n an emotional address to the governnt National Assembly and people, Thieu used the United States of breaking its mises to support an anti-Communist renment in Saigon. Thus, he said, Presi-t Huong would immediately press the enemy to cease all acts of war and enter into peace negotiations.

But Thieu added that South Vietnam would fight on to defend the territory left to

The armed forces chief of staff, Gen. Cao Van Vien, spoke briefly, saying that his troops would continue fighting to "defend the homeland against the Communist aggressors."

At Clark Air Base in the Philippines, meanwhile, about 1,000 Americans and Vietnamese arrived in the largest such airlift yet from South Vietnam. U.S.

officials reportedly bypassed South Vietnamese immigration officials to put many of the Vietnamese aboard. Other Vietnamese evacuees arrived in Guam.

"I resign, but I do not desert." Thieu said in concluding his 11/2 hour address. "From this minute I will put myself at the disposal of the President and people. I will continue to stay close to you all in the coming task of national defense. Goodbye to you all."

His voice taut with emotion, Thieu devoted most of his speech to a scathing criticism of the United States.

"The United States has not respected its promises. It is unfair. It is inhumane. It is not trustworthy. It is irresponsible," he

Thieu said that former President Nixon had described all accords, including the Paris cease-fire agreement, as "pieces of paper" unless they were implemented, and had therefore verbally promised Saigon not only military and economic aid, but "direct and strong United States military intervention" in the event the Communists broke the accord. But then, Thieu said, Watergate undid

American resolve in aiding Vietnam, and Washington deserted its ally. Thieu and the people of his country have clearly resigned themselves to the fact that the end is at hand.

President Huong was sworn into office immediately at the assembly and government meeting Monday night in the Presidential Palace.

In a brief speech, Huong praised the achievements of the outgoing president, noted that he was assuming a great responsibility and called for national unity, saying, "United we live, divided we die."

Thieu's resignation was one of two major demands that Viet Cong have called prerequisites to any peace talks. The other is that all "American military men and advisors disguised as civilians" leave Viet-

In a broadcast Monday, the Viet Cong appeared to set a time limit for the latter as "two to three days, or in 24 hours, even." The broadcast was strongly threatening in tone, and implied that if the conditions were not quickly met, an all-out military drive on Saigon would be launched.

It was not immediately clear whether Thieu's resignation and the current partial evacuation of Americans would satisfy the Viet Cong demands.

House group OKs Viet aid bill

WASHINGTON (AP) - A $330 million military and economic bill for South Vietnam was approved by a House committee onday after Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger testified the oney is needed to negotiate "a humane solution" to the war.
Negotiations "would mean avoiding a battle for the city of igon, if that could effectively be done," Kissinger told the House propriations Committee.

He said military aid could also provide stability needed to acuate reprisal - threatened South Vietnamese officials as well Americans from that country.

Army Chief of Staff Gen. Frederick C. Weyand told the mmittee that South Vietnam is no longer militarily defensible, t said aid could prevent an abrupt and total takeover of the country by the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong.

After the testimony, the committee approved 36 to 15 an appropriations bill including $165 million military aid for South Vietnam and $165 million humanitarian aid. Kissinger refused to give details on what negotiations would

CARR LOBBIES FOR DISASTER AID

Residents size up flood situation

By JEFF MERRELL State News Staff Writer

Lansing area residents, businessmen and students began taking a long, sobering look yesterday at the end product of the area's worst flood in 28 years.

Among those were approximately 400 students who were forced out of their homes in an area bordered by Kalamazoo. 1-496 and Clemens Avenue, one of the hardest hit, and who remain in temporary housing waiting for water levels to recede.

National Weather Service officials said both the Grand and Red Cedar Rivers are expected to fall below flood levels by Wednesday morning. Both rivers had fallen about one-half foot by Monday evening. Meanwhile, in Washington, D.C., Gov.

Milliken's request for federal disaster aid has drawn no action from federal officials. U.S. Rep. Bob Carr, D-East Lansing, said he had been to the White House lobbying for that federal aid.

"I'm trying to speed it along as fast as possible. I'm fairly hopeful it will get through," Carr said.

A decision may not be reached, however, until late this week, he said.

Student residents of the Kalamazoo Street area, where water has reached the eaves of some homes, may also have to wait until late this week before they can get back to their houses, said Ingham County Commissioner Pat Ryan, D-Lansing.

"I'm guessing maybe 20 per cent of that neighborhood is students. Most of those got out with their possessions," he said. Ryan said he had worked two days evacuating people from the area. "We're going to have a tremendous shaded portions of the map are the areas that remain flooded. problem with housing," he warned. "The people displaced don't have anywhere to go.

"The (permanent) residents may have lost more materials, but most of them had relatives or friends to go to. Students, however, are already in a crammed housing situation and when they moved in with friends it just made the situation worse. "We've got serious problems."

Ryan also said the area has been well policed, and looting has been prevented.

In addition, the county would set up immunization clinics in the area as soon as the water recedes, to help prevent tetanus and hepatitis. Advice for cleaning will also be available from the county, he said.

Elsewhere, two Lansing residents drowned when their vinyl rafts were overcome by the raging torrents near the Dimondale dam.

Kirt Bayes, 17, and Barry Edgar, 23, were the only two victims of the flood in the immediate area so far.

On campus, MSU officials are waiting for the waters to move back from the present level before making any definite estimates on damages, which appear to be minimal.

"To say the damages would be $5, $500 or $5,000 at this time, I've got nothing to base it on," said Howard Wilson, director of building services.

Wilson said his crews were still fighting the elements, after the water rose temporarily Sunday night following a brief

Gilbert Lloyd, service supervisor for grounds maintenance, said damages on University property could be a problem.

"Beal Gardens is one of the greatest problems," he said.

About 4,000 stakes, valued at $5 apiece and used for identification of plants, might be lost, Lloyd said.

"They could be to Lake Michigan before you know it," he added.

Lloyd said there could also be a tremendous amount of cleanup of debris caught on fences and other objects, and deposited in currently flooded areas.

Also, rumors about the rapid spread of hepatitis and other diseases on campus are false, according to Dr. James Feurig, director of the University Health Center.

The Americana and Cedar View apartments both have flood problems under control, as water in the basement of Americana buildings and in two Cedar Viet apartments has already been removed.

The carpets in the two apartments were removed before any flooding occured.

Kroger's in the Frandor shopping center is the only business in that complex that remained closed Monday because of electrical problems stemming from flooding. Meridian Mall suffered no damage.

Student victims need flexibility

Provost John Cantlon asked the MSU faculty Monday to be aware of the problems facing students in flooded areas and, if possible, to postpone class assignments.

"Because of the severe flooding in the Lansing and East Lansing areas, the office of the provost is requesting instructional units to maintain maximum flexibility in dealing with students who suffered dislocations from the flood," Cantlon said. Students whose addresses are in areas with flood disruption may request faculty to give them extensions for completing class assignments."

Cantlon emphasized that he is not ordering faculty to comply. He said he is only asking faculty who may not be aware of the extent of flood damage to take note of student's problems.

"We know of cases where students lost everything they owned, where the student's books and notebooks were washed away in the flood," he said. "It is just a reminder to some of the faculty to take cognizance of this. I don't think we will have much trouble.'

The provosts office made a similar plea to MSU faculty during the student protests of the '60s and early '70s at MSU.

The flood continues to spread as the corner of Magnolia Avenue and Harton Street remain underwater for the second straight day. Strange objects are now floating around the are Someone's front doorstep heads for the I-496 freeway.

But the high court's refusal to set aside more recent rulings that find new ways to advance city - suburban school combinations indicated that its continuing adherence to the doctrine of the Detroit case was not going to be sweeping or inflexible.

Monday's action left standing a decision by the United States Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit upholding a proposal to merge the Indianapolis city school system with those of eight towns in adjacent Marion County and two small neighboring cities.

The appellate court had refused to include schools in a half dozen other outlying counties in such planned desegregation and had sent back to federal district court for a hearing the que whether a 1969 merger of the city and Marion County for governmental purposes did not require an educational merg

In the Louisville case, the Supreme Court also refused to a court of appeals decision in the sixth district that uphelda integration plan for the city schools and those of surn Jefferson County, plus still another outlying district if necessary

In this case, the appeals court got around the Supreme Detroit ruling by finding that both the city and county systems, taken separately, were discriminatory in segregation that a merger was thus possible.

The Louisville case is complicated by the fact that the Ken State Board of Education decided in February, long after dispute reached the high court, that the city and county sy should merge later this year.

Even if this move may eliminate the controversy metropolitan integration solution, Monday's Supreme Court will permit the final plan to cross still another line and include small adjacent Anchorage district, something the Detroit did not appear to permit.

In other action Monday, the court:

SAIGON (AP) - Nguyen Van Thieu stood for a decade at the center of a bloody conflict that finally consumed him.

A shrewd, calculating politician, Thieu manuevered himself up from bloody battlefields to political power during the turbulent mid - 1960's. Monday he resigned, after eight years as president, to pave the way for a possible political settlement of the Vietnam war with the Communist opposition.

Massive amounts of American aid, both military and economic, helped keep him in power, and he further entrenched himself by promoting key aides on the basis of loyalty rather competence. Some observers believe that he also tolerated a generous amount of corruption. But even before the Communists launched their final blitz, U.S. money and support were drying up, inflation was devastating his economy and critics were sniping at his power.

At the end, even Thieu's American allies joined in the near - universal chorus demanding that he get out. Many of his hand - picked generals held him personally to blame for setting off the final rout of his armies with the decision in March to abandon the central highlands without a fight.

Thieu made it clear in his

But even with his nation crumbling, Thieu tenaciously refused to quit his white concrete palace. When the Communist blitz had already gobbled up three - fourths of his country he declared, "We will fight to the last bullet, the last grain of rice."

Two Vietnamese students, Nguyen Quan and Pham Nghia sat in the office of August Benson, MSU foreign student adviser. Tuesday morning anxiously awaiting their chance to speak to him.

They were confused and bewildered. Hours earlier the president of their country resigned. With wives, husbands and children thousands of miles away, students want Benson to help them bring their families to the United States.

A third student, Thai Vi Ton Nu, quickly talked to a counselor who assured her that her student status was not in jeopardy.

Quan, 24, has not had a letter from home in over a month. His parents are merchants in Saigon, where he was born and raised.

After completing graduate work in economics at MSU, he had planned to return to Vietnam as a teacher of government economist. Now the situation is changed.

"Everything is in doubt," he said. "I'm just so confused."

Communist resentment of Vietnamese who have been studying in American universities would probably prevent him from returning to Saigon. He was a reservist in the South Vietnamese army from 1967 to 1972 while attending the University of Saigon. Nghia, 30, came to MSU last summer to work on a masters degree in microbiology. He went to talk to Benson when he heard of Thieu's resignation.

Nghia has been trying to convince his parents, retired civil servants, to come to the United States. They say in their letters that they are too old to leave home. His father is 70 and his mother is 62.

Ton Nu was formerly supported in the United States by her family, but is now selfsupporting with an assistantship from the Dept. of Romance Languages.

Only two of the 11 Vietnamese students at MSU are providing for their own education. The other have assistantships or scholarships from the Agency for International Development (AID).

Ton Nu is worried about her parents' safety because her father used to work for President Ngo Dinh Diem, who was overthrown in the 1963 Vietnam coup. If her family can safely exit Vietnam, she says she has no reason to return.

Three other Vietnamese students contacted prior to Thieu's resignation had an equally strong desire to be reunited with Nguyen Chan, 31, a masters degree candidate in agricultural engineering, has never seen his 17-month-old son.

Chan has not tried to bring his wife to the United States, though he would like to. He was an evacuee from Hanoi in 1954 when Ho Chi Minh came to power in the north.

"Right now I don't plan to go back," he said. "But I'll have to wait and see what happens."

The one hope I have is that the government might change its mind," Chan said. "I hope there is a mass evacuation."

Tran Xuan, another Vietnamese student with a wife and two daughters in Saigon, said that he tried unsuccessfully to bring his family to the United States six months ago. He said the Vietnamese government kept students' families in Vietnam so that the students would return.

Xuan, 39, hopes to return to Vietnam "if they allow me to live a peaceful life." He said he would prefer to live with his family and teach in the United States. "I don't want to live too long away from my family," he said.

Nguyen Lam, 28, with an assistantship in the Dept. of Physics, planned to return to Vietnam, but now prefers to live in the United States.

Lam received a letter from his mother last week. He said she is frightened and trying hard to get an exit visa.

"I think the great tragedy is not the orphans, but the people who may have to die because of their opposition to the Communists," he said.

"I view the Communist takeover a personal tragedy, but for the country as a whole it might be better than the war," he

Viet students visas extended

The U.S. government will not force Vietnamese and Cambodian students to return to their countries after their visas expire, said Gen. Chapman, commissioner of the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

August G. Benson, MSU's foreign student advisor and president of the National Assn. for Foreign Student Affairs met with Chapman last week. Benson sent the information he received to foreign student advisors across the country. Chapman assured Benson that students not authorized to work in the United States will now be allowed to work. Students who have graduated will be allowed to work for at least 18 months.

"Normally, practical training had to be related to the student's degree," Benson said. "But any kind of work will do."

Homer Higbee, asst. dean of student exchange, said a similar loosening of restrictions occured in 1960 and 1949 with the Communist takeovers of Cuba and

Dems face problems in '76

"THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT IS THE ENEMY!"

A North Carolina state senate committee has returned to a subcommittee the House passed bill that would eliminate North Carolina's presidential primary. This was a delaying action to let passions cool after George Wallace came here to testify against the bill, but it probably works in favor of those who want to kill off the primary in order to keep Wallace from winning it as he did in 1972.

They want to spare former Gov. Terry Sanford - a long - shot but determined presidential hopeful - the necessity of running in his home state against the formidable Wallace, and the need to do so became more apparent this week. Georgia's former Gov. Jimmy Carter, campaigning in North Carolina, said he planned to enter the state's primary, Wallace or no Wallace. Since Carter and Sanford are both of the moderate persuasion, that would probably insure an even bigger Wallace victory over divided opposition - the kind of situation he knows so well how to exploit.

This tarheel entanglement suggests the Democratic party's two continuing major problems. Its welter of comparatively minor candidates, combined with its proportional - representation rules for the proliferation of primaries those candidates must face, is not likely to produce a winner on an early ballot at the 1976 convention and, before and after that convention. Wallace is well - positioned, and appears eager, to play a big role in the ultimate ticket - making.

It happens, moreover, that however he may fumble on the economy and abdicate foreign policy to his secretary of state. President Ford continues to make a reasonably strong showing in the polls. Unemployment and inflation could yet wear down his strength, and he could fritter more of it away if he and Vice President Rockefeller actually try to make a central issue out of their charges that the Democrats, instead of the Vietnamese, are

But with the Democrats leaderless and facing a year of fratricidal struggle in the primaries, Ford may be a more imposing candidate than many now consider him.

Only consider, for example, one possible impact of a big public role for Wallace in the Democratic nominating fight. It could cause crucial losses among black voters swinging to a Ford - Rockefeller ticket.

Democrats should not forget that in 1952 and 1956 Dwight Eisenhower had strong black support. But in the last four presidential elections, the Republican party has offered the country Richard Nixon three times and Barry Goldwater once and sent black voters massively into the Democratic column in each election. A Ford

Rockefeller ticket might well be something else again, since Ford has put a black in his cabinet and is once again - after the stiff Nixon years - receiving black leaders and groups on a friendly basis in the White

So if blacks perceive the Democratic party as too strongly influenced by Wallace and his supporters, and even relatively small switches result in key states, they could throw the election to the Republicans.

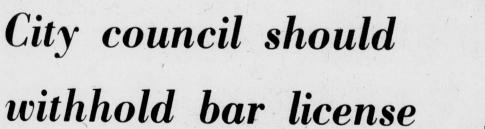

Williams of the Joint Center for P Studies, a black think - tank, sai speech last winter. "In those juris where there are large numbers of voters, Democratic candidates must blacks as an important part of Williams also said that blacks automatically perceive the enemy Republicans" and cited the 12 solid Baltimore precincts that gave Republicans Mathias 52 per cent of their w his 1974 victory over the well - n Democrat, Barbara Mikulski. If 26 w of the voters in some Harlem district for Ford, as they did for Jacob Javin Ramsey Clark last fall, they could strong impact on the outcome presidential race in New York.

Given such possibilities, and absent candidate (not Wallace) sweeping commanding position in the primare remote possibility— the likelihood the Democrats will make some kinds minute appeal to Edward Kenned which he will or will not accede. If he not, to whom could they then turn the old war horses, Hubert Humphre Edmund Muskie? Muskie just ran head and head with 45 to 45 per cent in a Harris Poll, and the supreme advantages over the a ced candidates of having no need to the primaries, plus an important pl chairman of the Senate Budget Com to keep him in the action. On balance position looks stronger than that Democrat, but wise men of that party count Hubert out - nor, lately, either.

Until the council can ensure absolute adherence to capacity limits, it should withhold this license for both bars. If this requires more frequent police and fire inspections and further court action, the city must take those

Bottle bill

If certain legislators like nonreturnable bottles and cans so much, perhaps we should let them have them. In keeping with this idea, the students of MSU are urged to send all available Coke, beer, Sprite, Fizz, Splash or whatever bottles and cans (nonreturnables only, of course) to these upstanding citizens.

You can help-send your empties in now! With all the gallons of liquid refreshment that go down MSU students' gullets daily, we can inundate the state Capitol within a week. God knows there's no better place to put them. There may not ever be a better time, either.

Rent control

The State News has its "heart in the right place," but is a bit confused as to who should conduct the housing studies in this

Quite properly, this responsibility belongs to the city, not the political parties. The East Lansing Housing Comission is willing to conduct a study that will monitor the housing in East Lansing. The funds are there. The need is there.

But City Council, which must give approval, has once again failed to take action where action is obviously needed. Responsibility for this inaction should not be passed on to the Human Rights party.

And let me clarify that the HRP intends the rent control proposal for the November ballot—not August ballot (as was stated in the State News). An issue which affects students so deeply is not about to be decided in their absence.

Self-determination

This is to express our concerns regarding the death of the Nationalist Chine Chiang Kai-shek, and its effects on the Formosans (the Taiwanese) and the peace in that part of the world.

The obstacles of diplomatic normalization between the United States and the People's Republic of China are now gone. We deeply hope that this will bring peace to the world eventually.

However, the future of the Formosans is now an open question: where are the people in Taiwan going from here? Evidently there are only three possibilities:

1. The Nationalist Chinese continue their dictatorship in Taiwan. 2. The Communists take Taiwan to fulfill their greediness for territory by whatever means they wish to choose. 3. The Taiwanese achieve their life-time struggling for self-determination, the basic human right.

We say NO to the first two resolutions. We are against them because neither the Nationalist nor the communist Chinese are willing to give the Formosans liberty. The Formosans have been suffered long enough as a piece of real estate disputed among the big powers, especially China, Japan and the United States.

The Nationalists' control of Taiwan with the support from the U.S. government has resulted in secret police everywhere and political imprisonments without fair public trials at any time. The brutal, corrupted government officials have practiced martial law and supressed freedom of speech

The Formosans have been denied basic human right, self-determination 400 years. We want our rights as w our duties - to decide our own future, members of the vital world commun to participate for the peace of the worl long as the people and the land ar victims of the games-playing by the powers, peace will never come Formosans.

Most of the Formosans do have C heritage, but we are proud of Formosans. Anyone may call us Chin we may call the Americans British. We our land and our country. And we wi have a real democracy and freedo expression as the free countries world enjoy.

The Formosans deserve the ri self-determination. Any negotiation tween the big powers without const the Formosan majority betrays this thus all the residents of Taiwan.

Ford uses political instinct

On the week when Cambodia surrendered and South Vietnam tottered, President Ford found time to preside over the crisis, address the Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR) and the American Society of newspaper editors, meet with the full membership of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, make a speech and hand out the prizes at the annual White House photographers' dinner, deliver the sermon at the opening of the Bicentennial celebration in the Old North Church n Boston and visit Lexington and Concord.

This tells us several things about Gerald Ford. He is as strong and subtle as a bulldozer. He talks as if the fall of Cambodia and South Vietnam to the Communists would be a spectacular disaster, and that it is all the fault of the Congress. But somehow none of this seems to bother him personally or interfere with his normal schedule of amiable meetings with his right and left wings of his party, his old buddies and adversaries in the Congress or the press.

When Ron Nessen, his press secretary, brought him the news at the editors' head table about the offer of Cambodia to surrender, Ford didn't even mention it, but went on with his prepared speech.

When he was asked if his switches from higher taxation to bigger deficits didn't make him look inconsistent, he denied there was any inconsistency. And when it was suggested then that maybe his critics in the press had been wrong and inconsistent, he denied, with mock sincerity, that it had ever crossed his mind that the press could be wrong!

Washington doesn't quite know how to deal with this natural man. Almost everybody is mad about him for something, but he refuses to be sore or personal about anybody or anything. If Senators say he is a nice guy but not very smart, he invites them to the White House for lunch and agrees that he has spent most of his political life with people smarter than himself.

If they ask him why he lets Henry Kissinger run the foreign policy of the United States, he says it isn't true, but that Henry's a smart cookie who probably knows more about foreign policy than anybody else, including the President. And besides, the President asks, who would be better?

The Democrats are baffled by all Ithis. When Nixon was going down, they thought the quicker Ford got into the White House the better, for they insisted that his weaknesses would eventually overcome his nice - guy qualities, and maybe their perception of the 1976 presidential problem

But the Democrats are in a dreadful

muddle themselves and, meanwhile, Ford's personality and politics are proving to be better than the Democrats expected

He is not only plain, honest and decent. which is refreshing after Johnson and Nixon, but he is lucky - and the accident of luck in politics may be more important than anything else. He was appointed and not elected, and he inherited the unlucky mess of Vietnam and Watergate, but he was not to blame personally for either of these disasters, and he was lucky in other ways.

By the accident of time and history, he is now the President who will preside over the 200th anniversary of the American Revolution. Between now and the Fourth of July 1976, a month before the presidential nominating conventions, he will be the central figure in every celebration in every village, town or city he wants to attend. No doubt this is why he was in Lexington and Concord this weekend.

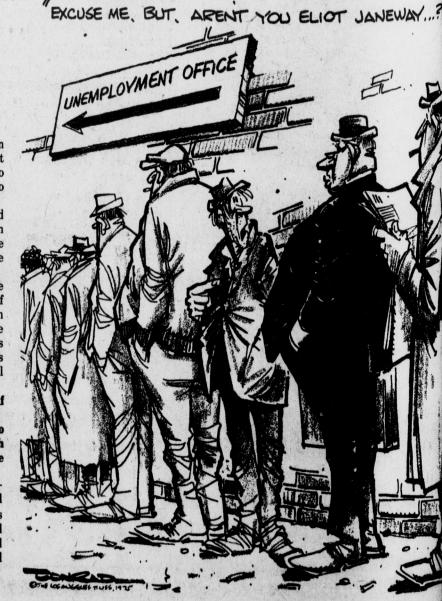

No president in the history of the Republic ever had a better political opportunity in a presidential campaign, and the fact that he took time out from the Indochina crisis to preach at the old church in Boston and shake hands with the mobs at Lexington and Concord, suggests that he knows, despite the recession, Vietnam and Watergate, precisely what his oppor-

On policy and on the economy, he is in trouble, the modern equivalent of Herbert Hoover. But unlike Hoover, he is not to blame and the Democrats have no Roosevelt. Ford is in a no - lose situation: he can run for the presidency in 1976 and his campaign obviously started this week in Boston, Lexington and Concord - but if he loses, the blame will be on Nixon, and if he wins the victory will be his.

For a time, shortly after he came to the White House, Ford seemed to be thinking of himself as an accidental and interim President, concerned primarily about the health of his wife, and remembering his promise to her to go home to Grand Rapids at the end of 1976, and this could still

He is much more confident now, more self assured. He does what comes naturally: talks too much, and too imprecisely, goes to too many places and uses up too much energy on secondary things. But in the process, his personality comes through.

In the end, after eight years of Republican rule, economic trouble, Watergate and Vietnam, he will probably lose, but he has restored a sense of fairness, respect and decency to the White House, and this could be a decisive factor against a divided Democratic party. [C] 1975 New York Times

The University monitors all students' on-campus income.

Rochelle Cotter, the person in charge of the monitoring, said that 25 per cent of the 2,410 students presently holding on-campus jobs and receiving financial aid may be terminated before the end of the year.

The situation presents a problem for both students and their employers. Students have to quit working even though they think they still need the money and employers have to get rid of experienced help before the school year is completed.

Federal guidelines make it impossible for the University to do anything about it.

These rules forced Barbara Rosnick, A118 Rather Hall, to turn down a 10 cent raise that ordinarily goes along with the promotion to student supervisor in the Brody Hall grill, so that she could work throughout the term.

"I think it's really stupid," she said. "If they terminate me, they'll have to hire and train somebody else."

the legislature to do that, you would have to anticipate the fertile mind of every con man in the Midwest," Bladen said.

Joe Tuchinsky, executive director of the Public Interest Research Group in Michigan (PIRGIM), said the House bill does not give the attorney general excess power. "Every practice which the attorney general wants to ban is subject to the approval of the legislature in the House bill. The arguments against attorney general power are a lot of hogwash by people who don't want people to have any power to regulate deceptive trade practices," Tuchinsky said. Many businesses have asked to be exempted from the deceptive trade bills, and the Senate is considering exempting the insurance industry and the banking "You can't take thousands of cases and industry from its bill's provisions.

Since the vacant lot is between two buildings, the park would not have a swing set or a jungle gym, but it would have murals on the buildings walls.

"The lot is too small for recreational facilities," said association Chairman James Winckler. "We would like to put some grass, a few benches and maybe a water fountain in the lot, making it truly a minipark."

The person in charge of the minipark project is Mary Love, a student at MSU.

Making the lot into a park would set the tone for rebuilding the neighborhood and changing the area's character, Winckler said. The vacant lot is bordered on one side by a Masonic Lodge building and on the other by a warehouse.

"We are beginning an open competition for mural designs," he said. "The designs should be of a type that blend into the community, but we are pretty much giving the artist a free hand." permission is obtained from the structures' owners.

The association, which is taking the proposed minipark idea to the Lansing Planning Commission for approval, is using donated That is the North Lansing Community Assn.'s proposal for the funds and labor to improve the lot. The group has filed

The proposed park is part of a project to preserve and develop north Lansing. The association is trying to get part of north Eansing declared a historic commercial area, as has been done in other Michigan cities, such as Marshall.

The minipark ideas must have entered East Lansing by osmosis, as plans for a similar park on the North East corner of Albert Avenue and Abbott Road are already under way.

"We would like to fix up the vacant lot with some grass seed, maybe a few bushes and picnic tables," said City Manager John Patriarche. "That way, at least the lot will look nice until the owners decide to develop the land."

The East Lansing park, unlike its Lansing counterpart which could be owned by the city, will still be privately owned, and will be leased by the city. The lot is owned partly by the First State Savings Assn. and partly by Musselman Realty.

"Both parties have agreed to it, and the project is all approved. The murals would be painted on the buildings' walls once So all we are doing now is waiting for the weather to dry up before we go to work on the lot." Patriarche said.

High unemployment rat will prevail, experts sav

By SOMA GOLDEN New York Times

NEW YORK - Relatively high unemployment has become the new hallmark of an affluent United States - a phenomenon that many experts think is likely to persist beyond the depths of the current recession and through the remaining years of this decade.

The 4 per cent unemployment target embraced by President Kennedy in 1962 has been abandoned. Even the 5 per cent goal of Nixon administration economists has lost sup-

Most analysts today, regardless of their political affiliation, believe that 5.5 to 6 per cent unemployment is probably the lowest that the government can achieve without stirring up virulent inflation again. And even that modest job target is a long way from attainment -1979 at the earliest, according to most forecasts.

What's more remarkable, in the view of many observers, is the fact that Americans, still shocked by soaring inflation, seem willing to live awhile with unemployment of 7 to 8 per cent - rates that were almost unthinkable a decade ago.

A recent Gallup poll showed that despite the surge in joblessness during the last winter, Americans still view inflation as the country's No. 1 menace. Though worries about unemployment have increased, inflation was still No. 1 for 60 per cent of those polled. Unemployment got only 20 per cent of the votes. That attitude may explain why President Ford apparently believes he can run for reelection successfully next year ECONOMICS ECONOMICS

THE RETURN OF AL! AL! on an unemployment record that might well have sent earlier White House occupants into a crisis of confidence, if not into early retirement.

The Democrats hope Americans will base their votes on the level of unemployment - which, by most estimates, will be hovering around 8 per cent on Election Day. Republicans hope the voters will be impressed by the direction in which the level is moving.

Some observers - particularly those in the labor movement. which is planning a major job rally Saturday in Washington's Kennedy Stadium - think the country may yet stiffen its resistance to a high rate of joblessness. But most officials. economists and political observers interviewed in recent weeks by The New York Times seem to expect these forces to prevail: •The middle class, severely stung by recent inflation, is willing to tolerate some unemployment in hope of restoring relative price stability and a rising standard of living to the nine-tenths of the labor force that does work. •Most Americans believe

'74 brings improvement in quality of state's air

LANSING (UPI) - The over-all quality of Michigan's air continued to improve in 1974, the state Dept. of Natural Resources (DNR) has reported.

Though violations of federal primary standards were reported in various counties, the department's Air Pollution Control Division said state wide samples of all pollutants showed improvement over the previous year.

Monitoring devices were used to measure six types of air pollutants - particulates, sulphur dioxide, carbon monoxide. photochemical oxidants, nitrogen dioxide and hydrocarbons.

Violations of federal primary standards were reported for suspended particles such as dust and smoke in Alpena, Bay, Saginaw and Wayne counties.

counties all registered violations of the federal standards for sulphur dioxide, which impairs breathing and irritates eyes, throats and lungs.

Carbon monoxide violations were found in Oakland, Saginaw and Wayne counties.

The DNR said, however, that Saginaw County was expected to show a marked improvement in the future because of abatement programs going into The carbon monoxide level for Wayne County, while still registering as a violation, was down from 1973, the DNR said.

Previous claims by the DNR that the state's air quality is improving have been disputed by environmental groups.

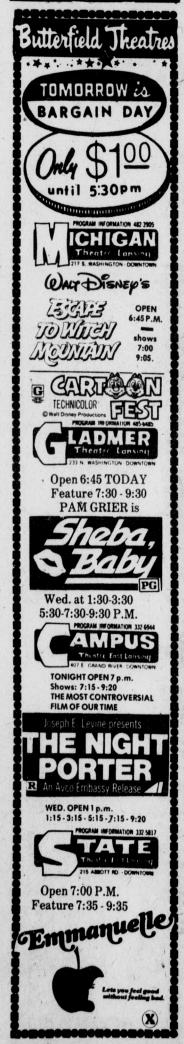

Federal primary standards must be attained by the states by this summer and are considered essential for public health protection.

MEXICO REPLACES FRANCE AS MAIN HEROIN SOURCE

latin America major narcotics supplier

By NICHOLAS GAGE

New York Times W YORK - In the last years, Latin America has me the major source of drugs entering the United es and Canada. Much of it being supplied by rings rolled by businessmen and essionals who have grown olitically and economically erful that they can operate virtual immunity from st and prosecution. tin America now supplies f the cocaine sold in the ed States, where the and for the drug has risen arply that the price of coca from which cocaine is acted, has soared 1,500 per since 1973 in some Latin tries - from $4 to $60 a

addition, Mexico has now replaced France as the main supplier of heroin to the United States, increasing its share of the illegal heroin market from 20 to 60 per cent in the last five

The burgeoning market for drugs from Latin America, which is centered in New York, Miami and Los Angeles, is supplied by traffickers who can buy protection by bribing poorly paid police officers, judges and other officials. Drug flow shifts

The shift of the drug flow from Europe to Latin America also has brought into power new criminal networks in New York and other cities in the United States that are dominated by Colombians, Cubans and Mexicans:

The Federal Drug Enforcement Administration has identified some 250 Latin Americans as controlling the rings that supply cocaine and herion to the U.S. market. Some of them are so influential politically that they are considered "untouchable" in their native

Typical of the situation is the case of Luis Rivadeneira of Ecuador, who was arrested last Dec. 16 with two kilos (4.4 pounds) of cocaine paste in his possession. Soon after his arrest, according to authorities, Adm. Alfredo Poveda Burbano, Ecuador's minister of government, who directs all lawenforcement agencies in the country, called the police and ordered them to change the evidence against Rivadeneira so that the charges against him would have to be dismissed.

"Adm. Poveda explained his order by saying that Rivadeneira was a close relative of a friend of his - another admiral," a police captain said.

The police complied. Bribe policemen

If drug traffickers can not use political influence to stop investigations against them, they can often successfully bribe police officers or judges.

Traffickers have so much available cash, for example, that in Colombia judges sometimes compete to try major narcotics cases because of the potential payoffs involved.

Eduardo Davila, reputed to be a major cocaine trafficker from the city of Santa Marta, was arrested late last year on charges of murdering a policeman. According to the Colombian national police, three judges have already tried to get Traffickers often find the police even easier to corrupt than judges because throughout Latin America they are so badly paid. Police salaries range from about $60 a month in Bolivia to $250 a month in Argentina.

In Mexico, some high police officials are known to have become millionaires by taking bribes. When some police officers are transferred from one district to another, they sell to their successors the list of narcotics traffickers who paid them on a regular basis.

Volteo-"rolling" Some Latin American policemen who will not take bribes are not averse to arresting drug traffickers and then extorting money from them - a practice called volteo, which means "rolling."

Last year a United States citizen was arrested trying to buy two kilos of cocaine for $7,000 from Maj. Oscar Zeballos of a Bolivian narcotics unit who was posing as a trafficker. Zeballos seized the money, keeping $5,000 for himself and letting two younger officers split the rest.

His mistake was not sharing the money with the informant who had originally put him on to the North American. The irate informant told the officer's superiors and Zeballos was quietly dismissed from the police force, losing all

The astronomical profits of the drug trade sometimes prove so tempting to some underpaid Latin American policemen that they go into the business themselves.

Plane searched Last year, for example, a DC-3 flying from Peru to Colombia had mechanical trouble and was forced to land on a military base in Colombia. There were five people inside. The head of the group identified himself as Lt. Benhur Benavides of the Colombian narcotics unit of F-2 - the detective division of the national police. Nevertheless, the commander of the military searched and inside he found 100 kilograms of cocaine paste. Despite the temptations, many policemen remain honest. "I've met cops making $60 a month who wouldn't take a nickel from anybody," said Louis Bachrach, the Drug Enforcement Administration's regional director for South America.

Many government officials also are unmoved by any personal or political considerations. When the Bolivian police arrested the socially prominent Maria Malky Farah with 15 kilos of cocaine in her possession, the judge on the case dismissed the charges against her. But the Minister of the Interior, Juan Pereda Asbun,

Profitable drug traffic Several factors have put Latin America on the crest of the wave of profitable drug

In recent years cocaine has become the most fashionable drug in the United States and Europe because it is less expensive than heroin, it is not physically addictive and because it has a reputation as a sexual stimulant. One indication of the drug's growing popularity is that cocaine seizures in the United States have increased 700 per cent since 1969.

Latin America to New York also make it clear why so many are willing to take the risk. In New York City a kilo of cocaine is sold on the street for between $75,000 and $100,000. In La Paz, Bolivia, that same kilo would cost only $4,000; in Lima, Peru, $5,000; in Quito, Ecuador, $5,000; in Bogota, Colombia, $7,500, and in Buenos Aires, $8,500. Seven years after the hardthrowing righthander led the major leagues with 31 victories, McLain has brought forth his own version of his meteoric rise to fame and subsequent decline from the national limelight in his first literary effort, "Nobody's Perfect," with Dave Diles.

McLain and Diles touch all bases in the book, from McLain's youth in Illinois to a caustic criticism of the press.

"The reason I wrote the book was to explain all the situations I faced while I was in baseball." the former Tiger said at an autograph session at Merdian Mall Saturday.

most criticism in the book is McLain himself. He recounts how his monetary windfall from baseball and nightclub appearances was destroyed by his inability to handle money and his attorney's incompetency. McLain also describes his involvement with bookmakers during the 1967 season and his subsequent suspension from Perhaps the most revealing episode in the Denny McLain tragedy is revealed in the chapter entitled "Garbage in My Life.' In this sequence, McLain goes into considerable detail about his marital and extramarital life and his start in gambling.

the major insight of the chapter is McLain's admission of infidelity. He goes into explicit detail about the various women in his life and the reactions of his wife, Sharyn.

The former Cy Young award winner explains his reasoning for such a chapter, saying: "The book wasn't intended to be a peek through the keyhole type expose of other people. I could have done that but that wasn't the purpose. But, everything I' do say about anybody in the book I can prove, and that's more than some people can say about things they've written about me."

McLain certainly has some things to say about various people who dotted his career. Most severely criticized is

Ted Williams, who managed

Bostonian wins big

BOSTON (UPI) - Will Rodgers, who began road running after his motorcycle was stolen, won the 79th annual Boston Marathon Monday in a record time of two hours, nine minutes and 55 seconds, the second fastest marathon ever run, Rodgers' record time cut 35 seconds off the 1970 mark of England's Ron Hill, who finished fifth in 2:13:28 Monday in his first appearance here since his 2:10:30 performance five years ago. Steve Hoag, a 28-year-old Minneapolis, Minn. school teacher, finished second, 1:59 behind Rodgers, a Boston College graduate Tom Fleming of the New York Athletic Club, runnerup the past two years, was third in 2:12:05. Tom Howard of Vancouver, B.C., was fourth in 2:13:23. Rodgers' time has only been bettered by Tim Clayton of Australia, who clocked 2:08:33.6 over a flat Belgium course in 1969. Official world records, however, are not kept for marathon other starters under sunny skies with a 25 MPH tailwind in his running, because the terrain varies from course to course. The 27-year-old Rodgers, of Boston, outdistanced a field of 2,362 record romp across the 26-mile, 385-yard course from Hopking Mass., to the heart of downtown Boston.

Liane Winter, a 32-year-old West German accountant. woman's record of 2:42:33. Her time was nine minutes faster any marathon she has run and 4:38 ahead of Michiko Gom 1974 pace.

Rodgers, who works with retarded children, was a distance runner while an undergraduate at Wesleyan University where he roomed with the 1968 Boston Marathon winner Burfoot. After running a sub-nine minute two-mile race in Rodgers quit running in favor of a new motorcycle.

On a half-pack of cigarettes a day, Rodgers fell out of shape was "beaten by a 60-year-old man" in a YMCA race, motorcycle was stolen and he joined the Greater Boston 7 Club to start three years of intensive comeback training.

American Bernard Allan led at the first checkpoint, but h second Rodgers, Jerome Drayton of Canada and Mexico's Cuevas had moved into a three-way battle for the lead. Roll took command for good 10.4 miles into the course.

The Men's Intramural Building facilities have ridden out the flood in fine shape, but those at the Women's Intramural Building haven't fared so

The Men's IM was open and running normally Monday, including the paddleball courts, with two exceptions-the parking lot was flooded and water was within 20 feet of the building in most places. On the other hand, the Women's IM has problems. After being closed Monday, any decisions will be made daily whether to open the building or not. This includes holding

House committee approves

Pentagon Comptroller Erick Von Marbod said the aid would give the South Vietnamese assurances that the United States is not abandoning them.

"I believe a group is coming in there to take over the South Vietnamese government that believes on the basis of talks with the other side that they can negotiate some sort of settlement," Weyand said. Thieu's resignation removes a major publicly stated obstacle to a negotiated peace in South Vietnam, but some U.S. officials say they think it may have come too late. Weyand told the committee

Thieu's resignation is not part of a pact for any takeover of South Vietnam. But he said he believed it to be part of an effort to bring negotiations for a cease - fire and declared: "I suspect whatever political settlement does come out of this could be in the framework of the Paris accords."

He added that the South Vietnamese will to resist "is going to erode quite rapidly, as the last vestige of hope is removed."

Kissinger met for an hour and five minutes at the White House with Ford to discuss the implications of Thieu's resignation. Kissinger refused to answer reporters' questions about developments in South Vietnam. By voice vote and with limited debate, the Senate adopted a resolution calling for negotiations for a cease - fire in Vietnam and urging Ford and Kissinger to ask "all Vietnamese parties to reopen discussion toward implementation of the Paris Peace accords."

In Paris, the Viet Cong declared after the resignation of Thieu that there must be a total U.S. withdrawal from South Vietnam and the establishment of a government of "national concord" in Saigon. "The United States must end all military and other interference in the internal affairs of South Vietnam and withdraw all its military personnel disguised as civilians," said the Viet Cong delegation to the long dormant Paris peace talks. It said the "Nguyen Van Thieu clique" must be replaced by an administration which "really wants peace, independence, democracy and n concord and which will ly apply the Paris accord

A Lansing resident retrieves what he can from a home on the city's east side. Scenes such as this were sadly common yesterday as flood victims returned to their homes in boats to find what little remained salvageable.

By FRANK FOX State News Staff Writer

A young blonde woman with a drawn face was sitting in a rowboat in what was once her front yard.

"Did you lose much?" she asked as we paddled by in our canoe. "Kathy and I lost everything," she added as she glanced back at her flooded home on Detroit Street on Lansing's near east side. Here and there other residents of the area were rowing through the wretched, awful - smelling flood waters — trying to save whatever they could.

Detroit, Charles and Mifflin Streets and others near Kalamazoo Street were gone - covered with a seemingly endless lake of garbage - filled water that lapped with disgusting persistence around the homes and businesses which once sat high and dry near the western fringe of MSU.

Once familiar landmarks along Kalamazoo Street stood helplessly amid the waters of the Red Cedar River which was often as high inside the buildings as it was outside.

Oade's Party Store - gone; the Brass Monkey - gone; the Checker gas station - gone; Dagwood's Bar - gone; the Red Cedar Shell station - gone, drowned in the very river from which it took its name.

In our canoe, paddling down the middle of Kalamazoo Street, we struggled through a vast, putrid lake which surrounded the rooftops of abandoned cars - cars that would later reek of the leaked fuel oil which was floating amid the abundant flotsam.

A car roof poked improbably out of the water in the middle of Kalamazoo Street near the overpass. Other cars barely broke water near the Brass Monkey. Furniture floated in the flooded rooms of an upholstering and used furniture shop across from Red Cedar Shell.

Bottles, cans, limbs, garbage, rotten hay and a child's doll bobbed in an offensive swamp of alley refuse and vomiting sewers. The former residents weren't the only ones boating through the streets of the east end. Sheriff's deputies patrolled the area in small boats, looking for looters. Amid the broken remains of people's homes and lives, there have indeed been looters. Up on the high ground near Mac's Bar at Michigan Avenue and Mifflin Street, the Lansing Township Fire Dept. and county sheriff's deputies had set up a command post. They were issuing passes to people who wanted to go back into the swamp to their homes and they were ready to bring out anyone who had refused to be rescued — if there were still any holdouts in the flooded area by this time. Helicopters buzzed incessantly overhead. Their motors provided the only sound over the silent, abandoned streets which will resist cleaning even when the water finally recedes.

All the garbage, litter, junk and accumulated crud of this neighborhood was in the fetid water. Branches, logs, broken signs, tires and splintered boards floated quietly among the houses and cars, around the water - filled garages and the lot of drowned Volkswagens which were swamped at the Bug Business.

A few people returned, if only to glance at the desolation and ruin which surrounded their neighborhood.

The water certainly would recede — someday. But the damage done to the residents of this battered section of Lansing and Lansing Township would last longer than even the putrid odor which still hung over the silent streets and flooded homes of the east side.

This bike may be high and somewhat dry, but its owner probably can't find anywhere to ride it in the drowned streets of Lansing's far east side.
