Ford extends price controls for oil, criticizes Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford, in a move to law an extension of oil price controls through Nov. 15, blamed Congress for prospective gasoline price hikes stemming from a price-raising decision by Arab producers.

Asserting that a congressional majority has nothing to reverse our growing oil dependence," Ford said at an Oval Office ceremony: "When the price of gasoline goes up at the service station, I want the American people to know exactly where the blame lies. Until Congress acts, there is nothing this country can do about arbitrary OPEC (Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries) price hikes — and there may be still another fuel price increase next June."

The law Ford signed retroactively extends until Nov. 15 oil price controls that expired Aug. 31.

In the period until mid-November, the President said, Congress should either reach a compromise agreement with the Administration on a gradual decontrol of oil prices or enact Administration-backed legislation that would ease the impact of immediate decontrol.

Under present controls, about 60 per cent of the oil produced in the United States is sold at $5.25 per barrel, compared to world market prices of about $12.

Reading from a prepared statement, Ford said OPEC's decision Saturday to raise their selling prices by 10 per cent "provides beyond any further argument the urgent need for the United States to reduce its growing dependence on imported fuel at prices arbitrarily set by others."

Reminding readers and listeners — his appearance was filmed for television news programs — that he has been urging action on an energy program since January, Ford said Congress has failed to take even one step to increase domestic oil output and lessen dependence on overseas suppliers.

Until Congress acts, he argued, nothing can be done to defend the U.S. economy against higher cartel-dictated prices.

Ford said the United States now pays more than $25 billion a year to other countries for oil and that this amount would increase.

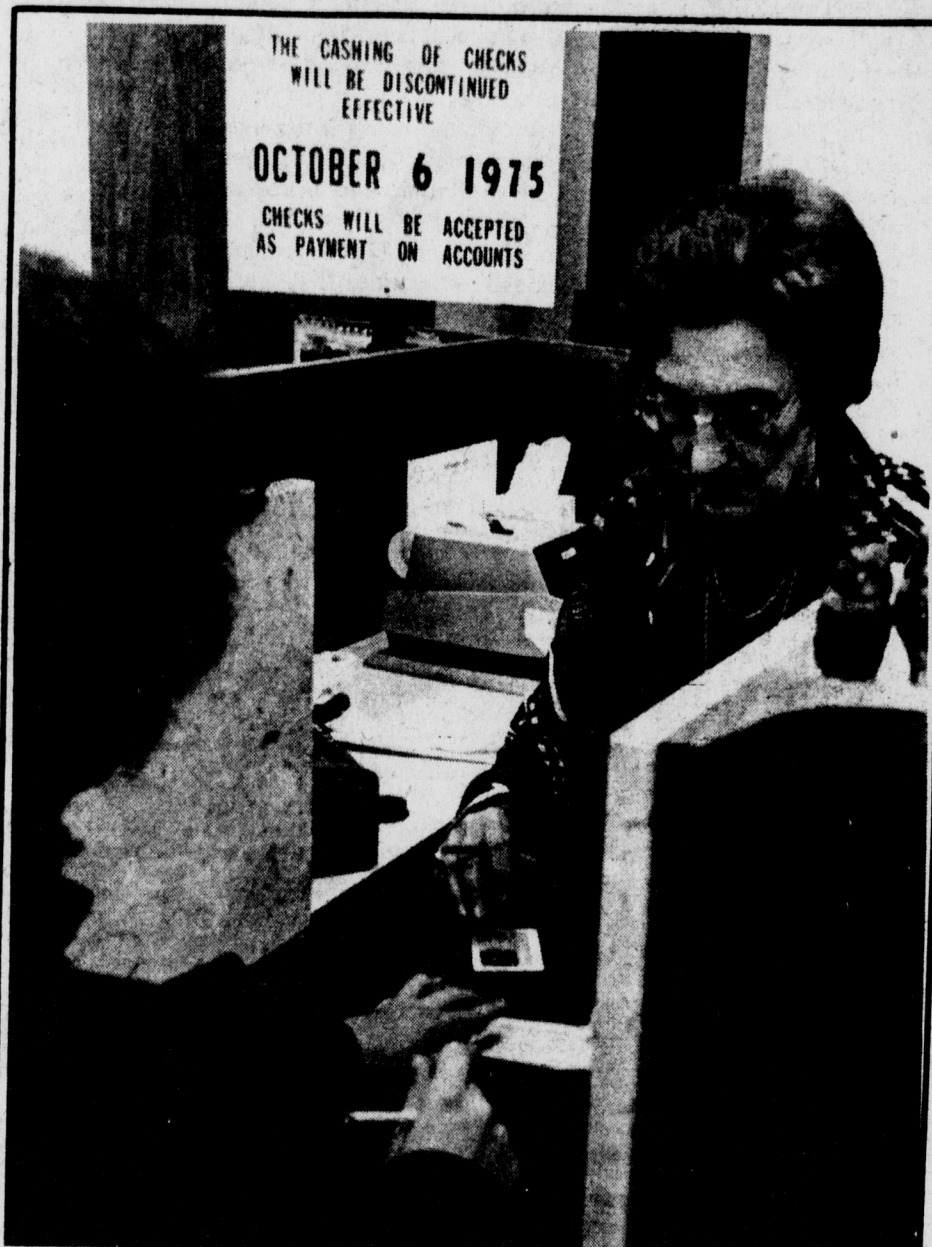

If the money could be spent here, he said, it would provide jobs for a million Americans and speed the economic recovery.

"I have offered to compromise again and again," Ford said, referring to his dealings with the Democratic-controlled Congress. He continued:

"A majority of the members . . . thus far have refused to do anything that will increase domestic energy production."

Apart from urging enactment of a phased decontrol plan, Ford said Congress should also take up Administrative bills to ease the impact of decontrol on users of propane gas and on independent refiners and marketers, as well as legislation to recoup windfall profits that producers might reap in the event of complete decontrol.

"Congress must face up to the situation," he said, and declared that if it does not do so, "only an aroused citizenry" can force action.

Student voter registration encouraged by Voter '75

By ELLEN SPONSELLER
State News Staff Writer

By the time election day rolls around on Nov. 4, as many as 6,000 new student voters may be casting their ballots in the city council election if an intensive voter registration drive comes off as planned. And four of the six candidates for city council who were contacted said they think more student voters will be profitable for all of their campaigns.

The drive is sponsored by Voters '75, a nonpolitical organization established in 1971 for the purpose of registering students. Workers hope to reach several thousand students before 8 p.m., Monday, Oct. 6, the last date to register to vote in the upcoming November elections.

Six canvassing teams will be scouring the campus for potential voters all this week. Registration tables will be located in Bessey, Harky and Wells halls, and canvassers will be in residence hall lines to register eligible students.

"We are trying to make it as easy as possible for students to register," said Jim Paquet, coordinator of Voters '75. "Our goal is to get the maximum possible number of students registered by election time."

As of Monday, 4,100 student voters had been recently registered, 2,954 in East Lansing and the rest in Meridian Township, Lansing and Lansing Township. Most student voters registered during MSU class registrations. No figures were available on how many of these are students.

Paquet outlined the qualifications for registering to vote. First, student must be 18-years-old by Nov. 4th and a U.S. citizen. Any student living at MSU who fulfills the first two requirements is eligible to register to vote here, including out-of-state students.

The entire MSU campus is in the city of East Lansing with the exception of portions of East Complex, which are in Meridian Township, including North Hubbard, part of South Hubbard, East Akers, and parts of Holmes, McDonel and Owen halls.

Paquet said that students wishing to vote should look for people who will come door to door this week, or they can register at the city clerk's office at City Hall, 410 Abbott Road.

Students with questions or who want to volunteer to work during the drive may contact 336 Student Services Bldg. or call there at 355-8266.

All candidates contacted said they feel a strong student vote will help their campaigns.

Larry Owen said he was very eager to see students register in East Lansing. "If the primary was any indication, a large student turnout would be profitable for my campaign," Owen said. Owen said he received 65 per cent of the student vote in the primary.

Gordon Thomas said he had no predictions but "would like to think a large student turnout would help." Thomas, who is also professor of communications at MSU, said he was putting an ad in the paper asking his former students for help in his campaign. "My support has previously come mostly from the city, but I would like to be as active as I can on campus," Thomas said.

John Czarnecki said he hoped a large student turnout would help him. "Hopefully students will read and understand the issues and the candidates and I feel that can only help me," he said. Czarnecki said both students and homeowners are citizens and "both are considered in my views." He said he did not want to be labeled with exclusively either the homeowner or the student.

George Griffiths, an incumbent council member running for re-election, said votes by students would be good for his candidacy. Griffiths said that four years ago the students voted for him and, as he sees it, "a larger voter turnout this year, both by students and the people north of Grand River, will benefit my campaign."

The other two candidates for city council, incumbent Thelma Evans and Elizabeth Nall, could not be reached for comment Monday.

MSU CAUSE OF HEAVY TRAFFIC

U.S. 27 to have addition

By CAROLYN FESSLER
State News Staff Writer

The Dept. of State Highways and Transportation, pointing a finger at MSU as a "traffic magnet," is in the process of finalizing plans for construction of 31 new miles of U.S. 27 north out of Lansing.

The negative environmental impact of the proposed highway's corridor drew fire from the Dept. of Natural Resources (DNR) and the Michigan Environmental Review Board (MERB). DNR director Howard Tanner criticized the freeway plan, saying that valuable woodlots and agricultural lands would be slashed by the limited access concrete ribbon.

Highway officials cite the existing highway's unlimited access as dangerous and argue that the burden of traffic has more than doubled in the past 20 years.

A DNR ad hoc committee met Monday in an all-afternoon attempt to arrive at a recommendation to MERB for the approval of an environmental impact statement filed by the state highway department concerning the construction project.

Charles Black of the DNR office of environmental review said that no decision has been reached on the lengthy document but that the DNR is "looking at all possible alternatives."

Black later admitted that the possibility of an Amtrak line—considered by many to be a feasible alternative—was not being studied.

Bob Adams, administrator for the Bureau of Transportation Planning, said that in addition to the 45,000 students heading their cars in the direction of East Lansing, there also is a heavy flow of trucks to the University.

"Support of a university community is like a large town in a concentrated area," he said. "Practically all the commodities needed for this support come in by truck."

Adams also said there has been no study made on the feasibility of subsidizing Amtrak rail passenger service to relieve the high volume of traffic on U.S. 27 going north.

"The State of Michigan has the most ambitious program in the nation for subsidization of Amtrak lines," Adams said. "But you don't just throw money and solutions at a transportation problem of this degree, just as we cannot just throw tracks northward and expect it to solve 27's problems."

"Traffic is not necessarily divertable to Amtrak lines. You can't run trains to all the little communities where much of this auto traffic originates."

Adams admitted, however, that the Amtrak lines that do run through Lansing have made it unnecessary for many students to own and operate automobiles.

Adams said most of the northbound traffic consists of recreational vehicles and that it would take "billions and billions of dollars" to implement any sort of mass transportation facilities to recreational sites for trailers and campers.

"We are studying the possibilities of a commuter bus system of some sort running along the U.S. 27 corridor," Adams said. "But the regular bus lines going in that direction are on the verge of economic disaster. The state might even have to subsidize these buses."

A final recommendation by the Dept. of State Highways and Transportation will be made to State Highway Commission Oct. 22. Adams said the proposed limited access freeway will run east of the existing four-lane highway from Lansing to St. Johns. From that point the present unlimited access highway to Ithaca would be converted to a freeway.

Open houses

Two open houses will be held this week for all aspiring Seymour Herschs, Helen Thomases and David Kennerlys that would like to jump into the journalism field by using the State News or Red Cedar Log as a springboard.

Any student interested in working for the State News as a reporter, copy editor or photographer, including those that have already applied for a job, should attend the open house today at 8 p.m. in 341 Student Services Bldg. (not next week, as reported in Monday's paper.)

The MSU yearbook, the Red Cedar Log, is holding its open house at 7:30 Wednesday in 6 Student Services Bldg. All students with special skills in photography, writing, layout, promotion or sales are invited.

Smokeless classes a new trend

By FRANCES BROWN
State News Staff Writer

Though no contemporary Carrie Nation has been sighted yanking offensive tobacco from the lips of passers-by, there may be a new trend on campus against smoking in classes.

Since 1969 there have been no regulations against smoking on campus, except in specially designated areas which are fire hazards. This term, however, some classes have agreed to have no smoking sections or to allow smoking at all.

In the first meeting of her Introduction to Probability class Connie Shapiro, asst. professor of statistics, called for a vote to accept or reject smoking.

After hearing one person speak in favor of smoking, claiming the right to smoke, and another person speaking in favor of the right to breathe, the class of 400 voted down smoking by a 2-1 margin.

Shapiro, who smokes herself, said in the three or four terms she has asked for a vote her classes have always voted not to allow smoking. But the majority is getting larger.

"It bothers me to sit close to a smoker," Shapiro said. "You start choking. It's very

"It bothers me to sit close to a smoker." "You start choking. It's very annoying. I think people should be more considerate when they smoke." — Connie Shapiro, asst. professor of statistics annoying. I think people should be more considerate when they smoke."

But, out of compassion, Shapiro will establish a special smokers' section during exams.

"With all of those smokers sitting so close next to each other, maybe they'll quit," she said.

Since the no smoking rule was passed in Shapiro's class one incident has occurred.

"Shapiro told him, 'You're not supposed to smoke' and people in the class looked at him and made fun of him," Kurt Kuebler, 514 E. Wilson Hall, a class member, said. "He was embarrassed and put it out."

Monday, Barbara Steidle, asst. professor of history, announced to her U.S. Constitutional History class that a person in the class had complained to her about the smoking. Steidle indicated the no smoking signs in the room, McDonel kiva, and asked the smokers to sit in the right front section. She also pointed out her graduate assistants found that the 3.5 and 4.0 students usually sat in that section.

Samuel C. Gingrich, MSU fire safety officer, said student pressure is the only way to fight smoking in classrooms. Gingrich recalled that in 1938, when he came to Michigan State College, smoking was not allowed anywhere on the campus grounds. If students caught someone smoking they would throw the offender in the Red Cedar River, he said.

Gingrich has received several phone calls from students complaining about breathing others second-hand smoke. One student said he was going to complain to the board of trustees and sue.

But, even though he posts no smoking signs in "places of assembly" with a capacity of 50 persons or more, Gingrich has no enforcement power. And the Dept. of Public Safety only enforces the no smoking signs at special events such as concerts or basketball games in Jenison Fieldhouse, so it's mainly up to the students.

Still, Gingrich said emphatically, "No smoking signs mean no smoking. It has been proven that second-hand smoke is harmful."

So far this year the Student Activities Office has not registered an anti-smoking group though a group was registered last year.

Air lines gave out kickbacks

NEW YORK (AP) — Major international air lines pleaded "no contest" Monday in Brooklyn Federal court to criminal information complaints charging them with making illegal kickbacks to travel agents.

The 19 air carriers also signed criminal consent decrees that will make them liable for contempt of court charges should they be found guilty of continuing the practice, according to the U.S. attorney's office.

Two were fined $35,000 each. They were Air France and Sabena. The others were still to face sentencing. They were Trans World Airlines, Pan American World Airways, Air India, Alitalia, British Airways, Caledonian Airways, El Al, Iberia, Icelandic, Japan, KLM Royal Dutch, Lufthansa, Olympic, Pakistan, Scandinavian, Swiss and TAP Airways.

Day care guidelines blocked

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — New guidelines by the Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) for federally funded day care centers across the nation were blocked by a federal court in an order made public Monday.

The guidelines, which were to have gone into effect Wednesday, would have tightened the ratio of children to adult attendants.

In Washington, a spokesman for HEW said there would be no immediate comment.

HEW has proposed a 4-1 child-adult ratio and a 1-1 ratio for infants.

Firms paid arms salesmen

WASHINGTON (AP) — Arms salesmen in the Middle East have been paid at least $18.7 million during the past two years by six American firms, Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., says. Aspin said formerly secret documents supplied him by the Pentagon show that agents collected the money from the American companies for sales which totaled about $500 million.

The documents do not show whether the money, paid between mid-1973 and July 30, 1975, was used to bribe government officials or to pay political parties, he said. Included in the sales are the first known agents' fees for sales to Israel.

The documents were released after Aspin threatened to sue the Defense Dept. under the Freedom of Information Act, an aide said Sunday.

IRS stops banking investigation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service suspended an investigation into money flowing through banks in the Bahamas because an informer pilfered documents from a Bahamian's briefcase during a trust the informer arranged for the owner of the briefcase, an IRS official said Monday.

Because the Bahamian was occupied at the time by a woman with whom the informer had arranged the trust, Williams said there were questions about the legality of the information obtained and used in establishing cases growing out of the investigation.

Williams said there were other "potential law violations" involved in the investigation, called "Operation Haven," but he declined to provide details.

"Operation Haven" was an attempt to determine whether wealthy Americans were using banks in the Bahamas to cover up income and avoid paying taxes.

Gunmen free second hostage

LONDON (AP) — Three gunmen holed up for more than 40 hours in a 10-by-12-foot basement storeroom of a restaurant freed a second of their eight hostages Monday evening for health reasons, police said.

The hostage, wrapped in a heavy red blanket, was taken to an ambulance in a wheel chair and then to a hospital where doctors said his illness, which wasn't specified, was "not too bad."

Authorities earlier turned down a demand for a getaway plane from the gunmen.

The gunmen originally took hostage eight senior management personnel of a restaurant chain Sunday but released one after 15 hours as a sign of good faith.

The gunmen missed the receipts of 11,000 pounds — $23,100 — because the police arrived too quickly in response to a call by a staff member who escaped the raid.

Moslem pirates surrender

ZAMBOANGA, The Philippines (AP) — Moslem pirates who hijacked a Japanese freighter off the southern Philippine island of Mindanao surrendered unconditionally Monday official sources said.

They said the pirates, believed to number about 20, surrendered to Philippine navy officers aboard the 3,853-ton Sushiro Maru. The ship was anchored 40 miles north of Zamboanga in a cove navy ships sealed off.

There was no violence aboard the freighter and no ransom had been paid, the sources said. They added that the ship was to get under way at dusk and would probably proceed to Tokyo on Tuesday.

The freighter with its 26 Japanese crewmen and five Filipino passengers was captured last Friday while the ship was awaiting a cargo of logs.

Guerillas face trial in Spain

MADRID, Spain (AP) — The government of Gen. Francisco Franco, defying international protests over the execution of five terrorists, will place Spain's two top guerillas on trial for their lives within a few days, defense legal sources said Monday.

They said Francisco Franco's regime will move in the face of a massive strike in the independence-minded northern Basque country and political criticism in Madrid, plus work stoppages, boycotts, demonstrations, violence and official protests all over Western Europe.

President Ford, through a spokesman in Washington, expressed regret at the "cycle of violence" in Spain. But White House spokesman Ron Nessen said there were no plans to join the dozen or more governments that have recalled their ambassadors to Spain. Much of Europe is governed by Socialists or Socialist-led coalitions.

Lawyers for Jose Mugica Arregui and Ignacio Perez Betegui, kingpins of the Basque separatist movement accused in the December 1973 assassination of Premier Luis Carrero Blanco, said they had been told to be ready for court-martials expected Tuesday.

Word of the trials came as more than 50,000 Spanish workers in the three Basque provinces observed a general protest strike. In Madrid, the cabinet met in secrecy-wrapped emergency session.

Observers called it Spain's worst crisis since the 1936-39 civil war, but Labor Minister Fernando Suarez rushed from the north to the cabinet meeting claiming the government was "completely calm." Suarez vowed not to let "terrorist murder... darken peace, the highest aspiration of our people."

Conviction of the two folk heroes in the Basque country is almost inevitable, the lawyers said. Under new anti-terrorist laws introduced last month, conviction will automatically bring death, with reprieve in the sole hands of the 82-year-old Franco.

Perez is allegedly the chief strategist of ETA, the Separatist movement meaning Basque Land and Liberty, and Mugica its military leader. Carrero Blanco died when an underground bomb blast blew his auto over the top of a church.

The executions at dawn Saturday of five men convicted of killing policemen included two Basques and three members of the urban guerrilla group known as FRAP—Patriotic Anti-fascist Revolutionary Front.

In Barcelona, FRAP's east coast capital, three men and two women disguised as doctors and nurses held up a government social security office Monday and escaped with $800,000, the city's biggest robbery in four decades. Well-informed sources attributed it to FRAP.

The five, armed with sub-machine guns and pistols, opened fire on police guards as they left, wounding two officers, one seriously, police said.

A statement signed by FRAP and sent to a newspaper in Bordeaux, France, claimed the guerilla group had drowned two Franco supporters to avenge its dead militants. It said the pair had been weighted down and immersed in the sea 20 miles north of the Spanish coast.

Unlike ETA, FRAP has little popular support in Spain. It is the action wing of Spain's small Communist party and has vowed "random" police killings.

Virtually all of the West European governments, many of them led by Socialists who have opposed the Franco regime since its victory in the Spanish civil war, condemned and criticized the executions.

The weekend fires and demonstrations at Spanish embassies quieted down Monday, but millions of French workers observed a brief stoppage of from five minutes to an hour in tribute to the five men. Factory, transport and public service workers, miners, local government employees and post office clerks in French cities joined the stoppage.

Port workers in Denmark and Sweden announced they would boycott Spanish freighters from loading anything in their harbors for various periods ranging from 24 to 72 hours. Norwegian trade unions called for a 24-hour blockade of air traffic to and from Spain.

Spain reacted by ordering home several ambassadors, including the envoy to the Vatican. Pope Paul VI called executions "murderous repression," but did not recall the Vatican envoy to Spain.

Spain's biggest newspaper, the afternoon Pueblo, outlined the deep anxiety of Spaniards seeing the world against them.

"It is time for evolution progress and democratic change in the direction of liberty," it said. "Everywhere else is useless for the state above, all, for the country has repetitions of situations like present one."

Premier orders troops to seize broadcast media

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Portugal's premier ordered troops to take over Lisbon's leftist-controlled radio and television stations Monday, but reliable sources said that at one station soldiers refused to obey orders and fraternized with the leftist staffers instead.

Premier Jose Pinheiro de Azevedo ordered the takeover saying the country was in a "real emergency." He said in a broadcast he acted to prevent the stations from "manipulating" information "to undermine the bases of discipline and order" and to "avoid declaration of a state of emergency."

At Radio Clube Portugues in downtown Lisbon, informants said hatless soldiers in jungle camouflage were lounging in the second-story windows and mingling with the staff. Several hundred people were gathered outside the radio station.

Earlier, an announcer had interrupted a record to say the station's employees were being evacuated by troops. But starting at midday, the station began an hourly broadcast of its operating statutes which said it was dedicated to what it called independent nonpartisan broadcasting in the interest of the working class.

Elsewhere in Lisbon, extreme left groups began distributing leaflets in the streets calling for an immediate work stoppage and a rally in a downtown square.

"Let us mobilize to fight counterrevolution," said a leaflet signed by the United Revolutionary Front, an umbrella organization for several far left organizations.

Since the April 1974 revolution, communist and other militant leftist employees have taken over most of the capital's radio and television stations.

Information Minister Antonio Almeida Santos told a news conference that "these past few days have been the most perilous the regime has had to face with the exception of May 11." That was the date lower of former President Antonio de Spínola staged an abortive military uprising.

Recent reports indicate that soldiers have stolen thousands of arms from military arsenals and leftist organizations have issued calls for a campaign of opposition to "reactionary" course of Azevedo's government.

The admiral formed a broad-based cabinet earlier this month after moderates in military and violent demonstrations across Portugal forced the ouster of Communist-backed Premier Vasco Gonçalves.

Committee to take fight for names list to House

WASHINGTON (AP) — In effect rejecting a compromise offer from President Ford, the Select House Intelligence Committee lined up Monday in favor of taking its fight for secret information to the full House.

"I do think it is time congress took a stand," said Chairman Otis G. Pike, D-N.Y. "And it is time Congress said we need these pieces of information."

Among the issues is whether the committee could have the names of secret agents which it requests. The committee has objected to Ford's proposal that they could not have the names of any secret agents involved in operations which, if disclosed, would subject the agent to danger or reprisals.

When a reporter asked Pike if he believes the committee should have wholesale access to names of secret agents, Pike replied: "No, we're not suggesting that. We're suggesting that when we need it, we ought to be able to get it."

However, all six Democrats present at a committee meeting declared their support for a resolution by which the full House would brand defiance of committee subpoena "a grave matter requiring appropriate enforcement."

Pike has said the enforcement could be contempt of congress citations against possibly Central Intelligence Director William E. Colby or Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

The committee's senior Republican, Rep. Robert McClory of Illinois, said the White House had promised him it would turn over volumes of secret information as soon as an agreement was reached.

McClory said it would be pointless to instead take a time-consuming fight to the House.

"We'd be heading for litigation and a confrontation that would lead us nowhere," McClory said.

Police search new site for Hoffa grave

Pope Paul VI called Hoffa's death "murderous" but did not recall an envoy to Spain.

Hoffa's biggest newspaper, the Detroit Free Press, was the first to report the deep anxiety of Hoffa's disappearance.

It is time for evolution in the direction of the future. Hoffa's death was a tragedy for the country. Hoffa was a man who had a vision of the future.

DETROIT (UPI)—State Police dug for two hours in an area about one mile from the site of an intense search for the grave of James R. Hoffa.

Some state and local authorities discounted the tipster's lead.

But in Lansing, crime investigators said they believe the tipster has "solid" evidence on where Hoffa's killers buried his body.

After calling off the search, the head of Atty. Gen. Frank J. Kelley's organized crime division said authorities have not discounted information the tipster gave U.S. Senate committee investigators.

"It's my information that the informant knows someone who was here when the body was buried," said Vincent J. Pierante.

Authorities said they may ask the tipster to visit the scene, possibly in a helicopter, to try to pinpoint the grave.

The identity of the tipster was not disclosed by investigators of the Senate's Permanent Subcommittee on Investigation, chaired by Henry Jackson, D-Wash.

But the Detroit News said it learned the informant is a Chicago man with close associations with several Teamsters officials and underworld kingpins.

Michigan authorities said the tipster allegedly launched the search because organized crime bosses were angered at suggestions Hoffa was slain on their orders. Discovery of Hoffa's body, the tipster allegedly said, would ease federal pressure on organized crime figures drawn into the investigation.

The weekend search—carried out according to the tipster's directions—led State Police to a rural Oakland County area of brush, woods and swamp about 15 miles from the northwest Detroit suburb where Hoffa was last seen.

The former president of the Teamsters International Union disappeared after he told his family he was going to a restaurant to meet a reputed Mafia chieftain for lunch. Hoffa was last spotted standing outside the restaurant.

Federal, state and local police have carried out several searches after tips on alleged burial sites, but this one was treated more seriously than in other cases.

ASMSU DISTURBANCE CHARGES UNSETTLED

Uncertainty surrounds AUSJ case

By CASSANDRA SPRATLING
State News Staff Writer

It appears that no one knows for sure whether or not the All-University Student Judiciary (AUSJ) will once again hear the case of three students charged with disrupting the May 5 ASMSU board meeting.

The case began when ASMSU board member William Peltes charged Leslie Shields, Doyle O'Connor and Timothy Cain with violating two student regulations during a disturbance that arose out of a discussion over the Student Workers Union's relationship with the ASMSU Labor Relations Office.

The regulations were 7.02 which states that no student shall knowingly endanger the health and safety of another person, and 7.04 which prohibits students from intentionally interfering with educational or service functions of the University to the extent of closing down those functions.

The judiciary dropped the charges for violating regulation 7.02 due to insufficient evidence. Only O'Connor was found guilty of violating regulation 7.04.

William Peltes was dissatisfied with the decision and appealed to the Student-Faculty Judiciary, claiming that correct procedures were not followed in the hearing held May 28.

Cain said he, Shields and

Cain

O'Connor

Shields

O'Connor tried to appeal O'Connor's case but the charges appeal was denied.

However, as a result of Peltes' appeal the Student-Faculty Judiciary cleared all charges against the three and ordered the AUSJ to rehear the case.

But as it stands now, no one really knows if the case will be heard again or not.

Bob Stark, of the ASMSU Legal Aid Office, said it depends on three things. One, whether or not Peltes is still a student and wants to go ahead with the charges. Two, whether or not the defendants are all still students and whether or not the judiciary still wants to hear the case.

A spokesman for the Office of Current Records said that so far Peltes is not registered as a student this term. But they will not know for sure who is registered for fall for at least two weeks.

Peltes himself could not be located.

Cain said it would be absurd to hear the trial again and O'Connor agreed. "The charges are as silly as they were the last time," O'Connor said.

Both Cain and O'Connor said that ASMSU President Brian Raymond and Louis Hekhuis, director of student activities, were behind the charges.

"Peltes brought the charges but Brian and Louis Hekhuis are the ones who really brought the charges," Cain said.

"It's Brian Raymond who pushed the retrial," said O'Connor. "Basically because he hates my guts and everything we've done on campus."

Hekhuis said, however, that Peltes brought the charges on his own. "The facts are and they can be verified that Peltes did this thing on his own," he said. "I had no discussion with him until after the charges had been filed with Judicial Programs."

Pete Martin, AUSJ adviser, said there's no way to tell what's going to happen in the case until the judiciary meets and reviews the case.

Weekend showers prove costly to Wilson tenants

By JAMIE CONROY
State News Staff Writer

Wilson Hall residents were surprised to find their homes in a state of disrepair over the weekend.

Plumbing, squeals and shrieks of unwary bathers in the hot water situation were the most common complaints.

Thomas Schwab, manager of Wilson Hall, said the hot water problem started on Friday and was corrected Saturday when maintenance men from the Physical Plant restored hot water to the building at 10 a.m.

John Boyko, mechanical maintenance coordinator, attributed the hot water problem to a "combination of control and mechanical problems."

"You can't tell when anything mechanical is going to break down," he said. "This type of thing doesn't happen that often and as far as I know, Wilson the only building affected."

Though the lack of hot water did not cause any serious problems in everyday maintenance of the hall, student bathing habits were inconveniently disrupted.

"We froze our asses off," said Ed Gliwinski, freshman, 217 E. Wilson Hall.

Most students agreed that the hot water situation was a nuisance.

"It comes and goes and you just don't know when it'll be here," said Brice Lambrix, 519 E. Wilson Hall. "I was taking a shower this morning and by the time I was finished, the hot water came on."

Some students employed methods to try and lure hot water from the shower nozzle.

"I let it run for awhile, and it got semi-warm," said Tim Hagle, 517 E. Wilson Hall. "But the bathroom is cold to begin with, so when you get out, you freeze anyway."

Because the hot water flow was sporadic, most people just didn't know what was going on, said Karen Sharn, an R.A. in Wilson.

"At peak hours like 7 a.m. the water did get hot. It seemed that you only had trouble if you took a shower at a weird time," she said. "But people weren't taking many showers, that's for sure."

Good-bye, Patty, it's been fun

The Patty Hearst kidnapping will certainly go down as one of the most bizarre cases in American criminal history. The abrupt switch from drinker of fine wines and lover of antiques to self-proclaimed "urban guerilla" deserves final comment.

It is encouraging to know that the FBI is still doing its job, and especially comforting that it could do it without resorting to a gunbattle.

However, the unusual circumstances which surround the case have led many of us to prejudge the important legal questions of insanity, guilt and possible mitigating circumstances because of the kidnapping. These should and will be decided in court. We can only hope that the final decision will be taken without regards to the weight of the Hearst name.

To most of us though, the greatest relief will be being able to pick up a newspaper without hearing of Steve Weed's broken heart, Patty's revolutionary fervor, or the dimpled simplicity of Mrs. Hearst urging her to come home and work it all out.

Though some of you will undoubtedly miss the excitement and romance that Patty added to your lives, we at the State News eagerly await the day when Patty is forgotten and she returns to the life of a normal newspaper heiress turned revolutionary.

Good - bye Patty, it's been fun.

Backside pain now eliminated?

One of the perennial backside pains of completing college has been the ritual of trying to secure interviews with prospective employers.

AT MSU, with one of the most successful university placement centers in the country, students have had the opportunity to schedule more interviews with more employers than virtually anywhere else.

But in addition to the interviews and opportunities, graduating students have also had to contend with lines that at times made them damn the placement center in frustration. Often if students didn't spend half the night in line waiting for Monday morning sign-ups, they would miss chances for interviews.

As is so often the case, what is a blessing is also a curse.

But perhaps a new plan begun Monday by MSU Placement Center will ease if not eliminate the cursed half of the interview process.

The old sign - up process required students to sign up Monday for all of the interviews for that week. The new plan allows them to sign up a week in advance, cutting the lines by 80 per cent.

So for the job seeker, things are looking up at MSU. They'll get their interviews and their shuteye too. Now, all they need is jobs.

ANALYSIS: energy sources

Coal may prove our best energy hope

Recycling needed

With the closing of the only newspaper recycling site in the Lansing area, MSU has joined many other universities in the proud tradition of helping a few instead of many. MSU states that it can not subsidize the recycling program any more because it has lost $50,000 in three years. Yet they can justify $32,000 a year subsidy for house mothers. As a taxpayer I would like to know why.

A recycling site is open to the entire university and community, it helps cut down on the solid waste problem, provides worthwhile jobs for students, saves the taxpayer's money, and pays for itself in all or part by the sale of what it collects. The house mothers who work in the sororities or fraternities benefit only a select few.

Since MSU gets part of its paper from the public, in all fairness shouldn't the public have had some type of voice at a public meeting or hearing to determine the fate of the recycling program? Instead, what did the public get? A closed sign on each of the recycling sheds, and a carefully worded public relations release. A project that helped many and has the potential of paying for itself shouldn't just be terminated without even a fair chance!

Mr. Breslin states that it won't cost much to get rid of the paper, he's right-it won't, but it will certainly cost the taxpayers of Michigan a pretty penny! By discontinuing the collection of paper for recycling you have not only cut back the newspaper recycling operation for MSU, but for all of Lansing as well!

And the way in which this entire procedure was handled in secret, with the majority of students gone, to exterminate a logical system in favor of one that can't save money! Oh, yes, where can I pick up a copy of the Environmental Impact statement you filed?

In closing tell us, Mr. Breslin, and the rest of your group, where are we going to recycle our newspapers on your doorsteps!

By JERRY R. WILSON
United Press International
The United States may be totally independent of Arab oil by the year 2015.

Unfortunately, so will every one else because statistically that will be the year the last barrel of oil is pumped from the last well on earth.

Of course, there will be no "last barrel" as such in 2015 because the world's oil fields cannot continue to produce at current levels much longer.

The 1975 International Petroleum Encyclopedia, updated and published annually by the Petroleum Publishing Co., sets proven world reserves—the oil known for a fact to be present and recoverable by current technology—at about 103 billion metric tons. The current world annual consumption rate is approximately 2.8 billion tons.

The IPE, which gathers the best available estimates from government and industry sources throughout the world, shows the situation is even worse for domestic wells. U.S. reserves, including a middle ground estimate of 15 billion barrels in Alaska's Prudhoe Bay, stand at 6.8 billion metric tons, while annual production is 434.4 million metric tons.

At that rate, U.S. reserves would be exhausted in about 15 years.

While consumption in much of the Western world has slowly declined under higher price levels, consumption in the developing nations and the communist bloc has increased at a nearly equivalent level. The United States and Western Europe are not likely to decrease much further, but increases in Africa, Latin America and Asia can be expected to continue as their level of technology and standard of living rise.

Therefore, the answer to this nation's energy problems—and those of the rest of the world—do not lie in increased production from already depleting reserves.

Industry sources say that would only hasten the final day of reckoning. And the solution certainly is not a return to the days of "cheap" oil which made shortsighted consumption so easy.

Though much of the world still relies heavily on other fuel sources, principally solid fuels coal and wood and natural gas, the prospects there also are bleak.

The world supply of coal is massive and relatively untapped, but natural gas reserves, at current consumption rates, will be exhausted in about 50 years.

Water-generated power supplies only 1.9 per cent of the world's energy, and nuclear power, hailed as the power source of the future, provides only .4 per cent in the current nuclear age. It is unlikely either will be able to take over the role now played by petroleum in the short time remaining.

And time is short because the decreasing productivity of world oil fields could cause a disastrous energy shortage before the end of this century, according to industry sources.

Worldwide inflation has added additional problems, delaying development of such exotic alternate energy sources as geothermal and solar.

With the time lag from theory to prototype to implementation to dependence, some experts say it already may be too late for these methods to be in place and providing significant quantities of energy when the problem becomes acute.

Development of one possible alternate—coal liquefaction—about to begin. Simply coal liquefaction is a process converting one ton of coal into three barrels of high-grade synthetic crude oil. Major research projects in this area are now underway, will be at least five years in the process can be proven a test plant.

Though proponents are casting several full-scale producing up to 100,000 barrels of oil a day, it will be years before such plants be operational—providing process is economically viable. If it is, America's estimated 400 billion tons of coal would provide enough to supply the nation's needs for about 200 years.

William F. Buckley Jr.

Senator Buckley scandalizes colleagues by acting honorably

New York's Congressional delegation is scandalized by one of their number, Senator James L. Buckley, who has outraged precedent by behaving honorably, which is, roughly speaking, the opposite of behaving politically. The Congressional delegation wants Washington, D.C., which short-hand for Duluth, Abilene, Ft. Lauderdale, Bridgeport, Atlanta and Boise, to guarantee the maturing bonds of the City of New York. Guaranteeing the bonds means making up the deficit, because the revenues being generated by the City of New York are insufficient to pay the obligations undertaken by the City of New York. Senator Buckley, in a word, is being vilified for declining to encourage other Americans to subsidize New York City's extravagance and mismanagement. A few observations:

1. There is in my opinion no reason at all to believe that the people of New York City are as outraged as their politicians. The people of New York City are over-taxed as it is, and there are no complaints heard more frequently among them than against the extravagances of their own officials. These have been countenanced in part because of the usual inertia of the voters, in part because somehow the money has materialized for all those extra services and all that welfare and all that tuition-free guaranteed admission to city colleges. If the bonds go into default, it will mean very simply that economies will have to be effected. The people of New York are bound to benefit in due course from any move that relieves them of the insidious burden of profligate spending.

2. A senator demeans the office if he considers it his primary function to wage a form of guerilla warfare against other states in the union, the purpose of which is to take as much of the money that belongs to people who live out of state as he can, in order to spend it at home. A senator especially demeans the office if he considers it his duty to invade states poorer than his own, for the benefit of his own state.

3. A United States senator, as distinguished from a lobbyist for New York City, has some responsibility to meditate the consequences of his vote. Any guarantee by Washington, D.C., of the obligations of New York City instantly encourages other cities — and quite rightly so — to demand similar guarantees. And we revert to the old phenomenon of what I have called a sky black with criss-crossing dollars. The people who win those wars are the people with political muscle. That they should also think of themselves — as most New York congressmen have got into the habit of doing — as the world's most conspicuous humanitarians, is accepted by people with stronger stomachs than my own, and lesser minds.

4. Representative Edward Koch, who prides himself on his own independence, now says of his colleagues in Congress, "We should be acting as a delegation and speaking with one voice." I find no sanction in American history, in the Constitution, in the Bill of Rights, or in the work of Edmund Burke, Thomas Jefferson, John Stuart Mill or Oliver Wendell Holmes to endorse the generality of Mr. Koch. Translated his statement says: "When we guys in New York get together to steal from other Americans, we ought to do it unanimously, since that way all individuals we are less exposed." Mr. Koch makes a demagogic but dangerous crack about Senator Buckley's previous residence in the neighboring state of Connecticut. Demagogues because he never made such reference to the previous residence of Senator Robert Kennedy. Dangerous because Connecticut pays out $1.54 for every $1.00 it receives from the federal government in welfare whereas New York, which is wealthier than Connecticut, pays out only 90 cents for every dollar it receives.

The cartoonists take a look at the 1976 election

DELEGATE AT LARGE?

The 1976 Presidential election may be more than a year away, but as any political cartoonist can tell you, the sweepstakes have already begun.

Convention sites for next summer have already been selected. The Republicans are returning to the heartland, Kansas City, where middle Americans yawn and grow wheat and talk about how glad they are not to be in New York, which is where the Democrats are going. The Dems may find some citizens of America's largest city less hospitable than they expect — as Lou Grant illustrates.

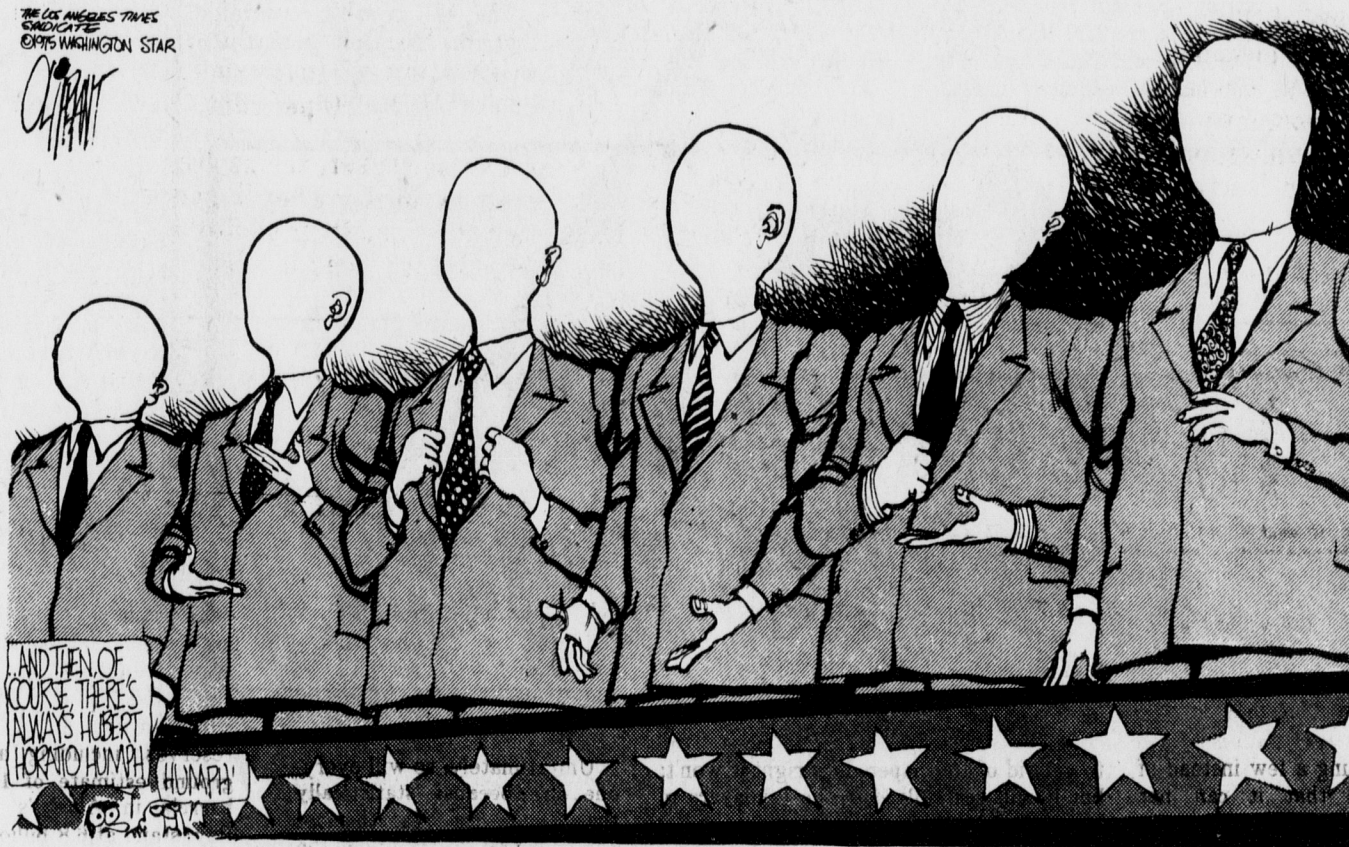

But the convention site is only one of the Democratic Party's problems. With George Wallace frightening the party's liberals and minorities, and Edward Kennedy steadfastly refusing to run, the party is left with as lackluster a pack of would-be candidates as any insomniac could wish for — at least, in the view of Oliphant.

Not that the Republicans are sitting pretty, either. Gerald Ford, plagued with the problems of the presidency, and buoyed by Vice President Rockefeller like a drowning man is buoyed by a bag of cement, is harried on the right by the possibility of a conservative challenger: Ronald Reagan. Ford would like to strike a deal with Reagan to get him off of his back... as Conrad tries to show us.

MSU singing groups set auditions

Auditions and rehearsals will be held today for two MSU singing groups.

The first 1975-76 rehearsal of the MSU Women's Glee Club, at which interested singers may audition for membership, will be held today from 4:10 to 5:30 p.m. in 103 Music Practice

Bldg.

The Women's Glee Club will present a Christmas concert Dec. 5 and another in the spring. Regular rehearsals for the group are 4:10 to 5:30 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays. For information contact director Jeannette Joiner.

Auditions for the MSU Russian Chorus will be held from 4 to 5 p.m. today and Wednesday in 206 Music Bldg. Knowledge of Russian is not required. The chorus is sponsored by the MSU Dept. of German and Russian and the Russian and East European Studies Program.

Jazz artists to perform in Abrams

By DAVE STERN
State News Reviewer

The cultural stasis of the MSU campus was rocked more than slightly last fall when the Creative Arts Collective (CAC), a group of black musicians organized by alto-saxophone player Roscoe Mitchell, staged an outstanding series of concerts in Abrams Planetarium. Beginning Wednesday, the CAC will initiate another series of planetarium concerts.

Starting at 8:15 p.m. Wednesday, the planetarium will attempt to contain the musical energies of the Fireworks Jazz and Poetry Ensemble and the CAC Percussion Group.

Tickets are $3 each or $10 for the concert series. Tickets are available from CAC members and at Abrams Planetarium.

The concert series, called "Innovations IV," will continue with performances on Oct. 9, 15 and 22. All concerts will begin at 8:15 p.m. in the planetarium.

On Oct. 9, a young composers concert will premier new compositions by various CAC members. Chicago Trumpeter Leo Smith will perform with CAC members on Oct. 15. The final concert on Oct. 22, will feature Roscoe Mitchell and the entire CAC. A similar concert last fall was a sellout at Abrams.

The CAC is more, however, than the 20-member musical ensemble that will appear in the final planetarium concert.

CAC members are involved in a great deal of private study and individual projects, open workshops, video experiments and work in other art forms. Members plan to begin work on a book of graphics and poetry after the autumn concert series.

An important part of the CAC is educational work.

Members such as Neal McAlpin, also founder of the Fireworks Jazz and Poetry ensemble, have directed 6-week mini-courses in area schools. The courses, such as the one McAlpin directed at Lansing's Sexton High School, use various media to focus on the students' reactions to artistic expression.

"The important thing lies not in teaching but in opening up people," McAlpin explained. "Give them some confidence in what they are doing so that they can continue. You need some positive feedback."

"Everybody's got 50 million songs inside of them...you just let them out," he added.

The CAC is also on lookout for new members. They have a monthly newsletter and a mailing list, for which names collected at each concert. CAC members now come of their organization as a permanent artistic forum for Lansing through which people will pass.

Wide apple variety spices cider

LANSING (UPI) — Fall is cider time in Michigan.

Connoisseurs claim Michigan cider is the best in all the nation because of the wide variety of apples the state uses in making the mouth-puckering beverage.

"The tastiest cider is made with a blend," said Sue Callaway, an apple expert for the Michigan Travel Bureau.

Michigan ranks first in the nation in production of spies, Jonathan's and wealthies apples and third in total production of all varieties.

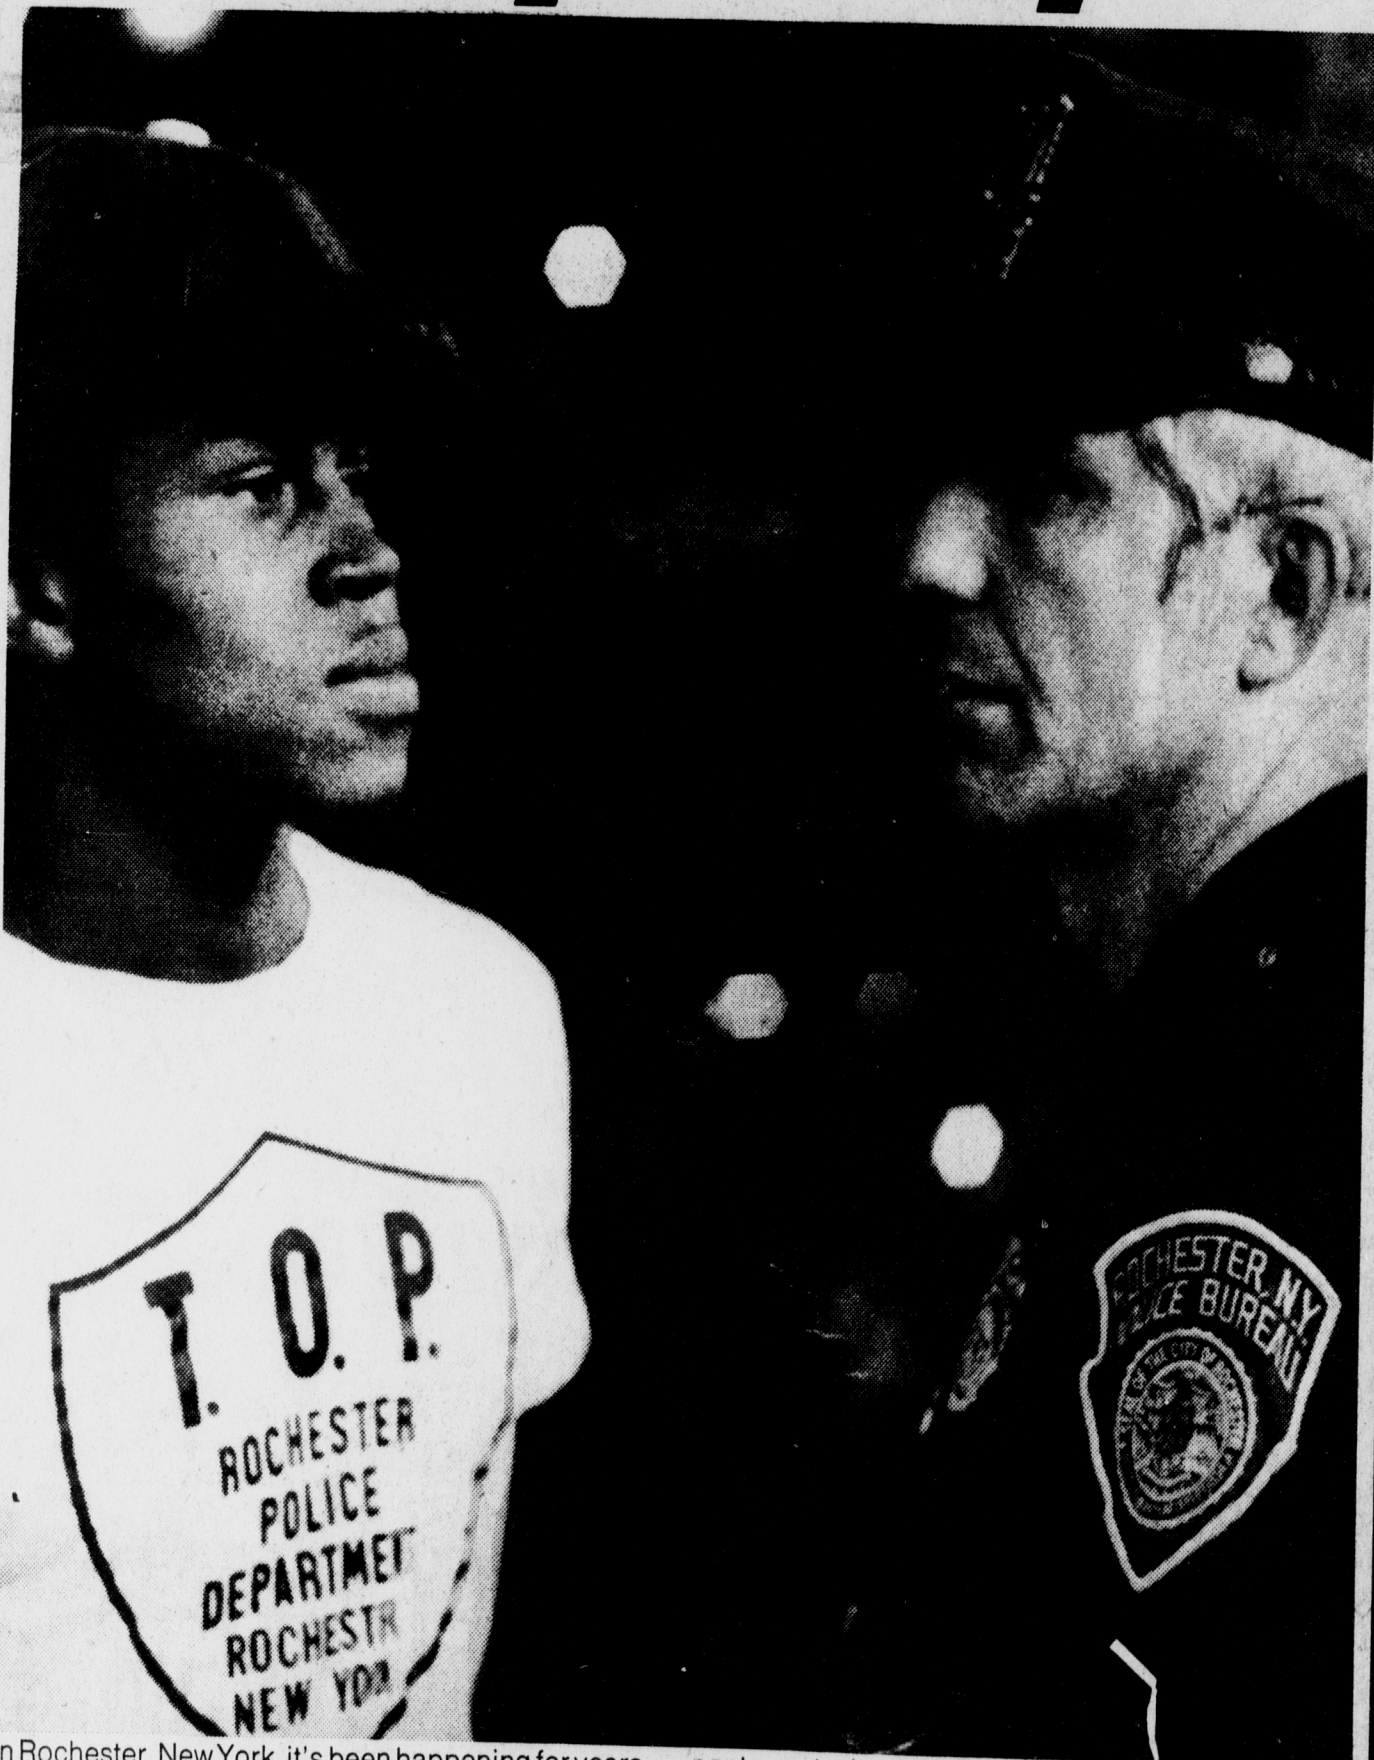

Jonathans provide a sour taste and delicious apples counter with a sweet taste. Good cider includes a smattering of the soft varieties such as McIntosh balanced with hard apples like northern spies.

"Michigan cider is probably a little better than most other ciders because of the varieties we have," Callaway said. "Squeeze them all together and you have a really delicious tasting cider. It does take all of those to get your best cider."

Can black and blue see eye to eye?

In Rochester, New York, it's been happening for years. The youth is a member of TOPs. Teens on Patrol. A group of boys and girls from the inner city who work with police each summer to help keep city recreation areas safe and orderly.

TOPs was conceived by Eastman Kodak Company and Rochester Jobs, Inc. in 1967. It has brought about a greater understanding and mutual respect between police and young people from the surrounding community.

TOPs don't have the power to make arrests, but they learn about police by working with them. Wearing special jackets and T-shirts, they ride in squad cars. Walk the beat. Monitor calls at the station. Supervise kids at pools and playgrounds. For which they're paid a salary.

Police come into the neighborhood as participants, not observers. When they get to know the people they're sworn to protect, they learn how their interests can be better served.

Why does Kodak provide financial support to TOPs? Because helping the people of Rochester communicate with one another helps build a better community in which the company can operate and grow. In short, it's good business. And we're in business to make a profit. But it's also good for society. The same society our business depends on.

If a company that makes pictures can't help people see more clearly, who can?

Jean-Luc Ponty, the versatile French violinist, will launch the fourth season of Mariah Coffeehouse concerts with 8 and 10:30 p.m. shows Wednesday in the McDonel Hall kiva.

Ponty, who quit school at an early age after he decided to become a professional musician, received his classical training from his musician parents and the French Conservatoire National Supérieur de Musique de Paris. Ponty was graduated from the school in 1961 with the institution's most prestigious award rating, Premier Prix.

After spending a few years with a French concert organization, Ponty devoted himself entirely to playing jazz in 1964. Influenced by the styles of Miles Davis, Thelonius Monk and Jimi Hendrix, Ponty gained considerable professional status among his fellow musicians as a result of his performances at the 1967 Monterey and Berlin Jazz Festivals.

The French violinist came to the United States for his first extended stay in 1969, when he toured with the George Duke Trio.

In recent years, Ponty has recorded albums with a variety of popular artists. He performed with Frank Zappa and the Mothers of Invention and on Elton John's "Honky Chateau" album.

Ponty joined musical forces with another artist who was influenced by Miles Davis and John McLaughlin in 1974. McLaughlin featured Ponty's violin talents when he expanded the instrumentation of one of the premier high-energy groups, the Mahavishnu Orchestra.

Ponty and McLaughlin were the featured cosoloists of the Mahavishnu orchestra, but the French violin-player was not satisfied. He wanted to make his own kind of music.

Leaving the group this year after touring and recording two albums with the band, Ponty said he had become tired of being "a soloist at the service of somebody else's music."

After departing from the Mahavishnu Orchestra, Ponty recorded the solo album "Upon the Wings of Music." Backed by the percussion of Ndugu, Herbie Hancock and Santana experience, and the guitars of Ray Parker Jr. and Dan Sawyer, Ponty's album was greeted with critical acclaim when released last May.

Tickets for the one-night only performance of the classically trained, jazz apprenticed, pop-rock musician and high energy artist are available for $3 at the door and for $2.50 in advance from Elderly Instruments and the MSU Union ticket office.

Free concerts alive in Frisco

SAN FRANCISCO AP — They came to Golden Gate Park by the tens of thousands, decked out in everything from swaddling clothes to aluminum foil.

It was a musical reincarnation of the flower-children spirit of the 1960s.

It was fun in the fog on a Sunday afternoon — and a counterpoint to a week full of news of Patty Hearst and the attempt on President Ford's life.

The Grateful Dead and Jefferson Starship filled the park with rock music, together in a free Golden Gate Park concert for the first time since the late 1960s.

Organizers of the concert, a coalition of religious, political and community groups staging a "Unity Fair," estimated the crowd at 40,000 to 50,000 persons.

They squeezed into Lundy Meadow and spilled onto roads and hillsides and climbed trees and sat picnic-style on the damp grass.

Soap bubbles, balloons and marijuana smoke floated above a sea of bobbing heads, and Frisbees sailed through the fog-wet air.

"If every day were like this, we wouldn't have anything to worry about," said Steve Sevier, 26, of nearby San Anselmo.

"Look at everyone here — it's really mellow," he said.

A young woman, a smiling sun painted in orange on her forehead, heard him, turned and smiled.

Behind the stage a pregnant woman was going into labor.

"If there's a doctor in the house, would he please come backstage?" someone announced from the stage. "There's a woman having a baby back there."

The crowd cheered. The woman in labor was taken to a hospital.

Clothing ranged from jeans to black evening dresses and high-heeled shoes. Babies dozed or watched wide-eyed.

A woman wandered through the crowd, wearing a headpiece of yellow and white aluminum foil and green cellophane.

'Godspell' successful on all counts

By DARRYL GRANT
State News Reviewer

"Godspell," currently being performed at the Okemos Barn Theatre, is a bright, swift and joyful sweep of a show. Its phenomenal beauty makes it a way to begin the 1975-76 season.

Directed with a flawless and steady hand by Ken Beachler, "Godspell" should make even a jaded atheist go out and chase a Bible, or at least up his heels in song. The production has an exciting pace and energy that exceeds the expectations of the tiny stage of Okemos Barn Theatre.

Especially, "Godspell" is a new version of the Gospel of St. Matthew, in which Christ converts people, gathers his disciples and experiences the agony of the crucifixion. "Godspell," however, uses song, dance, humor and joyous love to tell the story. Its seemingly irreverent, big-top setting proves to be an asset rather than a hindrance.

Tony Franklin portrays Jesus with a thoughtful and ebullient manner that is quite rewarding.

The disciples are portrayed by a harmoniously blended and extremely talented band of players. It would indeed be difficult to evaluate their specific talents. Among them are Stephen Adcock, Peggy Brennan, Joseph Fettes, Ken Hoogstra, George Jacobs, Natalie Martin, Judy Milestein, Jane Shipley and Sarah Jane Wright. Shipley, Wright and Adcock turned in striking performances.

"Godspell" is a visually pleasing show with wonderfully colorful costuming designed by Wright. The total visual impact is akin to flipping the pages of charmingly illustrated children's book.

The music is provided by a tight and bright combo directed by Robert Harris and led by Jo Reed. Add the beautifully strong voices of the cast and the result is first rate artistry, first rate artistry.

Every musical selection is rich, warm and memorable. All one has to do is to put stars by each and every number listed on the program.

The delightfully wacky and creative choreography is handled by the ever-talented Dorothy Jones.

Much praise must go to Beachler, whose disciplined yet marvelously permissive leadership keeps the whole show under control.

One could go on lavishing praise upon this production at length, but it is enough to say that "Godspell" was a special, warm delight that needed to be held and cherished like a beloved teddy bear.

"Godspell" will be performed Thursday through Sunday evenings at 8 p.m. and again from Oct. 9 through Oct. 12 at the Okemos Barn Theatre. Call 349-4340 for reservations. Tickets are $3 for students and $3.50 general admission.

Tight end Mike Cobb was named Spartan of the week.

Long lines for ticket exchange

By CAROL KLOSE
State News Sports Writer

It looked like Judgment Day. Hundreds of anxious faces waited patiently in long, serpentine lines for the person in the little booth at the front to cast their fate.

It was the first day of ticket exchange for MSU football tickets and the grid worshippers started arriving as early as midnight Sunday in an effort to secure the best possible view of the "Green Machine."

"We opened the gates last night so the students wouldn't have to wait out in the cold," said John Laetz, asst. to athletic director for game management. "This is the best crowd we've had."

The four lines wove around the Spartan Stadium pillars in the North Concourse and those with student numbers between 1 and 64799 inched slowly toward their goal. The crowd was friendly and subdued and conversation centered on how long they had waited and the prospect of getting a good seat.

"It's taken me a half hour to move about 20 feet," John Scurlock, 151 Bogue St., said. People scurried from line to line, as one appeared to move faster than the rest.

"I'm a loser when it comes to lines," said one woman who had been waiting an hour and had switched lines three times. "I even got into the wrong line at the grocery store."

The ticket exchange system this year is a switch from the method used in previous years. Previously, students received a packet of coupons and turned one in for a reserved seat, according to class standing, each week before the game.

This year students received a ticket to the North Carolina State game and one coupon in exchange for $12 and a peek at their fee receipt card. Then, beginning Monday, students could exchange the coupon for a reserved seat at the remaining three home games. The schedule for exchanging coupons goes according to student number.

"This is a one-shot deal," said Laetz. "This way students only have to stand in line once and don't have to miss classes every week."

Not all students appreciate the one-time wait in line, however.

"This system is inferior to last year's," Dale Brockway, 525 M.A.C. Ave., said. "It will please all the lazy asses who only want to wait in line once."

"This way saddles a person with the same damn seat for four games, based on one critical day when a person might have classes," he ranted.

As of Monday afternoon Laetz said seats in Section 11 were being distributed, though some seats remained in Section 10.

The schedule for exchanging coupons for the rest of the week, by student number:

• Tuesday: 647700-678199
• Wednesday: 678200-707999
• Thursday: 708000-732099
• Friday: any number

Tickets may be exchanged between 8:30 a.m. and 4 p.m. at the ticket booths in the North Concourse of the stadium. An I.D. must be presented along with each coupon. Students may exchange a maximum of 12 coupons.

Soccer team rolls, 9 - 1, Calvin next

Bouyed by its most explosive offensive performance since 1970, MSU's soccer team has set its sights on Wednesday's tilt against Calvin at Grand Rapids.

Friday's 9-1 conquest of Eastern Michigan was the largest margin of victory since Ball State fell victim to the Spartans, 13-1, five years ago.

MSU coach Ed Rutherford credited the successful season opener to good execution. "We had some very crisp passing and overall," he said, "we executed well."

Rutherford added that the contest provided the opportunity for the entire team to see game action as all 23 Spartan players registered at least 20 minutes playing time each.

three-goal performance. "That sure is a great way to start a career," Rutherford exclaimed.

Turning to the Wednesday matchup against Calvin, the Spartan coach noted, "They will definitely offer some stiff competition."

Senior cocaptain Mike Kenney is expected to return to action against Calvin, according to Rutherford. The three-year veteran had been withheld from scrimmages and the Eastern game while a cracked bone in his foot healed.

A total of seven Spartans tallied against Eastern, with Price's three goals and one assist setting the pace. Others close behind Price were Fraser Pahad, with two goals and one assist, and Zdravko Rom with one goal and two assists.

Women gain experience in opening season meet

By ANN WILLIAMSON
State News Sports Writer

The MSU women's cross-country team had its first taste of competition this season at the Springback International Roadrace in London, Ontario, last weekend, and for the first sampling, it didn't taste too bad.

The Spartans were up against some of the top cross-country runners in the world at the four and one-half mile race, and of the 82 women who managed to make it through the long jog, three Spartans placed in the top 20.

Senior Karen McKeachie, joining the team for the first time after a successful spring season last year on the track team, had an outstanding fourth-place finish with a time of 24 minutes, 45 seconds. Freshman Lil Warnes and sophomore Diane Culp also ranked high for the Spartans with times of 25 minutes, 34 seconds and 26 minutes, 38 seconds for 11th and 19th place finishes respectively.

"All the girls put in a real good effort at this race," coach Mark Pittman praised afterward. "It was an awfully long race for them to run, especially since the distance for our normal races is only three miles. There was a lot of pressure on them with so many good runners competing, but I'm pleased with how they performed."

Other Spartan finishers in the race were Barbara Bronson with a time of 28 minutes, 7 seconds for 40th place, Erica d'Elia, 28 minutes, 13 seconds for 42nd place; Sue Koebnick, 28 minutes, 15 seconds for 43rd place; Pat Williams, 28 minutes, 57 seconds for 48th place; Debra Pozega, 30 minutes, 9 seconds for 57th place; Ann Dyer, 31 minutes, 34 seconds for 64th place and Jan Pielemeier, 32 minutes, 5 seconds for 68th place.

Medalist winner in the competition was Kathy Schilly, representing a track club from Syracuse, N.Y., with a time of 23 minutes, 53 seconds.

MSU discontinues check cashing service

By SUE WILLOUGHBY
State News Staff Writer
Students from out of state will soon be out of luck when trying to cash their checks at the Administration Building. Starting Monday the cashier's office in the Administration Building will no longer cash personal checks for students-a service the University has provided for the convenience of out-of-state students for years. Controller Lowell Levi blamed the cutback on this year's austere budget and necessary cutbacks. "As we examined all the services we provide here, we decided the check cashing service was the one we could cut with the least amount of inconvenience," Levi said. "By just discontinuing the check cashing I was able to cut my staff by two and a half."

The cashier's office will continue to accept checks as payment for accounts, tuition and room and board, however. The change will mean more than an inconvenience for students who don't have a local bank account. It means added expense. Local banks will cash out-of-town and out-of-state checks that are under $50, but only for a service charge ranging from 25 to 50 cents. Levi said he was aware of the problems students would have trying to cash an out-of-state check, but the budget cuts had to be made somewhere.

"I think the best route would be for people to establish an account with a local bank and then cash their checks there," he said. Two local banks, First National of East Lansing and East Lansing State Bank, are obviously pleased with the University's decision.

Gary Sullivan, First National representative, said that his bank has been encouraging MSU to discontinue the service for some time. "I can understand MSU's position with their budget, but I certainly hope that this will mean more accounts for us," he said. First National will cash personal checks under $50 from the student's family for a 50 cent fee.

East Lansing State Bank representative Marvin Rank said that students have been opening a lot of new accounts, but he did not know if the administration's new policy was the reason. "I understand they (MSU) have been having trouble with collections on checks and a tight budget, but I really can't say whether our number of accounts has increased."

East Lansing State will cash any personal check up to $50 for 25 cents. A third alternative for cashing personal checks would be to obtain a check-cashing card from a local grocery or discount store. At Meijer's Thrifty Market one such store, an application form is filled out, and usually approved within three weeks. With the card, students can cash a check for up to $50 dollars free. Either way, it adds up to a little more trouble for you money.

THEATER AIMED AT CHICANO COMMUNITY

Area TV stations to air bilingual play

By PAUL J. PARKER
State News Staff Writer
No hay ningún negocio como el negocio del teatro.

There's no business like show business — and Fernando Gomez, asst. professor of racial and ethnic studies, has found Chicano theater a successful medium for reaching the Lansing-area Chicano community.

Nilda Cazares and Christina Anaya were members of Gomez's class in Chicano dramatic expression, last spring when they decided to write a puppet play for children in bilingual classrooms. The play will be broadcast in October on WKAR-TV and WJIM-TV.

"We had never heard of a puppet show in both Spanish and English," they said. "If you're working with kids, then the best thing to do is put yourself in their position."

After reading through between 400 and 500 folktales of the Southwest, they settled on "El Ratoncito Saltante," or "The Jumping Mouse." The story about this courageous little mouse who is a friend to all animals, was adapted from a book of American Indian tales by Hyemeythost Storm.

The two students built and designed both the puppets and their portable set. Cazares and Anaya did all of the voices and Gomez's wife, Sylvia, a graduate student in sociology, played guitar in the background. Fernando produced and directed the puppet play.

Both Anaya and Cazares received degrees in bilingual education in June. Anaya is now working at a day-care center at Notre Dame University and Cazares is involved in theater in San Bernardino, Calif. But the show goes on in their absence.

After their presentations of the children's drama in local day care centers, East Lansing schools, Christo Rey community center and the Chicano Theatre Festival in San Antonio, Texas the play will now be aired on "Telerevistas," a Chicano newsmagazine program produced by WKAR-TV.

"It's important to use Chicano theater and other minority theater as well as white ethnic theater to help bring ethnicity to our kids," Gomez said. He said that students often helped each other out with words that were not familiar to their culture. A Chicano youngster might ask an "Anglo" what a word meant or an "Anglo" might ask a Chicano classmate for help. "If you say something in English and have the opportunity to repeat it in Spanish, then you should do it," said Cazares, giving advice to others who might like to venture into bilingual theater.

Gomez explained that the history of Chicano theater is an old one. "Primarily, the Spanish used it as a means of educating and superimposing their culture on the Indians," he said. "It's hundreds of years old."

Host of "Telerevistas," Armando Ojeda, said that he hopes to air "El Ratoncito Saltante" on Oct. 16, but added that it may be shown this Thursday. Ojeda cautioned, however, that his show cannot be used as a guide to improve fluency for Spanish students.

"The myth is that Chicanos speak Spanish," he said. "What it is a mixture of Spanish and English."

"Telerevistas" can be seen on WKAR-TV, Channel 23, at 7 p.m. Thursdays, 2:30 p.m. Fridays and 1:30 p.m. Saturdays. The show is also telecast as public service programming by WJIM-TV, Channel 6, at 11:15 p.m. Sundays.

Puppets make kids smile. Christina Anaya and Nilda Cazares show off two of the puppets they use in "El Ratoncito Saltante," a Chicano children's play. Both women graduated with degrees in bilingual education. The play will be aired on WKAR-TV and WJIM-TV in October.

Article differs with Hearst defense

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — While attorneys described Patty Hearst as still "spaced out," fearful and deteriorating mentally, a magazine article Monday pictured her as an eager revolutionary who refused an offer to go home.

Hearst's attorneys, who met with reporters just after release of the story in Rolling Stone, immediately sought to cast doubt on the published tale of the heiress' cross-country odyssey with sports activist Jack Scott.

Attorney Terence Hallinan declined to comment directly on most points in the article, but he mentioned it when asked about a taped jailhouse conversation in which Hearst described herself as a radical feminist.

"The Patty Hearst that is in jail in Redwood City right now is not the same person who made those tapes and is not even the same person that Jack Scott, or whoever was in that Rolling Stone article, met with," Hallinan said.

Hallinan said Hearst's mental condition is deteriorating rapidly in jail and that psychiatrists had expressed "some concern" that she might try to commit suicide. He called for her immediate transfer from her San Mateo County Jail cell to a hospital.

The Rolling Stone article, which will not appear on stands until later, quotes directly from alleged conversations among Hearst, Scott and fellow fugitives William and Emily Harris. It said it was Hearst who asked to join the terrorist Symbionese Liberation Army four weeks after her Feb. 4, 1974, kidnapping.

It described a frightened and "uptight" Hearst fleeing cross-country in a car driven by Scott after six SLA members died in the May 17, 1974 shootout with Los Angeles police.

Scott, the article said, offered to drive Hearst home or anywhere she wanted to go. It quoted her as refusing with the comment, "I want to go where my friends are going."

Monday's multiple developments in the Hearst case also included release of a list of items taken from the hideouts where Hearst and the Harrises were finally trapped. The list showed the fugitives had amassed weapons, disguises and false identification.

The Harris apartment also contained large amounts of bombing ingredients, including pipes, clocks and some five pounds of gunpowder.

The Harrises, meanwhile, appeared in a Los Angeles court and were refused permission to participate in a secret grand jury hearing probing the SLA.

Details in the Rolling Stone article contradicted some points in a sworn affidavit filed by Hearst through her attorneys last week.

The article said that after her kidnapping, the newspaper heiress was locked in a closet for four weeks. Her affidavit says she was kept in a closet for nine weeks.

In the affidavit, in support of her efforts to win her freedom on bail, Hearst swore she was forced to join the SLA through physical and mental torture. The article said most SLA members opposed her crossover to their ranks. She and SLA member Donald "Cinque" DeFreeze convinced the others to accept her, the article said.

Rolling Stone Associate Editor Howard Kohn and reporter David Weir said their detailed information came from unidentified sources who "talked to Patty Hearst; they were there; they helped her."

In 1973, Kohn was fired by the Detroit Free Press after he admitted that a story about his own kidnapping by drug dealers was false.

Scott, who was being investigated for hiding Hearst in a Pennsylvania farmhouse, was not available for comment.

The magazine article does not deal with specifics of the bank robbery with which Hearst is charged. Its narration begins with the hours following the Los Angeles shootout.

After listening to radio accounts of the shootout, Harris bought a used car in which the three frightened fugitives fled to San Francisco, the article said. Then, according to the account, they spent two weeks in San Francisco flophouses with Emily and Patty disguised as dirty-faced old women.

The desperate trio, lacking money and support, sent Emily out to a public SLA support rally in Berkeley to find sponsors, the article said. It was there, it added, that Emily contacted Kathy Soliah, a speaker at the rally who said she considered herself an SLA soldier.

Soliah, who reported gone underground, gave shelter, Rolling Stone said soon a friend came to talk. "I think I found someone who might help you. His name is Jack Scott and he will write a book about the SLA," she said.

Authorities say they questioned Soliah and her brother Josephine in the Hearst case.

Their brother, Steven, a year-old housepainter who was harboring her and being an accessory after the fact in the bank robbery, pleaded innocent Monday and remained in jail in the $75,000 bail.

Utility companies claim more generators needed

By JOANNA FIRESTONE

LANSING (UPI) — Detroit Edison Co. and consumers Power Co. say they must build new generators to avoid power shortages, but Atty. Gen. Frank J. Kelley claims rate hikes needed to finance them would drive business out of Michigan.

"We must build as much new generating and transmission capacity in the next 13 years as we have in the past 72 years," Edison President John R. Hamann said Monday in testimony before the Governor's Advisory Commission on Electric Power Alternatives.

The special commission will recommend to Gov. Milliken what courses state government can take to avoid shortages and help keep electricity prices in line.

While the present depressed economy has resulted in extra electricity, Hamann said, utilities should be ready to meet increases demand when the economy turns around.

Hamann and Consumers Power Vice President Russell C. Youngdahl said that in order to attract the capital needed to build new plants, profits must be raised by increasing rates.

The two utilities currently have $295 million in rate hikes pending before the state Public Service Commission (PSC), which determines power rates.

Together, they generate 90 percent of all electricity used in Michigan.

Both have canceled construction plans until their financial situations are improved.

Kelley said the construction programs were based on "unreasonable and excessive rates of growth in electric consumption and demands."

"For all practical purposes, the only electric companies with rates higher than Detroit Edison or Consumers Power Company are a few eastern seaboard utilities which generate electricity primarily with oil," Kelley said.

"I believe that these high electric rates in Michigan are having a significant adverse impact upon the economy of this state."

High electric rates, he said, are discouraging companies from locating or expanding in Michigan.

Kelley said Edison currently generate 40 per cent of electricity than is needed. Excess reserve costs Edison customers an estimated million a year to maintain.

He said the PSC has control over rate making cause it has to rely on state and forecasts provided by utilities themselves in determining electricity rates.

Youngdahl said failure to resume building plants would be expensive and risky.

Each year of delay in building the company's proposed land nuclear generating plant, he said, will hike the utility price tag by $100 million.

Operating with reserves under 18 per cent would greatly increase the chance of power failures.

Pontiff names Spanish saint

VATICAN CITY (AP)

Pope Paul VI has elevated Juan Macias, a Spanish-born friar, to sainthood in the Roman Catholic Church and used the occasion to criticize the Spanish government's execution of five young terrorists.

The papal mass and canonization ceremonies in St. Peter's Square were boycotted by the Spanish government, which called its Vatican ambassador home for consultation.

The pontiff, who had made three separate pleas for clemency, said "Joy would have been fuller had the events everybody knows not taken place."

Macias, son of an impoverished Spanish shepherd, served as doorman of a Dominican monastery. He died 330 years ago in Peru, but attained sainthood through a miracle which took place in 1949 and was accepted by the church last year.

Damaged crop gone in 1 hour

WAYLAND, Mass. (AP)

Farmer Martin Benjamin opened a three-acre field of butter-nut squash to the public after frost spoiled his crop. The vegetables were edible but not marketable, Benjamin said.

Benjamin made his offer in a daily newspaper. On harvesting day more than 3,000 persons showed up; they picked the field clean in about one hour.

Benjamin said most of the pickers were well behaved, but they left his field a mass of mud. He said, "I don't know if I'd do it again."
