The Viet Cong announced Thursday that they were in complete control of South Vietnam and issued a series of policy decrees stressing a new revolutionary government and an end to 15 years of U.S. influence. A broadcast warned people against "acting like Americans."

Among the decrees was an order nationalizing virtually all of the country's business and industry, the Cuban news agency reported.

In a dispatch from Saigon, renamed Ho Chi Minh City, the agency said the order covered banks, transportation, factories, farms, U.S.-owned firms and property belonging to officials of the former regime.

North Vietnam demanded that U.S. warships withdraw from areas off the coast and halt what it called "forcible evacuation" of Vietnamese who, according to the Pentagon, have been fleeing in rafts and small boats into the South China Sea.

A North Vietnamese Foreign Ministry statement broadcast by Hanio said the Navy's presence and the announced U.S. policy of picking up refugees from the sea constituted "criminal" interference in the internal affairs of South Vietnam.

The Viet Cong dropped the word "provisional" from their official name to become the Revolutionary Government of South Vietnam. Under its new title the regime broadcast a policy manifesto promising equality, religious freedom, full employment, education, public welfare and a "revolutionary government." "Anyone acting like Americans or participating in such American-style activities as opening night clubs, brothels or other places of entertainment will be punished," one decree said.

Cambodia's United Nations seat was claimed by the Cambodian Royal Government of National Union in a message received at U N headquarters from Peking, where the new Phnom Penh regime was originally established in exile.

Growing concern was reported over the whereabouts and condition of some 600 refugees believed since Wednesday on a 250 mile overland trip by truck convoy from Phnom Penh to the Thai-Cambodian border. The group took refuge in the French Embassy in Phnom Penh, when the capital fell to Khmer Rouge forces. France has protested that supplies to the embassy were cut off and that the Khmer Rouge finally forced the 600 to leave by truck instead of plane even though they included many children, elderly and sick persons. Khmer Rouge frontier guards said the caravan ran out of gasoline 30 miles short of substantial part of the 25,000 U.S. servicethe border. But the French ambassador to Thailand, Jean-Louis Toffin, said after talking with Khmer Rouge officials at the border that there was some doubt whether the group had even left Phnom Penh.

Prof claims ordinance inflates textbook prices

MICHELLE BURGEN State News Staff Writer

An ordinance passed some 25 years ago by the MSU Board of Trustees designed to protect students from the soaring costs of textbooks could be resulting in inflated book prices.

So contends Jerry Nolen, associate professor of physics. In 1973 Nolen was asked to revise three required physics lab manuals. The Physics Dept. was to pay the costs of producing the manuals, which would be sold at the bookstores on a nonprofit basis. Nolen said he would not receive any personal remuneration from the Nolen checked into the costs of producing the manuals at local printing firms, but was told last fall by an offical in the comptroller's office that he could not be responsible for getting the revised manuscripts printed because of a ruling in the MSU Manual of Business Procedures.

The ruling states that a faculty member producing a textbook or other teaching materials for the compulsory purchase by MSU students must submit the manuscripts to the MSU Press. Materials not for compulsory purchase by students may be taken to other firms.

Nolen asked to waive the law because he said he could get the work done at less cost to students. The MSU Press denied him a

"What they (the MSU Press) pay to a printer is a small fraction of their operational costs," Nolen said.

The bookstore price of the manuals would include salaries and overhead expenses incurred by the press. Because of the law. students are, in effect, forced to help finance the press' operations, he said.

Lyle Blair, director of the MSU Press, explained that the ruling was passed to protect students from professors who write required texts, then have them published at publishing firms using high-priced materials. This would include royalties in the bookstore price of the books.

He said the practice became so widespread that the board at that time felt compelled to protect students from the high costs of textbooks.

"Our aim is to get the books into the hands of the students cheaper than they could ever be sold by a commercial publisher," Blair explained. "We print both no lower bids.

He indicated that when books are produced, extra copies are printed to offset possible increases in anticipated enrollment for that course. (Also, if 200 copies of a book are printed but only 75 are bought, someone has to absorb that loss.)

Blair said he did not believe the Physics Dept. could afford to cover that loss.

But Nolen said that the Physics Dept. accounted for shifts in book sales in its original anticipated price for the manuals.

Raymond asks ASMSU board to act now on fall's problems

By MARY ANN CHICK Sate News Staff Writer

Newly seated ASMSU President Brian Raymond outlined his goals for the next year at the ASMSU meeting Thursday night in his State of ASMSU address.

Raymond, who officially became ASMSU president at 5 p.m. Thursday, asked the new ASMSU board to begin working now to solve some of the problems students will be facing next fall.

"Applications for MSU are ahead of last year's rate and all of this will mean overcrowding in classes and triples in dorms," Raymond said. "We can't afford to wait until next fall." The ASMSU board needs to review in detail the freshman and sophomore housing requirements to determine the value of living on campus, he said.

During his campaign, Raymond promised to try to break down triples in the residence halls, drop the on-campus living requirement and change the policing role of the resident assistants.

Raymond said the board should ask MSU administrators to come to an ASMSU meeting to discuss the increase in room and board rates before students leave for the ASMSU also needs to look at the practices of the Dept. of Public Safety, the financial crisis at the Library, University pricing policies in the bookstore and snackshops on campus and the tuition refund policy, Raymond said.

"During the past year, there have been periods of unnecessary stress and misunderstanding which have decreased the effectiveness of ASMSU." Raymond said. "It is time for us to rebuild, reshape and redefine ASMSU."

Last year's ASMSU board was often accused of not accomplishing as much as possible because of bickering and arguing among members. Raymond asked the board to vote with an open mind on issues that may come up this year.

The board should function as a financial source, policymaker and medium for student input into the MSU administration, Raymond said.

"If ASMSU begins this session with the attitude that the MSU administration is out to get us, we will get nowhere because we will be spending all our time running from shadows," Raymond said.

"Nothing will be gained by personalizing issues, " he said. "We will just end up arguing personalities instead of issues."

Internal discord caused by ridiculous petty reasons will affect and damage the image of all branches and forms of student government at MSU, Raymond said.

After Raymond delivered his 15-minute address, he appointed seven interim cabinet

Raymond said he is making the appointments now to speed up action, instead of waiting until May 7 when the petitioning for the positions officially closes.

Raymond appointed the following cabinet directors: Labor Relations, Steve Skowron, a freshman who has worked on the local United Auto Workers (UAW) union board; Travel, Terry Corlin, a sophomore who has been working on the cabinet this year; Great Issues, Steve Findlay, a junior who was the director of Great Issues this year; Legal Aid, Jon Botsford, a junior who was the director this year, and Joe Mallia, a sophomore; Legislative Relations, Jeff Sobel, a junior who was the acting director of the cabinet this year; Office of Black Affairs, Art Webb who was director this year, and Pop Entertainment, Bill Black-

In other action, Raymond asked that a special presidential advisory committee on housing be set up. The committee would consist of representatives from the Residence Halls Assn., the Greek system, an at-large off-campus student and an at-large on-campus student.

Even though he probably will not be appearing in Saturday's 101st running of the Kentucky Derby, 2-year-old Mark Shipman of Holt was heard saying as he carefully groomed his colt, "We could win it easy!"

Hughes assessed tax levy

Industrialist Howard Hughes will be taxed$1.24 million on the Glomar Explorer, a recovery ship which raised part of a sunken Soviet submarine last summer, says County Tax Assessor Philip E. Watson.

Hughes' tax levy could be even higher, if Watson decides the salvage and electronic gear aboard the vessel also belongs to Hughes.

"It has sonar, ultrasonic devices, depth - measuring devices and a sophisticated Loran system for navigating," Watson said Wednesday.

"Subtract personnel and operations coss from the $450 million total cost of this project, that still could leave $300 million for the boat and electronics."

Student unrest and seizures

Brown University President Donald F. Hornig, granted amnesty last week to 40 minority students who seized the college's main administration building for two days, but told alumni and parents in a letter Wednesday that he would never grant a pardon again. The students occupied the building on the Providence, R.I. campus to press their demands for increased minority enrollment at the lvy League college.

Meanwhile, at Brandeis University in Waltham, Mass., about 35 students calling themselves the Student Action Committee seized Pearlman Hall Tuesday morning to protest planned cuts in the university budget.

Premiums soar for dollars

Many of the 4,000 northern California doctors hit by skyrocketing malpractice insurance rates vowed to take down their shingles Thursday rather than pay.

More than half the doctors in the San Francisco Bay area were expected to refuse to pay what they termed "prohibitive" premiums sought by Argonaut Insurance Co., thus forcing many hospitals to curtail services sharply.

Argonaut, located in nearby Menlo Park, offers malpractice coverage in 30 states and the expiration of its group policies in California on Wednesday was only the tip of the national malpractice crisis.

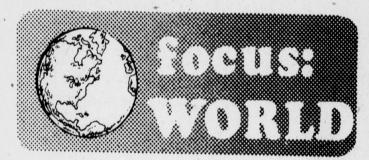

New savings bonds issued

At the same time it is sending tax rebate checks to American taxpayers, the Ford Administration will be trying to sell new Bicentennial Savings Bonds.

If it looks like the government is offering to take back as savings the tax rebates it has encouraged taxpayers to spend on consumer items, that's exactly what it is doing, officials say privately.

But they said there is no calculated connection between the two actions.

"It's a Catch - 22; we're damned if we do, and damned if we don't," said one official. He said the Administration needs to support its savings bond program in addition to distributing money to stimulate the economy.

Irish vote on new government

Guarded by soldiers and police, the people of Northern Ireland voted Thursday in an election that has been called the province's last chance at a political solution to its sectarian war.

A light turnout was blamed by polling officers on general apathy and a boycott urged in Catholic areas.

The voting, expected to divide along Roman Catholic and Protestant lines, was to elect 78 delegates to a constitutional convention that will try to work out a new form of provincial government for Northern Ireland. The country has been engaged in a religious war for nearly six years.

He appealed to Congress to draw up new legislation, and House leaders indicated they would draft a new bill containing the money only.

The bill, written before the Saigon government fell, was up for Congress' final approval Thursday. It was rejected 246 to 162 despite an appeal from Ford that its evacuation authority was now useless and the money was "desperately need-

Defense Secretary James Schlesinger, assessing the end of the Vietnam war, said he expects no new Communist military challenges in Asia as a result of North Vietnam's victory. He also said "it is particularly inopportune to contemplate major changes" in U.S. military deployments because of fears that the confidence in American power and steadfastness might be shaken. Turning the House debate on the aid request, some members were reluctant to give Ford authority that was no longer needed for the refugees.

House Democratic Caucus Chairman Phillip Burton of California said Ford "is an honorable man" but said the late President Lyndon B. Johnson was an honorable man when he asked for the 1965 Tonkin Gulf resolution that introduced U.S. combat forces into the Vietnam war. Rep. Bella S. Abzug, D -

N.Y., said, "Let us not risk reintroduction of U.S. forces." But House International Relations Chairman Thomas E. Morgan, D - Pa., said the bill would not authorize Ford "to send a single Marine back" because it is tied to evacuation of Americans and they are out.

"The authority in this report died the day the last American was evacuated," Morgan told the House. "The issue here is money to take care of these poor people."

Morgan said U.S. ships have picked thousands of South Vietnamese in the South China Sea "up out of the water fighting for survival.

"What do we intend to do with them?" Morgan said. "Pick them up and drop them back into the water? This is humanitarian assistance that is urgently needed.'

Republicans including Reps. John B. Anderson of Illinois and Edward G. Biester Jr. of Pennsylvania said Ford has already shown that his word that he does not intend to send troops back in should be enough.

Officials may soon decide fate recycling operations at MSU

By BRAD MARTISIUS State News Staff Writer

The fate of the recycling operation of the MSU Waste Control Authority may be decided Tuesday in a secret meeting at which University officials will try to decide if recycling paper is worth the cost.

MSU has been losing about $500 per week on the operation since last August, when the bottom dropped out of the paper

No students or reporters will be allowed into the meeting between Lowell Levi, comptroller; Mark Rosenhaft, Waste Control Authority director; Robert Underwood, residence halls manager; Jack Breslin, executive vice president and secretary of the board of trustees, and Starr Keesler, asst. executive vice president.

The recycling operation, now $40,000 in debt to the University, will probably be either closed down, forced to make layoffs of up to 50 student workers or use volunteer labor, Underwood said Thursday.

Fred Moore, founder and director of the recycling operation, said another option to be considered might be the elimination of office waste from collection allowing the operation to focus exclusively on newsprint recycling.

Moore said he is circulating petitions around the campus with which he hopes to prove that the operation has student support. But he said he still needs more cooperation from students.

"People are still not putting waste paper into our collection sheds," he said. "Paper is just sitting in garages and on shelves, where it won't do us any good.

"We're asking people to make that extra effort to help us stay in business and at the same time help the environment."

Moore said he hopes to break even this week because the Sunday, Tuesday and Thursday shifts have been cut back and labor costs will be lower.

Keesler said that he hopes the operation can continue, but he added that the University has to consider how much longer it will allow the operation to ring up a

"I just don't know how much longer this can go on," he said. "No debt ceiling was ever set for the operation, but I think we've gotten to the point where we just can't afford losses at the present rate."

Underwood said many demands are being made within the University for funds.

"We're kind of limited," he said. "I'd like the operation to be self-sustaining." He said the comptroller has a difficult job because he must make the decision as to where limited funds must be spent. Nonetheless, Moore said that University officials have the wrong view of the project.

"They see recycling as a fad that will sooner or later die out," he said. "They think they'll be left holding the bag.

"I think it's important to society and sooner or later federal regulations will require it. As long as we've got the apparatus now, we should keep it.'

Rep plans tax-credit bill to aid parents in paying college costs

Legislation providing income tax credits for parents helping their children through college in Michigan is slated for introduction in the state House next week.

The state tax credit would equal 5 per cent of a student's tuition and room and board costs, said Rep. Dennis M. Dutko, D -Warren, sponsor of the proposal.

It would apply only when the student's own taxable income is less than $2,500 a year. Taxable income is total income minus the federal personal deduction of $780.

Parents would be able to use the credit for all children they assist through college. "Michigan should be willing to help parents who are making a financial sacrifice to send their children to college," Dutko. said. "Without this, I'm afraid that because of the economic recession a lot of young people won't be able to go to college.

"Also, the young people themselves are really facing a bleak job market this summer."

Dutko estimates his bill proposal could affect the parents of 80 per cent of Michigan college students. He likened the state tax credit to the federal encouragement of college education by allowing parents to continue claiming students as dependents. Henry C. Dykema, director of the MSU Office of Financial Aids, said the tax credit idea is a familiar one which has usually gotten tangled in definitions of allowable expenses in the past.

The particular problem has been where to set room and board limits for students living off campus, Dykema said. The consensus in the past has been to place these amounts at or below charges to students living in residence halls.

Dutko said he has no cosponsors lined up yet for his proposal, but he expects support from the many young legislators.

The main difficulty the tax - credit idea will face is whether the state's overstrained budget can afford the loss of additional

Most were spray painted on the Friday night after Kent students learned that Nixon had ordered troops into Cambodia, the Friday night before the brilliant spring Monday of May 4. Though both the slogans and the crowds are still there, the anger and convictions

Some say it is the nature of Kent State, that the activities of spring 1970 were merely errata in a long history of conservatism and uninvolvement.

"Kent State University is a very middle of - the - road, middle - class, mid - American conservative university, but people who haven't been here can't believe that," says Glenn Frank, an aging and popular geology professor who interceded on Blanket Hill shortly after 12:24 p.m. May 4 to prevent further bloodshed.

Plus, others say, the student body is considerably smaller than its peak 21,400 in 1970, and considerably more serious about studying, doing well and getting a job before things get worse.

"There's no political activity up here now," says Dennis Sidik, who was in the line of fire on Blanket Hill five years ago. "Then students demanded a little bit of respect, asked to be considered as people. Now they're going back to just thinking. They're all more or less students who want to go to school.

"And they wanna forget about what happened on May 4." Nearly 80 per cent of Kent's students live off campus, many commuting from Akron, Cleveland, Canton and Youngstown, all·less than 50 miles away. As room and board rates soared, residence hall occupancy has plummeted by 40 per cent since 1969, forcing the university to close or convert to offices four halls, including the one in which Jeff Miller lived.

Today posters in dorms advertise not rallies and protests, but a Lithuanian dance exhibition, students' food coupons for sale, a boycott of Japanese whale products and the latest "cause" on campus - a petition drive seeking a reinvestigation of President Kennedy's assassination over 11 years ago.

Amy Shaw, student head of the May 4 Committee that coordinated this year's memorial events, summarized Kent students this way: "They care about food in the cafeteria, getting ripped off by the dorm system, getting ripped off by parking and traffic regulations, whether the weather will be nice or not, about professors so they can bombast them on those evaluation things, getting a job, having a good time and good music and a few of them even care about what is going on in the world and how it relates to them.

Too young to remember and too preoccupied to that Monday afternoon five years ago. Today, it is fading, angry slogan painted the weekend before passing by on their way to the local bars.

Though some shrug off the political doldrums as simple apathy, many say it came from a feeling of futility. They call that feeling the most significant result of the May 4 shootings. One female sophomore, drinking in a Water Street bar late on a Saturday night, put it this way: "People around here say they're not gonna vote, they're not gonna participate, they don't care about politics. Because if dying didn't make any difference, what difference will living make?"

Tom Lough is a sociology instructor at Kent, one of the university's best in the students' opinion the sole professor indicted in 1971 by a state grand jury, along with two dozen students, on rioting and university's faculty and staff.

"Kent State was the beginning of the end for that hope that radicals had that they could turn the country arund before it started doing what it's doing now, which is collapsing economically," Lough said. "They learned that political action doesn't work," he added. "You can't do it through due process and the courts either. And you can't do it through George McGovern.

"So students are pretty realistic now. They're getting their kicks where they

"There's no political activity up here now. Then, students demanded a little bit of respect, asked to be considered as people. Now they're going back to just thinking. They're all more or less students who want to go to school. And they wanna forget about what happened on May 4.'

other charges. In spring 1970 Lough distributed instructions on making Molotov cocktails in a course he taught on revolution, and let his class out early on May 4 so they all could attend the rally set for noon.

He is still at Kent after a two-year leave of absence, but he is disillusioned and his rugged face is wearier. He sees students, faculty and administrators as frightened and timid. The political depression of the students is hopelessly entangled, he says, in the economic depression affecting the

Pat McGuire, who graduated from Kent in 1973. "That's what it's all about - get drunk, get high, get laid. There's no political consciousness at this place."

Now manager of three of Water Street's oldest and rowdiest bars, McGuire was a bouncer at the bars for several years while a student. Now he notices more bargoers with less to say about anything than ever before. Nixon defused student anger, McGuire thinks, by ending the draft, declaring "peace with honor" and stepping

"Now that Nixon's gone people feel a whole lot better about it all," says Brian Pitzer, 23, who's heading the petition drive to reopen the JFK assassination investiga-"When Nixon was pushed out, students felt avenged and the, well, you know, the guardsmen were acquitted and people feel now like there's nothing more they can do."

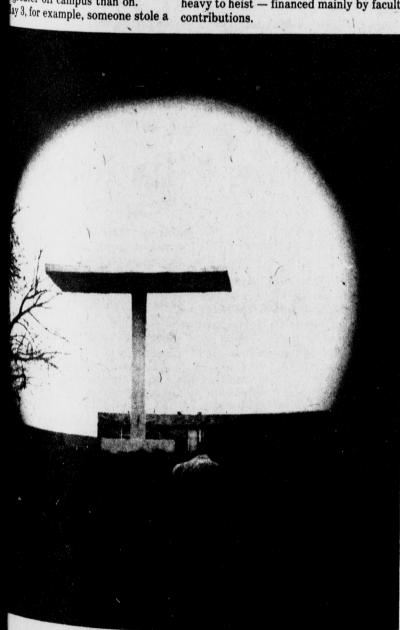

Legally, the May 4 shootings have still not been explained and no blame has been solidly pinned on anyone. Eight guardsmen indicted by a federal grand jury in March 1974 for violating the students' civil rights were acquitted last November. Most charges were ultimately dropped against Tom Lough and the 24 students indicted in 1971 by a state grand jury.

Several civil suits filed by the American Civil Liberties Union on behalf of individuals have had positive results, though the wounded and the families of the dead have yet to receive any monetary compensation.

On May 19, however, testimony will begin in the U.S. District Court in Cleveland on civil suits filed by the parents of the four dead students and the nine wounded. The 14 suits seek more than $20 million in damages from Gov. James Rhodes, former Kent State President Robert I. White and about 50 guardsmen.

It was Rhodes who, three days before a senatorial primary race which he lost to U.S. Rep. Robert Taft Jr., ordered the guardsmen onto the Kent campus. His order followed the burning of the ROTC building there on the second night of a four day anti - war protest which culminated in

EDITORIALS Absentee ballot forms

Even though most students will be gone for the summer by Aug. 5 when primary elections are held for three city council seats, students still have the opportunity to vote by absentee ballots—an opportunity that should not be overlooked.

The primary will be a nonpartisan election to narrow the field of candidates down to six who will run in the November general election for the three seats.

Council makes decisions that affect the lives of all students who live, work or play in East Lansing. The 65 per cent of the registered voters in East Lansing who are students must be concerned about who will be making those decisions.

Absentee ballots will be available at City Hall three weeks to blame but themselves.

before the election. However, since most students will not be here then either, ASMSU Legislative Relations office has made up special applications for students that can be picked up now at the ASMSU office at 334 Student Services Bldg.

In addition, students are urged to send their applications in a week or two before the Aug. 5 deadline because of the extra time consumed sending ballots to their summer residence and then back to City Hall.

It would be more than a shame to come back in September and discover that there are no candidates running in November sympathetic to student needs and desires. It would be a discredit to students who would have no one

Incredible! They are trying to pass a law that could put you in prison just for sticking a pistol in some poor sucker's mug. Imagine

Michigan legislators are now reviewing several proposed laws that stipulate mandatory prison sentences of from two to five years for those convicted of carrying a pistol while attempting a felony.

Michigan House Bill 4266 says "a person who carries or has in his possession a pistol at the time he commits or attempts to commit a felony shall be imprisoned for two years." The proposed law also stipulates that the sentence shall not be served concurrently with a term of imprisonment for the felony being committed. And there

Celebrate Vietnamese victory

By the NEW AMERICAN MOVEMENT During the past few weeks, the people of Cambodia and Vietnam have won major victories in seizing control of their countries from regimes maintained in power by the U.S. government. These events, which mark and end to the era of unchallengeable U.S. influence throughout the "free" world, are significant victories as well for the millions of U.S. citizens who participated in the anti-war movement over the last 10

During this period, students, faculty and millions of others attended marches and demonstrations, signed petitions, wrote to their legislators, burned their draft cards, refused induction into the armed forces or deserted after being drafted...

In consequence of this struggle against our government, hundreds of thousands of us were clubbed and beaten by police, illegally rounded up and jailed, spied on by the FBI, CIA, Army Intelligence and the state police and sentenced up to five years in prison for refusing to engage in an unjust war or forced into exile. Yet, all these sacrifices, great as they are for U.S. citizens, are but a shadow compared to the suffering endured by the people of Vietnam and Cambodia.

From 1965 to 1972, the U.S. government dropped 10 million tons of bombs on Vietnam, six times that dropped on Europe during WW II.

The U.S. Army's strategic hamlet and forced urbanization programs burned villages to the ground, napalmed women, children and the aged (the young men were away fighting) and created millions of refugees. According to Edward Kennedy's Senate subcommittee, one-fourth of the South Vietnamese population were killed, injured or made homeless.

Today, confronted with heart-rending reports of orphans, refugees and round-ups of collaborators, we are again reminded of the terrible human cost of war. Yet, these tragedies are but a pittance compared to the human and physical destruction wrecked upon the Vietnamese people for more than a decade by our government.

In Cambodia, peace with honor has been won. The U.S. government, with its military, CIA and economic development advisers who turned a once-plush country into a land of human and economic desolation, has been forced out of the country. Four days later, the U.S.-backed government of generals was conquered by the Cambodian people.

Now in Vietnam, too, the cause for which millions of U.S. citizens struggled against their government has been won. With the final evacuation of U.S. governmental administrators and contractors, Viet has fallen to the Vietnamese. With Vietnamese soil free of foreign invader the first time in more than a century, peaceful reconstruction of an artif divided nation can finally begin.

The end of war in one part of the does not, of course, mean any final vi has been won. Elsewhere, as in son Africa, struggles for liberation from h domination are still in process.

Yet, it is fitting and appropriate at time that the people of our country, ancestors fought a revolution 200 year for their independence from foreign nation, celebrate the victories in Inde These victories of the Cambodian Vietnamese people are victories for struggle too, for which we were be jailed, spied upon and driven into exi our own government.

Quartet clarified

Though I greatly appreciate the article on my recent recital, it has been brought to my attention that within that article the saxophone quartet discussed was not delineated correctly. I find it necessary to clarify the event and articulate the group that performed.

The quartet that performed was the Michigan State Saxophone Quartet, of which I am a member, coached by Elaine U. Zajac, saxophone instructor for the MSU Music Dept. All members are students within the saxophone department Zajac heads. Also under her direction are other MSU saxophone quartets.

I regret this unfortunate mistake and hope that the situation is now clarified. Louis Caimano, Jr. 527 N. Sycamore St.

Recycle papers

It seems to be popular for many instructors, secretaries and students to sit back and complain about unemployment and environmental dilemmas.

It is also true that many of these "concerned citizens" are just sitting and complaining without doing anything about these two problems. All they would have to do is to recycle their newspapers, white office paper and computer printouts and cards, and they would be part of the unemployment solutions.

Maybe then the other 49 student employes and myself can keep our jobs and the campus recycling program from being

PIRGIM REPORTS

Defense spending kills jobs

By MARION ANDERSON PIRGIM Staff Member

Throughout the United States, 844,000 Americans woke up this morning unemployed because the military budget is over $80 billion. And it is probably safe to say that not even 1 per cent of them realized that this is the cause. How could military spending cause unemployment? "I always thought defense spending creates jobs," people say. The myth has long been with us that military spending is good for the economy-that it primes the pump and uses up "excess

In fact, military spending does incalculable damage to the economy. It adds to inflation. It increases unemployment. And it uses up increasingly scarce resources: raw materials, energy and expertise.

productive capacity.'

The military budget is inflationary because it pays people to produce goods which no one can buy. With their earnings, these workers then compete for the goods and services produced by other people, driving prices up.

Unemployment is increased nationwide because spending money on the military creates fewer jobs than virtually any other kind of expenditure. If spent on government hiring, $1 billion hires 79,000 military personnel, compared with 100,000 teachers. The Pentagon reports that $1 billion in military contracting creates 55,000 jobs. compared with 65,000 jobs created by the same amount spent for civilian industry.

Even this Pentagon figure may be inflated; my own calculations suggest that fewer than 30,000 jobs are created by $1 billion spent on military industry, primarily because so much of the money is spent not to hire people, but to buy elaborate and expensive hardware.

PIRGIM's new report, "The Empty Pork Barrel: Unemployment and the Pentagon Budget" calculates the negative employment impact of recent $80 billion military budgets. It shows what would have happened to expenditures, and thus jobs, nationwide if the tax money had been left in the hands of individuals. It shows what sectors of the economy would have had more jobs, and how many more. The study takes into account people employed in military industry and those employed directly by the Pentagon.

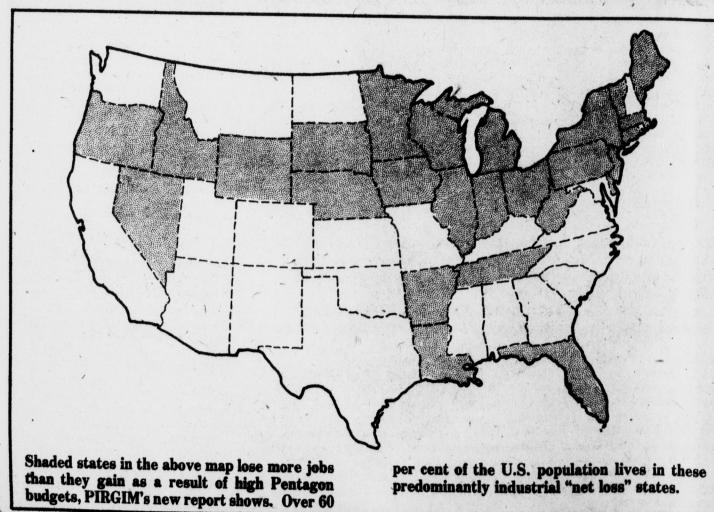

Some states, those with major military contractors or large bases, gain jobs. but analyzing all 50 states, the study found that over 60 per cent of the U.S. population lives in states which lose jobs. Stretching across the northern part of the United States, from Maine to Oregon, is an unbroken band of states which lose more jobs than they gain from military spending, including the industrial states of the Northeast and

A grey - haired man sits slumped in a vinyl chair reading an outdated Newsweek. His only company is a morning TV soap opera and a small boy who fidgets nervously in his chair while holding his mother's oversized purse.

It is a quiet morning at the Sparrow Hospital emergency ward in Lansing.

But the placidness of the ward can change at any minute if the outside emergency doors are suddenly pushed open by a stretcher holding a moaning heart attack victim or unconscious victim of a drug overdose or a construction worker who has been cut up by a machine.

Staffers never know what will come through those doors.

"Everyday is unusual, challenging, exciting and sometimes depressing," said Dr. Matthies Evans, the head physician at the emergency ward.

Because everyday brings an atmosphere of unexpectedness, the staff has to act quickly when an emergency case is rushed in - it's called reactive medicine.

"We have to evaluate the patient on what he says," Evans said. "We don't know his history or his personality. You have to make up your mind about what you're going to do, do it and then move on to the next group."

A stretcher holding a small figure is wheeled quickly into the waiting room, followed by a man with lacerations on his face who is chattering loudly in Spanish. Dr. Evans follows them through the double doors that separate the waiting room from the treatment area. Inside, nurses prepare equipment to treat the new patients in a flurry of activity.

But once the double doors close, the soap opera again dominates the attention of the people in the waiting room. It is almost as if nothing ever happened.

Behind those closed doors are six treatment rooms equipped with instruments used in treating lacerations, removal of foreign objects and other minor surgery.

The flow of emergency cases to the treatment rooms is greatest from 3 to 11 p.m. Judy Caldwell, the head emergency nurse, attributes this to the fact that more people are out then.

"We have our quiet days and days so busy you'd think there isn't another hospital on earth," she said.

But the excitement of working in the emergency room is what keeps the staff there. Everyone working there wants to be working there and no where else.

"I've been a nurse since 1961 and I've been working in the emergency ward since 1961," Caldwell said. "It's very challen-

By general staff consensus, Friday and Saturday nights are the most memorable. More trauma cases, car accident casualties and rape victims are brought in then.

"There's a joke among the staff that when a full moon is out, things happen," Caldwell said. "And sometimes that's true."

Tom Gaskin, an MSU student who works as a hospital security guard, recalls being threatened with kung fu by a man who was brought into the emergency ward. At another time, a man came in with a bone sticking through his wrist, but his only concern was a fist full of bloodied money that he pulled from his pants pocket.

"I see plenty of strange accidents come in here," he said. He shakes his head as if words are an inadequate measure of what he has seen.

Tonight, however, the only exciting events are happening on the TV news. But in the emergency ward, that can change at

General Motors to end optional air bags in '77

DETROIT (UPI) — General Motors Corp. said Thursday that it plans to stop offering air bags as optional equipment on its cars beginning with the 1977 model year.

GM, the only automaker offering the controversial safety devices to the public, cited the costs of adapting the air bags to the smaller cars it plans to build by 1977 and public apathy.

Unless the government reinstitutes its regulations calling for some sort of passive restraints in 1977 automobiles, drivers and their passengers will have only the present lap and shoulder belts. The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration plans new hearings on passive restraints May 19.

GM began offering the air bags as optional equipment on several full - sized models in January 1974 and was geared up to produce 100,000 a year. It has sold only

Restaurants allot areas for nonsmoking patrons

State News Staff Writer Segregation will be practiced at several area restaurants beginning next week.

During a trial program sponsored by the Michigan Lung Assn., smokers and nonsmokers will have the chance to voluntarily separate themselves by sitting in specially marked areas.

J's Chalet, 1515 Center St., and Holiday Inn, 3121 E. Grand River Ave., are two local eating establishments participating in the program. They were asked to designate special dining sections as nonsmoker areas, ask patrons if they would prefer to sit in these areas and report to the lung association on customer response.

"We're not going to ask every person as he comes in if he smokes or not, we're just going to identify nonsmoker areas by signs and let the customer choose if he wants to sit in them," said Helen McDonald, manager of J's Chalet.

Al Saylor, manager of the East Lansing Holiday Inn, said he smokes two packs of cigarets a day but will not be smoking them where nonsmokers will be bothered.

Federal Reserve to hike money supply

ASHINGTON (AP) - The ral Reserve Board plans to e the nation's money by as much as $21.5 in the year ending next to help prod the nation's ny out of its deep board chairman F. Burns said Thursday. amount of money is to one - third of the Ford proposed deficit for fiscal year and would be nearly to pay for a single year's oil imports at the current high prices.

"The monetary path we're on is sufficient to insure a strong economic recovery," Burns told the Senate Banking Committee.

He said the board proposes to increase the money supply at between 5 and 7.5 per cent in the year that began in April, up from about 4.7 per cent during 1974, when the increase amounted to about $12.8 billion.

It was the first time in the 62 - year history of the money - managing Federal Reserve Board that its money growth targets had been publicly revealed in advance. The growth figures given by Burns are for the M - 1 measure, which includes currency and bank checking accounts.

The size of the nation's money supply is important to the economy because it helps determine how much money is available for lending and borrowing by banks, businesses and consumers. Too little

And in Detroit, the Chrysler Corp. announced that it will operate all its plants next week, reopening the facility at Belvidere, Ill. General Motors and American Motors will operate all of their U.S. plants next week, but announced no new recalls of workers. Ford will announce next week's production schedule Friday. Burns had been reluctant to reveal the money growth targets, but was forced to do so by a congressional resolution that was largely the work of Sen. William Proxmire, D - Wis., chairman of the Banking Com-

Burns described the 1975 -1976 money goals as "a course of moderation in monetary policy" which contrasts to the policy of "moderate restraint" that the board followed during the period of high inflation in Proxmire said he was satisfied that Burns had complied with the spirit of the congressional resolution, but said he favored a bigger increase in the money supply, possibly in the range of 8 to 10 per cent.

"I personally urge you to follow a more expansionary policy," Proxmire told Burns. "In view of the tremendous unemployment in the country, we have to take some risks, and those risks are not so great at the moment."

But Burns said the money targets already "err on the side of ease," and that while they are appropriate for a recession they "could not be maintained indefinitely without running a serious risk of releasing new inflationary pressures."

such great concern in determining money supplies now.

The Senate, meanwhile, approved a budget resolution including a 1976 fiscal program which sponsors said vvould bring faster economic recovery than Ford's proposals.

The resolution calls for a $365-billion spending ceiling with a $67.2 billion deficit. Ford has called for spending of $355.6 billion and a maximum deficit of $60 billion.

Proxmire appeared to disagree with Burns that the future House which is considering its

The Stables Offers The Complete Night Out

You would hardly suspect that a repainted barn less than a mile from campus could be called "Michigan's Showcase for National Entertainment," but The Stables supports that claim by offering nationally famous acts week after Acts that have appeared at The Stables range from the folk sounds of Kenny Rankin, Josh White Jr., Dion, and Ritchie Havens to the country sounds of Waylon Jennings and Johnny Hartford to such jazz heavies as Miles Davis, Les McCann, George Ahmad Jamal, Stanley Turrentine, Freddie Hubbard and Larry Coryell.

The Stables is one of those rare nightclubs that offers the total night out, that is, to dine by candlelight, to toast with after dinner cocktails and then to be entertained by top national acts. The menu offers a wide selection of prices and meals. Sandwiches and entrees are reasonably priced with the highest price on the menu only $4.95. Every week there is a special which reduces the price on a certain entree for the entire week. The Stables has a new wine list that includes Lambrusco by the glass and carafe. Entertainment on weekdays begins at 8:30 with the second set beginning at 10:30. On Friday and Saturday nights the first set starts at 10 and the second set at midnight. The cover charge includes staying through both sets of music. Sunday marks the appearance of a nationally known act for a special Super Sunday concert. There are two separate and complete shows. The first show starts at 7 and the second show starts at 11. Tickets can be purchased for either show, but the house is cleared after the first show. This week's Super Sunday, features the fabulous Roger McGuinn for two shows. Coming artists include Stanley Turrentine, Freddie Hubbard, Pure Prairie League, George Benson, Larry Coryell and Ellen

Sadat asks Soviet credit aid

By The Associated Press

President Anwar Sadat of Egypt, in an appeal indicating that aid from his oil-rich Arab allies still leaves him short of funds, asked the Soviet Union Thursday to prolong his arms purchase credit.

Speaking at a May Day rally 240 miles south of Cairo, Sadat also called on the United States in its current policy review to make clear whether it supports Israel within its 1967 borders or in the occupation of Arab territory conquered that year.

Sadat told the rally to expect to hear tomorrow about a new diplomatic approach in the Middle East crisis. He said the step "aims ultimately at not accepting a return to the state of no war, no peace" that marked the period prior to the 1973 war with Israel.

The Egyptian president, whose speech was nationally televised, further told the rally that he would no longer tolerate riots and strikes over rising prices. He promised a 30 per cent increase in wages for lower-paid workers.

In asking for additional credit, Sadat said he finds it impossible to keep up payments on the $3.6 billion to $6 billion

Union rejected a request for a payments delay when Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy visited Moscow last month.

"I wish to say to our friends in the Soviet Union to appreciate the difficulties we are facing," Sadat said. "We never said we will not pay. We never asked to be released from our commitment. We are asking for reassessment of our posi-

Western countries during the period that the Soviet Union withheld arms shipments.

Egypt's projected military budget for 1975 is $3.1 billion. At the Arab summit in Rabat last fall Egypt and Syria were each granted $1 billion for their war effort against Israel. But Arab League sources said they have received only about half that sum because only Saudi Arabia and Kuwait have fully paid their allocations. In other Middle developments:

Students say that Olds has on several occasions halted the use of police force when before it might have been automatic.

The Center for Peaceful Charge was established as an academic unit at Kent in the spring of 1971 and enrolls about 150 students each term in courses on social action.

Where the burned ROTC building once stood, a small gathering spot was created. Called Hyde Park, it was intended as a place where speakers could rant, cajole or curse freely. Two summers ago a blacksmithing demonstration was given there, and several religious devotees have blasted student morals from the park's soapboxes:

But the park is rarely used by students now.

"It may be boycotted just because everyone viewed it at the time as inadequate, a pacifier, a half - assed attempt to reconciliate," says Tom Michaels, 20, a Kent junior.

Other than these, there are few administrative responses to May 4. Olds says more emphasis has been placed on academic advising, and on close communication between faculty and students.

But students feel that Olds has tried too hard to please everyone, that he talks out of both sides of his mouth, and has failed to seriously commit the university to remembering May 4. Those who refuse to forget it, clearly in the minority, say there is something to be learned.

"I learned one thing," said one wounded student on returning to campus last fall. "That wasn't the way to do it."

"I make this pilgrimage every year," said a young man from nearby Newton Falls, as he gently rubbed the bullet hole in the sculpture. "It's gotta be remembered, because there's too much chance of it happening again."

"Time heals all things, but it shouldn't heal this," says Amy Shaw, who has worked many hours with her committee of students, faculty and "townies" to plan the vigil and schedule the speakers.

"Yes, I'm going to the vigil,"

'The last word in light shows' will perform at the Auditorium

Laserium, "the last word in light shows," will be presented in four performances Saturday in the University Auditorium.

Laserium's krypton gas laser-produced light effects are stunning, to say the least. Seemingly suspended in blank space, symmetrical patterns of pure laser light revolve, pulsate, grow, float, change shape, vanish and reappear to the well-chosen accompaniment of classical and contemporary music.

The performances will be projected onto a curved screen, 55 feet wide by 40 feet high. The program's music-which includes selections by Pink Floyd, Emerson Lake and Palmer and Johann Strauss-will be played through four custom speakers dispersed through the auditorium. Laserium has been presented with increasing success and public acclaim since it was first shown at Los Angeles's Griffith Park Observatory in 1973. Laserium has since been presented in Denver, New York, San Francisco and recently Ann Arbor, to large audiences.

The beautiful effects of the Laserium show are created by a Krypton gas laser whose beam is projected through a complex series of prisms and mirrors which creates the special effects. Also employed is a 1,000-milliwatt, portable laser projection system capable of expanding light images 180 degrees in all directions. All light passing through the system is diffused, or rapidly scanned, thus rendering it harmless.

The program lasts about an hour.

READY FOR MICHIGAN NINE

Batsmen face weekend family

By MIKE LITAKER

State News Sports Writer With a former local high school star, a transfer and two brothers pitted against each other, this weekend's Big Ten meeting between MSU and Michigan almost seems like a throwback to the old feuds the Hatfields and McCoys used to battle out down yonder.

MSU, 19 - 11, will travel to Ann Arbor Saturday for a single nine - inning contest at 1 p.m. while the Wolverines, 15 - 8, venture here Sunday for a 1 p.m. tilt at Kobs Field.

The games will have a special meaning for several members of both teams. Former Lansing Eastern star Randy Hackney will be stationed at first base for U - M in his first and final appearance before the hometown team.

Hackney, a transfer from Central Michigan, has poled seven round - trippers and driven home 19 mates on the year to lead the maize and blue in both departments.

"Randy has been a tremendous addition to our team this season," Michigan coach Moby Benedict said in sizing up his senior slugger, who is carrying a .354 batting average.

"Last fall we didn't even know who he was. He walked into my office and asked if he could try out for the team. I told him he'd get just as much of a chance as any other walk - on. We're just

MSU catcher Rick Seid began his baseball career at Michigan but switched to MSU after one year and many ill feelings later. The other especially interested parties on Saturday will be the Spartans' starting pitcher George Mahan, 4 -2, and brother Ted, who just happens to be the Wolverines No. 1 catcher.

While all this brotherly love is taking place over the weekend, MSU's version of the Mahan combination will put his record on the line against Wolverine ace Chuck Rogers. Rogers has racked up a 5 - 1 record to go with a 2.03 earned run average. MSU coach Danny Litwhiler thinks the former basketball player turned moundsman gets his share of help from the natural surroundings at Michigan.

"The reason Rogers is so effective is because he's pitching out of that bad background over there. Mahan is taller than Duane Bickel and he can pitch out of that tall sky too," Litwhiler Bickel, who owns a 5 - 1 mark of his own, will oppose Craig Forhan (2 - 1) on the mound Sunday. Forhan leads the maize and blue hurlers with a microscopic 1.86 ERA.

In the hitting department, outfielders Mark Grenkowski, .378, and Pete Ross, .301, along with Hackney, have provided the spark in the Michigan efforts at the plate.

Outfielder Mike Fricke managed to hang onto the MSU team batting lead that he has held most of the season after belting a double and triple against Notre Dame last Tuesday. Big days by third baseman Randy Pruitt and outfielder Al Weston moved the pair back up in the team hitting picture among the leaders. Amos Hewitt leads the RBI category with 25.

This weekend's schedule in the Big N almost certain to knock a couple teams contention in the conference race. A sweet MSU (5 - 0) would virtually put the Sparts the driver's seat the rest of the way. T place Wisconsin has lost twice in the Big while last season's cochamps, Minnesot Iowa, have each lost three and two respectively.

With the usual tense rivalry that is emails along with the interpersonal ties on both to anything is liable to happen. more than 40 ships involved in the evacuation effort would be gone within a few hours.

But Schlesinger said the ships leaving waters off the Vietnamese coast, including five aircraft carriers, are carrying less than 8,000 persons lifted out of Saigon by helicopter plus others who managed to make it on their own to U.S. ships standing off the Vietnamese coast.

Meanwhile, the Pentagon reported that as of 6 a.m. Thursday, Friday morning, the Pentagon said. A Pentagon spokesman said evacuees are expected to begin arriving at Ft. Chaffee, Ark., on Friday and at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., on Saturday.

In addition to those already in the United States, officials estimated a total of 61,000 Indochina refugees are either aboard U.S. ships or housed at U.S. bases in the Pacific.

White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said today that President Ford expects about 90 per cent of the refugees to take up residence in the United States.

For some of those who arrived at Camp Pendleton, it was a matter of arranging transportation to the homes of relatives or "sponsors" who have agreed to be responsible for them.

Others, almost all Vietnamese, arrived at Camp Pendleton without sponsors in self-imposed exile not knowing where to find friends, homes or jobs.

The unsponsored refugees are given Social Security numbers, so they will be able to work once they find jobs, and their names, skills and other data were being made available to volunteer agencies so that homes and employment could be found for them. Cynthia Weyland, a spokesman for the State Dept., said all government agencies are trying to find sponsors and jobs for the Vietnamese refugees.

She said that during their stay at the U.S. reception centers, the Vietnamese will be offered orientation and English classes before they leave for assimilation into American society.

Another State Dept. official emphasized that none of the refugees will be dumped on the welfare unemployment rolls.

In Brazil, a spokesman for the Foreign Ministry said the government is studying an inquiry from the U.S. Embassy as to whether Brazil would accept some Vietnamese refugees. He said the inquiry was under casual study pending detailed information

But if a patient wants better hospital accommodation and treatment by a doctor or specialist outside the hospital staff, he will pay extra.

Opponents of Medibank, however, claim the government is grossly misrepresenting what the program will do. They also claim the whole enterprise could be a financial disaster. Their arguments:

•Medibank's payments for a doctor's fees are based on "scheduled fees," the amount the government thinks a doctor should charge. Medibank, for instance, considers a 25-minute consultation is worth $8.12, and will pay 85 per cent of that.

But many doctors charge far more. The Australian Medical Assn. suggests a charge of $15.45 for 25 minutes. Differences between scheduled fees and what Medibank will pay will have to be borne completely by the patient.

•Most hospital beds in Australia are in hospitals owned by state offices with unnecessary cases. from the U.S. government. Australia's nonprofit private health funds, which employ 5,500 people and paid $730 million in claims in the year ending last June say they expect some decline in business when Medibank begins. been speeded up to 4,000 a day.

DNR aims to save wolves

By CAROLYN FESSLER State News Staff Writer

Last year four Eastern timber wolves were tagged with identification labels and released from Northern Michigan University. Within a year two were shot, one was hit by a car and one had been caught in a coyote trap.

"All of them died at the hands of man," said Ralph Bailey, Michigan Dept. of Natural Resources (DNR) regional wildlife biologist for the Upper Peninsula.

Bailey has been named leader of a national recovery team for the Eastern timber wolf, now an endangered species. The team will examine the total former range of the animalwhich consisted of most of the eastern third of the nation-and determine the best areas for repopulation.

"The wolves were formerly well distributed all over Michigan," Bailey said. "Today there are, at the most, 20 here in the U.P. and about 42 out on Isle Royale."

Bailey's team plans to bring wolves into areas where the restoration of their population would be most feasible. In

Rate of jobless in Lansing up

LANSING (UPI) - Unemployment in the greater Lansing area increased three-tenths of a per cent in March as compared with February, according to figures released by the Michigan Employment Security Commission.

The MESC said Thursday the March rate was 12.9 per cent, or 26,800 unemployed, compared with 12.6 per cent, or 26,400 jobless, in February.

In March of 1974, the jobless rate was 8.1 per cent, or 16,900 unemployed.

The greater Lansing area includes all of Ingham, Eaton, Clinton and Ionia Counties.

highly social animal, traveling in packs made up of the nuclear family. They feed on other animals, including deer, which is the main objection to increasing their population. Bailey, however, feels the damage done to the deer population is minimal and overrated. The few people that have ever seen one of these nearly extinct creatures can testify to its sheer beauty and grace, he said. Its deep, narrow chest and long legs (the better to travel with) are topped with a glossy coat of fur, and its weight ranges from 60 to 120 pounds.

"This wolf whose population is hanging by a thread is part of our wilderness and heritage," Bailey said. "It is not reasonable for mankind to permit extermination of any form of
