City clerk hit on stock holdings

By JOE KIRBY State News Staff Writer

Mark Grebner, a local political activist, has charged East Lansing City Clerk Beverly Colizzi with conflict of interest because she owns stock in the company which supplies the city with computer punchcard voting equipment.

In a five minute speech at Tuesday's council meeting, Grebner, a 22-year-old MSU senior, said Colizzi owns a "substantial" number of shares in Computer Election Systems, which has done $60,000 worth of business with the city over the past three

"I refuse to define substantial," Grebner said, adding that he based information about the stocks on a source who overheard a conversation between Colizzi and a representative of the California-based firm.

"No officer of the city shall be financially interested, directly or indirectly, in the profits of any contract, job, work or service to be performed for the city . . . " - East Lansing City Charter

Grebner said the city is violating the city charter by not accepting competitive bids in its dealing with Compu-Link Corp. of Lansing.

He said the city can get the voter registration materials Compu-Link supplies from at least four other firms for less money. Grebner said Compu-Link has also overbilled the city for computer programing. Colizzi would make no comment on the accusations, adding: "I'm very upset." When asked if she thought Grebner had a personal vendetta against her, Colizzi said:

Grebner's source, who overheard a conversation between Colizzi and the Computer Election Systems representative, said he would be willing to testify in court.

The source, who refused to be named at this time, said he heard Colizzi say: "I own some stock in your company."

The source said they then began talking about the current price of the stock.

Doug McLeod, vice president and treasurer of Computer Election Systems, confirmed that Colizzi and her husband Sam own stock in the company but would not say

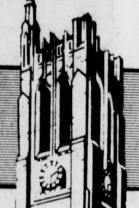

The East Lansing City Charter says that "no officer of the city shall be financially interested, directly or indirectly, in the profits of any contract, job, work or service to be performed for the city . . ."

City Attorney Dennis McGinty said that even if Colizzi does own stock, this does not mean she is in violation of the charter. "It would depend on the individual circumstances," McGinty said.

Colizzi was appointed to the position of city clerk, which pays from $14,240 to $16,655, in 1969. She was not available for further comment Wednesday. An office worker said she was attending an out-oftown conference and would be back Friday.

Congress OKs food stamp cost freeze

From Wire Services

SHINGTON - Congress rejected ent Ford's plan to increase the price stamps and voted Wednesday to the prices for the rest of this year. as the first legislative action comby the 94th Congress.

Senate passed the bill 76 to 8 and to Ford only a few hours after its lture Committee approved it without gs. The House had passed it Tuesday

join

The Senate also approved a resolution, which needs no further action, directing Secretary of Agriculture Earl L. Butz to make recommendations by June 30 on ways to improve and reform the program. The resolution was urged by Sen. Robert Dole,

The Senate turned back an attempt that had failed in committee to make the resolution a part of the bill. That would have meant sending the measure back to the House for another vote.

This was the first major bill to come up for a vote in the House in the new Congress, which was liberalized considerably in the election last year. But the conservative members seemed equally reluctant to vote against a program aimed at helping the poor and unemployed at a time of economic

Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., said Butz told him two weeks ago that the Administration expected its plan to be killed but urged a delay in any fundamental changes in the program until later this year.

Dozens of proposals are pending in both houses to revise the decade-old program. Some are designed to curb its expense, now running nearly $4 billion a year. Some would expand benefits to the needy while also curbing widely reported abuses.

Under it, the 17.1 million current recipients pay amounts ranging from 8 per cent of their net income to 30 per cent, with an average about 23 per cent.

Last year, the Dept. of Agriculture announced that beginning March 1, it would raise the purchase price of food stamps from a sliding fee that averaged 23 per cent of a family's net monthly income, to a flat fee of 30 per cent, the maximum allowable

This increase would have effectively removed from the rolls of the program 10 to 20 per cent of the participants, Agriculture Dept. figures show. For these individuals, the cost of the stamps would be so close to their value as to make the benefit useless.

Unemployment is swelling the stamp rolls at a rate of about 1 million persons a month, in addition to those transferred by congressional mandate to stamps from the old direct-food assistance programs.

Under the current scale, for example, an elderly person living alone with a net income of $154 a month from Social Security benefits pays about $30 for $46 worth of coupons. Under the Ford plan, he would have paid $45 for $46 worth.

Congressional liberals do not see the vote as an unqualified victory over Administration policies. They feel that the proposed increase, which would have raised by one-third the average cost of buying food stamps, was so unpopular that it could not go through. By pushing the issue, they said, the Administration reversed the momentum of efforts to liberalize benefits.

Community groups and organizations representing the poor opposed the move. Of more than 4,000 opinions the agriculture Dept. received on the issue, only 50 were in favor of the increase.

The Agriculture Dept. said it would continue to advocate the higher price of food stamps because that program and others such as the school lunch and breakfast programs - all slated for cuts in the President's new budget - are now consuming 64 per cent of its operating

The cuts were supposed to save the department $217 million for the remainder of this fiscal year.

FORD STOCKS UP ON SKIING TRIP

Thousands crave Coors

By JAMES P. STERBA New York Times

GOLDEN, Colo., - At the end of President Ford's skiing holiday in Colorado, White House aides and reporters bundled onto their chartered jet at Grand Junction to fly back to Washington. The pilot noticed that the plane was unusually heavy - so much so, in fact, that as a precaution, passengers were asked to redistribute themselves to help balance the weight.

Hours later, when the plane landed at Andrews Air Force Base, the quizzical poundage was discovered. The baggage compartment was stuffed with cases of Coors beer.

Coors. There's just something about the stuff, its fans contend. It has a mystique.

Nonsense, its detractors insist. It's little more than beer-flavored water - "Colorado Kool-Aid," they call it. Colorado liberals say they stay away from it not only because it's "just another beer," but also because the Coors family owners are political conservatives. Some Chicano groups treat Coors the same as lettuce and grapes - something to be boycotted - because of the company's allegedly discriminatory hiring practices. That is not important, Coors lovers maintain. Coors is just good beer. It is light. Its taste is supreme. And perhaps most important, it is hard to get.

The Adolph Coors Co. distributes Coors beer in only 11 Western states. But "distributes" is the wrong word. The company cannot meet the demand. It could, for example, have sold all 12.5 million barrels of beer it made last year in California alone. But it rations its beer to 167 distributors in the 11 states. And at the Eastern borders of Kansas and Oklahoma. Coors dries up.

Rather, it is supposed to. In the last few years, the Eastern thirst for Coors has turned thousands of people into smugglers. And it has not hurt the plain brown wrapper business any.

Last week, revenue agents used a bulldozer to ceremoniously squash dozens of cases of contraband Coors. In the last year Tennessee agents have pinched more than 1.500 cases.

Most states have beer-tax laws, and im-

The majority of JMC courses will remain pass/no credit, at least for students coming into the college. "Personally, I don't see that this will change the courses at all,"

LeGates said. "I've seen that the pass/no credit system has been a deterrent for some students. For our students seeking employment the written evaluations have been good, but for students wanting to go into graduate school it's been difficult. The schools are swamped and the written evaluations have been looked upon negatively." LeGates said she expects some adverse reaction to the decision,

'That's the bulk of an average JMC student's courses," she said. That's not a compromise.'

In a newsletter Stoner helped write to get student and faculty support, the students who favor the pass/no credit system protested the advent of grades at JMC because they feel this will virtually abolish their chance for an alternative education at MSU. They protest that they entered JMC under the pass/no credit system but they cannot complete their education under it.

The students also feel that competition among students will result and this will inhibit the free exchange of ideas. Innovative teaching methods will be constrained, they say, and the grading system camouflages and legitimizes poor performances on the part

'We don't feel the pass/no credit system is the reason for the lack of student motivation," Stoner said. "I feel many of the faculty are using the current grading system as a red herring to keep from examining their own teaching methods." Milton Powell, history professor in JMC who has been at the college for eight years, said he is disappointed in the decision. "The majority of the faculty feel that the expectations of students have changed and more students are interested in having a grade point average for employment purposes," he said. "But I'm not sure we made a safe, cautious, conservative decision."

EPA cancels Boston order

The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) said Wednesday it has decided to cancel an order that employers cut the size of their commuter parking lots in an effort to cut down air pollution.

The agency said there is no need for the order, considered one of the toughest antipollution measures in the country, because air quality in the Boston area has improved in the past three years. But the EPA said it also took into consideration strong public opposition to the proposed

The rule, which had been scheduled to take effect May 31, was the most controversial part of a plan to cut down exhaust fumes in the 101 communities around Boston. It would have forced employers with 50 or more workers to make a 25 per cent cut in employe parking.

Instead, the EPA has a new set of regulations that rely mostly on voluntary cooperation. They don't take full effect until 1977

India joins ping-pong tourney

Palestinians have been admitted to the world table tennis championships as part of a high-stakes diplomatic tournament being played, along with the ping pong.

The decision came as a Chinese team charmed the Indians with tea parties and smiles and the Israeli sports federation called for the resignation of the International Table Tennis Assn. president.

The Indian government, maintaining a resolutely pro-Arab policy, has refused entry to an Israeli team that had planned to play in the 60-nation championships. The tournament opens today.

LIMA, Peru (AP) - President Juan Velasco's military regime declared a state of emergency Wednesday and sent tanks and troops into the streets of Lima in an attempt to quell demonstrators and rioters protesting bloody government action against striking police.

Troops fired shots into the air in a bid to disperse students and other civilians who set cars and buildings afire hours after an army assault on the headquarters of the police striking for more pay.

However, the action failed to halt the strike by a large segment of the 20,000-member paramilitary Guardia Civil national police force and demonstrators took to the streets in support of the police.

MSU plans switch to 7-digit ID system

By PEGGY GOSSETT State News Staff Writer

low it is student numbers. this era of deficiencies, student ers apparently will be MSU's next

The University is running out of student numbers under its current six-digit system. Within three years MSU will change to a seven-digit system.

That means if your student number now reads 592606, it will be revised within three years to read 0592606.

The University has branded almost one million students with the six-digit system, but with an additional digit to work with, nine million more students can have their identities numerated.

While the old system lasted nearly 40 years since its initiation in 1938, the new system should last 300 more years, said Lynn Peltier, asst. director of institutional

Changing to the new system will demand a redesigning of all computers and computer cards in the University, to accommodate another digit in the student records. "It's amazing how such a little change can affect the entire University," said Paul Dressel, director of institutional research.

University officials have not estimated the cost for the changeover, but say they will nevertheless subsidize it, whatever the

This is not yet a crisis situation, but the problem involves the limit of one million possible combinations using six digits. Though the University is now assigning numbers in the 728,000 range, MSU will completely run out within four years, Peltier said.

"That does not necessarily mean there have been one million students, though, because anyone who applies to MSU gets a student number whether or not he is admitted," Peltier said.

The first student number ever assigned was one, the second was two and so on in numerical succession, Dressel said.

Anticipating the depletion of numbers, a committee was appointed fall term by President Wharton to study alternative ways of assigning student numbers.

The committee studied two possibilities: using Social Security numbers, or changing to a seven-digit system, said Dressel, chairman of the committee.

The seven-digit system was recommended by the committee because the Social Security system would have presented too many problems, Dressel said. First of all, the Social Security system uses nine numbers, which is more than the University needs, Dressel said.

Also, the federal government may ultimately restrict Social Security number use for identification purposes in order to protect the individual's right of privacy. Dressel said there are various kinds of classified personal records which the social security number identifies, and extensive use of the number might make that information accessible to the public.

Oklahoma has already passed a state law prohibiting the use of Social Security numbers for identification purposes and other states have similar laws under study. However, the Michigan Social Security office said it will continue to cooperate with school systems who use the numbers for identification purposes.

Wendall Law, operations supervisor, said using the numbers for identification was frowned on in the past, but the Social Security Administration recently revised

'U' to purchase computer unit for financial aid

ELLEN SPONSELLER State News Staff Writer

Don't worry, MSU students with financial aid - SAFE will keep you and your money safe - as long as you are honestly reporting your income.

Steve Terry, MSU vice-president for business and finance, signed a contract Monday authorizing the University to purchase a new financial aid computer system designed to keep records, develop individual financial aid packages, send letters and make things easier for MSU and hopefully the student.

The system, called Student Assistance Financial Evaluation (SAFE), was developed by Information and Communications, Inc. from California. It will be installed in sections over an 11-month period, to be completed by fall 1976. The cost is $4000 for installment and $11,820 per year as long as the system runs. Only two other universities in the country, the University of Southern California and the University of Michigan, have similar systems.

Why does the Univesity need SAFE? "The present system is just too cumbersome and takes too long," Terry said. "SAFE will do a much better job of packaging financial aid programs, leaving the staff with the time to make adjustments in special cases."

The SAFE system would not lay any people off in the financial aid department, said Richard Kenney, associate director of MSU financial aid.

"As I envision it, initially our staff will be working with data going into the machine. Our staff is very knowledgeable about analyzing students needs. They will be able to give more time to special cases," he

The finanical aid process is not difficult for the student, but is very complicated for MSU, Kenney said.

"We must investigate the various places we can obtain financial aid for the student, such as scholarships, loans and grants. It is very complicated for us," Kenney said.

"The SAFE system will be much more efficient and sophisticated," he added.

Kenney said the present manual system of financial record-keeping does not insure the most equal distribution of funds.

"We are required by the government to keep up to date on all income of students on the program," he said.

"There are not many, but there are some people who are receiving aid from sources we do not know about," Kenney added. "This is unfair to other students. SAFE will be much more efficient — there will be less room for human error."

Kenney said that since SAFE will be put in by sections, students will not have to change their methods for applying.

"We still will use the regular financial aid applications students are using now," he

SAFE is the result of a four-year study by the University. The choices were between improving the present MSU system, using the SAFE system and installing the FINPAC system used by U-M. SAFE was chosen because it was the cheapest, the fastest and best suited to the needs of MSU, Kenney said.

"Many students are apprehensive about a computer system," Kenney said. "They think its memory banks are storing intimate information about them. But all we keep in the computer is financial aid information - the same information we keep in our files now. It will just make things easier for us."

Beal finds success with X-rated films

By ALLAN LENGEL State News Staff Writer

Hammond is not the only business that depends on organs for a livelihood.

The Beal Film Group has been drawing MSU students to its X-rated films for four years despite occasional objections. The group is sponsored by the Beal Co-op and run by manager Steven Sunshine, 27, whose brother, Mike, founded the group six years ago by showing art films on the MSU According to co-op President Lou Van Winkle, Sunshine selects the films and runs

A few weeks back, Van Winkle said, "a group of Christians" kept coming up to the Beal house, 525 M.A.C. Ave., and bombarded it with snowballs in protest over the films.

The last time, he explained, three men came out of a van and stood in front of the house and once again threw snowballs. "I came out on the porch and they still

"I started chasing one of the guys down M.A.C. Ave. and the other two jumped in a van and came around the corner and sort of swerved to make it look like they were going to hit me," he said.

Gen. Lee's citizenship was taken away at the close of the Civil War along with that of thousands of other Southerners, because they made the fatal mistake of being on the losing side. Many regained their citizenship by swearing an oath of allegiance to the United States and Lee thought he had done the same. But after his death it was discovered that, by a technicality, he had never regained his citizenship.

So this fantastic man who is revered throughout the South and honored by all the military schools in the world remains today a man without a country. Congress can remedy this by acting favorably on the motion Sen. Harry Byrd of Virginia has presented to restore full citizenship to Lee. It is only fitting and proper that this be

When the South declared war on the North in 1861, Lee was offered the command of the entire Union army. He thought over his decision carefully. Lee decided when his native state, Virginia, seceded he had no choice but to go with her. He did not want to have to fight and kill friends and relatives in his own home state.

He served for awhile on Jefferson Davis' staff, but was finally appointed as General of the Army of Northern Virginia. In the next few years Lee carved his way into the hearts of his men, the South and history.

His men loved him so much that they would shout and cheer whenever he appeared. One time a hill the Yankees held was needed desperately by the Confederate forces, but after numerous charges the Union troops still were entrenched. huge casualty lists after one battle, who went without rations himself so there could be more for his men. Compare him to the Union generals who burned a 300-mile swath through Georgia, who burnt Atlanta to the ground, who devastated the Shenandoah Valley and often were in such a drunken stupor that they couldn't give orders. One of these generals, Ulysses S. Grant, became President while Lee was not even given his citizenship back.

After the war Lee contributed to society by serving as President of Washington University, which has since been renamed Washington and Lee University.

Lee did not like war. The South never carried on an offensive war but rather just wanted to be left alone. When that fateful day came at Appomattox Courthouse and Lee surrendered, he humbly asked Grant if his men could keep their horses to do their spring plowing. He thought of his men to

Later on Lee was credited with stopping a recurrence of the Civil War when he angrily told young Southerners that the war was over and they should forget it. They respected Lee and they forgot.

Now it is the duty of the Congress to not forget. To not forget a man that stands above other men in many ways. But even if the Northern congressmen do not give their approval to this motion, they cannot do anything about the fact that Robert E. Lee will be loved and remembered long after they have turned to dust.

Gauntlet falling for Ford

When Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee greeted Ambassador-Designate Elliot Richardson at a recent dinner with the remark that "I expect we'll be seeing a lot of each other in New Hampshire next year," he was only drawing an obvious conclusion from the thesis he later stated to Christopher Lydon of the New York Times:

"The value of incumbency has been greatly diminished by public financing and subsidies for primary candidates. You're likely to see a lot more people run against a sitting president."

That is all the more likely for 1976, considering that Gerald Ford became a sitting President by appointment rather than by election, and that he might well go into the 1976 campaign with 8 per cent unemployment, double-digit inflation, the biggest peacetime budget deficit in history and either an unsolved energy crisis or an unpopular program of driving up energy prices (not to mention the possibility Ford himself keeps raising, of an increased involvement in Indochina).

If that is so, not only Baker with his Watergate television exposure but Elliot Richardson, the hero of the Saturday Night Massacre certainly would be logical contenders in a Republican nomination fight -Richardson to sit tight in London, aloof from grubby primary battles, hoping to come in clean at the end to be everyone's compromise candidate.

After all, on the Republican side alone, it can be reliably posited that in addition to the MESSRS. Ford, Baker and Richardson, burning desire to serve the nation from the White House lurks in the patriotic hearts of Nelson Rockefeller, Ronald Reagan and

Sen. Charles Percy. Others could surface at the slightest hint that Ford might quit. On the Democratic side, with not even an incumbent president to impose caution on the field, you have to categorize rather than merely list, dividing all gall into three Positively running: Sens. Scoop Jackson and Lloyd Bentsen, Rep. Morris Udall, Gov. George Wallace, former Govs. Jimmy Carter and Terry Sanford and former Sen. Fred Harris.

Positively interested: Sens. John Glenn, Dale Bumpers, Frank Church, Adlai Stevenson, Robert Byrd and Birch Bayh, Govs. Hugh Carey, Edmund Brown and Dan Walker and Mayor Kevin White.

Postively not running: Sens. Hubert Humphrey, Edward Kennedy, Edmund Muskie and Walter Mondale.

Counting those positively not running, since a politician doesn't positively not run unless he positively can't be counted out, this makes 21 Democratic conceivables. As many as a dozen of these might make some serious effort at the nomination, either as a candidate in the primaries or as one "available" at the Democratic National Convention.

This cannot be charged entirely to Ford's probable political weakness, since roughly a year or more ago. Baker put his finger on one reason - the availability of federal campaign funds for 1976, a relatively recent development foreseeable since the Watergate scandal developed.

The other reason is the new proportional representation rule of the Democratic party, guaranteeing any candidate who makes a minimum showing a number of delegates roughly proportionate to his share of the vote in conventions and primaries. Even a marginal candidate can hope, under this rule, to go to the m convention with enough delegates to factor in the selection of a national ti

Zionist slaves

What do sheiks buy in America from Mr. Buchwald's point of view (Jan. 29)? They buy cities, art museums, parks and the like.

Well, these are all components of land resources. If Mr. Buchwald has not yet had the opportunity to study land resources, and if he ignores the fact that land resources have a market, then I do not blame his mockery.

I do blame Mr. Buchwald if he ignores what Zionism is buying in America. I think it is buying human beings. Many of the mass media people in America - like Buchwald may be considered as slaves, or at least Zionist footholds. (Recall the recent remark of Gen. G. S. Brown, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, about the Jewish influence in this country).

I also wonder if Zionism is buying presidents through the elections, or whether it might be behind the killing or kicking out of other presidents of America. And what about Cabinet members: are they all Americans?

Moreover, some of America's pilots and soldiers are Zionists, and have fought and killed for its sake. Arabs hate to buy human beings. Instead they will buy land resources as an effort to increase and enhance their already powerful economic situation. In the future, neither the mockery of slaves, nor the influence of Zionism in America, will help in the recovery of the fallen economic situation. Salama A. El-Shawaf

Alumni Chapel serves all faiths

Its walls contain fragments of bombed-out European cathedrals as well as the 489 names of MSU alumni who lost their lives in the armed services. A 215-year-old Bible lies inside.

The MSU Alumni Memorial Chapel has served MSU since 1951. The red-bricked, ivycovered chapel was financed by alumni donations totalling $200,000.

MSU has not always had a chapel. Students and faculty attended religous services in Old College Hall, where Beaumont Tower now stands, from MSU's birth in 1855 until 1918, when the hall collapsed.

The Alumni Chapel, which stands close to the Red Cedar River on Auditorium Road, serves all denominations.

The chapel is also available to alumni, students, faculty and staff for wedding services.

"Weddings are performed during the year for people of all faiths," said Dona L. Smith, departmental secretary of the MSU reservations office. "Most couples still prefer a traditional ceremony but we've had some untraditional weddings, too. Guitars, flutes and bells have replaced the organ in many instances."

The pews of bleached oak can accommodate 200 people beneath the chapel's beamed ceil-

The chapel's organ, the O. W. Mourer Memorial Organ, was built in the Netherlands, dismantled and reassembled in the chapel. The organ contains 25 electric chimes and 1,331 pipes. The chapel's Bible is also unique. A King James version, printed in 1759, was presented by Harry D. Baker, class of Embedded in the chapel's walls are fragments of European cathedrais. "Most of the stones are at least 500 years old and were collected by friends of MSU who have gone abroad, or they have been sent back by foreigners who visited the University," said Jerry L. Baars, chapel director. "There are stones from St. Paul's Cathedral and Westminster Abbey in London and Notre Dame Cathedral in Paris."

Also displayed are stones from the ruin of a cathedral built by the Crusaders in Caesaria, the Roman capital of Palestine and from the ruin of a synagogue in Caperneum where Christ reportedly preached.

Three-dimensional stained glass windows, donated as memorials by individuals and organizations, envelop the interior of the chapel.

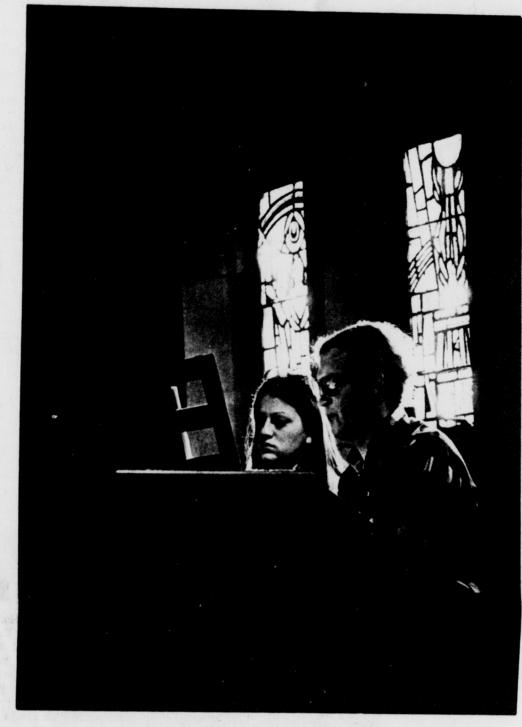

The windows of three walls depict religious and patriotic scenes, while the fourth wall depicts MSU's history.

Baars noted that the chapel is more than a showplace or a setting for weddings.

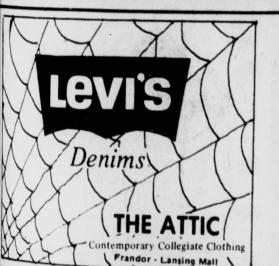

"Individuals find their way here for meditation, thought and silent prayer," he said. "Some students are troubled or need to be alone; some enjoy just visiting and talking.

"Some students have attended MSU for four years and never experienced the beauty of this chapel."

By NANCY E. CRANE State News Staff Writer

For the first time in decades, East Lansing-area residents will have a chance this year to visit the People's Republic of China through trips sponsored by the local branch of a national cultural

The East Lansing branch of the U.S.-China Peoples' Friendship Assn. is sending two delegates to China for three weeks in May, and will send more local people to China on future trips. Anyone interested can apply.

"These trips are definitely not for professionals. China already has tours for that purpose. These are only friendship tours for ordinary citizens interested in the People's Republic," said Julie Griffing, one of the coordinators of the program.

Griffing said that people who go on the trip will get to plan their own itineraries.

"You would be surprised at the openness of the Chinese government. They will allow people to visit almost anywhere," Griffing

People interested in the China trip can call Griffing at the Asian Studies Center, 353-1680, or Joseleyne Tien at 355-5146. Griffing said applicants must express serious interest in promoting friendship between the peoples of the United States and China.

She said priority would be given to people who have already shown interest in China through classes and other activities.

"People interested will have to include in their applications an outline of how they plan to follow through on promotion of Chinese-American friendship after the trip," Griffing said.

Griffing said each applicant will be considered separately and family members will not be given preference because of family

"Just because a husband and wife apply doesn't mean they will

Griffing said the friendship association is nonpolitical, and explained other trips which the organization will sponsor

"Every three months or so we will be running trips. Some will be for people involved in the organization and other tours will be subsidized for low-income people," Griffing said. The trips cost $2,100 for each person, which includes transport tation, housing, food and spending money.

The U.S.-China People's Friendship Assn. was formed in 1997 and now has branches around the country. The East Lansin branch began in December 1974, and has about 25 members.

The organization will be holding cultural events this year or campus. On Feb. 7 and 8 the association will show "The East" Red," a movie chronicling the events of the Chinese Commun revolution, in 105 S. Kedzie Hall.

A third man died Tuesday as a County Jail pending the preresult of an East Lansing mass murder that took place Jan. 30.

American officials say.

U.S. official said.

Charles Bovinette, 46, 4919 Kessler, Lansing, died Tuesday evening at 8:45 from a bullet wound in the head. Bovinette suffered the wound after a card game was broken up by two gunmen who ordered him, along with three others, to lie on the floor. The gunmen, one of whom had been in the game earlier, then shot them.

John Fowler, 31, and Lawrence Chappell, 39, were both pronounced dead immediately after the incident.

Treaty duration is one of the issues which has the end of the century, while the United States has favored a date around the year 2025. A second major issue is whether the United States will retain a right to construct a sea level canal at a site a few miles from the present waterway. Among the drawbacks of the current canal is that many modern vessels are too large for it and end-of-century projections indicate it will be unable to accommodate demand.

American officials hope that a draft treaty will be ready for submission to Congress by mid-April. A major hurdle is ratification by the Senate, where 32 members have signed a resolution rejecting the administration's plan. But sources close to the U.S. negotiating team believe that of these senators, only 20 are hard-core opponents of a new treaty. As these officials see it, the key to obtaining the requisite two-thirds majority for ratification is the large bloc of undecided senators. Rep. Daniel J. Flood, D-Pa., leads the treaty's opponents in Congress. They argue that the canal zone, now protected by 14,000 U.S. military personnel, is "the jugular of hemispheric defense." Flood says ceding the zone to a country with a long record of political instability could eventually lead to a Soviet takeover of the area.

Informed U.S. officials say the Defense Dept. has been kept apprised of the negotiations every step of the way and fully supports the State Dept.

Fine talent teases on Virgin Records

DAVE DI MARTINO tate News Reviewer n Records has signed a of progressive talent For a relatively new company, operating in America for only a year, its impressive catalog can be matched by few other companies for sheer talent.

Though the newcomers have released only 10 recordings to date, including Mike Oldfield's "Tubular Bells" and Tangerine Dream's "Phaedra", each and every one has been greeted with nearly universal critical enthusiasm and acceptance.

The company's newest releases maintain Virgin's quality standards, to say the least.

ROBERT WYATT - "ROCK BOTTOM": One could hardly expect this album from a man so recently traumatized by a crippling accident. Wyatt, who made his name as the eccentric drummer of Soft Machine, has produced a magnificent work that stands as this reviewer's choice for album of the year.

After falling from a fourthfloor window at a party almost two years ago, Wyatt was regarded by many to be out of the music scene. Confined to a wheelchair, Wyatt had little hope of every playing the drums as he once did.

Instead of calling it quits, Wyatt put all his effort into increasing his keyboard prowess and vocal abilities. Blessed with an amazing voice in the first place, he did not have to try very hard to come up with "Rock Bottom".

This effort is exactly what Wyatt fans have been wanting to hear since the unforgettable "Moon in June" from Soft Machine's third album. Pulled together by the commendable production of Pink Floyd's Nick Mason, the album is a sheer tour-de-force of Wyatt's vivid and always interesting imagination.

"Sea Song," the first selection, is as moving as anything Wyatt has ever done - certainly as captivating as his "Caroline" with Matching Mole - and the brilliance doesn't stop till the album's end. Backed by a highly talented group of musicians that includes a stellar performance by Soft Machine cohort Hugh Hopper, Wyatt has, with "Rock Bottom," continued to boost himself into legendary status as a musician with few equals.

GONG - "YOU": An interesting combination of English and French musicians, Gong has finally released their first American album. Thankfully, it is their best to date. Led by looney guitarist Daevid Allen, another refugee from Soft Machine, the group has every chance of success, with proper exposure in this country. Aside from featuring some of the most advanced synthesizer work ever heard in a rock context, "You" is the group's most substantially structured accessible work yet. Fans of midperiod Frank Zappa will particularly enjoy Gong's work, as the compositional style makes for an interesting comparison. Guitarist Steve Hillage and saxophonist Didier Malherbe are the instrumental core of the group, and along with the high-browed synthesizer work of Tim Blake, Oldfield's "Tubular Bells." That album, soon to be released, will be much easier to digest than "Star's End" for most listeners.

The album, actually a continuous piece lasting 55 minutes, is performed by England's Royal Philharmonic Orchestra and features Mike Oldfield on solo guitar and bass and Henry Cow's Chris Cutler on percussion.

While an extremely interesting piece of music, the textures of Bedford's compositional style defy casual listening. One cannot, as this reviewer attempted. put the album on the stereo and try to sleep as it plays. So much happens at such an unpredictable pace with crescendos abounding, that one is forced to sit up and just listen.

The difference between "Star's End" and standard classical/rock fusion is great and at once obvious: "Star's End" truly works. Those wishing to hear a unique piece of music are advised to pick up the record. Nonadventurous souls are hereby warned to avoid it at all costs.

"If we all land on our heads, we can really go far," said Tom Benson, an MSU diver, of the Spartan men's diving teams chances in the upcoming Big Ten and NCAA meets.

Maybe the phrasing sounds a bit illogical, but divers live in a topsy-turvy world. They are a rare breed of cat.

At three-meters up in the air, the water in a pool looks like a distant glass wall, and if a diver lands the wrong way, it feels like one too.

But there aren't too many belly flops performed by the Spartan diving team. These guys land on their heads for the most part; not their stomachs or their feet.

In seven dual meets this season, the Spartan springboard artists have lost only once, and that was to intrastate rival Michigan.

This weekend Spartan coach John Narcy's squad will face its toughest test in dual meet action. MSU travels Saturday to Ohio State, which has the best diving team in the Big Ten. "They have four national finalists and that includes Tim Moore, the conference and NCAA champ," Narcy said. While OSU will put up some fierce competition, the Spartans have four divers that should give them quite a fight.

POWs suffer from intestinal diseases for

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) -The nation's 591 Vietnam war prisoners came home with 1,528 illnesses and injuries, an average of three per man, the Center for Prisoner of War Studies said Wednesday.

The center, which is run by the Navy, said dental problems, including abscesses, broken dentures and gum diseases, were among the most debilitating. But it said there were no reports of tuberculosis, the leading cause of death among repatriated prisoners in Korea and World War II.

"Seventy-five per cent of the returned POWs were suffering from intestinal parasites and a Cong reported malaria, beri-few had asthma, but since have recovered," said Dr. S. William Berg, the Navy lieutenant who heads the center's medical sec-

"Some men were finicky and starved themselves, while others ate everything, including worms, rats, maggots and insects in bread, sewer greens or anything that could be remotely considered food."

The types of diseases and other ailments apparently depended to a degree on whether the Americans were imprisoned in North or South Vietnam. The soldiers and Marines who were the captives of the Viet beri, diarrhea and dysentery at the time of their release, Berg said. Bacterial skin infections and boils were common, and, in some cases, fungus infections covered the body.

In the more conventional prisons of the North, the exprisoners said they generally received late morning and mid-afternoon meals consisting of a half loaf of French bread and bowl of thin vegetable soup. After 1969, some meat and side dishes were served.

Berg said POWs in the South competed with the guerillas for meager food rations, existing mainly on rice, fish and a yam-like plant called manioc.

In a recent interview, another center staff member, Army Capt. Hamilton I. McCubbin, said 27 per cent of the repatriated Vietnam POWs were divorced by last October and three were treated for severe mental disorders, including one who is still hospitalized. But he added that the big majority "have very well withstood the stresses imposed on them.'

successful campaign for 8th District Ingham County Commissioner in the 1974 Democratic primary, losing to James Heyser by 18 votes.

The council did approve a Griffiths motion to have the city manager investigate the city's bidding procedure on the services supplied by Compu-Link. City Manager John

MSU students who vacation out west, use that occasion as a prime opportunity to load up on their supply of Coors. Carol Mekula takes a skiing

"It's a rare treat that you cause "it's just a different beer. can't get out here," she said. Paul Green, traveled to Colorado Springs, where his sister lived, to help her move back to Michigan. He paid $36 for six cases and brought them back in a Volkswagon. He said he does not drink beer that much and only had one can of Coors. He gave some of it to friends and family and sold the rest.

"It's a light beer, and it's also a novelty out here," said Green, junior, 323 Village Drive. It seems that even MSU athletes find that a case of Coors

Officials at the Liquor Control Commission for the State of Michigan say that individuals who bring Coors back with them from out west, are violating the law, but very rarely can the commission find enough proof to prosecute them. However, if licensed package liquor dealers were caught selling Coors over the counter, they could be tried in civil court. Several of the officials contacted at the commission did not even know the penalties involved for illegal shipping or sales of Coors beer.

'Tommy Traveler' puts '60s behind him

Associated Press Writer PHILADELPHIA (AP) Some people called him a hero. Others wanted him dead.

Thomas Tongyai, better known as "Tommy the Traveler," says they are all correct.

Tommy is the one-time FBI informant and special deputy sheriff whose cover was busted in 1970 when he joined police officials in conducting a Hobart College drug raid that sparked a campus riot. He claimed he had been frequenting the Geneva, N.Y. campus to infiltrate the radical undergound.

"The whole thing was crazy," he says. "But I can't say I regret it. I was serving my country."

From 1968 through 1970 Tommy traveled upstate New York as a salesman of veterinary medicines. The sales job, though, was only a cover: Tommy, with his boyish face, short black hair and establishment three-piece suit, was really a government informer. His mission was to get close to the anti-war campus protesters, learn who was behind them. take down names and dates and report back to the FBI.

Five weeks before the riot at Hobart, a fire bomb exploded in the office of the Reserve Officers Training Corps on the campus. Within hours police arrested two freshmen who had thrown the bomb

Tongyai, the veterinary salesman who had become a familiar face in Hobart's radical crowds, allegedly taught the two freshmen how to make the bomb, urging them to use black powder instead of gasoline. He had backed out of the scheme at the last minute with a fabrication that his talents were needed elsewhere that night. Almost as fast as the story flashed into the newspapers, agent in Geneva, N.Y.). But I chilling questions were raised: was Tommy just a spy or was he a provocateur? Did he merely help plan the bombing or did he cause it? Was the government spying on radical groups or was it handing them bombs in hopes of discrediting the peace move-

The questions were never fully answered. The FBI won a court order that sealed its records on Tommy. A county grand jury refused to address the issue publicly. Tommy said nothing.

Tongyai today is a horseman and a skilled blacksmith. He lives with his second wife, a school teacher, on a picturesque backwoods Pennsylvania farm a half-mile from the nearest paved road, with an unlisted telephone number and no mailbox to advertise his whereabouts.

"How did you find me way back here?" he asks. "Not many people know where I live."

Those who do know do not like to give the information to strangers. Tommy is a part-time policeman in the township. Most of the residents know about his undercover work. But it makes no difference. They say he does

"I can't tell you anything about recruitment or training. That's classified," he says. "My father worked for counterintelligence in the Army. I sort of grew up with it. You can take it from there."

Did Tommy work for the Central Intelligence Agency?

"I was with the bureau (FBI)," he says. "I don't know anything about the agency (CIA). My contact was Jerry (Jerome O'Hanlon, former FBI

CIA Director William E. Colby has acknowledged that his agency infiltrated anti-war and dissident groups inside the United States and recruited at least 22 domestic agents who operated during the late 1960s. Colby said that the undercover work resulted in intelligence files being kept on about 10,000

"They called me a provocateur," Tommy said. "They said I was giving bombs to innocent kids, showing them how to use guns. You don't understand it, but that's part of the undercover psychology. I showed people how a bomb would go off. But I never handled explosives that the radicals could have got hold of.

"It was a means of defusing the situation, and at the same time, not blowing my cover."

"A kid would say. 'Let's blow up a building.' If I backed out they'd know I was an agent. I'd ask them what they wanted to use. They'd say 'Molotov cock-

windmills spinning Lansing winds

By JEFF MERRELL State News Staff Writer

A long, long time ago, somebody decided that' wind could be used for something other than blowing leaves off trees, and they invented the Windmills flourished for awhile, then flounder ed around in relative anonymity, and have only recently made a comeback.

Now, for just under $1,000, anybody can have their own private electricity-generating windmill. Great Lakes Wind Power, Inc., of East Lansing, has developed a 1,000-watt, three-bladed, 12-foot in diameter wind generator that will appear on the market by mid-March.

Dick Arnold, who is handling the marketing of the windmill for developer Bob Miley, said he has already received 200 to 300 letters requesting information on his product.

"There has been a great deal of interest," Arnold said. "And to our knowledge, there has been nothing else like this on the market."

The company's 1,000-watt unit (a 2,000-watt version is scheduled to be ready by spring) will have its most practical applications as a supplementary electricity source, or as a power source for small summer homes.

"The units are not developed to the point where you can unhook your house electricity and replace it with this," Arnold said.

One interested customer, however, told Arnold he wanted two or three units to completely power his planned environmentally oriented home in the

And Lansing has plenty of wind to set the blades spinning and the electricity generating. "Lansing has about as high a wind velocity on the average per year as those areas on the coastlines," Arnold said.

Lansing's mean wind velocity for the past 12 years is 10.6 mph, right behind Muskegon's state high of 10.8.

"The units start generating anywhere around six or seven miles per hour, and reach a maximum output at about 20 miles per hour," Arnold said. Smaller, more expensive foreign units are available, according to Arnold, but there is a six-month backlog on orders.

In addition to Great Lakes Wind continuing research on larger mod Asmussen, MSU professor of electrical ing, has been awarded a $93,400 National Foundation grant to study the feast wind-generated electricity for the city
