WASHINGTON (AP) - The Ford next door to the White House. Administration outlined a $605 million, two-year program Monday for the transportation and care of up to 150,000 Vietnamese

Of the total, White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said $98 million will be spent within another week. The biggest chunk, $507 million, requires congressional

It would carry the program to scheduled completion by Sept. 30, 1977.

Nessen also announced that Ford will meet in Washington June 11-12 with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

Ford will hold a news conference today at 7:30 p.m. in the Executive Office Building

The director of Ford's refugee program, L. Dean Brown, said the $507 million would allow for an eventuality of up to 150,000 refugees being processed to the United States and other countries.

Brown said that if refugees numbered the full 150,000, only an estimated 30,000 would be heads of households seeking jobs. He said these would be processed throughout the United States without aggravating unemployment in any one area.

Nessen said the $98 million was in a fund for the postwar reconstruction of Vietnam. When the funds runs out in about a week, he said, there will be no more money to continue the refugee program unless Congress acts.

The press secretary said Ford's mail was running 4,465 to 2,936 in favor of assistance for the refugees. But he said there was no count on reaction to their resettlement in the United States.

Nessen said, however, that opposition to resettlement here "does not represent the thinking of a majority of Americans."

Some of the 44,000 refugees on Guam have brought out $2 million in savings, Brown said. He said those persons would not get U.S. assistance for resettlement.

Brown told the House immigration subcommittee there are four categories of refugees, starting with 55,000 Vietnamese brought out under a special provision of U.S. immigration laws that would have accommodated up to 130,000.

He said the second category includes 69,000 Vietnamese picked up at sea by U.S. ships. "We propose to accept responsibility for them," Brown declared.

The third category involves about 3,000 Vietnamese and Cambodians who fled to other countries, many in U.S.-supplied ships and planes. The fourth category is an unknown number of diplomats around the

The U.S. planes and ships will be reclaimed, Dean said, and the Vietnamese and Cambodians who used them to flee will first be required to seek asylum in the countries they went to.

If refused asylum they will be asked to seek resettlement assistance from international organizations, Brown said; and if they can't get that, they will be considered for immigration to the United States on a case-by-case or class-by-class basis.

He said most diplomats will be able to settle abroad, and those who cannot get international organizations to take responsiblity for them will be considered for entry into the United States.

The House last week rejected a $327million aid bill for the refugees, partly because the bill contained after-the-fact approval of U.S. troop use for Saigon's

Terry, who is married, came to MSU after finishing his undergraduate work at the University of Florida with a bachelor of science degree in chemistry.

ASMSU, SWU battle unsettled The ASMSU Board was forced to adjourn Monday night before a decision was made on the conflict over ASMSU president Brian Raymond's interim appointment to the Labor Relations

Office cabinet director position. The board adjourned before settling the issue of a non-Student Workers Union member being appointed to the position after the meeting dissolved into a circus-like atmosphere with spectators attempting to take over the meeting.

The meeting was orderly until a bill supporting a position of neutrality by the office towards the union was introduced by the policy committee.

When the policy committee announced that they were backing the bill of neutrality that Raymond and the interim Labor Relations director Steve Skowron supported, union organizers took the floor to speak against it. Union organizer Doyle O'Conner said that a position of neutrality by ASMSU toward the union would greatly weaken the union's position at an informal hearing about union authorization to be held Thursday between the union, the University and the Michigan Employment Relations Commission. "There's not a union now and there won't be one unless ASMSU fights for it," O'Conner said.

When a motion was made to close debate on the neutrality bill Board members Curtis Stranathan, College of Communication Arts and Justin Morrill, and Eric Brooks, College of Communication Arts, tried desperately to keep discussion open but were defeated by one vote. At this point a board member made a motion that a vote be taken on the neutrality bill. Order at the meeting completely disintegrated.

Members of the audience were screaming expletives at Raymond and other board members as Raymond tried to organize a vote. Stranathan leaped upon the table and shouted to Raymond. "You're trying to sell us out" and repeatedly cited his right to call for a recess until one board member that had already left the meeting could return to vote. The board successfully overrode the call for a recess and the crowd erupted, beginning to chant and clap to stall until the member could arrive.

Raymond attempted to move the meeting into executive session with only the board members attending, but the crowd followed them to the other office and violently pushed their way into the room. At that point Raymond adjourned the meeting before the issue was resolved.

time to run the center's medical clinic say that the conditions are not unsanitary or dangerous to patient's health.

By LINDA SANDEL State News Staff Writer

Though less-than-perfect housekeeping at the Drug Education Center (DEC) has one East Lansing city councilman up in arms, other city officials and the doctors who staff DEC say they'd rather have the center in a slightly rundown environment than not have it

Councilman John Polomsky has charged that the DEC, which operates a free medical clinic and provides other services for those with drug-related problems, suffers from lack of professional organization, sloppy and unclean conditions and shaky financial management.

"I don't like the whole motif of the center," Polomsky said. "My central feeling is that it is not a very clean operation and that it could use some professional organization — it's a damn dingy place."

Because of these reservations Polomsky has said that he would like to pare the $46,106 allocated to the DEC in the 1975-76 city budget.

Under the proposed city budget the DEC would receive $5,000 more this year than it received last year. But the people who run the DEC on a day-to-day basis say that Polomsky is overstating his case and failing to consider the purpose and clientele of the center. "Polomsky is talking about having a place that's as sterile as a wealthy hospital," said Scott Huffman, DEC's director. "He's coming from his middle-class perspective. Of course a person with his background might not come here to DEC. But that doesn't mean we don't do our best for the people we serve.'

Elliot Frank, director of the DEC's medical clinic, said that Polomsky was confusing absolute sterility with cleanliness.

"This is an old place," he said of DEC's building at 405 Grove St. "It's been condemned and rundown ever since we started renting it from the city."

City Manager John Patriarche said that the city is currently looking for another place to house the DEC because conditions at the house have become so crowded.

But Frank said these conditions have not affected the quality of the care provided at the center. And the 13 area doctors who voluntarily lend their time to staff the clinic, which serves 250 people every month, generally agree.

"I'm satisfied with the facilities at the DEC," said Dr. H. E. Crow, director of Family Practice residency at Sparrow Hospital.

"You have to remember that this is a peripheral kind of establishment whose clientele would probably be turned away at other facilities," he added. "The clientele is probably more comfortable in a less than sterile atmosphere.

"The sanitation certainly isn't dangerous to anyone. I'm pretty proud of the job the people do there - we've been able to get through to patients who might not have been able to get any care at all if this place didn't exist."

A State News reporter who visited DEC, Monday found that though the furniture was rundown and dust was evident on some of the instrument tables, the center was generally clean, comfortable and seemingly organized.

"The center certainly doesn't look as clean as Sparrow Hospital," Polomsky said. "I didn't care for the type of furniture there - I wouldn't let my dog sit in it.

"As for the clientele - I don't care if they are poor or wealthy. If the city is going to be in the health care business we must be in it in conditions that are professional. "The dignity and worth of the individual is paramount whether he's rich or poor - and I don't think anyone could retain that dignity in a place like the DEC." Polomsky noted that the city does own the house in which the

DEC is located, but said he was not certain that it was the city's responsibility to make improvements on the run down building. Patriarche said, however, that he has recommended that DEC be refunded and that he is satisfied with the job it has done. Polomsky has also said he was not too satisfied with the financial and business side of the center's operation.

But DEC director Huffman noted that the Ingham County Health Dept., which audits the center's books, has been satisfied with the center's financial statements thus far.

With that in mind, Frank said: "If we were financially irresponsible we certainly wouldn't meet the health department standards nor would we be able to be licensed under the state substance abuse act. We also submit complete and accurate statements on our business to the city every month."

Patriarche said that to date he has been satisfied with the statements.

Social Security deficit up

Both short-range and long-range Social Security deficits are expected to be higher than previously projected, according to a report sent to Congress on Monday.

Trustees of the four Social Security trust funds said that the big Old Age, Survivors and Disability Insurance program will for the first time this year pay out more than it will collect in payroll taxes. The deficit for the year is expected to total about $3 billion.

Under current financing, trustees said, the reserves will be exhausted by 1981.

The short-term financing problems, the report said, are created by higher than anticipated inflation, boosting Social Security benefits, and higher unemployment which results in less payroll tax income.

Kissinger denies spy ties

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger denied Monday that he played any role in ordering the CIA to conduct domestic surveillance operations.

"In my period of being in Washington, the National Security Council did not concern itself with domestic intelligence," Kissinger, the President's national security adviser, told reporters following a two-hour appearance before the Rockefeller Commission investigating CIA domestic activities.

Food fund promises made

The United States and Saudi Arabia Monday promised "substantial" contributions to a new international fund to promote a big jump in food production in the developing countries, according to United Nations sources.

Neither the United States nor Saudi Arabia has set a figure

The pledges "in principle" were made at the closed two-day meeting of the World Food Council, which opened in Geneva Monday. The meeting is being attended by representatives from 34 countries, including the major traditional donors of foreign aid, nine oil producing countries expected to become new donors and countries where starvation and widespread malnutrition threaten.

Warning that holdouts would be severely punished. Saigon's new rulers have extended the deadline to May 31 for members of the defeated South Vietnamese armed forces to turn themselves

And, according to a Saigon radio broadcast monitored Monday in Bangkok, the new regime for the sixth consecutive day ordered anyone holding military equipment to turn it in immediately.

Some observers interpreted this as a sign of possible delays in efforts to round up weapons, soldiers, policemen and officials from the old regime. Others said it may mean some former troops are in jungles or other isolated areas.

An order signed by Gen. Tran Van Tra, head of the Saigon military committee, said anyone still hiding after midnight May 31 would be severely punished, according to a Saigon radio broadcast monitored in Bangkok. The broadcast said all who have "temporarily reported" must do so again. The previous deadline had been Wednesday.

Another broadcast said the release of "political prisoners" of the old Saigon regime was under way and called on prisoners already freed and families of prisoners to plan a welcoming ceremony for persons returning from Con Son prison island.

The government of former President Nguyen Van Thieu never acknowledged holding political prisoners, but Communists alleged there were tens of thousands.

Duong Van Minh, the neutralist retired general who was president of South Vietnam for three days before last week's surrender, also was at liberty, according to the Viet Cong's Liberation radio, believed to emanate from Hanoi.

At the same time, the United States prepared to remove more than one - fourth of its troops from Thailand in the next two months as a major step toward total military withdrawal from Ky was rushed through immigration and on to the U.S. mainland only hours after arriving on the tiny Pacific island.

Refugees have been arriving on Guam at the rate of 6,000 a day under the Americansponsored "Operation New Life." The current refugee population on the island is about 27,000. About 5,000 refugees have been leaving each day for the United States.

Officials in the United States, meanwhile, continued to process refugees through Ft. Chaffee, Ark., Eglin Air Force Base in Florida and at Camp Pendleton, Calif.

Marines worked around the clock at Camp Pendleton setting up the last of the "tent cities" for the 14,000 refugees who have already arrived. The camp is equipped to handle 18,000 and about 5,000 already have been processed and released.

Labor Dept. report predicts rise in college grad underemployment

This is the first of a four - part series on the present job outlook and how it will affect MSU graduates. In the next three parts the series will focus on the different job markets and how a student's major will determine whether he or

By MARY ANN CHICK SUE WILLOUGHBY

State News Staff Writers For years, college students have been strung along with implied promises of a good job as a reward for a college degree. But recent statistics show that within the next 10 years one out of every 20 college graduates will find him or herself underemployed in jobs not requiring a college

The U.S. Labor Dept., in a report titled "Occupational Manpower and Training Needs (revised 1974)," predicts the gap between the number of college graduates and college-level jobs will increase after

At MSU, it could mean that 500 graduates per year will be working in jobs that do not require a college degree. Over 10,000 students graduate from MSU

Last year, five of every 100 June graduates could not find a job after graduation. Approximately one of every five students who left MSU with a bachelors degree last year was employed in a job for which college-level educational experience is unnecessary.

MSU Placement Services director Jack Shingleton predicts the job market situation will be even worse for this year's graduates.

Placement Services has already noticed a 7 to 8 per cent drop in the number of employers interviewing students this year.

The drop in the number of employers visiting campus this year is only the start of a growing chain of bad news for students. The drop could mean as many as 1,800 fewer interviews with students. Most employers average 11 to 14 interviews each time they come to campus.

The U.S. Labor Dept., college placement directors, employers, career specialists and unemployed or underemployed college graduates have joined together in saying a college degree is not longer a ticket to Ivar Berg, professor of business and sociology at Columbia University, estimates that "by 1980, 40 per cent of all college graduates will end up in jobs that could be adequately performed by high school graduates.

While educators never said a college degree meant a good job, it seemed to be implied. And the job situation was in a much different position 10 years ago.

In 1965, unemployment was at a record low of 4.5 per cent, and the job outlook for most college graduates was listed as good to excellent.

99 999 99 9999 COLLEGE JOSEPH

Today, the nationwide inflation rate is 12.5 per cent and the outlook is bad.

"Students developed an overexpectation of what a college education could do for them," Shingleton said.

He added that students who think a college degree will get them a job are in for a big surprise.

'Don't assume I mean people should not go to college," he cautioned. "Those who do do better socially, culturally and economically than those who don't."

College graduates will earn more during their lifetimes and have a better chance of getting employed than high school graduates. A college graduate will earn $710,000, while a high school grad will earn only $480,000, according to a U.S. Census Bureau study on education and income levels. Only 5 per cent of recent graduates are unemployed, compared to 7.8 per cent of persons without a degree, according to a 1973 study by the U.S. Dept. of Labor.

The changing job market makes it hard for career specialists to predict which college degrees and majors will be in demand tomorrow. However, there are some degrees expected to remain in high for the next few years.

Right now, the number of job offers in accounting exceeds the supply, said Ed Fitzpatrick, asst. director of Placement

Graduates in the Colleges of Human, Osteopathic and Veterinary Medicine, Business and Engineering are expected to remain in high demand for the next few Low-demanding majors include students enrolled in the Colleges of Arts and Letters, Social Science, Education, James Madison and Justin Morrill Colleges.

"About 75 per cent of the jobs available today may not be there in the next 25 years, said Camille Smith, career specialist in the Counseling Center. "We can only feel out the trends and try to predict what will

Fitzpatrick said predicting employment trends is difficult because of outside factors that cannot be foreseen, such as the recent

While many career specialists are more willing to predict which majors will be demanded in the future, few are willing to suggest that students hop from major to major in response to supply and demand.

"Organizations are looking for the kind of student that has learned to learn, communicate well and adapt to any situation," Smith

Red flags, denim jackets and heavy walking boots were the standard marching uniform for United Farm Worker (UFW) supporters who rallied at the state Capitol Monday to launch a five-day, 82-mile trek to Detroit.

The enthusiastic group was sent on their way with words of encouragement and support from legislators, lobbyists and leaders of the state and local UFW organization. Sen. Earl Nelson, D-Lansing, headed the speakers and

"No person can be free until all people are free," Nelson said, paraphrasing the words of Martin Luther King Jr.

Walter Campbell, secretary-treasurer of the Michigan AFL-the rights of all workers are in danger," he said.

The other recurrent sentiments in the speeches centered on blisteres, or the lack of them, and the need for good weather.

The marchers included Rep. Lynn Johndahl, D-East Lansing; Rep. Jackie Vaughn, D-Detroit; Rep. David Hollister, D-Lansing, and Rep. Mark Clodfelter, D-Fling, as well as representatives of the Michigan Catholic Conference, the United Auto Workers and the AFL-CIO.

As the sun burnt through the fog, the marchers set off for East Lansing at a brisk pace, waving UFW flags and chanting "Viva La Causa.'

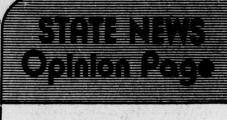

And before they went a block down Michigan Avenue, the Capitol steps were taken over by a group protesting high taxes, who urgently tried to catch the attention of straggling television cameras and newsmen.

MSU, city would gain by single bus system

Nobody has yet voiced strong opposition to the idea of merging the MSU and Capital Area Transportation Authority (CATA) bus systems - and with good reason. The concept of merging the two is an excellent one.

The merger would effect a single bus system that serves both the MSU campus and the greater Lansing area.

On no less than four fronts, the merger stands to benefit practically everybody in the city students and homeowners alike.

Most important of the benefits would be the vast improvement of service to be gained from a single bus system. Students would be able, for example, to take a bus from the middle of campus all the way to Okemos Road. For offcampus residents, more comprehensive service to campus and more buses would make public transportation a more feasible alternative to the automobile.

Improved service and added buses would also reduce congestion on city streets since more citizens would be able to take advantage of mass transit and service duplication would at last be eliminated. Needless to say, everybody gains from reduced traffic congestion, from motorists who don't actually use the improved service to pedestrians braving crammed city streets.

Depending on how the system is present dichotomous one.

administered and what tax base, if any, is used, the merger could also mean lower fares on some routes for the bus-riding public.

And from an administrative standpoint, routes could be planned for service and efficiency without worrying about jurisdictional snares.

A report by the East Lansing Mass Transit Committee now goes to city council, which hopefully will take action at its May 20 meeting.

Before rushing headlong into a final agreement, though, the committee is obligated to examine CATA's shaky financial history. If merging the two systems means jeopardizing the solvency of the campus bus system, officials should re-evaluate the merits of the venture. And if the merger means less service or higher rates for students, then officials should be even more wary. Improved service that students can't afford is no improvement at all.

But MSU officials have already pledged protection of student interests in the plan's development, and hopefully, they will see to it that students do not suffer loss of service or higher rates.

Despite the potential snags. however, an emerging consensus seems to indicate that a single bus system for both MSU and the city has far more potential in terms of service and conservation than the

Amnesty for Attica sought

New York State Assemblyman Arthur O. Eve has asked Gov. Hugh Carey to grant full amnesty to everyone who might be charged with a crime during the 1971 Attica prison riot, and says he will introduce legislation to provide such an amnesty if the governor doesn't act.

In an unrelated move - except as to the general subject — Attorney William Kunstler has announced that he will seek dismissal of the murder conviction of, and a new trial for, John Hill, an Attica inmate at the time of the riot, and one of two men originally charged with killing a guard, William Quinn.

Kunstler's action probably has more chance to succeed. The disclosure that the FBI had planted a paid informer among the defense workers in the Hill case raises a strong possibility that the trial was not fairly conducted. Court hearings are being held to determine how much, if any, information obtained by the informer found its way into the prosecution's case.

Even if it cannot clearly be established that such information specifically tainted the prosecution, it ought to be repugnant to anyone's sense of justice that the federal government planted a spy within an accused man's defense camp - strangely enough when the Attica prosecutions are being conducted by the State of New York. For many, this disclosure will foreclose the possibility that the trial could have been fair; why else plant the spy, they will ask.

The informant episode comes on the heels of charges by Malcolm Bell, formerly a high-ranking member of the prosecution team, that the state investigation disregarded some evidence and did not seek other information that might have led to the indictment of state troopers and officials involved in putting down the riot on Sept. 13, 1971, when 29 inmates and 10 hostages were killed by police gunfire.

A special investigator is looking into Bell's charges, after months of inaction by the attorney general and the governor. These charges are not directly related to the Hill case, but they do raise, in the most direct fashion, the question of selective prosecution. They raise also, as does the FBI informant, the question of the basic fairness of the proceedings at Buffalo.

Even if Carey believed otherwise, the public's fear of crime "coddling criminals" would make it a bold move indeed for him or for the state legislature to grant outright amnesty to all those involved in Attica. This seems true despite the fact that Eve's plan would grant amnesty to state troopers and corrections officers, too - some of whom might yet be indicted somewhere along the line, particularly if Bell's charges are sustained even in part.

Eve's amnesty proposal might serve the useful purpose, however, of forcefully reminding both the Executive and Legislative branches of the state government that dozens of present and former Attica inmates are still under indictment on charges ranging from capital down to the virtually inconsequential.

Combined with Bell's charges, the proposal should be a forceful reminder, as well, that no one has been indicted for the deaths of 39 people and the wounding of 89

police gunfire on Sept. 13, 1971, or for reprisals against inmates taken imately afterwards by both troopers corrections officers, or for the state's fe to provide adequate medical care for

This was especially disappointing considering the unbiased nature of the original article. Perhaps the reason for this was that there were no letters representing another side of the story. If so, this letter will present a different opinion from those letters previously printed, an opinion held by several others that I have talked with concerning this situation.

It seems to me that if the members of the GLM were merely out to have a good time, none of the violence would have occured; however, it also seems to me that their main purpose in being at the bar was to ruffle a few feathers. They should have been willing to accept the consequences when they succeeded instead of crying "discrimination." I am not condoning the actions of those patrons who hassled the GLM group, but I do support the actions of the management of Dooley's as its only reasonable alternative.

There is also one other thing about this whole situation that really bothers me. I would like to ask the members of the GLM what they think would happen to a straight couple if they walked into a gay bar in Detroit (or even in Lansing for that matter)

Statue regains old insight

The Statue of Liberty was gazing toward Europe when I tapped her on her shoulder. "Ma'am," I said, "if you look the other way, we have about 55,000 Vietnamese refugees coming in from Guam and the Philippines. I thought you might hold your torch high and light the way for them.

The statue seemed irritated. "We have too many people in this country now. What am I going to do with 55,000 Orientals?"

"The same thing you did with everybody else. Welcome them. They're tired and they're poor and they are yearning to breathe free.'

"And what about jobs? Who is going to support them?" she said petulantly.

You never worried about that before." I said. "Whoever came to this country eventually found jobs, and almost all of them made very good citizens. There is no reason to think the Vietnamese will be different. After all, you are the mother of "Times have changed, " she growled.

"The American people aren't that thrilled about having a bunch of refugees dumped on them. Who is going to feed them? How many will go on welfare? How do we know their kids won't get in trouble in the streets? We have enough problems in this country without asking for more."

"But," I pleaded, "we're responsible for them being refugees. We screwed up a country like it's never been screwed up before. We supported their corrupt governments, loaded them down with weapons they couldn't use, defoliated their rice paddies and wrecked their families.

"We left the country in a mess. The least we can do is take in whatever huddled masses escaped to our teeming shore."

"That's easy for you to say," the Statue of Liberty replied, "but we have to think of Americans first. They don't want any more foreigners in this country."

"But most of our fathers and grandfathers and great-grandfathers were foreigners. You've welcomed them all. Tell me the truth. Do you have anything against

"I don't personally. But you know how some people are. The Vietnamese have different habits, and they're from another culture. They just don't fit in. Besides I'm supposed to welcome the homeless from Europe. That's why I'm looking in that "These people need refuge," I protested. Their lives are in ruins. Remember a few weeks ago when they flew in orphans from Vietnam and Cambodia? Nobody seemed to object to that." "It's not the same thing," the statue said.

"You can adopt orphans. But what can you do with refugees? "Help them find homes, jobs, make them

"It's out of the question. It isn't our fault they lost the war. Look, no one minds one or two Vietnamese in a community. But you're talking about thousands. They'll stick out like a sore thumb. The unions would never stand for it.' "Please don't turn your back on them," I begged. "If somebody just said, 'Welcome. We're glad you came,' most Americans would go along with it.

"The American people gripe a lot, but they'll do the right thing if somebody leads them. If you could shine your torch toward the Golden Gate Bridge, perhaps the people will be ashamed of the way they've behaved.'

The Statue of Liberty turned slowly. There was a tear in her eye. "I've been here so long I almost forgot why I was holding this lamp. Where did you say I should shine my torch?"

"Over there. Hold it as high as you can and point it toward the West, so every American can see it. That's it. Now repeat after me, 'Send these, the homeless, tempest-tost to me, I lift my lamp beside the golden door."

Bill would strengthen anti-litter law

By CAROLYN FESSLER State News Staff Writer

Motorists caught without litter containers in their vehicles may someday be socked with a fine if a strong anti-litter bill soon to be introduced in the Michigan House is passed.

Patterned after a 2-year-old Washington state law, the bill would also provide for such litter-regulatory measures as uniform litter receptacles that would be easily recognizable and a tax on all manufacturers and retailers of nonreturnable goods.

Rep. Dennis Hertel, D-Detroit, sponsor of the bill, said that the revenue collected by the tax and any fines would be allocated for litter control, disposal research and public education programs. "Last year approximately $4 million in funds was gained by the State of Washington through these measures," Hertel said. "And all that goes toward the eradication of litter in the state, not for schools or dog races.' Certain to be the most controversial portion of the bill is the annual litter assessment paid by sellers of disposable goods equal to

.015 per cent of the gross sales proceeds. Some of the products to be included in this assessment are groceries, newspapers, magazines, tobacco products, beer, wine, soft drinks, cleaning agents and

Also under the proposed law, a person caught littering would be fined a minimum of $25 for the first violation and $50 the second time. For a third violation, the offender would receive a minimum fine of $500. The present penalties for a litter violation are a maximum $400. A judge can currently fine an offender as little as George Bruso, Dept. of Natural Resources (DNR) law executive,

"As I compare it with the bottle bill, this is strictly an anti-litter bill," he said. "It does not reduce solid waste, it does not preserve energy. There are no additional enforcement powers besides the DNR. And I'm a little concerned with the annual litter assessment on groceries and how that may affect the rescinded sales tax."

Sigma Chi trampoline group jumps for MS research funds

By BRIAN HOUGH State News Staff Writer

Look, up in the sky. It's a bird. No, it's a plane. No, it's the Sigma Chi trampoline team bouncing to raise money for multiple sclerosis (MS) research.

Eight members of the 90member fraternity will be jumping this week, next week, the week after that and then two more days in an attempt to collect donations and break the 505-hour record for trampoline endurance jumping.

Each member of the team will jump three hours a day in continuously rotating one-hour shifts. The official start of the record-breaking attempt began at 7:30 p.m. Monday.

That means a new record will be established at 9:30 p.m. May 27, unless the team gives up the fight due to an excess of broken

"We're going to try to keep things safe but it's pretty easy to fly off the tramp and hit a tree or something," said Alan Vassilakos, one of the bouncers.

Sigma Chi is accepting donations and pledges at the trampoline site in front of the fraternity house at 729 Grand River Ave. and has asked the East Lansing City Council to grant it a permit to take donations from cars passing by on Grand River Avenue.

All of the money collected will be given to Rick Young, junior, 593 S. Wonders Hall, and Denise Gazzarari, sophomore, 270 S. Wonders Hall, who will be representing Michigan in the National Multiple Sclerosis Dance for Strength which will be held in California this weekend.

The dance marathon will begin Friday morning and run, or more appropriately dance, until Sunday afternoon, a total of 52 hours.

"We'll be dancing while the fraternity is bouncing," Young said. "This is a team effort and we hope to raise a total of $10,000 before we leave."

Young and Lynn Seeber, his former partner, collected $5,000 during the Meridan Mall dance marathon in March. They won, entitling them to represent Michigan in the national competition. Seeber decided one dance marathon was enough. Gazzarari will replace her for the national event.

The couple which raises the most money before and during the national marathon are crowned the winners. Young was a member of the winning couple last year and won a trip to Mexico, which he sold to raise more money.

Young and Gazzarari have $7,500 to their credit already, most of which was solicited from students and businessmen in East Lansing.

Students have a special stake in the fight against multiple sclerosis because it is a disease which strikes those between the ages of 18 and 40. It is a nonhereditary disease which attacks the central nervous system causing paralysis and vision problems. More than 500,000 Americans suffer from "One of the reasons I'm so interested in the disease is because it attacks people age," Young said. "Apr reason is that researchen so close to finding a cur they need is more more finance their work."

How do Young, Gamand the Sigma Chi trampo team find time to donate to effort?

Club starts nature area

By BRAD MARTISIUS

State News Staff Writer A seven-acre piece of the great outdoors is being transplanted to MSU, just a few hundred yards away from the concrete jungles of Wilson Road.

The first spadefuls of brown earth were turned over Friday for the wildlife sanctuary near the Natural Resources Building. When the project is completed, the result will be a wildlife preserve supporting squirrels, woodchucks, rabbits, pheasants and songbirds.

The area is presently covered by some grasses and a lot of weeds.

"We want to jump its natural development up a few steps," said Barry Loper, a former vice president of the MSU Fisheries and Wildlife Club. "We'll also clean up the pond and plant some hybrid sunfish in there."

Glen Dudderar, wildlife extension specialist for MSU. said that spring berries, June berries, autumn olives and crabapple trees would be have a plentiful supply of food all year round. Shrubs and small trees will also be planted so that the many types of

"We are trying to create an optimum wildlife habitat," Dudderar said. "If we make the area attractive enough for birds and other animals, they'll flock there of their own accord and we'll have no trouble keeping them there."

The Fisheries and Wildlife Club obtained the area from the University to use as a club

"We had been planning the project for a long time," Loper said. "All we needed was money."

When the Daughters of the American Revolution stepped in and offered a grant of $2,000, the club got the go-ahead from the University to develop the area. The area will be an ongoing project for the club, which will be continually developing the area, "in an accelerated version of the way it would develop naturally," Loper said.

The MSU Symphony Orchestra played like a finely tuned trument Sunday night under the direction of guest ductor Antal Jancsovics of Hungary.

Jancsovics presented a trio of 20th century compositions, huding an Arthur Honegger symphony, dances by Zoltan daly, and a Dmitri Shostakovich concerto featuring MSU list and faculty member Peter Rejto.

Conducting from memory, Jancsovics began the concert th Honegger's difficult "Symphony No. 3" ("Symphony urgique"). Honegger's music is not easy, because he places thm on top of rhythm and theme on top of theme.

But his complexity is worthwhile for audiences and sicians both. The players generally appreciate Honegger. tause he writes such generous and interesting parts for lividual sections. He gives the brass section, for instance, a ger role than many orchestral composers do, and MSU's ss played spendidly. Honegger's mood is frequently austere and grave, but his lodies are often beautiful — almost painfully so. The horn woodwind work at the beginning of the second movement s especially effective. The woodwind tones were nearly uid, as they melted into the string entrance.

roughly delightful, often off-beat, rhythms.

Conductor Jancsovics clearly enjoyed the Kodaly piece, as he smiled and danced his way through it. His style of conducting is a gracefully physical one. He moves as fluidly as a mime artist, leading with his body as well as his baton.

For example, the Kodaly dances begin with a whirlwind quality, which Jancsovics illustrated by circling his baton in an alternating clockwise and counterclockwise motion, as if to wind and unwind the orchestra.

And where the third movement of the Honegger piece builds up by means of atonal chords to a nearly unbearable pitch of tension, Jancsovics let his body go suddenly limp to lead the players down a rapidly descending glissando into a

One indication that the conductor and the players were in touch with each other Sunday night was the orchestra's ability to crescendo and decrescendo gradually or at whatever pace Jancsovics requested.

The Shostakovich "Concerto in E-Flat for Violincello" was also pleasing. The allegro movement may be the most technically difficult, but it was during the slower moderato with its easy rolling tempo and hauntingly sweet sounds and during the cadenza which followed that the audience was completely in cellist Rejto's hands.

His cello speaks with many voices, depending on the requirements of the composition's mood. He can produce a thin tone, a fat one and several degrees between. But for the most part, his tone is intense and luxuriant.

stra demonstrated its discipline in its ability to follow Rejto's slight tempi changes with precision. The group members played in fine balance, both with the soloist and one another during the entire evening.

Rivers, Mitchell groups excell in jazz concerts

By DAVE STERN

State News Reviewer Jazz is at a crossroads. Never before has there been so little unanimity about what direction jazz is moving in or even what jazz is. That this is true within the supposedly homologous area known as the by this weekend's Jazz Show-Rivers Trio and the Roscoe Mitchell Quartet.

Opening the last concert rumored to be God on piano. Saturday night, the Mitchell quartet was a group highly concerned with structure and compositional effects. Introduced as a "local" group, the Miller, bass, and Randy Gillespie, drums, started with a highly structured composition, featuring Schunk in a Cecil Taylor bag, and demonstrating the tremendous influence that "new" music has had on Mitchell. With Mitchell in a highly percussive mood, the piece focused more on orchestration than on solo work.

The highlight of Roscoe's set was a beautiful tenor duet with the quartet becoming a quintet, adding Gary Killworth on tenor

Closing the set, in quartet formation once again, was an arrangement of Albert Ayler's "Ghosts." Though hindered by the lack of propulsive drumming, which marked Ayler's most successful recordings of the number; it provided an interesting amalgam of the Apollonian and the Dionysian, of intellect and emotion, as represented by Mitchell and Ayler.

In remarkable contrast, the Rivers Trio operated in an improvisatory mode throughout the one extended number which made up their 75 minute set. While the main influence of the first half of the concert came from outside the area generally delineated as jazz (if exist), Rivers was displaying his historical roots throughout the set. Bringing to mind not so much John Coltrane, as Charlie Parker and Ornette Coleman, there was a heavy bop influence throughout.

The interplay within the well-known trio was excellent, showcasing drummer Barry Altschul and Bassist Dave Holland as much as Rivers himself. Rivers displayed his avant-garde was demonstrated well recognized fluency on tenor and soprano sax and case series featuring the Sam flute, and proved surprisingly adept as a pianist, once again evoking Cecil Taylor-who is

Perhaps the main point made at the concert was though popular attitudes identify Coltrane and his pianist, McCoy Tyner, as "the ones who put it all together," Taylor, and Ornette Coleman on alto sax, were the true source of the avant-garde Though Taylor was the first to make his statement, he has

Jazz Showcase reportedly broke even on the series, to the surprise of even the promoters. This is a major step, for this type of music is too important not to be represented on a campus of this size. The concert series was definitely one of the highlights of the year. Hopefully it set a ### quartet, Roscoe on altosax; Gary Schunk, piano; Steve Supporting actors buoy sputtering "Front Page"

By EDD RUDZATS State News Reviewer

Was there really a need to remake Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthurs' classic newspaper comedy? Filmed twice previously, "The Front Page" is once again available for public viewing. The play itself unfortunately now is beginning to show its age considerably, even while the reason for this third version of the comedy is perfectly

In an effort to make lightening strike twice, Billy Wilder and his cowriter on many other famous films I. A. Diamond, dusted off the script to "The Front Page" and brought Jack Lemmon and Walter Matthau back together to play the leads. The team of Wilder, Diamond, Lemmon and Matthau had already brought forth a hilarious comedy known as "The Fortune Cookie." While "The Front Page" may turn a fortune, it is still a pretty stale cookie.

The problem with this 1928 comedy is that it belays the fact very quickly that it was written in the late '20s. The team of Hecht and MacArthur was responsible for many fine sophisticated comedies coming out of Hollywood in the '30s when they left the newspaper business and broke into script writing for the movies. Part of the famed Algonquin set that featured such notables as Dorothy Parker, Robert Benchley, George F. Kaufman and Moss Hart, Hecht, MacArthur and company were responsible for some of the most fast-paced, wisecracking and cynical yet sentimental entertainments of the era. "The Front Page" has experienced more revivals than any other work from that period. But if the Wilder screen version is any indication, it should not mess with the original source and thus leave it to the realm of theater.

Wilder's adaptation of the Hecht-MacArthur comedy has retained all the snappy dialog but pointed out the need for a top actor in this staged battle of wits between managing editor and star reporter. As the star reporter, Lemmon cannot raise to the occasion. His Hildy Johnson just does not work at all. It is extremely difficult to believe that the character is the ace newsman he is supposed to be. Lemmon is far too whimsical in his portrayal for it to work and since he is the other top banana in this wisecracking tale, when he falls flat, the film lists to one side and almost sinks. What keeps it afloat is the excellence of the supporting cast, the cynical insults created by Hecht and MacAthur, and the superb recreation of the 1920s atmosphere.

But Wilder still is unable to capture the feverish pitch at which this comic tale of the clash between two veteran newsmen should assail the viewer. The fever is lacking in "The Front Page."

The supporting cast which includes David Wayne, Charles Durning, Allen Garfield, Austin Pendleton and Carol Burnett is a group of familiar faces making the most of their scenes.

Yet the whole thing is really a period movie that acts and sounds old-fashioned while striving for a '70s look. The look is incongruous with the feel of the script, and thus "The Front Page," while kind of fun, still takes to the air like a two-engine plane with one engine feebly sputternd finally dying out. The idea to find a vehicle for Lemmon and Matthau may have been a good one, but "The Front Page" is not what they needed to make them fly.

The Front Page" is currently playing at the Michigan Theater.

OAKLAND (UPI) - Oakland A's owner Charles O. Finley scrapped his year - old designated runner experiment Monday when he placed former world class sprinter Herb Washington on waivers for the purpose of giving him his outright release.

"We hate to give him up, but we have to because, for one thing, the pennant race is a lot tighter this year," Finley said. "The loss of Catfish Hunter (to the New York Yankees through a contract mix - up) actually precipitated it. We've got to have pinch runners who can steal bases and also do some other things.

Religious living units offer shared fait

By FRED NEWTON State News Staff Writer

No, they do not walk around chanting psalms. Nor do they have a big speech prepared ready to convert the average heathen on the street to the joys of Christianity.

For the students and nonstudents in the five area religious living units, living a quiet life with other people who share a common belief with them is a major advantage.

"The important thing is that there is a common atmosphere amongst everyone because we all have the same beliefs," said Chuck Love, a member of the Asher Student Foundation at 620 Abbott

Road. The Asher Men's and Women's Student Foundations are located in the same building and house 77 Christian Science students.

The East Lansing Asher House is the headquarters of a national chain of similar religious houses, and from here a staff sends out information to Christian Science students about the religious housing op-

Many misconceptions "There are many misconceptions about religious living units," said Margo Bogert, who lived in Asher House for four years and is now the director of admissions. "There's not a religious stuffy atmosphere here."

Room and board is $425 a term and other operating revenue comes from contributions from throughout the national Christian Science com-

Even though men are in one half of the building and women in the other, they share many common facilities.

activities. Each side also has a large lounge and all meals are prepared by a full - time chef.

Most rooms are doubles, and each term the residents change rooms and chose different room mates so everyone will get to know each other better.

Open communication "Communication is much more open around here," said Steve Goodale, an MSU senior who has lived at Asher House for three years.

Parties are held frequently in the recreation room, but, as in other religious units, smoking and drinking, though not restricted, are avoided.

"As Christian Scientists, we just don't drink or smoke," said one member. "We're not relying on an artificial high."

Two more religious living units are His House, 251 W. Grand River Ave. and His House East, 4920 S. Hagadorn Road, which are both part of MSU Student Christian Ministry, Inc. and are supported by Christian churches throughout Michigan.

His House houses seven men and His House East houses five women. Both pay $67 per month and share weekly food Construction is underway for three buildings for a Mormon living unit complex on Hagadorn Road across from campus.

Two of the buildings will house 144 students each, while the third will be used as an instructional and social center.

"As it stands now, we don't foresee any problems filling the building when it is scheduled to open this fall," said a spokesman for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter - Day Saints, (Mormon Church) at 431 E. Saginaw St. which is undertaking the project.

Prices pending

Still to be worked out are price and residence requirements for living in the structures, which consist of apartment units.

One of the older religious living units, over 30 years old. is the interdenominational Bethel Manor, 803 E. Grand for room and board while sharing the housework.

"We do a lot of things together, both within and out of the house," said Joel Zwier, an MSU senior who has lived at Bethel Manor for two years. "You get to know the people in the house really well, where in the dorms you know a lot of people but not as well."

Religious pastimes Bible study and working with area Christian groups are two of the religious pastimes of the members of Bethel Manor.

The last, and most recently formed religious living unit is The Way Station, 121 Bogue St. which is also interdenominational and houses 22 women, five men and one couple. Owned and operated by the University Church since 1973, residents are charged $80 a term for a single room and $50 a term for a double.

There is a common kitchen shared by all and attendance of services held in the house is optional.

"The environment here is more healthy and open," said Bonnie Voltz, who has lived there a year.

SN staff members win press awards

Three State News staff members received awards in the 10th Annual Detroit Press Club Foundation competition. The winners were announced Thursday in Detroit.

The State News won in four of the seven catagories open to students in the press club's collegiate competition.

Pete Daly, State News free lance editor, won the Thomas E. Groehn Memorial Award and $750. Daly's entry, a column entitled "Farmer Thinks Handout Fruity", was selected as the best entry submitted in all collegiate catagories.

Daly won an additional $300 for an entry in the newspaper feature writing category.

Steve Orr, State News managing editor, and R. D. Campbell, former managing editor, won $66.67 each for their joint entry in the news reporting Eleven men currently live in category. Campbell, Orr and the house, paying $360 a term Jim Bush, former city editor, There is a
