J.S., Soviet spaceships blast into orbit

The Russian Soyuz spaceship lifted off on schedule Tuesday from Baikonur in central Russia at 9:20 a.m. local time.

Represents cooperation between world powers

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) -American and Soviet spaceships rocketed into orbit yesterday and sped toward a rendezvous on Thursday. Their goal is a linkup of spaceships of the world's superpowers, once wary enemies in a prolonged cold war.

The Apollo, following the Russian Soyuz launch by seven and one - half hours, vaulted away from Cape Canaveral and 10 minutes later was in a successful orbit more than 100

As the Apollo rocket rose toward orbit, the television audience for the first time was able to view astronauts during a launch phase. A camera mounted inside the cabin showed the spacemen lying in their couches, pushing switches and reading their instrument panel during the minutes of powered Minutes before blasting aloft, the American flight commander passed this message to Soyuz: "Get ready for us, we'll be up there shortly.'

Compared with the fire and thunder of a Saturn - Apollo launch, the blastoff of the Russian Soyuz on Tuesday resembled the burst of a Fourth of July skyrocket.

Television viewers around the world got their first live glimpse of a Soviet launch and later watched the familiar sight of a giant Saturn boosting an Apollo capsule skyward.

But as visual drama, Apollo overshadowed Soyuz. Against a stark desert landscape, the redbanded Russian rocket rose rapidly into a clear blue sky, building up thrust and accelerating as it zipped toward orbit. By contrast, the Saturn was strapped down until it achieved full thrust. The white rocket with black and silver trim trembled and roared on its Florida seacoast pad. It then lifted slowly, almost majestically, skyward and gradually veered northeasterly across the Atlantic Ocean. Thus, a worldwide audience had a ringside seat on history as the two ships headed into an orbital chase designed to carry them to linkup Thursday 140 miles above earth.

While most Americans have grown accustomed to such telecasts, thousands of Muscovites got their first opportunity ever to watch a live launch from the Baikonur

Donald K. Slayton rode a thundering Saturn rocket toward an orbital plateau that will serve as a springboard for a series of tricky maneuvers which will bring the American and Russian ships together. Cosmonauts Alexei Leonov and Valeri Kubasov marked history's first international manned spaceflight by vaulting flawlessly into orbit earlier from the Baikonur Cosmodrome on the edge of a central Russian desert resembling the flat, dry areas of West Texas and baking in 90 degree temperatures.

"Everything is normal; everything is normal; everything is perfect. We are in good health," commander Leonov reported after they had completed their first circuit of the globe and checked their systems.

Liftoff from the base, 1,400 miles southeast of Moscow, was right on time. Ten minutes later, the Soviet Mission Control Center reported the craft, named Soyuz 19, was in a near - perfect orbit ranging from 114 to 136 miles high, moving at more than 17,000 miles an hour.

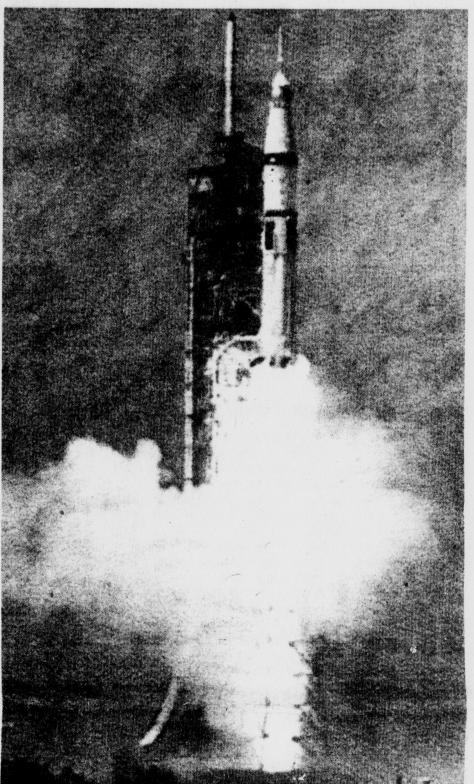

Millions of persons around the world watched the Soyuz liftoff as for the first time the Soviet Union televised one of their launchings live. President Ford and Soviet party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev sent their best wishes for a safe journey.

Only two small problems blemished an otherwise perfect beginning of the Soyuz

As the spacecraft soared upward, the Soviet control center reported a "slight overload," referring to a greater than expected acceleration force. The cosmonauts replied that "overloads are insignifi-

Later, the cosmonauts said one of four TV cameras aboard the spaceship was not functioning. The spacemen began trouble shooting for the problem, which blocked planned telecast showing the cosmonauts as they soared into orbit.

But, for the first time, a live telecast displayed the Soviet countdown and launch. opening to world view the launching of a Soviet spacecraft. In the past, films of Soviet launches were released only after (continued on page 9)

Gus gets cold shoulder from 'U' on cage future

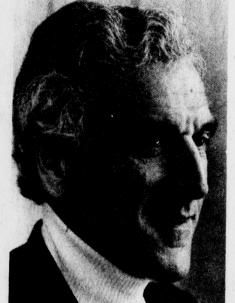

By PEGGY GOSSETT State News Staff Writer

Gus Ganakas still does not know if he will return as head basketball coach at MSU next season, and no one in the MSU administration will accept responsibility for Ganakas' future.

The Athletic Dept.'s hush - up indicates Ganakas' job is on the line.

Ganakas was offered reassignment in May to another position in the Athletic Dept. just weeks after the University offered him a three - year contract renewal.

Since then he has heard nothing from any MSU officials.

GANAKAS

"I'm in limbo, I don't know where I'm going. Ask them (the athletic administrators), they would know better than I do. I just work here," Ganakas said.

Ganakas said the MSU Board of Trustees was supposed to reconfirm his appointment as head coach by July 1. He has heard nothing from the board and the Ganakas question is not on the board of trustees agenda for their Friday meeting.

When asked if the board of trustees was indeed supposed to reconfirm Ganakas' position, MSU athletic director Burt Smith offered no comment.

"I have nothing to say about Mr. Ganakas. I don't know about the board,"

However, two weeks ago Smith denied the board of trustees had anything to do with Ganakas' assignment. Asst. athletic director Clarence Underwood said only Burt Smith could answer. However, an MSU trustee said the board of trustees usually gives recommendations concerning the head coaches of both football and basketball upon the recommendation of Jack Breslin, MSU executive vice - presi-"In the past the recommendations always came from Breslin," said Blanche Martin, MSU trustee, D - East Lansing.

Martin said he would look into the rehiring procedure because of the confusion surrounding it.

Breslin has been unavailable for comment for 10 days, failing to return numerous State News phone calls.

"In the coaches' situations they are given somewhat of a contract for four or five years," Martin said. It is usually to try to make some kind of arrangement for job security for recruiting, and all that.

"I don't really understand that. I'm not sure absolutely if that is procedure by the books, or what." Martin said the board confirmed a five - year contract for Denny Stolz, when he was hired as head football coach two years ago, after Breslin's recommendation.

"But I cannot remember ever recommending Gus since I came here as a trustee," Martin said.

Martin was appointed to the board Jan. 1,

University of Michigan head basketball coach Johnny Orr said that he operated on a three - year contract which was directly negotiated with U - M athletic director Don Canham. Orr said the U - M Board of Regents had nothing to do with his contract.

None of the other MSU trustees could recall ever reappointing Ganakas as head basketball coach every July 1.

Faculty can keep mum on home phone listings

By MARY ANN CHICKSHAW State News Staff Writer

MSU students will find it harder to call their professors next year because faculty and staff members will no longer be required to list their home phone numbers and addresses in the faculty-staff directory.

For the first time, faculty and staff members will be required to list only their on-campus phone and addresses. the option has been available to students for several

"We felt we had an obligation to make it available to faculty and staff members," said Kermit Smith, assistant to the provost. "It's part of the right to privacy movement." Smith said the option was an extension of the Buckley amendment passed last fall by Congress that allowed students access to their own records.

Smith said that in the past if faculty or staff members asked that their numbers be withheld, they were. He said the option is just becoming more publicized now.

So far, only six faculty members have requested their home phone numbers and or addresses be withheld from the next edition of the directory due to be distributed in September.

Usually about 50 students opt for witholding this type of information from the student directory published each November, Smith said.

Most faculty members called said they would not take their home phone numbers or addresses out of the phone directory because students needed a way to contact them after hours. "I encourage students to call me when they're stuck on their homework or studying for a quiz or test," said John

Push Reagan committee formed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Formation of a committee to convince former California Gov. Ronald Reagan to challenge President Ford for the 1976 Republican presidential nomination was announced Tuesday by a committee of six Republicans headed by U.S. Sen. Paul Laxalt of Nevada.

"The purpose of this committee is to build an organization and raise the money necessary to conduct a viable and effective campaign once Gov. Reagan decides to become an active candidate," Laxalt told a news conference.

Laxalt, a former Nevada governor, said Ford's efforts to cope with national problems, "provide little relief for the vast majority of Americans who yearn for a leader who can communicate a realistic perspective on America's future.

Growers contracts renewed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Teamsters Union was expected to sign three-year contracts with more than 135 California growers Tuesday providing 20 per cent wage hikes for an estimated 30,000 farm laborers.

United Farm Workers of America leader Cesar Chavez has denounced the pacts as a "crass conspiracy" on the part of growers and Teamsters to subvert upcoming union representative elections.

M. E. Anderson, head of the Western Conference of Teamsters, said Monday that Chavez' criticism was "ridiculous.

Anderson said current Teamsters farm labor contracts expire today, and "when our contracts fall due we negotiate new ones. We treat farmworkers just as we do all other Teamster members."

Fetus slayings ruled murder

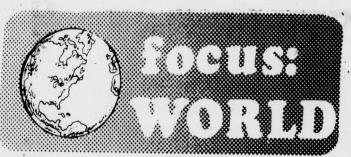

CAMDEN, N.J. (AP) — A jury returned a verdict of first-degree murder Tuesday against a man accused of causing the deaths of twin fetuses who were delivered and lived briefly after their pregnant mother was shot.

The jury deliberated more than 10 hours before returning the verdict against Winfield Anderson, 24, of Camden, a court spokesman said.

Anderson was charged with the murder of the sons of Nikkie Spearman, 22, and atrocious assault and battery in the wounding of the woman who was $7\frac{1}{2}$ months pregnant when shot and wounded during a robbery here last March 9. Anderson also was found guilty of the assault and battery

The first-degree murder conviction carries a mandatory life sentence.

No date was set for sentencing.

Helsinki detente summit delayed

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — The European Security Conference Tuesday delayed formally convening a 35-nation summit in Helsinki on July 30 and doubts began to spread whether that wrapup date would be met.

A meeting of the conference's coordinating committee that was to confirm the July 30 "target date" adjourned until tonight as efforts to clean up a variety of key texts stalled again. Most diplomats privately predicted that no final decision would be reached until later this week.

The supersummit in Helsinki would bring together President Ford, Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev and other leaders to give final approval to a 100-page document on East-West detente.

Asked by a newsman if he was an American agent, the 43-year-old officer with the U.S. military aid mission in Turkey replied, "in the Army, it is not usual that a military adviser would work at the same time as a secret agent."

Viola master dies in Prague

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) The death of Ladislav Czerny, 84, who was known as "the giant of viola music," was announced here Tuesday.

Czerny died in his sleep of a cerebral stroke Sunday at the Czechoslovak Academy of Music.

In 1922, Paul Hindemith, after hearing Czerny play, composed and dedicated to him a sonata for viola, Opus 25. Czerny performed extensively throughout western Europe but was known in the United States only through his recordings. His version of Hindemith's Trauermusik mourning music won Czerny critical acclaim.

Egypt blasts peace mandate

CAIRO(AP)- Egypt announced it will not agree to an extension of the United Nations peacekeeping force mandate in Sinai after it expires July 24 unless there are further moves toward peace.

Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy said the last three-month extension of the mandate was intended to, "afford peace every possible chance.'

The decision came in a letter addressed to UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim and was delivered by Egypt's representative to the United Nations, Fahmy told a hurriedly summoned news conference.

Fahmy said Egypt "will not consent to further renewal of the mandate of the forces" if no steps towards peace are taken. Fahmy said, "Israel has profited from the relative prevailing quiet to further its occupation rather than to assist the efforts aiming at achieving a lasting peace."

He explained, "While Egypt does not consent to further renewal of the mandate of the United Nations Emergency Force (UNEF), she is not against the proper use of the force. Egypt objects to the use of the force and its presence by Israel as a means to maintain the state of no war - no peace and the perpetuation of the occupation of Egyptian territory in defiance of the purposes and principles of the U N charter and accepted norms of international

Benefits extension sought for jobless

WASHINGTON (AP) - Extensions of unemployment compensation were proposed Tuesday by the Ford Administration, including one covering six million more workers and guaranteeing most unemployed persons at least half their regular pay.

The proposal, which would increase the tax paid by employers to finance the system, was presented by Labor Secretary John T. Dunlop to a House Ways and Means subcommittee. The proposal does not suggest the length of time the benefits would continue.

The plan was proposed as a short - range means of coping with the problems of the unemployment insurance system, currently running at a deficit because of high unemployment.

On a long - term basis, Dunlop recommended creating a National Commission on Unemployment Insurance to recommend basic changes.

The propsoal put forth Tuesday would bring into the system about 720,000 workers and 4.7 million state and local government workers. Some of these are currently covered by temporary provisions.

The measure would also require states to provide eligible unemployed persons with at least 50 per cent of their regular pay, but with a limit of two - thirds of the statewide weekly average wage for covered workers. Dunlop estimated this would guarantee half pay for 80 per cent of those eligible.

Asked repeatedly to explain what he meant by saying Egypt does not object to the proper use of the force, Fahmy said, "It means the Security Council should act according to its charter." Asked if this means the UNEF can remain without a mandate.

he said, "Absolutely not. The force can not remain without a mandate.'

Responding to questions, Fahmy said, "Egypt will see to it that Israel will be checked in such a manner to force it to reconsider its own arrogant and expansionist policies in the area"

Asked if this meant Egypt will go to war, Fahmy said, a jump to confusions. There are several ways to check is behavior." He mentioned economic sanctions as an example Fahmy said the U.S. efforts to find a peaceful solution in area will continue and Egypt, "welcomes all efforts from the la States or any other power to establish peace in the region'

Holt man finds a home for lonesome WWI relic

By FRANK FOX

State News Staff Writer K.D.'s sporting goods store in Holt looks at first glance like any of dozens of small town sports shops.

You would probably never notice it except for the cannon out in front.

There, in the parking lot facing Cedar Street — beyond the bamboo fishing poles and the tiny sailboat - sets the cannon in all its ponderous iron glory. It is a little rusted and worn, but still identifiable as a World War I vintage German mountain howitzer from the Krupp armories.

With its short, stout barrel pointing proudly into the sky and its wooden spoked wheels appearing archaic but sturdy, the gun exists as a lonesome relic of what once was known as "The Great

But the shooting days of the gun are long gone. It stands now as an oddity to startle passing motorists, a toy for children and a target for birds.

"The gun is harmless," said its owner, Richard Cady, who runs the sporting goods shop. "It's not operable. It's strictly a collector's item."

Cady, who has owned the cannon for a couple of years, bought it from a man who was going to destroy it.

"I like old stuff and hate to see it destroyed," he said. "I paid a pretty good price for it, I don't even recall what it

The two and one-half to three ton cannon was moved from the nearby village of Potterville to its present location where it remains a very useful curiosity.

"Kids like to climb on it. They get a lot of entertainment out of it," said Cady's 21-year-old son Dennis.

"You're not going to hurt that darn thing unless you take a sledge hammer to the wheels," he added.

Both Cady and his son insisted that the gun was harmless, a huge paperweight with a plugged barrel. But once - years ago - it could easily have lobbed shells over high hills and bluffs.

"If you aimed it out toward Mason it could reach the Ingham County Sheriff's Dept," Dennis said with a grin.

'U' ordinance vague, claims SWU

By BRAD MARTISIUS State News Staff Writer

The ordinance being used by the University to exclude Student Workers Union (SWU) canvassers from residence halls may become the next bone of contention between the two groups.

The controversy over SWU canvassing during the orientation program began when Breslin posted a regulation on all of the doors of Wilson and Wonders Halls last week, restricting the use of the building by anyone not participating in orientation programs. The SWU organizers had been knocking on doors and attempting to inform students barred from the buildings by Breslin last Wednesday, they have been standing outside passing out leaflets.

Bob Repas, professor of labor and industrial relations, said MSU does not have the trustees (Jack Breslin) to right to arbitrarily close a campus building to any group. Repas is a member of the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU). The ACLU sent a letter Friday to Blanche Martin, chairman of the board of trustees, advising him that the ordinance was vague and that Breslin had not acted in accordance with the ordinance. Gladys Beckwith, chairperson of the Lansing branch of the ACLU recommended in the letter that Breslin "rescind all action in respect to Wonders

EDITORIALS Ann Street extension meets a timely death

The Ann Street extension is unsafe conditions for drivers, dead. Long live uncluttered streets and clean air.

Last week the East Lansing Planning Commission ended two years of fighting between the city and a community organization by finally killing plans to transform a residential street into a city thoroughfare.

A 1959 Traffic Commission study first recommended the extension to relieve traffic on Albert Street, which runs parallel to Ann Street and carries traffic from Grand River Avenue to the northeastern fringes of the city.

The extension was incorporated in city plans and the city bought five of seven lots necessary to finish the project when fierce opposition from the Bailey Community Assn. developed.

But a recent city planning staff report forcefully affirmed what the Bailey organization has been saying: that the increased traffic caused by the extension would generate noise and air pollution, pedestrians and cyclists, and conversion of single-family housing to high-density rental units.

What it all would have meant was a decline in the neighborhood from a fairly quiet and safe family and student residential area to a congested, dangerous "twin" corridor with Albert Street.

The Planning Commission wisely recognized that less damaging ways to handle Albert Street traffic exist and that old estimates of projected traffic growth may have been too high.

City Council would be wise, also, to accept the staff report recommendation that the city sell four of the lots purchased, retain one lot and buy an adjoining one for a much-needed park in the area.

The quashing of the Ann Street extension plan is proof that a well-organized community can fight City Hall. The Bailey Community Assn. can rightly feel proud of their part in the plan's timely death.

Buy-centennial sells history

We are all going to become very, very tired of this wretched buycentennial.

Yes, as our founding fathers used to say, a three - legged pig is a three legged pig, even when it is painted red,

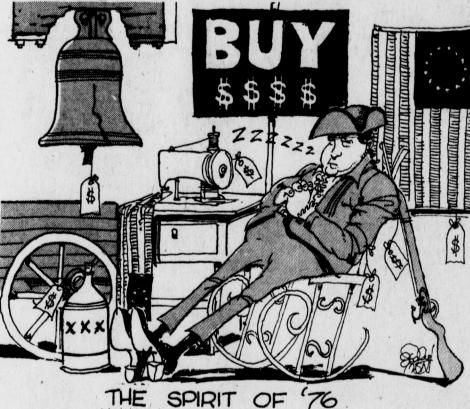

And we will have ample opportunity to buy that very same three - legged pig, along with other such old - fashioned yankee bargains before this star - spangled shell game is squeezed of the last drop of commercial nostalgia.

Already, every TV commercial within reach is using bald eagles, liberty bells and John Paul Jones to free us from our money in the true spirit of the Declaration of Independence. But it is almost an entire year before July 4, 1976. One can only imagine the lengths advertising wizards will have reached by then ...

It is 2 a.m. The late movie ("Johnny Tremain") is over. The screen is now filled with the smiling face of a colonial statesman in a three - cornered hat and powdered wig. He is reading an important looking parchment document. He speaks:

Dead aim at gun carriers

In April 1974 Boston police recorded 14 crimes involving the use of firearms in which no firearm was captured. In 114 other gun crimes, a firearm - handgun, rifle or shotgun - was taken by the police. In April of this year, 18 crimes involving firearms, but in which none was taken, and 59 in which a firearm was captured, were recorded by the police.

The change, from a total of 128 reported gun crimes to a total of only 77 in the same month one year later - is the most fragmentary kind of statistic, the sort of preliminary number from which it is dangerous to generalize. But April 1975 was the month in which the state's Bartley-Fox gun control law took effect, and Boston and Massachusetts officials view this statistic as a first faint suggestion that the tough new legislation may work.

Superintendent Joseph Jordan of the Boston police department has some less formal evidence to the same effect. Sergeant-detectives on the force tell him that when they knock over a "kitchen bar" - an illegal drinking establishment - or an illicit card game nowadays, they rarely if ever find anyone with a gun. Before the new law took effect, it was not uncommon to pick up two or three handguns during such a bust.

Thus, at least the first signs suggest that the Bartley-Fox law may turn out to be just what it was intended to be - a deterrent to carrying guns and therefore, as its voluble sponsor, Judge J. John Fox, believes, a deterrent to using guns for crimes. The law prohibits any person from carrying a gun away from his or her home or place of business (one's automobile is considered "away") without proper authorization.

The kicker is that a person convicted of violating this law is liable to a mandatory jail sentence of one year, and could get five. No plea bargaining is permitted; nor can a judge suspend the sentence or substitute probation. After conviction and sentencing, the offender is not eligible for parole or time off for good behavior.

The law — its other principal sponsor was Speaker of the House David Bartley - does not require the registration of guns, or their confiscation (except from those who violate it). It does not deprive defendants of any rights of due process or appeal. preserves existing Massachusetts gun legislation, which provides that any person can get a Firearms Identification (FID) card, as a matter of right, for $2, on application to the police. The card entitles the holder to have as many guns as he or she wants.

But to carry a handgun, loaded or unloaded, concealed or not, away from home or place of business, a Massachusetts resident must also acquire a "license to carry." Though police departments vary in their willingness to issue these, generally no convicted felon, known drug abuser or mental defective can obtain one. Generally, too, some need has to be shown, if no more than for carrying a handgun to a gun club for target practice. To carry a shotgun or rifle, only the FID card is needed.

The premise of the Bartley-Fox law is that no one has a legitimate need to carry a gun, loaded or unloaded, away from home or place of business unless he or she has proper authorization - a "license to carry" for a handgun, or a FID for a rifle or shotgun. It is only for a violation of that requirement that the stiff new sentencing provisions must be invoked.

One target is the criminal gun-carrier; for example, two suspected organized crime figures already have been picked up carrying guns without authorization and probably face at least one-year sentences. Another target is youthful street hustlers and gang members. If they are over 17, the new law applies to them, and if they are aged 14 to 17 with a history of being in trouble, judges have the discretion to have them tried as adults under the new law

Another consequence of Bartley-Fox ought to be numerous convictions - for carrying handguns without authorization of persons arrested for robbery, assault, rape and the like. The evidence may not be available for a conviction on the other charges, but the gun charge is simple to prove and carries a mandatory penalty.

The law probably will not, however, reduce substantially the large number of gun assaults and murders involving quaintances and members of families it will not reduce the number of gu probably in excess of a million -Massachusetts. In the first four mon this year, for example, over 132,000 cards were issued, as against only 14,000 in the same period of 1974.

Yet

The Massachusetts chapter of the Am can Civil Liberties Union is properly of the mandatory sentencing provision which really amounts to a gamble that crime-producing effects of sending people — particularly young persons outmoded and ineffective prisons will more than offset by the social advantage deterring people from carrying guns. Of states, and no doubt the federal government ment, too, will be watching the outcome this effect to make it just too risky for people to carry a gun away from homes and places of business.

VIEWPOINT: WOUNDED KNEE

FBI deceptions mark incident

By the WOUNDED KNEE SUPPORT COMMITTEE

Still not much is known about the actual state of events on June 26 when two FBI agents and an Indian were shot and killed on Pine Ridge Indian Reservation. Most of what has been reported through the news media has been distorted, biased and won't hold up under close examination. The FBI's story concerning what happened that day appears to have many discrepancies in it.

One big question that remains up in the air is what were the FBI agents actually doing there at the site of the incident, the Jumping Bull house in the district of Oglala that day. The official report circulated widely in the media was that they were there to serve warrants on four Indian men for allegedly kidnapping and assaulting two white men who live on the reservation.

However, the FBI now admits that the agents did not actually have the warrants with them when they went to the house. None of the four men named in the warrants are even from the area of the reservation where the shootout took place. But friends of the Jumping Bull family say that the FBI had come to the house three times in the two days just before the shootout looking for one of the men, James Eagle.

The agents were told he was not there and that they were trespassing and were not to come back without a warrant. All four of these men have been arraigned now on charges of assault and robbery - the kidnapping charges which gave the FBI their supposed jurisdiction conspicuously absent.

Then consider the massive publicity given to the point that the agents were the victims of an "execution - style" slaying. Bodies were described as "bullet ridden" and the alleged attack was labelled "savage." Though attempts by the Wounded Knee Legal Defense/Offense Committee to obtain the coroner's report have been stifled, a committee worker was told by an employe working in the funeral home where the agents were taken that neither of the agents' bodies had more than two or three bullet holes in them.

According to the funeral home employe. there was only one mortal wound in each body. One of the mortal wounds also appeared to be the result of an extremely close range shot as if a struggle with a gun had taken place. So great is the evidence against the much publicized "execution style" slayings that FBI Director Clarence Kelly himself admitted in a press conference after the agents' funeral that the bodies were not bullet ridden.

Remember reports about the farmhouse where the shots came from, the one that was surrounded by bunkers? The farmhouse turned out to be a one - room shack. Various reports have confirmed that no bunkers existed. A chicken coop was near the shack, however.

To this day the FBI is conducting what has been described as a massive search and destroy mission for 16 men and eight women it says were involved in the shootout. It is not known who these people Nor is it known how 24 people could have been crammed into the tiny one room shack or how they could have slipped through the ring of 200 heavily armed officers of the highway patrol, state tactical squad, Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) police and FBI.

The FBI has brought in armored personnel carriers, helicopters and airplanes to search the reservation or terrorize the residents into submission, depending on your point of view. There is widespread searching of homes without warrants. Agents armed with automatic weapons have stormed houses without even identifying themselves or showing their credentials. It is no wonder that this type of harassment and provocation eventually leads to a violent and bloody confrontation.

Meanwhile the harassment continues. We have reports that some people are being stopped for questioning who know their rights and refuse to answer questions. They are then immediately served with subpenas to appear before a grand jury. Just a few days ago a boys camp run by a traditional spiritual leader was assaulted by FBI agents who emerged from two helicopters, Vietnam - style with M - 16s and tear gas. The FBI says this incident is unrelated to the shootings at Oglala.

So what are we left with? As far as the evidence shows, there are only three people who really know what happened at Oglala on June 26, and they are all dead. We have an unclear picture of what really happened, but discrepancies in the FBI's story are now

Why do we question the FBI's version? Because past experience has told us that we would be acting very foolishly to accept what they say. In September 1974 a federal judge in St. Paul, Minn, decided that after eight months he had had enough of the antics of the U.S. prosecutor and the FBI in the Wounded Knee leadership trials of Dennis Banks and Russell Means. Concerning the Justice Dept. he said it seemed they were much more interested in "convictions than in the administration of justice."

The judge denounced the FBI's conduct during the trial, citing many instances of their misconduct. We find one especially relevant here. The FBI had withheld eyidence from the defense after being ordered to release it by the court; later it gave them falsified evidence. We have no reason to suspect the FBI has changed its Wounded Knee Support Committee organized last fall at MSU to help raise funds for the Wounded Knee Legal Defense/Offense Committee which is providing legal defense for those involved in the Wounded Knee occupation and related incidents.

.Unfortunately, anyone in the audience wanting to hear the 'Old" Rundgren had to hear the "New" Rundgren. And the "New" Rundgren, with Utopia, is more than anything else, monotonous.

The problem is twofold: First, Rundgren must, by necessity, perform his new material, and his new material is basically instrumental. That wouldn't be so very bad were it halfway as interesting as the musical interludes on "A Wizard/A True Star." But it's not.

sounds like blatant self - plagiarism. And lyrically, "a dash of the old Kung Fu" Rundgren has plainly run out of ideas.

Secondly, Utopia's worth as a band is certainly in question. While Rundgren obviously needs a band for live performances his choice of musicians mostly Woodstock people associated with Rundgren's Bearsville Records - is somewhat dubious. Keyboardists Mark Klingman and Ralph Schuckett are certainly competent backup musicians, as is bassist John Siegler. But they ARE backup musicians, and Rundgren has needlessly elevated them to frontmen when they don't have the chops to stand up to it. Drummer John

Wilcox was a deadbeat drummer; because he's new to the group this will hopefully be shortlived.

Roger Powell is an extraordinarily talented synthesizer technician - and probably the most electronically skilled musician in the bunch, Todd included - but as his own album, "Cosmic Furnace" attests, technical skill does not automatically accompany improvisational talent. Monday night, aside from a few brief toots on his trumpet, Powell was consigned to knob - twirling and making gimmicky sounds on his sequencer. Thus, the performance Monday night revealed a stiff band doing even stiffer material. When any pre - Utopia compositions were presented, the audience was notably more enthusiastic, which by all rights should alert Rundgren to the fact that something is amiss with his current direction.

Rundgren clearly is aware of the bad press his records have been receiving lately, and it is unfortunately starting to show in his music. When musicians start writing songs about how critics misunderstand them (as in "The Death of Rock and Roll"), they are falling prey to the Ian Hunter syndrome and simultaneously becoming too "hip" for their own artistic

Monday night's show, for the most part, was a lot of lackluster instrumental rambling and only a fraction of what it could have been. The film consists of a series of encounters between empty people in plush surroundings, presented in an extremely pedestrian way by director Green. Not one thing, save Brenda Vaccaro's hilariously caustic portrayal of the insatiable fashion editor, has any life in the film.

Watching "Once is Not Enough" is no better than flipping through glossy magazines and simply reading the titles of the articles without bothering to see if what's beneath is of any interest. That's the way Susann herself wrote.

Except for Vaccaro, who's a real delight, everyone else concerned with the film is bland and utterly wasted. It's simply a big cast of seasoned veterans going through their paces as if they were back on the lot and making a grade-B film that they knew wasn't worth the effort to give it any energy. Thus "Once is Not Enough" runs on and on till it's moronic conclusion with lush Henry Mancini music telling us that being in love once, is

Summer Circle Free Festival presents one of Miller's best

By DAVE STERN

State News Reviewer "A View From the Bridge," presented Wednesday through Saturday by the Summer Circle Free Festival, won Arthur Miller his second Pulitzer Prize. Along with "Death of a Salesman," Miller's other Pulitzer play, "The Crucible" and Miller's other plays, the playwright's works form one of the best know bodies of dramatic literature in America.

Many of Miller's plays are modern tragedies. Even if Willy Loman and Eddie Carbone lack the noble birth dictated by the classical definition of tragedy they are our nobility. While American comedy has often focused on the well - to - do, its drama has exalted the working man, the protagonist helplessly pinioned by his circumstances.

"A View From the Bridge" is a remarkable play, perhaps Miller's best. The sense of inevitable doom which pervades the script is overwhelming.

Above all this is the story of human possessiveness in the working - class family of a New

Eddie Carbone, unable to understand or deal with his feelings toward his niece: of Bea Carbone, trying to win back her husband and her marriage; and of Catherine, the niece, learning for the first time to define herself in terms of herself rather than others.

The Summer Circle production presented in the Kresge courtyard was one marked by competence. Michele Ferber's Catherine and the immigrant brothers of John Schmedes and Fran Guinan were all more than adequate. All had moments of great strength in their performances. Standing out, however, were the performances of Bill Hutson, as Eddie, and Brenda Nickerson, as his wife Bea. Nickerson's portrayal was the most complete in the show. Given less to work with than many of the other characters. she turned a beautifully controlled, often understated performance. "Bridge" is a play which can be hurt considerably if its multiply-triangular structure is allowed to disintegrate and it become merely Eddie's York dock worker; of confused tragedy. That the central relationships of the play were kept alive can be mostly credited to Nickerson's work.

The role of Eddie is a difficult one, complicated by perceptions the audience has of the character independent of the script itself. Eddie Carbone is an American icon. He is the romanticized working - class denizen of our collective American imagination. Any actor attempting this role, or any of the many other roles which summon forth this persona, must deal with the added perceptions which the audience will bring to his work.

William Hutson's Eddie, while technically impeccable, only escaped from this syndrome about half of the time. Hutson was most successful in moments of high emotion. At these times his Eddie became a truly alive, truly tragic character. At other times Hutson tended more toward caricature. and ghosts of everyone from Marlon Brando to Art Carney filled the space about him.

Of paramount importance to the play is the role of Alfieri the lawyer. Alfieri is more than the role of the narrator, was in Paul Van Ann the Bridge" is his story. He is the everyman of the play. It is he who represents the audierce's plight and pleads their case. The identification between the audience and Alfieri is one of the finest structural touches in the play. When he is reduced merely to performance, the play While Van Antwerp was compelling, the stylization his performance kept the dience at a distance. Summer Circle's production, the Brindsley - Sheridan on

NCAA seeking to save, spending cuts proposed

By TOM SHANAHAN

The NCAA will soon be meeting to discuss some proposals which could sharply reduce the cost of college athletics.

A special NCAA economic convention is being held August 14 - 15 and, if the proposals under consideration are passed, there could be some big changes in the area of recruiting and scholarships.

This will be only the second special convention ever called in the NCAA's long history. Athletic directors and faculty representatives from across the nation will attend the conven-

According to Burt Smith, MSU athletic director, the biggest cuts will be directed at recruiting.

"Recruiting is the most expensive part of college athletics," Smith said. "Traveling expenses like transportation, meals and hotels are very costly."

Some of the suggested proposals would limit the number of times a school can contact a prospect, limit the number of months during which a school could recruit for specific sports and limit the number of prospects a school can invite to visit its campus.

Suggested cutbacks for athletic scholarships are: to limit them to a need - only basis, cover only tuition or just eliminate the $15 a month for incidentals and books.

It is also being proposed that the number of scholarships that can be awarded be reduced for each sport. The total number of grants - in - aid, for all sports, would be reduced to 185 compared to the present 332.

While most of the proposals are aimed at saving money, Smith said that the changes could also work to relieve some of the pressure put on athletes by recruiters.

As far as any scholarship changes, Smith felt that the tuition only proposal has the best chance of passing. He added that eliminating the $15 a month would not affect MSU because the Big Ten already has its own rules against this practice.

Smith said that the proposals, if passed, would not hurt the nonrevenue sports more than the big money making

Youth flees bear attack at U.P. site

WHITE PINE (UPI) — A teenaged camper, fearful that he would be "snapped in two," managed to elude a vicious bear that grabbed him by the throat and chased him up two trees in the Upper Peninsula's Porcupine Mountains.

Paul Cameron, a 16-year-old Dearborn high school student, described Monday the terrifying 15-minute attack last weekend that left him bruised and bleeding but thankful to be alive.

Cameron, who was camping alone in the Porcupine Mountains State Park, said he awakened inside his pup tent Saturday to the sounds of a growling bear.

"He was trying to knock the tent down. I laid still in my sleeping bag," the youth said.
Cameron tried to "play dead" in hopes of dissuading the 125-pound bear, but the animal knocked the tent down and attacked the youth's throat.

The youth ran from his campsite and climbed a small tree. The bear followed him up tree. The bear followed him up the tree. Cameron leaped to another tree, and the bear followed. Then the bear "just stopped and went away." Cameron started screaming for help and a Manistee couple responded to his cries.

Park authorities stalked and shot the bear, a female that appeared to be about two-and one-half-years-old, within and hour of the attack.

Apollo-Soyuz

"It's about time the Soviet Union and United States got together on something — even if it's just linking two spaceships together. I think it'll be worth it in the long run."

A couple of people expressed distrust of the intentions of the Soviet Union in the joint venture.

"If anything goes wrong its because the Russian spaceship is built so crummily. It's great that we're doing it but that's a lot of money that could be used for much better causes," Kathy Brown, 419 Park Lane, commented.

"Don't trust a Russian," warned Dana Badertscher, junior, 541 Abbott Hall. "They're just out to copy all our secrets and then they'll come down on our heads and destroy us."

The large majority of attentions and the secretary of the large majority of attentions.

The large majority of students that professed approval of the space shot pleased Lee Shapiro, director of Abrams Planetarium.

"I'm very glad to see this mission and the interest in it," he said. "I would like to see our space program started up again, not to the peak it was at during the moon shot maybe, but enough to satisfy the old exploring urge."

And is the shot worth the money?
"Was Columbus' yourge

"Was Columbus' voyage worth the crown jewels of Spain?" he replied.

Oil controls making $2 a barrel more than Ford wants them to have on new oil. He said they are getting $13.50 a barrel and Ford wants to take $2 of that away through an excise tax.

The House and Senate, meanwhile, began debate on separate bills requiring Detroit to manufacture cars with a gradually increasing fuel efficiency.

Under the current law, the price of 60 per cent of U.S. produced oil, known as old oil, is frozen at $5.25 a barrel. The remainder of domestic production is allowed to rise to the world market level, which now is around $13.

Ford has proposed that over the next 30 months, controls be eliminated gradually from the $5.25 oil. That price would be allowed to climb to $13.50 a barrel.

Thus, while today the average price of all U.S. oil is $8.50, Ford wants it raised to $13.50 by January 1978.

$13.50 by January 1978.

The Administration says this would raise the price of gasoline by seven cents a gallon. Jackson and other critics of the Ford program say a 15 - cent hike in gasoline prices would be more likely.

To this the operator answers "operator." She can then be given the number of another campus phone for the transfer.

And requests like these are more than enough to keep the operators busy, since the Centrex phone system at MSU is larger than many phone systems found in towns throughout Michigan. Over 19,200 handsets are on campus, according to Mazner, with more being added as new buildings are constructed.

What's it like to work at the nerve center of MSU?

"It's a relaxing job," said one of the older operators who often works a night shift. "I like it really well. So few people are really nasty to me." A much younger operator

Asking for a long list of phone numbers is discouraged by the operators. Three numbers for each call is usually the maximum allowed to avoid tying up the lines.

Mazner said University offices and employes can help the phone people by reporting changes and additions appropriately. A common misunderstanding is that the faculty/ staff directory and the operators' listings come from the same source. This is not so, Mazner explained.

Two separate cards are required to initiate changes and additions in any faculty or staff listings - one for the directory and one for the operators. Mazner has been working on unification of the two systems but does not foresee any immediate changes.

A change of a different kind, though, is in store for the MSU telephone operators. They are planning a Sept. 7 move from their old basement headquarters to a modern office in the nearly completed Public Safety Building. For security reasons, Mazner requested that their current location remain unpub-

MSU trustee Don Stevens said either MSU President Clifton Wharton or Executive Vice President Breslin recommends the coaches' appointments to the board of trustees like any other personnel in the University.

An ex - MSU basketball player told the State News that Breslin actually runs the Athletic Dept., and that Smith and Underwood are under his con-

He said that is the reason for Ganakas' offer of reassignment.

"They have got to put the blame on somebody and the Athletic Dept. is not going to blame itself," said the ex player, who wishes to remain anonymous.

The player was referring to the controversy over three MSU basketball players, all white, leaving MSU for other schools. The basketball program also stirred controversy when 10 of its players, all black, walked out last January 4 before the Indiana game over a disagreement of the starting lineup.

The basketball program experienced its worst season for attendance this past year since the 1940 - 41 season. Average attendance for the 1974 - 75 season was 5,604 compared with 7,071 in 1973 - 74 and 7,373 in 1972 - 73. Nick Vista, director of MSU Information Services, said the drop - off in ticket sales was due in part to the basketball pro-

"People were upset from what happened and stayed away," Vista said.

He said the reduced seating due to fire marshal's orders was also a factor in the slackened attendance. Also, some of the basketball games were played during the Christmas vacation when most students were away from campus, which also contributed to the ticket sales

Season ticket sales, meanwhile, held steady at 1,200, the same as season ticket sales for the previous year.

Despite sagging ticket sales, MSU had one of its best basketball seasons with a 17 - 9 - 0 record.

The season ended with the basketball program $30,000 in the red, however. Beardsly, asst. athletic director in charge of finance, reported that the program grossed $90,000 dollars in ticket sales but spent $120,000 dollars in

There are no predictions as to the upcoming 1975 - 76

However, the asst. basketball coaches have already signed contracts for the 1975 76 season.

Asked if he would consider the job of head coach if Ganakas was reassigned, asst. coach Vern Payne said he would have to think about it. Asst. coach Dick Versace said he had heard nothing about Ganakas or had not even considered a job offer as head coach. "I met this man at a basketball clinic and I was charmed by him. I was hired by him to work under him and I maintain that position," Versace said.

The other asst. coach, Pat Miller, was not available for Drugs in candy may be felony

LANSING (UPI) - Putting harmful substances such as poison or drugs into Halloween treats would be a felony under legislation introduced in the House.

The state already has a law that makes it a crime to put dangerous objects such as pins and razor blades into Halloween candy, but Ogonowski said the fact that drugs and poison are not specifically outlawed is a potential loophole.

Buenos Aires gunmen kill mayor, hurt 2 aide

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Gunmen believed to be guerillas killed Ruben Alberto Cartier, mayor of Argentina's fourth largest city, La Plata, late Monday and wounded two aides in a machine gun ambush at point-blank range, police reported.

Police said that Cartier, 57, was traveling with two aides to Buenos Aires in a chauffeur-driven car when terrorists drove abreast of it on a major highway 10 miles south of the capital. The group blasted the mayor's car with bursts of machine-gun fire. Informed sources said the mayor was to have met national Senate President Italo Luder, the virtual vice president of Argentina, later in the evening. There was no indication of what the meeting was Wounded in the attack were Cartier's private secretary, Alfredo Otero and La Plata transit director, Manuel Balverde. The WASHINGTON (AP) - The Ford Administration is considering legislation that would allow railroads to purchase trucking firms and would remove railroad transportation regulations on some routes for some commodities.

"We are considering a provision that would propose a limited experiment in which certain commodities not regulated for trucks and barges would be deregulated for railroads," Transportation Secretary William T. Coleman Jr. said Tuesday in an appearance before a House Transportation Commerce subcommittee.

'The experimental deregulation would apply only to certain selected areas where the railroads would be in effective competition with other modes of transportation," he said.

Coleman was the lead-off witness as the subcommittee opened hearings on the Administration's proposal to eliminate some regulatory restraints on railroads, provide a $2 billion revolving loan guarantee fund to rehabilitate rail track and equipment and give the secretary power to order railroads receiving the guaranteed loans to make basic changes in their route struc-

Paddy wagon on wheels points out wages of sin

By G. F. KORRECK State News Staff Writer

Years ago, Middle America was spiced with a unique variation of the traveling show known as a Chataqua. Something of a road carnival, a medicine show and vaudeville — it was beyond them all in impact. When it came to town, people would fill the huge tents that came with the show to hear anything from Shakespearean tragedy to ragtime dance music.

Remnants of the Chataqua are still alive in America, most of them lacking the cultural impact the shows were usually noted for. One current candidate is the Prison on Wheels, a figurative title for what is literally more difficult to explain.

Prison on Wheels is, first of all, a bus, and an old one at that. One of the attendants said that "our other units (there are five in all) have new mobile homes and "as soon as we get this back East it will have a new home."

The bus is visible by the flashing lights on its roof. As one gets nearer, there is a sign, between bars, in exit-sign red that says

SELF DEFENSE

"Prison on Wheels."

The inside is a showcase for such items as a collection of badges and arm patches from communities it has stopped in - a Dallas Police patch rests to the right of a 2 x 5 color photo of President

Exhibits including billy clubs, handcuffs, teargas pistols and cannisters, a bullet-proof vest, riot helmet and shield and homemade confiscated weapons, are encased in glass with warnings periodically posted, such as: "Anyone who asked you do to the wrong thing . . . is never your friend" and "The Greatest handicap a person can have in these modern times is a police record."

Opposite these exhibits are what might be compared to the giant snakes in a county fair — a 4 x 10 jail cell, an electric chair and a gas Bernard Murphy, one of the attendants for the mobile prison, explained how the electric chair worked. "The leg is shaved, as well as the head — a current of 2,300 volts is released and in 3 to 15 seconds the heart stops." The chair is not without its embellishments. A blown-up black and white photo of a 1930s victim getting the juice is on one wall, a quote from J. Edgar Hoover — "Crime prevention begins in the high chair, not in the electric chair" - is on the other. Over the chair, hangs the epithet: "The highest award for crime."

Visitors can also imagine what it's like to be captured and/or held as Murphy describes the workings of the handcuff display.

"You've got your leg irons and you've got your twisters — they're a chain-type of thing with a clamp on the handle you can tighten to control the criminal - and there's the iron claw, which is similar to

Murphy described tear gas guns that can "shoot from 150 yards into a four-inch circle." There are also teargas billies (billy clubs containing teargas cannisters) teargas flashlights and chemical

"We try and explain the items from a point of view of reality," Murphy said. "With most little kids, the stuff in here is either neat or it's gross. That's all they say — 'it's neat' or 'it's gross.' "We try and make it as simple as we can — we don't want to make it too graphic. We don't want to upset them or make them sick." The purpose, say both a sign on the bus and Murphy, is to provide a deterrent to juvenile crime. In other words, a young person would see the exhibits — which also includes a hangman's noose — and be turned off the road to sin.

Prison on Wheels is the brainstorm of J. Edward Slavin, a well-known law enforcement official in New Haven, Conn., the home base of the program. A loving cup, presented to Slavin by the Greater Elks Lodge of New Haven, is one of the first items on display.

Slavin had the idea that youth needed a more convincing means of determining that a criminal path could only lead to a dead-end and, in 1949, with a fleet of five units, he started his program on the road. Slavin died a couple of years ago but the prisons keep rolling. A close look at the exhibits shows that most of them are noticeably dated. Even the electric chair and gas chamber - at least for the time being — are anachronisms. Don Coelho, Meridian Mall promotions director, sees the display more as a museum.

"I don't think people are that shocked by all that anymore. It seems like it is more something of historical value."

Murphy admits that the display has aged somewhat, but he added that "it is difficult to get anything from police nowadays — the economic situation is so tight, they just can't spare anything."

Besides explaining and answering questions about exhibits, Murphy is also there to accept donations, which he asks for periodically from prison visitors. A turnstyle is located at the entrance to the bus and Murphy keeps donations in a cabinet near (continued on page 18)
