MSU wrings dry after flooding above the normal level and flooded the low areas near the river.

MSU is beginning to wring itself dry after spending a cautiously calm weekend in the midst of the Lansing area's worst flood in 28 years.

The torrents, which caused millions of dollars in damages in surrounding communities and hundreds of homeless citizens to seek shelter in hotels, motels and other homes, left MSU relatively untouched.

Gov. Milliken asked for federal disaster aid Sunday for 14 Michigan counties affected by the flooding.

The flood was the worst since 1947, as the Grand River rose 15.3 feet and the Red Cedar River 12.1 feet. The National Weather Service reported that water levels were about a foot higher in 1947, though MSU officials contend that the recent flood rose slightly more than the earlier one.

The water is not expected to recede until Wednesday and the forecast for today calls for partly sunny skies and a high of about 45 degrees.

No injuries were reported in the Lansing Metropolitan area, though at least two groups of student canoeists tipped over in the Red Cedar, were rescued and taken to the University Health Center.

The Health Center refused to comment or confirm the reports.

Public safety officials and President Wharton have made a plea to students and citizens to stay out of the water. Backed-up sewage contained in the flood water presents a danger of causing hepatitis.

President Wharton also announced Sunday afternoon that MSU will operate as usual today. Precautionary measures taken by the University were responsible for the campus's good position, he said.

"Though the years, we have done our homework in placement of buildings and in other programs to avoid the peril of flooding, and we came out of this very well," Wharton said.

Surrounding areas, however, were not as lucky, as estimates of damages to homes, businesses, and roads in Lansing reached $50 million.

State police said approximately 1,000 families in Lansing were evacuated and several hundred of those suffered extensive damage to their homes.

Some 200 to 250 people were also evacuated from East Lansing, mainly from the residential area just south of University Village, one of the hardest hit in the area, according to East Lansing police.

An unknown number of people were also forced to leave their apartments in the area along the Red Cedar River from Bogue Street to Northwind Drive.

In Meridian Township and Okemos, 100 to 125 people were taken from their homes and several hundred more left voluntarily. Damages were estimated in the millions of dollars, including reports of streets buckling.

On campus the Auditorium, Jenison Fieldhouse, and the Women's Intramural Building all had pumps removing water during the weekend.

The Auditorium had two feet of water in a power and mechanical room Saturday afternoon that caused a temporary blackout and the transfer of the "Tony and Lena Sing" concert to Munn Ice Arena.

Power was restored, and water removed, by early Sunday morning.

Jenison Fieldhouse was surrounded on three sides by one large area of water that covers Kobs Field, the side walk between Jenison and the field, the Men's Intramural Building parking lot, and much of the intersection that meets at Sparty.

Pumps in Jenison pumped the water out as fast as it was coming in and no major leaks were reported.

The Women's Intramural Building suffered a leak on the far west side, but the flooding was confined to an area underneath the old pool by sand-bagging and pumping.

Two pumps have been working since Saturday afternoon.

Water also went up to Brody Drive which goes around the complex, and reached the walls of Van Hoosen Hall and the west side apartments in University Village.

Kellogg Center was also the site of some minor flooding. And what was thought to be sewage coming out of certain drains in came close to Van Hoosen Hall and Brody Complex.

Some flooding conditions along the Red and Grand rivers Saturday flooded hundreds of families and students in East Lansing and Okemos from homes into emergency shelter.

The American Red Cross (ARC), with a crew of emergency volunteers, set up shelters in Okemos High School, Marshall Street Armory and McDonel Middle School to accommodate the evacuees in the Lansing-Okemos area.

The Lansing ARC has six caseworkers listening to the problems and stories of the flood victims and trying to get them food, shelter and a means for regaining their often times total loss of property.

Caseworker Donna Trombley said she had seen eight families in four hours Sunday afternoon, most of whom said they did not think they could move back into their homes without major repairs, if at all.

"We have about 200 volunteers out doing rescues, but there are so many others who are stranded in isolated places in the city."

The Lansing area is scattered with blocks of houses buried half a way or more in the muddy flood water.

John Wingo, an MSU bus driver, lives on Francis Street in the heart of Lansing, and Francis Street went under water Saturday morning. Wingo's house has six feet of water in the basement and two feet in the living room, and its still coming in. His family took shelter with friends.

"Everything is gone," he said. "All my furniture is ruined, along with my TV and stereo. I left my car in the driveway, half filled with water."

"Who the hell would have thought I would need flood insurance in Lansing?" he said with a bitter smile.

Virginia and James Jones lived on Lansing's downtown River Street, one of the most totally devastated areas in the county.

"We had to put a board across a fence and walk it just to get out of the house," said Virginia, who had been puffing on the worn pipe of her cigarette for some time.

"The whole place is gone, we lost it all. Except for the TV, which we took with us," she said.

Mr. Jones had tales of saving neighbors and bursting through a door and catching a baby before it floated out the window.

Conditions are nearly as bad in the Indian Hills area of Okemos. Meridian Township was blocked off as of Saturday night because of flooding conditions and a shaky Ferguson Park bridge.

Indian Lakes Estates, an Okemos subdivision of $50,000 to $350,000 homes nestled in a crook of the Red Cedar River off Mt. Hope Road, was choked by water Saturday night when flood plains overflowed and a protective dike gave way.

By Sunday afternoon, dozens of split-level homes which faced a small man-made lake were at least one floor under water and the road back into a newly developed area of the subdivision was impassable.

At 3 a.m., the dike broke, and residents of the sumptuous homes were told to evacuate by fire truck loudspeakers.

"The water started seeping through Saturday afternoon and began bubbling out of the toilets, bathtubs and sinks," said Mike Mattox, whose home was partially under water after the dike broke.

Board chooses 2 seniors for editor-in-chief, ad manager

Two students were appointed Sunday by the State News Board of Directors to serve in the newspaper's highest student administrative offices during the 1975-76 year.

John Tingwall, senior, 4634 S. Hagadorn Road, was chosen by the board to serve as editor-in-chief, effective May 1.

Margo Palarchio, senior, 1538 Burcham Drive, was named advertising manager, also effective May 1.

Tingwall and Palarchio were recommended to the board by the editorial and advertising staffs respectively.

Tingwall, a 21-year-old journalism major, has worked at the State News since winter term 1974. He has served as an education and capital reporter for the paper and as an editorial writer.

In addition, Tingwall has worked for the Grosse Pointe News and was employed as a Gannett capital bureau intern for The State Journal during winter term 1975.

"I hope to solicit many more viewpoints from the campus community and more reactions to the State News and its coverage," Tingwall said.

"I hope we can have better community coverage with more emphasis on East Lansing as the students' home and how it affects their lives," he added.

Palarchio, a 21-year-old advertising major, will receive a bachelor's degree in advertising in June. She will begin graduate work in advertising at MSU in the fall.

She has worked at the State News for two years as an account executive and is a member of the MSU Advertising Club.

"I want to implement some new training programs for our advertising staff which will increase the effectiveness of the staff to weather the current economic conditions and increase revenue," she said.

Tingwall and Palarchio were appointed by the State News Board of Directors, an eight-member corporate board composed of two faculty members, two professional journalists and four students who manage the property and business affairs of the State News corporation.

Student's car causes splash

Some days it just doesn't pay to get out of bed.

At least that's the way it seemed for one student whose car ended up sinking in the Red Cedar River Sunday night.

The student was parking his car in a lot near Emmons Hall when the trouble began. It seems the reverse gear on his car does not work. He opened the car door and was using his feet to back into a parking space.

But the car began moving too fast so the student hopped in to hit the brake. But he missed. Instead he hit the gas pedal, the car slipped into drive, sideswiped another parked car and then went into the river.

The student made a hasty exit from the car as it began to sink. Standing on solid ground he watched as one lone taillight flickered in the night.

Evacuations signal fall in S. Vietnam province

HO CHI MINH (AP) — North Vietnamese troops checked by tanks closed in Sunday on a province east of Saigon and the area of both government forces and the Khmer Rouge appeared to signal its imminent fall, reports said. Americans fled Saigon at an accelerated pace.

The province would be the 20th of Vietnam's 44 provinces to fall into the hands of Communist-led forces, most of them since mid-March.

In Cambodia, the Khmer Rouge marched into Poipet along the Thai border one of the few Cambodian towns not previously fallen to the Khmer Rouge. A newsman who saw Poipet fall said the takeover was complete and that residents greeted the Khmer Rouge with white flags draped with red and white flags draped from buildings.

Hundreds of American men and their Vietnamese wives and children were evacuated from the South Vietnamese capital aboard U.S. Air Force C-114 transports that had brought war materials in from Clark Air Base in the Philippines.

A U.S. official estimated about 700 persons left Saigon on Sunday, including American contractors and their families, leaving fewer than 3,000 Americans here. Authorities at Clark, however, put Sunday's figure at about 450 persons, still making it the largest single day's evacuation since President Ford ordered nonessential Americans out of Vietnam last Wednesday.

Students end class boycott

Students at Brown University are expected to return to classes Monday, ending a four-day boycott in protest of proposed budget cuts.

The Student Coalition Coordinating Committee called Sunday for a return to classes on Monday but said it would ask the student body on Tuesday if any further action should be taken on the budget issue.

Students objected to proposed cuts in financial aid, student services, faculty positions and programs for minority students.

The boycott, which began last Tuesday, was aimed at forcing changes in the austerity budget proposed by Brown President Donald E. Hornig.

Death of inmate investigated

The death of a jail inmate is being investigated following a 16½-hour rebellion Saturday at the District of Columbia jail in which a dozen persons were taken hostage and later released.

D.C. Police reported that jail inmate Robert Seegars, 24, was found hanging in a cell of the maximum security cellblock where the uprising took place.

Inmates seized control of the cellblock about 1 a.m. Saturday, taking 12 hostages including 11 guards and a male nurse. One of the guards was freed about noon, and the remainder were released at the end of the incident Saturday evening.

Postal Service, unions talk

The Postal Service and its unions begin negotiations Monday on a labor agreement expected to influence the size of a postal rate increase later this year.

The Council on Wage and Price Stability will monitor the contract talks in an effort to prevent inflationary increases in postal rates or heavy subsidies from taxpayers.

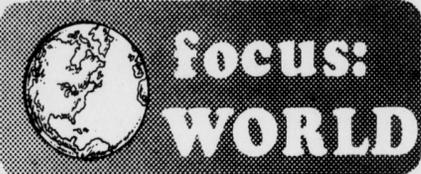

The new contract, to cover more than 600,000 postal employees, is one of the largest labor agreements to be negotiated this year.

Lon Nol to live in Hawaii

Former Cambodian President Lon Nol plans to buy a $103,000 house in a Honolulu subdivision, a realtor says.

An agent for Mike McCormack Realtors here said the former political figure last week visited the home in the Hawaii Kai subdivision, located in a mountain-ringed valley. Lon Nol and his wife liked the house, the agent said, and decided to buy it.

"I just can't understand why a man like that would want to buy a house here. It's wide open, with a large frontage to the street and not a heck of a lot of privacy," said the house's current owner, Joseph H. Meyer.

Hassan cancels visit to U.S.

King Hassan of Morocco, currently chairman of the Arab League, has canceled an official visit to Washington that was scheduled to begin Tuesday, according to official Moroccan sources. They said a major reason was the collapse of Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's Middle East peace efforts.

An American Embassy spokesman said the trip was "postponed" at the king's request, amid Moroccan assurances that this did not reflect any deterioration in the traditionally friendly relations between the two countries.

It was the third time in four years that the 43-year-old monarch has canceled a planned visit to the United States.

Eritrea rebels continue war

Eritrean rebels claimed Sunday they had killed 100 Ethiopian soldiers, shot down a military plane and destroyed 18 vehicles last week in their secessionist campaign against the government of Ethiopia.

A communique by the Eritrea Liberation Front released here said rebel casualties were not heavy. The rebels have been waging a guerilla war against the Ethiopian government to gain independence for their Red Sea province.

Zambia appeals for U.S. help

The president of Zambia urged Saturday night that the United States support efforts to achieve "majority rule in Rhodesia and Zambia immediately and the ending of apartheid in South Africa."

At a White House state dinner in his honor, Zambian leader Kenneth D. Kaunda warned that "southern Africa is poised for a dangerous armed conflict," but said the situation still could be resolved peacefully through negotiations and U.S. support.

Beirut still prosperous

Beirut, the business capital of the Middle East, was only temporarily distracted from the race for profit by last week's five costly days of gunfire and bomb blasts.

"When you sit down and think about it, Beirut is still the most convenient and has the best living and working conditions," said an American banker as the clashes died away.

"One Lebanese friend told me God is Lebanese," the banker said. "He'll make it all work out."

Congress expected to OK Viet aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Evacuation money and humanitarian aid for South Vietnam is expected to get Congress' approval this week, but President Ford's military aid request remains stalled.

Both the House and Senate are to vote on similar evacuation and humanitarian aid bills Tuesday afternoon and thus would have the rest of the week to work out a final compromise bill.

The authorized money would then have to be appropriated separately, possibly next week.

But Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said last week military aid also is needed to prevent South Vietnam's collapse and bring negotiations. The Viet Cong said over the weekend they also want negotiations.

Ford's request for boosting his original $300 million military aid request to $722 million is considered virtually dead — and prospects for approval of any of the $300 million are uncertain.

The Senate Armed Services Committee has already rejected the increase and the House Armed Services Committee is to vote on it Tuesday.

Kissinger told Congress on Friday the military aid is needed not to guarantee South Vietnam's survival but to create enough military resistance to encourage the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese to negotiate.

He said one purpose of negotiations would be to secure safe evacuation of Americans and their dependents if South Vietnam is taken over.

A number of senators say Americans are not being withdrawn from South Vietnam fast enough and some say they will not vote for humanitarian aid Tuesday unless the evacuation is speeded up.

In more than a week of efforts the members of the Vietnamese-American Crisis Committee have been trying to meet with congressmen and senators to tell their stories.

They are, for the most part, former U.S. servicemen who and new ones keep coming. They go around in groups of two to eight.

"My sister called and she said 'Kim, come home to rescue us,'" said Mrs. Kim Cook of Falls Church, Va. She is trying to retell that conversation to anyone who will listen to her in Capitol offices.

Cook said her sister would not be shot right, but there could be torture and an attempt to bleed her, and "my husband cause I'm an American now my husband works for the government."

Brain pacemaker aids boy

MIAMI (AP) — A 7-year-old boy who had to be carried into a hospital was able to walk out after a device was implanted in his skull during an operation doctors say provides new hope for some victims of cerebral palsy.

"I think this is a very exciting development, especially for children," said Dr. Ross Davis, a neurosurgeon who performed the operation on Jeffrey Pagnotti.

Davis, 43, said he has tried the brain pacemaker, pioneered by Dr. Irving S. Cooper of New York, on six cerebral palsy victims who suffer from muscle stiffness. All six operations have been successful to varying degrees, he said.

The pacemaker cannot help some people whose limbs have been paralyzed so long that all muscle tone is gone, Davis said.

"With this type of palsy that we are working with spasticity, the muscles have too much tension in them," Davis said. "As a voluntary action cannot be exerted."

The battery-operated device stimulates the brain, which in turn instructs the muscles to relax. With decreased tension, the muscles free to obey the voluntary commands of the brain.

With the aid of crutches, Jeffrey left Children's Hospital this past weekend. Davis said he is the youngest person in the United States possibly in the world to have a brain pacemaker operation.

Implanted in Jeffrey's head were plastic leads designed to reduce the hyperactivity of the brain and the resulting tension in his muscles.

Before the device was installed, Jeffrey's head was curved and his head and back were forward. Now, less than three weeks after operation, his head, shoulders and knees are straight and he can touch his nose with his

Minutemen re-enact Revolutionary battle

CONCORD, Mass. (AP) — Two hundred years and a day after the Concord Minutemen beat back the British at North Bridge, modern Concord residents looked around with relief Sunday to see they survived an exuberant siege commemorating the event.

After nine years and $120,000 worth of planning, the people of this quiet suburb found its Common strewn with beer cans and trash Sunday. But little else had changed after 125,000 celebrants jammed in Saturday for the opening of the nation's Bicentennial.

The worst fears of many residents of this carefully preserved town of 18,000 had not materialized.

People, many of them young and carrying sleeping bags, began pouring into Concord on Friday night. By morning, about 75,000 some of them holdovers from an all-night, anti-big business rally, crowded onto a muddy hillside overlooking North Bridge, where colonial farmers won their first battle against the Redcoats on April 19, 1775.

Standing on a podium beside the bridge, President Ford drew loud boos from the throng behind him across the Concord River when he referred to the nation's military strength.

But the President looked straight ahead at assembled musket-carrying Minutemen as he called for national unity.

"It is time to place the hand of healing on the heart of America, not division and blame," he said as police chased and tackled protesters who had waded into a marsh behind the President.

However, as Ford's motorcade passed along the parade route through Concord and on to Lexington he was greeted with frequent applause and cheers.

The day began with pageantry as Redcoats and Minutemen firing muskets acted out the first armed encounter of the Revolution on Lexington Green.

It was there, after a night of marching from Boston, that the British troops had encountered armed townspeople as they trudged toward Concord to look for patriot ammunition.

As 30,000 spectators watched in the early morning drizzle, a man who represented Minuteman Capt. John Parker barked to his troops: "Stand your ground! Don't fire unless fired upon!"

Then shots and gunsmoke filled the air, and eight American revolutionaries fell in mock death.

From there, columns of about 100 British regulars dressed in intricate red uniforms marched the seven miles to Concord, where they took part in a parade.

In the predawn hours in Concord Saturday morning, the People's Bicentennial Commission drew about 20,000 young people, who listened to rock music, anti-establishment speeches and quotations from the leaders of the American Revolution.

'U' TO BORROW $3 MILLION FOR PROGRAM

Yearly loan limit may rise by $1,000

By MICHELE BURGEN
State News Staff Writer
MSU students seeking financial assistance may be entitled to as much as $1,000 more next year because the MSU Board of Trustees authorized the University to borrow up to $3 million to fund the MSU guaranteed student loan program for the 1975-76 academic year.

MSU developed the loan program in 1973 to aid students who have been denied loans by at least two commercial lending institutions.

The action, which came at Friday's meeting, will allow students an increase in the amount they may borrow. Roger Wilkinson, vice president for business and finance, said the unofficial upper limit per year per student would be $2,500. Currently, the limit is $1,500.

The request of $3 million is up about $1.5 million over last year's request. Wilkinson said the request is essential to offset the effects of inflation on the cost of education.

The administration also expects a greater number of students to seek financial assistance next year, though officials can only guess how many more.

"It is difficult to determine the number of students who will be subject to financial assistance because of the recession," Wilkinson said.

A protest by INCAR against possible room and board hikes barely disturbed pipe-smoking Trustee Warren Huff.

While the trustees deliberated within, members of the International Committee Against Racism (INCAR) picketed outside the board room in a demonstration protesting possible room and board, tuition and fee hikes and the firing of two women faculty members, and demanding a University boycott of Teamster lettuce.

One protestor, during discussion of personnel changes, slammed a petition on the table in front of President Wharton and board Chairman Blanche Martin, D-East Lansing.

He noted the 750 signatures on the petition from students and faculty supporting the rehiring of the two women. He also charged that the board's refusal to discuss the case prompted a civil suit by one of the women. The trustees ignored him.

The suit was filed against the University by Lois Humphrey, associate professor of family ecology, who was fired and denied access to the faculty grievance procedure. She charges MSU with sex discrimination, denial of due process and denial of equal protection under the law.

The board twice refused INCAR a place on its agenda to discuss the firings of Humphrey and Dr. Georgia Johnson, asst. professor in the Dept. of Human Medicine. A new meeting policy, set down at the board's March 21 meeting, prohibits discussion of matters like these under litigation in the University grievance procedure or before a state or federal agency.

Other protestors carried placards around the board room and passed out leaflets to the audience.

After 15 minutes of discussion the trustees also approved use of the art building in Leland, Mich., by that town from September to June. Leland Township will use the building as a town hall.

For several years the University has operated a summer art school in the building, but it has been vacant in recent summers due to lack of student interest and money, said Jack Breslin, executive vice president.

Costs of maintaining the building will be assumed by Leland Township.

The board also approved appointments of three new department chairmen. They are Dr. Larry L. Bunnell, professor, Dept. of Family Medicine and College of Osteopathic Medicine; Dr. Donald R. Come, professor, Dept. of Social Science, and Col. Richard E. McCormack, U.S. Air Force, Dept. of Aerospace Studies.

In other business, the board approved over $300,000 in contracts for renovations and alterations to campus buildings including a communications system in the new Clinical Science Building and modifications to the low temperature system of the observatory.

Ex-commissioner dies of coronary

David Buhl, 45, former Ingham County Commissioner, died of a heart attack Friday while visiting Las Vegas, Nev.

He had served on the County Board of Commissioners for six years and is credited with working out many compromises between the commission members.

"Buhl was responsible for us getting a lot of things done," said Kenneth A. Hope, a former member of the board of commissioners.

Buhl was finance committee chairman for three of his six years on the board. He was board chairman for one year and finance committee vice chairman for two years.

He did not run for the board last year. Though he was a Republican, Buhl worked well with both Republicans and Democrats and helped to prevent partisan conflicts on the board.

Before coming to the board in 1969, he was a member of the Lansing City Council from 1963 to 1967.

Buhl is survived by his wife Jean, two sons Ray and Dave, a daughter Mrs. Frank Doyen and his grandmother. Funeral services will be announced later by the Gorsline-Runciman Lansing Chapel.

INCAR protest short on spirit

By BRUCE RAY WALKER
State News Staff Writer

Everything that made up an old-fashioned demonstration was present at the Administration Building Friday when the International Committee Against Racism (INCAR) staged a protest.

The 20 or so protestors had standard equipment needed for a protest—signs with limited slogans and chants and demands—but the crowds, the organization and the spirit of protest that marked the gatherings of the early '70s were absent.

The INCAR marchers straggled up to the front of the Administration Building one by one early Friday morning and stood waiting for enough people to show up to form a picket line.

As their numbers swelled to 20, signs were handed out and they started walking around in a circle in front of the steps. They had trouble keeping the circle closed and the right size.

The marchers would yell to each other to "Close it up" or "Speed it up" and for a few seconds they would do so.

The signs they carried stated such things as "Wharton eats scab lettuce" and "They say cutback, we say fight back."

As they marched they shouted "Wharton what do you get paid, we want more financial aid." Someone would always do one chant too many and then everyone would laugh.

The atmosphere of the protest was a relaxed one in which the tenseness of the early '70s was not present. University officials exchanged congenial conversation with the protestors instead of the expletives used a few years ago.

Eldon Nonnamaker, vice president for student affairs, asked Tim Cain, lame duck ASMSU president who was marching, how he knew President Wharton ate "scab" lettuce.

"I served it to him the other night at Williams Hall," Cain retorted.

As the protestors waited vainly for the trustees to show up, the rain started to come down and the sign slogans began to run.

"This paint's coming off on my fingers," complained one INCAR member. Someone suggested that they chant "Rain, rain, go away" and everyone chuckled.

After a brief huddle a tactical decision was made to move the picket line up on the steps of the Administration Building to escape the rain, so the protestors marched in a circle up one side of the steps and then down the other.

After awhile the decision was made to move the picket line upstairs to where the trustees were meeting. The trustees had sneaked past them by going in a back door.

The whole troop marched upstairs, followed by a trio of plainclothes Dept. of Public Safety officers that was trying unsuccessfully to remain inconspicuous. After presenting their demands to the board they mingled around for awhile and finally left.

Trustee Aubrey Radcliffe, R-Lansing, thought like most that something was missing from the demonstration.

"We had some good ones in the '60s but this one put me to sleep," Radcliffe said. "It's just not like the good old days."

EDITORIALS Stop anti-'Red' unit

Reds: the dreaded Communist conspiracy.

We all know too well that Communists in the State of Michigan are seeking to undermine our way of life. They use tactics ranging from subverting the morals of our youth to fluoridating our water.

To combat and crush this threat, the state police maintains a robust "Red Squad" that has a list of 50,000 dangerous subversives in Michigan, including such unbridled fanatics as our own Zolton Ferency.

Little does it realize, apparently, that the organized left in the entire nation numbers less than 10,000.

And the Red Squad, officially dubbed the Subversive Activities Investigation Division, is about as active today as it was when it was founded by Public Act 40 in 1950, the year after mainland China "fell" to Communist control.

Some celebrated distinctions of the Red Squad for the past fiscal year, as listed by State Police Director George Halverson, include:

- A budget of $770,060.18.
- Staff totalling 32.
- Forty arrests on charges of gambling, burglary, forgery, blackmail, kidnapping, assault and armed robbery — but never for subversive activity.
- Five convictions as of late September.

Apparently, the Red Squad has been unable to smash or even uncover any type of conspiracy in a quarter of a century of spying on and infiltrating harmless dissident organizations.

No present evidence justifies the manpower and monetary expenditure that the Red Squad has squandered in its ineffective cloak-and-daggering.

In fact, the idea of an organized Communist threat directed by Moscow in this country is nonsensical, especially since some members of the America left hate other leftist groups almost as much as they hate capitalists.

That a state agency exists which can use legal force against those whose common denominator is disagreement with the state's policies and practices is contrary to historic notions of American freedom.

And when a government uses such force to harass and repress the opposing viewpoints of a supposedly free populace, then freedom of speech, press and peaceful assembly become empty and deceptive slogans.

The mentality that justifies a Red Squad or an Un-American Activities subcommittee originated in a tragic time when civil rights were viewed as an annoying obstacle to the attainment of a fanatic nationalism and more effective ruling power.

That day is gone — good riddance — but its artifacts sadly remain. It is now up to the state legislature as it considers the 1975-76 budget to gather up those artifacts, strike a match to them and heave a sigh of relief as the Red Squad is sent to its proper destiny.

Assist flood victims

It began as an April shower, as dark clouds propelled by a light wind eclipsed a week of brilliant early spring sunshine.

Most of us saw it, when it started, as an almost welcome season occurrence, one that would grant a spark of life to campus greenery.

But it didn't stop. It got worse, and rained harder. Before we knew it the rain was a deluge and the deluge was a flood and the flood spread disaster throughout the area.

It chased people from their homes, turning apartments and houses into mud and water-soaked swamps.

It turned much of the campus into a gawker's paradise. Drove of students, among them flocks of camerabearers, took carefree Sunday strolls along the Red Cedar River, no doubt pointing out their favorite submerged landmark.

The storm spurred many others into action. National Guardsmen, military police, law enforcement trainees, Red Cross workers — all of them responded with dedication and compassion, as they have been trained to do.

The everyday man and woman, though, responded compassionately also. Doors, larders, pocket-books and hearts were opened to the refugees.

For those people who stood on their front steps and watched the murky, mucky water move slowly but irreversibly toward their homes and apartments, the fear felt and the losses incurred were very real.

People have responded well, but all of us must remember that after the flood has swirled away there will still be plenty of assistance needed — like the lending of a hand, a dollar, a place to sleep or a comforting shoulder to those who have suffered at the whim of nature.

Truth about poverty shown

A New York television station recently discovered that college students are taking pornographic movie roles to work their way through college. It is another instance of hard times changing the country.

The young woman interviewed on camera for this report said it was her way of fighting the recession. Money had become scarce at home. If she was to continue her education, she headed work. The pornographic movie business needs actresses. Thus, two needs had coincided in bad times and now she toils at passion under the camera's eye after a hard day with her classes and test tubes. Yes, she had talked it over with her mother. Not with her father.

If I had been her father, I would have preferred that she talk it over with me, too, at least before appearing on television to tell the rest of New York that I hadn't been consulted. I would have counseled against it and suggested that she try waiting on tables, instead, as college students used to do in depressions of yore.

In any case, the young woman has made an interesting adaptation to economic reality. If her producer, who was also interviewed, can be believed, other college students are also working their way through school by simulating ecstasy. Who knows? Pornographic movies could be the biggest boon to education since the football scholarship.

About the same time this report appeared on television, a middle-aged middle-class father of nine children published on the Op-Ed Page of The New York Times a poignant description of the desperation of being out of work for the first time in his life with no prospects of employment.

It was hard to read that piece without a private interior shudder of fear. Mortgage-payment time running out, savings gone, unpayable insurance premiums coming due, duns from the grocer, anxiety in the children's faces, scowls at the bank and no

Super K lays egg

"Henry, Cambodia is falling, Vietnam is in shambles. This is a job for Superman. Go to a telephone booth and put on your blue suit."

"I'm not going to do it, Nancy. I'm fed up with being Superman."

"How can you say that, Henry? The whole world is depending on you to save it."

"Nobody appreciates anything I do any more. I'm going to stay home and play dominos."

"You can't sulk, Henry. Have you ever seen Superman refuse to go on a mission?"

"That's easy for you to say. But Superman never had to deal with Sen. Jackson or the Democrats on The Hill. He never had to explain detente or what it means to lose our credibility amongst our allies. I've had it, Nancy. I'm hanging up the suit."

"You can't do it, Henry. What would President Ford do without you? What would President Thieu do without you?"

"It's no good, Nancy. It was fun being Superman when I could fly over Hanoi and bomb the city and mine the harbors and make incursions into Cambodia. But what good is it to be Superman if I can't punish anyone for violating the Paris peace accords? Sure I'll go in the phone booth and I'll put on the damn suit. What do I do then?"

"You'll think of something, Henry. You always do. Maybe you could deliver more tanks and guns and planes to South Vietnam so they could stop the onslaught of godless communism."

"You need money for that—$700 million to be exact. Where am I going to get it? Congress won't give it to me, and we can't find any more accounting errors at the Pentagon. I'm sorry, Nancy, I'm sticking around the house for a while."

"It's not like you to be so down, Henry. The trouble is that you've been wearing street clothes and no one has been taking you seriously. If you put on your Superman outfit and went up on The Hill, Congress would give you anything you wanted."

"You think so?"

"I'm sure of it, Henry. When you fly over the Capitol and land on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee's windmill, they'll have no choice but to vote you all the military power you need to convince the North Vietnamese they made a big mistake when they underestimated the will of the Congress working on Indochina policy

A common complaint against Congress, when it acts on foreign affairs, is that it seeks power without responsibility. It snipes at the President's foreign policy, the critics say, and legislates restrictions; but it does not offer or take responsibility for a genuine alternative policy.

There is something to that criticism, historically, though perhaps not so much as executive apologists would have us believe. Congress can have a healthy impact even if it exercises only a checking negative on foreign policy. A recent example was the act of barring U.S. military action in Indo-China after Aug. 15, 1973; without it, the executive might well have sent American forces back into the conflict.

But at this moment Congress is attempting something more complicated.

That is to work out a policy, responsibly, to limit the trauma of the ending in Indochina.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee's meeting with President Ford the other day was the visible symbol of a changed relationship. It was said to be the first such visit to the White House in 50 years. And it was more than ceremonial: accounts of the meeting say the President listened closely and seemed to see some problems in a new light.

Ordinarily Congress is not in a position to make detailed policy. It lacks adequate information, and there are too many different points of view. But in this special circumstance the congressional role is crucial.

For one thing, the Senate Committee confidence on the facts. It had just sent staff members to Saigon, and their report was being read by executive officials. It did not trust the information coming from the rigid U.S. Ambassador to Saigon, Graham A. Martin. For another, there was a remarkable degree of unity among committee members, across the political spectrum.

The senators were convinced that Ford's policy, as stated in his message to Congress last week, was utterly unrealistic. They did not believe the talk about building a position of strength for Saigon with military aid. They were convinced there was an immediate problem of evacuating Americans — and that not being done about it. Questioning the White House meeting brought conditions that there was still no real evacuation plan.

After the meeting, Ford ordered evacuation to begin. The Senate Committee agreed to give the President more primary to that end, and a degree of discretion to use troops in the last resort to save Americans.

One advantage that Congress has dealing with this bitter ending is that ego is not involved in the failed policy. Kissinger's is. He seems frozen in that position of "military stability" before negotiations.

The time is running out for negotiating. Realistic reports from Saigon speak of weeks; a few weeks.

No one should pretend that there is an easy way out of the disaster.

Negotiations between a New Saigon government and the Communists could preserve some future opportunity for political competition in South Vietnam.

Communists would obviously rather move into Saigon by force, with all administrative and economic and social difficulties that would result; they prefer to approach power through coalition, and that means negotiating.

It is in America's strong interest to encourage negotiations. Our own security would be less damaged if the war were brought to a political rather than a bloody military end, and there would be more hope for the Vietnamese closest to either to get out or to adjust to change.

But American influence for negotiation will have to come from Congress. Kissinger is too committed to his failed military policy and to Nguyen Van Thieu, who will leave if there are to be talks. The United States is therefore up to Thieu. Most South Vietnamese politicians are ready to negotiate now. We should get out of their way.

Those of us brought up on President government may find it odd to talk of congressional leadership in foreign policy. Congress is so often dismissed as a body. But compared to what? Compared to record of our Presidents and secretaries of state in Indochina, Congress shines. It deserves our trust the more if it takes responsibility in these last difficult days.

Parking hassle

Prohibiting student parking in faculty parking lots is certainly a reasonable way of assuring that teachers will not be without parking facilities due to the scores of student automobiles on campus.

Ticketing a car in one of these three-quarters empty lots at 5:45 p.m. on a Friday evening, however, is certainly the work of some unthinking half-wit who has trouble distinguishing between the practical purpose behind the institution of parking codes and the mere words that appear in his manual.

At any rate, I certainly hope whoever thinks he or she is working on commission never rises to a position in the police department where judgment is a factor in anything more significant than bringing parking "criminals" to justice.

Save students

Aside from the orphans, another tragedy in Vietnam we've a chance to correct is the tragedy of the Vietnamese students.

Though our more than $150 billion in war costs has caused the monstrous destruction of Vietnam, pitifully little has seemed to reach the schools. After more than 20 years in Vietnam, the country's educational level is still only around fourth grade, not even as high as in North Vietnam. Again, bombs and guns have taken precedence over the future of the world's young people.

Prospective university students, especially, have been victims of Thieu's oppressive regime here. They have not been allowed to study abroad because they simply cannot afford the exorbitant bribes or exert the necessary political pull.

Let's give these students perhaps the last chance in their life. These students could be patriotic and talented assets to our country.

Let's give these innocent victims of the war a chance to develop their minds in relative freedom and democracy and contribute to the welfare of the world — and not to the welfare of further oppression and militancy behind the falling bamboo curtain.

Our Congress and our President must empower the American embassy in Saigon to quickly grant student visas to as many people as are qualified.

The Vietnamese government must, at the same time, be forced to abolish the arbitrary student quotas and abandon ordinary bribes for student exit visas and passports.

Perhaps thousands of high school juniors and seniors could be rescued too, if high schools throughout the United States would each adopt one or two Vietnamese students.

The students in Vietnam are of the few people here who really miss the intellectual freedom of democracy, but they are the innocent victims who will suffer the most under the oppression of the South Vietnamese government.

In the best humanitarian spirit of MSU students, perhaps you can do something to help.

Change primary

I read with great interest the April editorial on state primaries. As author of the original law establishing Michigan's presidential primary, I am in full agreement that the concept of a state primary affords Michigan citizens a valuable mechanism for participating in the presidential nomination process. At the same time, however, it is essential that Michigan's primary election law be reformed to eliminate "cross-voting."

In order to maintain the viability of a two party system, the primary law must be revised to require that Democrats and Republicans choose their own respective nominees for public office. As has been clearly demonstrated, a large cross-vote muddies the entire electoral process by allowing the incumbent party to exploit the opposition and distort its platform.

I have therefore introduced legislation which would provide that persons, when they register, be given the option of stating a party preference. Those already registered would be afforded this same option by mail. Voters would be able to change their party registration prior to the primary registration deadline. However, persons who had not declared a party preference at that time would not be allowed to vote in the partisan primary election.

After careful examination of this legislation, I am confident that you will find it will act as a strong incentive for citizens to more clearly monitor the activities of candidates of all political parties.

Breakfast program benefits children

By CASSANDRA SPATLING
State News Staff Writer

Every school day morning at 7 a.m. a green, four - door Satellite with three or four MSU students in it heads out I - 496 to the West Side Drop - In Center in Lansing.

The car pulls into a paved area that is half parking lot and half basketball court. Some 50 young children await the familiar vehicle and help the students unload boxes of cereal, juice, milk, jelly and other things that go into the preparation of the free breakfast they receive each school day morning.

The center, an old recreation center, is conveniently located on the corner of Kalamazoo Street and Butler Boulevard, where buses pick up children to take them to their respective schools.

The free breakfast program, which has been in operation since 1971, is sponsored by the Office of Black Affairs with the help of the Center for Urban Affairs.

Seconds after the volunteers cleared off the wooden picnic - type tables in the Center of a line of eager children call out their orders. "Give me some Sugar Smacks," said one little girl with beaming brown eyes, so short and tiny it was hard to imagine where she would put the cereal and slices of toast that she took from the table.

William Griffen, 136 Snyder Hall, has been the director of the program since September. He said he doesn't mind getting up every morning because he knows he is doing something worthwhile.

"We are establishing a basis for communication between the Lansing community and black students at MSU and we are providing an important service to the children," he said.

Griffen said that a good breakfast is vital to a child's performance in the classroom.

"You can't expect a kid to get a decent grade in school if he's hungry," Griffen said.

He said the program was patterned after the Black Panthers' free breakfast program and originally designed for low - income children, but that all children are welcome.

"No child is turned away," Griffen said. Cheryl is an 11 - year - old sixth grader who said she's glad they serve breakfast at the center.

"Sometimes I don't have time to eat breakfast at home," she said.

Diana is 5 years old, but she will "be 6 pretty soon." She said she just comes for the hot chocolate "because sometimes it's cold outside."

Griffen said the cost per day of the program is about $23.

The program is funded by donations from various individuals and organizations on campus. Griffen did not want to say how much each organization or individual contributed because he does not want to minimize the value of any of the donations given.

"We appreciate everything from a penny on up," Griffen said. Broderick McGrady, 237 Phillips Hall, is one of the volunteers who goes out every morning.

He said that it is a good program but more volunteers are needed. "Then there wouldn't be a burden on such a few individuals," he said.

There are about 15 regular volunteers but only three or four go out per day.

Griffen said that sometimes it can be a bit of a strain on him but the kids make it worth it.

"They are a lot of fun," he said.

The kids obviously enjoy him too. He is often challenged to a game of pool or basketball after breakfast when the kids are waiting for their buses. Last Valentine's Day he said he was given about 50 Valentine's Day cards by the children.

Justice Kavanagh dies of cancer

ANSING (UPI) — Thomas M. Kavanagh, who rose from a town clerk to justice of the Michigan Supreme Court, died Saturday night of cancer. He was 65.

Officials said Kavanagh died at St. Lawrence Hospital in Lansing shortly before 7:30 p.m. He had been listed in critical condition since his readmittance to the hospital Friday.

Hospital officials said Kavanagh's family was at his side when he died. Kavanagh's wife, Agnes, died last June of cancer.

Griffith poured in from those who knew and served with Kavanagh since he first entered statewide political office in 1954, when he became state attorney general. He then went on to serve 18 years on the high court bench, three terms as chief justice.

"He had a long and dedicated career of public service," said Gov. George Romney. "As chief justice, he provided effective leadership in providing greater efficiency and effectiveness in the court system. He was instrumental in the movement toward state financing of the courts."

Kavanagh received a letter from President Ford just hours before his death Saturday.

"You have a great many friends and admirers around the nation," Ford said. "And you have long been admired for your great spirit and courage."

Kavanagh was one of five Democrats on the high court bench. He began his 18th year as a Supreme Court justice this year.

Kavanagh was first elected to the Supreme Court in 1957 for an eight - year term that was later extended to 1966. He was re - elected to the bench in 1966 for another eight - year term. In 1974, he was re - elected once more by 1.3 million votes, the largest amount ever received by a state Supreme Court justice.

He was first selected chief justice in January 1964. He was again chosen chief justice in 1971 and 1973. His last term as chief justice ended in December, when Justice Thomas Giles Kavanagh, who is no relation, assumed the post.

Nobody wants to admit he's the common man, ordinary man. Every man thinks he's above average; that his mission in life is more important than the average man. Then there's the priest. He recognizes that he's a common man. He must be a humble man. He must believe that he is doing the work of Jesus which isn't always dramatic and headline grabbing. Slashed budget may force course cuts

By MICHELE BURGEN
State News Staff Writer

MSU students may find fewer courses and sections to choose next year if the University is forced to make cutbacks in its operating budget, said a panel of faculty members at a meeting of the MSU chapter of the American Assn. of University Professors Thursday night.

preparing two budgets in anticipation of reduced legislative appropriations, entailing operations under 4 and 8 per cent cutbacks.

Joseph Adney, chairman of the Dept. of Mathematics, said with a 4 per cent budget cut, nearly 1,000 students of the approximately 8,500 students enrolled in math courses each term would be forced to delay taking those courses.

Nearly 1,700 students would be affected each term in the event of an 8 per cent cut, he said.

load will increase," he said.

Some sections of courses would be first to go in the Dept. of Chemistry, said Jack Kinsinger, professor and chairman, though he emphasized a 4 per cent cut would not threaten faculty layoffs. But an 8 per cent cut would necessitate dropping 12 teaching assistants, and cause supplies and manpower to be spread thinly.

Franklin Platt, associate professor of humanities, complained that staff reductions would force more students into already large classes, and that an 8 per cent budget cut would entail the possibility of axing entire courses.

More of the expense for supplies would be on the shoulders of students if the art department is forced to cut its budget, said James Victoria, associate professor of art.

"On the one hand we are being asked to service more people, and on the other hand we are being asked to cut resources," he said.

In the discussion that followed, sentiment ran high on the prospect of convincing the legislature to rescue the cause of higher education in Michigan.

"We have to be mindful of the context in which the legislature appropriates money to the University," said Pauline Adams, panel moderator and asst. professor of American thought and language. The legislature, she said, must also deal with hard-pressed social agencies all over the state as well as endeavor to balance state's budget.

"Ultimately, the people of Michigan will have to support programs (of higher education), and to see that the programs are rescued," one member of the audience said.

State Sen. Earl Nelson, D-Lansing, said "the legislature was anything the citizens tell them to do."

"We do not have the climate to keep from making the necessary cutbacks we will have to make. We have a climate where everybody is cutting expenses. The State of Michigan is

Ford, Kissinger Viet remarks recall bitterness of Nixon years

By PETER LISAGOR
Chicago Daily News

WASHINGTON — The United States has traveled a long and tortuous course in Southeast Asia and gone nowhere. The road has twisted agonizingly from pacification to Vietnamization to evacuation toward an end that many Americans feared and predicted, and the end is a cul-de-sac.

Vietnamese. What made him sick, he said, is that the tragedy could have been avoided if the United States had not failed to meet its commitment to the South Vietnamese.

Not even Kissinger could buy that proposition. He came before the editors the next day to say "we shall not forget who supplied the arms which North Vietnam used to make a mockery of its signature on the Paris Accords."

Kissinger went on to say the Vietnam debate "has run its course. The time has come for restraint and compassion. The Administration has made its case. Let all now abide by the verdict of the Congress — without recrimination or vindictiveness."

"We now hear, and have for several years, that suffering is prolonged by American involvement, that injustice is perpetuated by American inaction, that defense spending is wasteful at best and produces conflict at worst, that American intelligence activities are immoral and that the necessary confidentiality of diplomacy is a plot to deceive the public."

Kissinger would have his audience believe that the above attitudes fester in this sinkhole of morbid thoughts when in fact relatively few people hold them.

"When one ventures away from Washington into the heart of America," he said, no doubt thinking of his excursions to Indianapolis, Des Moines, Topeka, Denver, rather than Cairo, Jerusalem and Damascus, "one is struck by the confidence, the buoyancy and the lack of any corrosive cynicism."

Cavanaugh says cities in grave peril

CAVANAUGH

By PAT NARDI
State News Staff Writer
Jerome Cavanaugh is tired of hearing mayors get blamed for the increasing problems and decay of major cities.

The former Detroit mayor told 40 students Thursday night that state and federal governments are the real culprits of inner city problems in a speech sponsored by James Madison College.

"I think it's misleading and even dangerous to think that a mayor can control the destiny of a city. We begin to think of the mayor as the city itself," Cavanaugh said.

Central cities are in such grave peril today that conditions are worse today than they were during the riots of 1967 and 1968, he said. He thinks it may take another riot to make government officials take notice of city problems.

"Without help from state and national government and the private sector, local officials cannot begin to meet these problems. We need priority attention from state and federal officials — attention in the form of money," he said.

Cavanaugh said a "self-fulfilling prophecy of failure" exists about poverty programs and Model Cities programs because the government allocates so little money for them. When the programs prove ineffective, officials say in effect, "see, I told you they wouldn't work."

He said the growth of suburbs drains cities like Detroit of a sense of community and causes central cities to become ghettos of black, poor and aged people. He criticized the press for highly exaggerating the causes of the exodus to suburbs, and maintained that suburbs had their share of pursesnatching and burglaries.

He argued that all mayors should be elected on a partisan basis so they would be more responsive to the public. Chicago provides better service than Detroit does, because Mayor Richard Daley is elected on a partisan basis, Cavanaugh said.

Educating and lobbying are becoming more important activities for a mayor than his job as "urban handyman", he said. "The most important duties of any public official is to plead the cause of our cities. There is constant bartering and trading to meet goals," he said.

As an example, Cavanaugh told of negotiations with Chrysler Corp. during his term in office in which he granted them a tax break in return for building their Huber Avenue Foundry in Detroit instead of Sterling Heights as Chrysler originally planned. This produced 2,500 jobs for Detroit's lower income people, he said proudly.

The former mayor also criticized President Ford for trying to sink more money into trouble spots in Southeast Asia.

"It seems inconceivable to me that we would have public officials including the President of the United States standing in front of Congress to ask for a billion dollars, or nearly that much, to prop up a regime which cost us $150 billion already," Cavanaugh said.

When asked why he had not run for a third term as mayor, Cavanaugh said he decided to spend more time with his four sons, even though polls indicated he might win re-election. Cavanaugh, who now lives in Ann Arbor and practices law, said he is still interested in politics though he is not planing any specific political activity, that might change in five years.

NCAA probing grid program

By STEVE STEIN
State News Sports Writer

MSU's athletic program is back in the headlines. President Wharton tersely announced at a regular meeting of the board of trustees Friday that the National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (NCAA) is conducting an investigation into "certain policies and practices" of the MSU football program.

Here is the full text of the statement Wharton read:

"I wish to inform the board of trustees that the NCAA has asked my cooperation in an investigation it is conducting into certain policies and practices of MSU's intercollegiate football program.

"The enforcement program of the NCAA is a cooperative undertaking involving individual member institutions and allied conferences, working through the NCAA.

"In the spirit of the program, we will, of course, fully cooperate in the investigation. I am directing appropriate officials of the University to study the issues involved and supply me with full information.

"Until that activity is completed, the University will make no additional comment with respect to the investigation and allegations."

Published reports have said that the Big Ten is conducting a similar investigation of MSU which began last summer. MSU coaches and officials have followed Wharton's directive, refusing to comment about the specifics of the investigation which is expected to be completed in June.

Athletic Director Burt Smith is unavailable for comment as he is still recovering in Ingham Medical Center from an ulcer operation early last week.

"You read the announcement. You heard the announcement. It came from the President of Michigan State University. That's pretty high. He said there would be no comment and there will be no comment," said MSU football coach Denny Stolz.

Rumors of recruiting violations at MSU have been circulating since last spring. In a State News story of March 29, 1974, MSU Big Ten prep All-Americans. In Stolz' press conference April 7 before the start of spring practice, he firmly denied knowledge of illegal re-

"I don't know of one single case of the 200 kids we've recruited where illegal recruiting was used."

MSU football coach Denny Stolz
April 7, 1975

faculty representative John Fuzak, who was elected NCAA president this January, denied rumors that MSU was under investigation by the NCAA or the Big Ten for recruiting violations.

"The (Big Ten) commissioner said he had heard these rumors and I said I certainly wanted — in fact, hoped and expected — that he would investigate us fully," Fuzak said in the story. "I'm confident our football coach and staff have adhered to the rules."

Two of MSU's prize recruits, running back Ted Bell of Youngstown, Ohio, and end Larry Bethea of Newport News, Va., were the objects of the rumors then.

And some of the current speculation concerns Bell and Bethea. Both the Big Ten and the NCAA have talked to the high school coaches of the two recruiting practices by his staff. "I don't know of one single case of the 200 kids that we've recruited where illegal recruiting was used," said Stolz, who is entering his third season as head coach.

Stolz and his staff were able to sign an outstanding group last year, which included four highly sought high school All-Americans.

The young Spartan squad posted a 7-3-1 record last season and achieved national prominence with a stunning 16-13 upset victory here over Ohio State.

In addition to the object of the investigation, speculation will certainly center in the coming weeks on who initiated it. Ohio State coach Woody Hayes, whose name was mentioned before when the rumors first circulated, is once again being mentioned as a possible source.

Just after announcing Friday that MSU's football program was under investigation by the NCAA, President Wharton threw out the first before MSU's Big Ten home opener against Minnesota. Wharton is talking with Spartan coach Danny Litwhiler.

Batsmen ease past rain to take over first place

By MIKE LITAKER
State News Sports Writer

President Wharton bounced his two pitches up to the plate in pregame ceremonies Friday and then MSU bounced some gopher balls of its own over the outfield fence to take a rain-shortened 13-11 slugfest win over Minnesota.

It could not have come at a better time, as MSU took over sole possession of first place in the Big Ten race, a half game ahead of Michigan and Wisconsin.

Friday's second game and Saturday's doubleheader with Iowa at Kobs Field were all rained out and will not be rescheduled.

Senior righthander Duane Bickel coasted through the first two innings of the Minnesota contest before the Gophers erupted for six runs in the third, capped by a two-run homer by third baseman Bob Bolf.

Bickel almost needed a canoe to get out to the mound in the third as the water rose in the field faster than the pitcher's earned run average.

After over an hour delay in the bottom of the third, Gopher pitcher Steve Comer completed his walk to Mike Fricke to load the bases for MSU catcher Rick Seid. Seid did not waste any time bringing the Spartans back into the ball game as the Oak Park native cranked a bases loaded blast over the left-centerfield fence for his third home run of the year.

Rightfielder Al Weston followed Seid's act one pitch later with a solo homer, his second of the season, over the same stretch of fence.

Scott Evans replaced Bickel on the mound in the fourth and was touched for three runs. But Evans was in the right place to get the win and raise his record to 3-1 when his mates paraded home seven runs in the fourth off Comer and reliever Ed Erickson. Todd Hubert worked the final two innings for MSU.

After Joe Palamara had singled for the third straight hit, shortstop Terry Hop lifted his first homer of the year over the leftfield fence as the Spartans sent seven men to the plate without an out.

Gopher coach Dick Siebert mercifully lifted the charitable Comer before he could serve up another tater pitch as he brought in Erickson, who served Howie Schryer a two-run double to score Pat Simpson and Amos Hewitt with the game winners. Hewitt wound up with three hits and Schryer and two doubles in the game that was halted because of rain after 5½ innings.

MSU went 14-29 in batting during the contest. "You wonder what's wrong with your own pitching in a game like that, but then you have to wonder about them too," Comer has been their ace for the last three years," said MSU asst. coach Frank Pellerin.

Coach Danny Litwhiler couldn't have been happier with the way Schryer, Hewitt and Weston broke loose in pacing the MSU hitting attack, collecting seven RBIs between them.

"I wasn't surprised but I was pleased," said Litwhiler. "When you have a guy like Hewitt you can't give up on him. He's not a .185 hitter so you've gotta believe he can hit."

Weston said the ball was carrying well in the cold, damp weather.

"We've (Schryer and Hewitt and Weston) been hitting the ball right at people but they just weren't dropping in," Weston explained. "I struck out about five times in the first five games in Florida. Then Skip told me to move back in the batter's box and get a little longer look at the ball. Since then I've been hitting."

Dill leads Spartans in Ohio track meet

MSU's men's track team opened its outdoor season this past weekend with an impressive showing in the 38th Ohio State Relays in Columbus, Ohio.

The Spartans came away with three first-place finishes in the two-day meet, which featured over 60 schools from across the country.

Senior sprinter Marshall Dill, who sat out the indoor season because of academic ineligibility, made his year's debut with a 9.3 win in the 100-yard dash in addition to turning in an electrifying 20.1 anchor leg on the 880-yard relay to cop third place for the Spartans.

Earning the other top finishes for MSU were the distance medley and four-mile relay teams. Herb Lindsay provided the heroics in both of those races. The Spartans shuttle relay team of Paul Zolinsky, Dave Howard, Todd Murphy and Howard Neely finished second to the Air Force Academy with a 58.2 timing. Air Force posted a 57.8.

SOFTBALL SQUAD SPLITS PAIR

Women netters demolish rivals

By ANN WILLIAMSON
State News Sports Writer

The MSU women's tennis team doesn't give up easily.

The Spartans were determined to bounce back after their season-opening loss to Ohio State, and bounce back they did, crushing Big Ten rivals Indiana Friday, 8-1, and Wisconsin, 7-2, Saturday.

The weekend sweep lifted the Spartans to a 2-1 season record, and coach Elaine Hatton now believes her team has both the spirit and ability to continue that winning streak.

"The girls are playing better with each meet," Hatton said. "I thought the loss to Ohio State would have depressed them so much that it would show in the rest of their meets, but it didn't. They've got a lot of confidence and are playing very well."

Senior Sue Selke, who lost her first singles match in her three-year MSU career last weekend, made sure it didn't happen again as she overpowered her Indiana and Wisconsin opponents in the No. 1 singles position, 6-1, 6-1 and 6-1, 6-2 respectively.

In the No. 2 position, MSU's Allison Scruggs was defeated by Wisconsin, 6-3, 5-7, 6-7, but did manage to pick up a win against Indiana, 6-1, 6-3.

Diana D'Angelo had an outstanding weekend, shutting Wisconsin's Wendy Bronson, 6-0, 6-0 and winning her match against Indiana, 6-1, 6-3. D'Angelo and Selke also won matches in the No. 1 doubles position, defeating Indiana 6-3, and Wisconsin, 7-5, 3-6, 6-1.

The MSU women's softball team was handed its first loss of the season Saturday afternoon at Demonstration Hall field, bowing to Purdue 9-5, but did find success against rival Grand Valley in a 12-0 shutout.

The second game of the scheduled doubleheader with Grand Valley was cancelled because of rain and wet ground.

The weekend split brought the Spartans' record to 5-1, coach Mark Snively predicting even better things to come in Spartan bats can get hot.

"I was very pleased with the Grand Valley game, especially everyone hitting so well and so determined to win," Snively said. "But it wasn't just the weather that hurt us in the Purdue game. Our bats went silent and the errors eventually cost us the game. I'm not too worried about our hitting yet. It's early in the season, and I think our hitting will come through."

Junior Gloria Beckford was the winning pitcher for Spartans against Grand Valley, allowing only four hits and striking out three. Beckford also had an outstanding day at the plate, helping the team's cause with four hits and three runs batted in.

Sophomore Gwen White took the loss in the Purdue game, but did hit the first home run of the year for the Spartans in the second inning.

MSU moved to more accommodating conditions Saturday, whipping Northwestern 8-1 at the Lansing Tennis Club courts in Okemos.

"When we play at Jenison, we really have what you would call the home court advantage," Drobac said of the poor playing surface.

The conditions must have been tough for the Badgers, who will be hosting the Big Ten meet in their $3 million A.C. Neilson facility in May.

Larry Stark, switching between No. 1 and No. 2 singles with fellow junior Rick Zabor, came up a big winner, scoring two victories in singles and two wins in doubles with partner Tom Gudelsky, a sophomore.

The weekend match against Wisconsin was especially pleasing to MSU No. 4 singles man Lee Woyahn. Woyahn, a freshman, was the third-place finisher in the Wisconsin state high school championships last year.

Senior Dick Callow, a transfer student from Eastern Michigan, scored a pair of singles victories and combined with freshman Kevin McNulty to win the decisive third set in the last doubles match against the Badgers.

MSU came back with three goals, but still trailed, 10-5 at half.

The second half opened with more of the same — five Wesleyan goals before MSU could come up with one.

With the game well out of reach, the fourth quarter saw Spartan coach Fred Hartman a chance to substitute liberally and give his players experience against one of the better teams in the league.

Attackmen Steve Wilson and Ron Hebert each fired in a pair of goals, and Hebert also added one assist.

The stickmen now have two days to regroup before they meet Bowling Green in Ohio Wednesday.

Bowling Green finished in first place in the league last year.

There was supposed to be a baseball doubleheader at Kobs Field Saturday, but as can be seen from this scene Sunday morning, the flooded field was more suitable for a swim meet.

Women tracksters, golfers roll

No matter where it goes, the MSU women's track team keeps right on winning, and winning big.

At the University of Illinois Invitational meet in Champaign Saturday, the Spartans preserved their undefeated season by overpowering seven teams to win the event with 168 points. Illinois State turned in the next best showing with 97 points.

"Some of our individual performances may not have looked as strong as they usually are, but I'm sure that was due to the weather," MSU coach Nell Jackson explained. "I'm tremendously pleased with our team performance. I think the girls did quite well despite the bad weather."

Karen Dennis finished first for the Spartans in the 100 and 220-yard dashes with times of 11.3 and 25.7 seconds, while teammate

Linda Porter turned in her best performance of the year in the long jump, taking first place with a mark of 17 feet 4 inches.

The MSU women's golf team didn't let the bad weather dampen their determination to win either as the Spartans took first place at the five-team Central Michigan Invitational in Mount Pleasant Friday and Saturday.

MSU finished the 27-hole meet with 523 strokes. Central Michigan took second with 561.

Junior June Oldman took second for the Spartans with 83-45-128. Freshman Karen Escott finished close behind with 86-44-130, taking third place among the 18 individual competitors.

Six-run inning beats Bengals

DETROIT (UPI) — Ron Blomberg capped a six-run seventh inning by hitting a three-run home run and Rudy May pitched a three-hitter Sunday to provide the New York Yankees with a 7-1 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

The key blow of the big seventh, however, was not Blomberg's second homer of the season but rather a two-run, tie-breaking pinch-hit double sliced to leftfield by Ed Herrmann.

Red Cross helps local residents evacuate flood-stricken homes

"At 3:30 a.m. Sunday, there was a knock on the door and I knew what it was," he said. "I looked down the stairs and the furniture was crashing around the family room as the water came rushing in."

More than 150 National Guardsmen were called out Sunday morning to help control sightseers, gawkers and looters.

Cedar View Apartments, 1390 E. Grand River Ave., were partially evacuated Saturday night as water started to seep into two of the apartments.

One of the two buildings of Americana Apartments on Victor Street were completely evacuated when a plumbing main broke because of the flooding. About 120 people were forced to find temporary shelter because the electricity had to be turned off.

By Sunday morning water was lapping at the foundations of Van Hoosen Hall, but residents were not worried.

"We don't have a basement, and our windows on the north side are 20 inches off the ground," said John Gradowski, asst. adviser of the on-campus apartment complex.

The water also came close to Brody Complex, but no mechanical problems or flooding were reported there. The only indications of anything unusual were the signs posted on doors warning students to stay away from the water because of the danger of contracting hepatitis.

Residents of Cedar Greens

Apartments, 1135 E. Michigan Ave., were not worried, even though the water came within a few feet of their doors.

"As far as I can tell, only a few apartments are even getting damp," Tom Collings, as MSU senior said. "Mine is really close to the flooding, but it's bone dry. Still, I've got all my valuables piled up in the closets and cupboards."

Collings said that the residents of the apartments in the most danger were not home.

"One group moved to a friend's place, just in case," he said. "The others went home over the weekend. They should have quite a shock when they get back."

Rick Bohn, an MSU senior, and Jeff Grant, a graduate student, live in a luxurious paneled duplex at 810 Hicks Drive, near University Village.

"I think four albums and a couple aquariums are the extent of our losses," Bohn said. "We weren't here on Saturday, but the owner saw the flood coming at about 1 p.m. and he moved our things to the upper floors."

The owner of the house, who asked to remain unidentified, said he was waiting to see if insurance would cover the damages. He said his losses were sure to run into thousands of dollars.

"I imagine the paneling and carpeting in the basement will be completely ruined," Grant said. "Silt and garbage are already all over the lower levels, and the house will probably have to be fumigated."

Grant said the only things he took from the house were his books and his underwear, which he carried out in an overloaded green canoe.

"It was unnerving," he said. "Water in the basement was up to my chest and I saw my water bed floating around. What really got to me was the rat I saw on the stairway. I had to kill it with a broomstick. That really made my stomach queasy."

James Bibbs, an asst. MSU track coach, lives at 1308 Lilac Ave. near University Village and in the same neighborhood as Grant and Bohn. Bibbs said he started moving his wife and his six children out of the house on Saturday afternoon.

"It's a funny thing looking at your house and knowing the only way to get to it is by boat. At least I have lakeside property now, which is something I've always wanted," he said.

MSU wrings dry from flood damage

the basement proved to be only a faulty garbage disposal.

"For the most part, we've been keeping our fingers crossed," said Howard Wilson, MSU director of building services.

"Damages appear to be minimal. I've been through all buildings this (Sunday) morning and everything seems to be working," he said.

"For the most part, we've been keeping our fingers crossed," said Howard Wilson, MSU director of building services.

"Damages appear to be minimal. I've been through all buildings this (Sunday) morning and everything seems to be working," he said.

Fear that students may have had to be evacuated from Brody complex and Shaw Hall proved unnecessary, as water levels in those areas never reached dangerous heights, said Gary North, coordinator of residence halls.

"If the water crests where it is projected, we'll be all right,"

North said. Stephen Naert, chief of the East Lansing Police Dept., said he "wouldn't even guess" at the extent of damages in the city.

Naert said no reliable information could be obtained at this time on damages suffered by houses or roads.

"Undoubtedly, there will be some damage (to the roads), but we won't be able to tell until the water recedes," Naert said.

Naert added that several roads will remain closed Monday, including Michigan Avenue, west of Harrison Road; Grand River Avenue, east of Park Lane; Kalamazoo Street between Harrison and Clippert Street; Marigold Avenue between Harrison and Kalamazoo, and Mt. Hope Road, west of Harrison and east of Hagadorn Road.

Jim Holcomb, director of emergency services for Lansing, said approximately 700 homes and 100 businesses carried the weight of the $50 million in damages and repairs could take as long as a year for some.

Holcomb added that no utilities will be turned on for homeowners until the water is down and the house electrical system has been checked out. Damages also included the loss of materials and scaffolding used in the reconstruction of the Michigan Avenue bridge.

"We had hoped to get it finished by November, but now we don't know," Holcomb said. The evacuation of the city, however, was very orderly, Holcomb said.

"There wasn't so much as an ankle sprain," he said.
