MSU falls shy of affirmative action goal

By PEGGY GOSSETT

, January 7

State News Staff Writer for the third year in a row, MSU failed to ch its hiring goals for women and norities in the three - year plan ablished in 1971. MSU administrators had hoped to reach ir goals set in 1971 of 14.6 per cent men and 6.4 per cent minority faculty by Menand of the year, 14. However, at the end of the year, men totaled only 12.3 per cent and porities comprised 4.5 per cent of MSU out of 19 colleges and academic units that lished goals for 1974, only seven met or exceeded their goals for women and a mere four met or exceeded their goals for Administrators of the Affirmative Action Program, which was set up in 1970 to increase employment opportunities for women and minorities at MSU, recently announced that their goals were not met in their third lengthy annual report. The report lists percentages and numbers of all academic and nonacademic employes, and specifically lists women and minority faculty according to each department and college. It also includes 37 pages of detailed charts to illustrate the situation.

The worst offender listed in the report were filled within the office. was the Office of the Provost, which hired only two of the 10 minority faculty that affirmative action guidelines called for.

Herman King, asst. provost, said the office condensed rather than expanded their facilities last year and thus needed less personnel than had been anticipated.

"Nobody knew three years ago when our goals were set that the auto workers were going to be laid off, the economy would be so poor, or a freeze would be put on tenured faculty," King said.

King said the office had a minor turnover of faculty, but most of the vacant positions

The College of Arts and Letters undershot their goal for hiring 55 women by 19. The College of Social Science hired only 19 of the 32 women their goal specified.

Spokesmen for both colleges had no

The 1974 percentages are a slight increase, however, over the 10.5 per cent women and 4.5 per cent minorities listed as faculty in 1971 before the program was

Five colleges exceeded their projected goals but only by one or two faculty. Only James Madison and Justin Morrill Colleges met their exact goals for two and six women faculty members, respectively, while eleven colleges fell below their university relations said the unattained goals were not a serious letdown.

"We were not out to reach a specific number, but the overall effect of directing individual colleges to hire more women and minority faculty," Perrin said.

Though colleges and departments were not absolutely required to comply with goals set in 1971, by the affirmative action program, Perrin said, they tried to achieve their goals.

Perrin said there were three reasons explaining why these goals were not met. The first and most simple was that planners were over · optimistic about setting the goals. Back in 1971, data on the availability of qualified women and minorities was lacking. The planners thus based the goals on rather arbitrary tenures. Only 78 faculty members have projections.

"The sketchy information we had was based on an old table of Ph.D. recipients. We had nothing for minorities then," Perrin

However, an MSU trustee said that overoptimistic goals should not be a reason to excuse the program from the responsibility of meeting those goals.

"I think these goals can be met," said Blanche Martin, D - East Lansing, one of two black members of the board. "Just because they were too high to begin with does not mean they cannot be met." Perrin said that another reason is that faculty turnover has been minimal, due to a sagging national economy. A tenure freeze temporarily implemented in 1973 has drastically restrained further faculty

N. Viets widen control; take S. Viet base camp

SAIGON (AP) - North Vietnamese forces widened their territorial control Tuesday in fighting less than 100 miles north and east of Saigon. They threatened a second provincial capital after capturing Phuoc Binh, 75 miles north of Saigon, the first to fall in nearly three years.

The provincial capital of Tay Ninh was menaced after North Vietnamese forces captured the Black Virgin Mountain base camp and communications center 70 miles southwest of Phuoc Binh.

The Communist - led troops damaged most of the signal equipment in the camp and forced 100 defenders to flee, the Saigon command said. The camp lies on the northeastern approaches to Tay Ninh, about 60 miles northwest of Saigon.

resident Nguyen van Thieu announced a three - day mourning period for the loss of Phuoc Binh. All places of entertainment were ordered closed.

Thieu said the North Vietnamese paid a costly price in heavy casualties and material losses for Phuoc Binh, but acknowledged the capture of the city completed the Communits' conquest of Phuoc Long

Government sound trucks roamed Saigon streets urging people to pass up entertainment and donate money instead to victims of the Phuoc Long fighting. Casualties among the 26,000 civilians and 10,000 government soldiers at Phuoc Binh were not immediately known, but were feared

In other Indochina developments:

· The Phnom Penh command claimed that government troops killed more than 800 Khmer Rouge soldiers on three different fronts around the Cambodian capital. Government casualties were not · Sources in Vientiane said royal Lao troops were rushed to the Laotian town of Savannakhet to put down unrest there, but details were not clear. Savannakhet is not far from Nakhon Phanom, in northeast Thailand, headquarters for the U.S. Air Force in Southeast Asia.

· The Thai government urged North Vietnam to withdraw its troops from Laos and Cambodia and halt its support of Communist terrorists operating in the North Vietnamese Foreign Ministry

In Saigon, 100 persons protested the attacks against Phuoc Binh in a demonstration at the headquarters of the four - nation International Commission of Control and Supervision. It was the second such protest in two days.

The National Assembly issued a declaration denouncing North Vietnam and appealed to the United Nations and the 12 signers of the international conference on Vietnam, which include the United States, China and the Soviet Union, to intervene to

Officials say carrier not going to Vietnam

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Defense Dept. sharply denied reports Tuesday that a six - ship U.S. Navy task force headed by the carrier Enterprise had left Subic Bay in the Philippines for Vietnam waters.

It was learned that the task force actually is heading for the Indian Ocean on what is described as a routine mission of maneuvers and a number of port calls. Pentagon spokesman William Beecher said the task force left the Philippines on a mission "not connected with anything going on in South Vietnam." He replied with "No comment" when asked about the Indian

Both the state and Detroit metropolitan area figures reflected huge upward surges from November - when the Michigan jobless rate was 8.8 per cent and the Detroit metropolitan area figure was 9.1

The increase was even more than forecast by S. Martin Taylor, the MESC director. He predicted last month that post -Nov. 15 layoffs in the auto industry would push the state figure "very close" to 10 per cent. The latest figure compares with a plan to storm the aircraft, saying, "We it want any cowboys and Indians in state unemployment rate of 5.4 per cent in December last year.

The state figure compared with a national December jobless rate of 7.1 per cent, itself the highest in 13 years.

The December figure was more than double the 5.4 per cent reported one year ago, with the number of jobless persons swelling by 86,500 to 430,300.

Taylor said the jobless rolls grew in the Detroit area by 54,600 hitting 229,300. The big jump was in auto industry layoffs. Detroit was especially hard hit with deep cutbacks by General Motors, Ford

Ford rating lowest, poll says

President Ford's rating on keeping the economy healthy is now 86 - 11 per cent negative, a new low for a chief executive in modern times, the Harris survey reported Monday. Three per cent had no opinion.

The lowest rating recorded for former President Nixon was 12 per cent positive a few days before his resignation in 1974, and for former President Lyndon Johnson 31 per cent positive in July, 1968.

Ford's latest rating, obtained in a survey of 1,466 households, was a sharp drop from the 61 - 32 per cent negative a month ago.

Minimum wage rates raised

The new year brought wage increases for millions of America's lowest - paid workers.

Under 1974 amendments to the Fair Labor Standards Act, the minimum wage for about 38.5 million nonfarm workers who were covered under the act before 1967 rose from $2 to $2.10 an hour on Jan. 1. This wage rate will increase to $2.30 an hour on Jan. 1, 1976.

In addition, more than 18.6 million nonfarm workers, including 1.5 million domestic workers, who were entitled to $1.90 an hour before Jan. 1, are now entitled to a $2 - an - hour federal minimum.

Chrysler plans discount offer

Chrysler Corp., faced with an unprecedented backlog of 365,000 unsold cars, is launching a promotion campaign that will provide discounts of up to $400 on some cars and light trucks.

Reps move to end tax disparity

A campaign to end the disparity in income taxes paid by the single and married will be renewed when Congress returns next week

Rep. Edward E. Koch, D - N.Y', and Sen. Robert Packwood, R - Oregon, plan to reintroduce tax bills that died with the 93rd Congress.

The Koch - Packwood bills would tax singles and married persons at the same rate. At present, a married couple filing jointly on a single income of $10,000 annually pays federal taxes of $1.820

A single person with the same income pays $270 more in taxes and the disparity increases with income.

Petition filed for Senate seat

Republican Louis C. Wyman filed a 105 - page petition with the Senate Elections subcommittee today asking to be seated as New Hampshire's junior senator.

Wyman gave his side of last November's disputed election in response to arguments presented to the subcommittee last week by Democrat John A. Durkin.

Wyman emerged from the Nov. 5 election with a 542 vote plurality only to see that dissolve into a 10 - vote recount victory for Durkin. In a review of the recount by the state's Ballow Law Commission, Wyman was certified as the winner by two votes.

Wyman asked the Senate to dismiss Durkin's petition to be seated and seat Wyman as the junior Senator.

Japan works to clean oil slick

The grounded Japanese supertanker Showa Maru stopped leaking oil Tuesday as massive efforts continued to contain the 10 - mile - long slick of crude oil spilled into the Singapore Strait.

Salvage crews prepared to transfer the remaining 320,000 tons of Persian Gulf oil from the stricken ship, but heavy rain and strong currents hampered refloating operations.

Naval assault boats and a large labor force worked around the clock to clean up the estimated million gallons of oil dirtying the shores of islands in the western part of the port of Singapore and threatening the port's western anchorage.

Gandhi thinks she was target

Prime Minister Indira Gandhi said Tuesday that the assassination of her railway minister last week was only a rehearsal attempt on her life.

"The real target was not Lalit Narayan Mishra," she told 3,000 persons gathered in New Delhi to mourn Mishra's death. The railway minister died last Friday of wounds suffered in a terrorist bomb blast in his native Bihar State.

"It was not an accident, but a well planned effort. It was a rehearsal for a bigger event," Gandhi said.

Australia plagued by bushfires

Disaster - battered Australia now is facing a "once in a lifetime" wave of bushfires that has blackened vast areas of grazing land and burned thousands of sheep alive.

The bushfire season, just two months old and likely to last until March, has already left more land burned than the areas of Montana, North Dakota, Colorado and Wyoming

At least three men have died fighting the blazes. No major population centers have been threatened, but two country towns in New South Wales narrowly escaped being engulfed by the fires.

Damage to land, stock and fencing is expected to reach millions of dollars before the bushfire season ends.

GRESHAM, Wis. (AP) -National Guardsmen said Tuesday they would restore food shipments, heat, power and telephone service to a religious house being held by a band of armed Indians, in an attempt to resume negotiations.

Neal Hawpetoss, Menominee who had served as an intermediary between the invaders and authorities before being turned back by sheriff's deputies, would again be allowed access to the estate, Simonson said.

The National Guard force, which said Indians inside the estate will be guaranteed safe

However, Simonson said he could not guarantee immunity for anyone leaving the estate. Three Indian men were arrested during the night as they tried to leave the estate. Fourteen Indians were arrested earlier, most of them trying to smuggle food into the estate.

The Indians took over the 64-room mansion New Year's Day and demanded that it be turned over to them for a health care facility.

James L. Pate, asst. commerce secretary for economic aff said in an interview that the Gross National Product probably at an annual rate of between 6 and 8 per cent in the final months of 1974, which would be the fourth straight quarterly

The information on the dismal 1974 performance of the nat economy came was White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen newsmen President Ford might speed up his timetable announcing his new economic program.

Ford is seriously considering a stringent national policy that impose graduated tariffs on oil imports, beginning with a barrel level by March 1, and all domestic prices to rise to le comparable with foreign ones.

The graduated tariff plan is expected to increase the consu price of gasoline as much as 7 cents per gallon by fall. Administration sources say the program, which the Presiden about to approve, is aimed at trimming United States depends on foreign oil

Pate, who is the top Commerce Department economist, is those calling for a tax cut to help end the nation's recession in He said he would favor a tax cut of about $15 billion individual taxpayers, with the reductions to be accomplis through smaller tax withholdings from paychecks. "I would like to see a personal income tax reduction of about billion; I would like to see it for low and middle incomes a would like to see it for a specified period of time," Pate said. He said the reduction should be for at least one year and more than two.

Administration sources have said the President is considering a tax cut ranging from $10 to $20 billion in h corporation and individual income taxes.

Pate said the 1974 fourth - quarter decline in the GNP - w measures the nation's output of goods and services — prob will be followed by "further significant decline" in the first qua of the new year and a "very moderate decline" in the second to months of 1975.

He said he joined predictions with other administra economists of a turnaround in the economy after midyear, but the improvement would be moderate and probably would h little effect in reducing unemployment, which he said proba would be between 7.5 and 8 per cent until the end of 1975.

By LARRY MORGAN State News Staff Writer n these times of rampant employment, surplus jobs her than surplus workers is dream of every graduate. For the MSU agricultural hnology (Ag Tech) student, this is a reality and not a dream. There are two to three jobs waiting for every student who completes a program in the Institute of Agricultural Technology. In some cases there are even four or five awaiting his presence, Harold Ecker, director of Ag Tech, said. Presently there are 532 students enrolled in Ag Tech. From the beginning of fall term through the end of spring term, about 400 more students will be turned away because the programs are full.

There are nine programs offered in Ag Tech, including agricultural production, animal technology, elevator and farm supply, landscape and nursery management and turfgrass management. Agricultural production consists of five different options within the program.

A certificate upon completion of one of these programs qualifies the student for a job as either a technician or for a middle management position in his particular field.

STUDENTS TRAIN FOR SPECIFIC FIELDS

"The training is for a rather specific job," Ecker said.

"The student has to have his mind pretty well made up as to what he wants to do career-wise before he begins a program," he added.

Tech graduates find work waiting

"Our courses are more on how to do it and less why to do it," Ecker said.

Each of the programs are 18 months long, beginning in the fall. Students attend classes during fall and winter terms, then leave campus to work spring and summer terms at a job related to their program. They return to campus and finish during the next fall and

During the terms they work the students earn both credits and money.

Once a student completes a program he receives a certificate and, most likely, a job.

Ecker said U.S. Dept. of Labor statistics reveal that 60 per cent of the jobs in the United States require some training past high school, but do not need a four-year degree from institutions such as MSU.

This is one reason programs such as Ag Tech are needed today, he said, and enrollment figures bear this out.

Enrollment in Ag Tech has increased between 4 and 5 per cent over the past eight years. In similar programs throughout the country, enrollment has gone from 10,000 students in 1964 to 74,000 in 1974, Ecker said

MSU began its Ag Tech program in 1894 for farmers who could not afford to stay at school for four years due to the amount of farmwork necessary during the spring and summer.

In 1946 MSU began the agricultural production for students going into farming. Since the end of World War II nine other programs have been added. Only one has been dropped.

Ag Tech does not merely add programs to increase enrollment, Ecker said.

"There have to be jobs, or we're not interested," he said. Incentives for the programs come from agricultural industries requesting trained help on the industrial side of agricultural. A trade association (usually) requests training in a particular area. Ag Tech will institute a program for that specific need, Ecker said. Although Ag Tech is part of MSU, it stays mainly independent from MSU as a whole. Students live in the MSU residence halls and pay the U.S. should fight oil cartel

"Transfer of wealth" is the euphemism for the successful economic warfare that has been waged on the non-Communist world for the last 15 months.

Mournfully, officials here fiddle with the statistics of economic doom. At today's rate, by 1984 the oil cartel will have a nestegg of a trillion dollars, enough to buy the assets of the top 500 United States corporations plus all the farmland in America, and still get change back on that trillion dollar bill.

To cope with the fact of economic warfare. two different strategies are being devised. At some points, they overlap - both require a limitation on oil imports, legal coercion to conserve fuel at home, stimulation of offshore drilling and strip mining and a crash program to develop new sources of energy but each strategy reflects a wholly different view of the uses of diplomacy and economic

The oil doves seek to enlist the cooperation of the consuming nations in "recycling" the money being ripped out of their treasuries. This would make it possible for them to borrow back the extorted funds from the oil producers to pay the next installment of blackmail. That is a pallid properly called "an economic Pearl Harbor."

But it is Henry Kissinger's response. To undermine consideration of any more potent proposals he has induced his media pilot fish to nibble at proponents of tougher measures by labeling them - as Newsweek does -"pro-Israeli legislators and isolationists."

That is flim-flam. Three of the oil cartel's big four are Iran, Venezuela and Nigeria, who are concerned not with Mideast War but with internal development and domination of their own regions. The economic warfare raging today has little to do with the facade of Arab-Israel conflict: the purpose of the oil-producing nations is to gain "their turn" at running the entire Western world.

The Doctor's Bag

BY ARNOLD WERNER, M.D.

Letters may be addressed to Dr. Werner at the MSU Health Center. Names need not be included unless a personal reply is requested. Some acquaintances have told me of the use of amyl nitrite to supposedly prolong orgasms and produce an increased pleasurable response and/or "rush." What does this drug do to the circulatory system and central nervous system? What are the risks involved? Can one become sexually dependent on it?

Amyl nitrite is a member of a class of drugs which causes relaxation of muscles not under voluntary control (smooth muscles), in particular, the smooth muscles of the circulatory system. The major medical use of these drugs is for patients who have chest pain (angina pectoris) due to coronary artery disease. The short acting forms of these drugs are effective in the immediate relief of such pain because they temporarily reduce the work load of the heart. A nitroglycerine tablet placed under the tongue is the most common form of the drug used.

Amyl nitrite is a gas. It comes in a small glass tube wrapped in a woven material. The tube is crushed between the fingers and the gas is inhaled. The immediate effect is flushing of the skin of the head, neck and chest area and the dilation of certain blood vessels in the scalp. The overall sensation is that of a brief "rush." A pulsating headache is a frequent side effect. If used while standing, fainting can occur.

Orgasms are complex psychophysiologic phenomena and I have no doubt that in a suggestable person the sensations can be due to the amyl nitrite and give the illusion of enhanced response. But that's all it is, an illusion, not infrequently followed by a headache. Although I remain skeptical about those who seek illusions, I still doubt that one could become "sexually dependent.'

I am unable to keep from ripping my fingers apart. They are generally bloody and torn and are really awful to see. I have been doing this for five or six years now, but could never decide where to begin to receive treatment for I am not at all sure if this is an organic or psychological problem. It intensifies when I am nervous, but since I am a very high-strung person, my hands are always bloody. I have consulted a couple of general practitioners, but they invariably tell me to get something to prevent the infection and never try to find the cause. I know that it's more than an absent minded habit because I will do it until I am bleeding, and long past the point where I first feel pain. Could you give me some advice as to where to begin to seek help?

The problem you describe is clearly psychological and is part of a whole family of activities which include nail biting, lip and cheek biting and other quasi-cannibalistic behaviors. People plagued with such habits are often fairly intense or at times easily made anxious or unsure of themselves. Such habits have a way of beginning at a time when one is under specific stress and then persisting beyond the duration of the distress as they assume a life of their own.

There are three basic approaches to treatment. The most ambitious would be the definition and treatment of any underlying maintain control over the anxiety.

When such symptoms occur sporadically with anxiety, anti-anxiety medication can be of help. Such medicine is not of value when used on a continual basis. A properly trained psychologist or psychiatrist should be able to be of help to you although a psychiatrist would be needed if the treatment included the use of drugs.

anxieties and insecurities. Such an approach might be appropriate if the symptom is but one indication of general problems. Another approach that can be of help when the symptom is isolated is to try and define the circumstances surrounding the origin of the symptom and retrospectively try and resolve the problem. The third approach, which is of particular value when the symptom is an isolated one, ignores completely the origin of the symptom. It makes use a variety of behavior modifying approaches to eliminate the symptom. Such approaches could include the use of aversive stimuli, substitution of a less destructive symptom and psychological training to

"Most people are trying to sleep at 2 a.m. and this is going to be their peak period," Griffin said.

Mike McCormick, who helped compile the staff report for the planning commission, said the restaurant would be different than Dooley's since it would be located closer to the downtown parking

McCormick said there are more than enough spaces available in the ramp if people would only use them.

Griffin does not think customers would use the ramp, though. "Sure they've got ramps, but consumers want to park near to where they go," Griffin said. Downgrade quality

ASMSU President Tim Cain spoke at the public hearing in December and said the 24-hour restaurant would downgrade the quality of life in the neighborhood.

"When you look at it, it would be hard to say you are 'living' behind a 24-hour restaurant," Cain said.

Planning Commissioner Allan Schmid reminded Cain that there are no 24-hour restaurants within walking distance for students

Cain suggested planners decide whether the convenience of an all-night restaurant outweighs disruption of the neighborhood. Griffin and other residents of Howland House said they have discussed the possibility of taking their case to court if the planning commission grants the waiver.

Food tax repeal won't up prices

East Lansing shoppers are getting a real bargain since the Jan.1 repeal of the sales tax on food.

Sources at local grocery stores, including A & P, Wrigley, Eberhard and Meijers' stores, said that there were no planned increases for food prices to pay for the cost of installing new cash register systems, which are needed to separate taxable and nontaxable items. This may be because stores can take income tax credits for the cost of the new machines.

Monday the Michigan Citizens Lobby announced that a survey of 244 stores in the Tri-County Detroit area revealed that stores were not increasing their prices to offset the benefits of the sales tax

The lobby surveyed the stores Dec. 19, Dec. 26 and last Thursday. One East Lansing grocer said there would be no increases at his food store, but that shoppers would lose in the long run.

"The consumer won't be the winner in the sales tax repeal, but not because I'm going to raise my prices. We've gotten a lot of bad publicity anyway. Why would we want to raise prices?" said Larry Fortino, owner of Larry's Shop Rite at 1109 E. Grand River Ave. Fortino said that the consumers would probably pay for the savings on their food bills through higher income taxes and increases in the price of cigarettes and liquor.

Kissinger expected to attend CIA prob Sto

WASHINGTON (AP) - Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger is expected to appear along with past and present heads of the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) when a presidential commission begins its probe of alleged CIA domestic spying next Monday.

Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller, named by President Ford to head the eight-man panel, announced the opening hearing in a telegram to commission members Tuesday but provided few details of what the agenda would be. CIA director William Colby "and others will join us during the course of the day," Rockefeller said. However, a well informed source said the others would include Kissinger and former CIA directors Richard M. Helms and James R. Schlesinger. The same source said the panel would use the first day's hearing to decide whether to seek subpoena power and whether to question witnesses under oath.

KEY MAY LIE IN ICE AGE STUDIES

Food supply forecast sought

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) -Scientists may learn to predict world food supplies of the future by studying the ice ages of the past, a meteorologist at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) said.

Recent price increases for wheat and soybeans, as well as the famine in drought-stricken Africa, can be traced to climatic changes that should be predictable, Prof. Reginald E. Newell said.

In an article in the December issue of Technology Review, the MIT journal of science, Newell suggests that if men can learn what causes ice ages, they may be able to anticipate the smaller climatic changes that can decrease harvests and bring famines.

It may take 20 years, but sooner or later, long-range weather forecasting should become sophisticated enough to predict the changes that affect world food supplies, he said in an interview.

For example, he wrote the current high price of wheat can be traced to changes in the atmospheric flow patterns over the Soviet Union in 1971-72. Crop failures followed, then

The price of soybeans rose when temperature changes in the waters off Peru reduced the catch of anchovies, a prime source of fish meal, he said. The result was a price increase in sovbeans, the most common substitute for fish meal.

The African drought, in which thousands have died to starvation, was the result of a shift for several years in the movements of the tropical rainbelt, a shift men might some day be able to prepare for, Newell said.

In an effort to learn the secrets of climatic shifts some scientists have been studying the movements of beetles, "which can run and fly considerable distances and can follow

A comparison between the habitats of beetle species today with those of their fossilized ancestors can tell us about temperature shifts that already have taken place, Newell said. A similar study of ancient temperature changes quite methods of study may some day be applied to short-term climatic ice ages, Newell says.

"But we do not know enough yet to predict whether the next ice age is due to start in 100, 1,000 or 10,000 years," he said. "We are fairly certain, though, that it will come before 30,000 A.D., and that the energy crisis that is presented as the ice comes grinding down from Canada will surely dwarf that of the 1973-74 winter."

The source said Rockefeller had made his telegram "purposely vague," in part because of his close personal ties to Kissinger. "He didn't want to call Kissinger a witness because Kissinger is his friend," the source said. But, he added, "They're going to be asked a lot of questions and they're going to have to have a lot of answers."

Rep. Michael Harrington, D-Mass., a frequent agency critic, said Tuesday the panel name by Ford "offers little hope for effective reform of the intelligence community."

Harrington announced that the House Democratic Caucus next week would consider his proposal for a full scale review of domestic surveillance and foreign covert actions.

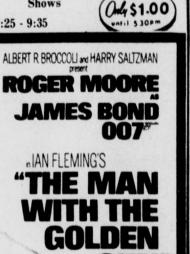

Harrington said Rockefeller's prior service on the President's Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board would make it difficult for the vice president to "objectively review CIA operations."

Other congressional critics have questioned whether Rockefeller should not be disqualified because of his close 20-year association with Kissinger, who, as head of the National Security Council is privy to many CIA activities.

Helms, now ambassador to Iran, headed the CIA from 1966 to 1973 when the New York Times has said the agency conducted domestic surveillance operations against anti-war dissidents and radicals, amassing files on 10,000 Amerian citizens. Helms, who returned to Washington last week, has issued a

However, this year in Michigan only the Grand Rapids Press is printing the historical series called "In Search of the American Dream". MSU's enrollment in the course has fallen to only three. Ironically, more Michigan colleges are offering credit for the course. In addition to MSU, Grand Valley, Aquinas, Ferris State and Grand Rapids junior colleges offer credit.

"We've had problems getting newspapers to cooperate," said William Combs, asst. dean for continuing education for the College of Arts and Letters. "They all plead a newsprint shortage.'

Combs felt that newspapers who refused to run the 1,200 word essays each week were denying hundreds of potential readers a valuable educational experience. Some of the newspapers who refused to run the course were the Detroit Free Press, the Detroit News and the Lansing State Journal.

Ben Burns, managing editor of the Lansing State Journal, explained his reasons for not running the series.

"I don't think enough of our readers would read the series. It would be of interest only to people enrolled in the class and the article would take up valuable space," Burns said.

The paintings of two MSU art professors are on exhibit in the Kresge Art Gallery through Jan. 19. The contemporary works of Allen Leepa and Stacey Proffitt offer contrasting styles of abstract art.

WORKS DISPLAYED AT KRESGE

Profs' paintings labeled 'lessons in abstraction'

By PAT CLYDE State News Reviewer

Two MSU art professors currently exhibiting their paintings at Kresge Art Gallery could use their works as lessons in abstraction when they teach painting classes. Allen Leepa and Stacy Proffitt will have paintings on exhibit through Side by side in the gallery, the styles of their works contrast sharply. Leepa's are abstract and painted in bright colors; Proffitt's are nature scenes in subdued colors. The work of each artist points up how personal modern art is and how different the result is when each artist strips reality to what he perceives as its essence.

Proffitt, who painted in a hard-edge abstract style until 1971, claims he is no longer an abstract artist. But his land and seascapes shown in the gallery seem to draw a very fine line between reality and abstraction.

Proffitt simplifies nature to its basic structures in order to depict its nature. He uses the single, basic colors of structures, such as the sea, the sky, or trees, rather than the subtle shadings of

"696-No. 2" simplifies a stretch of freeway into soft-toned geometric shapes that are still undeniably a freeway. The viewer might wonder if the essence of reality is not abstraction.

In "White Dunes," Proffitt divides the canvas into a bright blue sky and a stretch of stark white dunes. Both divisons are obviously the objects they represent, yet in their starkness and lack of detail they are unreal, nothing more than a

Proffitt intentionally suppresses detail, he explained, because it prevents the viewer from seeing the basic shapes and structures of reality. "My paintings are fantasy to the extent that I distort reality to give the essence of a scene, of reality," he said.

Proffitt, who teaches painting and drawing, said the development of his painting style is a reflection of his personal growth. The shift in his painting style from hard-edge to natural scenes was reinforced by changes in his life, he said. Proffitt moved to the country where he now lives and where a greater articulation of his feelings about nature is possible.

Whereas Proffitt depicts objects in nature, Leepa is concerned with movement.

Leepa studied with the abstract expressionist Hans Hofmann in the late 1930s. Similar to the abstract expressionists' emphasis on "painterly qualities" - the paint itself and the one-dimensional canvas surface - rather than subject matter, Leepa uses the tools of his medium to create movement. In such paintings as "Orange With Staccato Diagonals" and "Fluttering Movement" he juxtaposes bold colors to create depth

In "Amorphic Line With Vertical Planes," movement is stripped down to its essence. A single line curves through a series of planes and again the viewer wonders if reality itself is an abstraction. Perhaps shape is defined by an infinite number of intersecting planes.

Although his work is expressionistic, it is not totally spontaneous. Leepa said he is excited by many things but must control his feelings in order

"My spontaneity in painting is controlled by a sense of proportion. I am sensitive to the division of the canvas and to form," he said.

Also an exhibit at Kresge until Jan. 19 is a collection of Japanese paper stencils, or katagami.

The stencils, donated by Mrs. Isao Honma of East Lansing, date back to the 19th century. They are finely detailed designs on mulberry bark used in the dyeing or decorating of textiles. The stencils have been used since about 800 A.D. for designing fabrics from leather Samurai armor to

A pictorial description of the art of stenciling, a time-consuming and rarely practiced art in modern Japan, is also included in the show.

MICK JAGGER PLAYS TITLE ROLE

'Ned Kelly' mix of beauty,

By FRANK FOX State News Reviewer

Poor Ned Kelly. His father is transported to the penal colony for stealing a pig. His family - poor paddy peasants that they are squeezed by the land barons and the Queen's constables and magistrates who rule the wild Australian frontier. What can a poor boy do?

If poor Ned Kelly is reborn as Mick Jagger he can have a good bit of fun - stealing horses, robbing banks and burning stacks of mortgages. Director Tony Richardson's rarely - seen 1970 movie "Ned Kelly," starring Mick Jagger, will be shown at MSU this weekend.

It is a film of striking visual beauty and visceral nastiness of

Richardson, the director of "Tom Jones" and "The Entertainer," took the life of a 19th century Australian rebel and developed it into a lyrical ballad of "the wild colonial boy."

As Kelly, Jagger blends the bravado of Jesse James with the too - trusting innocence of Huckleberry Finn. His soft spoken, understated acting is perfect for the role of a principled anarchist who dreams of founding a republic, a transplanted Irishman who vows to "declare war on the whole English world."

But here and there - at the proper moments - Jagger brings a sarcastic wit and cocky swagger to the role that is all his own.

Standing before a humorless magistrate who is about to pronounce his doom, Kelly is sneeringly unimpressed.

"As for myself, I fear death as little as to drink a cup of tea," he mutters.

Indeed, it is Kelly's bitter. indomitable humor that gives the story much of its sardonic But aside from the mordant realism of the plot and the fine performances of the entire cast, "Ned Kelly" offers a beautiful display of sensitive camera work. The film is, quite simply, a joy to behold.

Richardson looks through the camera with the eye of a master painter and covers the screen with delicately muted pastel colors, shadows and light.

Thespians to present two plays

The Black Arts Manifesto, an MSU theater group, will present a program including "Lady Day" and "Many Faces of Love. Desire and Anguish" at 8 p.m. Thursday and Friday in 109 Anthony Hall.

Donations will be $1 at the door. All proceeds will go to the Save The Children fund, sponsored by the MSU Black Aide "Lady Day," by Robert Gaines, is an adaptation of "The Lady Sings the Blues" and concerns the life of songstress Billie Holiday.

"Many Faces of Love, Desire and Anguish" is an adaptation of "Hand Is On The Gate" and is a readers' play of poetry stylized into plot form.

The program is directed by Robert Gaines. The stage manager is Judy Mays.

In filming "Ned Kelly" on location in Australia, Richardson appears to have chosen his outdoor settings with great care and then to have waited for just the right time of day and appropriate weather for his desired effects. Richardson's patience and skill proclaims itself in scene after difficult scene filmed under demanding conditions by flickering firelight, in the pink haze of an early sunrise, in the bright daylight of a sudden afternoon shower, in the long shadows of evening and against overcast Australian plain.

The director complements the evocative subtleties of his backgrounds with lusty sequences of banditry and ribald revelry that aptly capture the rough, frontier spirit of his theme. Indeed, some of the film's best moments occur during wild, peasant reels danced in drunken saloons, bare - knuckle boxing matches at a Sunday picnic and the scenes where Ned and the boys delight in their spoils and the Queen's purloined bounty. Besides his masterful direc-

the foreboding clouds of the tion, Richardson also coauthored the cogent screenplay with Ian Jones. The story is accented by the stone - mean songs of Shel Silverstein which are appropriately sung by Waylon Jennings.

Unfortunately, like Jagger's other movie, "Performance," 'Ned Kelly" remains a neglected, sadly unappreciated motion picture. For one reason or another, it has never been widely distributed in this country and has never had the wide audience it deserves.

"Ned Kelly" will be shown at 7:30 and 9:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday in B104 Wells Hall by Fitzgerald said the legislature many enact an increase even lower than that proposed by the Republican governor.

Lesbians, landlord may battle in court MS

A tiny, obscure office at 5471/2 E. Grand River Ave. may soon be the origin of a court battle testing anti-discrimination laws in landlord-tenant relations.

The landlord, Ms. John Perry, plans to file suit against the tenants of the office, the Lesbian Women's Center, for ignoring her latest eviction notice. The women have not left.

"I thought it was a crisis center or something. I thought they were helping people. I thought it was a fine organization being funded by the City of East Lansing," she said.

"But it's just one little room full of junk. It looks terrible," she added. Perry said the eviction had nothing to do with the women being lesbians. "We're evicting them because they don't have a lease. They were renting by the month. They have no right to be here now," she said. Much of the present confusion stems from the Women's Center split early in September. Some of the women went to the Union to start a center there. The other women, mostly gay, remained in the East Grand River Avenue office.

Early in October Perry served an eviction notice on the

"I thought they had moved out long ago," Perry said. "They never let me know what was going on so I sent them their notice and leased the office to the man downstairs."

The women did not heed this first notice. When court proceedings began Nov. 29, the case was declared invalid because the proper 30 days notice had not been given.

Another notice was served Dec. 1. The center had 30 days to evict. But at the beginning of January, Perry received the month's rent money from the

for the women if the case should go to court.

"Some of the women feel if they get any publicity that it may jeopardize their jobs and lives," Ferency said. "Perhaps in court we will be able to use aliases instead of real names so the women can have a safe hearing," he added. The laws are confusing in landlord-tenant discrimination relationships. East Lansing Civil Rights law

No. 325 of May, 1973 prohibits all discrimination in the areas of employment and public accomodation (such as hotels, restaurants) on the basis of "sexual orientation" but says nothing about housing.

And according to Arthur Stein of the Michigan Civil Rights Commission, state fair housing laws do not protect "sexual orientation" either.

"There is no law forbidding eviction on the basis of sexual preference," Stein said. "And when there's no law against this type of discrimination, people will discriminate."

Lawyer Brenda Turner of Lansing Legal Aid said she had never had a case to do with homosexual discrimination.

"Most of the discrimination cases I have concern race," she explained. "Also, the statutes in landlord-tenant relationships are so new there has been little previous litigation."

According to Ferency, if the court decides the women are being discriminated against because of their sexual preference. it may provide some precedent for other similar cases.

"Although it would not alter East Lansing laws, it could provide some valuable precedent for other changes," Ferencv said.

The unpredicted poor state of the economy might have been a valid reason this year to excuse the program's failure to meet their goals, Martin said. But a

Win quells cager dispute for now

The distressing events of the past weekend concerning the MSU basketball team were temporarily quelled with the Spartans relatively easy 88-84 victory over Ohio State Monday night in Jenison Fieldhouse.

The win was the Spartans' first Big Ten victory in three games and witnessed the return of 10 MSU players who were suspended indefinitely Saturday for walking out of the team meeting before

Led by center and team captain Lindsay Hairston's 26 points, the Spartans against Ohio State hardly looked like a team which had only three days ago been wallowing in turmoil. On the court, at least, the squad appears to be back together.

Nevertheless, some nagging questions remain operative following the surprisingly quick patch-up job that the players and Spartan coach Gus Ganakas engineered Sunday to get their season back in gear. No doubt, an equal amount of pressing problems surrounding the team remain unsolved.

This is not to say that Ganakas did not do the right thing in reinstating the players, nor is it intended to mean that the players were wrong in submitting a remorseful apology for the walkout. Under the circumstances, both parties behaved intelligently.

Nothing to gain There obviously was nothing to gain and everything to lose, had the suspensions been continued. But what was the incident all about to begin with?

In looking at the situation, the fact that 10 players, or five-sixths of the team, walked out at the same time is deeply troubling and merits scrutiny

The fact that all the protesting players happened to be black and Ganakas is white can easily be construed as a racial disagreement by those who would want to promote such an idea. Such intangibles as color or race can not be argued with, obviously.

But what about the two previous years when blacks also dominated the team and the starting lineup? Why was there no flare-upwhen Ganakas stuck to his convictions of starting his son Gary despite much criticism by almost everyone?

If there was some kind of polarization, why didn't the black players boycott then? After all, many of the area fans, including whites, voiced opposition to the 5 foot 5 inch younger Ganakas.

It would seem, then, that the protesting black players, some of whom were here two seasons ago, must have had other feelings besides the fact that Jeff Tropf is white when they walked out of the

The whole gamut of events seem to indicate some disenchantment with the entire MSU basketball program, disenchantment which for one blind moment blazed into a raging controversy. Time getting short Since most of the players on the Spartan squad are juniors and seniors, time is getting short for them to make their mark in collegiate basketball. Outsiders can not really gauge the importance that some of these athletes place on the opportunity to show their worth.

MSU is a major school in every sense of the word and its athletics have traditionally been treated as such. Though none of the players have stated publicly what "other minor disagreements" may been troubling them, privately they will admit that they do no like major-college players.

In recent years, MSU has let its basketball program slip to financial ebb — acquiring a fulltime staff only this year after years without one.

The direction Spartan basketball takes can only be determine the number of roads MSU's athletic administration is willing open. Without a major repaving job of the whole baske program, there will probably be more detours in the future possibly a tragic dead end.

More doors added to Jenison; seating capacity bulges to 10,000

By PAT FARNAN State News Sports Writer

Ancient Jenison Fieldhouse, site of MSU home basketball games for 24 years, has been modified to conform with state fire code standards and most likely will seat 10,000 capacity for Saturday's MSU-University of Michigan clash.

Capacity was reduced to 6,500 last spring after an inspection by state fire marshals. They said the building violated the state code for public assemblage. Fire marshals inspected alterations made by University architect

Robert Siefert Tuesday and approved them. Following inspection last spring by Capt. George Catton and Lt. Richard Dalton of the Michigan State Police Fire Marshal Division,

In a three - day span, the MSU junior varsity basketball team battled the best in the land and the best in the Muskegon area - oddly enough, with similar results.

Muskegon Community College handed the Spartan reserves their fourth straight loss in Jenison Fieldhouse Monday night, 79 - 76. "It was nothing like playing against Indiana," MSU forward Jim Bird said. "The Hoosiers not only had superior shooting ability, but they played harder and were a lot more disciplined.

"The shots still weren't dropping for us during the first half," Bird added. "It's been that way all year. We're a second half team.'

The junior varsity did manage an early six - point lead, jumping on the Skyhawks in the opening minutes of the game, 12 - 6.

The point spread was short lived, however, as Muskegon quickly came back. With the help of Cleo McCarty's 12 point scoring spree, the two year college ended the first half out in front, 43 - 30.

Down by as many as 15 points, MSU woke up early in the second half, stifling the Skyhawks passing and forcing numerous turnovers.

MSU's hockey team has moved up to second place in the weekly national collegiate hockey poll conducted by Hancock, Mich. radio for the first time this season.

The Spartans, who sport a 12-3-1 record in the Western Collegiate Hockey Assn. (WCHA) and a 14-5-1 mark overall, received four first place votes from the 10 coaches who did the voting.

"I've found I've experienced more in pro basketball as far as the ups and downs. But for me the important thing is to be happy so that's all I think about and I'm happy to be playing," explained the 5 foot 10 inch scoring whiz, who started his pro career on the downslide upon leaving MSU.

"I've learned quite a bit here. The only difference is prestige wise. But we get enough publicity as a team," Robinson said thoughtfully, recalling the days of glitter and big crowds in East Lansing.
