MICHELE BURGEN State News Staff Writers

This term MSU students lost over $200,000. The loss did not result from theft or bad investments. Between 5,500 and 6,000 students lost money because they dropped a class after registration.

Since fall term 1972, students who drop a class during the first five days of the term have only received a 50 per cent refund of their tuition money. After that period there is no refund.

From 1969 to 1972 a 100 per cent refund policy was in effect. Before 1969, while MSU tuition was assessed on a block fee structure and not a per credit hour basis, students were given a 50 per cent

The block fee structure was utilized at MSU until 1969. Students paid tuition based on a group of three credits. Less than six credits amounted to about $30 per credit hour, while seven through 20 credits pro - rate to about $10 per credit

This term 14,177 classes were dropped. If all these classes were only 2 credits, that means at least $226,832 was not refunded.

MSU is the only major school in the state that only has a 50 per cent refund policy. A State News survey shows that all have 100 per cent refund policies: the University of Michigan, Wayne State University, Oakland University at Rochester, Eastern Michigan University, Western Michigan University and Central Michigan University.

The reasons for this policy are rooted in a maze of general University fiscal woes, alleged political pressures and possible backlash because of student protests.

University officials, including Stephen Terry, asst. vice president for finance, Elliot Ballard, assistant to the president and Jack Breslin, executive vice president, Terry said a $1 tuition hike would be needed for every successive year a 100 per cent refund policy existed.

Members of the legislative committees reduce MSU's funds.

The lawmakers point out that a 1973 court of appeals decision made universities legally autonomous and affirmed that universities can spend state appropriations in any way they choose. The court ruled that universities are not bound by any strings the legislature would attach to Additionally, MSU officials say they do not have enough money to give students a total refund.

For example, in 1974 classes added after registration consistently exceeded classes dropped.

1974 Classes Added Classes Dropped 14,501 12,518 3,179 16,431 14,177

These figures also reflect the 500 to 900 students who go through late processing drops. Virginia Angell, an assistant registrar, said that because so many different offices are involved in the drop process a cost accounting is impossible.

Ballard commented on the cost of processing drops.

"It costs a dime to mail a check back," he said. "Why waste a dime?"

MSU currently mails the 50 per cent refunds to students.

Furthermore, administrators argue that the dollars for refunding tuition money that a student has already paid must come from someplace else, because even if a student drops a class, MSU's operating costs are the same. The seat vacated by the student will probably not be filled unless the class is highly demanded, they say.

Ballard said that when the 100 per cent refund policy existed he defended it. When the legislature began the threat to fought to keep the 100 per cent refund

"MSU got away with it (100 per cent refund policy) for two years before the legislature figured out, 'We gotta save some money,' "Ballard said.

Ballard said that if students want $15 per credit hour back, then they would have to pay $16 per credit hour to begin

"There just isn't enough money," he Breslin, MSU's liaison with the legislature, also said the legislature made the University abandon a 100 per cent refund policy.

"The legislature triggered all of this," he said.

He claimed that one of the underlying reasons the policy was abandoned was because students dropped too many classes and the University could not keep (continued on page 17)

Lawmakers back refunds

Most of the University officials who have the power or the influence to change the current refund policy were either noncommittal or would not comment when queried about possible action for the future.

However, key members of the Michigan House and Senate appropriations committees were generally optimistic and willing to look at MSU's budget to see if implementing a 100 per cent refund would be economically feasible. Senator - elect Earl Nelson, D - Lansing said: "If there were certain legislators who put pressure on MSU, then let the University officials who claim this expose it. Those legislators will be in hot water. If there has been pressure, and I doubt that there has or was, then let those who feel they have been pressured bring it to the attention of their local elected officials, namely myself and Lynn Jondahl and we will look into this matter fully.

Lt. Gov. - elect James Damman said: "A good case can be made for a 100 per cent refund policy. I don't think there should be an inconsistency from one institution to the next. I don't think MSU's policy is a wise one." Damman has been on the

"If I were made aware of this situation at MSU, I would check it," said Rep. Melvin DeStigter, R - West Olive, a member of the House committee since 1968. "I don't see how I could justifiably demand that MSU abandon a 100 per cent refund policy if they reinstated it. I don't think a school should be taking money for a service they are not serving.'

William Copeland, R - Wyandotte, lameduck chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, said that even though he will be out of the legislature by the end of the year, he would check up on it.

"I don't think the policy is fair," he said. "I have been on this committee for 14 years, seven as chairman, and I have never heard of any pressure put on MSU by the legislature in regard to

Sen. Garland Lane, D . Flint, said a return to the 100 per cent refund would not cause any legislative backlash in the form of reduced appropriations. "We certainly wouldn't do anything to cut their money." he

Sen. Robert Davis, R - Gaylord, said that the refund policy is a bad one and discounted any legislative reprisals should the policy be changed back to 100 per cent refund. "We certainly wouldn't reprimand them for making their policy consistent with that of other universities," he said. Other appropriations committee members who favor and would recommend a return to a 100 per cent refund policy are: Rep. James Farnsworth, R - Holland; Rep. Gary Owen, D -

At present there are 1,754 students on food stamps as compared to 2,354 the previous year.

Joseph Barberi, asst. county prosecutor, attributed the decrease to the announcement of an investigation in "The major reason for this probe was to keep persons off welfare rolls who don't belong there," Barberi said. "This will assure that those who are actually in need are provided for."

Roxy Keller said the Isabel County investigation is continuing. She expects more warrants to be issued before it ends. None of the three CMU students were available for comment.

"Hey Joe! I hear you have a 3.0 GPA this term. That fantastic. How did you manage that?" "It was real tough, I tell ya. I had to give up almost all my dates at the malt shop with Betty Lou.' Getting a 3.0 grade point average

(GPA) today is not considered tough at all by most, but in the late '50s and the early '60s, college students would have considered it a definite accomplishment. While MSU's average undergraduate GPA in fall term of 1960 was a 2.34, the average in spring term 1974 was a 2.85. MSU undergraduates had their best term in spring 1970 with an average GPA of

According to a national survey by an MSU professor, this trend of grade inflation is occurring in colleges and unversities all over the country. "I have never seen anything so pervasive," said Arvo Juola, who conducted the study last summer. "This is university, large or small, public or private, and in every geographic area." Juola, who is the acting chairman of MSU Evaluation Services, surveyed 134 institutions for his

A few professors speculated that the inflation may be leveling off, but they agreed the GPAs are amazingly high.

At Harvard University and Radcliffe College, the number of students graduating with honors (3.0 GPA or

But evidence shows students are not necessarily getting smarter. Average scores on college board Scholastic Aptitude Tests (SAT) have declined from a high of 973 in 1963 to 918 in 1973 (out of a possible

While Juola is conducting further analyses to discover why GPAs have risen, he and other professors are offering some hypotheses.

A few claim that students are better prepared, but others admit they have relaxed their stringent grading policies of the early '60s.

Juola believes the gradual rise in GPAs from 1960 to 1968 was a readjustment from the harsh grading standards used after the Soviet Union launched the Sputnik satellite in 1957. In the post -Sputnik period, criticism of American higher education made GPAs plummet.

However, those harsh grading policies eventually disappeared, Juola said, and the GPAs of the early '60s began to rise.

The most dramatic increases in GPAs occurred in 1968 through 1970 which Juola noted paralleled the period of student activism and protests against the

Watergate jury told of cash fund offer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Former Haldeman and John D. Ehrlichman they were leaving the White House could have $200,000 to 10,000 from a special cash fund, the lergate coverup trial jury was told

The money came from people who had tived favored treatment from the administration.

aldeman and Ehrlichman, both andants in the coverup trial, resigned as on's top aides in April 1973, in the of a series of accusations that high House officials had attempted to White House and Nixon re - election involvement in the 1972

Haldeman, under cross - examination, admitted that the offer was made several times but that he did not accept it. He said he resented the implication that was being left with the jury. Prosecutor Richard Ben - Veniste disclosed the offer by asking Haldeman:

"Is it not a fact that in a conversation between you and President Nixon, President Nixon told you that there was a fund that could be made available to you after you leave the White House, for your benefit and expenses, $200,000 to $300,000 that somehow was provided by persons who were given favored treatment over the years?" Haldeman replied. "I recall a general conversation like that."

Ben - Veniste then read from a transcript of a conversation Nixon had with Haldeman and Ehrlichman on April 17. 1973 - less than two weeks before their resignations - in which Nixon said that giving them the money would be "no strain, it doesn't come out of me, I never intended to use the money." Ben - Veniste said the offer "tends to show there was an agreement" that Nixon, Haldeman and Ehrlichman would all protect each other.

Questioned by U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica about the materiality of bringing up that conversation, Ben - Veniste said that under the agreement "Haldeman went up to the Senate Select (Watergate) committee and continued the coverup.

He said it tended to show that the Haldeman and Ehrlichman knew Nixon would "help them financially if they needed it."

It brought protests from both defendants' lawyers and Ben - Veniste said "I never said it was accepted . . . they all understood it in this context."

At that point Haldeman spoke up and said that "it seems to me a highly unsavory connotation" had been raised.

He said the offer was in a conversation two days after Nixon had been told by Asst. Atty. Gen. Henry E. Petersen that the Justice Dept. felt it had "information embarassing to Mr. Ehrlichman and me it came out.

"The President did discuss that with us and as a result suggested we retain legal counsel," Haldeman said.

William S. Frates, Ehrlichman's lawyer, shouted "we are not trying the President of the United States" in this courtroom.

Earlier, Haldeman conceded that he and Nixon talked about "pre - empting" what former White House Counsel John W. Dean III might tell the Senate Watergate committee about presidential discussions of hush money and clemency for the Watergate burglars. But Haldeman and Ben - Veniste differed on the definition of "pre empting."

The word came up several times in mid - April 1973 discussions Haldeman had with Nixon at a time when Dean, the former White House counsel, had talked to prosecutors and staff members of the Senate Watergate Committee. Their investigation was then getting under way.

"Do you know what pre - empt meant?" Ben - Veniste asked Haldeman, who was testifying in his own behalf for the fourth day at the Watergate coverup trial.

"To deal with the situation," Haldeman said. "Weren't you talking about minimizing Dean's testimony?" Ben - Veniste pressed. "What did the President mean in that conversation?"

Again Haldeman said he presumed it meant to deal with the situation.

Consumer gas prices rise

The Federal Power Commission Wednesday set a price for new supplies of natural gas that is nearly double the current average price.

The effect of the order, assuming it survives expected court challenges, will be a gradual rise in consumer prices for natural gas in years to come.

Tunisia may release hijackers

A reliable Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) source in Cairo said Wednesday that Tunisia will hand over to the PLO for trial four gunmen who hijacked a British airliner and killed a West German passenger.

The source said Tunisian President Habib Bourguiba and other officials had been persuaded to change their minds on refusing to release the four Palestinians.

The owners of East Lansing's bars will divert their attention from the cash register to the courtroom early next year when the city takes on its first court case against a bar for overcrowding.

"We'll be watching the Alle - Ey case closely, as every bar owner in East Lansing will when it comes to court," said Gary Foltz, manager of Dooley's.

Foltz and his cohorts will be following the case that pairs the city off against the owners of the Alley - Ey for allowing over 563 people into the Alle - Ey, 150 beyond its 413 fire capacity set by the city.

Foltz is especially interested, since he and the manager of the Alle - Ey have disputed the limits set by the city since their openings in the past two years.

Les Turner, attorney representing the Alle - Ey owners, George and Louis Eyde, said that the city's interpretation of capacity limits will be the basis for Eyde's plea of innocence in the case.

Turner said East Lansing fire officials have unfairly arrived at capacity limits by excluding dance floors and areas surrounding the bar and cafeteria when determining the bar's square footage.

"Whatever is resolved, it's going to effect all the other bars in the city." Turner said.

"It bothers me, though, that the city has picked my client as the test case for who's right and who's wrong in this dispute over interpretation of the building code," Turner added.

Fire Marshal Berman Prether, who is influential in determining capacity figures, said bar owners want to use "everything from store rooms to kitchens in determining square footage for Prether maintains that the East Lansing fire code is not more stringent than codes in other cities, while Alle - Ev owners and their attorney believe the local code is stricter than the state's.

Both the state and the local code require 15 square feet per person, but neither specify which areas in the bar should be included or excluded for counting, other than storage areas, which cannot be counted.

Interested observers will have to bide their time, however, for a decision in the case, since no trial date has been set by the East Lansing's chief court administrator Frank Russell expects a pretrial date to be set in January or February, with the trial following within three months.

Larry Thomas, owner - manager of Lizard's said be would be pleased if capacity limits are raised because of the court case.

"But I don't think it's fruitful to fight the city," Thomas said.

The owners of the Alle - Ey, who could be fined up to $600 if found guilty of violating the capacity limits, could also be denied renewal of their liquor license when the city considers renewal next year.

"If East Lansing wins the case, I don't think we'll have any problem being granted a renewal," Turner said. "But I'm sure that once this disagreement has been decided, Dooley's, Lizard's and the Alle Ey will all have to live within the interpretation and anyone that doesn't will be jeopardizing their license."

Foltz, who has admitted to frequent overcrowding in Dooley's in the past, said he expected the Alle - Ey will present a "helluva strong case."

"Our capacity is dramatically understated because of the city's interpretation," Foltz said. "I'd guess every bar in East Lansing has a potentially greater capacity than indicated."

dealing with the current auto slump in Michigan. Today labor union attitudes are examined.

By FRED NEWTON State News Staff Writer

Faced with more than 200,000 worker layoffs, United Auto Workers (UAW) officials are fighting a two - pronged battle in the current auto slump.

The UAW cites lack of federal leadership both in the White House and Congress, along with business profit gouging, as the major reasons for auto sales declining to near depression levels.

Don Ellis, regional director of UAW Region 1-C (Flint) said overall economic direction is needed for the entire country.

"It is stupid - there is no one giving any economic direction. Everybody is working in their own little vacuum," Ellis

"It is also a tragedy that inflation hits the workers first," he said. "You don't see the rich not buying cars. Cadillacs are still big sellers - and guess who is buying

UAW officials see the federal government as fighting inflation, but ignoring unemployment.

The Michigan unemployment rate is 8 per cent and seems to be increasing daily. "The tragedy of unemployment has been touching about 50 million people per year, when we count the members of worker's families," UAW President Leonard Woodcock said.

The union prefers a staggered production and manpower cut back to reduce the unemployment impact and to help stabilize a troubled economy.

"It makes no sense to expect people to buy when they're out of work or fearful of losing their jobs," Woodcock said. The December issue of Solidarity, the

UAW newspaper, said the auto companies raised prices unnecessarily to grab a larger share of profits but it resulted in less car

"The auto companies do not measure success in forms of sales," Ellis said. "They have a policy of setting profit aims two years in advance - and they try everything to make those profits."

UAW officials agree with management that federal monetary policy should be They also agree with the auto companies that the auto emission and safety standards be laxed for a while. 'We have asked the federal government for a review of auto standards," a UAW spokesman said.

Ellis said that 80 - 85 per cent of American car buyers do not use most of the safety equipment they are supposed

Woodcock has put part of the blame of inflation and slumping sales on the oil companies and oil crisis last winter. "The oil companies had the country in frenzy over the oil shortage and increased profits - where is the shortage now?" Ellis said. "We must demand that the new Congress put an excess profits tax on oil companies to take back the monopoly profits the companies have taken from the American hide," Woodcock said.

He then urged a rollback in petroleum prices saying that oil company profits were exceptionally high.

Laid - off UAW employes are presently receiving 95 per cent of their pay from the Supplemental Unemployment Benefit

Some of the auto company's SUB funds, however, have very little money left to pay the workers.

"The General Motors SUB fund is only 17% full," UAW vice president Irving Bluestone said. "We are definitely in a crisis state."

The UAW officials see the situation in the auto industry at a depression level. "Compared proportionally to the past, the auto industry is in a definite depression," a UAW spokesman said.

Woodcock labeled the increasing unemployment as "social dynamite" and the country out of the present crises.

Most UAW officials are pessimistic about the coming year.

"We are trying to be realistic and a solution may not be found for at least another year," a UAW official said. The union believes that both government and business are to blame for the current economic slump. Union officials agree federal guidance is needed to pull the country and the sagging auto industry out of the present slump. "The United States will be dragged into a depression unless quick turnaround is found for the economy," Woodcock

ENROLLED IN MSU CLASS

Woman loves wrestling

By PEGGY GOSSETT

State News Staff Writer What can you say about a 19 - year old woman who has a passion for wrestling, one of the last all - male sports frontiers? That she knows how to keep score. That she understands which wrestler is winning when both are intricately lashed together in the cradle hold. That she knows exactly where the thumb should be placed in a pin. Currently enrolled in Beginning

Wrestling, she is the only woman ever to take a wrestling class at MSU. "I know all the rules and theory, but you must actually wrestle to really know the sport, so I took the class," said Martha Penn, a sophomore majoring in physical education. Penn was manager of her high school wrestling team in Battle Creek. She has been involved with the sport since her girlfriend, who had six brothers on the team, took her to a meet four years ago. But Penn does not wrestle with any of her all - male classmates, though participation has previously been a requirement for the class. "We made an exception in this case," said Stan Dziedzic, wrestling instructor. "She tried, but could not convince any other women to take the class, and we cannot require her to wrestle with the Penn does not feel out of place with the sweating, suited - up wrestlers grappling for a winning score on the plastic mats. At first her male classmates would not speak to her, Penn said. "They were not snotty. They just did not know what to say," she said. "But after the first few classes we started joking around. Things started loosening up.' She said Dziedzic, who is also an assistant wrestling coach, never calls her name when he calls role.

"I am the last name on the role, and everyone seems to know if I am there or not. Stan just looks at me and smiles." At one class, Penn was able to show her classmates how to score wrestling. Last wrestling season she was a regular scorekeeper at the MSU intercollegiate meets. "Now my classmates have just accepted me being in the class," Penn said. However, Penn has not infiltrated the wrestling world without frustration.

Her parents have always worried about her getting hurt, both emotionally and physically, so Penn has not told them she is taking the class, though they know about her constant enthusiasm and scoring at meets last year.

"Dad hates it," Penn said. "He doesn't understand why I love the sport. I guess he thought when I graduated from high school my wrestling fetish would graduate,

"Of course there are the stupid sexual jokes now and then, but for the most part I have a good rapport with the wrestlers. "I'm not in it to marry a wrestler. I'm in it for myself.

"I realize there are a lot of holds I can't do that a man can, but there are a lot of holds I can do.'

Penn had hoped to do more in wrestling than just holds before she came to MSU. When she was still an unassuming that office and told him I was Martha H. Penn," she said. However, Martha H. Penn was denied the position because she was Martha and not Mike or Malcolm or Mark. Peninger said a woman definitely cannot be manager of the team.

"I cannot have her going into the locker room," he said. "It would be one person going in, and ten men being embarrassed.' Peninger just laughed when informed woman, and goes right into the training "That is progressive of Yale, among other things," he said. "But I don't want my guys to have to change their mode of behavior or dress in order to have a woman manager.

"I have no personal animosity against her. I think it is great she is taking the class. More women should, but I think it would be a good idea for them to have another woman sign up as a partner. "I still like girls nice and soft, not bruised and black, though." Martha H. Penn is not bruised or blackened or beaten. She still hopes for a managerial position, and will continue her activities as scorer and member of the wrestling Take - Down Club. "Some people call this an obsession." she said. "I am not in it to make waves or push any liberation causes.

"Like I said, I am in it for me."

EDITORIALS Media board must set allocation guidelines

Problems with appropriations by the Student Media Appropriations Board (SMAB) seem to stem from a basic lack of organization.

Dan Dever, present chairman of the interim appropriations board, said the board has allocated most of this term's funds without having a set of guidelines on how distribution of the funds should be done. ASMSU president Tim Cainadmits the student government should have made all its permanent appointments to the board a long time ago and that funds have been appropriated late this term because of ASMSU's delay in getting the board together.

It seems illogical that the SMAB board should start appropriating funds before developing a set of guidelines controlling the allocations. Yet SMAB was under pressure to dole out fall term's funds, and received little guidance for distribution from ASMSU or from Article X of the ASMSU constitution, which established SMAB and the media appropriations fund.

Before, any money is allocated by SMAB the board should develop answers to some basic questions concerning its nature. For instance, should the board be concerned with establishing new alternative media or should it throw most of its monetary support behind media which are already established?

Should the board provide money for salaries and other costs which are not directly related to turning out the basic media product?

How much fund money should go to print media and how much money should go to broadcast media?

Should the board allocate money to media to pay outstanding debts?

What basic procedure will the board follow to judge applications for aid? What criteria will the board use to analyze the relative worth of applications?

Should the board audit media to which it gives funds and what procedure will be used in the audits?

All these questions and others must be answered before the media board allocates anymore funds. There will never be any end to the list of complaints about SMAB's procedures unless the board acts to develop adequate allocation guidelines immediately.

Don't lock out artists for actions of vandals

Since the Art Dept. closed the Kresge Art Center for two nights this week as a deterent to a recent spate of vandalism, it has been deluged with justified complaints by angry art students. Art students pay fees at registration for use of the art building, as well as for the services of professors, and should not be locked out of the building near finals week, the most harried time of the academic year.

Creativity knows no hours. Art students are apt to want to work on projects in the middle of the night. If the building is locked up, how can students follow their creative whims?

The average East Lansing apartment or MSU residence hall room is not large enough to hold the collection of easels and art supplies which many art students require. Students have a need for free access at any time to their tools and to immovable equipment such as welding tools, ceramic wheels and kilns located in Kresge. Kresge's facilities are overcrowded now. Usually during the final week of school at least 24 art students per night use the facilities during late - night hours. If these students are forced to use Kresge during the day, the overcrowding might become unbearable.

College is not elementary school. Students do not file into their classrooms at 8 a.m. and file out at 3 p.m. There would be howls from all around the campus if the computer center were closed at odd hours during the final week of school, no matter what the reason.

It was unreasonable to "slap the hands" of all art students because of a little vandalism. Vandalism at the Kresge Art Center was not extensive enough to warrant a shutdown of the building. If the Art Dept. feels there is a serious long - term threat to the locks of doors from the ravages of vandals wielding epoxy glue, it should ask the Dept. of Public Safety to keep a closer watch on the building.

Business wolves merit no praise

By SARA ELGAMMAL

I was much intrigued by William Safire's article: "Support Wolves, Wolf Ethic." While I have no objection to wolves (since I am not a deer), I object to his attempted parallel of the recession to a wolf.

Wolves, says Safire, are beneficial because they weed out the weakest, oldest and sickliest members of a deer herd. He claims the "deer" to be inefficient businesses but tries to deny the application of his analogy to individual human beings: "Granted, groups of human beings are not herds of deer, with the old and weak to be left to recession's wolf... but the idea is the same: the predator's cruel function is necessary to enable the rest of the herd to grow healthy and fit."

However, the aptness of Safire's metaphor betrays him. The old and and weak are the first to perish in a severe recession. Can anyone suppose the rising unemployment figures indicate only that families of the unemployed are going to have to do without those "unnecessary extras" like food, clothing, and fuel? Who "eased the suffering" of the elderly couple whose heat was shut off last year because they could no longer afford to pay their utility bill? Death.

And why has the sale of canned pet food risen by two - thirds in the Detroit area and other metropolitan areas over the last few years? Is it because more urban SUGAR families are discovering the joy of owning a pet? Or is it because of massive layoffs in industry and soaring food prices? The aged, on pensions which were almost adequate in good times, face slow starvation unless they have friends or relatives to help them.

The real wolf is not recession.

Recession is a phenomenon, not concrete thing. The "wolves" in this care those "fit" corporations, those "w financed" monopolies who are rapi eliminating their smaller, weat competitors. This is not beneficial for economy, let alone for individual groof human beings.

The antiquated and discredited So Darwinism Safire advocates misrepress what is really going on in this so ca "survival of the fittest." The claim to the predator's cruel function is necess to enable the rest of the herd to ghealthy and fit" is misleading. Too of those who wish to draw parallels betwhuman and animal groups ascribe purp to animal behavior which are unfound Safire's wording would seem to make behavior of the wolf almost altruistic fact, his whole article fails to point that the real beneficiary from the death weak and aging deer is not the herd, the wolf.

Finally, the term "wolf ethic" is anomaly. Wolves do not have ethics, thave appetites. Animals have consciousness of good or evil, however defines those terms. Is our good to equated with victory of the strongest?

Revolutionary PR

A recent letter to the State News attacked Jeremy Rifkin and the People's Bicentennial Commission for supposedly proposing such banal Madison Avenue gimmicks as having a chain of people holding hands across the country, and singing "God Bless America."

If that sounds like a hokey television commercial that sells Pepsi - Cola, it's probably because that is exactly where the idea came from. It was the creation of Pepsi's advertising agency to sell guess

Jeremy Rifkin, one of the founders of the People's Bicentennial Commission, mentioned that example in a speech at MSU covered by the State News. Unfortunately, the news article failed to explain that Rifkin was in total opposition to this kind of corporate hype, which is an attempt to exploit the bicentennial. Rifkin attacked not only Pepsi, but the American Chamber of Commerce, red, white and blue Liberty Bells, Liberty Bell Burgers and several other darlings of the corporate mentality. He suggested that this was simply another attempt at obscuring the fact that this country was created in a truly revolutionary era by people much the same as ourselves.

The bigshots in government and business are a little bit concerned about talk of revolution these days, even when that talk is about the founding of this country. So they have undertaken a multimillion dollar publicity campaign to convince Americans that there never was a revolution in this country.

Enter Jeremy Rifkin and the People's Bicentennial Commission. They propose a re - evaluation of the principles that this country was in fact founded upon, and ask the question, does corporate America represent the high ideals that the founders fought and died for? We suggest that corporate America not hippies, blacks, women etc., has subverted those goals. The People's Bicentennial Commission is an alternative to the modern day Tories who are claiming that they are the rightful heirs of this nation's revolutionary struggle. In "America's Birthday" (the People's Bicentennial handbook) the authors suggest that we "must reassert the ideals that have driven Americans throughout our history to struggle for justice, equality and popular control of institutions.

If you believe this country was founded on something politically more important than selling cheap trinkets and creating hokey PR gimmicks, we invite you to help make 1976 a birthday party America will

U Thant eulogized

Informed and reflective people all over the world will meditate upon the recent death of U Thant.

For 10 years he served as Secretary General of the United Nations - "the world's most impossible public office." U Thant was much liked for his kindness and his delicate sense of humor, but not many will think of him as a brilliant or a great statesman. They won't, that is, unless they see wisdom and greatness in a lifetime of dependable gentleness and compassion, of unshakable truthfulness, of dependable patience in putting the truth tactfully to those who cannot bear to face it, and of driving oneself to the limits of physical endurance, year after year, to promote peace and advance the economic welfare of everyone, everywhere.

For some years before his final affliction with cancer, U Thant, like his magnificent undersecretary Ralph Bunche, had overworked himself to the point of ulcers and heart trouble, and had to be hospitalized repeatedly.

Quite possibly, death came to U Thant as a welcome release. Perhaps he felt its restfulness confirming his wise and rational Buddhist belief — a belief held widely nowadays by many nonreligious people, including the "scientific humanists" and others — that "life, inevitably, is sorrow," a sorrow that can be eased best (but only in part) by a lifetime divided between meditation and compassionate activities. U Thant did exactly that. He meditated daily in silence for 15 to 30 minutes, read widely, and

His proclamation was a prediction of my impending disillusionment. Even if the performance is not viewed as a prefabricated, nonflexible concert arrangement (which is purely my own opinion), I think those attending the Jenison Fieldhouse concert can amalgamate on one objective criticism.

This criticism is not an evaluation of the musical ability of the Mothers, but a commentary on the exceptionally excellent job that was done in holding a concert in a tin can. An objective evaluation of the Mothers' Nov. 23 concert is almost impossible, given the quality of the acoustic arrangements. I think Frank Zappa must also have shared our despair concerning the impotent facilities.

PIRGIM REPORTS: TOY SAFETY

Fewer harmful gifts on sale for kids of

By JOSEPH S. TUCHINSKY PIRGIM Staff Member

Whether it's Merry Christmas or Happy Chanukah, it's reassuring to know that the child for whom you buy toys can be merrier and happier because the toys are safe.

This wasn't always so. When Congress passed the Child Protection and Toy Safety Act of 1969, testimony was submitted of deaths and permanent injuries from hazards in toys not readily visible to the shopper.

In late 1972, when PIRGIM did its first survey of dangerous toys on sale in Michigan stores, nationwide statistics reported an estimated 900,000 injuries per year due to toys. That year, PIRGIM's student surveyors in five areas of Michigan found banned toys on sale in violation of federal law in over 40 per cent of the stores sampled. Toys with hazards for which the federal government hadn't even written standards were on sale in nearly all stores surveyed, a total of 295 unbanned dangerous toys in 29 stores.

PIRGIM's findings were dramatized on television and in newspapers, with pictures of dolls with their highly flammable clothing afire; arrows, whose "safety" tips easily came off, shot through eyes drawn on cardboard faces; rattles broken open when they were dropped on the floor, exposing sharp edges and small particles that could lodge in a baby's throat.

Stimulated in part by findings of PIRGIM and similar student - sponsored Public Interest Research Groups in other states, public awareness caused the federal government to step up its efforts. Enforcement power over toy safety was transferred to a new agency, the Consumer Product Safety Commission.

PIRGIM surveyors in the fall of 1973 found visible progress. Only four banned items were found on sale in 33 stores, and an additional 41 unbanned but hazardous items.

Two recent developments, a court ruling in Washington and a new law in Michigan, should continue the progress.

On Nov. 14, Judge Thomas A. Flannery of District of Columbia Federal District Court ruled that the government must issue regulations with general toy-safety standards, not react item - by-item as unsafe toys appear in stores.

The suit, Tuchinsky v. Consumer Product Safety Commission, was filed early in 1973 by attorney Arthur L. Fox II of Ralph Nader's Public Citizen Litigation Group, on my behalf as PIRGIM's executive director and as father of two young children exposed to toy hazards, as well as for other affected individuals and organizations.

Judge Flannery ruled that with 150,000 toys on the market, an item - by item approach would never accomplish Congress' intent to get the dangerous products off the market.

However, he refused to issue an order requiring the government to begin the rule — making process within 60 days. Government attorneys informed the court that the rules were already in preparation and would be proposed by the end of November. Taking note of the long delays already suffered since passage of the 1969 law, the judge agreed to wait the additional few weeks, but threatened that if the government didn't act by Dec. 9 he would reconsider issuing a court order.

would reconsider issuing a court order.

The regulations affected by Judge

Flannery's decision would fill in some, be not all, the gaps revealed by PIRGIM's to safety surveys.

By serving notice on to manufacturers, importers, distributors a retailers, and giving them detail guidelines to follow to avoid hidd dangers in children's toys, the regulations should continue progress making children's products safer.

The new regulations are important still another reason to Michig consumers.:

A toy safety bill, HB 5460, Vintroduced early in 1974 by Hol Majority Leader Bobby D. Crim, response to survey findings by the Genel County Prosecutor as well as PIRGIM. would give the Michigan Dept. Agriculture power to enforce fedetoy safety standards within Michigan.

Consumers who are dissatisfied withe slow response from the feder Consumer Product Safety Commission whose nearest office is in Cleveland, whave somewhere else to turn, closer home.

The bill was approved last winter the House of Representatives and, wi active lobbying by PIRGIM, was final reported out of Senate committee to Tuesday. By the time you read to column, the bill may have become law.

The new federal regulations to issued under Judge Flannery's decision when adopted by Michigan under its ne law, will further expand the state's power than the state's power is not be a state.

After over two years of efformation of the control of the control

So far this week it's been spine-tingling cold outside, but things are slated to warm up a little around Beaumont Tower at 7 Friday night. That's the time set for a State News bonfire. Fuel for the fire will be the SIRS forms that professors have been distributing this week. The fire will dramatize the fruitless nature of the long student struggle to gain access to professor's report cards. If you want to cheer or jeer your profs send them letters, but bring your SIRS to the bonfire.

At any rate, the need for cleaning up campaigns was made obvious. Outgoing state Sen. William Ballenger has taken a step in that direction by introducing a bill in the Senate that would give the now - powerless Fair Campaign Practices Commission the necessary strength to take dirty tricksters to task.

Unmuzzle state election watchdog

Ballenger's proposal would give the commission a budget for a staff, and the power to conduct hearings and impose fines. In addition, the bill would outlaw certain campaign practices now allowable under the campaign code, such as misrepresenting an opponent's positions or voting record.

The commission as it now exists is close to useless. It has no legal status and can enforce its decisions only with wet - noodle reprimands. During the recent campaign it became more of a haven for publicity hounds than a defender of clean campaigning.

The lame - duck state legislature may not have the time or the inclination to pass such an important bill before it adjourns. But Sen. William Faust has promised to reintroduce the bill to the new legislature in January. Gov. Milliken's office has also shown interest in similar reform.

It would be nice to be able to look nostalgically back on the 1974 election as the last one in which discussion of concrete issues was buried under an avalanche of irrelevant flimflamery.

In the very next sentence the writer said that those darned Indians should quite wasting food by allowing all those cattle over there to just run around until they drop dead. The writer further suggested that people need to learn to restrain themselves both from the gluttony of food and the gluttony of sex.

I think, however, that it is more important for the Pope Pauls, the Jerry Fords and the John Does to look point blank at a famine - stricken family and realize that there are hundreds of millions of other starving people like them and that, like it or not, they are not going to restrain themselves sexually. That means more mouths to feet with a limited food base, and that means ugly starvation.

VIEWPOINT: EVALUATIONS

Raters must face rated

By C. PATRIC LARROWE

Professor of economics

I'm in my office, writing a confidential letter of recommendation on a student who's applying to law school when I look up and here's this undergraduate standing in front of my desk.

"Don't you ever bother to knock before you come barging into a professor's office?" I demands. (Whatever happened to a prof's right to privacy, I thought to myself.)

"Your door was open, Doctor," he answers. "I didn't think it was necessary to knock.'

"Well, you're in here now," I barks. "So what do you want?"

"I been wondering, Doctor," he says, "why you haven't spoken out about SIRS. I mean, you've always stood up for student rights and all.'

"Sirs?" I asks. "Never heard of 'em. What's their problem? They been denied the right to meet in the Union or what?" "SIRS isn't a student club," he explains. "SIRS stands for Student Instructional Rating System. You know, those forms us students use to evaluate you profs. It's a hot issue right now." "Why should SIRS be a hot issue?" I

"Well," he answers, "students want to be able to look at the ratings of profs so they can find good ones, steer clear of the turkeys."

"Sounds sensible enough to me," I

"Most of the profs disagree with you, Lash," he replies. "They say letting students look at the ratings denies profs due process.

"They say when a student fills out a

SIRS form anonymously, the prof doesn't have a chance to face his accuser. That's especially bad, they feel, because SIRS reports are used for promotions, salary increases, and determining professional reputations of the profs.

"Listen to what one of 'em - he's a prof in the ed school - says here in the

'If SIRS is to be used as an accountability measure, then it must no longer be anonymously given if open communication between faculty member and student is to follow. For assuredly there can be no accountability if the instructor does not know to whom nor for what he is being rendered accountable.'

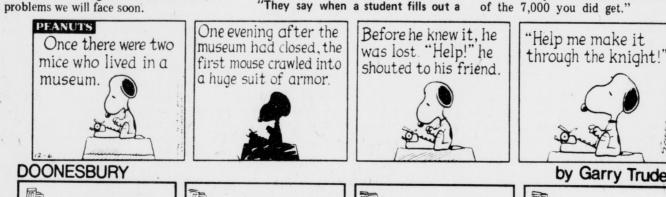

"Sounds asinine, right, Lash?" "Negative," I says. "I gotta go with your ed prof. Take my experience in the primary. Remember what the State News said: 'Carr trounced Larrowe 20,000 to

"You'll have to admit that made me look pretty sad as a politician. And I think you'll have to agree with your ed prof that it was unfair to me that those ballots were cast anonymously.

"If those ballots had been signed, I'd have had a chance to face my accusers. If I'd had an opportunity at open communication between myself and those 20,000 voters, maybe I could've made 'em see I'm a better man than they thought when they voted against me."

"You just convinced me that ed prof's argument is wierd, Lash," he says. "I saw you in action during the primary. If those voters had seen any more of you than they did, I can tell you this. You sure wouldn't have turned any of those 20,000 around. "Not only that. You'd have lost some of the 7,000 you did get." 'Help me make it

'Soaps' sell audience more than suds

Guys on the night shift at Oldsmobile, graduate students, undergraduates, women tied down with small children and older people tied down by age all concentrate on the vacillating fortunes of the characters on their favorite soap opera.

The "soaps" function as psychologist, substitute family and provider of thrills and chills for millions of viewers. Once upon a time the soaps really did sell soap. Duz for dishes and 99 and 44/100 per cent pure Ivory were hawked between crises. Would Helen Trent find love after the age of 36? Could Papa Bauer solve the latest crisis of the heart? Nowadays the soaps sell everything from Playskool Holiday Inn sets to acrylic floor wax. They also sell a constricted view of women and a range of psychosexual disorders which would intrigue R. D. Laing.

The British Broadcasting Corp. (BBC) again blends the traditional ingredients of the family drama with beguiling productions and inspired casting. Viola - another "Forsyte Saga." Last year's running of "Upstairs, Downstairs" proved so successful that a second 13 episodes are now being run.

The series began in the fall of 1971 in England. BBC always limits its series to 13 episodes a season. Then, if the situation warrants, another 13 episodes are produced the next season. (American series currently produce about 30 episodes per season.)

"The Forsyte Saga" introduced well - educated and/or well - bred viewers to the delights they were missing on soap operas - murder, miscarriage misguided affection wrapped in proper cadence and costume. Played with finesse and finish, it enraptured viewers from Israel Inglewood. Few addicts overwork the mparison to "Peyton Place," there were unmistakeable imilarities.

"Upstairs, Downstairs" was created by Jean Marsh and Eileen Atkins. Both Cockney actresses who had close relatives in household service, they conceived the unusual cast of characters from tales heard at home. Marsh portrays the head housemaid, Rose.

explained.

One of the many problems of the Rock Talent Company was its overenthusiasm, particularly in the musical numbers. Whether or not this was done to add new zest to the 6 - year - old musical is not known. What is known is that this overzealousness was disastrous to three fine numbers - "Frank Mills," the "Black Boys/White Boys" medley and "Going Down."

"Going Down" is a song that was originally included in the Broadway production by the New York Shakespeare Festival Public Theater. A simple, fast little ditty, "Going Down" was hampered by too much swearing, too much movement and too many stops in the song

"Frank Mills" was burdened by too - rapid warbling. The song was literally rushed through, leaving no time for the sweet pathos or conviction of the song.
The "Black Boys/White

Boys'' medley was characterized by too much screaming and shouting of the lyrics. It was also sung too quickly.

The Company's overenthusiasm was also evident in dialog that was garbled and indistinct. It was punctuated by too - frequent obscenities, simulated group sex and stale, flat jokes. The dialog was also characterized by awkward transitions from it to the singing. The transitions were so awkward that it was a relief when the Company sang.

Of course, it wasn't much of a relief, considering the quality of the voices. There were only two good voices, those belonging to Claude and

A necessary component that was missing in the show was scenery and props. There was no scaffolding, no mock fire escape, nothing for the cast to climb, swing or scamper on. This was a definite visual drawback and was unfortunate considering the stiff, boring movements of the cast.

What was passed off as scenery was a large backdrop of various slides - an obvious attempt at a light show. Though excellent in concept, it was lacking in execution. The quality of the slides was so sophomoric as to be painful. The disjointed spirit of the

By SUSAN WILLOUGHBY A knock at the door may interrupt your studying or revelry some night, and a man and a woman may be there wearing funny hats and badges.

Don't slam the door in their face or call the police. Their appearance may be unusual but they are just a Lansing couple trying to do their job.

Linda and Don Christensen, also known as the Morningstar Cake Service, promise to deliver "a cake, a card, a candle and a song" on any occasion for a small fee, of course.

The business was originally Don's idea, according to his wife, who says he first heard of a woman who delivered cakes while he was attending DePaul University in Chicago.

"We're not making loads of money, but it's a good business," Linda said. "Junior Achievement would be proud Morningstar is not the Christensen's only source of income. Linda is employed on campus in the Dept. of Information Services. Don works for the College of Business in public relations.

They started the business last February, when they sent out letters, complete with order forms, to the parents of MSU freshmen.

They got the home addresses from the MSU student directory, hoping to hear especially from the parents of out - of - state students who cannot be home for their birthdays.

Parents have been as excited about sending the cakes as students have been to get them, Linda said.

"One mother said that 25 years ago she received a surprise birthday cake in the mail from her mother, and she wanted to do the same for her daughter," she said. "I guess that some things don't change."

Parents often write messages on the bottom of order blanks and usually request more forms for future use.

"The original response was really good," Linda said. "Our first deliveries were on Valentine's Day, when we delivered 19 cakes altogether."

This year they have expanded the operation, putting up posters advertising their services to students on campus and calling themselves the Morningstar (taken from Linda's maiden name) Cake Service.

The student response has not been overwhelming, but they blame that on the fact that their posters do not stay up long in the residence halls and students do not know about the service. "We act as the service part," Linda said. "We don't do any of the cooking, but we have fun, and it's kind of touching that we can be the mediary between parents and students - especially an out - of - state student."

They buy cakes from an area bakery that will decorate them to order in two flavors and three sizes with anything from flowers to football

Linda stressed they are not just a birthday service; they have a song for any occasion even finals week. (Happy finals week to you?)

"We had trouble once, though, when we couldn't tell if the cake was for a thank you or an apology," she said.

They will go to any length to fulfill their promise to deliver a song.

Christmas cheese packages offered by MSU Dairy Club

Christmas shopping may not be a problem

this year if those on your list like cheese. Four assortments of cheeses and cheese spreads, packaged for the holidays, are being offered by the MSU Dairy Club.

The Dairy Club has offered its Christmas packages since 1964, Brian Gerloff, club president, said.

The vacuum - packed cheeses are guaranteed fresh and will be mailed for delivery between Dec. 15 and 20. Any size package may be mailed anywhere in the country.

The four gift selections vary in size from 11/4 pounds to 33/4 pounds, the smallest containing five different cheeses and the largest 11.

The smallest cheese package costs $3.75 if picked up by the customer and $4.50 if mailed. while the largest package costs $7.75 if picked

All but the chocolate cheese was purchased from the Harp and Kettle Cheese House in Wisconsin, since the oncampus cheesemakers are unable to produce the 8,500 pounds of cheese the Dairy Club's project requires.

Chocolate cheese is supplied by Herbruck Cheese Co. of St. Johns.

Reduced rates are available if the selection is picked up at the club office in 122 Anthony Cash is required before a package is mailed, but orders can be placed by phone (355-4466). The MSU Dairy Club's Christmas cheeses are available through Dec. 13.

Last year, 3,500 packages were sold, bringing in a profit of $4,700, Gerloff said.

APPOINTMENTS MADE 6 MONTHS LATE

ASMSU names health board reps

By DENISE CRITTENDON State News Staff Writer

After nearly six months of postponement, four students were nominated by ASMSU Monday night to serve as representatives on the All-University Health Care Advisory Board and provide student input into the health center's policies.

The All - University Health Care Advisory Board, designated to confer with the Health Care Authority, the governing unit for the University Health Center, has been awaiting appointments for student representatives since June.

In order to hold a meeting, the advisory board must have a quorum of seven members. Each school year approximately 10 members, five faculty and MSU employe representatives and five student representatives, make up the board.

Currently, the board has a total of five members, all of whom are faculty and employe representatives.

The recent policy change at the University Health Center was one of the numerous issues slated to come up before the board. Under the policy, students are no longer allowed to charge health care bills of less than $5 unless paid within 48 hours.

"We would have had a chance to do something about that billing policy," said Elizabeth Santos, off - campus representative and acting chairman of the board.

"I think students in general are being given a great disservice at not being able to have representatives to make these decisions simply because of the ineptitudes of ASMSU," she said.

Student nominations to the board, which are chosen from five categories, are supposed to be made by ASMSU the spring prior to the fiscal year so that by August the meetings for fall term are under way.

Students nominated for the committee are Michael Malnar the residence hall association, Barb Mayeda, minority representative and Kristine Guthrie, representative for married students.

Because no one has applied for the opening, a forcign student representative has not been nominated.

The official appointments will be made by President Wharton.

Santos said she continually contacted both ASMSU President Tim Cain and Bill Peltcs, chairman of the search and selection committee, urging them to take action.

"The fact that this (procrastination) happens points out the need of having a different method of selecting students representatives," she said.

"We have not been able to have one meeting all term, and the term only lasts one more week," she added.

Monday Cain said the delay occurred because of the various problems ASMSU had within the board.

"The board was engaged in fighting among members and it got in the way of getting the work done," he said.

Peltcs said the search and selection committee was not able to conduct any interviews with students in the past because a chairman had not been elected. Peltcs has been chairman for only three

"The problem is getting Cain to get the people on the ball," he said. "The board as a whole is apathetic as hell."

Other issues on which the advisory board has been asked to provide input include the plans for a new student health center and the Clinical Sciences II building, an outpatient facility slated for construction.

"Our board, as a consumer board, is asked to help make decisions, ways students can have permanent input, and determine who will be served by that building," Santos said.

She added the health care authority must go on with their planning in spite of the setback faced by the advisory board.

Legislation passed by both houses of the Michigan legislature could number the days of jail terms and court - ordered fines for public drunkenness if Gov. Milliken

The bill, introduced by former state Rep. J. Bob Traxler and unanimously approved in the state Senate Tuesday, is aimed at ending the common practice of throwing alcoholic offenders back on the streets after sleeping off their stupor in a jail cell and paying a fine.

It has been welcomed by local and state law enforcement officials as a major breakthrough in criminal treatment of alcoholics and alcoholic offenders.

Tschirhart. "For both the courts and the person with the apparent alcohol problem, it's fantastic."

Tschirhart estimates that one fourth of the over 2,000 cases he hears each year are related to alcohol, while about 15 per cent are on public drunken disorderliness or drunken driving charges.

"I'd say 95 per cent of these drunk and disorderly cases are people under 30 years of age," Tschirhart added. Figures on the student percentage in these cases were unavailable, he said.

Most MSU cases of drunken driving and drunk and disorderly conduct are handled in the East Lansing District Court.

MSU police report about 224 drunken driving arrests and 59 cases of drunkeness from July 1973 through June 1974. "The biggest difference would be that the majority of drunken disorderly arrests would not spend a night in jail before their release on bond," said Brian Matter, East Lansing probation officer.

"Though I don't know if it will stop the revolving - door syndrome of drying alcoholics out for a night only to return a week later, I'm sure most offenders don't get anything out of a fine or a night in jail," Matter said.

The cost of detoxication and treatment centers, estimated at $3 million to $5 million, will be paid by the state, local and federal governments, with insurance agencies picking up some of the costs.

"Even if the detoxication centers don't provide as much additional services as expected, the court dockets will be reduced and courts will be able to spend more time on working with cases more serious than drunk and disorderly charges," Matter said.

Under the bill, offenders could not be detained in a treatment facility once he is no longer impaired or for more than three days without his consent.

Criticism of the legislation has, however, been raised by representatives of the National Council of Alcoholism.

"At least now they go to jail, and they are then contacted by an alcoholic treatment agency," the employe added.

The committee already had voted 9 to 0 on Nov. 22 to recommend full Senate approval next Tuesday, but its formal report nonetheless raised several questions it said should be considered before the final tally.

The greatest of all, it said, is the implication raised "in the potential wedding of great wealth and business interests with great political power, the totality of which has been unmatched."

The House Judiciary Committee, meanwhile, continued its own hearings on the other side of the Capitol and heard Rockefeller's brother Laurance disclose yet another loan made at Nelson's initiative.

Campbell, Houk upset with Phillies

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) - Jim Campbell and Ralph Houk both screamed as though they had been robbed - and to their minds

They had gone to bed Tuesday night convinced that they had made a deal with the Philadelphia Phillies that would have brought the Detroit Tigers their answer to the club's catching problem - Bob Boone.

The Big Brothers and Sisters work on a one - to - one basis with a child who is matched to them from information gathered in interviews with both the child and the volunteer. They are asked to commit themselves to the program for one year.

"But, it doesn't take up that much time," said Eric Liberacki, junior, 811 Oak St. Liberacki met his little brother over a month ago and said he has been really pleased with the program so far. Volunteers are anyone, college age and over, who are sincerely interested in being a friend to a child and are willing to devote a little time every week to that child. They may be married or

"I think it's probably a good way to get more involved in East Lansing as a community and not just as a student," said Chuck Miller, 421 Holden Hall. "I was surprised how much fun I had with my little brother."

Pamela Huffman, Huffman's mother, has two sons involved in the program and thinks that it is wonderful.

"When a man comes into their lives it means an awful lot to them," she said. "Overall, I think most of the Big Brothers are really great guys."

Volunteers are required to attend an orientation session when they join the program. Rap sessions are also organized throughout the year for volunteers to discuss their experiences and problems

Little Brothers and Little Sisters are from eight to 17 years old, from all racial and ethnic backgrounds. They are often from one - parent families and are in need of friendship, affection and advice from a mature adult. Dennis Shevrovich, Liberacki's little brother, said that he really liked the program and was excited about meeting his Big "He's nice and he likes to do what I like to do," Shevrovich said happily.

In September the Big Brother/Big Sister program in the MSU

Volunteer Bureau joined with the Lansing corporation.

People involved in both programs felt that by combining they could provide a more comprehensive service, DaFoe said.

Besides the main office, 300 N. Washington Ave., Lansing, there is an MSU Branch Office serving the campus and East Lansing area and the Cristo Rey Branch Office serving children on the north side of Lansing.

There are two part · time caseworkers, Lars Olson and Shelley Sharp, in the MSU office, located in the Volunteer Bureau, 27 Student Services Bldg. Olson and Sharp interview the children and the volunteers and make the introductions. They are also available to help out when problems arise.

The program is also in need of volunteers who will be Big Brothers or Big Sisters for a day, DaFoe said. Groups, such as fraternities or sororities, or individuals who are interested in the program but cannot make the year commitment can help out in

The Big Brother/Big Sister program is funded by the Capitol Area United Way and the federal government.

SEES HELPING HUMANITY AS SACRED

By RALPH FRAMMOLINO

A firm belief that helping fellow humans is the essence of the gospels, has led a Catholic nun to picket lines in Yuma, Ariz, and deep involvement in the plight of the migrant farm worker.

Sister Anne Russell, of the order of the Immaculate Heart of Mary and a member of the National Farm Worker Ministry, recently came to the

Sister Russell also drew attention to a letter issued by the U.S. Dept. of Justice. The letter, sent by the Immigration and Naturalization Service of the department, vindicated the Gallo winery for the practice of using alien labor in breaking the UFW boycott. Inspectors from the Dept. of Justice found Gallo was not in violation of the law. Sister Russell, however, said such a

He theorizes that in response to student cries for "more relevance," university professors made their classes less structured and more contemporary. In the process, professors found it awkward to justify giving low grades, and GPAs began to rise even more

Walter Adams, distinguished professor of economics, theorized that grade inflation was also caused by professors experimenting with blanket grading and "that harebrained experiment with the 4.5 supergrade.'

The 4.5 grade was established at MSU in 1968 when the University changed its grading from a letter system to a numerical one. It was supposed to be awarded for only "exceptionally high performance." However, the grade soon came under fire when professors recognized even then that it contributed to grade inflation. The Academic Council eliminated the grade winter term 1972. Adams said he thinks he has not given out higher grades since he started teaching at

are better prepared than those of 20 years ago," Adams said. These students are not necessarily brighter, but they have more experiences, travel opportunities and are more aware of the news than students used to be, Adams said.

He also hypothesized that fewer students flunk because they do not have financial pressures that cause them to work 40 hours a week as students of the '60s did.

"I resist the notion that the student who gets a 0.0 is intellectually incapable of absorbing material," Adams said. "There are extraneous reasons for failures, like financial problems, emotional problems or lack of interest."

Madison Kuhn, a history professor who has taught at MSU since 1937, agreed that professors "do not give the D's and F's that we once did."

Kuhn said GPAs are rising because professors may be getting more humane and cognizant of student problems, like getting into graduate school, law school or medical school.

Since more and more students attend graduate school after graduating from college, Kuhn said professors try not to give "gentleman

Kuhn admits that this consciousness affects his grading. At one time, when trying to decide whether to give a 3.5 or a 4.0, Kuhn said he gave the 3.5.
