JULIAN BOND

NEW YORK (AP) — Georgia legislator Julian Bond, the first black ever nominated for vice presidency, said Thursday he can get enough support — and $200,000 this June.

Bond said he is a serious candidate for the vice presidency with his eye on that and nothing else. He said in an interview on ABC's "America" program, adding:

some say about who does get the nomination in the Democratic party — what kind of person it is, what he or she stands for or against, what kind of program they have."

Bond was nominated during the 1968 Democratic convention when he was only 29, six years younger than the minimum age for a vice president.

think we complement each other," he added.

Bond criticized President Ford's tax cut proposal, saying it did not provide "any real relief for the people who need it the most and it allows those who now pay the least to keep on paying the least."

Calling the profits of oil and sugar companies "criminal," Bond called for stronger government controls to solve the nation's economic problems.

Miss Michigan: Our Choice as America's Prettiest Lifeguard

Above is Nancy Fleming as she appears today. Left, she poses on the cover of a September, 1960 Detroit News Sunday Pictorial shortly before she was selected Miss America.

MISS AMERICA 'NOT REAL'

the size and the source of the grant unusual: Fleming had a $10,000 college scholarship for winning the Miss America pageant the year before.

in Atlantic City, she had told Bert "a woman's place is in the home," and had off her sewing. She was queen of country's beauties.

— two children and a divorce later in a San Francisco television talk show Nancy Fleming says the pageant thrusts her into the nation's eye as an outmoded concept of being a straight "A" student in high school, she was graduated from MSU after three years in June 1964. Before she left the area, Fleming married William Edwards, the son of a MSU professor, in the MSU Chapel.

selection in Atlantic City just might have helped a little by distribution of several thousand copies of the Detroit News Sept. 4, 1960, Sunday Pictorial reposed on the cover in a bathing suit, nicely decorating a bit of the Michigan beach sand.

the Sunday tabloid, Fleming's name and face splashed across three pages, accompanied by copy describing her as "the girl next door."

Now she says it was hypocritical of pageant officials to conduct swimming suit competition then to bar Miss America from being photographed in a swimming suit during her reign, except for the traditional waterskiing shot in Cypress Gardens. She likened the stance to the "look but don't touch" concept of Playboy bunnies.

"They say it's not a flesh show 'but we do want to get a look at their bodies,'" she said laughing. "They say they are judging the girls on 'beauty of form, face and posture' and other 'incredible euphemisms.'"

Fleming said her own talent routine — demonstrating the versatility of a basic navy blue sheath — was "really hokey," but she said "How many girls whose talent was baton-twirling are still doing it when they're 32?"

No sooner had the strains of "There she is Miss America" faded than 18-year-old Nancy Fleming was barnstorming high schools around the country, armed with a well-rehearsed speech on preparing for the future.

Her face appeared on a billboard welcoming people to her hometown, Montague, Mich., population 2,500. Tourists took snapshots of her parents' home and plucked flowers there.

Long after her reign ended, people still were whispering "That's Miss America." Then she married. Ten years later she was divorced and looking for work.

She became co-host of a call-in television show, and now is cohosting a new local talk show.

Auto sales reported up after rebates announced

DETROIT (AP) — Auto sales in mid-January were 41 per cent higher than in the first 10 days of the month, apparently because of rebate sales schemes instituted to help unload a backlog of unsold vehicles.

However, sales in the Jan. 11 to 20 period remained 15.4 per cent below those 10 days last year and were the lowest for that period in 14 years. Sales for the first 10 days in January had been the lowest for that period in more than two decades.

"The rebates have just returned the industry to an average position, considering the recession," the industry analyst said.

"Early word of the rebates caused a lull in early January because people stayed out of the market to see what would happen. The rebates have brought those people back in."

The four major car companies reported Thursday that sales in mid-January were 131,132, compared with 155,004 in the same 1974 span and 93,235 in the first 10 days of 1975. The daily selling rate of 16,391 was the worst since 1961, when the daily rate was 14,851.

Chrysler Corp., which started the rebate parade on Jan. 12, said its deliveries nearly doubled from early January. It said its contracts, on which the firm offered rebates of up to $300 last week, set a company sales record for the latest period.

"We are very pleased with the results of the (rebate) program," Chrysler Vice President R. K. Brown said. "We feel it has done an important job in creating excitement in our industry."

Ford Motor Co. followed Chrysler in announcing a rebate plan Jan. 16 and American Motors and General Motors began similar plans this week. The Ford, AMC and GM plans offer rebates from $200 to $600.

Ford said its deliveries rose 12 per cent over early January, but were down 25 per cent from a year ago. It said sales of cars covered by its rebates were up 31 per cent from the previous period.

General Motors sales rose 54 per cent from the previous period, but were off 7.3 per cent from a year ago. American Motors said sales were up 35 per cent from the last period but down 46 per cent from mid-January 1974.

Officials for GM and AMC said their own cash rebate programs, which were launched at the close of the latest selling period, came too late to have a large impact on sales.

Ford said the "sales climate has improved substantially" since the company began its rebate program late in the mid-January period.

Industry analysts said sales normally are higher in each succeeding 10-day period every month because dealers are more willing to offer concessions to buyers to meet end-of-month bills. The rise during the middle 10 days of a month is usually only about 7 per cent, however.

Some analysts added that the over-all impact of the cash rebates on sales will not be clear until late January, though they said cars eligible for rebates showed the strongest improvement over early January sales figures.

An industry analyst noted that Chrysler grabbed an 18 per cent share of sales in mid-January, compared with only 13.4 per cent share in the previous period.

Chrysler sales in the Jan. 11 to 20 period were 23,608, compared with 25,728 a year ago and 12,468 in early January.

GM had sales of 66,456, down from 70,640 a year ago but up from 42,626 Jan. 1 to 10. Ford sales of 36,612 compared with 48,628 last year and 34,092 in early January, and AMC sales were 5,456, compared with 10,008 a year ago and 4,049 in the previous period.

Mayday protesters may receive money

By WIRE SERVICES AND STATE NEWS

If you were one of the demonstrators arrested at the 1971 Mayday protests, the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) is looking for you. You may be entitled to several thousand dollars in damages.

Last week, a U. S. District Court jury in Washington awarded an average of about $10,000 in damages to each of 1,200 persons arrested during a 1971 anti-war demonstration on the steps of the U. S. Capitol.

The ACLU won the $12 million damage suit against the District of Columbia for the false arrest and infringement of rights of the demonstrators.

As a result of the jury verdict, each of the demonstrators — most of whom were college students then — is entitled to $7,500 for violation of his First Amendment rights of free speech, and $500 for treatment labeled as "cruel and unusual punishment" in violation of the Eighth Amendment.

In addition, some of the complainants can get from $120 to $1800 for violation of Fourth Amendment rights for false arrest, while others are entitled to $300 to $1,800 for false imprisonment.

The ACLU now has the task of finding those arrested. Many of those people who were in Washington at the time are now scattered throughout the nation and have changed their addresses.

ACLU officials in Detroit say they will be trying to contact those arrested over the next few months. Persons who believe they are entitled to some part of the award may write to the Washington, D. C. area ACLU at 3000 Connecticut Ave. N. W., Washington, D. C. 20008. Simply include the word "Mayday" along with your present address and the day which you were arrested.

The FBI has been ordered by the court to destroy the arrest records of all persons who were not properly arrested during the Mayday demonstrations and to turn them over to the ACLU.

The ACLU complaints stemmed from a police action May 5, 1971, when some 3,000 demonstrators were invited by Rep. Ronald V. Dellums, D-Calif., and Bella Abzug, D-N.Y., to visit the capitol.

The police moved in and arrested more than 1,200 of the demonstrators when they refused to move along as commanded. President Nixon later praised the action of the metropolitan police dept. and said that charges that the mass arrests violated constitutional rights were "exaggerated."

Students discovering inexpensive dating

By PEGGY GOSSETT State News Staff Writer

Going out does not have to mean going broke.

Confronted with skyrocketing costs of dating, many students have conjured up cheap ways to spend time with their favorite person. Like sharing cheese and crackers on the rooftop of their house, ice skating on the Red Cedar River, or scouring for day-old flowers thrown out by the local florist shop.

"They toss out beautiful flowers just because they are a day or two old, so I take bouquets to my girl as an excuse to spend time at her place," said an MSU student majoring in business. He declined to give his name for fear that his friend would "discover how cheap" he is.

"We sit around with a bottle of wine and smell the roses," he said. "She always keeps wine on hand, and it's a cheap date all around."

delicacies like kosher pickles and crab meat, or eat food they had not eaten since childhood. For dinner last week they ate corn flakes and bananas instead of the usual tuna.

Another couple does their laundry together and folds each other's clothes. One MSU accounting student who is cutting costs swears by the campus movies.

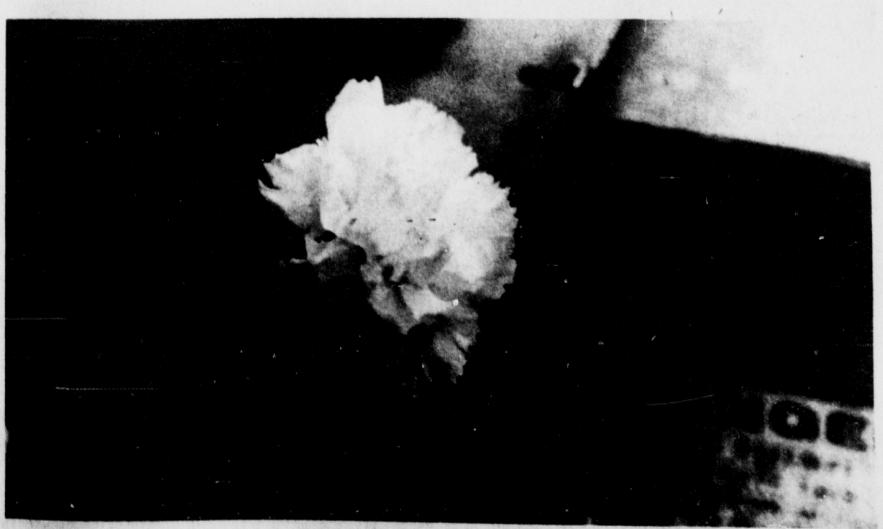

"I would never take a date of a movie off campus," Greg Feet, 571 McDonell Hall, said. He said two tickets to an off-campus movie cost $5, compared to a $2 fee for an on-campus movie.

Feet said he appreciates a date who offers to pay, at least for her half.

"I used to feel like my masculinity was at stake if a girl paid, but not any more. Everyone knows about the tight money situation, and most girls accept the fact that there is not a lot of money to spend," he said. "Just the fact that a girl offers to pay shows me that she cares to go out with me, and is not out just for a free evening."

Feet said that he is even more excited to pay after a girl volunteers to cover the costs.

Magee given life sentence

Convict Ruchell Magee was sentenced Thursday in California to life imprisonment without possibility of parole for his role in the 1970 Marin County Courthouse shootout in which four persons died.

Sheriffs' deputies arrested dozens of demonstrators who gathered outside the Santa Clara County courthouse to protest the sentencing by Superior Court Judge William A. Ingram.

Authorities said they were arrested for violating a court order which required protesters to remain at a distance from the building.

Magee, 35, already serving a life term at San Quentin Prison for a Los Angeles kidnap - robbery, had pleaded guilty to an aggravated kidnaping charge in the Marin shootout.

3M Co., 2 executives indicted

A federal grand jury Thursday indicted the Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing Co. (3M) and two of its board members on a charge of income tax conspiracy involving almost $634,000 in allegedly fictitious deductions for illegal political contributions.

The Justice Dept. said the two men indicted are former top officials of the company, but do not now hold executive positions but remain on its board.

The indictment, returned in U.S. district court in St. Paul, Minn., also charged the company with two counts of filing false tax returns, the Justice Dept. announced.

Turkish aid plan revealed

The Defense Dept. has notified Congress that it proposes to sell Turkey $229.9 million worth of tank modernization conversion kits.

The notification was placed in the Congressional Record Tuesday by Sen. John Sparkman, D - Ala., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Congress has until Feb. 4 to disapprove the sale under provisions of the Foreign Military Sales Act. The notification was dated Jan. 15.

Ford Co. raps 1977 EPA rules

Ford Motor Co. said Thursday that tighter automobile emission standards scheduled to go into effect in 1977 would cause an average 20 per cent reduction in gasoline mileage of its cars.

The mileage - loss estimate was the highest yet predicted by automakers during hearings called by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA). The Ford figure was double the mileage loss a joint report by EPA and the Department of Transportation estimated would occur if the 1977 standards go into effect as scheduled.

EPA is holding hearings on a request by the automakers to suspend the 1977 standards for one year. The agency also is concentrating on the effects of the standards proposed by President Ford which would be stricter than current standards, but not as stringent as the standards scheduled to go into effect in 1977.

Boston group considers busing

The Boston School Committee was scheduled to meet Thursday to officially endorse a citywide public school desegregation plan based on voluntary rather than compulsory busing.

The plan is similar to one submitted to U.S. District Court Judge W. Arthur Garrity by the Boston School Department last Dec. 16, but which was not endorsed by the school committee at that time.

The plan divides the city into six zones. Each zone would encompass part of Boston's black population which is located in the center of the city and also would take in areas of white population on its perimeter.

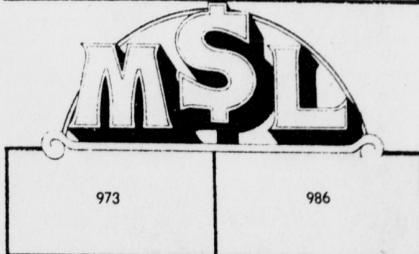

In addition to encouraging voluntary busing, the plan would permit pupils to choose schools that have unique curriculums such as trade schools and open classrooms.

Civil rights inaction alleged

The U.S. Civil Rights Commission says the Ford Administration is lagging in enforcement of school desegregation guidelines.

A commission report issued on Wednesday criticized the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) as well as the Internal Revenue Service and the Veterans Administration. The 400 - page report was issued the same day HEW civil rights officials announced they had asked school officials in 26 states to help them determine whether 1.1 million children of Spanish, Indian and Asian descent are illegally being denied bilingual education.

Oil tariff could fuel inflation

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford speeded action Thursday on a proclamation to boost tariffs on imported oil, while key Democratic congressmen moved to forestall them.

Before signing of the proclamation, Ford scheduled a meeting with governors from 10 Northeastern states highly reliant on imported oil products to try to convince them his plan would not cause undue hardship.

Half the invited governors voted Wednesday to seek a federal court restraining order against the President's action. Several others have been highly critical of the Ford plan to hike oil prices as a means of discouraging consumption.

White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said the proclamation would probably result in a retail gasoline price hike of about a penny a gallon. He said the higher price could be expected around end of February.

Tariff opponents

Congressional opponents of the tariff increase, arguing it would fuel inflation without cutting oil usage, will try through legislation to void the presidential proclamation before it takes effect.

The increased tariff is the first step in Ford's program designed to

Sadat says only if Israel attacks will another Mideast war occur

By Associated Press

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat was quoted Thursday as ruling out another war in the Middle East unless Israel attacked first. He said he was speaking both of Egypt and Syria.

"On this precise point, I can say, speaking both in Egypt's name and in Syria's, that we shall never start hostilities unless Israel attacks us. It is the only possible case of a resumption of fighting," he said.

Sadat was quoted as making the statement in an interview with the French radio station Europe No.1. Correspondent Jean - Pierre Joulin said that at no time in the 90 - minute talk did Sadat utter threatening or belligerent statements about Israel or its leaders.

"When we wanted war, we told the entire world, and no one believed us," Sadat was quoted as saying, referring to widespread skepticism over his statements before the 1973 war. "Nevertheless, we fought."

"Today we want peace, we want a peaceful solution of the problem. We want a peace based on justice."

But he said the situation in the Middle East "is very grave" because the peace process was stagnating. "We must defuse this bomb which risks exploding. We have the possibility of doing so and of eliminating the dangers of war in our region."

In other Mideast developments: Israeli Premier Yitzhak Rabin rejected demands for progress towards peace within three months, saying "deadlines have no validity whatsoever" for Israel. It amounted to a reply to Sadat's demands in a Beirut newspaper interview last week that Israel make territorial concessions within three months and that it withdraw on all its three fronts.

Rabin said at present there seemed no change of negotiation with Syria or Jordan and reaffirmed Israel's refusal to talk to the Palestine Liberation Organization. However, he said Israel would work toward a second stage settlement with Egypt and go to the Geneva peace conference if the Arabs demanded it be reconvened.

Sen. Charles Percy told a

Tel Aviv news conference that chances for Middle East peace "have rarely been greater" and said the opportunity for settlement should not be missed. The Illinois Republican also said if Israel were to strike first against the Arabs in a pre - emptive war, "America's traditional support of Israel would fade overnight."

A high - powered U.S.

delegation began secret talks

Thursday in Jerusalem on Israeli aid requests amounting to $2.2 billion, more than three times the Jewish state's current aid package. The delegation was led by Sens. Daniel Inouye, D - Hawaii, and Charles Mathias, D - Md., of the Senate Appropriations Committee, and included State Dept. officials and Air Force officers.

Troops landed on mountain in South Vietnamese thrust

SAIGON, South Vietnam (AP) — Waves of helicopters landed troops on a Communist - held mountain some 55 miles north of Saigon under heavy fire Thursday in a counteroffensive against North Vietnamese thrusts.

The operation had the objective of carrying out President Nguyen Van Thieu's standing orders to attempt recapture of all territory lost to Communist - led forces.

The infantrymen landed on top of Nui Ba Den Mountain along the northeastern approaches to Tay Ninh City after bombers had softened up North Vietnamese positions. The strategic position was captured by the North Vietnamese on Jan. 6. It was once manned by U.S. forces who called it the Black Virgin mountain.

grapher Huynh Cong Ut reported from Tay Ninh that some of the helicopters were unable to land and had to turn back because of heavy North Vietnamese anti - aircraft fire, though there were no reports of aircraft being shot down.

In Cambodia two ammunition barges reached Phnom Penh after successfully passing a 45 - miles stretch of the Mekong River controlled by insurgents. Escorted by outrigger tugs and barges acting as rocket screens, the convoy was the first to reach the Cambodian capital in a month.

Tugboat crewmen reported the convoy traveled for 36 hours under constant rocket, mortar and machine - gun fire from the insurgents.

Only hours before the counteroffensive was launched in South Vietnam, Viet Cong gunners fired a half dozen Soviet - built 100 - pound rockets into Tay Ninh, killing five persons, wounding 31 and setting afire 110 homes in a military housing project.

cut energy consumption by increasing taxes on imported domestic oil and allowing price rises for some fuel. Administration officials have estimated the over - all program would boost the price of all petroleum products — including gasoline — by about 10 cents a gallon.

In related developments, Exxon Corp., the world's biggest company, said earnings in 1974 were 28.5 per cent higher than they were in 1973; there were new layoffs, and Treasury Secretary William E. Simon asked Congress to raise the federal debt ceiling.

Work force cut
Among the bad news on the economic front was an announcement in Seattle by the Boeing Co. which said it expects to cut its work force by between 8,000 and 8,000 this year mainly because of a decrease in the demand for commercial airliners. Boeing currently employs about 54,700 persons in the Puget Sound area.

Exxon Corp. said that fourth quarter after - tax earnings were per cent higher than they were in the same period of 1973. For the year, Exxon said, earnings were up 28.5 per cent with total profit of $3.14 billion, or $14.03 a share, compared with 1973's $2.44 billion or $10.90 a share. In 1972 and 1971 the company earned about $1 billion.

The President's economic and energy proposals have come under criticism from several sources.

Meany disappointed

AFL - CIO President George Meany called President Ford's economic and energy program disappointing Thursday and said American people demand an emergency plan that will get the economy back to work and stabilize the economy.

Ford's program, he said, "was the weirdest one I have ever seen. For those who are suffering the most — the unemployed, the aged, the sick and the poor — he proposed even more suffering."

Meany urged an energy program that would not give in to blackmail demands of the Arab oil sheiks, and said if necessary the country should turn to rationing and mandatory fuel allocations.

Treasury Secretary Simon, testifying before the House Ways and Means Committee, Thursday, asked for a 22 per cent increase in the federal debt ceiling to $604 billion through June 30, 1974. The current limit on government borrowing is $495 billion. The temporary limit that expires on March 31, after which the ceiling would legally fall to $400 billion.

Exceed debt limit

Simon said the government will exceed the temporary limit of $495 billion on Feb. 18.

And drastic monetary measures by Switzerland to protect tourism and foreign trade bolstered the dollar initially Thursday following its record low Wednesday, but a strong early rise held.

"He's a little hardnosed, but we watched him closely while he was on the beat and we couldn't find that he was doing anything illegal," he said.

Diane said that she likes the Lansing area because she can trust most of the customers. She said that she has had a few unusual requests by Lansing people. UFW pickets at local 7-11 store

By NANCY E. CRANE
State News Staff Writer

East Lansing Police were called to the 7-11 Food Store, 311 Grove St., Thursday to break up a United Farmworkers (UFW) Union picket line which was blocking the driveway, but a gentlemen's agreement between the two parties left the picket line where it was.

Carole Schneider, organizer of the Lansing boycott committee, leads about 40 picketers at the 7-11 Food Store, 311 Grove St., in a boycott of Gallo wine Thursday. The picketers are trying to convince store owners to stop buying Gallo wine.

Police said the owner of the store, who would not give his name, complained that the 40 picketers were blocking the driveway and doorway of the store. However, the picketers did not agree.

"We have been exercising our right to free speech, we are exercising our legal right to picket. We are merely telling the public about the cause of the farmworkers," said Zolton Ferency, the farmworkers' lawyer in Michigan. Ferency arrived after the police left.

The owner of the 7-11 store had no comment to make about the picketers. The UFW has been trying to promote a nationwide boycott of Gallo wines which is why it was picketing the store.

Recently the Lansing area boycott committee sent a letter to 100 stores in the Lansing Area asking the managers to stop ordering Gallo wine for their shops. All 20 Min-a-Marts in the area, five independent Lansing stores and the KP store in East Lansing have agreed to stop buying Gallo wines.

Eighty-one people, including 11 Ingham County commissioners; state Rep. Lynn Jondahl, D-East Lansing; state Sen. Earl Nelson, D-Lansing, and U. S. Congressman Democrat Bob Carr signed the letter.

Don Fisher, manager of the 7-11 store was unhappy with the presence of the picketers. "Why are they here anyway? They know my position. If we take this Gallo wine off the shelves we are forcing people to follow the boycott. If we have six wines and only one of them is Gallo and people buy the Gallo wine then obviously they don't care about the boycott," Fisher said.

"They can picket all they want as long as they keep it on the public sidewalk," Fisher added.

Carole Schneider, organizer for the boycott in Lansing, said that the picketers were not trying to harass storeowners.

"Our reason for being here is to inform the people of the Lansing area of the boycott and to gain dignity and justice for the farmworkers," Schneider said. "We are not here to hassle the storeowners."

The picketers had originally planned to picket the KP Store at the intersection of Grand River and Michigan Avenues. However, as soon as the picket line was set up Frank Hanosh, the supervisor for all Michigan KP Stores, agreed to stop buying Gallo wine.

"If you don't want Gallo wine we'll take it off. It doesn't matter to me. As long as you are asking everybody to do it. Otherwise, forget it," Hanosh said.

"Anyway, I know you are working hard. I think this should be settled in California rather than picking on me, but I know you (the UFW) are working hard," he added.

Registration to begin for dance marathon

Registration begins Monday for the second Dance for Strength Marathon which will be held Feb. 21 to 23 at Meridian Mall. The event is sponsored by the Michigan chapter of the Sclerosis Foundation. The year's contest consists of 38 hours of dancing, with rest periods scheduled frequently. Prizes and guest celebrities are determined yet, publicity director Bartrem said.

From February 18 to 21, couples can register at the Union during regular business hours.

There is a $25 registration fee involved, but this is refundable at the close of the marathon. Bartrem added that many area businesses sponsor a couple and pay the registration cost if the couple wears a shirt or something with the name of the business on it.

Registration is beginning early, so that any interested individuals can begin drumming up contributions and pledges, he added.

Fire safety in hall remains in question

By DAVE GUZCZAK
State News Staff Writer

After watching the movie "The Towering Inferno," it seems unlikely that such a scene of living hell could potentially exist within the confines of MSU's own Hubbard Hall. Or does it?

Last February, two rooms were gutted on the 12th floor of South Hubbard resulting in a total evacuation of the floor and an estimated $100,000 in damages.

Luckily, the blaze was discovered early and no one was killed. But, could Hubbard residents be so lucky a second time?

"You can never say that a situation like that is impossible," said Arthur Patriarche, East Lansing fire chief. "However, I could never foresee it happening at Hubbard."

"You try putting a 16 ton vehicle on the lawn in the spring when the ground is soggy and you're not going to make it," he said. "It bogs right down."

Patriarche said false alarms pose another threat. He said if a fire in Hubbard Hall should ever reach the proportions depicted in the movie, the welfare of the trapped students depended on whether firemen could reach them from the inside of the building. This can be especially hard if the elevator should take firemen up to the floor where the fire is located.

"If the fire messes up the signal system in the elevator and you're taken to the floor of the fire, you're all done. There's no escape," he said.

Where firemen could not reach trapped students either by elevator or stairway, Patriarche said students should stay in their room, close all doors, open a window, place their head near the base for fresh air, and "pray to the good Lord that they'll be safe."

Patriarche said the hall was built with fire prevention in mind. The Hubbard Hall complex, approximately 120 ft. high and the tallest building in East Lansing, was constructed from noncombustible materials with fire doors at each floor's stairway exit.

Patriarche said the doors prevented fire from spreading to other floors and kept smoke and up to 1800 degree heat from entering into the stairway exit.

Each wing contains three built-in standpipes with water pressure at full charge. There is also an alarm system. Yet, with all the precautions, there is still danger.

Of the firetrucks in the two East Lansing stations, only one has a ladder high enough to reach the seventh floor of the hall. The rest of the trucks are equipped with shorter ladders extending only to about the fourth floor and requiring six men to operate.

Patriarche said another problem is finding an area to park the truck once it reaches the dorm.

Where firemen could not reach trapped students either by elevator or stairway, Patriarche said students should stay in their room, close all doors, open a window, place their head near the base for fresh air, and "pray to the good Lord that they'll be safe."

Those students questioned Thursday who live on Hubbard's twelfth floor are not wasting any prayers or worries on a possible fire.

"I wasn't worried about it last year when the rooms were burning. I don't think Hubbard is high enough to get the effect brought out in the movie," said Susan Jawauski, sophomore, 1216 S. Hubbard Hall.

"We know that Paul Newman and Steve McQueen aren't going to save us," she said.

Another female student in 1217 S. Hubbard Hall said, "It doesn't really bother me. Even if the fire was in the middle of the dorm, we could still go down a couple of floors and jump out windows into nets."

The towering titan among other building on campus, Hubbard Hall seems unlikely to meet the same fiery fate as that of the building in "The Towering Inferno." However, East Lansing fire Chief Arthur Patriarche said such a catastrophe would not be entirely impossible.

Preferred profs pay late fines

MSU professors who forget to return their books to the Library are given a period of grace and three reminders before fines are socked to them. Though the profs pay the same fine as students, they receive two phone calls and a letter before they pay up. Professors' names are put on a sanction list which restricts their library privileges until the books are returned.

"Faculty members are prestigious and we feel that faculty members shouldn't be held to strict deadlines," said Tom Albright, asst. director of the Library's General Readers Services. Currently four profs are on the sanction list.

'Fresh' dead shark relieves prof

Chris Thoms, professor of zoology, breathed a partial sigh of relief when he became almost sure that the shark that was dumped into a Lansing back yard Tuesday wasn't one of the animals used in his classes. Thoms said about 130 sharks are used in the zoology course and that any one of his over 250 students could have sneaked the animal from the class.

Thoms said the animal which made its appearance Tuesday night was fresh and all of the sharks used by the department are preserved.

Zoology students work in pairs and are given a salamander and a cat to dissect, along with a shark.

Hearing set on labor charges

Student Workers Union (SWU) charges of unfair labor practices against MSU will be reviewed by the Michigan Employment Relations Commission (MERC) on Feb. 11 and 12. The SWU is charging the University with pressuring prospective union members not to join the union. The SWU says that such pressure has come from all levels of MSU management. The hearings are public and will begin at 10 a.m. in the Dept. of Labor Building at 300 E. Michigan Ave. in Lansing.

State reps face big job

The gaze of hundreds of thousands of Michigan residents will — or should — be focused on the state legislature when it reconvenes Monday. Fast losing hope, they will want to see how their representatives propose to slay the growing chimera that life has become for so many.

When it convenes, the legislature must immediately construct an uncompromising people program aimed at obliterating the conditions that make the chimera more vivid with each day.

The necessary prerequisite of any realistic aid must be a sound defeat of Gov. Milliken's income tax hike proposal. What is needed is to change the flat rate system into a graduated tax system.

According to the Executive Budget for fiscal year 1973-74, revenue based on flat rate personal income tax has more than doubled since 1969, while revenues from corporate, insurance and corporate franchise taxes have risen an average of only 30 per cent. If Milliken wishes to increase taxes to make up for the lost sales tax, the legislature should grab the opportunity to shift some of the burden off those who are severely hurt and onto those who have had it easy in comparison.

This shift plus Milliken's proposed bonding will easily pay for what Michigan's residents need.

At the top of the list of Michigan's requirements is the need for direct and fast relief from the 11.2 per cent unemployment rate. Unemployment compensation and public works jobs along with the promise of future security are vital ingredients of any relief recipe.

Along with this is the need for housing throughout the state. The legislature should investigate and offer guidance and assistance to local areas wherever needed. Public works housing could be one of the objects of public works jobs.

The state must also drastically reduce its tolerance of companies and employers who quietly ignore affirmative action hiring policies. Since most of the major employers lay off those hired most recently, past affirmative action gains have been virtually erased.

As far as youth is concerned, the state must step in on behalf of the student being harassed on no less than three fronts — rising tuition, shrinking aid and inadequate housing.

And before it is too late, the state must stop capitulating to industry on matters of environment. The Pigeon River example is but one of many. Even if the federal government turns the blind eye to violation of pollution standards, the state should still come down ruthlessly on automakers and other industries. At the same time, the legislature should launch a relentless mass transit campaign for metropolitan areas.

Save metallurgy unit

Few aspects of our lives are not touched by steel.

Our buildings, our transportation, our communications, our clothing — in short, practically everything depends on steel for its production or content.

To aid in the development of the steel we need and the uses it serves, metallurgists are integral. Yet University officials are planning to bludgeon MSU's metallurgy program.

The University wants to relegate metallurgy to the Dept. of Mechanical Engineering, where only the basics will be taught to nonmetallurgy major students. The vitality of research, innovation and instruction will be lost, thanks to the University's blundering.

According to Provost John Cantlon, the enrollment of only two sophomores in the program does not justify continuing the program.

The administration, however, overlooks the important research function of metallurgy, and the program's irreplaceable function in instructing nonmetallurgy majors with the needed basics of metallurgy.

Also ignored are charges that undergraduates expressing interest in metallurgy are actively discouraged by advisers, even though most metallurgy graduates have the pick of at least three job offers.

The recent past of metallurgy's troubles is patchwork of petty politics and personality struggles, which continue to this day. And now, if the metallurgy is sucked into mechanical engineering, it will be under the thumb of a man who recommended the dismantling of metallurgy in 1971.

Since there would be a negligible savings of money in such a move, the University should heed the stacks of letters received from business, industry, and other universities, and cultivate the metallurgy program, rather than trying to harass it to death.

Jobless scare off friends

"The worst part of being unemployed," said Kellerman, "outside of the fact you have no money, is the social stigma attached to it. Americans get very nervous when they talk to somebody who doesn't have a job."

"I hadn't thought about it, but I believe you're right. Why is that?"

"We're a country who likes to put everyone into a slot. The first question anyone asks you after he meets you is 'What do you do?' or 'What does your husband do?' or 'What does your father do?' People want to be sure they're talking to somebody respectable."

"Why can't you just say you're a salesman?"

"Because the second question is 'Who do you work for?' They're not just going to let you off the hook by accepting the fact that you're a salesman."

"And that's the crunch? Because then they have to admit you don't have a job?"

"Right. People tend to be sympathetic, but you start to feel bad vibrations, as if you've just told them you have a social disease. They begin looking for a chance to move away."

"That's terrible."

"We're prisoners of our own work ethic. We've been told for such a long time that the only people in this country who are unemployed are those who are lazy, shiftless and don't give a damn. In America, not having a job makes you an outcast, except for the kids, of course, who really don't care who is working and who isn't."

"They have a healthier attitude."

"It isn't just friends," Kellerman said. "It's relatives as well. They get nervous for a different reason. They're afraid that if you don't have a job it's going to cost them money. I used to see my brother-in-law two, three times a week. Since I've been out of work, he's suddenly found himself the busiest guy in Maryland. I don't want anything from him, but I guess he feels he should offer to help us out, and since he obviously doesn't want to be the best thing is not to see me."

"The sad thing is now that I'm out of work

JAMES RESTON

Ford makes a bad partner

In his State of the Union message on Jan. 15, President Ford was given an enthusiastic reception from his former colleagues in the Congress. He recognized that the state of the Nation's economy was not good, and in one of the best speeches he has ever delivered, he struck just the right note for a divided government and nation.

"The moment has come to move in a new direction," he said. "We can do this by fashioning a new partnership between the Congress on the one hand, the White House on the other, and the people we both represent..."

"For my part, I pledge this Administration will act in the closest consultation with the Congress... I promised the last Congress a policy of communication, conciliation, compromise and cooperation. I renew that pledge to the new members of this Congress..."

That now has rather an odd sound, for just a few days later, the "partnership" has turned into a sharp confrontation over economic and energy policy and the "new direction" is actually toward a stalemate between the new President and the new Democratic majority on Capitol Hill, which is precisely what the people they represent fear the most.

In his latest news conference less than a week after the State of the Union address and after a great deal of political, business and academic criticism of his proposals, there was plenty of presidential "communication" but very little "conciliation, compromise or cooperation."

His manner was precisely the same in both appearances: plain modest, amiable and confident. This is his most appealing personal quality — he is unfailingly and disarmingly open and friendly, though in his news conference, he was also very tough in a very pleasant way, as if being nice and bold were enough.

He left little room for the simple possibility that maybe some parts of his economic and energy policies were wrong. Or that serious economists like Milton Friedman and Paul A. Samuelson might be right in arguing that one part of his program contradicted another part, and might defeat the objectives he had in mind.

Ford is not by nature a dogmatic man, but in his news conference Tuesday he was quite dogmatic. The reporters raised all the major questions: If he wanted to discourage oil consumption, why had he rejected gas and horsepower taxes and fuel rationing? If his tax rebate plan was designed to provide taxpayers with some relief against the combined punishment of inflation and recession, why is it so biased in favor of the upper-income levels?

Pete Lisagor, that wise and ubiquitous question-man of press and television, wanted to know whether the President was trying to save people or automobiles, and what was wrong with taxing the big cars by weight and gas consumption — but the President had a simple answer for everything.

He said he had thought of all these things and rejected them without clearly explaining why they had been rejected. His program was the answer to our troubles, and it should not only be passed, but passed in a hurry. He was consistently patient with the tough questions, and so kindly to the reporters, that it was easy to miss what he was really saying and doing.

Actually, he was rejecting all questioning and criticism from all quarters, almost unconsciously. He was not responding to his own offer of "partnership" with the Congress, but talking like the senior partner and chairman of the board, and appealing through the press over the top of the Congress to public opinion.

By the President's own natural way of doing things, it is a very strange strategy. He has spent all his mature life on Capitol Hill. He knows the political arithmetic against him. He is not a prime minister with a majority in the Parliament, but an accidental unelected President with a Congress in opposition Democratic majority in the House.

Nobody knows this better than Ford. But somehow he has recently decided that he would rather fight the Democrats which he has been doing most of his life than compromise with them, which he promised in his State of the Union message that he was determined to do.

The result is that, almost by accident, he is getting into a long battle with Congress over the economy when what he needs is a quick decision. He is making a speaking program to prove that he is right and that the Congress is wrong. But he will take time, even if he wins, and he will not forge the "partnership" he invited in his State of the Union message, but does

His State of the Union message was considered a document. He wanted a "direction" — if you talk to him privately, know it's true — and he wanted to know with utmost sincerity — but when he went to his economic advisers and his political advisers about aid to Vietnam, he went along.

The guess here is that the true partner is the man who wants "partnership" and compromise and conciliation, and lately and almost accidentally, he has been going in the opposite direction.

Nuclear danger

This letter is directed to Bruce W. Wilkinson, associate professor of chemical engineering, in response to his Jan. 21 viewpoint.

Dear Mr. Wilkinson, You, like many other people, seem to think that you can make a concrete and steel environment, right down to the smallest virus, without suffering any biological consequences. Nuclear power plants are not clean, are not as safe and not as cheap as many people would like to believe.

Some 200 radioactive isotopes are produced as by-products of reactor operations, and the amount of just one of them, Strontium-90, accumulated in a reactor of modest (100 to 200 megawatt) size, after it has been operative for six months, is equal to what would be produced by a bomb 190 times as powerful as the one dropped in Hiroshima (Love, Glen A., Rhoda M. Love, 1970). Strontium-90 mimics calcium functionally in biological systems (Wagner, Richard H., 1971) and therefore if a very small amount of the Strontium-90 available in such a reactor escaped, biological systems would tend to concentrate it in harmful amounts.

Does anybody know if this is happening? Presently, the utilities are largely responsible for reporting their own discharges, which exceed Atomic Energy Commission (AEC) standards, an approach similar to permitting the proverbial fox to guard the chicken coop.

The AEC recently published a report on itself, which was partially inaccurate as determined by a joint committee of the Sierra Club and the Union of Concerned Scientists. The AEC determined the probability of having an accident which would kill 2,300 people and injure 5,600 more. Their findings were off by a factor of 400 in The Mackinac, Nov. - Dec. '74. It seems that the utilities take on the job of building a nuclear reactor as if they were building a very large fireplace which is smog-free.

Yes, many safety features are built into nuclear reactors, but they aren't enough.

Supporters of nuclear reactors will say that the probability of an accident is small. What they seem to forget is that it only takes one.

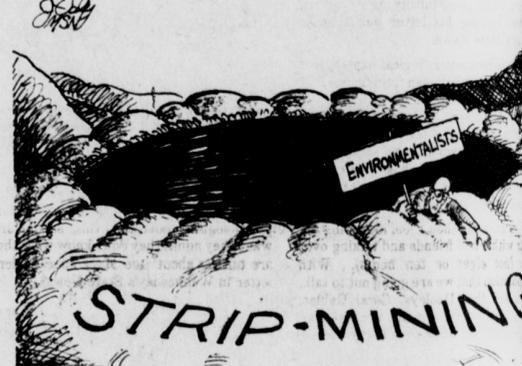

The safety and pollution standards imposed on nuclear reactors are driving the cost of nuclear power up, such as the very expensive cooling towers now being built or in use. Furthermore, nuclear fuel is running out. The breeder reactor, which is supposed to produce more fuel than it can consume, is much more dangerous than present reactors, and present reactors aren't all that safe.

Save the Rockies

Nobody is reacting to a major concern — the stripmining of the Rocky Mountains. They are worth more than the human species. President Ford has announced to the American people that he will switch the factories to coal as a desecrated natural resource. To run the factories and generators, Americans are ruining the most beautiful, largest mountain range. And this destruction is merely for coal to produce luxury conveniences for the masses. But what has more right to be here? The Rockies or American man?

We should not destroy what is a religious experience for mankind. The beauty of Montana, Colorado and other states inherent in their natural resources will not survive the strip mining process. It will be traded for a grey, moon-crater landscape, like what you see in Kentucky and Tennessee — the living example of society's blind acquisition of fuel.

Do you people out there sitting on your duffs think environmentalist groups will rally enough support to halt mining operations? They have tried, by legal processes. But President Ford vetoed the strip mining bill passed by Congress to make it legally binding that the mining company that does the destruction must refurbish the land. Now there is nothing keeping big oil's mining subsidiaries from destroying it all. I'm sure you all know the Catch-22 of property ownership. Even if you own the house and land, chances are mounting good that you don't have mineral rights to your own property. That means when Peabody buys those rights, he can plow off your land. Then he can plow off pasture and Rocky Mountain homes.

There is no ripple in the people's mind over this destruction, so I am going to stand. I will be ashamed of the human when those mountains are ripped off by reclamation.

Just because we have the ability to annihilate those mountains, do we have the name have the right?

PIRGIM REPORTS: DRUG ADS

Pharmacy board shafts public

By JOSEPH S. TUCHINSKY
PIRGIM Staff Member

The battle isn't won when the legislature passes your bill — it may only begin then.

That's the moral of PIRGIM's current confrontation with the State Board of Pharmacy. It is almost certain to end with a PIRGIM lawsuit against the board.

The story goes back nearly two years, when PIRGIM began a project to cut the cost of prescription drugs while providing more information to consumers. The project had three goals:

• To allow pharmacists to substitute less expensive generics for the heavily promoted brand names often prescribed by doctors.

• To assist comparison shopping by requiring the prices of commonly filled prescriptions to be posted in all pharmacies.

• To stimulate competition by allowing pharmacies to give prescription prices in newspaper, radio and television ads.

PIRGIM worked on the first two goals by lobbying for the Forbes-Jondahl bill, joining with the Michigan Citizens Lobby (MCL), which largely drafted the bill. We agreed with the MCL to postpone work on the highly controversial issue of price advertising until after the bill was passed.

In June 1974, with some PIRGIM-written strengthening amendments added in the Senate, the governor signed the new law, to go into effect at the end of March 1975. The long delay was to allow the pharmacy board to prepare rules to implement the law.

In July, the board created an advisory committee to design rules. The committee met — behind closed doors, without consumer representatives, without public notice of its meetings (except to industry officials), in violation of the state's open-meetings law. When PIRGIM protested, it was offered one chance to speak — at an impossible time. No other groups were even informed.

Consumers got their first look at the proposed rules in January, before a public hearing. Those rules were terrible. They were designed to hamstring, not implement the intent of the new law.

The law requires each pharmacy to post prices of the 100 most frequently filled prescriptions, as defined by the pharmacy board.

The rules would ban any other price lists except the official one. Larger and clearer price signs, such as those now used by the Meijer chain and others, would have to be removed. The rules would let a store display only one copy of the official list. The rules would prohibit reproducing it, or even referring to the list in ads.

The law allows consumers to request a lower-cost generic drug.

The board's proposed official list includes only 10 generic items, while 90 items are cited by brand names. The list wouldn't even tell consumers whether there is a generic equivalent for a branded item, much less what it would cost.

PIRGIM and other consumer organizations used the Jan. 17 public hearings to protest the rules' inadequacies, joined on most points by Representative H. Lynn Jondahl, D-East Lansing, cosponsor of the law.

It now appears the board may reconsider.

Phone calls after the hearings indicated board leaders and industry representatives want to meet with PIRGIM and consumer advocates to retrain PIRGIM will participate, but we want that the process be public and open.

Meanwhile, PIRGIM initiated on December on price advertising. We demand that the board issue an immediate declaratory ruling and an event making clear that accurate advertising prices is permitted by Michigan law. The board stalled for a month and has promised action by its Feb. 20 meeting.

But we think the board has signalled its intent. At its Jan. 17 meeting to begin disciplinary proceedings against two chains which recently raised prices in their advertising, Meijer and Muir's. In a later, perhaps illegal meeting, it decided not to take action against Meijer's, which had raised its entire 80 to 90 - item price list. It will, however, file a complaint against Muir's and hold a formal hearing. The first steps toward taking away the pharmacy license, though Muir's prices for only three drugs.

Decisions in federal courts and state courts, the advice of the attorney in the Michigan attorney general's office, and the clear intent of the action by the legislature should be taken by the pharmacy board is wrong to try competition by banning advertising. But some people are saying PIRGIM expects to file suit if it doesn't modify its position by its next meeting.

Smart drinking has come to my attention that the Board Hall Committee on Intelligent Drinking (CID) needs the open support of those outside of the committee and those who have had the opportunity to see what intelligent drinking really is about, which Bob Mullally surely did not before writing his letter published in today's State News.

Mullally wants a "logical explanation of the relationship between intelligence and drinking." Here are two examples of intelligent drinking:

Beer is one of the few liquids I have that stays down and still satisfies the thirst I get after playing basketball for a few hours. One beer is enough to quench my thirst.

Every now and then I feel like going out with a few friends and talking over beer (not eight or ten beers). With stipulation that we are going out to talk, can see that Dooleys, Coral Gables, and so on, are not the bars we should be visiting. There are many bars or restaurants in the area that are quiet, roomy and have reasonable prices.

Mr. Mullally stated quite clearly a few good reasons for banning alcohol altogether and I can add to this list with personal experiences of my own drunken past. Why, then, hasn't Mr. Mullally started his own prohibition committee if he feels so strongly about alcohol drinking being all non-intelligent? Has he joined the rest of us in the ranks of the apathetic majority?

The committee on intelligent drinking is a new idea. CID is needed to counter balance the desire to get smashed, bombed, and totalled and the willingness to be stuffed like sardines into noise factory boxes. Most of all, CID is not acting apathetically.

New low for SN

I believe the State News may have hit a new low in your irresponsible and sensationalistic article on "sin strip." Full of half-truths and distortions, this piece reveals the white, male, heterosexist mentality that is dominant in our culture rather than giving a true picture of what goes on downtown on Michigan Avenue.

While I'm on the subject of what goes on down there, how come you failed to mention my friend, a 5'2", 110 pound mother of three who was held up against the wall of a building and beaten by three cops for the crime of patronizing a bar in that area? Glad to have it up front that the State News endorses police harassment of women and gay people.

To those who favor me with public and private sermonettes on "love and empathy:"

As I told a State News reporter a week ago, I do not think the newspaper is an appropriate forum for resolving communications problems between students and teachers, for ATL or any other course.

Public homilies, to be effective, ought to be based on valid texts. I thought clinical psychologists understood this, particularly when they admit they don't know what they are talking about (see Mary Jane Keller's letter in Wednesday's State News).

VIEWPOINT: INTERCOLLEGIATE DATING

Wolves coming back to Moo U

By MARTHA BENN

MSU women: I'm pleased to announce that relations with U-M men — mental, physical and otherwise — are hereby restored to their previous (to last weekend) status of "just swell."

Now I realize that this won't mean much to most MSU women, who don't care one way or the other what the official status of relations between the U-M male and MSU female is. But there are others (myself not included) to whom this is quite an important matter. So here goes:

It began at a party — as usual — and I suppose it was my fault. I was propped against the window sill, 12th drink (I believe) in hand, bored silly by talk of classes, intelligent drinking and the like.

I had come ready for a good party, dressed to kill in my best faded Levis, ragged army shirt and 8-inch work boots. I was looking and feeling good, but the party was turning into a real bummer (as we used to say at the peace marches).

Then it happened, he came reeling toward me — stylishly long hair, Elton John glasses and 14-inch platform shoes. A typical U-M frat man. "Don't be stupid!" I told myself. "Don't judge things by appearances. Sure, he doesn't look your type, but what have you got to lose."

"Where's the john?" he smiled. I pointed. He left. He came teetering back a few minutes later, and it was then that I learned he was from U-M. He was in East Lansing looking into the chances of beginning graduate work here in psychology.

Well, that didn't mean much to me, but when he said he wanted to study the phenomenon of people voluntarily coming to live in East Lansing, we hit it off.

It wasn't long before we were sharing stories of the good old stoned-out days in Ann Arbor.

I can't remember if it was his kiss or that last handful of Fritos that tasted so good.

Those carefree times of wall-to-wall hippies, mass gatherings once a week and dogs running wild and free across the diag.

We were having such a good time we completely forgot where we were. The conversation turned to the Spartan life at MSU, and we even found a few things to laugh about on that topic.

It was about that time that the room began to clear — I'm not sure why, it seemed like the party was just picking up. But it did. And a mere two hours later, the hostess came over to tell us if we didn't shut up and leave, she was going to wake up her husband to help us leave.

Well, we took the hint and headed for the door.

As we started down the stairs, he leaned over and whispered in my ear, "Did you hear the one about the MSU Aggie?"

That was when he tripped, and we both went crashing down the stairs. (I think it was

I need people of your mentality. I thrive on the sensationalism that patients like yourself so cleverly create when asking questions. What would I do without your fabulous phobias? What would this college paper do without me? After all, I'm one of the most well-read journalists in the paper. Furthermore, I'm the only regularly-scheduled columnist.

And think of your fellow comrades, the students of MSU. They love this stuff. It's the only tasteful pornography in their newspapers.

Realize that when making up these questions, you are bringing up real problems. Problems that are of great concern to the student body.

If I got was the common, trite, all-encompassing questions that concern the many, then my readership would fall. Who wants to read about some believable medical problem? My column would become too serious for the students. This paper would lose its biggest symposium for clowns.

Please do me a favor, do yourself a favor and do the students a favor. Send in your question.

Sometimes I really want to be a doctor. Having come from a home where sports-writers are considered the lowest segment of society (dad's a doctor), I often find it hard to fight the cultural influences that make up my background.

So today I did it. Here I combine my real nature as a sportswriter (covering our nation's favorite sport) with my urge to feel welcomed in my parent's presence as an MD.

Call me Dr. Sexinger. The name of my column is the "Doctor's Rag." Already I see I have a letter.

Dear Dr. Sexinger: I'm very perverted and wish to satisfy my exhibitionary urges by writing something to you which will effectively convey how warped my mind is. My problem, however, is that I can't cope with my fear of not seeing my name after the question I send in. After all, my letter to you won't really give me the credit for being nuts. People won't know who I am or where I'm at. What should I do?

Dear perverted: Think of my condition as a medical columnist.

those shoes...)

After a few minutes we agreed it was time to stand up and leave. So we did. I'd like to say that his goodnight kiss was wonderful, but I can't remember if it was his kiss or that last handful of Fritos that tasted so good.

And it wasn't until I was halfway home that I realized I hadn't even found out his name. It was all just another verbal one-night stand.

But that was all right. We'd had a good time — we'd both realized that a good time was possible in East Lansing — and that's what counts, I guess.

So brighten up, all you MSU women who care. Peter may be down there at U-M, but so is what's-his-name.

We're featuring the GRADUATE SYSTEM — It brings music alive. Its sound comes out of the marvelous ADVENT loudspeakers, a two-way speaker system that has become a best seller by offering "cost-no-object" sound quality, at a price people can afford. ADVENT designed these speakers to be able to reproduce the full ten-octave range of music and to compete in every audible respect with the most expensive speaker on the market.

To power these speakers in a way that will give full satisfaction is the SCOTT R36s AM/FM stereo receiver. First, because of its performance and second, because of its reliability. In addition, the SCOTT R36s has power — 30 WATTS R.M.S. per channel minimum from 20 Hz to 20,000 KHz, with less than 0.5% total harmonic distortion into 8 OHM.

The PIONEER PL-12D is a truly professional turntable with S-shape tonearm, belt-drive, base and dust cover. The turntable comes complete with the SHURE M93E.

This combination will keep your records sounding new for a long time to come.

STATE NEWS DINING GUIDE

The Grate Steak - An English Farmhouse in East Lansing

If dining out is supposed to be a trip to another place and another time, then everyone should take a trip to the Grate Steak, a part of the Win Schuler chain.

Upon entering the Grate Steak, 246 E. Saginaw, East Lansing, the diner feels as if he is entering an old English farmhouse of the 18th or 19th century.

The waitresses are wearing long, calico print dresses and aprons as their uniforms, and the warm farmhouse decor is authentic in many instances.

The Grate Steak features about thirty lunch and dinner items ranging from the Grate Steak, the house specialty, to Lobster Tail to Knoes 'n Brats, which is a sausage topped with melted cheese and served with hot German potato salad.

"Our food is not that unusual," Bob Hansen, asst. manager said. "We're not really gourmet because all our food is basically prepared at the Schuler commissary in Marshall (Michigan)."

Among the Schuler specialties are Swiss onion soup, crocks of Schuler meatballs, and Bar-Scheeze with crackers or bread sticks.

The Bar-Scheeze was invented by Schuler and MSU's former football coach, Duffy Daugherty. It has become so popular that it is available for home use and can be purchased in many grocery stores and at the restaurant.

Currently, the management is trying new dishes with a more exotic flair which will fit into a slightly lower price range than the current moderate to expensive priced dishes.

"We'll be adding things like beef stroganoff, stuffed trout, stuffed pork chops, chicken cordon bleu and shrimp creole," Hansen said.

"These dishes are not lower in quality, though. They're an effort on our part to adapt to the change in the economy."

The Grate Steak features two distinctive touches that none of the other Schuler restaurants have.

"Our salad bar is called the 'Garden Greenery,'" Hansen said. "None of the other restaurants have this. Also, we have an open grate so the customers can watch the cooks prepare their food if they like."

Hansen said that the Grate Steak was also the most informal of the seven Schuler restaurants.

If a potential customer does not want dinner but is looking for a really great place to drink, the Grate Steak has a lounge called the Generous Goldsmith.

The warm farmhouse atmosphere is again the most striking feature present. The epitome of good taste is the large fireplace against the wall where a cheery fire is ablaze for the winter months.

Live music is presented seven nights a week after nine p.m. and the Happy Hour is from four to seven p.m. Monday through Friday. Cocktail prices are reduced at this time.

Citizens react to development plan

By JOE KIRBY
State News Staff Writer

It's awfully hard to please everybody, as the East Lansing Planning Commission found out Wednesday night.

The commission held a public hearing to get some citizen reaction to the Community Development plan drawn up by the city's Planning Dept., and the citizens offered a lot of suggestions.

The preliminary plan covers only the $168,000 the city will receive in the first year of the federal Community Development Act. The city could also receive another $1 million during the next two years of the program.

Elliot Frank, of the Drug Education Center, was at the public hearing to ask the commission to consider giving the center more money.

Expanded drug center
The preliminary plan budgeted $6,350 for the center, but Frank asked the commission to consider giving it $50,000 a year in Community Development funds.

Frank explained that the county had asked for $96,000 in funds to open a health clinic in this request in favor of the Drug Education Center expanding its clinic facilities.

Frank said the city would save money since the center is asking for fewer funds plus would save an additional $1,000 in community development which was proposed for studying health care needs.

The elderly citizens of East Lansing were also on hand to give their say in how the money should be spent.

Housing code

Fred Hendrick, president of the local chapter of the American Assn. of Retired Persons, said he did not like the $35,000 tentatively budgeted for stricter enforcement of the housing code.

Hendrick said that many of the retired people in the city would be willing to check for code violations and that the city could spend that money on other projects.

Paul Eickmeyer, 419 Marshall St., also supported the elderly movement.

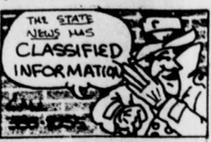

"We're not dumb," Eickmeyer said. "We could check the wiring in these houses."

Eickmeyer said he would like to see the city develop a senior citizen center where the elderly could meet and possibly attend adult education classes.

Home upkeep problem
Eickmeyer said the biggest problem for senior citizens is upkeep on their homes, but indicated that many might be reluctant to leave them and move into an elderly housing project. "I think senior citizens would like to remain in their own homes as long as they can," he said.

Charles Ipcar, of the Tenants Resource Center, asked that the center receive $7,500 in federal funds instead of the $2,880 budgeted in the preliminary plan.

Commission member Stephen Rous asked why the center did not charge for its services. Ipcar explained that this would be difficult since most of the problems were handled over the phone.

Budget questioned
Several people questioned the $45,000 budgeted to build four neighborhood activity centers. Citizens wondered if the centers would really be used and suggested the possibility of using local schools for meeting centers.

After the hearing ended, the Planning Commission decided to wait until its meeting next Wednesday before considering any changes in the preliminary plan.

After the Planning Commission draws up its plan it will be sent to city council, which will hold a public hearing on Feb. 11. Council will then assemble a final plan, which will be sent to the Tri-County Regional Planning Commission for approval.

Weicker fires at DEA for arms demonstration

WASHINGTON (AP) — James Bond-type assassination equipment, including exploding telephones and cigarette packs, was demonstrated to agents of a federal drug agency last year, according to Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr., R-Conn.

None of the weapons was purchased by the Drug Enforcement Agency (DEA), but Weicker said he was shocked that they would even be considered for an agency dealing in drug abuse. Later, a DEA spokesman confirmed Weicker's report.

Weicker released on Wednesday a catalogue of the equipment bearing the name B. R. Fox, an electronics company in Alexandria, Va. The weapons were called "Astro" equipment in the catalogue.

Weicker also released what he said was a memorandum from a Fox official to an armaments dealer in which the demonstration was mentioned. The senator said he would use the documents to support his bill to establish a congressional committee to oversee intelligence and law enforcement agencies.

"It's a sorry state of affairs that exists when peddling assassination equipment is looked upon as about as normal a thing as door-to-door selling of household goods," Weicker said.

The senator identified the drug agency agents as Lucien Conein, a Southeast Asia specialist formerly with the CIA, and his assistant, Bud Franks.

He said the June 10, 1974, memo was written by Michael Morrissey to Mitch WerBell.

It said in part:

"Enclosed is a catalogue which was put together only after we started working with Lou Conein. I wrote out this line of 'Astro' equipment with you and Lou in mind, and because of the nature of the devices, it is not being given to anyone else. . . . Some of this equipment was demonstrated to Lou in this office about three weeks ago."

Weicker said drug agency administrator John R. Bartels Jr. was "aghast" at the information supplied by Weicker. He also said Conein confirmed the demonstration but said he was there for a demonstration of electronic bugging equipment.

Weicker said that Conein's role in the demonstration was confirmed in a private meeting Weicker had with former White House aide Charles W. Colson.

Robert Feldkamp, DEA spokesman, said "the facts as Weicker outlined them are basically correct. Two of our guys went there last spring to inspect surveillance devices. After they were shown the electronic gear, they were given, without asking for it, a demonstration of these explosive devices."

"They looked at it, expressed no interest in it outside of curiosity, and told the salesman they weren't interested."

Later, Feldkamp said, the DEA did buy about $500 worth of surveillance equipment used in wiretapping and bugging operations authorized by law and approved by court orders.

By PAT NARDI
State News Staff Writer

The unprecedented 800 overcrowded rooms that plagued MSU residence hall students in September have almost disappeared. Housing for men is now underassigned and only 26 women are not yet able to move out of their triples.

Though there are still 29 men's triples left, many of those are voluntary because 49 open spaces for men exist in residence halls. Likewise, 67 female triples exist but 41 spaces are available for women.

The residence halls with the largest number of overassigned rooms are Bailey, Rather, Holden, Akers, Wilson and Wonders halls. However, these halls have open spaces and are in the process of shuffling students around.

"Some students are choosing to remain in tripled rooms," said Gary North, coordinator of Residence Hall Programs. "They prefer to stay where they are rather than make friends with a new roommate."

Students in voluntary triples do not receive the $50 a term rebate given to students tripled against their will.

Since there are 20 extra male spaces, a lucky few will be able to secure single rooms. A student now living alone in his room will be given the option of paying $60 extra per term for a single, or moving in with someone else who is underassigned. Singles will be awarded according to class standing and total number of credits earned.

"The thing that really saved our neck was being able to move women into married housing," North said.

Over 110 female students were permitted to move out of residence halls and into Spartan Village apartments at the beginning of winter term.

In addition, over 450 students took advantage of the housing waiver offered to sophomores and moved off campus.

Fall term enrollment at MSU was up over 2,500 students over last year because fewer students left school and 1,200 more students than usual signed up to return to residence halls.

North said he believes enrollment in universities has been rising because the economy makes it easier for people to go to school than to find full-time employment.

Room tripling almost relieved

Unit to study criminally insane

ANSING (UPI) — A special unit of mental health and legal professionals will look into ways to prevent the release of dangerous criminals from state mental hospitals without infringing on the rights of other patients.

The panel is being appointed by the state Mental Health Director Donald C. Smith as a response to growing public concern over the number of criminally insane now being released. Smith said the panel will assess the impact of the state's new mental health code and recent court decisions that have brought on the situation and propose a recommended solution to the governor and legislature.

He emphasized that both personal and public rights are at stake and that the factor will have a significant bearing on the deliberations and conclusions of the panel.

The panel will include interested citizens, mental health professionals and representatives of courts and law enforcement agencies, Smith said.

Under the new state mental code and recent court decisions, state hospitals are required to review all cases and re-evaluate all patients.

Unless patients are found to be mentally ill and unable to provide for their basic needs or found to pose a physical danger either to themselves or others, they must be released from the hospital.

Michigan's old commitment law was declared unconstitutional because it failed to provide adequate safeguards for people involuntarily placed in state mental facilities — including those found guilty of a crime "by reason of insanity."

However, the provisions of the new mental health code covering criminal commitments do not take effect until Aug. 6 and the legislature can further amend it before then.

RECORDS WEAR OUT.

So Advent invented a tape deck that makes cassettes sound just as good.

Unlike phonograph records, cassette tapes never wear out. And cassette tapes properly recorded on the Advent 201 will sound identical to the phono record or FM stereo broadcast used as source. That's because the Advent 201 was the first cassette deck to incorporate the Dolby Noise Reduction System, playback equalization for Chromium Dioxide (CR02) tape, and an extremely rugged, American-made tape transport mechanism (Advent makes the electronics themselves).

The Advent 201 is also very simple to operate. A single lever handles both fast forward and rewind. Recording is just a matter of pushing two buttons simultaneously.

Cassettes are economical. A high-quality, home recorded Advent Chromium Dioxide cassette costs about half of what you have to pay for a phonograph record. And while records wear out a little bit each time you play them (even at the lightest practical tracking pressure), a cassette played on a properly maintained Advent 201 will last a lifetime!

Come in to Tech Hifi this week for a special demonstration of the Advent 201.

Study abroad not affected by recession

By MARY ANN CHICK
State News Staff Writer

Despite current economic conditions, more students than ever before will be studying Humanities and Social Science in London this spring.

However, if 15 more students do not sign up for the business law program in the Netherlands by Feb. 15, it will be cancelled. Charles Gliozzo, director of the overseas study program, said he thinks students have not signed up to take the business law courses because they do not know about the program. "The combined humanities-social science program and the political science program have been offered before," Gliozzo said.

"Word of mouth by students who have already gone has generated some of the interest in the two programs."

"The recession has not hurt the student's urge to go overseas this spring to study. We have averaged about 100 inquiries each week concerning the various programs."

Eleven students have signed up for the political science program in London. Though the program still has openings, it will not be cancelled.

The organizers of the business law program are worried about the cancellation of the program.

"If it is cancelled, it really is a shame as the program is very unique," said Hendrik Zwarenstein, professor of business law and one of the organizers of the program.

Family living

Students in the business law program will live with Dutch families instead of in a hotel or a dormitory. Students will eat breakfasts with the family. Other meals will be eaten at Erasmus University, where classes will be held.

Students in the political science program and the humanities-social science program will live in hotels. Classes will be held at the hotels.

The Dutch students have extended an invitation to Michigan students to share in their club tradition. Most Dutch student clubs are a cross between a fraternity and a bar.

About 11:00 every night, when students are done studying, they go to the club for a beer and conversation.

"At the same time that the students are enjoying their club life they are enjoying intellectual talk," Zwarenstein said. "Professors often join the students at night."

Students who want more information on the three overseas study programs for this spring should contact the Office of Overseas Study.

The first orientation session for students who are planning to study overseas this spring is 7 p.m. Wednesday in the Kalamazoo Art gallery.

Organizations file suits to block increase in price of food stamps

WASHINGTON (AP) — Several organizations filed suit Wednesday to prohibit Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz from increasing the price of food stamps.

It marked the second suit in less than a week seeking to block new food stamp schedules from going into effect March 1.

The suit was filed in U.S. District Court here by the Food Research and Action Center of New York City on behalf of Minota Ginther of Seattle, Wash., and nine other individuals.

The suit alleged Ginther's benefits under the new schedule would be reduced to $1 a month. It said the 72-year-old widow now pays $33 a month for $46 worth of food stamps, a monthly benefit of $13 a month.

Under the proposed schedule, the woman will have to pay $45 for $46 in stamps.

Joining with the Food Research and Action Center were the National Welfare Rights Organization, United Farm Workers, the Children's Foundation of Washington, D.C., and the Arkansas Community Organization for Reform Now.

The earlier lawsuit was filed by Consumers Union. Meanwhile, legislation has been introduced in Congress which would also prevent USDA from carrying out the new food stamp payment plan.

As set up, virtually all of the nation's 15.4 million food stamp users will pay a flat 30 per cent of their adjusted net income for the coupons, regardless of the size of households. At present, the average payment is 23 per cent though some of poorest families pay as little as 5 per cent. The present rule also considers sizes of households.

The new plan is expected to save the government $645 million a year by charging poor people more to get food stamps. Among the hardest hit will be persons living alone and couples.

A couple having an adjusted net income of $200 a month now pays $50 to get $84 worth of food stamps. Under the new rule, the payment will be $60 for the monthly allocation.

Larger households will pay the same 30 per cent rate but will get more total food stamps for their money. A four-member household with an income of $200 a month, for example, now pays $53 to get $154 worth of stamps.

Excerpt from a review on "Teenage Fantasies" "The film had as many legal problems as Deep Throat, but is much more erotic. Very few films make such a blatant attempt to arouse the audience — Teenage Fantasies both tries & succeeds.

The women & men look like teenagers, is it that they were? Their enthusiasm is definitely adolescent. They really like what they're doing & they do everything. If you enjoy explicit entertainment, Teenage Fantasies is a great choice. —San Francisco Advocate

Mariah ready for concerts

Murphey

By JUNE DELANO
State News Reviewer
Michael Murphey, an underrated songwriter with an incredible number of songs to his credit, will perform at Mariah Saturday, hot on the heels of his newly released album. Murphey, who is best known for his single "Armed and Dangerous," was published over 400 songs and has had his material recorded by the Monkees, Roger Miller, Flatt and Scruggs, Bobbie Gentry, Kenny Rogers. His new album, "Blue Night Thunder," is his fourth and is a pleasant collection of lyrical, romantic ballads and fast-paced country tunes. The album features half a dozen of those songs you can hum along with, though the melodies are often predictable, they are self-sustaining. Particularly notable are "About My Lady There,"

"Rings of Life," "Carolina in the Pines" and "Wild Bird."
Mariah will feature Murphey at 8 and 10:30 p.m. Saturday in McDonel Hall kiva. He will be preceded by Albrecht and Roley.

'The Devils'—chilling film about a world gone mad

By FRANK FOX
State News Reviewer
In a world of unrelieved madness, man turns his eyes to God and prays for salvation from unseen devils. In a world of unrelieved madness where there is no God, man turns his eyes inward and looks upon devils from which there is no escape.

In Ken Russell's mercilessly chilling motion picture, "The Devils," which will be shown at MSU this weekend, one sense from the beginning that there is no escape from a world gone mad. And, even though the film deals with priests, nuns and the Church, one instinctively knows that there is no God in Russell's cosmos. "The Devils," based upon John Whiting's play and ultimately upon Aldous Huxley's book, "The Devils of Loudun," is, for the most part, a true story of events that took place in the second and third decades of the 17th century in France. On one level, "The Devils" deals with horrible persecution, torture and execution of Father Grandier (Oliver Reed), a worldly priest burned at the stake for the demonic possession of a cloistered convent of Ursuline nuns. On another level, "The Devils" illustrates the religious and political opportunism that brought about Grandier's trial and execution.

Ursuline's prioress (Vanessa Redgrave). Sanity is almost totally banished from director Russell's ghastly panorama of pits filled with bloating plague victims, nuns writhing in the heat of sexual sweat and holiand Father Grandier to extort accusations and confessions. But of course, it is all done for the glory of God. The performances are excellent. Oliver Reed and Vanessa Redgrave, in particular, handle the complexities of their characters with insightful deftness. Reed's Grandier is sensual, vain, combative, petty, self-destructive and, in the end, exceedingly noble and brave—an intensely contradictory set of characteristics which he manages to integrate into a most believable whole. Vanessa Redgrave, as the hideously licentious Sister Jeanne Of The Angels, is terrifyingly powerful in the subtleties of her characterization. Deformed in mind and body, driven by vile, blasphemous passions that are awesome in their intensity, Sister Jeanne is a nightmare creation that leaves audiences stunned and shaken.

Sanity is almost totally banished from director Russell's ghastly panorama of pits filled with bloating plague victims, nuns writhing in the heat of sexual sweat and holiness, masked revelers gawking and cackling at the sadomasochistic orgies of the possessed and the indignities and tortures forced upon the nuns and Father Grandier to extort accusations and confessions.

Finally, "The Devils" portrays the lust and depravity that are often so large a part of religious hysteria. Grandier is destroyed because he defended his city's autonomy against the increasing power of the monarchy and Cardinal Richelieu, and also because he unwittingly became the object of the perverse sexual fantasies of the

Violinist will perform in recital

By ED ZDROJEWSKI
State News Reviewer

MSU is blessed with visiting artists from all over the world. Of a large number come in connection with the music department. The latest of these is Adalar Mozi, a native of Bratislava, Slovakia. Mozi, a renowned violinist in both performing and teaching, is visiting MSU to do both. With his pianist brother, Stephen, he will be appearing in a recital of the International Series in the Kellogg Center auditorium Sunday at 8:15 p.m. Mozi is one of the most frequently recorded artists in Europe. "I have recorded 32 concerts and 150 sonatas," he said. Mozi records for Czechoslovakian record companies. He has many concert violinists. Mozi started his career as a soloist. He became interested in the string quartet. He is active in the Bratislava Quartet and the Slovakian Quartet. He is considered the best sound for a string quartet is a "homogeneous" one. In addition to being a soloist, Mozi is the concertmaster, or first-chair violin, with the Bratislava Radio Orchestra. He admits that he owes a lot to his experience with the symphony orchestra. "I learned the most about music from the great conductors, like Furtwangler, Bohm, and Karajan," he said.

Gallery offers feast, ghostly triangle

By FRANK FOX
State News Reviewer

Many a restaurant may boast of its host, but only the Union Ballroom Theater serves dinner with ghost.

Beginning tonight, The Players' Gallery will offer a dinner-theater presentation featuring Noel Coward's comedy of supernatural jealousy, "Blithe Spirit."

A full dinner featuring roast beef jardiniere will be served in the Union Ballroom Theater prior to the performance. Patrons may purchase tickets for the complete dinner-theater package or for the play alone, explained Stan Gill, director of "Blithe Spirit."

"Dinner-theater is a new, exciting, entire evening of entertainment," Gill said. "To my knowledge, this is the first dinner theater in East Lansing."

British tradition
Gill said patrons would be served a complete dinner by costumed waiters and waitresses dressed as traditional British servants to add to the distinctly English flair of the play. The performance will follow the completion of the meal.

"It will be a very nice dinner prepared by the same people who prepare food in the Union cafeteria," said Tom Haselschwerdt, Union food manager.

Other items on the menu include orange shrub, mixed green salad with choice of dressing, baked potato with sour cream and chives, green beans almandine, assorted rolls, cheese cake with strawberry sauce and a choice of coffee, tea or milk.

Period furniture
The Players' Gallery, a division of the Union Activities Board, has constructed a generously outfitted set at the rear of the ballroom, designed after a slightly stuffy, upper middle-class British drawing room. The set is complete with fireplace, piano, period furniture and a beautiful original Victor victrola hand-crank record player.

This vintage victrola — which turns on and off with ghostly independence — is one of the number of properties which are used to create the various bizarre trappings of Coward's witty tale of haunting and spiritualism.

Briefly, "Blithe Spirit" is a bizarre romantic triangle involving a novelist, his second wife and the blithe spirit of his late first wife who returns from the void during the bungled seance.

Very funny play
"It's a very, very funny play," Gill said. "The mark of a really funny play is when you see it 60 or 70 times, as I have in rehearsal, and you still laugh at it."
Elvira the phantom flirt, is played by Leslie Page. Charles, her former husband, is played by William B. Shipley. Carol Rosenblum is Ruth, the second wife. Sue Rosenthal plays Madame Arcoti, the clumsy medium who is responsible for the weird menage-a-trois. Suzie Weissler is codirector.

"Blithe Spirit" will be presented tonight, Saturday and Sunday as well as Jan. 31 and Feb. 1 and 2. Student admission for the dinner-theater is $6.50 per person or $7.50 general admission. Student admission for the play alone is $1.50 or $2.50 general admis-

Boy escapes
 "The Godfather, Part II" opens in 1907 in Sicily shortly after the murder of Vito Corleone's father by the local Mafia don. During the funeral procession, the young boy sees his brother who has fled to the hills swearing vengeance, murdered. When Vito's mother pleads with the local don to preserve her only son, her fate is that of her husband's and the boy barely escapes to America with the help of close family friends.

Magnificent performances
 Everyone involved with "The Godfather, Part II" turns in a magnificent performance. Al Pacino repeats his role of Michael Corleone, the present godfather, and once again invests the part with a depth and passion that is sure-fire Academy Award material.

 "The Godfather, Part II" came along without all the hype that accompanied the original. As a result, it grabs the viewer in a way that the first was never able to do. Without a doubt, "The Godfather, Part II" is the finest film of the year, a masterpiece from an American director who will surely be ranked among the great directors of all time.

dance company of Bella Lewitzky, one of America's most celebrated modern dancers, will perform at 8:15 tonight in the Auditorium. Lewitzky is something of an underground legend, and a "legend turned critic," according to another, Lewitzky rose to fame in the 1930s as a self-described "do-it-yourself" dancer. Her program will include "Spaces Between," "Bella and Brindle" and "Game Plan," three of Lewitzky's trademarks — frozen in time, percussive accompaniment, and stagehands and emphasis on speed and precision. "Spaces Between" is a "nonliteral ballet" featuring movers and watchers in a cross-section of action. "Five" reflects on the effects of the industrial and self-imposed confines. "Bella and Brindle" is a solo dance for dancer and

The daughter of Russian-Jewish immigrant parents, Bella Lewitzky, now in her 50s, grew up in San Bernardino, Calif., where she was given little opportunity for training. She studied briefly with a member of the Ballet Russe in Los Angeles and "hated it." As a beginner, she met Lester Horton, who once taught Alvin Ailey, and she cofounded the Lester Horton Dance Theater in 1946. She says her own dancing style developed "very, very slowly" while she was dancing with Horton. Wearing the costumes and dancing the same kind of repertoire as Eastern Seaboard dancers, her technique and vocabulary was always filled with Horton undercurrents. Even today, critics describe her dancing as "obviously nurtured under the California sun," and predict that she will be as well known in the East as the West soon. "Dancing has never been so widely popular as it is now," Lewitzky says. "As we move into the 1970s, man needs to sever his nerve endings from the machine and find an identity for himself."

FACULTY VIEWPOINT

"Come, climb on the bandwagon — everybody's doing it" is specious reasoning when that plea alone determines an action. Yet if one were using only the bandwagon argument to sway undecided faculty members toward union, he would strike a spark of urgency in even the most avowedly rational among the uncommitted. For note the trend toward union affiliation at MSU in the last decade or so: first, the organization of the stage hands, physical plant workers, operating engineers, skilled tradesmen and the service-maintenance employees; next, the campus police, and most recently, the clerical and technical workers. Over in Ann Arbor our chief Big Ten rival now has six unions; their office and staff members have affiliated with the UAW, and the University is now bargaining with the Graduate Employees Organization representing 2,400 graduate student employed as teaching and research assistants. Previously, bargaining units were formed for operating engineers, tradesmen, service-maintenance workers and the House Officers Association.

"So what?" Cool heads among the uncommitted reply. "You yourself have said the bandwagon argument is specious. What's good for the goose is not always good for the gander. The interests of the faculty are not analogous to either part-time student employees or full-time support personnel. The faculty, through elected representatives, jointly shares overall academic governance of MSU with the Central Administration, and the existence of advisory councils assures the protection of the individual within each unit." Stated this way, it sounds as if the faculty has nothing to gain from a system that gives power to the faculty equal to the Central Administration in determining salary and working conditions. But look around you. How much can your faculty representatives influence policy and decisions beyond academic governance? How much access to basic data affecting total operations do your representatives have? Can they, in sitting with Central Administration, do more than nod assent to financial decisions and allocations they have had no part in making? Who actually represents you when these decisions are made? Can they counter the statistics that emerge from the Office of Institutional Planning, an office run for the benefit of top Administration in its relations with the State Legislature? Do they kowtow to authority, in the form of Central Administration, because they believe it is in their best interests to do so? How much actual raise will you get in this year of retrenchment at the University? The clerical-technical workers are guaranteed on July 1, 1975, "no less than a 6% increase." Are your classes getting so large that you have difficulty providing quality instruction? Do you feel threatened by a shrinking job market in your field? As part of its support for full disclosure of information essential to faculty well-being, MSU/FA is making available the 1974-75 MSU FACULTY SALARY LIST with names arranged alphabetically by department. You may obtain a copy by writing MSU/FA care of P.O. Box 890, East Lansing, Michigan 48823. Donations to help defray cost of publication will be appreciated.

Hi Fi Ho Hum.....

Hi Fi Ho Hum is a syndrome you'll never see at Marshalls. It's very easy for many dealers to develop because they feel they're getting a fair share of the sales market pie.

You see, we won't catch it because we're after everyone's business. That's why all our products and systems offer the best value you'll find — like the system featured here:

SANSUI's 551 AM/FM stereo receiver forms the heart of our system because it provides the best combination of power, clarity, sensitivity, features and styling anywhere near its price.

For record enthusiasts we've selected the DUAL 1225 automatic turntable. Rumble, wow and flutter are well below audible levels and the tonearm tracking performance is better than many machines costing up to twice as much. We supply it with base, dust cover and $50 - EMPIRE magnetic elliptical cartridge.

Speakers usually present a problem in package systems because no matter how good (or bad) they are some people will like them and some will not. For this system we've selected a well known speaker that provides good range and accuracy and that continues to be a popular seller — the AR 4xa. The AR4xa's retail for $85 each. (In place of the AR's you can also substitute our West Lab Trend 4 systems which list at $149 each for the same system price)

MSU FACES FIRED UP DULUTH

Kelly 'man on spot' in icer series

By MIKE LITAKER
State News Sports Writer
Spartan hockey coach Amo Bessone can hardly be called a "mad scientist," but for this weekend's clash on the ice with Minnesota-Duluth, the MSU mentor will have his hands full trying to transform his team ala Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde.

Bessone goes into the series without the services of center Steve Colp, who just happened to be the second leading scorer in the WCHA until last week's injury put him on the shelf. Starting in his place on the second line will be sophomore Dave Kelly.

Kelly has seen little action in his two years at MSU, with most of his playing time coming during brief appearances on the fourth line.

So far this year Kelly has managed two goals, including one last week against Denver after Colp had left the game. His spot on the fourth line will most likely be filled by St. Clair Shores freshman Ken Brothers.

The other major bit of experimentation facing Bessone is getting his team fired up for the Bulldogs who are locked in a fight with Denver for the eighth and final WCHA playoff position. Earlier in the season, the Spartans pulled out 4-3 and 6-5 by one goal. Since the Spartans last played in Duluth there have been some upheavals in the Bulldog hockey program.

Coach Terry Shercliffe has already been informed by the Duluth Athletic Dept. that he can start looking for another job at the end of the season, leading to speculation that the Bulldogs may be fired up and looking to catch MSU with their heads down in a series crucial to both teams.

Leading the Duluth scoring attack is winger Tom Milani who is tied for tenth place in scoring in the WCHA. He is backed in the goal production category by Mike Newton and Monty Jones.

"You stop Milani and you stop half their attack," said Bessone, who sees the Bulldogs as a team of good skaters and bodycheckers.

Amo's icers continue to hold a slim one point edge over Minnesota in the standings with a 15-4-1 league mark and 17-6-1 on the year.

A series sweep is a must for MSU to keep pace with the Gophers who will find themselves down the road in Ann Arbor this weekend for a two-game set with Michigan. This will probably mark the only time this year that Bessone and company will become staunch Wolverine fans.

In the goal for the Bulldogs will be Rick Heinz with a 4.5 goals-against average while State will go with iron-man Ron Clark in the nets. Clark missed Wednesday's workout with an illness but is expected to be ready to go by game time.

Center Tom Ross continues to lead the Spartans and the WCHA in scoring with a run-away 61 points, including 25 goals. Ross and linemates John Sturges and Brendon Moroney have been the hottest combination in the league in recent weeks, which is a reassuring thought when your number two scorer has a cast on his leg.

Tickets are still available for Friday night's contest at Munn Arena, but Saturday's game is virtually a sellout, with only about 25 single $4 seats still available.

Trackmen open season with a bit of uneasiness

The MSU men's indoor track team will open its season Saturday in the Michigan Relays at Ann Arbor with just a bit of uneasiness.

Now with star sprinter Marshall Dill missing due to academic ineligibility, the Spartans are noticeably weakened.

"You've got to be philosophical about things like this," said Spartan track coach Fran Ditttrich, now in his 17th year as mentor. "I've been coaching many years, and quite a few of those times I've started the season with people missing — people that I have really wished were there to help us win the title," he said.

"You just have to do with what you've got," he added. MSU finished second in the Big Ten indoor competition last season. This year Ditttrich has indicated the Spartans can repeat that performance despite the absence of Dill.

Saturday will open Michigan's new multi-sports building. The meet, which features between 25 and 30 college club teams and about 500 athletes, will run throughout the day, with novice events opening the festivities at 10:30 a.m.

Ditttrich was hesitant to predict just what events MSU will be strong in, but listed three areas where the Spartans could clinch victories.

MSU should be strong in the distance medley, the sprint medley and the shuttle hurdle relay races, he said.

Some of the athletes to compete in these events will be sophomore miler Stan Mavis, quarter-milers Bill Nance and Charles Byrd, distance star Herb Lindsay, half-miler Dane Forney, and hurdlers Chris Casseleman, Todd Murphy, Howard Neely and Paul Zolynsky.

Trying to overcome the loss of Dill are Leon Williams, a sophomore and Claude Geiger, a freshman. Both were on MSU's football team.

Football crowds seventh highest

MSU's home football game average attendance of 64,372 in 1974 ranked the Spartans seventh in the nation on NCAA crowd listings.

IM NOTES

Contractors will tour the Women's Intramural Building shower, locker and pool areas from 8 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. today and the areas will be closed.

Early bird swim will end at 7:50 a.m. today instead of 9 a.m. Total renovation of the area is scheduled to begin March 7. The women's intramural badminton singles and doubles preliminary tournament begins today. Competition will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. in gym 216 Women's IM.

Entries will be accepted beginning Monday for the men's intramural one-on-one basketball tournament. Play begins the week of Feb. 2.

Complete schedules for men's intramural winter term team sports are now available in 201 Men's Intramural Bldg.

Matmen pack bags for Illinois, Purdue

By PAT FARNAN
State News Sports Writer
The MSU wrestling team will try to put the binders on its match losing skid this weekend as it gets back in the Big Ten back on the road against Illinois and Purdue.

The Spartans will meet Illinois tonight in Champaign and Saturday in Lafayette, Ind. MSU dropped a pair in Oklahoma last weekend to Oklahoma and Iowa State, two of the top-rated teams in the country.

Both Illinois and Purdue have shown marked improvement from last year when the Illini finished seventh in the Big Ten and the ended up ninth.

"You never know what will happen against Illinois and Purdue," said coach Grady Peninger said. "They are vastly improved season. It's not going to be any cakewalk and some of our guys going to have to battle for their lives."

The Illini are 6-3-1 in dual meets this year and were rated 20th in Amateur Wrestling News before losing to Purdue and Ohio State last weekend by the identical 20-14 scores.

They started strong, losing only to Iowa, the No. 1 team in the Big Ten, in their first six starts.

The Illini's best wrestlers are 126-pounder Phil Miller and 150-pounder Randy Sulaver, both seniors. Both placed third in the Big Ten last year. Miller is 11-3 overall and Sulaver 15-4-2 in all competition.

The higher weights have been the Illini's strength thus far with 175-pound Tom Edgren, 12-4, and heavyweight Kevin Pancratz, 12-1, carrying a big load for Illinois.

Purdue has shown signs of recovering from its lowly finish in the Big Ten a year ago.

The Boilermakers sport a talented trio of matmen, too. Though they did not place any wrestler in the Big Ten last year, 150-pounder Bernie Barille (12-1), 150-pounder Alan Housner (11-4), and 126-pounder Joe Corso (12-4) could present a formidable challenge. Corso has three falls to his credit.

Cagers hope to bounce back

By CHARLES JOHNSON
State News Sports Writer
Last year, after six weeks of Big Ten basketball competition, both MSU and Wisconsin were viewed as solid contenders for the conference title. But, oh what a difference a year makes. The Spartans will play host to Wisconsin Saturday at 4:05 p.m. in Jenison Fieldhouse, but this time the game will feature two of the Big Ten's second division tenants after six conference games.

MSU, which has dropped its last two games, is currently tied for seventh in the Big Ten with a 2-4 mark. The Badgers are at the complete bottom of the cellar with an 0-6 record in conference games. Obviously, a win for either team would be considered a breath of fresh air.

Spartan coach Gus Ganakas attributes most of his team's problems to the poor defense it has shown in the last couple of outings and hopes that Saturday's game will witness a turnaround.

"We definitely have to strengthen ourselves defensively," Ganakas stressed. "We are a very frail team, but if we can get a little more help up front with rebounding we could be all right. We have to be aggressive."

Women tankers to host Indiana, U-M Saturday

The MSU women's swimming team will try to continue its winning ways Saturday when it hosts Indiana and Michigan in a triangular meet that will begin at 1 p.m. in the Men's Intramural pool.

Coach Jennifer Parks is confident about how the Spartans will fare in the meet. "Michigan has a good team, but they have lost a lot of their better swimmers," Parks said. Last year, they were 10th in the nation while we were 13th but we beat them in the Big Ten meet. U-M this year lacks 'star' swimmers.

"Indiana is a lot better this season and they should finish closer to us than they did last year," Parks continued. "In a dual meet last year we beat them by 12 or 15 points, but conditions are different in a dual meet."

"Indiana's divers are good, but I think we'll beat them in every event except the freestyle," she added.

To give some indication of the seriousness of MSU's lack of rebounding, the Spartans don't have any player ranked in the top 10 of the conference's rebound leaders. The situation is a far cry from last year when 6-7 center Lindsay Hairston dominated the loop with a better than 14 rebounds per game average.

"Lindsay's got to be more domineering on the boards," Ganakas said. "We have to hope that he will come on like he did last year."

MSU's offensive has been adequate to superb at various stages of the season. The Spartans are averaging 77.5 points per conference game, third only to league leader Indiana (91.5) and Ohio State (82.2). However, the Spartans are giving up 87.8 points a game, worst in the league.

In addition, the Spartans are also the third best shooters in the conference with a .503 average, but are also the last in

MSU swimming team on road to face Illinois, Purdue teams

By DAN SPICKLER
State News Sports Writer

This weekend may start out a little harsh on the MSU men's swimming team, but things should be better once the upcoming dual meet action is over.

The team faces double competition on the road, first against an impressive Illinois squad in a dual meet tonight, then Saturday against a weaker Purdue team.

"Illinois has already faced Michigan, Wisconsin, and Indiana and they are the top three teams in the conference," MSU swimming coach Dick Fetters said.

"In each of those meets, although they lost, it was by very little."

"We will have to swim our best to catch them," he added.

Illinois finished fifth in the Big Ten last year, just ahead of sixth place MSU. The Illini currently hold a 1-3 overall record, while MSU is 1-2 in the conference and 2-2 overall.

Purdue should be a bit different test for the tankers. Last year the Spartans swamped the Boilermakers 84-49. Fetters is looking for another victory this season.

"Purdue has a few good individuals. But overall, I would bet that we are the better team," he said.

Purdue is 3-3 this season. MSU has beaten the Boilermakers 32 out of 35 meetings between the two schools.

Illini freestyler Mike Grimmer is expected to give Spartan sprinters Bill Hall and Bruce Wright a close match in the shorter events.

Once again, MSU will be relying on the performance of

WILLIAMS RESIDENTS POOL RESOURCES

Food co-op offers more for money

By BRIAN HOUGH
 Feel you are not getting the most for your food dollar by eating in MSU cafeterias? If so, consider the alternative offered to Williams Hall residents by the hall's newly organized food cooperative.

Williams Hall residents have the option of eating at a neighboring residence hall cafeteria or cooking their meals in kitchenettes on each floor. Most residents choose the latter. They organized the food cooperative this term to consolidate their buying power and make the most of their food dollar.

Co-op members will receive the benefits of comparative pricing, wholesale buying and home delivery of groceries, said Dennis Gray, 323 Williams Hall, one of the organizers. Gray labeled the project a team effort.

"I don't want to be a director," he said. "This is a cooperative and everyone will have to help if this thing is going to work." Tim McDaniel, 368 Williams Hall, another organizer, agreed. "We had a problem of too many Indians and not enough chiefs to begin with," he said. "We need an organization of independent people who will go out and get things done without having someone tell them how to do it." The cooperative requires members to contribute $1 for gas and packaging materials and several hours' work on one of the co-op's committees each month. Members form groups, each of which is responsible for covering a particular store, Gray explained. "Covering a store" consists of checking prices of basic items such as milk, bread, meat, vegetables and canned goods.

Bureau needs many volunteers

The MSU Volunteer Bureau, 27 Student Services Bldg., is looking for people to volunteer for the following programs. The Campus Community Commission is looking for people to plan and supervise after-school programs at Lansing area schools. Volunteers are needed three to five hours weekly. They will supervise such programs as drama, cooking and recreation and should be able to handle any problems that arise.

Volunteers are needed to act as Big Sisters in an Expanded Nutrition Program. The program is also seeking volunteers to work with children in their homes and in group situations. They will participate in food and nutrition games and teaching ideas. Also, volunteers are needed to make price comparison lists or figure out the cost of recipes. Others are needed to collect materials and make home decorating items, such as quilts and rugs.

The Easter Seals Society is seeking someone to do house cleaning, some washing and to cook dinner for a handicapped girl and her father. The volunteer should also be willing to spend some time as a companion to the girl. Otis Junior High School needs a reading specialist to work with emotionally impaired and mentally retarded students and students with learning disabilities. The volunteer is needed two hours a day, five days a week.

A basic education teacher is needed two hours a day, five days a week, at C. W. Otto Junior High School. The volunteer should have some training in working with the emotionally impaired and those with learning disabilities. The American Red Cross is looking for 13 emergency workers. They will be involved in relaying messages and verify emergency situations concerning military families and servicemen. Volunteers are needed one night every two weeks and must be over 21 years old. Some college or other posthigh school education is required.

People interested in these programs should drop by the Volunteer Bureau. "The order forms are collected, along with the money for the order, at linen exchange on Tuesday night," Gray said. "Then we total up the orders for particular items and give the orders to the group whose store has that item. They buy the items and bring them back to

Smelling old roses, eating kosher pickles are dates

Steve Brandt, 110 E. Wilson Hall, said the best means of cheap dating is to make the girl pay.

"I feel like I am being a little more open-minded about women's lib if I let the girl pay," he said.

Loving couples can also attend the music department free concerts in Fairchild Theater, said Tom Homsey, 185 Mayo Hall, a music major.

"Not too many people know about that the MSU orchestra and jazz ensemble give free concerts, but there are the regulars who always attend," he said.

Schedules for the concerts can be obtained by calling the music department.

"For free entertainment? I take my date to bed," said an MSU senior.

But as one student pointed out, that can be expensive in the long run.

"You know, doctor's bills, baby buggies, all that," the student said.

In order to conserve his dollars for essentials like toothpaste and tequila, Steve Moschina, 306 W. McDonell Hall, said he takes his dates to feed the ducks before going to a campus movie.

"Or if you have a good stereo, you can turn it up full blast and invite a girl over," he said.

"Except if it's a New England girl. They do not like loud music out there and always look at you weird."

Several students pointed out that MSU offers free entertainment if students with closed pocketbooks will just open their eyes. The Museum has open touring and guides through its historical collection. For skaters, old Dominion Hall is open for free every afternoon and evening except Sunday. If nothing else, an MSU major said MSU's vast land offer endless hiking and biking land. "When you're in MSU doesn't matter where you says the song, doesn't it?"

American Indians torn by 2 cultures

By DON KENDALL Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The American Indian is at a cultural crossroads, torn between tribal traditions and modern pressures of a technology-oriented white society, says an Agriculture Dept. expert.

"On one hand, Indians are showing a mounting pride in identifying with their heritage and seeking to preserve their language and customs," Helen W. Johnson of the department's Economic Research Service said. "But at the same time, many seem to recognize the need for some accommodation to the needs of white society."

Johnson commented in a report in a new issue of "Farm Index" published by the agency. Johnson, who said she has a special interest in Indian affairs, is an assistant to the director of the agency's Economics Development Division, which specializes in community and human resource analysis.

"Indians are the only ethnic group which still is primarily rural," she told a reporter. "And, in my opinion, that gives us a special reason for looking into their situation."

The U.S. Indian population, according to the 1970 federal census, is nearly 800,000 persons, more than triple the 248,000 counted in the first government enumeration in 1890.

In her report, Johnson said Indians have had a difficult time keeping pace with modern pressures, partly because many have "resisted adopting lifestyles that conflicted with their view of the world."

Despite gradual improvements in the past decade or so, they continue to be the most deprived minority group in the country, she said.

"Income is lower, poverty deeper, health and sanitation poorer and housing more inadequate than in the rest of the population," Johnson said. "Among rural Indians, the disparity is even greater."

Even so, she said, Indians "now appear to be entering a hopeful, though painful, period" of economic, social and cultural change.

Part of the evidence is that during the 1960s nearly 200,000 Indians streamed into large cities in search of jobs and higher standards of living. As a result, by 1970 only 55 per cent of the Indian population lived in rural areas, compared with about 70 per cent in 1960.

Johnson said the emergence of Indian militancy during the past decade has shown Indians to be "impatient with the pace of improvement in their lives" and ready to use political activism to stimulate reform.

But she sees no quick transition from ancient tradition to modern culture, socially or economically, by Indians as an ethnic group.

"When that group is a disadvantaged socially and economically, and bears the psychological burden of being a minority, the surrounding society's adjustments toward upward mobility are

News & Notes

"The Blue Knight," starring William Holden as a policeman dreading retirement, gets a repeat airing in April. And in an improved scheduling. The first time around it was stretched out over four evenings. This time NBC will do it in two two-hour segments on succeeding nights. "The Godfather" influence?

"Big names" is what Jackie Gleason promised the audience for his forthcoming celebrity golf tournament. And that's what he's delivering. President Gerald Ford is among those who will play.

Did you know that Colin Clark, the director of Lord Kenneth Clark's new "The Romantic Rebellion" series on PBS is his lordship's younger son?

Youths face bleak job outlook nationally

By TERRY RYAN
Associated Press Writer

As the economy falters, young people around the country are caught in a job squeeze that has put the unskilled on the unemployment lines and dimmed the prospects for this year's college graduates.

Unemployment is already a reality for 2.9 million people, 16 to 24 years old. They made up 44 per cent of the nation's 6.5 million unemployed last month, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

"Clerks, sales personnel, grocery checkers — we just don't have those jobs," said Bruce Johnson, chief of youth services for the District of Columbia employment office.

For the people he works with, many of them young and unskilled, Johnson said employment prospects are the worst he has ever seen.

"Employers can be choosy because there are more people looking for work," he said. "When there is a choice between a youth or an adult, the employer will go with the experienced worker."

The outlook for college students graduating this June is better, but certainly not bright.

After a nationwide sampling of employers who recruit on campus, Jack Shingleton, director of the placement bureau at MSU, last week reported a 7 per cent decline in recruiting visits this year.

About 12 per cent of this year's senior class will still be looking for jobs after graduation compared to 10 per cent last year, Shingleton said.

Most get jobs

"Most of the college students will get jobs," said Shingleton, who runs one of the largest campus placement offices in the country. "But there will be many that will not get the kinds of jobs they trained for or aspired to."

He estimated 15 per cent would take jobs they did not really want.

Shingleton said there would be strong demand for graduates with degrees in technical areas: engineering, computer science and geology. Business majors, particularly accounting and marketing majors, should also find jobs, he said.

"Where the universities will be turning out substantial overages are in the areas of psychology, sociology, history, English, social sciences and, to a lesser extent, education. We will have a surplus of teachers this year," said Shingleton.

The slumping economy has changed the attitudes and lifestyles of young people in many ways, including work.

"The majority of the youths we have employed now are serious about working," said Tom Johnson, coordinator of a manpower training program in Atlanta that includes ex-offenders and high school dropouts.

Adjustments made

It has also caused adjustments in the way college students react to campus recruiters.

"It has changed a lot since the late 1960s when they spent half the interview with the student telling the employer what it was all about," Shingleton said. "They recognize that they may have to make some compromises if they are going to get a job."

Unemployment among young people increased 40 per cent last year, the Bureau of Labor Statistics said. The year began with unemployment rates significantly higher for young people than the total work force. The year finished the same way.

The unemployment rate for 16 to 19 year-olds was 18.3 per cent last month, up from 14.4 per cent in December 1973. Unemployment among 20 to 24 year-olds was 11.8 per cent last month, up from 7.7 per cent the year before.

For the entire labor force, unemployment rose to 7.1 per cent last month from 4.8 per cent in December 1973.

There were 1,618,000 people 16 to 19 years-old looking for work last month, up from 1,265,000 a year earlier. Among 20 to 24 year-olds, there 1,282,000 out of work last month, up from 999,000 in December, 1973.

Tough market

"A college degree simply does not mean any longer that it is all there for the taking," Shingleton said. "It's a tough market, and the students are aware of this."

Shingleton recently surveyed 220 businesses, industries, government agencies and school districts that recruit annually on college campuses throughout the country.

Of those responding to the survey, 109 said they would have fewer jobs to offer than last year, 37 said they would have more jobs and 59 said they would have the same number, Shingleton said.

The job squeeze has aggravated the already bad employment situation for young blacks. Unemployment among black teenagers rose to 37.8 per cent last month, up from 28.9 per cent 12 months before. The unemployment rate among white teenagers increased to 16 per cent in December, up from 12.8 per cent the previous year.

The manpower program that Tom Johnson runs in Atlanta trains people for construction jobs in the building trades.

Walter Gilbert, a 23-year-old black in the program, recently had his hours cut. "There's just not much construction work now," he said.

Work week reduced

Johnson said some of the young workers in the training program tried to find work elsewhere when the work week was reduced. "But after they got out there," he added, "they came back because they couldn't find anywhere to work."

Despite the problem of short hours, the manpower program in Atlanta has a waiting list. Increasingly, young people are looking for training that might mean jobs.

In San Jose, Calif., enrollment at a regional vocational center for high school juniors and seniors increased 20 per cent this year, from 1,200 to 1,440. There is a waiting list for courses including auto body repair and becoming a beautician. Two new buildings are being planned at the center.

Seniors graduating from the vocational center were able to find jobs in the San Jose area last June, said Roy Bursch, director of guidance for the San Jose Unified School District. This year, he is not sure.

Uncertainty of June

"This last six-month period, there has been a big dropoff, and I don't know what our graduating seniors will face this coming June," he said.

For high school graduates who do not plan to go to college have no special skills, the prospects are even less certain. "They don't have the background," said Bursch. "It is going to be a little harder for them to be placed."

"Career education" has replaced "relevant" as the catchword college handbooks these days. Jobs are in and almost everywhere else is out or declining.

Campus administrators report a continuing surge of interest in courses and majors that provide marketable skills with a diploma.

"A higher portion of students are now looking for a job with education that does offer a special career at the end of it," said Oppenheim, director of admissions for Rutgers, the state university of New Jersey.

It's possible to graduate well up in your class... then flunk launching your career.

Dick Watts' success story: In 1968, as a graduating senior in Chemical Engineering, Dick faced the same decision you probably face today... where to start your career. He chose Kaiser Aluminum. In less than six years he's been through several levels of management, in the U.S. and in Jamaica, to his present job as Technical Manager at a major Kaiser Aluminum facility. He is responsible for Production Control, Development and Environmental projects. Dick is just one of many young engineers who have proven that the chance for advancement is better with Kaiser Aluminum than with many other companies. That's because we're young, diversified and growing. And we know that young people can take responsibility.

Don't flunk the first year of your career. It could affect the rest of your life.

That's why you too should make sure you pick the right company... the first time. If you're a senior in engineering (man or woman) who is interested in putting theory into practice—fast. And if one of your goals is to advance into a decision-making job—fast. You should talk to one of our regional recruiters. He'll fill you in on the current job situation—fast.

Call collect today and ask for Carl Suiter
