopes that the case will be filed in Detroit District Court either next week or the week after.

Wirgau also said he thought Kelley's decision to file two briefs was "fantastic" and that with the brief there was "a very good chance that we can get the ruling overturned."

Kelley spoke before the student association some weeks ago and at that time told them his intentions. "We were very surprised when he told us what he would do," Wirgau said. But Kelley said his filing two opposite briefs in a case was nothing new.

"I can think of separate instances where I had two teams put up on both sides. The most recent example that I can think of involved no fault insurance.

"What it involves is my having one team file a brief that demonstrates my view and, to insure the widest possible discussion before the court, another team will be set up to file a brief stating the current constitutional position," Kelley said.

But Larry Bartrem, an MSU student running for the Republican nomination as a candidate for an MSU trustee spot, said he wasn't surprised by the decision.

"He's done this before on other issues, so it didn't really surprise me," Bartrem said. "He apparently still has some higher political ambitions and he doesn't want to come out like he's stopping students from running for trustee."

The suit will be filed in Bartrem's and another student's name. The other student, who was not identified, will soon announce his candidacy for a post on the University of Michigan Board of Regents.

Wirgau added that the association was filing in time for the state conventions of the two major parties.

Public elections are held for all members of the governing boards of MSU, U-M and Wayne State University. The members of the governing boards of all other state institutions are appointed by Gov. Milliken.

Eugene Krasicky, asst. atty. gen. for education, said he had no comment on Kelley's statement. When the student association originally announced it would file suit Krasicky said he thought Kelley's ruling would stand up in court.

Will file briefs

State Atty. Gen. Frank Kelley said Tuesday he will file legal briefs which both support and reject his earlier opinion against student membership on university governing boards. Kelly, who served on the University of Detroit's governing board while a student there, said the 1969 decision was not his own personal view, but that of the state Constitution.

Kissinger resumes Israeli talks

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger resumed crucial truce talks in Israel Tuesday after a three-hour meeting with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko. A senior U.S. official said Russia would not obstruct a disengagement pact between Israel and Syria.

The Gromyko meeting was arranged to give the Soviets the visible presence they have been demanding in Mideast diplomatic efforts and gave Kissinger an insight into Moscow's attitude.

U.S. officials said the next 48 hours would be "critical" for an agreement to end the fighting on the Golan Heights, now in its 57th straight day.

British union orders strike

Leaders of Britain's 1.2 million-member Amalgamated Union of Engineering Workers ordered an immediate strike Tuesday to protest a court order seizing $480,000 in union assets.

It is not known yet how effective the strike call was. Much of British industry is threatened with a standstill if the membership heeds the call strike.

The central issue in the dispute is a ruling issued last September by the National Industrial Relations Court that an engineer's strike at a farm machinery plant was illegal under the International Relations Act.

The court ordered the union to pay a fine of $180,000 for contempt and $113,000 in compensation to the company. Friday, the court seized nearly all of the union's funds because of nonpayment of the levies.

Buzhardt quizzed by Senate team

The Defense Dept. began reviewing Tuesday which armaments contracts it may have to cancel in the wake of the Senate's rejection of $266 million in additional military aid for South Vietnam this fiscal year.

At the White House, meanwhile, Deputy Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren said the continued infiltration of North Vietnamese tanks, artillery, missiles and ammunition into South Vietnam, coupled with the Senate rejection of more aid jeopardized U.S. reliability to support its allies.

Presidential counsel J. Fred Buzhardt invoked executive privilege, national security and the attorney-client privilege to avoid answering some of the hundreds of questions asked him Tuesday by the Senate Watergate committee.

Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr., R-Conn., who conducted the interrogation, said that the President's lawyer answered most of the questions in a session which focused on his knowledge of the use of a $100,000 payment from billionaire Howard Hughes. However not much new information was gained.

Buzhardt told reporters it was "absolutely not correct" that he was the source of the story that Rose Mary Woods, the president's personal secretary, received part of the $100,000 payment as a loan or as a gift.

$91.4 million for summer jobs

The Nixon administration made $91.4 million available Tuesday to enable communities to plan summer jobs for 700,000 economically disadvantaged youths.

The money is part of $300 million earmarked by the administration for the summer job program. The balance is awaiting appropriation by Congress as part of the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act appropriation.

Vermeer painting found in London

Art experts began restoring the $4.6 million Vermeer painting "The Guitar Player" on Tuesday after recovering the stolen masterpiece from a London graveyard.

Scotland Yard detectives, acting on an anonymous telephone tip, found the painting Monday night wrapped in newspaper and propped against a headstone in a churchyard near London's financial district. Authorities theorized that thieves, who stole it from Kenwood House, London's municipal museum, on Feb. 23, had dumped it there.

Unit wants vinyl chloride banned

The U.S. Consumer Products Safety Commission served notice Tuesday that it intends to ban use of vinyl chloride in most household aerosol sprays because the chemical is considered a potential health hazard.

Responding to a Feb. 21 petition from Ralph Nader's health research group, the commission called on aerosol manufacturers to turn over within 10 days information on products that have ever contained vinyl chloride as a propellant or an ingredient.

Vinyl chloride has been implicated in at least 12 cases of a rare form of liver cancer among industrial workers and has caused various tumors in laboratory rats forced to inhale the chemical.

Daley will undergo more tests

Richard J. Daley, Chicago mayor for 20 years, was diagnosed Tuesday as suffering from high blood pressure and mild diabetes.

Dr. Thomas Coogan Jr. said Daley, 71, probably has been working too hard and that he previously was known to have both conditions.

Daley was taken to the hospital Monday after complaining of dizziness. A Daley spokesman said he will remain in the hospital for several days to receive treatment and undergo more tests.

Antibusing rules called illegal

FROM WIRE SERVICES

WASHINGTON — The United States Commission on Civil Rights has urged the Senate to reject all major antibusing amendments scheduled to be considered later this week, charging that three of the measures are clearly unconstitutional.

Passage of any legislation limiting the power of courts or government agencies to require desegregation through busing, the commission said, "would turn the celebrations planned for the 20th anniversary of the Brown vs. Board of Education Supreme Court decision into a dirge."

On May 17, 1954, the high court outlawed the principle of separate but equal schools for blacks as inherently unconstitutional.

The main antibusing proposal before the senate, introduced by Sen. Edward J.

Gurney, R-Fla., would in effect overturn the Supreme Court's 1971 decision in the Swann case that said that busing is a legitimate means for overcoming racial segregation, the five-member commission said. The Gurney amendment, similar to antibusing provisions already passed by the House, terms busing a last resort and would limit transportation to the school closest to a child's home.

Another provision of the Gurney amendment would allow the reopening of existing desegregation cases to conform with the new busing limits. This provision, the commission said, "would reopen old wounds in many communities, bring to a halt the steps that are being taken to achieve genuine desegregation..."

The Gurney amendment, the commission concluded, "contradicts both itself and the Constitution. It recognizes constitutional rights but denies federal institutions the power to protect them."

Arthur S. Flemming, the commission's chairman, said the group also considered unconstitutional an antibusing amendment offered by Sen. Sam Ervin, D-N.C., as well as a provision of the House bill, originally offered by Rep. John M. Ashbrook, R-Ohio.

Antibusing provisions will come up for Senate debate as part of a $23 billion federal school aid bill that passed the House on March 2. The bill contains a moderate antibusing provision, developed two years ago by Sen. Mike Mansfield of Montana, the majority leader and Sen. Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania, the minority leader.

While the Scott-Mansfield provision is not clearly unconstitutional, the commission said it also should be rejected since it would "slow down the process of implementing the constitutional rights set forth in the 1954 desegregation decision.

At a news conference Monday Flemming said the commission's views had been requested by Sen. Harrison Williams, D-New Jersey and Sen. Jacob Javits, R-New York.

Yugoslavia studies larger bank notes

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Yugoslav government proposed that bank notes of 1,000 dinars ($66 U.S.) should be issued to facilitate money transactions in this country where cash payments are not popular yet and cash payments are appreciated. The biggest bank note now is of 500 dinars. Raging inflation of about 10 per cent annually in the past few years made it necessary to have bills of high denomination.

Finance minister to run for Brandt's vacated post

NEW YORK TIMES

BONN — Helmut Schmidt, the 55-year-old West German Finance Minister, was chosen by the Social Democratic party Tuesday as the government candidate to succeed Willy Brandt, who resigned unexpectedly as chancellor Monday night.

Schmidt, who is the deputy of the party that Brandt leads, has been waiting for the chance to assume a more active political role for years. But he said in Hamburg Tuesday morning, before returning to Bonn, that he regretted Brandt's decision to resign. Brandt said he resigned Tuesday because of the scandal about the confessed East German Communist spy, Gunter Guillaume, who was on his staff as assistant for party affairs until his arrest April 24.

The election of a new chancellor will take place in the West German lower house, the Bundestag, on May 16. Schmidt, as the candidate of the ruling Social Democrat-Free Democrat coalition, would almost certainly be elected by the government majority there. It is considered unlikely that he would initiate any major domestic or international policy shifts.

Brandt's resignation became effective Tuesday morning, when the retiring federal president, Gustav W. Heinemann, flew back to Bonn from Hamburg and officially relieved him of his duties, as the 60-year-old chancellor had requested in a two-paragraph handwritten letter Monday night.

Brandt met with Social Democratic members of the Bundestag

Tuesday morning and told them, "My resignation is a result of my experience in office, my respect for the unwritten rules of democracy and to prevent my personal and political integrity from being destroyed." The deputies cheered and gave him a bunch of red roses.

For the time being, Brandt told the deputies, he will not resign from his position as head of the party, which faces a crucial state election in lower Saxony on June 9.

Don't you be the last on the block to know what's going on.

The Devil would give his soul to get his hands on a copy of HUMAN BEHAVIOR.

Like the rest of us, old man Scratch depends on periodicals to keep him on top of what's going on in the world. When he was going to college, a fellow could get by with just Liberty, the Post and the Police Gazette. Then, in order to stay abreast of what his numerous colleagues in the medical profession were up to, he had to subscribe to the Readers Digest. Next, just for the interviews, of course, he started picking up Playboy. Well, almost before he knew it, he was subscribing to dozens upon dozens of magazines.

Still, he continued to find himself lagging hopelessly behind the times. Suddenly, just knowing what evil lurks in the hearts of men wasn't enough. He was no longer being invited to chic cocktail parties, fashionable salons and chi-chi soirees, and it wasn't simply because he insisted on wearing tails for all occasions, either.

Out of sheer desperation, he tried a different brand of soap, changed his underarm deodorant and even started brushing with a sexier toothpaste. But it was to no avail. His problem, you see, was that he had nothing to talk about, except to mumble on endlessly about "the good old days."

It isn't a failing shared by the aware readers of HUMAN BEHAVIOR, The Newsmagazine of the Social Sciences. Every issue tackles in easy-to-grasp fashion the most mind-expanding questions imaginable.

For example:

- Are analysts making parents the scapegoats for their children's problems?
- Who is the most likely candidate to become an unwed mother?
- What is a white student on a black campus really after?
- How does love stifle creativity?
- Why do some therapists have sexual relations with their patients?
- What caused All-American boys to become killers in Vietnam?
- How can gun-users who are potential murderers be identified?
- Why are gynecologists today's foremost sexists?

Had Lucifer been reading HUMAN BEHAVIOR for these past three years, he would not only know the answers to those devilishly provocative questions, but he would be an expert on such diverse topics as the rise of radical therapy, alpha waves and meditation, the ordeal of the Ph.D. candidates, the psychology of astrology, selling with sex, and the mystique of black street jargon. In addition, a continuing series of probing, no-holds-barred, profiles would have bared to him the psyches and souls of such intriguing mortals as, B. F. Skinner, Masters and Johnson, Uri Geller, Fritz Perls, Rollo May, Robert Coles, Konrad Lorenz and Dory Previn.

Service groups get initial OK for funding

By JIM KEEGSTRA
State News Staff Writer

campus and two East Lansing community service groups and the first test Monday for approval of their requests for revenue sharing funds from Ingham County.

agencies to receive initial recommendation from the county Finance Committee.

County Commissioner Penny Stern, member of the committee, said the recommendations are by no means final. Public discussion of the 13 projects tentatively approved, and the 19 rejected requests, will be possible at a commissioners' Committee of the Whole meeting scheduled for 7:30 p.m. May 22 at the County Courthouse in Mason.

Finance Committee Chairman Ken Hope said the board of commissioners plans to take a final vote on revenue-sharing allocations at its June meeting and begin paying the grants July 1.

The other 10 groups which proposed recommended projects are: Ingham County Library, YMCA, Community Mental Health, Ingham Medical Hospital, Greater Lansing Visiting Nurse Assn., Catholic Social Services, Community Action Advisory Council, Greater Lansing Legal Aid Bureau, Voluntary Action Center of Greater Lansing and Capitol Area Transportation Authority.

Stern said the library and nurses' association funding still need further discussion and there is a chance the Friendship Day Care Center, 925 W. Main St., Lansing, will be recommended.

Many of the other projects were rejected, Stern said, because they could receive funding from different sources.

The 13 projects presently approved represent a total of over $322,000 in requests. Commissioners have been uncertain exactly how much revenue sharing money the county will have to distribute, but Hope's latest estimate was around $350,000.

The MSU Volunteer Action Corps' request for $5,000 will cover rent on a University station wagon, help pay a part-time dispatcher and buy supplies, coordinator Nan Duemling said.

"If we get all or most of what we requested it will be a really happy surprise," she said.

The Women's Center asked for $7,400 to hire a part-time office coordinator or pay for rent and supplies, depending on East Lansing City Council's funding decision.

The Drug Education Center wants $9,360 to continue its coping program for probate court referred teenagers. Director Scott Huffman said the once-a-week rap sessions have been running for several years and had been funded by East Lansing.

Academic Council report on streamlining approved

By MIKE GALATOLA
State News Staff Writer

After more than four months of debate and revision, the Academic Council Tuesday approved the report recommending the streamlining of the council and its committees.

The Report of the Ad Hoc Committee to Review Academic Governance, in its approved form, calls for reducing the council's faculty members to 63 and increasing the 36 student members to 38. The report also recommends cutting the council's 12 committees of 179 faculty members and 100 students to eight committees of 87 faculty and 33 students.

The original report, presented to the council Nov. 27, 1973, suggested sharper reductions, recommending a total of six committees of 49 faculty and 25 students. The original report suggested that only council members sit on the committees, but the council rejected the proposal. The approved report calls for 23 faculty and 12 student committee members to come from the council and for 56 faculty and 21 students to be elected by the colleges.

Student representatives failed Tuesday to increase the number of at-large representatives recommended in the report from six to eight. A Jan. 23 effort to increase the recommended six to the present number of 10 had also failed.

There are no faculty at-large members. Paula Smith, Council of Graduate Students (COGS) representative, Tuesday that the two Student council seats that are vacated when two students serve on the Academic Council steering committee not be filled by additional college representatives, but instead be shifted to at-large representatives. This procedure would keep the total number of student council members at 38 as the report suggests, Smith said.

input to the council.

But Herbert Rudman, College of Education representative, said the motion represented an appeal to categories like "black" or "woman" rather than on the basis of college constituency.

Phil Kern, College of Agriculture and Natural Resources representative, said many of his constituents had told him they disapproved of at-large representation. "They're disgusted with it," Kern said.

Before they voted against the at-large seat proposal, council members rejected overwhelmingly a proposal by Hester Cain, Justin Morrill College representative, that the votes be taken on the record. "I didn't expect the council to approve a roll-call vote," Cain said after the meeting.

"Apparently members thought it would take too much time. But I wanted to have it on record how people voted on this issue."

Consumer unit sees vote on tax repeal

A coalition of consumers groups predicted Monday that voters definitely will have a chance to decide in November whether to repeal the state's 4 per cent sales tax on food and drugs.

Citizens to Cut Unfair Taxes said its two-month-old drive to obtain 265,000 signatures to place the question on the November ballot has collected 100,000 signatures and will reach the needed total by June 15.

Douglas Ross, director of the Michigan's citizens lobby, said the public response to the petition drive has been "enormous." In addition to the citizens lobby, Ross said other groups in the coalition include the Michigan Catholic Conference, the AFL-CIO, the Consumer Alliance of Michigan, United Auto Workers (UAW), Michigan Education Assn. (MEA) and more than 100 other groups.

Cavanagh put in hospital with low-grade infection

ANN ARBOR — Former Detroit Mayor Jerome P. Cavanagh, dropped out as candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination when he had a cancerous kidney removed April 11, was readmitted to a hospital here for an infection.

Dr. Richard Dorr, Cavanagh's surgeon, said Monday in a statement released from the St. Joseph Mercy Hospital here, that Cavanagh was being treated for a low-grade infection. His condition was described as good and Cavanagh's wife, Betty, said her husband would be released from the hospital on, after being there since Friday.

FACULTY VIEWPOINT
IS THERE A VIABLE ALTERNATIVE TO COLLECTIVE BARGAINING?

Terence N. Tice, a member of the faculty of the University of Michigan, is a strong backer of that university's plan to create an academic governance structure that can duplicate the benefits of collective bargaining while not actually engaging in formal bargaining. MSU/Faculty Associates does not feel that such a plan can succeed. Indeed, Tice confesses that many of the plan's supporters "believe that it will be a gradual preparation for collective bargaining rather than a permanent substitute."

Tice concedes that a viable alternative to collective bargaining "must achieve the same gains in compensation as collective bargaining; or it must provide advances in shared governance sufficient to make collective bargaining undesirable. The model must also be adaptable to diverse institutional settings."

Tice is committed to the alternative model being developed at the U. of M., although he freely admits that his commitment responds to the gains and attempts to avoid the pains of collective bargaining, defined by him as "a way of utilizing conflict to reach meaningful agreement." Such "meaningful agreement" is invariably the result of toughness and tenacity on the part of faculty and administration negotiators, and a certain element of pain is inevitably involved. Tice concludes that really effective contracts result only after training in the following skills: "• conflict resolution and cooperative decision making; • the study of issues relating to long term goals of the institution, including ways of dealing with values and defining goals; • the forming and sustaining of contractual relations, implying unaccustomed modes of co-management between faculty and administration." MSU/FA agrees that, in addition to good will, the skills outlined above must be exercised by the entire institution to result from collective bargaining. Even in the absence of collective bargaining these skills are needed to protect faculty rights and to realize the full potential of faculty responsibility.

Full houses at shows may aid dying Mariah

For the many people who have supported Mariah Folk and Blues Coffeehouse through its 15 month existence, the demise of the organization will be truly sorrowful.

But the coffeehouse has lost $10,000 and will not continue unless support for the organization materializes soon.

Maybe students at MSU feel they can go to the Stables or to Ann Arbor to hear top-name folk music but they forget that the early success of Mariah with Leo Kottke and Bonnie Raitt encouraged the good folk music at the Stables.

Should East Lansing leave it up to Ann Arbor to be a folk-music center and stand off like a culturally deprived community? Hardly!

Besides lack of support Mariah has been hurt because Pop Entertainment can no longer subsidize the organization as planned.

Ironically, Pop Entertainment lost a lot of money on the J. Geils concert because the concert did not draw a large enough audience.

In anticipation of a crowd larger than 7,000, Pop Entertainment built temporary fire doors to meet regulations for such a crowd, but less than 6,000 people showed. The doors cost the organization between $3,000 and $4,000.

Add these temporary fire doors to expenses which have drastically inflated in recent years — plus paying the bands — and Pop Entertainment has a very low profit margin on concerts.

Just as the athletic department depends on football and basketball to create the revenue to support minor sports, Pop Entertainment depended on major concerts to support Mariah.

But since both organizations were losing money and the latter losing on nearly every show, Pop Entertainment has decided that Mariah is to go.

If students are still interested in Mariah they should make their feelings known by writing to Pop Entertainment in Room 108 Student Services Bldg.

What would be even better than writing a letter is attending Mariah's concert with Gerry Grossman on Friday and Saturday or Pop Entertainment's Beach Boys concert on May 18.

Sellouts at these shows could turn out to be indications that Mariah and Pop Entertainment do have support in this community and brighten the future for concerts at MSU.

Concert control vital

Buoyed by lead singer Peter Wolf's invitation, approximately 200 youths rushed the stage at the April 29 J. Geils concert. Two ushers were injured in the resulting mele.

Concert organizers and promoters must take steps now to insure that similar or worse incidents do not occur in the future.

A wise decision was made to not call in the police, whose appearance might have invited more violence. Unfortunately, this left the small group of ushers virtually helpless.

Concert promoters must take immediate action to increase the size and protection of the usher corps. The 20 ushers at the Geils concert drowned in a sea of fans. Several dozen clearly identifiable ushers would be far more effective. Their number alone would discourage a pushing crowd and none would be left stranded in a hostile mob.

Organizers of concerts should also formally request each performer, before contracts are signed and again immediately before the concert, to overtly discourage fans from approaching the stage. A few critics say that the large number of high school students at concerts are responsible for the problems and should therefore be barred. But to ban an entire age group which heavily supports the concerts is decidedly unfair and would increase Pop Entertainment's financial problems.

Concert organizers can wait no longer before taking action. The possibility of serious injury to ushers, fans and even performers is too great. The comfort and safety of the entire audience should be an overriding concern at all future concerts.

Agnew verdict hopeful

The disbarment of Spiro Agnew from the practice of law in Maryland justifies the restoration of at least a smidgen of faith in the judicial system. Mitchell and Stans may be temporarily cleared, but for the former Vice President the practice of law — if not law breaking — seems over.

The discrepancies between the intended function of a law profession and the tainted image it has acquired since 1972 have instilled apprehension in any person old enough to remember that forgotten term, "an honest politician."

To purge the law profession, the watchdog for the year concerning disbarment should be "it's never too late."

Nixon talks rated 'X' for kids

By ART BUCHWALD

On Oct. 13, 1960, John F. Kennedy debated Richard Nixon on television. At that time, the question of Harry Truman's cussing came up. Kennedy refused to apologize for Truman's salty language, but Nixon had strong feelings that a President of the United States should not curse.

He said in part, "One thing I have noted as I have traveled around the country is the tremendous number of children who come out to see the presidential candidates. I see mothers holding up their babies so they can see a man who might be president of the United States. I know Sen. Kennedy sees them, too. It makes you realize that whoever is president is going to be a man that all children of America look up to or look down on, and I can only say I am very proud that President Eisenhower restored dignity and decency and frankly, good language, to the conduct of the Presidency of the United States.

"And I only hope, should I win this election, that I could approach President Eisenhower in maintaining the dignity of the office and see to it that whenever any mother or father talks to his child, he can look at the man in the White House and, whatever he may think of his policies, he will say 'Well, there is a man who maintains the kind of standards personally that I would want my child to follow.'"

I must admit that even though it's been 14 years since Nixon said this I was very moved. Perhaps, I thought, for the first time in history this country would have a president who didn't cuss.

Though Nixon didn't make it in 1960, he did become President in 1968, and every time he drove by in the last five years I held my son in my arms (he's now 20) and said, "There's a President who has the kind of standards I want you to follow."

Though Joel was rather heavy, I felt it was worth the strain on my back.

You can imagine my despair and disillusionment when the transcripts of the presidential tapes were released and it turned out Nixon might have been the cussingest President in our history.

Almost every other word had an "expletive deleted," and if you count the "inaudibles" and "unclears" and "ambiguities," it's enough to make a U.S. Marine top sergeant's hair stand on end.

The question is what happened between the time Nixon debated Kennedy and the time he became President of the United States.

I sincerely believe Nixon was telling the truth when he said he was shocked by Harry Truman's language. I also believe in my heart he didn't start cussing until he lost the election to Kennedy.

A friend of Nixon told me, "I never heard Dick use an 'expletive deleted' until the 1960 Illinois results of the election came in. In 1962, he lost the race for governor in California and he let out the "inaudible" after another. I didn't know there were that many 'expletives' in the English language. It was hard after that to have Dick over to the house when the children were around.

"I thought when he became President and he was more secure he'd stop using 'expletives,' but apparently once you start using them it's hard to give them up," the friend said.

And so it turns out that President Nixon was no better than Harry Truman when it came to language, and a lot worse than President Eisenhower. It's something we'll all have to get used to.

But I know one thing — I'm no longer going to hold up my 20-year-old son in my arms when the President drives by. Any President who promises to restore good language to the Presidency and then talks the way he did is nothing but an "inaudible" in my book.

POINT OF VIEW

Sorority rush excites

By CHARLES L. MASSOGLIA

I have recently had the distinction of being the first male to go through sorority rush at MSU. My decision to go through sorority rush was based, in large part, on two considerations. First, I knew very little about the sorority system, and what better way could there be to learn than to actually go through rush. And second, I must admit, no male had ever gone through sorority rush and I thought it would be fun to raise a little hell in a bastion of female tradition and strength.

Even with the cursory experiences I had with sororities I have come to several conclusions. Sorority members are not in general the snobs so many non-Greeks make them out to be. They are human beings just like you and I, with the same feelings and needs that everyone has. They do not associate only with other Greeks. Many parties sororities held last term had lots of non-Greeks attending.

Sororities are involved in an unbelievable number of service projects, on both local and national levels. The most impressive and notable observation I made was the sense of comradeship present — a comradeship which seems to provide the opportunity to share both the joys and sorrows of life with others who care on a personal basis.

I can only hope that anyone who has even just thought about sororities, or fraternities too, for that matter, would go through rush. It is amazing how quickly and simply prejudices will melt, how much fun you can have and how little effort on your part is required.

I must say that going through sorority rush has been one of the most memorable and rewarding experiences I have had during my long tenure at MSU. It was in large part my experiences at Kappa Delta and Sigma Kappa in particular, and all of the other sororities I visited in general, that has caused me to become one of the most avid non-Greek supporters the sorority system may ever have.

It is one thing to visit sororities to raise hell. It is quite another to come away with the impossible hope somewhere in the back of your mind that either of two of the sororities you rushed might somehow be able, and want, to bid you.

I sincerely hope that sometime in the future, both sororities and fraternities will become coeducational, for I feel the experience would be invaluable from the organizations' viewpoint and from the viewpoint of the individual, regardless of sex. For the moment though, I remain Gamma Delta Iota forever!

Charles L. Massoglia is an East Lansing senior majoring in political science.

Letters may be addressed to Dr. Werner at University Health Center. Names need not be included unless a personal reply is requested.

My mate and I have been having sex in a different position. She lies on her back and raises her right leg. I then straddle her left leg and roll onto my stomach. This seems to have worked very well for the past six months. But I have now noticed that when I get an erection I have a definite left curve in my penis. How can I get rid of the curve? It works OK, but it looks like hell.

I have always been quite understanding of problems about the size, shape and function of sexual organs, these being highly valued parts of our anatomy. But sometimes, solutions to problems are so obvious it surprises me that they are not apparent to others.

For the next few months, try the following: Have her lay flat on her back and raise her left leg. Straddle her right leg and roll onto your stomach in a counterclockwise direction. If the curve you report is secondary to this not unusual position in sexual intercourse, it should correct itself. Once it corrects itself, alternating left and right approaches should keep everything in the mid line.

I have a roommate with a habit of grinding his teeth when he sleeps — not softly, but loud enough to wake me up, even though he doesn't remember doing it the next day. Could this cause some problems with his teeth, and is there any way to get him out of this habit?

Teeth grinding or bruxism, its more poetic medical name, is quite common and is often a reflection of anxiety or just plain old, everyday stress. For some people grinding does occur primarily in their sleep and if it persists over a long period of time can cause a variety of difficulties.

Even relatively brief periods of bruxism can cause teeth to be hypersensitive to cold and heat. This clears up when the grinding stops. Over long periods of time, permanent damage can be done to the teeth.

Nocturnal bruxism is easily extinguished by the use of a molded plastic device worn over the lower set of choppers which results in a sliding motion when a person attempts to grind his teeth. Being somewhat uncomfortable and not providing any release of muscle tension, the habit quickly extinguishes itself. Any dentist with an interest in bites should be able to fit your friend with such a device.

Is there such a thing as a hermaphrodite? Also, what is the relation between a person who has had a sex change operation and a homosexual?

A hermaphrodite is a person who is born with improperly differentiated sex organs. Male and female sex organs have the same embryologic origins but hormonal and other influences result in different development. When development is messed up, it is possible for the person to have internal or external sex organs that have male and female characteristics. This is a rare condition.

Sex change operations are a form of treatment for an unusual group of people known as transsexuals. The transsexual has had a lifelong, non-modifiable discomfort with his or her gender identity or sense of being a man or woman. They may or may not engage in homosexual activity but differ from people who generally refer to themselves as homosexuals in a number of ways.

Homosexuality is the expression of a preference for sexual activity with someone of the same sex. Homosexuals generally are not unhappy with their gender identity and function in typical masculine or feminine ways outside the area of sexual activity. This is a complicated area which is covered superbly in a recent book: "Man and Woman, Boy and Girl" by John Money and Anke Ehrhardt published by the Johns Hopkins University press.

VOX POPULI

Loyalty rule would make Nixon, Jackson traitors

To the Editor:

For the reasoning which underlies his recent letter on "divided loyalties," H.R. Hoppe deserves a straight O.O. If we follow his argument to its inevitable conclusion, then both President Nixon and Sen. Jackson, D-Washington, though assuming diametrically opposed positions on the granting of most favored nation treatment to the USSR, are "ipso facto disloyal to the country of their citizenship" since both, knowingly or unknowingly, are working for the "political advancement and aggrandizement of a foreign nation."

There is little doubt that the Soviet Union will reap economic, political and potentially military benefits from the unconditional trade concessions for which Nixon has so ardently fought. Ergo, Nixon is nothing more than a Communist dupe. Curiously enough, Jackson is equally guilty of un-Americanism because his opposition to the granting of economic concessions to the Kremlin has been predicated on the latter's refusal to ease emigration restrictions against Jews, most of whom seek to settle in Israel. Presumably, the Senator will be willing to accommodate the Soviets if and when they facilitate Jewish emigration. And as we all know, the mass arrival of Soviet Jews in Israel will ultimately contribute to Israeli political aggrandizement in the Middle East. Ergo, Jackson is really an Israeli, or worse yet, a Jewish dupe.

In short, if we accept Hoppe's definition of political loyalty, then we must concede that it is logically impossible for any American politician (or for that matter, any citizen) to meet the test of patriotism. The veiled McCarthyist and anti-Semitic overtones in Hoppe's letter should be publicly exposed and vigorously condemned by all of us — Jews and non-Jews alike — who see the inherent contradiction between our allegiance to the United States and our support for Jewish self-determination in the western part of Palestine.

 James Madison College

Support for coffeehouse

To the Editor:

Mariah Folk and Blues Coffeehouse is not dead. The coffeehouse is experiencing a financial crisis and like any other crisis it can be solved. The main problem Mariah faces is the lack of the support by MSU students. Come fall I believe the majority of students will miss Mariah.

Mariah is one of a kind. Nothing like it exists on any other campus in the country. Considering the level of entertainment presented, at the price charged, it is incredible that Mariah is in the red. I challenge anyone to dispute the fact the Mariah has been solely responsible for the introduction and perpetuation of the finest folk and blues music to the East Lansing area.

Mariah can only continue with the support of the students in the surrounding community. This means you! Mariah's staff has worked extremely hard and they don't intend to stop now. With your cooperation Mariah Folk and Blues Coffeehouse will be maintained.

Nixon's darker side finally exposed

By WILLIAM SAFIRE
New York Times

"It'll stir up quite a storm," a drained, relieved President Nixon told a caller a few hours after delivering his television address about releasing tape transcripts. "There's some rough stuff in there."
And why hadn't he released them months earlier? He had to wait until the indictments were in, the President explained, and then until the Stans -

Mitchell trial was over - and, "It took time to get all this together."
But the primary reason for withholding the transcripts until survival demanded their release dawned on the caller after reading the quarter-million words in the sky-blue binder: Some of the stuff is damnably rough.
The tape - and tell memoirs illuminate a dark side of Richard Nixon: his need to hide the sleazy wiretaps and break - ins that took place before Watergate; his desire to appear candid while remaining circumspect; his fear of personally confronting John Ehrlichman, passing that unpleasant job to John Ehrlichman with instructions to secretly bug the room. No wonder the President never wanted this to see the light of day: Much of this scurrying around is what goes on under a flat rock.

The transcripts show the man in the Oval Office to be guilty of conduct unbecoming of a president. The language used in private is not the problem - in fact, "Since March 21 when I had that conversation with Dean, I have broken my ass to try to get the facts of this case," is the most heartwarming observation in it - but the President's reluctance to recognize reality is incredible, and the weakness displayed in not taking charge of events so as to build a firewall between the presidency and the scandal is inexcusable.
When Nixon realized how abysmally out of touch and how isolated an executive he had been, he compounded his mistake by getting too much in touch. By allowing loyalty to his old friends and hatred for his enemies to becloud his judgment, he failed to execute ruthlessly, as a chief executive sometimes must.

The President's defense is that he was groping in the dark. In the weeks after March 21, as the mystery slowly unfolded, the transcripts show his agonized amazement. To his post-speech caller last week, the President stressed how much had been withheld from him by John Suddenly Dean's massive confidence game with the Senate Watergate committee comes into focus: On all three networks he sought repeatedly to implicate the President in the Watergate coverup by backdating some of what had been said in the March 21 meeting. That he deliberately backdated, probably to show that his hush-money payments had always been approved, is apparent now.

Just as the transcripts answer the famous Senate committee question - "What did he know and when did he know it?" - in a way that shows the President to have been wrapped in an innocent cocoon, they call attention to his damaging acquiescence in the payments to Howard Hunt. That is "tough stuff," and though the President equivocates toward the end in a way that makes it hard to prove him guilty of a crime, it is hard to read that transcript without a sinking feeling.
His friends always knew there was a dark side to Nixon. Seeing it so vividly in this excruciating exculpation, it is hard to keep in mind that there are other sides to the man neither phony nor ignoble.

OP-ED PAGE

Dean on March 21: "What he didn't tell me was more important than what he did."

Dean did not tell the President that he had coached Jeb Magruder in February in John Mitchell's presence, or that he had handled payoff money himself, or that he had offered clemency to Magruder and James McCord or that he had taken the notebooks from Howard Hunt's safe and shredded that evidence. In "telling all," Dean did not begin to sketch the outlines of his own villainy.

COMMENTARY

Let everyone edit

By RUSSELL BAKER
New York Times

After editing the Watergate tapes to its satisfaction, the White House now they prove that John Dean cannot be trusted. The trouble with this is that Dean had done the editing we probably have an edition proving the White House cannot be believed.
This, of course, would also be unfair. If evidence is going to be used to make a case, then all the parties who are to be da aged - and not just the White House, not just Dean - should have editing rights.
Mitchell, Haldeman, Ehrlichman, Magruder, Strachan - the whole bunch, all of whom are damaged in various ways by the White House edition, should be given a chance to go over the tapes and edit them according to what they believe Congress needs to know in order to have all the evidence.
I can only guess what various men would omit. Would Ehrlichman, for example, elect to write in "unintelligible" when transcribing the passage in which he calls John Mitchell a big enchilada who, if thrown to the wolves, might satisfy appetites for a large victim and take the pressure off the White House?
An enchilada, according to the Random House dictionary, is "a tortilla rolled and filled with a highly seasoned mixture, usually containing meat and covered with a sauce flavored with chili." Ehrlichman might conceivably believe Mitchell would be needlessly offended to learn that he was discussed at the White House as succulent cuisine and edit it out.

Mitchell, in the same spirit, might find it equally discreet to substitute "unintelligible" for those passages in which the President tells Haldeman and Ehrlichman that Mitchell "hates" William P. Rogers, the former secretary of state.
And what about Dean? There is that passage in which the President tells him to compile a list of people they can "get," people who "have been asking for it" and who are now "going to get it," since the President has finally decided to use his power against them. "What an exciting prospect!" is Dean's reply. Surely Dean would like to edit that embarrassing piece of boyish sycophancy down to an "unintelligible."
Fair is fair. If the White House is to have the right to edit, then so should everybody else. Otherwise, justice will not be served.
With just the White House edition, which we now have, the public faces at least six months of almost continuous reading. However, after each of the men involved had edited the thing to his own taste, it would probably shrink down to a document of no more than a few hundred words.
It would probably read somewhat as follows:

P. Oh, hello. Sit down. (unintelligible).
E. That's right. (unintelligible) was just a messenger.
H. No, he wasn't at the (unintelligible).
P. Watergate?
E. (Unintelligible) when he talked to me.
P. I can't (unintelligible) Mitchell and (unintelligible) told Bob. 'Look, we've got to (unintelligible).'
H. Every time we meet on this there seems to be a brass band playing on the White House lawn.
(Deletion of material not related to presidential action.)
E. (Unintelligible).
H. Colson thought (unintelligible) and phoned (unintelligible) and said (unintelligible).
P. Incredible. (Expletive deleted).
H. (Unintelligible).
(White House steward enters)
P. I will have some consomme, steward.
E. Me too.
(Deletion of material not related to presidential action.)
P. How's that?
H. What's wrong in the White House kitchen? This consomme is always (unintelligible).
This version edited by everybody would make it much easier for the Congress and the courts to determine that nobody had done anything wrong. The present version edited by the White House offers such absolute only to the President, quite naturally.

Loose ends strangle 'Dreams'

By ED RUDZATS
State News Reviewer

When a film maker such as Ingmar Bergman deliberately writes comparison of his work that of Ingmar Bergman, he is asking for trouble. The result is not only an affirmation of the superiority of Bergman in the film medium and the ingenuity of the imitator. But the problem is that it does not try to imitate

Bergman wholeheartedly (more the pity) but settles instead for a few vaguely Bergmanesque scenes and then makes an obvious reference to the similarities between the two films.

Cates so overtly points out the similarities between "Summer Wishes, Winter Dreams" and Bergman's "Wild Strawberries," by having his main character watch that particular Bergman film, that Cates can only suffer in comparison.

"Summer Wishes, Winter Dreams" deals with a theme that Bergman has explored before — most notably in "Wild Strawberries" — the theme of coming to terms with the past and thereby coming to terms with oneself.

In Bergman's film, it was an elderly professor who, approaching death, is finally able to accept himself and his life without flinching or rationalizing the more negative aspects away.

"Summer Wishes, Winter Dreams" presents a similar plight via the middle class, middle-aged New York housewife, Rita, portrayed by Joanne Woodward, must come to grips with fantasies and dreams she has had about the past and assimilate them all into her consciousness in order to survive. Cates' film attempts to detail the process by which she goes about this assimilation, much in the same way Bergman depicted the professor's realization of his own psyche.

Both film makers rely heavily on fantasies, reminiscences, dreams, and voice-over narration. Unfortunately, Cates and his writer, Stewart Stern, could not imbue "Dreams" with a clear sense of direction. As a result, the conclusion of the film remains muddled. What for two-thirds of the film has been Rita's story, switches to the husband's point of view and then never manages to dramatically join the two segments together.

After 24 years of marriage, has Rita come to terms with the important aspects of her psyche, both positive and a negative? Does she understand the reasons why she "turned out so badly," why she cannot say "I love you" to her husband, why her son fled to Europe to pursue a homosexual lifestyle or why her daughter wears a protective shell of scorn and overweight? "Summer Wishes, Winter Dreams" fails to provide any answers — it does not even come close, and thus emerges as an ambitious though disappointing effort.

Were it not for Cates' pretentious reference to Bergman, "Summer Wishes, Winter Dreams" might have been somewhat less disappointing, though it still lacks a clear sense of what it is ultimately trying to say.

The film makes up for its weak script through exceptional portrayals from its principals. As "two junkies trying to get a fix from the past," Woodward and Martin Balsam are superb. They deliver acutely lifelike portrayals of the New York couple caught in the downhill slide of middle age. Many of their scenes together are so intensely accurate in mood and nuance that they are almost painful to sit through. The despair, the bickering, the arguments are all so unerringly reminiscent of scenes that are regularly played out in many homes, that they must strike chords of deja vu. Others in the cast of exceptional note are Sylvia Sidney as the pithy mother and Dori Brenner as the overweight daughter.

Yet these moments cannot rescue a film which does not reach a viable, dramatic conclusion. In Bergman's work, one felt that the main character had finally achieved inner peace. In Cates' film, one doesn't feel anything except disbelief that the film maker did not tie the whole thing together. Had he been able to, "Summer Wishes, Winter Dreams" might have come closer to complementing Bergman's film.

New recruits upstage spring football

No one ever gets too excited over spring football.

At MSU, the fans haven't been too excited over spring ball — or fall football, for that matter — for five or six years now.

This spring is no exception. The Green and White intrasquad game traditionally winds up spring drills and assures the alumni that State will field a promising team in the fall. This year, there is no Green and White game.

Ostensibly, the reason is that the new AstroTurf being installed in the stadium is a long way from completion. Deep down, the coaches were never very excited over the prospect of going through the formality of the Green and White game anyway. It really is not crucial to the completion of spring drills and there is always the chance that someone may get hurt.

Thus, the AstroTurf arrived at a convenient time.

Then coach Denny Stolz said Monday that there would not even be a final Saturday scrimmage of the same type he has been holding each Saturday since spring drills started.

Instead, MSU will now finish spring drills unceremoniously after Thursday night's practice. No fanfare. No hoopla.

There is something else, though, which has upstaged this spring football season.

That is the recruiting job Stolz and Co. did this past year and it has plenty of Spartan follower's mouths watering.

Make no mistake about it, MSU latched on to a load of coals among the high school talent it sought.

High school all-Americans aren't that easy to get, simply because the competition is so vicious. Stolz' crew came up with five prep all-Americans. And they have some credentials you will not believe.

I had heard about Ted Bell, a tailback from Youngstown, Ohio, all last year. He gained over 4,000 yards in high school.

Over 200 schools were after him. You just naturally assume that the Ohio States, the Notre Dames, the football powers — anybody but Michigan State — would have the lock on him. Southern Cal even used O.J. Simpson to try and land him.

But Bell is coming to Michigan

State. So is Claude Geiger, another all-American from Charleston, W. Va. Geiger has incredible speed and is a tailback, going 6-2 and 180 pounds.

They also tabbed an all-American defensive end from Virginia, Larry Bethea, who is 6-6 and weighs 250 pounds and was being hawked by everyone. Paul Rudzinsky, a big fullback from Detroit Catholic Central and Bill Brown, a 6-5, 250-pound offensive tackle from McKeesport, Pa. are also coming here.

And there are more. Most of the 24 others recruited by MSU are, according to some of the coaches, better athletes, perhaps, than some of the ballyhooed all-Americans that have decided to come here.

MSU almost had the big name in Michigan, too. Gary Forystek, the talented quarterback from Dearborn Divine Child, had narrowed his choices to Notre Dame and Michigan State. The story goes that Forystek's father won out, and Forystek chose to join the Irish where he will be the likely successor to Tom Clements.

But here's the interesting thing. Forystek was the plum as everyone agreed. Stolz and his staff decided they were going after three quarterbacks this year — Forystek, Frank Angelo from Hubbard, Ohio, and Ed Smith from Pittsburgh, Pa.

Guess where Smith and Angelo are coming to school?

Last year the ranks were hopelessly depleted. So, you have to look at things like recruiting. And it appears they have done a remarkable job this year of replenishing the stock here.

What accounts for it?

No doubt about it, Stolz and his crew did a tireless job of recruiting this year. Duffy Daugherty always said that was the toughest job in coaching. It is positively grueling. But the MSU staff went at it like there was not tomorrow — and for MSU's football program there really isn't.

The other device they used, you can bet, was some honest logic. Freshmen have a chance to play at MSU immediately. And that makes sense to a high school kid who doesn't like the thought of having to sit three-deep on a bench for even a year.

And, believe it or not, this old campus of ours sells more prospects than you would believe. Esthetes impress athletes, too.

Fred Kowitz sits in the seat of his hang glider before he takes a few quick steps and hopefully glides up into the air. Kowitz is trying to organize a hang gliding club at MSU because he says he is the only one he knows who participates in the sport. A meeting has been arranged for those interested in organizing the club at 7 p.m. Thursday in 205C Wells Hall. Kowitz, a senior from Southgate, built his own glider a year ago.

Active MSU hang glider wants to start local club

Attention those of you who participate or are interested in the sport of hang gliding. Fred Kowitz is looking for you.

Kowitz, 4634 S. Hagadorn Road, is looking for people interested in starting a hang gliding club at MSU.

"I'd like to get together with some people interested in helping get a loose-knit club organized," Kowitz, a senior from Southgate, said. "I'm the only one I know who is doing it here."

A meeting has been set for 7 p.m. Thursday in 205C Wells Hall for those interested in starting the club.

The person operating a hang glider takes his "kite" to the top of a hill. From there it requires five or six quick steps running down the hill and directly into the wind to get the craft into the air.

"The sport has a lot of challenge to it," Kowitz commented. "It contradicts the 'if man were meant to fly, he'd have wings' saying. Flying gives you a feeling of weightlessness."

Karate club hosts tourney

Over 400 contestants from the Midwest and Canada will be on hand Saturday when the MSU Karate Club hosts the eighth annual MSU Open Karate Tournament.

Eliminations in 22 divisions will begin at noon in the Sports Arena of the Men's Intramural Building and the finals will begin at 7 p.m. Competition will be held for Pee Wee, Juniors, Women, White, Green, Brown and Black belts. There will also be team competition for Pee Wee's, White, Green and Brown belts.

The finals will feature championships in each fighting division and demonstrations of self defense, Kenda and board-breaking.

Admission is $1 for students and $2 for nonstudents for the entire day.

Of particular interest among the participants will be 220-pound Detroit black belt, Everett "Monster Man" Eddy. He is currently ranked third in the nation and is a two-time MSU Open champion. Several other regionally ranked black belts will also be competing.

The MSU brown belt team of Tom Tripplett, Lance Hazard and Joe Newman should have a solid chance of winning the Brown belt team championship and MSU Black Belt Ed Oliver should do well in the Lightweight Black Belt division.

The host MSU Karate Club is the oldest and largest university karate club in the Midwest. It was founded in 1962 with only eight members and has steadily grown to its present size of 250 students. The club functions under the auspices of the intramural department and is open to all students.

MSU fighters have compiled an impressive tournament record over the past few years by winning state titles in every belt division.

Assistant coach at Ohio college to join MSU staff

Ronald Chismar, an asst. football coach at Bowling Green State University since 1970, will become an assistant on the MSU grid staff.

His appointment was announced by Athletic Director Burt Smith subject to the approval of the board of trustees.

Chismar, 39, will work with the Spartan offensive line and brings a rich Ohio football background with him to East Lansing.

At Bowling Green State, Chismar has been offensive coordinator and offensive backfield coach for three years after serving as head freshman coach in 1970.

From 1965 through 1969, he was head coach at McKinley High School in Canton, Ohio, originally joining that staff as an assistant in 1964. He was also an assistant at Canton South High School from 1961 through 1963.

Highlights of the McKinley High School stint were his selection as Ohio Co-Coach of the Year and Stark County Coach of the Year in 1969.

Chismar is a 1961 graduate of Kent State University with a B.S. degree in education. He earned an M.S. degree in health and physical education at University of Akron in 1969.

Chismar is married, and he and his wife, Joanne, have two sons and one daughter.

Club sports—still misunderstood

By STAN STEIN and JO GALLI

The recent controversy over the use of already crowded tennis courts by the new MSU Tennis Club has brought to light the fact that there is a need to explain exactly what club sports are and why they exist.

Club sports are one of three intramural sports facets — the others being formal and informal participation — that are under the guidance of Russell Rivet, associate director of men's intramural sports. There are over 40 clubs which encompass approximately 5,000 students and faculty, staff and even a few community members.

The objective of club sports, as explained by Rivet, is to give both men and women students a chance to expand upon an interest or skill in sports not included in the varsity intercollegiate program or the regular intramural program.

"We don't encourage clubs, they happen," said Rivet. "They are basic grass roots organizations which come together due to student interest."

Rivet stressed that almost 50 per cent of the total club membership is women, and also that the clubs are almost entirely self-supporting with membership completely open to everyone. Most members are students, who are given first priority, and the rest are mainly people from the faculty and staff who are full members, though they have no voting privileges in election of officers.

According to Rivet, club sports preceded varsity sports. Though not formally organized until the 1940s, fraternities played football at the club level at the turn of the century before it became a varsity sport. After the varsity program became established, the intramural program evolved.

Intramural sports officials say that forming a club is not all that difficult.

"First of all, students develop an interest in a certain activity and decide they might have enough interest from the student body to form a club," said intramural sports Director Frank Beeman.

"They come to Russ (Rivet) or myself. We hear them out and usually suggest that they put a note in the 'It's Whats Happening' column, announcing that there will be a meeting for all interested people," he continued.

"If there is enough support to warrant forming a club, the students involved elect officers and draw up a constitution. We then advise them to register their club with Eldon Nonnamaker at the Office of Student Affairs," concluded Beeman.

There is no direct flow of funds from the Intramural Sports Department to the clubs, though unusual sports such as lacrosse (now a varsity sport) and cricket were allocated minor funding for the initial purchase of equipment.

The main financial support comes from membership fees, which range from $3 to $15 per term. This money is spent on equipment, upkeep and travel expenses for these clubs which meet outside competition.

The recent outbreak of controversy involving club sports came from non-members who felt the priorities given some of the clubs are unfair to the general student who either cannot afford to join the club or wishes to participate only on an informal basis.

The MSU Tennis Club, for example, has certain priorities which include use of both indoor and outdoor tennis courts during specifically defined time periods. The Paddleball, Badminton, Judo and Karate Clubs also use Intramural Building facilities, as do the Rugby, Squash, Volleyball and Weightlifting clubs.

"Our business is to cut the IM pie into so many pieces, and we decide how to cut it based on the best interest of the students," said Carol Harding, associate intramural sports director.

"Clubs are allocated space because they teach more variety of skills than the Health, Physical Education, and Recreation (HPR) Dept. offers," said Beeman.

He exemplified this by mentioning that the Sport Parachuting Club, Rugby Football Club and the Sailing Club, as well as many others, teach sports not available through University courses.

"Club sports are important because one of their purposes is to teach," said Beeman.

Most of the teaching is done by club members who are advanced in knowledge or skill in their particular sport. These instructors are not paid, but stress teaching beginners and those less skilled as a primary objective.

Some of the clubs work extra hours in exchange for privileges.

The MSU Tennis Club is allocated the use of seven courts, five days a week, between the time the varsity team leaves and the lights are turned out. Hours also include courts on Saturdays from 9-11 p.m. and Sundays from 9 a.m. until noon.

"The hours given to the Tennis Club are not permanent," said Beeman. "We are just trying to see if it warrants the court space we have allocated. We are trying to best use the facilities we have."

The Weightlifting Club has its own room in the Men's Intramural Building and, according to officials, this is legitimate. They contend that much of the equipment now in use came from an informal club which used to work out in Jenison Fieldhouse, before the Men's Intramural Building was built.

They donated the equipment to the University and it was combined with other weightlifting equipment. Members of the club now supervise their area full time and have found a unique niche in their small busy room.

Many clubs, such as Crew, Soaring and Sailing Clubs, use facilities which are several miles from campus and don't hinder the use of Intramural Building facilities at all.

Apparently, the unifying element in club sports is in the group itself.

"There seems to be more longevity in sports if there is a club association," said Harding.

"There is a sense of community which otherwise wouldn't exist. I believe that this, combined with teaching, serves as ample justification for the space they use," she added.

This allocation of space is not set on a permanent basis.

"We are continually shifting our policies," stated Beeman. "We even modify our schedule weekly to try and eliminate any discrepancy between use of space by club sports and by the general student."

State sports hall of fame set to induct coach Bibbs

MSU asst. track coach Jim Bibbs will be inducted today into the Michigan Amateur Sports Hall of Fame in a ceremony in Warren.

Bibbs was one of 19 persons chosen this year by a 17-member panel which scans 43 amateur sports in the state to select athletes and administrators for distinguished service.

A member of MSU's coaching staff since 1968, Bibbs assists head coach Fran Dittrich, working mainly with sprinters and hurdlers.

His track career began at Ecorse High School where he was an outstanding sprinter and long jumper. Bibbs earned three letters at Eastern Michigan University from 1949-1951 and was the Illinois Intercollegiate Athletic Conference (IAC) 100 and 220-yard champion in each of the seasons he competed. He led the Hurons to three consecutive IAC team titles during his collegiate career.

After getting a B.A. from EMU, Bibbs went on to earn a master's degree from Wayne State. He then became a physical education teacher in the Detroit school system. In 1964 he became track coach at Ecorse High School before coming to MSU.

Two former MSU stars are also among the Hall of Fame inductees. They are Olympic figure skater Virginia Baxter McKendrick and two-time Olympic hockey forward Weldon Olson.

Tom Gudelsky practices the form he and other members of the MSU men's tennis team used as they defeated Big Ten rival Purdue, 9-0, in a conference dual meet Monday. The match, played in Jenison Fieldhouse, saw the Spartans take all six singles and all three doubles matches. Gudelsky won his No. 6 singles match, 6-0, 6-4. Outstanding play was shown by No. 2 singles player, Joe Fodel, as he took his Boilermaker opponent, 6-1, 6-1, in straight sets. Rick Zabor, No. 5 singles, also put away his Purdue opponent in style with 6-2 and 6-0 wins. The victory over Purdue boosted MSU's Big Ten record to 3-4. State News photo by Bob Kaye

Bill to register vehicles passed

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

The Michigan House moved Monday to register the state's 10,000 off-road recreation vehicles (ORVs) and regulate their use on state lands.

On a 76-23 vote, the House passed legislation which would require ORVs, including dune buggies, motorcycles, amphibious vehicles and all-terrain vehicles, to be registered at a cost of $9 three years. Snowmobiles and vehicles not operated off highways, roads and streets would be exempt.

The legislation, sponsored by Rep. Loren D. Anderson, R-Grand Haven, is aimed at controlling ORV use on state land. Monies raised through registration would be used for the development of trails and areas for the use of ORVs, particularly in the vicinity of urban areas, for required policing and equipment and for a safety education program.

Currently, there are no ORV registration requirements and there have been reports of ORVs trespassing on state land used for other purposes and damaging the environment.

Supported by the Dept. of Natural Resources and several environmental groups, the bill should help to minimize conflicts between ORV users and other sportsmen.

"Some of the people, they want to throw them all out," said Anderson. "But that's not going to take care of the trespassing problem. If you register them, give them a place to play with their toys and charge a fee for use, then you can get a handle on this thing and control it."

Anderson compared the ORV registration fee to the camping and park fees paid by other motorists and campers.

If passed by the Senate, persons under 12 would not be permitted to operate ORVs and those under 16 would be permitted to drive the vehicles only under adult supervision.

Those operating ORVs on private land would not be subject to state registration.

Governing units OK CATA subsidy bids

The Capitol Area Transportation Authority's (CATA) subsidy requests for the coming fiscal year and current deficits were approved by Lansing City Council and Delta Township trustees Monday.

This brings the total of local governments agreeing to support the bus system to three out of the six asked to pay their share of $2,000 expected losses in 1974-75 and $131,000 costs until 1981.

East Lansing has been asked for just over $90,000, which Mayor Wilbur Brookover said Tuesday he expects the city will repay.

Though the initial city budget proposed by City Manager John Marche only allotted $36,000 for a CATA subsidy, Brookover said more taxes could always be levied.

Lansing approved its payment of over $474,000 by a 7-1 council vote. Councilman Terry McKane said the city should not have to pay any more until June of next year.

The East Lansing City Council has scheduled its final budget sessions for May 14.

Mark Miner aids Heidi Bleicher in signing up for the campuswide fast to aid starving Africans. The students will skip dinner and the University will reimburse the African Famine Relief Fund for the cost of the meals.

Students to fast to help Africans

By PAULA HOLMES
State News Staff Writer

Over 250 Phillips Hall residents joined forces with a student coordinating committee in kicking off a drive, Monday night, to aid starving West African nations. The students agreed to participate in a fast May 23. They will skip their dinner and the University will reimburse the African Famine Relief Fund for the cost of the foodstuffs of each meal.

"MSU's administration will reimburse us for each missed meal if we get 30 per cent of the students in any residence hall to participate in the fast," Betru Gebregziabher, a member of the committee, said. The committee must present the names of all the students participating in the fast to the University officials on Monday in order to be reimbursed.

The fast is part of a series of fund raising projects which included the benefit of showing of a movie and a famine workshop.

Over the last six years a severe drought has affected an area of Africa about the size of the United States, causing a widespread famine on the west side of the continent.

In the countries of Ethiopia, Senegal, Mauritania, Mali, Upper Volta, Niger and Chad with a total population of 50 million people, one million have died of starvation and disease in the last six and 30 million have been severely afflicted. In 1973 alone 100,000 people died of starvation and over one-third of all livestock in the area died.

"We were pretty successful at Phillips," said Pat Murray, a committee member. "We got over 30 per cent of the dorm to sign up."

A similar drive was run two years ago to aid the people of Bangladesh. Over $5,000 was collected.

The money collected for the African Famine Relief fund will be used for food and transportation costs by relief agencies such as the United Nations and church organizations.

Phillips Hall residents had varying opinions about the fast but most were in favor of it.

"I signed up because I felt that the media hasn't covered the situation very well and I could do my part by fasting," Julie Halla, 234 Phillips Hall, freshman said.

"I didn't sign up for the fast because he (Gebregziabher) didn't seem sincere in his presentation," said Cindy Wagner, 205 Phillips Hall, sophomore. "I guess it wasn't a cause I believed in."

Murray said that the committee will not be going to all of the residence halls but will try to get a large percentage of people in each hall they visit to participate in the fast.

"We hope that interested people in each hall will continue to sign up others after the committee has left," she said.

If students are interested in participating in the fast but have not been able to sign up they can call the Center for Peace and Conflict Resolution at the United Ministries for Higher Education.

"It's mainly an educational problem for this relief fund," said Warren Day of the peace center. "Once people hear about it then they will become concerned."

Contribution can also be sent to the African Famine Relief fund, account number 5-03040-2 at the East Lansing State Bank.
