Ford's bleak message draws mixed response WASHINGTON (AP) - President Ford submitted the bleakest State of the Union message in decades Wednesday to a somber Congress that received with reservations his proposals for tax cuts and higher fuel

"The state of the union is not good . . . I've got bad news and I don't expect applause," Ford told a nationally broadcast joint session

He got, in fact, less applause than a president usually does on such occasions nine interruptions in a 41 - minute speech, with most of the clapping on the Republican side. There was no audible Democratic approval of his pledge to veto "any new spending program adopted by the Congress.

Key members such as Chairman Russell B. Long, D - La., of the Senate Finance Committee, and incoming Chairman Al Ullman, D - Ore., of the House Ways and Means Committee, indicated they would go along with tax cuts, but wanted them directed more specifically on lower incomes.

Recommendations for gasoline price increases and sharp curbs on spending drew less enthusiasm from Democrats.

Speaker Carl Albert said some programs must be funded. He said more consultation on the whole program will be needed, Congress still does not understand all of it AFL - CIO President George Meany announced that the labor organization "cannot support his (Ford's) proposals and will fight them in the Congress.'

Arch Booth, president of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, said, however, that "President Ford deserves prompt, bipartisan cooperation he requested from the Congress and the American people.'

Ford prefaced his proposals with a grim and the current tenure hiring freeze the picture of the economy.

The major elements of Ford's plan: • A one - shot tax cut for individuals totaling $12 billion and a longer term tax reduction of $16.5 billion. The one - time tax cut of 12 per cent would be based on last year's taxes and would be accomplished through rebates of up to $1,000 to individual

The higher price has caused the number of volumes added each year to drop from 56,851 in 1969 - 70 to 37,037 this year - a 40 per cent drop.

The price of indexes has also soared. The per title cost of indexes to periodicals, Reader's Guide for example, has increased over 34 per cent in just two years. The increase represents about a $9 rise on the average for each index.

Wright said that the price of professional journals has jumped sharply as the societies printing them have hired publishing houses to print them instead of doing it independently.

Chapin is particularly worried about the serial services the library provides which have risen in cost on the average 38.7 per cent since 1969 and show no sign of decreasing.

Serials are volumes or reports that come out one after another but not at any periodic rate. The Smithsonian Institute reports are an example.

"It will take a $75,000 to $90,000 increase in our budget just to keep our serial services complete next year,"

Chapin said that the chances of the library getting the increase in budget it needs to function effectively are minimal during the present economic situation in the state.

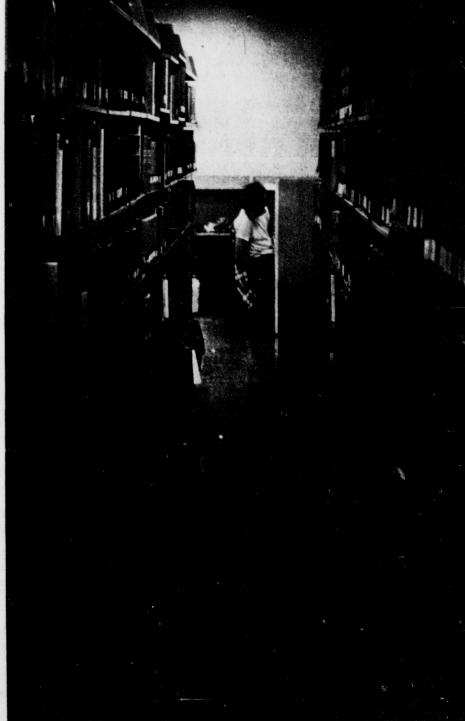

Gallin complained that a comparatively small part of MSU's budget is spent on the library. He noted that only 2.9 per cent of MSU's budget is spent for the library while U-M allocates 4.8 per cent and Wayne State University 4.3 per cent.

Chapin said that for every dollar per student spent on the library at U-M, 41¢ is spent at MSU and 57¢ at Wayne State. Directors contacted at U-M and Wayne State said that library budget problems are not localized at MSU but are nationwide. Vern Ping, director of libraries at Wayne State, said they have had to cut down on spending drastically.

Gallin remarked that he is sure the library problems are noted and understood by the provost but says that it is hard for the provost to act while other groups are pressuring him. We have to let the whole faculty and student body know what is happening so that we'll have an outcry to save the library ." Gellin said

Students like this one studying in the library may find themselves deprived of some library services if the budget is not increased. Rising prices of periodicals and books have put the library in a financial "crisis."

Federal Energy Administrator Frank G. Zarb told reporters Ford's energy program would add a one-time inflation of about two per cent to the nation's ballooning price

In a State of the Union address, Ford said the alternatives of fuel rationing or a high, sharply focused tax on gasoline would not solve the nation's energy problems and would produce "unacceptable inequities."

Ford asked Congress for standby authority to use rationing, allocations of fuel and critical materials, and mandatory fuel conservation if necessary, but proposed a wide range of energy policies designed to avoid drastic government intervention. He offered little hope, however, of bringing fuel prices back down in the near future even if his energy plans work. Instead, Ford asked for authority to keep (continued on page 16)

The resolution cites statistics gathered by Richard Chapin, director of libraries, and the Assn. of Research Libraries to back up their claim.

The association report included in the resolution shows that in 1973 - 74 MSU was 30th in the nation in total expenditures for the library with $3,700,000, compared with Harvard's $10,600,000. In the Big Ten, MSU ranked eighth in total expenditures.

Ford Motor Co. Wednesday reported its sales during the first 10 days of 1975 were off 29 per cent compared to a year ago. The company's U.S. car deliveries were off 32.5 per cent — the worst start for the industry in at least 21 years.

The Ford figures came one day after General Motors reported sales off 27 per cent, Chrysler off 47 per cent, and American Motors off 52 per cent.

Ford blamed the poor sales performance on a "soft economy" and a price discount plan being run this week by Chrysler which industry executives believe kept some shoppers out of the market last week.

Saxbe cites aides pressure

Atty. Gen. William B. Saxbe said Wednesday that White House aides to Richard M. Nixon repeatedly pressured him to interfere with the Watergate prosecution

In an interview as he prepares to leave after a year as head of the Justice Department, Saxbe said the pressure was relayed in the form of outrage at what the then President considered an invasion of executive privilege protecting presidential records from disclosure.

Saxbe, who has been named ambassador to India, said he looked into some of the complaints from Nixon aides but ultimately rebuffed all of the attempts at pressure.

Nixon said to have answers

Former White House counsel John W. Dean III said Wednesday he thinks there are still Watergate questions which only former President Richard M. Nixon can answer.

"I think Mr. Nixon obviously can fill in some gaps and hopefully he will," said Dean, who was released from Allenwood, Pa., federal prison last week after serving four months for his role in the Watergate coverup.

"He was in a position where he was aware of a lot of activities. He knows the motivation and he can answer the whys.

Dean spoke at a news conference at his home in Truesdale Estates near Los Angeles.

An attorney for the holder of a mortgage on former President Richard M. Nixon's San Clemente estate said Wednesday in Los Angeles that he received the final payment that was due.

Lawyer Charles Horning, representing the Hamilton Cotton estate which sold the seaside villa to Nixon in 1969, declined to say who had purchased the mortgage.

On Tuesday, a source close to Nixon said someone other than the former President was paying off the $506,000 in principal and about $17,000 in interest. He, too, refused to

Ford will wait for court action

White House legal counsel Philip Buchen said Wednesday President Ford will see what the courts do before considering pardons for any Watergate figures.

Buchen indicated at a breakfast at the National Press Club in Washington that the release from prison last week of three Watergate defendants by U.S. District Judge John J. Dems ask removal of chairmen WASHINGTON (AP) - A House Democratic panel recommended dumping two committee chairmen Wednesday, including Rep. Wright Patman, in what one Democrat called a revolution against the seniority system.

The other chairman also faces possible defeat. Another has said he would not seek re - election.

By identical 13 to 11 votes, the Steering and Policy Committee recommended deposing Patman as chairman of the House Banking and Currency Committee and Wayne Hays as chairman of the House Administration Committee.

The panel's recommendations will be voted on Thursday by the full caucus. Both chairmen hope to overturn the committee recommendations by appealing to the caucus, which has the final

The committee nominated Rep. Henry Reuss, D - Wis., to succeed Patman and Rep. Frank Thompson, D. N.J. to replace Hays.

Mills replacement The caucus is expected to approve the committee nomination of Rep. Al Ullman, D - Ore., to succeed Rep. Wilbur Mills, D - Ark., as chairman of the Ways and Means Committee. Mills earlier announced he would not seek the chairmanship for another term.

Facing stiff opposition in the caucus are Armed Services Chairman Edward Hebert, D. La., and Agriculture Chairman W. R. Poage, D - Tex., who were renominated by the steering committee by two - vote margins.

More conservative

The caucus, however, is considered by many observers to be more conservative than the Democratic House body as a whole, prompting some to predict the two will have tough, uphill fights to win a caucus majority and retain their chairmanships.

CHILDREN STILL FACE TYPECASTING

City unit studies school sexism

By NANCY E. CRANE AND ELLEN SPONSELLER

State News Staff Writers East Lansing is tackling the problem of sexism in its schools, but according to administrators, teachers, students and parents, children are still being typecast

Last Saturday, a State Board of Education task force investigating sexism charged Michigan schools with widespread sex bias. It criticized textbooks, separate courses for boys and girls, sexist teaching methods and discriminatory career counseling. It recommended that the state board force Michigan cities to end all sexist

East Lansing is one step ahead of the report recommendations and many Michigan schools. It has a commission to study sexism and has instituted courses in women's studies at the high school and

"We're lucky to live in East Lansing," said Warren Starr, principal of Bailey Elementary School. "I think East Lansing is ahead of other communities because we live in a very liberal university town where parents are very concerned. We are more attuned to current trends in society here than we would be in a little town like Bad

However, Kathy Kingdon, a teacher at MacDonald Middle School, believes East Lansing still has a lot of work to do to get sexism out of the schools.

East Lansing elementary schools use new multimedia materials in classes rather than the old Dick and Jane series, but these materials can still be sexist. Kingdon cited a study done with a reading book used in eighth grade classes at MacDonald Middle School as an example.

"In the "Counterpoint" book, 89 per cent of the main characters were male. And out of 60 jobs portrayed in the book, 56 were done by men and only 8 by women. This is just blatant sexism," Kingdon said.

Tony Egnatuck, principal of the Hannah Middle School, said sexism is a problem which has to be fought.

"We do stereotype people and we have to get away from it," Egnatuck said. "The East Lansing Board of Education is doing as much as they can without drastically changing the programs."

Starr believes that most children learn sexual roles at home. He said that schools usually reinforce what the children learn at home, but in East Lansing, teachers try to break down stereotypes in the classroom.

This is confirmed by one parent who works in the Red Cedar School kindergarten for one day each week.

"In kindergarten the teachers are very fair. They don't push girls to dolls and boys to trucks. It's the kids themselves who pressure each other," Nancy Elliot said.

"My son has a teddy bear which is his favorite toy, and he wanted to take it in for show and tell. He was so embarrassed by the reactions of the other boys in the class that he hid the teddy bear in his locker. Now he drags out all his old cars and trucks, which he never plays with, for show and tell," she said.

Colette Taylor, fifth grader at Marble school, thinks girls and boys should be

"Our teachers don't tell girls one thing and the boys something else," Taylor said. "But the books we used to read did."

MacDonald Middle School students in the home economics and industrial arts classes talked Tuesday about their roles. Jeff Docking, one of four boys in the eighth grade cooking class, said, "We love cooking, I don't think it's too 'femish' at all. I'm going to need it when I'm a bachelor."

Tane DeChelbor and Laurie Durkee agreed. "Most girls don't want to take this class because they feel they can't do it as well as boys. Most of the boys in this class are chauvinists," they said. Their text book for the class shows no girls working.

Sean Joyce said that he was taught that girls should stay at home. "You learn to grow up like that," he said. "In the books work. All the books are like that."

Beth Lawrence, who teaches a class in sexism in literature at East Lansing High School, said stereotypes are slowly breaking down at the schools.

"Many of our textbooks are more current than those of other schools," Lawrence said. "But girls - as well as other minorities need special pats on the back — so everyone gets a fair shake.

At least that is the method followed by H. Lynn Jondahl. Now beginning his second two - year term as a state representative, the East Lansing Democrat credits his effectiveness to detailed study of specific problems. "I don't approach many issues all that reign," he said. "At the same time, I'm willing to plod through all of that in order to build a stepping stone." Jondahl said his business calls for careful compromise and can only be done if one knows what he wants to accomplish. "It is possible to succeed in such a way that you can gain some accomplishments around here, and in doing that, essentially close options on what you want to do on a longer run kind of basis," he said. "You're dealing here with pros who come into every room sizing up the situation," he added. "You're always hearing the words and then trying to piece that together with other parts. And that's just plain fun."

There are frustrations, however, for the silver and brown - haired man.

"You find that you really thought you had a grasp of a situation, and what you left out was that irrational factor that has to do with someone's personal feelings," he said.

However, after two years of first - hand experience. Jondahl still affirms the rightness of government and its ability to intrigue and excite him. The system must be the protection for the rights of minorities and of options for the future, he said. "I think at almost any point I would give

The question for me is, does the system work in such a way that you get the maximum input of various concerns?" Jondahl asked.

"My impatience comes when I'm in a situation where insanity and irrationality reign. At the same time, I'm willing to plod through all of that in order to build a stepping stone."

- Lynn Jondahl, state representative from East Lansing.

Jondahl encourages people to organize and said he spends a lot of time dealing with existing interest groups. To obtain input, Jondahl said he is planning another legislative conference similar to last year's, in addition to possible open - subject meetings in local homes.

Some bills Jondahl has not given up cover the issues for which he vowed on election night last Nov. 5 to continue working:

environment, civil rights and housing. Jondahl said his bill banning nonreturnable beverage containers from Michigan is being redrafted. A prohibition on pull tabs has been added for the bill's second try.

This time, however, the ban has Gov. Milliken's support, due probably to Dept. of Commerce research supporting Jondahl's contention that jobs would be gained, not lost, he said.

His bill requiring a moratorium on construction of nuclear power plants will be reintroduced, Jondahl said, as part of a package also regulating plant location, transportation of nuclear wastes and state.

monitoring of plants. In the civil rights area, Jondahl said he is working with people interested in expanding provisions of existing law to stop age, sex and handicap discrimination.

A lot of his time now and for the past several months has been spent drafting revisions of Michigan's juvenile code, Jondahl said. Proposed changes would remove status offenses - actions which are criminal only because a juvenile is not an adult, make it difficult for juveniles to waive counsel and also raise the legal - age definition of a juvenile to 18. Jondahl's housing rehabilitation grants and loans bill will also be reintroduced this year, he said. The bill would provide a maximum of $8,000 to low - income families.

However, Jondahl says he is more concerned with passage of good legislation than with having his name on it.

"Over and over again, the contributions that I make are on the bills that other people have introduced," he said.

While it is difficult to judge an individual lawmaker's influence, Jondahl thinks that by doing his homework and consistently presenting a civil liberties viewpoint, he has earned a substantial amount of trust.

"There's an overwhelming appreciation for the fact that I'm going to do what I say I'm going to do," he said.

"We've been able to stop legislation in order to get the provisions that we want. If you can do that, you can make a substantial contribution," he added.

Authority has virtually discontinued collecting and recycling newspaper on campus, redirecting its efforts toward office waste recycling due to the greater profit margin in the higher quality

"People can just throw their newspapers away as far as we're concerned," Mark V'Soske, program director of the authority Environmental concern apparently has taken a back seat to monetary considerations in the eyes of the authority, which will not be interested in newspapers unless the price rises.

"If the price goes up, then we'll be back in the newspaper business again," V'Soske says.

But as time passes and the authority waits for a price rise, large amounts of recyclable newspaper will be destroyed.

It is difficult to understand the reasoning behind the authority's decision to appeal to the City of financial aid, considering the group's history.

prided itself on saving MSU Trashmores.

The MSU Waste Control money that would have been spent hauling waste to landfills. Now that it has ceased newspaper collection, the University will again have to spend money to haul the extra waste to landfills.

This money should instead be spent to subsidize the authority, allowing it to collect and transport the newspaper to the recycling plant and thereby conserve natural resources.

Volunteer labor, originally the authority's backbone, which apparently has not received serious consideration as a solution to the present crisis, should be solicited in order to cut down on labor costs and preserve the operation.

About one year ago, at the height of the waste recycling boom, the Waste Control Authority laid aside a proposal to build a ski slope from MSU waste material because the profits of paper recycling were too good to pass up.

But now, while the unit looks East Lansing rather than MSU for outward to East Lansing for aid instead of inward to MSU and the spirit of volunteerism, enough Since the authority was formed newspaper is being thrown out to three years ago, the group has build a whole range of Mt.

Affirmative action needed

NEW YORK - A recent memorandum from the Office of Civil Rights of the Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare declared that the Federal Government's "affirmative action" requirements for college faculty hiring "must not operate to restrict consideration to minorities and women only.' Rather, the memo continued, the affirmative action program was intended to forbid "differential standards based on race, color, sex, religion or national origin.'

The memo looked like a retreat to those who had been charging that affirmative action was "racism in reverse," in that it meant preference for minority groups and women over white males. To others, the document - signed by Peter Holmes, Director of the Office of Civil Rights appeared to be an attempt to clarify what affirmative action really means. Obviously, such a clarification was needed, not only as a response to critics, but as a warning to universities and colleges that might have been guilty, in their zeal to meet presumed federal requirements, of setting up quotas or of passing by better-qualified white males in order to hire more women and blacks.

Read that way — as, for instance, Dr. James Harris, President of the National Education Assn. read it - the Holmes Memorandum does not offer as much comfort to critics of affirmative action as may at first appear. For this memorandum makes it clear that there is no federal 'requirement" that women or blacks be hired rather than white men - that, in fact, under the hiring guidelines, colleges and universities are supposed to hire the best qualified applicants, which is all the critics say they are arguing for.

Nevertheless, the belief has grown, with some reason, that in order to hand on to their federal funds, colleges must hire women and blacks almost exclusively. Peter Kelly, who has a PhD. in education, wrote from Arizona after an earlier article in this space that his degree had become "useless" in the search for a faculty post because, "as I found out in those situations where I had personal contacts, I'm not black, I'm not male and I'm too old.

Numerous other letters from white males echoed that bitter belief. There is evidence, moreover, that is some cases quotas have been established, at least in admissions policy, and probably in faculty hiring. In the Defunis case, the University of Washington conceded that it has a preferential quota for the admission of blacks to its law school, leading Philip Kurland and the late Alexander Bickel to the obvious conclusion, in an amicus brief, that "if the Constitution prohibits exclusion of blacks and other minorities on racial grounds, it cannot permit the exclusion of whites on racial grounds."

Last year, Dr. Richard A. Lester of Princeton University published a study called "Antibias Regulation of Universities," which warned that preferential hiring of blacks and women might lead to a lowering of academic standards. Together the charges of reverse racism or resexism, the fear of a loss of acade excellence is the most frequently exprescriticism of "affirmative action."

Some statistics (from "the Chronice," Higher Education," Aug. 5, 1974) inch that there is a heavy emphasis on h women and blacks. In the previous Stanford, for example, had given about fifth of new faculty positions to women, a more than four-fifth of all its new emiees were either women or member

Sixteen of 35 new faculty members University of Bridgeport were women, 23 per cent of faculty appointments at University of Wisconsin in the fall of were expected to go to women. But a d look at such figures scarcely support idea that white males can no longer teaching jobs. Twenty-three from 100 cent leaves 77 per cent of Wisconsin's la appointments to go to somebody other

Moreover, statistics from the Amer Council on Education show that in 1969. per cent of college and university fac positions were held by blacks, and 19,1 cent were held by women. By 1973 latest year for which figures are available those percentages had grown scarcely at the control of the control cent for women. White males are plainly being excluded - much less removed from faculties, nor do the percentage blacks and women yet suggest that effects of discrimination against the have been overcome.

Status figures are telling, too. The com on education reports that of all the men college and university faculties in academic year 1972-73, 30.3 per cent w full professors, and another 25.1 per s were associate professors. Only 11 person women were professors, and only 21 cent associate professors.

If the Holmes Memorandum, there was indeed a retreat from affirmation action policies for the hiring of women blacks, it was premature and ill-adva discussed in another article, neither rev racism nor the lowering of acad standards need necessarily be the resul

Black theatre

There is no theater without black theater, and in order to have successful black theater we need the various talents of the black students on this campus.

The Black Artists Manifesto (BAM) is designed for black students who are interested about the different aspects in the entertainment field. It is geared toward organizing a company of writers, actors, directors, choreographers and technicians for the production of black plays. At the present the BAM is in its recruiting stages. There is no experience necessary, just interest and dedication, because an organization cannot function without the dedication of its members.

Therefore, if you see this organization as just a past time, and not an opportunity to put forth a constructive effort in a specific area of interest, I advise that you not waste your time in coming out. However, if you feel you sincerely might be interested we definitely need you.

The BAM is now in the preparation stages for its first event of the year. It is the "BAM Cultural Extravaganza." It will be a four-day event, which will include a variety of entertainment as well as different areas of black cultural background.

If you are interested in participating in the extravaganza or want to learn more about the Black Artists Manifesto, there will be a meeting at 8 tonight in 33 Union. Your cooperation will be deeply appreci-

Grade blurring

Faculty and students who have written regarding high GPAs should address the method used to achieve high grades. The assumption underlying the discussion is that testing is fair and equitable. However, some faculty permit students to repeat examinations until they achieve the grade they desire, while other students accept the grade they receive. Thus, a 3.5 or 4.0 grade received usually is acceptable to a student, while a 2.0 is not to another student: nevertheless, the latter grade may be improved to a 3.5 or 4.0 by the method described. This may be one factor that results in the rise of the GPA. It is doubtful if anyone knows how many faculty permit this method of grade improvement. It is causing some employers to establish testing devices to distinguish between the outstanding student and the average. Some employers who hire our product still believe the potential for success is greater with the outstanding student than with the mediocre or average student. We should not blur or obscure this

The anti-trust suit recently filed by the Justice Dept. against AT&T is projected to require several years before it reaches the stage of a court decision. One might wonder at the snail-like pace of justice in this case, but it is consistent with the delays observable in other criminal and business court proceedings.

The recent Watergate revelations and their large involvement of lawyers as principle characters should, one might guess, have increased the sensitivity of lawyers to questions of ethics. However, a reading of the April 1974 issue of "The Barrister " magazine, published by the Young Lawyers Section of the American Bar Assn. reveals that last spring no such message had filtered through to the young lawyers.

On page 17 of this issue, under the title "Law Notes/Corporate Anti-trust Audit, Establishing a Document Retention Program," we learn of a newer field of legal expertise. Death had taken its course with such prominent Americans as Chet Huntley, Jack Benny and Mama Cass. Also, the summer finally ended for none other than Allan Sherman, who wrote before he died to "madda and fadda" about Camp Granada, telling them that the counselors were smoking dope when lights went out and that the camp was discriminating against 39-year-old campers.

One of the bright spots of 1974, besides

Playing on the atmosphere of disenchantment in '74, director Bob Fosse released a ripened movie, "Lenny," in which Dustin Hoffman portrays the late Lenny Bruce (well, he was hardly ever on time). This sparked a revival of interest in Lenny Bruce, a comedian and satirist who won fame for his skits on injustices of society, his dirty talk, and his arrests on stage in Chicago and New York for saying such words as "cocksucker" (don't bother to look it up - it means "your mother" in Yiddish).

In further attempts to explore the supernatural and just get plain frightened, Americans flooded the box offices in record numbers to see "The Exorcist", a movie in which a 12-year-old girl masturbates with a crucifix, urinates on a Scotchguard rug and illustrates that being a devil means throwing up in a priest's face and never having to God bless you or give any donation.

Of course, Americans were still able to laugh in '74. Comedies remained a significant part of the film spectrum. One of the finer lines that I heard was in a movie which I saw in a packed theatre during Christmas called "Putney Swope," which was originally released in 1968.

A reporter asked the over-domineering black advertisement executive, "Mr. Swope, did you ever sleep with your wife before you were married?" and he replied in Groucho Marx rhetoric, "Not a wink." 1974 was a year where we saw a president who we thought needed an exorcist use the dirty language of Lenny Bruce along with the manhandling pushiness of Putney Swope. It was basically a shaky year.

With all the unsteadiness, I thought it best to provide some guidance for the year 1975 by reiterating on some words of wisdom by a Polish philosopher, Hyme Lutenski, who once said, "You can't regulate your life according to your bowel movement." Don't think about it

Analysts say Viet Communists face diplomatic constraints in '75

By JAMES M. MARKHAM New York Times

SAIGON — In December the Vietnamese Communists sharply intensified their attacks in the southern part of the country and, probably to their chagrin, have thrust the war back into the news.

The word "offensive" is prematurely on some lips, even though the campaign has yet to reach what many expect will be a considerably higher level of violence. Barring unexpected cracking of the Saigon side, most foreign analysts believe the Communists have set themselves limited, though ambitious, goals for 1975.

Analysis

"They don't view 1975 as the end," said a Western diplomat who closely follows pronouncements and decision - making in North Vietnam. There have been no stirring calls for "mass uprisings" on the model of past offensives, he noted, and propaganda organs in Hanoi have been playing the campaign down.

The Vietnamese Communists are operating under a series of weighty constraints. The first concerns the United States.

The fall of Richard Nixon from power may well have strengthened the hands of those arguing for stepped - up military activity the former president was viewed in Hanoi as wildly unpredictable - but the North Vietnamese are still thought to remain wary of American intentions.

While most Americans may consider a resumption of bombing of North Vietnam by B52s unthinkable, Hanoi's leaders, in the opinion of many analysts, do not make such an assumption. And to insure against such an eventuality, they must keep their actions in the South within certain limits.

Similarly, the Communists must be careful not to reverse American congressional opinion, for the most part, skeptical or even hostile toward the Saigon side.

If American legislators read day after day about valiant but hopeless stands of important Saigon garrisons - and are then persuaded that increased military assistance might alter the picture - they could become more amenable to the Ford Administration's expected appeal for supplementary aid.

There is also circumstantial evidence that the Soviet Union and China would not be pleased to see the Vietnam war flare up to a degree that might set back relations with the United States.

There is, of course, a degree of bluff in all this for - how deeply does Washington really care about the destiny of the Saigon government? How convincing are American appeals to Peking and Moscow to lean on Hanoi? But it does seem reasonable to conclude that the Vietnamese Communists have felt certain pressures from the Russians and Chinese.

The final restraint on the Vietnamese Communists, and the most interesting of all, is ideology.

Though American propaganda insistently speaks of Hanoi's attempt at "conquest" of the South, the North Vietnamese and their Vietcong allies do not see themselves as huns intent on mere territorial aggrandizement.

A protracted war has inevitably enhanced military considerations, but these still go hand in hand with fundamental political ones. The 1972 spring offensive, for example, strengthened the Communists' territorial position, enabling them to negotiate from greater strength in Paris. Less than a year later, the Paris peace accords were signed.

In their own somewhat convoluted propa-current military campaign is intended to "force" Washington and Saigon to carry out the Paris peace agreements.

They have also demanded that President Nguyen Van Thieu be removed, preferably by the United States, and replaced by someone willing to carry out the ganda, the Communists are saying that their departure before, notably before the conclusion of the Paris agreements, and there is no reason to believe their position is any more inflexible than it was in the past.

But it appears to many that one goal of their "strategic attacks" is to deal the Thieu government a series of reverses that will either bring it down or, as one Western diplomat put it, "bring it to the conference The Communists have demanded Thieu's table with a whole bag of concessions.'

FCC move forces 'family viewing

By KATHY ESSELMAN State News Reviewer

The FCC has again hunkered down before the networks. FCC Chairman Richard E. Wiley declared last week that plans of the three major television networks for a "family viewing" hour each night eliminates the need for federal action to curb sex and violence on television.

The FCC Chairman met with the chief executives of ABC. CBS and NBC and the trade organization, the National Association of Broadcasters. saving: "We'll postpone any consideration of (government action) for the time being."

This decision comes in light of the announced plans by the networks to devote the first hour of prime time, 8 to 9 p.m. in the EST zone, to programs suitable for family viewing. The networks also have agreed to warnings in advance of programming which "might be disturbing to a significant portion of the adult audience" aired during other viewing

The reform of early - evening television and the warnings on both TV and in television listings were among the principle changes Wiley wanted. The flap raised by NBC's early evening programming of "Born Innocent" with its explicit rape scene aroused critics, viewers and children's groups. Wiley said that the network executives assured him that "family viewing" means programming appropriate for younger children. Wiley said he is still concerned, because the agreement now affects only network affiliates.

The FCC and the networks are making this concession after considerable pressure from Sen.

Lecture-Concert Series at MSU presents the Winter 1975 Directors' Choice Film Series

François Truffaut

Winner of last year's Academy Award for Best Foreign Film, François Truffaut is considered the founder of the French New Wave movement and the auteur theory in cinema. From his critically acclaimed first feature film THE 400 BLOWS to his recent Oscar winner, Truffaut has established himself as one of today's most exciting film directors. The films range in mood from the free-wheeling exuberance found in SHOOT THE PIANO PLAYER to the bittersweet nostalgia of JULES AND JIM and the coolly-sophisticated suspense of BRIDE WORE BLACK. Autobiographical and artistic, François Truffaut is unquestionably a filmmaker who

Families lose in TV ratings battle

By KATHY ESSELMAN

State News Reviewer What constitutes acceptable "Family viewing?" Only the wildest stretch of the imagination can define "M*A*S*H." "The Night Stalker," "Hot L "The Smothers Brothers" or "Gunsmoke" as family entertainment.

"The Rookies" overflows with gratuitous violence, gun battles and exploding cars. If one's intent is to teach the proper editing of fight scenes to your kids, it qualifies as family viewing; otherwise, forget it.

"Gunsmoke" is not now and never was intended for children. Jack Elam guest-starred on the series from the earliest days and continues to play poker with the "Gunsmoke"

"It's not a kid show, it's meant for grownups," Elam said. "It's not an easy show to watch. If you want to sit there and be entertained you can watch "Hawaii Five-O."

The unswerving honesty of the emotions and the gritty realism of the characters are the strength of the series. But that honesty demands that it depict brutality, fathers killing sons and suicide as an acceptable solution in their dramas. That is strong stuff for such an early time slot. No question that it is a good series, but parents should watch it with their children.

Episodes produced by its new producer, John .G. Stephens, indicate that this series take a more conservative course in regard to violence from now on.

Many 8 to 9 p.m. shows can be watched by children. The Disneyland cops on "Adam-12" offend no one except real policemen. "The Night Stalker" can be watered down so that it will be acceptable for children. Unfortunately, if it is, it will no longer be entertaining to adults. "The Smothers Brothers" seems skewed to a 10 to 15 year-old audience. No one older will like it and no one younger will watch it.

"M*A*S*H" is not for kids no way. Nine-year-olds, with parental discretion, could handle it and the honesty with which adult attitudes toward sex, war and violence are Truffaut often deals with relationships between men and women with a slightly pessimistic attitude towards the ability of such relationships to survive, Rudzats said.

"There is a great deal of husband - wife, husband mistress, mistress - lover situations in which something always goes wrong. Probably in 'Stolen Kisses' and 'Bed and Board' that's the entire way he approaches it. He sees it as humorous instead of crying over the situation," he said.

Rudzats said the purpose of Directors' Choice was to study the main works of a single director each term so that audiences could come to understand the director's individual style and technique. The series has focused on the films of Alfred Hitchcock, George Cukor, Frederico Fellini and Frank Capra.

Other films in the series are "The 400 Blows" [1959], to be shown Jan. 28; "Stolen Kisses" [1969], to be shown January 30; "Bed and Board" [1971], to be shown Feb. 6; "Shoot The Piano Player" [1960], to be shown Feb. 11; "The Bride Wore Black" [1968], to be shown Feb. 27, and "Two English Girls" [1972], to be shown March 6.

LOBBYISTS ARE SCHOOL'S VOICE AT CAPITOL

3 MSU allies pump flesh in legislature

By STEVE ORR State News Staff Writer

A legislator, in a manner of speaking, is always up for sale. Various individuals pass through a lawmaker's day, vying for his or her time and, more important, vying for the legislator's interest.

Many of these individuals are lobbyists (special interest representatives, public relations officers, legislative liason directors, buttonholers, influence peddlers, lapel pressers.)

- MSU has at least three allies pumping flesh, talking quick and sometimes picking up the check in the school's interest at the state legislature. They are the Michigan Higher Education Students legislative branch and MSU Executive Vice President Jack Breslin.

Student governments

MHESA is an organization of postsecondary student governments. There are 94 public, private and community colleges in Michigan, and MHESA chairperson Rick TenEyck says about 30 of those schools participate in MHESA.

MHESA acts as a clearinghouse for student governments, coordinating information and putting in touch with each other any student governments that share common MSU's men's gymnastics team has never defeated Penn State, which finished third in the NCAA last year and is considered one of the top three teams in the nation again this season.

Coach Barbara Peacock, of MSU's women's gymnastics team, believes that her squad has more depth than Penn State and that Saturday's meet will be evenly matched.

"Penn State scored in the high 90s last year but we're close to that," Peacock said. "The person we'll have to look out for is Karen Schuckman. She was last year's champion in all - around competition at the AIAW (Assn. of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women) national championship, and she's very talented."

Peacock said the returning gymnasts and the new talent on the team this year should result in a very strong squad.

"We have approximately half of the same people we had on last year's squad, which means that our new competitors have a lot of talent," Peacock said. "Our cocaptains, senior Diane Chapela and sophomore Anne Weaver, along with transfer student Kathi Kincer from Indiana State, form a good nucleus for the team."

Saturday's competition will mark the first time MSU's women's gymnastics team has faced Penn State on a regular season basis.

MILKOVICH, AVERY CO-SPARTANS OF WEEK

Little, big men lead grapplers

By PAT FARNAN State News Sports Writer Watch out for those bulls - big and small. MSU heavyweight wrestler Larry Avery, who has been bullying opponents around for two years, has been selected as one of two Spartan wrestlers of the week for the second straight week. Defending 126-pound NCAA champion Pat Milkovich joins Avery as co-Spartan of the week. Milkovich defeated three solid opponents last weekend to improve his record to 4-0-1 in dual meets.

Avery also collected three wins in three tries for the Spartans as Grady Peninger's troops disposed of Indiana University and Rhode Island while losing to Iowa, rated No. 1 in

One of Avery's victories came against Iowan John Bowlsby, whom Avery lost to at the Midlands tournament in December. "He'll never beat me again," Avery said. "I wasn't ready to wrestle him at the Midlands. I consider that a tune-up tournament."

Avery's record is unblemished in dual meets. In five outings he is 5-0, including three pins. Avery's other season loss (he's 10-2 overall) came against Russ Hellickson, asst. coach at the University of Wisconsin and an alternate on the 1972 Olympic team, at the Midlands.

Milkovich, who could become the first four-time Big Ten and NCAA champion in MSU wrestling annals, recorded a convincing win Friday against Midlands champion Tim Cysewski of Iowa.

Milkovich was sick and did not compete in the Midlands. The Spartan junior has been invited to represent MSU in the annual East-West classic later Avery, Milkovich and the whole bunch of Spartans will have their grips tested this weekend as they head west to Oklahoma. The University of Oklahoma and Oklahoma State will fill the bill and both are rated in the top 10 nationally. In preseason polls they were rated one-two.

Last year the Spartans won twice when they faced the two schools here and Avery and Milkovich will have to keep it rolling if the Spartans are to repeat the feat.

Milkovich will confront Billy Martin of Oklahoma State Friday night. Avery will take on Jim Jackson. Milkovich bested Martin 5-2 in the finals of the national championship last year. Jackson, currently 10-3, is a Grand Rapids native and a heralded freshman prospect.

Against Oklahoma Saturday, Milkovich will be matched up with scrappy sophomore Mike Chinn while Avery will resume his battle with old nemesis Bill Kalkbrenner. All four matches will be critical for the Spartans.

Avery, who won 90 per cent of his matches last year, was possibly the best heavyweight in the country for most of last season. But he finished second to Michigan's Gary Ernst

(whom he beat in regular season) in the Big Ten and did nothing in the NCAA finals. "I'll win the Big Ten and the nationals this year," he says. "I know I've said that before and maybe people don't believe me

"I'm going to win them, though. Last year at the nationals I was sick. I couldn't get that winning feeling."

Milkovich's record speaks for itself. Twice NCAA and Big Ten titlist, he is the man to beat at 126-pounds.

"I don't worry about losing." Milkovich says. "I think only about doing my best each time I

Dauw goes the distance

By DAN SPICKLER State News Sports Writer

Jim Dauw posed like a statue on the starting block of lane five before the 1,000-yard freestyle event during the men's swimming meet between MSU and Wisconsin Saturday.

He sat with his head in his hands, obviously involved in some intensive thought process maybe psyching himself for the upcoming 20-lap event.

Whatever it was, the Spartan freshman got up on the block, swam his best 1,000-yard competition freestyle ever and better yet, broke an MSU varsity record.

"I was just trying to stop from shaking," Dauw said, explaining his preperformance activity.

"I was really nervous," he added. Dauw shattered the old Spartan record set in 1970 by John Thuerer with a time of 10:01.38. Thuerer's time was 10:04.0. MSU swimming coach Dick Fetters was pleased with the young swimmer's time, but indicated the record will probably be broken quite often this year. For example, Dauw has already set a goal for the squad's dual meet against Michigan at 2 p.m. Saturday in the Men's Intramural Building pool. The Pontiac first-year man plunk. No, it is not the cockroaches playing handball in residence hall radiators.

RECALLS 50 YEARS OF TUNING

Richard Cain is tuning pianos. Cain, a 64-year-old retiree, has been tuning some of MSU's dorm pianos for 26 years. It has been his job to keep pianos in good playing order for the past 10 years.

And at other times in other places, Cain has put in more than 50 years on the piano Ironically, other than stretching the thirds, fifths and octaves necessary to tune the instrument, Cain has never played the piano. Though he played a variety of horns in his high school band and later sang baritone in barber shop quartets, economic necessity kept him from serious piano study. Instead, he learned to tune them. When Cain's father was 40 he lost his sight, and took up piano tuning as a new occupation. The younger Cain, then 12, aided his father for four years and then completed a 10-week course in piano tuning at Polk College in La Porte, Ind. Polk College no longer exists, but Cain's hands and ears — conditioned by thousands of hours on the keyblock - need no refresher

While Cain now tunes few pianos outside of the University, he can still remember plying his trade in blind pigs during Prohibition - even though he was underage. More recent memories include tuning pianos for Roger Williams and Patti Page when they performed at the Lansing Civic Cain estimates the residence halls contain about 60 pianos, two-thirds of which are uprights. He tunes each piano twice a year, and repairs the instruments when vandalism, the weather or plain old age strike.

Cain also takes care of three pianos in Kellogg Center and five pianos in the Union. He says most of the pianos are in women's residence halls, which may have as many as four of them. The biggest problem he faces is vandalism.

One of the worst instances of vandalism during the past few years involved a piano in Holmes Hall.

The music rack had been broken, so I took it home and fixed it," Cain said. "When I brought it back the pedals were kicked to pieces, lying all over the floor. When I fixed those and brought them back the top rod was busted." Cain sighs. That was a grand piano.

Cain works three to four hours a day, four days a week, tuning two pianos a day. It takes him up to three months to tune all the pianos, so he often begins the tuning cycle over again as soon as the last piano is tuned.

Cain starts his job by tuning C above middle C with a tuning fork. He then tunes the other notes from that C, tightening and loosening the more than 200 strings which produce a piano's 88 tones.

Not all of Cain's time has been spent hovering over the ivory. He worked as a grocery store manager in Iron River, as a pattern maker in a Wisconsin shipyard during World War II and as a MSU residence hall building supervisor and building inspector for 26 years. Though he retired as a supervisor two years ago, he still tunes

The tuning job is now quite a strain on Cain. He notes that there are 17 tons of strain on a piano keyblock - 165 pounds on each string. Cain is partially crippled and the Michigan weather sometimes leaves him feeling pretty weak. However, Cain says, "As long as I can tune I'm going to tune."

Commissioners approve grant on jail program

By DAVE GUZNICZAK

State News Staff Writer Chronic drinkers imprisoned on charges stemming from alcohol abuse can continue to receive rehabilitation while serving time in jail following a vote Tuesday by Ingham County comissioners.

The commissioners unanimously adopted a resolution approving a grant from the Office of Substance Abuse Services of the Michigan Dept. of Public Health to continue funding four postions in the newly created Ingham County Jail Alcohol Program.

The program, initiated last December and continuing on a trial basis until June 30, 1975, will be carried on in the Ingham County jail to help rehabilitate inmates with serious drinking problems.

Positions in the program, which are pre-sently filled, include two alcohol therapists, a coordinator-educator and a clerk typist.

"It's the first alcohol rehabilitation program to be implemented on a local jail level in the state," Jack Jesse, coordinatoreducator of the program, said.

Jesse said the primary function of the program is to attempt to prevent inmates from returning to the bottle once they are freed from jail. Since December inmates have been receiving individual attention through the program two to three times a week from two alcohol therapists who teach a general education program on alcohol rehabilitation. Inmates' families are also consulted by the workers in the program.

Jesse added that inmates will be watched closely by the workers for a six-month period after being released from jail.

"There can be no amnesty until the war in Vietnam is over." - Kerry Gershowitz

GROUNDBREAKING MARKS BIRTHDAY

ing Center construction begins

By MELISSA PAYTON

State News Staff Writer When President Ford's leniency program expires at the end of this month, a large number of Vietnam draft evaders and deserters will not be sorry to see it go.

One of them is Gerald Gershowitz, a draft evader living in exile in Toronto. His wife Kerry was in East Lansing Wednesday to explain why he is joining a vast number of those eligible for "earned re - entry" who fail to use the program.

"There can be no amnesty until the war in Vietnam is over," Gershowitz said in a morning news conference conducted by United Ministries in Higher Education.

Explaining that her views represent those of the Toronto American Exiles' Assn., a group formed after Ford announced his conditional amnesty plan, she cited other philosophical and legal objections to the program.

She called the leniency program a "shamnesty" and criticized attempts to renew the program after its Jan. 31 ex-come back for a second round of punishment for something that wasn't wrong in the first place,"

"My husband feels he did absolutely nothing wrong by resisting the war in Vietnam. Anything we could do to resist, was better for the American government and people," she

The three parts of the leniency program Ford set up last fall have received applications from only a small minority of those eligible, as Gershowitz and other critics frequently

The clemency board, headed by Charles Goodell, which handles convicted evaders and deserters, has been the worst failure. As of Tuesday, the board had received 1,100 applications out of an estimated 100,000 eligibles.

The Defense Dept., which handles unsettled military desertion cases, has received applications from about one fourth of the 12,500 eligible.

And the Justice Dept. has gotten only 170 applications from about 6,800 draft evaders who might be eligible. Kerry Gershowitz's husband is one of

The continuation of the Vietnam war is the major concern of exiles, she said, but another objection is that the estimated 600,000 veterans with less than honorable discharges don't come under its provisions.

Veterans with less than honorable discharges, frequently as a result of anti - war activity, have trouble getting iobs and often end up in prison after resorting to crime, Gershowitz said.

"Those most in need of real amnesty are not eligible," she Gaining impetus from the

"It's like asking people to recently stepped - up military activity in Indochina and the establishment of a leniency program they protest, anti-war agencies like the one she represents are trying to regenerate anti - war sentiment, Gershowitz said.

"There has always been an anti - war feeling, but now it's a movement," she said.

Gershowitz is on her second speaking tour on behalf of Canadian exiles. She spoke in Texas for three weeks in November and will go to Washington, D.C. and New York next. Her expenses in Michigan have been paid by the Michigan Council of Churches. Women who speak out against the war and in favor of unconditional amnesty frequently have their credentials as resisters challenged, Gershowitz said.

"We have to continually explain ourselves," she said. In setting up one of the speaking engagements in New York, someone expressed doubt that she was "the real thing,"

Gershowitz said.

"I guess they wanted someone who would be arrested before their eyes," she added.

"If you want to stay with the person you love, you cannot go back to the U.S. to live and work," Gershowitz continued.

"So I feel women have shared the exile experience.

"In my case, I feel I resisted the war to an equal extent as my husband. I quit school to go to work to make enough money for us to go to Canada.

Gargiulo, 28 was fired from his $11,000 - a - year job with the county engineer's office after commissioners said he had become an acute political embarrassment for them.

Commissioner Lake Lytal said irate citizens swamped the commission with telephone calls complaining about Gargiulo's hiring and salary. "These folks think this man is not a very good citizen. They don't want their tax dollars supporting him," Lytal said.

Gargiulo, who holds a master's degree in engineering, fled the draft in 1970 when his request for a commission was turned down. He spent four years in South America.

At Tuesday's meeting, commission Chairman Robert Culpepper said: "We're living in a free country because our people have been willing to serve whether or not they happen to agree with what the leaders of the country are doing

American Legion spokesman John Busby told commissioners: "The veterans of Palm Beach County are not going to sit idly by and see a straggler to this country get an $11,000 job while veterans are out of work."

But Betty Lucky, a citizen attending the meeting, called the commission's action "unconstitutional and unscriptural." She said: "Those speaking against amnesty are speaking from a standpoint of hate. The Bible says to love

The State Safety Commission may team up with Gov. Milliken to back several controversial pieces of proposed legislation.

In a meeting Tuesday, the commission - made up of representatives from the Michigan departments of secretary of state, education, police, highways and transportation and highway safety planning accepted proposed lists of legislative priorities from the member departments.

Some of the proposals coincide with traffic safety measures which were among the 150 proposals outlined by the governor in his State of the State address Thursday.

Two of those proposals that parallel Gov. Milliken's are the assessment of driving record points to those drivers caught breaking the 55 m.p.h. speed limit and mandatory blood alcohol testing of drivers involved in accidents in which someone is injured.

When the speed limit was lowered during the energy crisis, no provision was made for such assessment of points. The issue was argued in the state legislature last session but not approved. The lower speed limit is now permanent.

The mandatory breathalyzer tests at the scene of some accidents would "increase the state's capability for a positive and constructive approach for dealing with the drinking driver," according to the Dept. of Highway Safety Planning.

One controversial proposal not mentioned by Gov. Milliken that will be considered by the commission is the mandatory use of seat belts.

Panel asks iobless aid alternatives

LANSING (UPI) - Legislation streamlining the food stamp program and pressuring banks to be lenient with unemployed debtors will be ready for House action within a month, its sponsor said Wednesday.

The two proposals were part of an 11-bill jobless relief package recommended by a special House subcommittee studying problems of the unemployed.

Rep. Philip O. Mastin, D. Hazel Park, chairman of the panel, said the recommendations are an alternative to the $800 million in bonding programs proposed by Gov. Milliken last week.

"The governor placed his emphasis on economic growth," Mastin said. "But the fact of the matter is that 180,000 have already exhausted their benefits." While the governor's package is aimed at creating jobs, Mastin said emergency action must be taken to help the unemployed continue a near-normal existence until they find new jobs. "I don't think we can spend through $800 million in bonding programs," he said. Milliken's program would create jobs by borrowing money to start housing, state construction and transportation projects.

our way out of the problem

Mastin said his committee's recommendations currently are being drafted into bill form and should be ready for presentation to the legislature within three weeks. Several of 'the proposals, he added, can be enacted "very quickly."

These include measures which would encourage banks to sell food stamps, eliminate the delay in obtaining food stamps and authorize State Treasurer Allison Green to pressure banks into being lenient with debtors who are unemployed.

who have cases pending against the University do not feel these explanations were sufficient in excusing the failure of affirmative action.

One woman who has charged the University with sex discrimination believes affirmative action has done nothing for "The University is not going to do anything about hiring more women and minority faculty unless there is a monetary penalty for not meeting their goals," said Dr. Georgia Johnson, staff physician at the University Health Center and asst. professor of medicine. Johnson is one of the women charging the University with sex discrimination.

Johnson said her trouble began when she applied in 1973 for tenure and was refused. Though she has spent 19 years as a physician, she said she is still the lowest salaried faculty member in her department.

"Even the graduate students were making more, you know, and had more fringe benefits than me," she said.

Her case, filed with the Civil Rights Commission December, 1973, is still pending.

"The other reason? Oh, yes. I was incompetent," she said.

She said literature is being produced en masse by departments and colleges which use all male pronouns. In a recent College of Education graduate school bulletin entitled "Improving Man and his Environment," not one female pronoun was used, she said.

"Even the title was discriminatory. As if women do not live the environment too," Pettigrew said.

THE QUESTION BOX

Question: Can you tell us anything about Jerry Newman of "Petrocelli?" Is his wife an actress?

Dee and Joan

Answer: The Star of NBC'S "Petrocelli" bears the first name of Barry . . . not Jerry. He was born in Boston. Massachusetts and has been savvy about show business most of his life because his father used to run the Latin Casino there. During the winter he now lives in Tucson. Arizona because his show is shot on location. He is bachelor.

Robert, 42, spends six hours each day stuffing letters for a credit company.

For most, the thought of stuffing letters sounds appalling. But to Robert it is a pleasant change from sitting home all day and watching TV with his elderly parents. Robert is mentally retarded.

Robert is among the 350 students at the Beekman Center in Lansing who have taken advantage of the unique opportunities provided by the training school.

John Breaugh, principal of the Beekman Center since its existence in 1968, said that the school accommodates students ages 3 to 80 and teaches them various daily routines in an unconventional setting.

The center, which is located just south of Mount Hope, has not only a modern school building but a barn, greenhouse, grocery store and sheltered workshop in its educational

CIA acknowledges domestic files

WASHINGTON (AP) -The Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) acknowledged for the first time Wednesday that its agents infiltrated dissident groups inside the United States and established files on about 10,000 U.S.

But Director William E. Colby told senators he flatly denies "the press allegation that CIA engaged in a 'massive illegal domestic intelligence operation.'

"Whether we strayed over expressing dismay over the the edge of our authority on a few occasions over the past 27 years is a question for those authorized to investigate those matters to judge.'

The senate Appropriations subcommittee on intelligence operations cross-examined Colby and former CIA Director Richard Helms for more than three hours in a closed-door session. It then recommended unanimously the immediate start of a full and in-depth probe of all allegations against the spy agency.

In a 45-page statement made available to the press, Colby said he firmly believes all current CIA activities are within legal limits.

In the past, he said, the CIA - in two separate programs - placed agents into radical or dissident groups inside the United States to protect its own facilities and to further its intelligence and counterintelligence activities abroad.

He also said that, beginning in 1967, the CIA inserted 10 agents into dissident groups working inside Washington, D.C., because it believed that step was necessary to protect mestic disturbances. That Jews to Israel. Since the 1967 Middle East war, 100,000 Soviet immigrants have arrived in Israel. Since then, however, the number has been dwindling.

In Moscow, a leading Jewish activist said the collapse of the trade pact was "very sad

Another said: "We are very disappointed. This happened at a time when everyone thought we might be leaving. We hope all sides will come out of this and reach an agreement. But nevertheless, our movement will go on. Our reasons for emigration still remain."

John T. Connor Jr., head of the U.S.-Soviet Trade Council Office, said the Soviets could send resident American businessmen home "for a cooling off period, but I don't think that's going to happen. The Soviets still have quite a bit of good will for this relationship, and, anyway it's not the companies' fault that the Soviets couldn't live with the agreement." American in Another Moscow said: "It's still business as usual. We're meeting officials daily and appointments are being kept."

U.S.-Soviet trade hit $1.4 billion in 1973, largely because of the sale of $900 million worth of U.S. grain. The 1974 volume barely touched $1 billion and U.S. officials estimate a similar volume this year.
