How do you keep warm? Or dry? If you stay inside, or if you're a squirrel, it's no problem. But life wouldn't be life without problems, and snow wouldn't be snow without being wet, cold, persistent, endless and — if you try walking in it — humiliating.

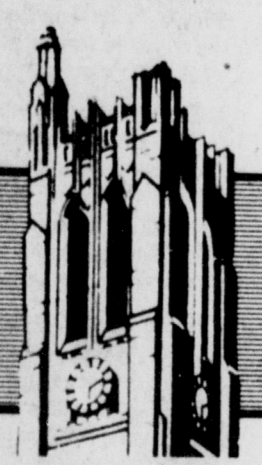

There are ways to try to fight it, though few of them seem to work for long.

You can try crowding your face with a hood, a scarf (or both) or something dry that looks like a hood or scarf. This method often impairs vision, however, and requires that the practitioner not move his or her neck muscles. One twitch and, sooner than you can say David Janssen, your neck is full of snow.

You might try using a grocery bag, a high school yearbook, a Reader's Digest condensed novel collection or a newspaper — maybe even reading a line or two as you plod along. Again, there is little visibility, and should the print run, you may be reading your forehead in the mirror to finish a chapter.

Lastly, there is the method demonstrated by the more daring (the above model is distinguishable by the presence of his tail). You simply give in to nature's whims and, if you have any, chew a few nuts.

Minority students seize building at U-M

By STEVE ORR
State News Staff Writer

Hundred minority students, most of whom are black, took over portions of the Administration Building at Michigan State University Tuesday, presenting administrative demands and vowing not to leave until positive action is taken by President Robben Fleming.

Fleming talked with the protesters but refused to act on their demands, saying they would be met in one day.

There were no arrests or violence as of Tuesday night.

The protesters were not evicted from the building when they stayed on after its normal 5 p.m. closing time, and were expected to stay there negotiating with administrators until at least midnight and possibly all night.

The demands included recognition of the protesters' group, the Third World Coalition Council, as the official minority bargaining agent at U-M; opening and staffing of an Asian-American office at U-M, and full amnesty from prosecution for the protesters.

Fleming refused to grant a blanket amnesty that might cover illegal acts, citing a school policy.

The students had occupied the first and second floors of the Administration Building by 8 a.m., concentrating outside Fleming's second-floor office.

The takeover brings added pressure on an administration hit last Tuesday with a contract strike by graduate assistants that has closed many classes this week. Some in Ann Arbor say the minority takeover was at least indirectly motivated by the Graduate Employees Organization (GEO) strike.

Protesters Bill Hunter and Sam Riddle, speaking from inside the Administration Building Tuesday afternoon, said their group planned to stay in the building "until the university indicates it is going to deal with us in serious negotiations," as Riddle put it. Hunter said the protesters were prepared to stay days.

Riddle, the first black member of the ASMSU when he attended MSU, was a leader of the May 1970 strike at MSU following the killing of four Kent State students by the Ohio National Guard in a protest against U.S. activity in Cambodia.

The group has other demands, but cited only the above Tuesday.

Some of the more involved demands that the protesters want to discuss soon with U-M are:

- Control by the U-M Black United Front of one-quarter of the U-M budget, which would amount to about $40 million.
- Increases in black student population at U-M to about 12 per cent by 1977, and increases in Native American, Chicano and Asian-American student enrollment.
- No grade other than "A" for minority students until the enrollment demands are met.

Some of those issues originate from a 1970 U-M Board of Regents agreement with blacks to increase black enrollment at U-M to 10 per cent by 1974.

Current black enrollment there is 7 per cent and dropping, and the failure of the university to enact the Regents' agreement has caused grumblings in U-M's black community.

The university said it has not met black enrollment guidelines because economic conditions have led fewer blacks to enter higher educational institutions.

Early Tuesday, GEO officially asked the administration for "good faith, around the clock negotiations" with the minority group, and also asked that the protesters not be evicted from the administration building.

University of Michigan President Robben Fleming listens to representatives of the Black United Front. About 250 demonstrators have occupied the first two floors of the Administration Building at U-M since 7 a.m. Tuesday. The demonstrators are demanding that minority enrollment be increased to 10 per cent.

New bylaws passed by Academic Senate

By BRUCERAY WALKER
State News Staff Writer

By a six-vote margin, the Academic Senate yesterday approved the proposed new bylaws for academic governance and passed the resolution to President Wharton and the MSU Board of Trustees for approval.

The 270 votes cast to ratify the new bylaws, which streamline the academic system and limits to some extent the power of the Academic Senate, were in favor of ratification and 132 were against.

Changes in the bylaws, which were approved by the Academic Council last week, include the reduction of the number of standing committees of the Academic Council from 12 to 10.

The reduction of the number of faculty members on the standing committees from 100 to 35.

The establishment of a 10 per cent quorum rule on the Senate.

Numerous speakers raised arguments against the document but only a few addressed themselves to the above changes.

Thomas Greer, professor of humanities, attacked the provision that requires the Senate to obtain a 10 per cent quorum before being able to pass on any business sent to them by the Academic Council. If the 10 per cent quorum is not achieved then any business before them automatically passes.

In the past, the Senate has rarely had 10 per cent of its members present at meetings, so issues like that of student access to student ratings of instructors would have passed the Senate for lack of a quorum.

Other members were upset with the clause in the new bylaws which takes away the Senate's power to amend a document the second time it is submitted to it. Under the new provisions it would only have the power to return the proposed document to the Academic Council for further study.

Donald Gochberg, associate professor of humanities, said that he was concerned about the loss of that power and attacked the idea that the Senate could possibly ruin a document by adding useless amendments to it.

Many of the members feared that the new bylaws would take power away from the Trustees may hear on new issues

The United Farm Workers (UFW) lettuce boycott committee may soon have their say at the MSU Board of Trustees.

Warren Huff, D-Plymouth, said the subject has been discussed so often that he plans to set a date to settle the issue.

Huff plans to bring the boycott to the board meeting at 10 a.m. on the fourth floor boardroom of the Administration Building.

Huff hopes to see a date set for the board meeting in March when the entire board can meet with any of the interested parties to hear the pros and cons of this issue," Huff said.

Board members have fielded questions from the United Farm Workers for an official MSU policy on the lettuce boycott. Currently the United Farm Workers Union for the representation of California workers who grow and harvest lettuce and other fruits and vegetables.

Huff does not differentiate between the UFW and UFW lettuce.

IMPOUNDMENT CALLED ILLEGAL Nixon loses court case

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ruling for the first time on the impoundment issue, the Supreme Court declared Tuesday that former President Richard M. Nixon exceeded his authority in withholding pollution control funds.

The decision was one of six handed down by the high court with only seven of its members on the bench.

Justice William O. Douglas wrote solitary dissents in three of the cases, despite his absence due to a stroke. Douglas has been doing court work in a hospital room.

Justice Thurgood Marshall, hospitalized with pneumonia, was the author of two of the majority opinions. The decisions, written before he became ill, were read for him by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger.

In one of the opinions written by Marshall, the justices ruled 8 to 1 that employees may not go outside union channels to bargain with employers over alleged racial discrimination. Douglas said the decision made the employees "prisoners of the union."

In the other decision written by Marshall, the court ruled 8 to 0 that companies are not required to grant vacations to returning veterans under labor agreements which worked a certain number of weeks in the preceding year.

In an unanimous decision which will affect criminal procedures in a number of states, the court ruled that a defendant may not be held in jail for an extended period without a court hearing to review the evidence against him.

The court agreed to review in its term beginning next fall cases involving a Maryland program of state aid to private colleges, a decision exempting health professionals from a law imposing stiff penalties for illegally dispensing drugs and a federal appeals court ruling allowing public access to Air Force Academy files in honor code actions.

The court also ordered a lower federal court Tuesday to reconsider its decision upholding New York welfare regulations denying aid to students at four year colleges.

Four women otherwise eligible for welfare, contended in appeals that the state was denying them equal protection of the law, since students in two-year vocational training programs may receive welfare.

Currently, both two-year and four-year college students in Michigan are eligible for welfare, if they qualify under standard welfare regulations.

The impoundment case concerned water pollution control funds for fiscal years 1973 through 1975. Congress authorized $18 billion, but the Nixon administration allotted only $9 billion.

The court ruled unanimously that administration officials, who acted under orders from Nixon, lacked authority to do this under the Water Pollution Control Act of 1972.

"As conceived and passed in both houses, the legislation was intended to provide firm commitments of substantial sums within a relatively limited period of time in an effort to achieve an early solution of what was deemed to be an urgent problem," Justice Byron R. White said for the court.

A spokesman for the Environmental Protection Agency said the decision would have little practical effect. Funds can actually be spent only after they are obligated for specific projects.

The spokesman said EPA already had been able to obligate only $4 billion of the $9 billion available before the court's ruling.

Though a number of lower federal courts had decided impoundment cases against the administration, this was the first one to reach the Supreme Court.

Italian court says abortion legal if woman's health endangered

ROME (AP) — Italy's highest court, crossing swords with the Vatican, ruled Tuesday that abortion is legal in this Roman Catholic country if pregnancy threatens a woman's health.

The Vatican reacted in a broadcast, saying, "The ruling is questionable and of extreme gravity because it backs killing of the one to be born."

The ruling by the constitutional court, equivalent of the U.S. Supreme Court, came amid a massive campaign by feminists and most political parties for a reform of Italy's Fascist-era abortion law.

Specifically, the court declared unconstitutional Article 546 of the Italian penal code. The law barred abortion under any circumstance, and set a prison term of two to five years for women who underwent abortions, as well as for doctors, nurses and anyone else involved in the operation.

The law was widely flouted. This nation of 55.6 million persons has 1.2 million abortions a year, according to UN estimates. Most of them are performed outside hospitals under crude medical conditions.

The court acted on a request from a Milan judge who had been trying a woman who claimed she turned to abortion after doctors warned her that pregnancy was tantamount to a death sentence.

The high court's ruling said:

"Pregnancy can be interrupted when its continuation can cause serious damage or risk to the physical and psychological health of the mother which is to be medically ascertained and is such that it cannot be avoided in any other way."

In the absence of parliamentary action, the ruling has the effect of law. But the court failed to specify to what stage pregnancy can be terminated or define proper medical consultation.

France adopted an abortion law last month permitting abortion until the 10th week of pregnancy on the demand of the would-be mother, an action which encouraged the proabortion lobby in Italy.

Most of Italy's political parties favor a liberalized abortion law. But the dominant Christian Democrats control the votes in parliament, and they, along with the Vatican, favor the present law. It was adopted during World War II to "protect the national stock" as part of dictator Benito Mussolini's dream to resurrect the Roman Empire.

Calley case loses 2 judges

Two of the 15 federal appeals court judges scheduled to hear an appeal in the conviction of William L. Calley Jr. for deaths at My Lai withdrew from the case Tuesday.

Chief Judge John R. Brown of Houston removed himself after being challenged as biased. Judge Thomas Gibbs Gee of Jacksonville, Fla., withdrew due to his background as a former Air Force officer.

Calley, free on bail, was in court for a hearing by the full 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on an appeal filed by the Army after a federal judge in Georgia overturned an Army court-martial conviction.

In its briefs, the Army said what Calley really seeks "a judicial declaration of absolution for his deeds because their notoriety attracted widespread media coverage."

Ford opposes housing relief

The Ford Administration opposes emergency housing relief proposals to lower mortgage rates and help avert housing foreclosures, a housing official said Tuesday.

James L. Mitchell, undersecretary of the Dept. of Housing and Urban Development, said the housing industry already is on the brink of an upturn.

He opposed proposals to lower mortgage rates for the initial payment years, and to guarantee government subsidy of mortgage payments if a homeowner's income drops precipitously.

CIA spied on Jane Fonda

The Justice Dept. confirmed Tuesday that the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) intercepted personal overseas mail addressed to anti-war actress Jane Fonda in the early 1970s.

Justice Dept. officials said the CIA's practice of intercepting Fonda's mail from foreign countries would be explained formally in a brief to be filed in U.S. District Court in Los Angeles, possibly later in the week.

The brief will respond to a private law suit in which Fonda is seeking $2.8 million damages for an alleged conspiracy by government officials to harass her because of her war criticism. Former President Nixon is one of many defendants.

CAB chief found dead

The director of enforcement of the Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB), William Miles Gingery, was found shot to death in his suburban Virginia apartment Tuesday, the Fairfax County, Va., police said.

Police termed the death an apparent suicide. A high-powered rifle was found nearby.

Gingery had been director of the CAB's Bureau of Enforcement since November 1973.

Rebels shell Neak Luong

Insurgent forces renewed their attacks against Neak Luong, Cambodia on Tuesday, breaking a three-week lull around the main government position along the vital Mekong River shipping channel, military sources said.

The reports said the rebels shelled the naval base 32 miles southeast of Phnom Penh and launched a ground attack against the town's eastern defense line. More than 50,000 refugees crowd the town and rice is in critically short supply, the reports said.

The government has been trying to reopen the Mekong River supply route to the capital, now reached only by air.

Ethiopian demonstrations rage

Strong-man Maj. Mengistu Nhaile Mariam said Tuesday that Ethiopia "will not give a pinch of earth" to Arabs who he said were encouraging secessionists in northern Eritrea province.

In Asmara, the Eritrean capital, residents told of predawn fighting north of the city near a road where repeated skirmishes have been reported during the last three weeks.

Mengistu, first vice chairman of the military government addressed 10,000 demonstrators from the steps of the Grand Palace in Addis Ababa.

It was the second government-organized demonstration this week to whip up militant feelings against the guerrillas.

France gives in to islanders

France gave in a bit Tuesday to a little rebellion in the wind and fog off the coast of Canada. It agreed to pull out half the special police contingent it sent to keep things quiet on the islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon.

The islands, with a population of 5,840 and French-ruled since 1536, bubbled up in anger last month over what its people considered to be the mother country's lack of concern about the 93 square miles of rock south of Newfoundland.

Gen. Charles de Gaulle, on his way to Canada in 1967, had said, "France loves you." Eight years later, the residents, descendants of Norman and Breton fisherman, wanted less talk and more economic security.

U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, left, smiles at the Shah of Iran during a short press conference in Zurich, Switzerland Tuesday.

DEPENDS ON OILFIELDS' RETURN Iran may give Israel oil

PARIS (AP) — Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlevi gave assurances Tuesday that Iran would replace any oil Israel loses as a result of returning the Abu Rudeis oilfields to Egypt as part of a Sinai agreement.

"Once the tankers are loaded, we don't mind where the oil goes. It is a purely commercial transaction for us," the shah said after he and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger lunched in Zurich, Switzerland, on chateaubriand steak and Beluga caviar.

The two men met amid the tightest security in the history of the Swiss financial capital. More than 300 policemen, including sharpshooters, ringed the hillside hotel, and explosives experts searched the hotel's 220 rooms before the meeting.

On to Paris
From Zurich, Kissinger flew to Paris to dine with Foreign Minister Jean Sauvagnargues and have breakfast Wednesday with President Valery Giscard d'Estaing.

In London earlier in the day, the secretary sought to insure that the Soviet Union will not block another interim Mideast agreement, by promising not to exclude the Soviets from his efforts.

"I hope the Soviet Union will understand that any step toward peace is in the interest of everybody," he said. "We have always asserted that a final settlement will require the participation and cooperation of the Soviet Union."

Geneva peace talks
The Soviets, feeling left out of present Mideast negotiations, favor a quick resumption of the multilateral Geneva peace talks, which the United States fears would break down into disputes over Palestinian participation. Kissinger, who met Monday with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, is thought willing to resume the Geneva talks after he gets a Sinai accord.

He shuttled between Mideast capitals last week in pursuit of it and hopes to finish on another trip next month. His plan revolves around Israel returning to Egypt the oilfields and possibly the Gidi and Mitla passes, all taken in the 1967 war, in exchange for Egypt making some kind of nonbelligerence promise or recognizing Israel's right to exist.

Faith in Kissinger
Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy indicated Tuesday he has faith in Kissinger's efforts but said Egypt would again go to war against Israel if they fail.

"It was clear from Kissinger's talks here that he is sure of achieving progress and that the American government is anxious to achieve that progress," Fahmy told a committee of the People's Assembly.

Israel pumps about 90,000 barrels of oil a day from Abu Rudeis, more than half its petroleum needs. Hence the need to find another supply. Israel already gets most of its remaining oil from Iran.

Iran won't boycott
The shah, who interrupted a skiing vacation see Kissinger, emphasized to newsmen that Iran would not join in any economic boycott of Israel.

"We have never really boycotted any country," he said. "We think that politics and commerce are separate."

He also reiterated that Iran would not be part of any oil embargo against the West.

On oil prices, the shah said he does not expect them to be formally lowered but that the declining value of the dollar and inflation are effectively lowering them anyway.

Planetarium offers viewing of converging planetary paths

If old Star Trek reruns have whetted your latent interest in astronomy, you might take a gaze heavenward some evening during February.

You won't see the Enterprise, but you will see a brilliant point of light low on the horizon in the western sky. That point of light is the spot where the orbits of Venus and Jupiter have converged.

The planets are visible to the naked eye for about two hours each evening, starting about 7 p.m. For students interested in getting a closer look, Abrams Planetarium is offering free viewing sessions from 7 to 7:30 every night that weather permits, for this week only.

Robert Victor, a staff astronomer at the planetarium, said that though the celestial display will be visible for the rest of February, it will become less bright after this week.

"It's a very impressive display," he said. "Last Thursday, 50 students turned out to view it."

He said the two planets will not converge again until May 1976.

Ford threatens to veto oil tariff

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford held out both the stick and the carrot to Congress Tuesday on his energy program, threatening to veto oil tariff legislation but offering to "make accommodations on details."

The President was quoted as telling Republican congressional leaders he will veto expected legislation which would delay his increases in tariffs on imported oil.

Senate Republicans indicated they have an even chance of sustaining that veto.

"We told the President that we're rather close to the number of votes that is needed without canvassing the Democratic side at all," said Senate GOP leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania. "We're rather hopeful."

Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield of Montana said the vote to override the veto would be close.

The veto possibility was disclosed by presidential Press Secretary Ron Nessen, who quoted Ford as telling the Republican leaders at a breakfast, "The first thing we have to do is sustain the veto."

Secondly, Nessen quoted Ford as saying, Congress must act on an energy program. If that is done, he quoted Ford as saying, "we might be able to make accommodations on details."

In other major economic news Tuesday:

•Several top Administration economic officials gave a cautious prediction of recovery this year as they discussed Ford's budget proposals.

•Gov. Calvin L. Ramsey of Utah, chairman of the National Governors' Association, said many states unable to take advantage of $2 billion in federal funds released by Ford.

•Sen. Edward W. Brooke of Massachusetts, said at a hearing that repeal of laws which allow mailers and retailers to force would save American consumers $3 billion a year.

•Stock prices dropped active trading due to news from some blue chip firms.

•Chemical Bank of New York, the nation's sixth largest bank, cut its prime rate to 8.5 per cent from 9 per cent.

•The current battle between Ford and Congress on legislation to delay his imposition of a barrel tax on imported oil.

Nessen also said Ford by executive order to control the price of "old oil" — that produced in this country before 1945.

Bullard proposes ban on aerosol spray

By JEFF MERRELL
State News Staff Writer

State Rep. Perry Bullard, D-Ann Arbor, has his way, Michigan House Bill No. 4340 Tuesday, which would eliminate use of aerosol spray containers using Freon as a propellant. There is strong scientific evidence that continued use of such spray products as deodorants, disinfectants, food products, and shaving cream is resulting in the destruction of our atmosphere, Bullard said.

dangerous ultraviolet radiation. An immediate effect of the destruction of this layer would be an increase in the incidence of skin cancer," Bullard said.

Scientists also cite a possible rise in average temperatures, which could lead to substantial shifts in global weather and disruptions of food production.

Nationally, a bill introduced by Reps. Marvin Esch, R-Mich. and Paul Rogers, D-Fla., calls for an investigation of aerosol propellants and their effect of the atmosphere.

Power to EPA

The bill would place the power to ban propellants within the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

Before 1961, there were no aerosol spray cans in use, just roll-on and pump-spray containers, according to Bullard.

And with more than 60 percent of the Freon escaping into the atmosphere coming from aerosol spray cans, "our society can do without it," Bullard said.

Also, continued release of Freon, Bullard said, would add to the future problems we have already created.

"The total diffusion effect is estimated at 25 years, so the Freon we have already released will not have its peak destructive effect until 1990," Bullard explained.

Public concern

Mike Novak, of the Clean Air Movement (CAM) in Detroit, said the public concern that has arisen since the evidence against the use of Freon was first publicized is substantial.

"The public is really scared. It's not your typical environmental concern," Novak said.

Novak also said CAM has obtained several affidavits from leading scientists across the country expressing their concern with the continued use of the propellant.

Novak added that it would be a relief if somebody could validly contradict the currently accepted evidence.

No contradictory evidence

"There is no contradictory evidence. We would love it, but it's not there," he said.

In addition to the adverse environmental effects of aerosol, Bullard said aerosol spray products are overpackaged and wasteful.

Senator proposes bill to provide year scholarships for nurses

Sen. William Faust (D-Westland), would loan up to $4,500 a year for two years to RN's for tuition, fee and living expenses, if they are enrolled in baccalaureate degree programs in nursing.

programs.

Sen. William Faust (D-Westland), would loan up to $4,500 a year for two years to RN's for tuition, fee and living expenses, if they are enrolled in baccalaureate degree programs in nursing.

ing.

The loan would be excused if a recipient of the aid completes the undergraduate program and either goes on to graduate nursing school or works as a professional nurse somewhere in Michigan.

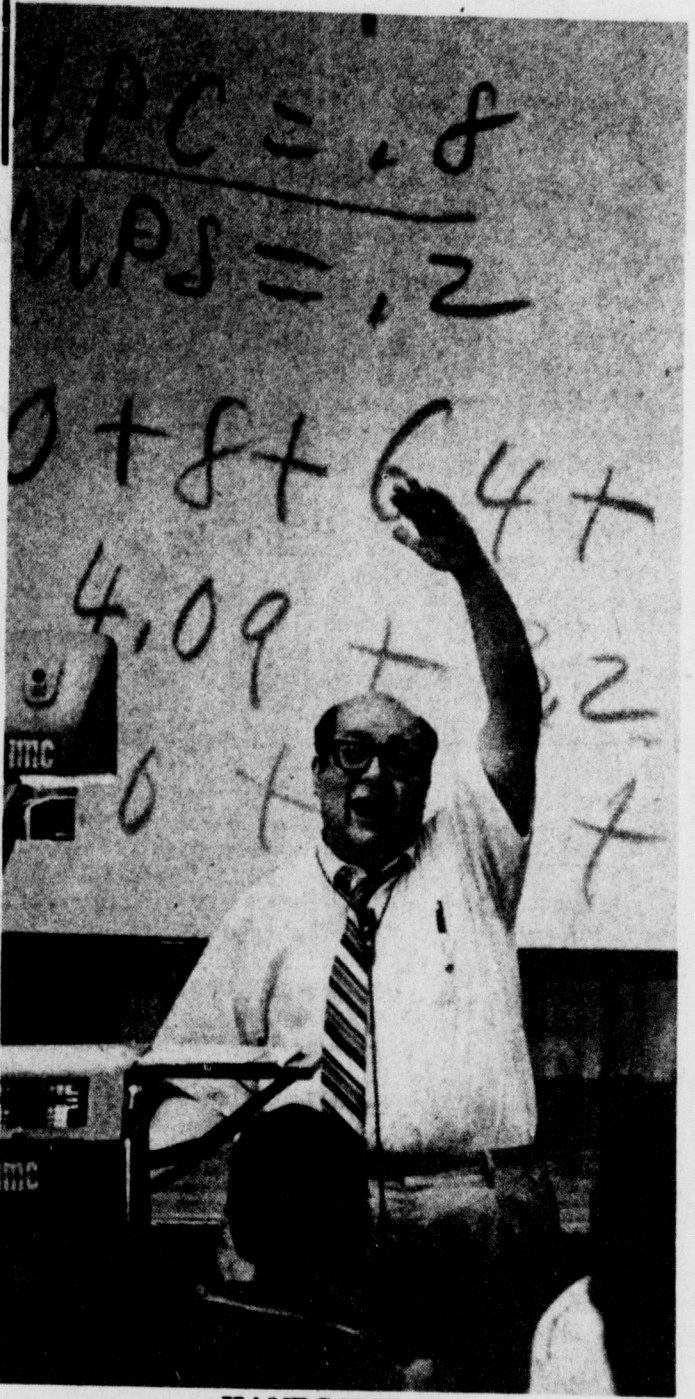

Twenty-five per cent of the loan would be excused for each of the four years following the RN's graduation that the RN continued in school or worked as a professional nurse in the state.

If the recipient did not go on in school or work, then the loan would have to be repaid over the next six years at 7 per cent interest.

William Kandler, of Faust's office, said the bill was introduced "to encourage people to go into the nursing field."

There are 10 RN's enrolled in MSU's undergraduate nursing program, out of 645 in the program.

According to an official of the state Board of Nursing, quite a few RN's go into undergraduate nursing programs. The official said registered nurses certification can be obtained through two and three-year programs, and that some RN's decide to go for the four-year undergraduate training because many nursing positions require an undergraduate degree.

HANDSOME AL

Fan letters sought by 'Handsome Al'

By PAUL PARKER
State News Staff Writer

Though Handsome Al Mandelstamm, former MSU economics professor, is gone, he does not want to be forgotten.

"I'm pining for letters from my old students," said Alan Mandelstamm, now at Virginia Polytechnical Institute (VPI). "At least a Washington's birthday card or something. It's a little late for valentines, but you can still put a $1,000 bill in a card as a token of your affection."

From September 1963 to September 1974, Mandelstamm was known as "Handsome Al" to his numerous students. Mandelstamm, who was known for his tangos and stripteases during lecture, taught Economics 200 and 201 on campus television.

Mandelstamm said he is "very unsettled to learn that MSU students have taken the lead from VPI in this year's streaking festivities." He asked that the State News send extra copies of the "Doctor's Bag" to him so he can read them on TV to his students.

"Here students are sexless," Mandelstamm said. "Here they don't know about sex. They don't even know about matzo balls." Mandelstamm said that, other than that, students at VPI are like all students.

"The students here use pornographic sex devices just like the students at MSU," Mandelstamm said.

"When they first met me, students were shocked and amazed," the amiable giant said. "But the reaction was fairly predictable. After a while they start throwing paper wads, dialoguing with me and asking for stories."

Mandelstamm said that he was greeted with "whistles of admiration" the first time he took his shirt off in class.

Mandelstamm said that economically very few people in Virginia are losing their shirts. Nearby Roanoke, Va., has an unemployment rate of 5 per cent.

Mandelstamm has been asked to appear at MSU as a Great Issues speaker, but has not yet decided whether he will come.

It could be that the handsome one likes the weather in Virginia too much.

"It's about 85 degrees and the bikini girls are dancing around in my yard," he chortled. "We've never gotten below 75 degrees since I've arrived. Now do you want to know the truth?"

"Actually, we did have about an inch of snow, and you know I live on top of a mountain. Well, I went sliding down the hill and there was no need to plow behind me. And I do mean behind. It still hurts."

Bill seeks condom law repeal vastly eased by a bill introduced in the Michigan legislature.

Rep. Perry Bullard, D-Ann Arbor, has introduced a bill to repeal the state law regulating the sale of condoms.

The 1941 law prohibits vending machine sales and allows only registered pharmacists, doctors or wholesalers to deal in the thin-membrane pregnancy and disease preventers.

Window displays and advertisements in nonmedical publications printed within Michigan are also currently forbidden upon pain of a maximum $100 fine, 30 days in jail or both.

"It's just an excessive restriction based on our puritanical heritage," Bullard said.

Bullard's bill, HB 4141, will receive its first hearing before the House Public Health Committee at 11 a.m. Thursday in the Capitol.

In the last legislative session, the committee let die a similar bill introduced by Bullard in mid-1973. A weaker measure allowing window displays if accompanied by educational information on venereal disease did pass the House in 1973. However, it was defeated twice in the Senate.

There is some feeling that the times are slightly more liberal now and a repeal could pass, though Bullard said he has received little feedback from other legislators.

Letters may be addressed to Dr. Werner at MSU Health Center. Names need not be included unless a personal reply is requested.

I have noticed recently that the condition called "morning mouth" is present only if I have spent the night with a woman companion. If I sleep alone, there is no problem. I have talked to others about this, and the experience seems common. Does kissing for prolonged periods of time before going to sleep cause "morning mouth?" Oral-genital sex is not a factor here since it is not present.

By "morning mouth," I assume you mean that thick-tongued, furry feeling most people can identify. I have never thought of it as being related to kissing before. But, I suppose that this imminently researchable question could be related to bacteria transfer, though there are a number of other possibilities. Furry mouths occur with dehydration, sometimes related to alcohol intake, mouth breathing or perhaps just talking into the wee hours of the morning. Next time you are in a position to experiment, try the following: drink a couple of glasses of water and brush your teeth before you go to sleep. I await your reply. My friend has a pimple-popping fetish. The minute she sees one she goes crazy and has to pop it. She is almost like a fruit picker when she is hunting them down — this one is "ripe," this one will be "ripe" tomorrow. She can tell the difference between a clogged pore and an ingrown hair at 20 paces. What do you think of this?

Overexuberant pimple-popping can be dangerous. For instance, one can drive infection deep into the skin. On certain parts of the head, particularly around the mouth and back of the neck, such infections can drain inward and produce meningitis or a brain abscess. Admittedly this is very rare, but scarring and infections are not. A pimple about to rupture can generally be harmlessly helped on its way with very mild pressure, but vigorous squeezing is definitely bad.

For a person with frequent or severe pimples or abscesses, treatment by a dermatologist, or a general physician with special interest in this area, can be most beneficial.

If the problem is only a matter of clogged pores, this can be handled with frequent washing, use of a drying soap if the skin is especially oily and towel drying with a firm rubbing. Such a program usually prevents a buildup of oily substances and dirt which are responsible for the clogged pores.

As an aside, let me add that your friend sounds like one of the many people who suffer from an alabaster statue complex. This desire for inhuman perfection flies in the face of the reality that all people have skin pores that can get clogged, and that we all defecate, urinate and smell.

From the time I have been able to flush the toilet I have been taught the wash my hands after I urinate. Is that dirty? If I don't wash my hands die in some out-of-the-way hospital some incurable disease?

Actually, it would make more sense to wash your hands before you urinate. Urine itself is sterile (unless one has an infection) and the penis is probably of a lot more free of bacteria than people's hands. I do believe you are much more with a matter of esthetics you are with microbiology.

Fair play

Hold on here! Who does Peter Walilko think he's kidding? Maybe Ohio State can whip the University of Southern North Dakota at Hoople, Navy, Dayton, Iowa, etc., but not Okemos High!

Sure, there's a little disparity. But a fair game would settle that. A fair game would be if Ohio State played Okemos High on the roof of the Computer Center, wearing snowshoes and/or ice skates (they can have their choice) on all fours at midnight in a driving hailstorm on April 1.

Until such a game is played, let's not hear anything more about "inferior" teams like Okemos High.

'U' must help city fight student housing crisis

There is always much jaw-flapping about the student housing crisis, but few visible results. The problem is typical of the ostrich syndrome, in which, if one doesn't see a problem, it isn't there.

But, unfortunately for those officials who want a nice, neat uncluttered life, there is an objective reality, and there is a very serious housing problem.

Both the University and the city must don their spectacles and open their eyes to the fact that students are the heartbeat of both University and city life.

If the University professes to be concerned about the students' welfare, then officials must decide, together, to take on more responsibility for students who need housing.

If the University cares more about financial success and maintenance of power than student welfare, then University officials should decide to take on more responsibility for housing students. Students have shown themselves to be an unpredictable political power with a propensity to ignite in situations of prolonged inaction on continuing injustices.

If such student action is not aimed toward the University directly, it may come in the form of a rent strike or the formation of a strong tenants' union.

This scenario could lead to pressure on the city by landlords, and pressure on the University by the city to help alleviate the causes of all the problems.

The hard and undeniable fact is that the city and the University are intertwined; indeed, they are tightly knotted together. Many officials would like to believe that the physical, geographical boundaries between city and University carry over into social, economic and political arenas. This is plainly untrue. Situations in the University affect the city and vice versa. When the University lifted the sophomore housing requirement, the city had to deal with the new housing-seekers. When rent and living costs go up, the University must do something about increased interest in on-campus living.

Since the interests of the city and University are so closely linked, the two must work jointly to try to straighten out the housing crisis. If there is a solution, it will take a joint venture to find it. If there isn't, the two must at least have joined together in the search.

Don't throw away bill to outlaw disposables

An eighth attempt to ban throwaway bottles and cans began Feb. 13 with the introduction of Rep. Lynn Jondahl's bill requiring deposits on all beverage containers.

Throwaway containers primarily benefit their manufacturers and chronic litterbugs. The nonreturnable ban could save Michigan $1.8 million in litter control each year, conserve energy and increase employment. Passage of the measure is long overdue.

Industry opponents say that the bill would put small beverage companies out of business, since they wouldn't have resources to make switchovers from cans to returnable bottles.

But a 1974 study by Myron Ross, an economics professor at Western Michigan University, shows that the likely effect of a ban on throwaway containers in Michigan would be to increase employment by about 9,000 people. Other sponsors of the bill point out that the beverage industry has already eliminated many jobs through consolidation. Gov. Milliken favors a move toward elimination of throwaways, and an aide said the governor's support could become even stronger if a Michigan Chamber of Commerce study on employment effects is favorable.

Chances for passage of the bill this year are improved because of increased public awareness of the issue caused by public hearings in Michigan and Washington, D.C.

With increased public awareness, the eighth attempt at passage of the nonreturnable ban bill hopefully will be the last necessary.

Joe College in jeopardy

It's collegiate day on NBC's TV show "Jeopardy." Art Fleming jumps onto the TV screen with a lot of zip and zeal.

"Boycott classes," yells the Wolverine mob.

"Thank you, audience," Art says, a bit annoyed. "And finally, contestant number three, sitting at the stand with the running Nova engine in front of him is Joe Commuter from Wayne State."

George sidestepped pitfalls

Here is a series of vignettes attempting to answer that most difficult question, why was George Washington a great man?

Fireplace File
One day in the 1790s word spread through the Capital that George Washington was sick and tired of Thomas Jefferson's constant bickering with Alexander Hamilton. That afternoon a man named J. Edgar Hoover was admitted to George Washington's office.

"I have been keeping an eye on this Jefferson," said the visitor, "and have here ye goods to justify giving him ye heave-ho from ye Cabinet." He offered George Washington a dossier.

George Washington recoiled and asked what was in it. "Ye transcripts of Jefferson's activities while wenching," said Hoover. "As well as recordings of his dinner-table criticism of ye government." George Washington took the dossier and deposited it in his fireplace, where it burned to ashes while he was having Hoover thrown into the street.

"It would have been unworthy of my office," he told Martha Washington afterwards, "to do ye throwing myself."

Ghost-speller
George Washington's spelling was terrible. Everybody in the government was laughing about it. "Ye president," went the joke, "cannot chew gum and spell at ye same time."

One day Alexander Hamilton suggested that he hire a ghost-speller, who would make sure that George Washington didn't spell anything indiscreetly.

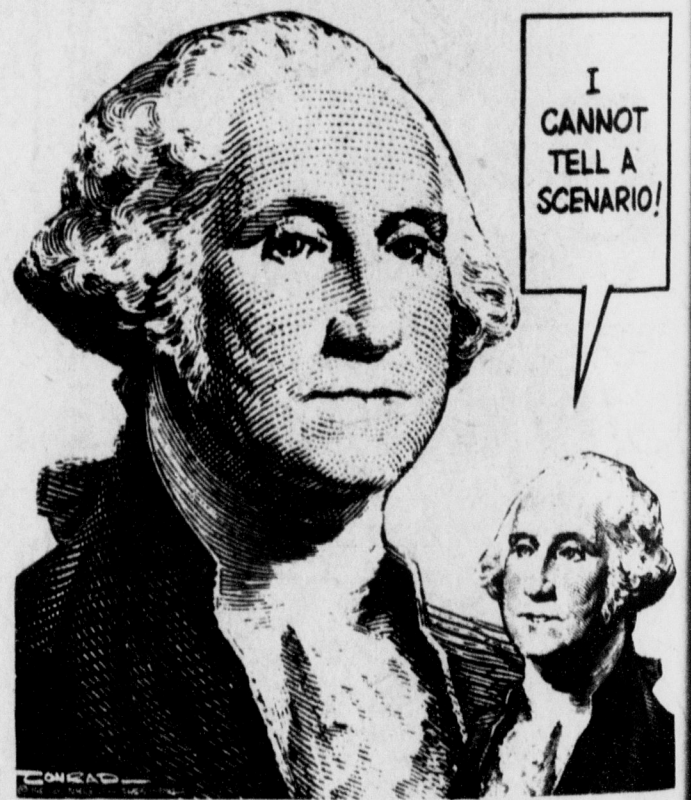

George Washington had Hamilton thrown out of his office with orders not to show his face there for a week. In his explanation to Hamilton, he wrote, "If I begin by hiring a gost to spel for me, I shal next higher gosts to rite my speches, and then gosts to do my thinkeng, and then gosts to construct an imidge for me, and I shal end up with nothing to do but travl around ye contry makyng e foolish speches and eating chicken diners."

White Houses
Early in his presidency George Washington was told that he should get out of the office and exercise more. James Madison urged him to take up golf and buy a summer house on Martha's Vineyard, where he could go on summer weekends, and a winter house in South Carolina where he could go on winter weekends.

"One could be called ye summer White House and ye other ye winter White House, and you could pay for them by taking a loan from —"

George Washington had Madison thrown into the street before the sentence was completed.

Motherhood
All through his later years George Washington was afflicted with a nagging mother. She would go around Virginia telling neighbors that George Washington was a merciless tightwad who never came to visit his old mother and wouldn't send her enough money to live on.

One day a man passionately devoted to George Washington came to see him. His name was Charles Colson. He had heard the stories told by George Washington's mother and thought something should be done to shut the old lady up. George Washington recoiled. "For you," Colson told him, "I would walk over your mother."

George Washington had Colson thrown out of the country.

Royal Dominoes
Tom Paine came to see George Washington about spreading freedom all over the world. Paine was particularly worried about Asia which, he feared, would go monarchist unless George Washington committed the United States to stopping the spread of royalism.

If that occurred, Paine warned, the free world would be outflanked by monarchism in both the Pacific and the Atlantic. Paine proposed a vast intelligence agency to destabilize hostile governments, a standing army prepared to fight anywhere on earth, a highly mobile secretary of state and —

George Washington interrupted Paine if he was feeling well. "No," Paine said, "George Washington thought that case," and had Paine thrown street.

Flipped Wig
George Washington, who was angry with the press, was furious when the papers reported tending to change his image and, pose, had ordered a new show wig. Martha, who was in the "Somebody has been leaking to I will bet it is John Adams."

George Washington said, we nothing he could do about it. George," said Martha. "You are — ye only president ye count could create a federal police force footpads trail this Adams to committing ye leaks."

George Washington had Ma out of his office.

VIEWPOINT: REBATES

WIN, piecemeal style

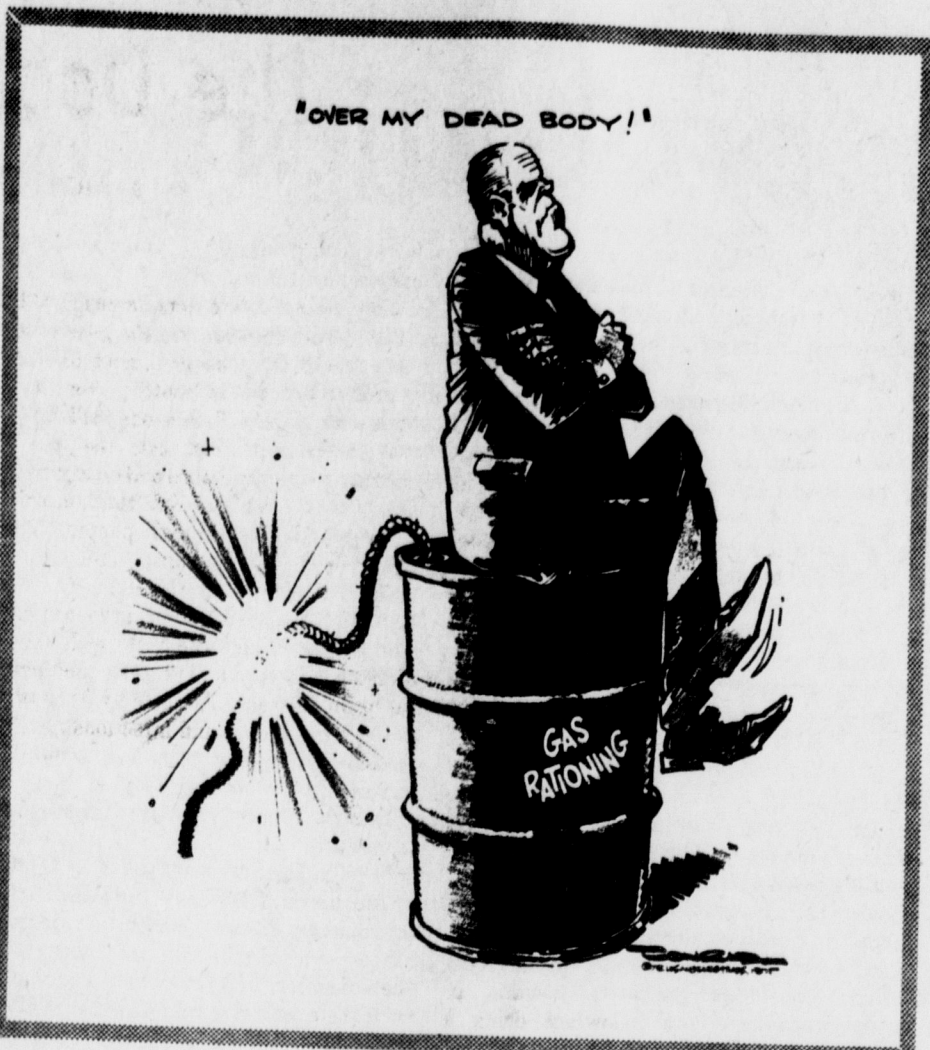

By MIKE JENKINS
I needed a washer for the kitchen faucet yesterday and stopped by Carlton's Hardware Emporium. Carlton was at the register adding up the day's receipts. I had an IRS 1040 tax form on the counter next to him and I asked what he thought of the rebate plan.
"You kidding?" Carlton asked. "It's great! It's just what we need to get money back into the economy."
"What if people don't put it back into the economy?" I asked. "What if they save it in old bills?"
Carlton said, "It's every man's duty to buy new things with tax rebates. I get $152 back and, if anybody was a good American and used rebates like I'm going to, we'd have money on the run in no time."
"I'm not going to spend it all on one item," Carlton said. "I'll spread it out. First, I'm going to buy a 1975 Ford mirror for my '64 Chevy to help the automakers. That'll cost about $13."
"What's that?" I asked.
"I'll buy a steel paperweight for $14 for the steel industry, and I'll have a building company make me a birdhouse for about $22."
"You live on the 42nd floor of a high-rise apartment building," I said. "What are you going to do with a birdhouse? That's a waste of money."
"It helps the country," Carlton said.
"What about the utility companies?" I asked.
"They seem to be hurting some," Carlton replied. "I'm going to use gas, electricity and water. About $18 should be a good amount."
"You'd have to waste energy to do that," I said.

"So what," Carlton shrugged. "The economy comes first. We've got to get this country moving! That's why I'm going to help out the farmers."
"How are you going to do that," I asked.
"Easy," Carlton replied. "I'll buy about $4 worth of vegetables at the Farmer's market. Then I'll get some ground beef from the supermarket. That'll help out the grocery and cattle industries at the same time and only cost about $2."
"Are you going to help out dime stores, too?" I inquired.
"Yep," Carlton said. "If I spend 10 cents in all the big ones it should only run me about $1."
"I suppose you've also figured out how to help the stock market," I said.
"Oh, sure," Carlton said. "I'll buy a few $3 shares of stock and counting brokerage fees it shouldn't cost more than $25."
"What about the rest of the money?" I asked.
"I've got plans for it all," Carlton said. "I'll buy a $6 inner tube for my son's bike to help out the rubber companies and send a package by commercial airliner for $3 or $4 to aid the airline industry."
"Is that it?" I asked.
"No, there's more," Carlton said. "I'm going to donate $10 to the Humane Society to help support abandoned animals, spend about $17 on a few transistors, resistors and diodes to give the electronics industry a boost and take out an $8 magazine subscription to aid the publishing business."
"That's all really nice Carlton," I said, "and super-patriotic. But how can you afford to blow $152 like that? I need every cent I get."
"Oh, that's no problem," Carlton said. "By raising the prices on the merchandise in my store I can make it all back in a week!"

Yellow Bird's talks top any Ziegler visit

By MARTY STUDER
In recent weeks, I have noticed quite a bit of controversy over the appearance of Ron Ziegler at MSU. More specifically, the disputes have not simply been over the issue of his appearance, but the financing of it. There are those who feel that Mr. Ziegler has got something worthwhile to say, and whether they agree or not, are willing to provide the necessary funding. Mr. Ziegler has been a significant man in American politics; certainly no one can deny him the fame he has earned through his constant support of the Nixon regime.
Apparently, Mr. Ziegler and his agents have taken this fame into account when announcing his speaking tour. The exorbitant fee of $2,650 for one speech transcends the necessary financing and indicates that Mr. Ziegler has a good deal more on his mind than simply helping ex-President Nixon "take it on the ear."
Meanwhile, there is another man who wanted to speak to the students here at MSU. This man's fee was just a fraction of what Mr. Ziegler wanted, and instead of lining a pocket, the money was being forwarded to an organization dedicated to protecting the right of many persecuted Americans. Much more important than the money involved, though, was the content of this man's speech.

Bob Yellow Bird, representing the American Indian Movement (AIM), appeared recently to speak about AIM, its history, goals and problems. Speaking in an open lecture and several classes, he told of the problems facing American Indians today. He talked of job discrimination, poverty, hunger and sickness; yet his message was one of sincere hope for a stronger America through the abandonment of the racist attitudes which have put the American Indians on reservations and taken away from them everything but their heritage. The goals that AIM is working for are worthwhile enough that many people have dedicated their whole lives to the cause.

Though the plight of the American Indian is much less publicized, and thus less known, than current political news, I believe it is all the more important. Just as we enthusiastically supported the civil rights movement in the '60s, so we should continue to do so in the '70s.

The forces of discrimination and prejudice which hamper the lives of thousands of American Indians are no different than those which have opposed the black American. The basic problem now facing AIM, outside of racism, is the lack of public awareness of its cause. It was with this problem in mind that Bob Yellow Bird came to MSU to speak, and encourage support for his organization.

The campus news media was thorough in their coverage of Mr. Yellow Bird's appearance. Yet student support, on the average, still seems to be little more than verbal. I strongly urge the expansion of student awareness to the American Indians' plight, and consequently, the reconsideration of priorities regarding "distinguished speaker" appearances and their subsequent funding with student money.

Take a week off, jostlers

Hey world, I have a favor to ask of you. Next week, I am going to try walking all by myself again - no wheelchair, no crutches, no cane for the first time in five months.
What I want is a two-week guarantee that no one or no vehicle will hit me, knock me over or bang into me. I would prefer a lifetime guarantee, but no one issues those anymore, so I will realistically settle for two weeks.

Five months have passed since the fateful day when a motorist completed her left turn into my bicycle. When her vehicle connected with mine, I went flying for the first time in my life.

The flying part was neat, the landing was not. The last five months have been worse. The first three weeks were spent in bed watching the leaves on a maple tree change colors and eventually fall.

The day came, and my doctor said, "Thou shalt leave your bed and conquer the world from a wheelchair."
The wheelchair was liberating, but I was frustrated by doors that were too small, ramps that were too steep and people who were too pushy.

The very first day in my chair, someone bumped into my chair and sent me flying into a brick wall. I was sent back to bed for a few days.

Three weeks later, the doctor said, "Thou shalt leave your wheels and walk with crutches."

With much innocence, I ventured onto this campus, four-legged and moving. Only three hours out and a mad bicyclist ran into me, knocking me down. His move committed me back to bed for a few more weeks.

Eventually, I took up my crutches again to conquer the MSU portion of the world. My crutches now had fluorescent orange stripes down them to warn the world to watch out.

The day came, and the doctor said, "Throw away your sticks, thou shalt walk with a cane."

True to form, my first day out with my aluminum third leg, a cane, someone bumped into me and knocked me down.

Actually, it was a good Samaritan who tried to help me down the steps of Berkeley Hall by placing a hand on my shoulder. At the same time he tried to help, his gentleman friend knocked into me.

Three months have passed and the doctor has said "Thou shalt become human. You may walk by yourself on your own two legs."

It is only a three-day experiment to see if my legs will stand up to the pressure. If no one hits me with a body, bicycle, bus or car, I will be on my way to recovery.

If someone hits me, it is back to bed and the silver cane. Please, take the time this week not to jostle anybody, anywhere.

Doctor put on probation for fetal death

FROM WIRE SERVICES
BOSTON — Dr. Kenneth C. Edelin was sentenced to one year's probation Tuesday for his manslaughter conviction in the death of an aborted fetus. Edelin was immediately invited to return to work at the hospital where he did the abortion, and his attorney said the 36-year-old obstetrician was ready to return.

Suffolk Superior Court Judge James P. McGuire, who could have sentenced Edelin to up to 20 years in prison, said he would stay the sentence pending an appeal. Edelin's lawyer said he would file his appeal Tuesday afternoon.

Edelin, who was convicted Saturday in the death of a fetus he aborted in a legal abortion at Boston City Hospital on Oct. 3, 1973, called the sentence "extremely fair."

"I'm hopeful we can get along with the appeal," he said.

The trustees of the hospital issued a "statement of support and outrage" at his conviction, a hospital administrator said. "He can come to work this afternoon," the administrator said.

The statement called Edelin "an outstanding physician whose professional performance has been and continues to be at the highest level. His actions and medical practice have been consistent with the highest prevailing standards of medical care, and we strongly reaffirm his continuing staff appointment."

William P. Homans, Edelin's attorney, said the doctor was "delighted that the Boston City Hospital board has acted so speedily, and he is ready to go back to work right now."

Homans had asked McGuire for leniency, saying that Edelin "is not an individual who has any malice in his heart." Prosecutor Newman A. Flanagan also declined to recommend a sentence. Asked later whether this amounted to a recommendation of leniency, Flanagan suggested to a reporter that he "draw your own inferences." He said prosecutors customarily do recommend sentences. Edelin remained outwardly calm after the sentence, as he had throughout the trial. Homans said he would carry the appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court if necessary. The high court ruled two years ago that states may not prohibit abortions in the first six months of pregnancy. Edelin's manslaughter conviction has stirred controversy around the country. Two thousand supporters in Boston staged a rally Monday night, and a defense fund has sent appeals across the country for aid in meeting Edelin's legal expenses that now approach $50,000. The demonstrators, organized by Boston women's groups, chanted, "Not the church, not the state, women must decide their fate," as they gathered near the Boston Common.

Meanwhile, telephone calls of support were being made to the office of Edelin's lawyer as preparations began for the appeal. Homans said that about 100 calls offering aid had come in by late Monday afternoon.

Edelin's conviction Saturday spread shock and dismay throughout much of the medical community and among women's rights advocates, who feel it will make doctors fearful of performing abortions in second trimester, or the fetus through sixth month, of pregnancy. The verdict was viewed, however, as a major victory by members of "right to life" organizations and the Boston Catholic hierarchy in the battle to limit the effects of a U.S. Supreme Court ruling in 1973 against sweeping abortion legislation by state

WILL ASK COGS FOR SUPPORT

PIRGIM postpones tax request

By MARY ANN CHICK
State News Staff Writer
 Graduate students received a reprieve on another tax when PIRGIM representatives decided they could not meet the tight time schedule necessary to hold a referendum spring term. PIRGIM cancelled its presentation, scheduled for the Council of Graduate Students (COGS) meeting Monday night, after the decision to postpone the referendum.

The earliest that graduate students will vote on taxing themselves for PIRGIM is next winter term. According to board of trustees guidelines, an organization must collect signatures from one-third of the student body within a seven-week period before a referendum can be held.

PIRGIM executive director Joseph Tuchinsky will be at the next COGS meeting, March 3, to ask for COGS support of a referendum.

PIRGIM is not sure yet if it needs COGS support to hold a referendum, but is still planning to ask for it.

"One set of guidelines say we have to go through COGS to hold a referendum, but another set says no," Tuchinsky said.

Also at the COGS meeting Monday night, COGS allocated $25 to two graduate students, Laura Williams and Robert Rice, who will be dancing in the annual "Dance for Strength" marathon for Multiple Sclerosis this weekend at Meridian Mall.

COGS also decided to support any action by anyone that will help foreign students obtain work permits.

A policy change last summer made it harder for foreign students to obtain work permits.

"Last summer, 150 tried to get a work permit, but only 20 actually got one," said Steve Tyma, vice president of internal affairs for COGS.

Brashler urged the COGS representatives to write to their congressmen about two bills that have been introduced this session concerning foreign students' work permits.

COGS representatives were also asked to look at the budgets of individual departments as each started to set up next year's budget.

"With the possibility of an over-all cut, departments are likely to set up a list of priorities," Brashler said.

"Some departments might list graduate assistantships as a low priority if they don't hear from the graduate students."

Sadat's wife on goodwill trip

BRONN, West German (AP) - Mrs. Sadat, wife of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, arrived Tuesday on a traditional goodwill tour which is expected to enhance her progressive image in the Arab world.

The visit, coming two years after Bonn and Cairo repaired a seven-year diplomatic breach over German recognition of Israel, was seen here as an important goodwill mission. But in the Arab world, where wives of heads of state seldom make official visits alone, it was seen as another step in the Egyptian First Lady's campaign to secure rights and recognition for the women of her country.

where centuries-old family laws guarantee male dominance. "This is International Women's Year and it's our opportunity to get as much as we can," Mrs. Sadat said in an interview before her trip. "Of course we have some people who are not willing, some of the religious people. I'm not trying to catch up with European women. I know our traditions and customs. I believe in equal participation and equal pay for women. But I believe at the same time the husband must be the head of the family," she said. The wife of Sadat's predecessor, Mrs. Gamal Abdel Nasser, rarely appeared in public in the 18 years Nasser was a world figure. Most Arabs never knew what she looked like. Mrs. Sadat broke the mold with an appearance at her husband's side the night of the first official reception four-and-half years ago. Her interest in social welfare goes back at least as far as 1967, when she started a self-help vocational program for poor women in her native Nile delta village. The venture has been so successful that other provinces send people to be trained there. Following the October 1973 war with Israel, Mrs. Sadat spent up to 18 hours a day in rehabilitation centers for wounded soldiers, getting to know the men by name and trying to comfort them.

Her latest project, the Wafa Wa Amal - Faith and Hope - Society, is constructing a center near Cairo to provide 3,000 crippled veterans with medical care, social services, vocational training and recreation facilities. The center will be open to civilians. "We want our soldiers to feel useful," she said. "Medical care is not enough for the disabled. They must be trained so they can have a meaningful life."

Official backs bar capacity limit

By RALPH FRAMMOLINO
State News Staff Writer

A Michigan State Police fire marshal testified Tuesday in the third day of East Lansing's overcrowding case against the Alle-Ey bar that his calculations supported the patron limit set by city fire officials for the bar.

attorney Les Turner to finish up his cross-examination. In his testimony, Rucinski said he did not include bathrooms, the ladies lounge, the dance floor or storage rooms in the total square footage of the establishment. He said that exclusion of these areas is not specifically spelled out in the Public Assembly Regulations and that he referred to two other codes. Rucinski said that he used the Southern Building Code to exclude bathrooms and kitchen areas and the National Life and Safety Code to exclude dance floor areas. In cross-examining Rucinski, Tuesday, Turner challenged the validity of using other codes that are not specifically recognized by the Public Assembly Regulations. Rucinski also said that the space between the exits at the Alle-Ey could not afford to accommodate more than the capacity limit of 419 set for the bar.

Boston demonstration set to fight racism

By BOB OURLIAN
State News Staff Writer

A mass demonstration will be held in Boston May 17 to support the rights of minorities to an equal education and combat what organizers call an organized racist offensive.

The demonstration call came at the National Student Conference against Racism at Boston University last weekend.

Thirty-three MSU and local high school students were among more than 2,000 that attended the three-day conference of workshops and speeches given by Dick Gregory, author Jonathan W. Dr. Benjamin Spock and civil rights activist James Bevel.

The Boston NAACP asked conference organizers to support a request for a national program to combat racism.

Opposed, an overwhelming majority of conference participants approved the idea of a mass demonstration, according to local organizers at the conference.

Marcia Garrison, ASMSU presidential candidate, was optimistic about the consequences of the Boston conference and the demonstration that came out of it, the National Student Coalition said.

"This conference has huge potential for a resurgence of the civil rights movement," she said. "From what I saw, most of the people were excited and dedicated. They were serious about doing something."

Garrison's husband Jim, an MSU student coalition organizer, said the Boston conference met its two goals: to establish a national organization and to come up with a national program to combat racism, and to battle racism in Boston in particular.

Controversy over busing has been raging in Boston ever since desegregation orders which are now being fought in court by the Boston School Committee, the city's school board.

Both Jim Garrison and Art Webb, director of the Office of Black Affairs, were elected as local representatives to the National Student Coalition of the student coalition.

The fact that we are planning something really big and broad was highly significant," Marcia Garrison said. "I think that if people decided to set up a commission to study the problem, as an example, they would've been copping out."

"The mass action approach is one that is needed. People haven't forgotten what was learned in the '60s."

Rich Herold, a WMSN newsman who went to the conference, said the conference itself suffered from disorganization. Coordinators expected about 1,000 people, and more than 2,000 came, he said.

Herold also said that not everybody was at the conference for the conference itself. "A lot of people went there to play politics instead of rolling up their sleeves and doing something," he said.

Herold also said he felt that not all those attending the conference were satisfied with what went on there. "I got the idea that a lot of people thought it was a waste of time," he said.

"But it was a statement," he said. "It was a statement of student concern and interest in the issue."

In addition to the May demonstration, local workshops and teach-ins are in planning stages for April 4 to commemorate

A student group in Boston sparked the idea for a national movement by organizing a teach-in Dec. 13 at Harvard University that drew 1,100 people. The next day, some 15,000 to 20,000 people marched through Boston in support of continued desegregation.

Show to focus on local housing

A special television program about some of the housing problems of students and other low-income people in the East Lansing area will be shown at 7:30 tonight on the public access cable channel 11.

The show, which lasts about 20 minutes, focuses on neighborhood opposition to a proposed 24-hour restaurant at M.A.C. Avenue and Ann Street.

The proposed restaurant was recently made possible when its backers were granted a parking waiver for 59 parking spaces by the East Lansing Planning Commission despite opposition from students and other neighborhood groups.

The show uses interviews with residents, many of whom criticize the city for being more interested in business developments than people, to explain the problems of tenants.

Special emphasis is given to the noise problems encountered by residents who live near the business district, particularly those who live near Dooley's and the location of the proposed 24-hour restaurant.

The point is brought home by a segment near the end of the show which uses actual sounds recorded at 2 a.m. as the rowdies head home from the bars.

The show was put together by Delta Productions, an informal group of public access video makers made up of both students and nonstudents. The group previously did a show which featured a group of Vietnam veterans who favor unconditional amnesty and a program about labor organization among young people in the East Lansing area.

For those who miss it the first time around, the housing show will be repeated at 7:30 p.m. Feb. 24.

faculty and give it to the administrators. They felt that the parts of the document giving faculty "shared responsibility" with administrators in making certain decisions were written in a way that put faculty in only an advisory role and gave them no power in making the decision.

Alan Fisher, associate professor of history, said he was "shocked" by the lack of power the new document would give faculty to "choose, remove or make sure a chairperson of a department is responsive to the department."

Harold Marcus, professor of history, said he disagreed with the "tone" of the document and said he felt it gave faculty and students less power in University decisions.

"The parts of this document that supposedly give faculty a share in making decisions is just so much window dressing," Marcus said. "This is an administrative document and I think a new one should be written that would protect the rights of faculty."

The formation of an executive committee comprising chairpersons of the state committees and the state committee members, set down by the new bylaws criticized by Harry Perlmutter, professor of sociology, executive committee member, have the power to act in emergency in certain areas.

Lester Manderscheid, man of the ad hoc committee that drafted the bylaws academic governance, defended the bylaws and asked opposing them to be proposed by-law to the ones, instead of "looking some utopian document."

When the results of the ballot were announced, members were surprised stood up and said that he of the close vote for the should be sent back for study. Other members agreed, as they said "Siddown" and put on coats to leave.

Franc up;
dollar down
since 1971

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Swiss franc rose 68.9 per cent in value against the U.S. dollar between May 1971 and the end of last month, the Swiss Credit Bank said Tuesday. The dollar's decline against the strong franc was worse than that of most other major currencies.

The bank, one of Switzerland's three largest, said the franc had risen an average of 47.2 per cent against 20 major currencies since May 1971.

The Swiss franc rose 74.4 per cent against the Italian lira in the same period and 73.6 per cent against the British pound. It rose only 10 per cent against the West German mark, 34.1 per cent against the French franc and 38.4 per cent against the Japanese yen.

Among other economic developments abroad:

• The executive commission of the European Common Market reported in Brussels that investment, industrial production and consumer prices are all showing a tendency to slacken in the nine market countries.

• A survey published by the Economist in Britain showed oil exporting countries were far more generous in sharing their wealth with poor countries last year than were the Western, industrial countries. But it said the grants and loans were often handed out in haphazard fashion with little investigation of proposed projects.

• The Kredietbank in Brussels announced that inflation appeared to be receding in Belgium. It said the country could finish 1975 with 7 to 9 per cent inflation, compared to 15.68 per cent last year.

The upward march of the Swiss franc has caused increasing concern to the country's export and tourist industries and prompted the national bank to take drastic measures against the continued inflow of speculative foreign funds.

Nonresidents of Switzerland who have opened Swiss franc deposits exceeding 100,000 francs or increased them after Oct. 31 are now taxed with a punitive commission of 10 per cent per fiscal quarter.

The measure has not significantly helped the dollar, which has recently traded at less than 2.50 francs, compared to 4.32 francs before May 1971. The dollar has been formally devalued twice since then and has also been allowed to float to find its own level.
