Smith temporarily replaced by Shingleton

By PEGGY GOSSETT

State News Staff Writer

Jack Shingleton, director of MSU Placement Services, took the position of acting athletic director Wednesday at the heels of Burt Smith, admitting that the MSU athletic department is in obvious trouble. Anyone on this campus who does not think the athletic department isn't in trouble is blind," Shingleton said Wednesday at a press conference. "But I certainly don't want to expound on what the troubles are at this point."

Shingleton took the temporary office Wednesday immediately following the 10:30 a.m. announcement by MSU executive vice president Jack Breslin naming him acting director and confirming that Burt Smith was relieved of his duties. Smith was athletic director for three and a half years.

The announcement apparently was forced by a Detroit radio station (WJR) news leak at 6:40 p.m. Tuesday when Bob Reynolds, WJR sports director and a personal friend of Smith's, reported Smith's removal from office over the air.

Shingleton will maintain both the placement service and athletic directorships for an indefinite period of time while the University seeks a replacement for Smith. Shingleton, who was notified of his new position late Tuesday, said University officials told him he would act as athletic director at least until January and possibly a few months more.

Shingleton said that as far as he knew he was not scheduled to attend the NCAA hearings on Oct. 13, when President Wharton and a host of coaches and lawyers will present MSU's answers to NCAA allegations.

Previous to his release from the athletic department, Smith was slated to attend the NCAA hearings in Denver. Shingleton did not know if Smith was still scheduled to attend.

Though Shingleton was considered for the permanent position in May, 1972 along with Smith and five other candidates, he said he would not accept the position of athletic director on a permanent basis.

"Absolutely, irrevocably no. I am not a candidate for the permanent job," the 53-year-old tennis pro said.

He said he would continue all policies and procedures in the athletic department begun under Smith. He conferred early Wednesday with MSU's two assistant athletic directors, Clarence Underwood and William Beardsley, to confirm those policies.

Breslin said Underwood and Beardsley were not appointed as acting athletic director's position because they were likely candidates for the permanent job.

"Both Dr. Wharton and myself thought it wise to choose an acting director who is not being considered for the permanent job," Breslin said.

Underwood would not comment on his being considered for the post.

Beardsley said he would certainly consider the position, however.

"It's not a burning ambition, but like anyone I aspire to the next rung on the ladder," he said.

However, Breslin said candidates from outside as well as inside the University structure would be considered for the permanent job.

Shingleton said the University would have no trouble filling the vacant post.

"This can be a top notch athletic position in the country," he said with a clenched fist, "and there will be many qualified candidates applying for the position. Mark my words."

"It is unfortunate that the reputation of MSU's athletic department has jeopardized the reputation of the University at large," Shingleton said, "but that can be corrected."

He said, however, that he thought Smith did all he could possibly do in his position.

Whether or not Smith's removal from office was due to his incompetency and inability to cope with its pressures was a question Shingleton would not answer.

"You'll have to ask Mr. Breslin about that," he said.

Specifically, Shingleton explained the reason he did not want the job permanently was because the amount of time the job required would be too great on a permanent basis.

"I'm not the type that likes to be on the road, to be gone weekend after weekend," he said. "That's not my cup of tea."

He was forced to cancel a fishing trip with State Dept. of Natural Resources head Howard Tanner in order to accept the temporary athletic director's position, for example.

"I'm interested in sports as an active interest," Shingleton said with a grin. "I'm not interested to work permanently with athletics on a professional basis."

He said the reason he accepted the job temporarily was because "it's such a challenge" and because he "enjoys solving administrative problems of this nature."

With an extensive background in administrative policies as well as problems, Shingleton says he will easily fit into the post.

He joined the MSU staff in 1949 as an assistant director of personnel and served in that post until 1958, when he was named assistant director of placement services. In 1965 he was appointed director of that bureau, which serves students each year in securing jobs while in school and after graduation.

Breslin verifies report on Smith reassignment

By PEGGY GOSSETT

State News Staff Writer

The walls of Jenison Fieldhouse seemed to be singing "Bye-bye Burt" when the 58-year-old ex-MSU athletic director packed his belongings Wednesday and headed for a new position and a new office in the Administration Building.

Rumors that Burt Smith was removed from his position as athletic director were confirmed Wednesday at 10:30 a.m. by MSU executive vice president Jack Breslin.

A media leak Tuesday at 6:40 p.m. by WJR radio station forced Breslin to make a premature announcement concerning Smith's position.

Breslin said Smith had been asked to take a reassignment to another position with duties outside of athletics in the best interests of MSU's athletic department.

Smith is a tenured faculty member and therefore cannot be removed from a position without guarantee of another position at MSU.

Contrary to the radio report Tuesday evening by WJR, no position entitled "vice-president of academics in charge of athletics" was ever created for Smith.

Smith's new assignment has not been determined yet, Breslin said.

"We're going to put together a job designed precisely for Burt," Breslin explained Wednesday.

Breslin denied Smith's removal had anything to do with the current NCAA investigations of MSU's football recruiting. (continued on page 16)

Liquor Control Commission agents postpone Alle-Eye capacity figures

By RALPH FRAMMOLINO

State News Staff Writer

Michigan Liquor Control Commission (MLCC) agents gave up in a state of confusion Wednesday when they tried to determine a capacity limit for the Alle-Ey bar.

The agents who were sent to the bar to see if the Alle-Ey was complying with a Sept. 4 order from the MLCC, to post capacity limits, computed a 560 patron limit — different than figures determined by both the city and the bar management. The agents arrived at their total using the same instructions that the bar management was told to follow in the order.

Norm Robinson, manager of the Alle-Ey, confirmed that the total arrived at by the MLCC was 560. He said that by Alle-Ey computations the capacity should be 693.

The city of East Lansing, in approving a dance hall license for the bar this summer, tacked on a 422 patron limit in the bar.

Final disposition on which total is correct is expected soon after MLCC commissioner Thomas VanTiem, the commissioner who issued the order, arrives in the Lansing offices today. Agents decided to wait for VanTiem's arrival after they discovered the conflicting limits.

Robinson said that, as before, the bar will continue to post two capacity limit signs, one with the 422 figure and the other stating that the capacity limit is 693. He said that the signs will remain until the city and the MLCC decide just what is to be done.

East Lansing Fire Chief Arthur Patriarche said the MLCC officials were to meet with him to work out the difficulties.

But a spokesman for the MLCC said that the meeting with Patriarche will be put off until VanTiem clears up the dispute about his ruling. Patriarche said that he used the Michigan fire codes to arrive at the 422 figure. VanTiem also said that he used the fire code as a basis for his regulations on determining the capacity limit.

The fire code calls for dividing the square footage of a building by either 15 or six, depending on the usage of the room, to arrive at the limit.

"There's a discrepancy on the measurements," said Roger Rosendale, MLCC director of licensing and enforcement. "It's (determining the capacity limit) been so clouded up that we have to wait for our commissioner."

Rosendale also said that the city was probably more restrictive in arriving at the capacity limit than the MLCC.

Robinson said that the MLCC agents did not take the square footage of the dance floor and the restroom into account when they figured the capacity, but the bar did when they made their computations. Rosendale said, however, that the bar included two walk-in coolers, an elevator and an air conditioner room in their computations also.

The Alle-Ey was ordered by the MLCC to post a "conspicuous" capacity limit sign and to comply to the order by Sept. 27. The order resulted from a hearing on an infraction of MLCC regulations when patrons of the bar were found drinking beer on the floor Jan. 20.

VanTiem said his ruling that the Alle-Ey post a capacity limit is a new approach to MLCC rules which state that people consuming alcohol must be at a bar or seated.

Calling the existing rule "ridiculous," VanTiem said even if a person was to step away from a bar with a drink in his or her hand, he or she would be in violation. He said that enforcing capacity limits is the only thing they can really do.

"The main purpose of this is so that you don't have a Coconut Grove situation where there's a fire and everyone gets killed," VanTiem said.

TIGHT SECURITY YIELDS 2 ARRESTS

Ford's Chicago visit calm

SKOKIE, Ill. (AP) — Two persons were arrested during President Ford's two-day visit to the Chicago area as glove-tight security was employed to thwart any serious threat to his safety.

Authorities said neither one intended to harm the President.

Thomas Weber, 23, of Skokie was charged with aggravated assault Wednesday after he grappled with police outside the hotel where President Ford was staying.

Carmen Pulido, 37, of Chicago was arrested Tuesday night for carrying a loaded, .25-caliber pistol outside of the Conrad Hilton Hotel in Chicago shortly before Ford arrived at a Republican fund-raising dinner.

More than 1,000 policemen and Secret Service agents surrounded the hotels during Ford's first visit outside of Washington since an assassination attempt Sept. 22 in San Francisco. Seventeen days earlier "Squeaky" Fromme was arrested in Sacramento, Calif., for trying to kill the President.

Officials said another man was taken into custody when he was acting strangely, but was later released. No further details were given on that incident.

Wednesday morning in Skokie, Illinois, Ford urged 33 small-town and suburban mayors to lobby Congress for extension of federal revenue sharing. He warned that it would be "catastrophic" to end a program that has given $20 billion to 39,000 states and localities.

Ford and the mayors also discussed New York City's financial problems, and the President restated his view that the federal government should not get involved in bailing out the troubled city.

Ford left Chicago at noon Wednesday and traveled to Omaha to attend a conference on domestic affairs after which he was scheduled to return to Washington.

The President himself curtailed his zest for hand shaking, limiting his face-to-face contacts to people who had already passed through security cordons.

Meanwhile, FBI officials were investigating a reported assassination threat against Ford and Japanese Emperor Hirohito allegedly involving three men traveling from Montreal to the United States, an FBI spokesman said Wednesday.

"We have unsubstantiated information and at the present time, we are checking out its validity," the spokesman said.

"The information came from another agency," he added. He confirmed that he was referring to another government agency but would not identify it and would not say whether it was a federal or a local agency.

Hirohito is visiting Williamsburg, Va., and is scheduled to meet with Ford in Washington today.

And in other action, Ford announced his veto of a bill that would have boosted tobacco price supports and eventually could have raised the price of a pack of cigarettes by a penny.

Ford returned the legislation to the House, where it originated, without his signature.

He said the legislation would add to federal spending and make American tobacco less competitive in the world market.

House kills 8.66% raise for government employees

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House on Wednesday killed an 8.66 per cent pay raise for members of congress, federal employees, and others, thus upholding the 5 per cent increase recommended by President Ford.

The raise, which went into effect immediately, goes to senators and representatives, federal judges, the vice president, Cabinet members, top government officials, federal white collar workers and military personnel.

The cost of the 5 per cent raise is estimated at $2.3 billion, compared with the $3.9 billion cost of the larger increase.

Ford had said the higher raise was inflationary.

The House voted 278 to 123 to kill a resolution that would have disapproved

Ford's 5 per cent recommendation. If the House had approved that resolution, the 8.66 per cent raise would have gone into effect automatically because it was recommended under a 1970 federal pay law.

Members of Congress made $42,500 a year before the raise; federal judges $36,000 to $42,500; associate justices of the Supreme court and Cabinet members $60,000; the chief justice and the vice president $62,500.

Members of congress, judges and the highest ranks of civil service as well as officials through the Cabinet and the vice president, have not had a raise since 1969.

Lower ranking employees have been receiving annual increases under a law designed to make their pay comparable to that of private industry.

Ford hero suing news media

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Oliver Sipple, the ex-Marine credited with possibly saving President Ford's life during an attempted assassination attempt here on Sept. 22 has filed suit against the news media for reporting that he was homosexual.

Sipple's lawsuit, filed in San Francisco Superior Court on Tuesday, seeks $15 million in damages. He said news reports of his sexual orientation constituted an invasion of privacy.

The suit named seven newspapers and their parent companies as well as 50 unnamed "Doe's," identified only as publishers of a newspaper, magazine or news service.

Faster first-class mail planned

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service announced Wednesday that its plan to upgrade first-class letter mail service to a level equal to or better than airmail will go into effect Oct. 11.

The plan originally was scheduled to go into effect Aug. 1 but was delayed indefinitely in July because the Postal Service did not know what the new rates for first-class and airmail would be.

That roadblock was removed on Sept. 19 when the Postal Service filed for higher rates. Those new rates, which will go into effect after Christmas, call for increasing the cost of first-class postage stamps from the current 10 cents to 13 cents.

The new plan involves changes in operating and dispatch procedures that will result in 95 per cent of all first-class mail being programmed for next day or second-day delivery, the Postal Service says.

Crime epidemic still spreading

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's crime rate still is going up but it may not be rising quite as fast as it has for nearly two years, according to new FBI statistics.

The statistics, issued Tuesday, showed that serious crime in the United States increased 8 per cent in the second quarter of 1975 compared with the same period a year ago. But an 18 per cent surge in the first three months of the year pushed the six-month increase to 13 per cent higher than the rate for the first half of 1974.

It's far too soon to say whether the slower rate of increase for April, May and June represents the beginnings of a downward trend.

But the 8 per cent figure was the first time in 21 months that the increase has slowed to a level below 10 per cent.

Nixon to ignore '76 campaign

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Former President Richard M. Nixon will not be involved in the Republican party's selection of a presidential candidate in 1976, a former aide says. Harry S. Dent, who worked for Nixon from 1968 until 1972, said the former president informed him of his plans last week.

UN doors blocked for Vietnam

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The United States has vetoed UN membership for South and North Vietnam again because of the continued exclusion of South Korea from the world organization.

U.S. officials said the Security Council's failure to give equal treatment to all three membership applicants was the sole reason for the American vetoes Tuesday.

The United States vetoed the two Vietnams on Aug. 11 for the same reason and said it would keep on using the veto until South Korea was admitted.

The vote in the council was 14-1 in favor of the two Vietnams.

Venezuela proposes oil fund

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — President Carlos Andres Perez has urged 12 other members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) to join Venezuela in setting up a fund of $1.5 billion to $2 billion to ease the effect of OPEC's new 10 per cent price increase on its customers in the Third World.

Venezuela's production of approximately 2.4 million barrels a day is the cartel's third largest.

Perez proposed that the fund make outright grants instead of loans and that OPEC members which export less than 500,000 barrels of oil a day would not have to contribute.

The Venezuelan president's cable contained no further details of the plan.

Border dispute finally settled

(AP) — Italy and Yugoslavia announced Wednesday they have settled their 30-year-old border dispute involving the port city of Trieste and areas along the Adriatic coast.

Under the agreement, Italy gives up all claims to Adriatic coastal territory now under Yugoslav administration in exchange for Yugoslav recognition of Trieste as Italian.

The accord, announced in both the Italian and Yugoslav parliaments, makes official a 1954 agreement hammered out in London after bloody anti-Yugoslav demonstrations erupted in Trieste. That agreement had never been officially approved before and Italy had not given up its claim to territory on the Istrian peninsula.

CIA budget disclosure nixed

WASHINGTON (AP) — As the House rejected an effort to force public disclosure of the long-secret budget of the CIA, the chairman of its intelligence committee said Wednesday he had learned President Ford has agreed to give it more secret documents.

The House defeated an amendment to a $112 billion defense appropriation bill that would have barred the CIA from using any money in a $2 billion appropriation item marked "other procurement, Air Force," Rep. Robert N. Giamo, D-Conn., said the CIA budget was concealed in the item.

If the amendment had been approved, Giamo said, he would have offered an amendment appropriating CIA funds directly, thus disclosing the CIA budget.

The vote against the amendment barring the CIA from access to money in the "other procurement" item was 287-147.

Shortly after the House voted, Chairman Otis G. Pike, D-N.Y., of the intelligence committee told reporters a committee staff member had told him the President had lifted his cutoff of secret documents from the committee and that "the documents should flow."

"But I'll believe it when I see it," Pike said.

The committee staff member said he received the information in a telephone call from a White House aide.

Meanwhile, the committee released an official U.S. intelligence post mortem report disclosing that warnings of the 1974 Greek coup on Cyprus had been delivered consistently by the CIA, but that policymakers in Washington instead relied on a single new unnamed source who falsely predicted there would be no coup.

The committee accepted CIA Director William E. Colby's terms for turning over subpoenaed secret documents.

But Pike said he had no assurance that the committee would get any more secret information. He said the committee's proposed resolution for full House support of committee subpoenas should be kept

"as a lever."

The CIA turned over material to the committee Monday on the 1968 Vietnam Tet offensive, including more than two-dozen pages of secrets about intelligence warnings.

By a vote of 10-3, the committee accepted three conditions on the Tet documents.

It agreed not to release the information publicly or any testimony about the information without giving Colby a chance to object.

And it also agreed not to release information if President Ford certifies that its disclosure "would be detrimental to the national security."

Colby noted, however, that the committee would still have the right to go to court if it disagreed with the President's declaration.

The committee also accepted two principles included in a compromise proposal from Ford's lawyers that in effect had been rejected Monday.

It agreed with Colby's withholding 10 phrases from the documents that "would pinpoint the identity of individuals" and two phrases that would disclose information received from foreign governments under promise that it would not be disclosed.

The three no votes were cast by Reps. Robert N. Giamo, D-Conn., Les Aspin, D-Wis., and Ronald V. Dellums, D-Calif., who objected to setting a precedent for Congress.

Pike said Colby's delivery of information did not "in one iota" change Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's order to only senior officials can be on conflicting options considered in reaching major policy decisions. The committee was told last week of Kissinger's order.

But the committee's secret Republican, Rep. Robert McClory of Illinois, said he believed Kissinger's order was a reasonable effort to keep officials out of public debate over policy.

Congress stalling vote on U.S. Sinai advisors

WASHINGTON (AP) — There appears to be little prospect of final congressional action this week on proposals to place American technicians in the Sinai, despite President Ford's warning that a delay could be dangerous to the fragile Mideast peace.

Ford had requested congressional action by Friday on the provision of the Sinai accord negotiated between Egypt and Israel, warning that delays in U.S. participation in the agreement could stall Israeli withdrawals and "prevent a lessening of the risks of war."

Though the Senate Foreign Relations Committee accelerated its study of the accord and aimed for a Friday decision, it did not appear likely that the full House and Senate could take action by week's end.

Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., said, however, that full Senate action is possible by Monday under an accelerated schedule adopted Tuesday by the Senate committee.

The committee agreed to meet no later than Friday to vote on legislation to approve assignment of up to 200 American technicians to early warning electronic surveillance stations in the Sinai.

The American technicians were requested by both Israel and Egypt and were made a condition of implementation of the Sept. 4 Sinai accord.

The Administration is asking Congress to vote separately on the technician issue, deferring until later the consideration of secret documents pledging U.S. consideration of military and economic aid to Israel and efforts to negotiate a peace pact between Israel and Syria.

Some members of the Foreign Relations Committee are reluctant to vote for the stationing of American civilian monitors in the Sinai without full public disclosure of related U.S. assurances to Israel and Egypt.

By a 14-0 vote Tuesday, the committee adopted a Javits resolution requesting Ford to inform the committee of all secret agreements involved in the accord.

The committee arranged to meet with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger in closed session later this week to consider the information to be provided by the President to decide whether it should be made public and to hold a public hearing at which Kissinger is to be a witness.

The committee also adopted a resolution by Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., to continue the hearing "on an accelerated basis until completed."

Saudi's paying U.S. for training class

WASHINGTON (AP) — Saudi Arabia will pay for a major new six-year program to train about 1,300 of its technicians and pilots in the United States, the Air Force said Wednesday.

The program, due to begin late this month at Lackland Air Force Base, Tex., will cost the Saudis between $90 million and $100 million the Air Force said.

The new training program is one of the most extensive of its kind in a growing U.S. relationship with Arab and other Middle East arms customers.

The new program will bring an additional 100 Saudi officers and 1,200 enlisted men to the United States to spend about three years each in training. According to the Air Force, there are now 135 Saudi Arabian air force men in training in the United States.

They will learn English, basic science and mathematics along with technical training in some 35 different specialties.

Triples may find relief in Kellogg Center

By CASSANDRA SPRATLING
State News Staff Writer

Wouldn't you like moving out of that room which is practically too crowded to stand still in, much less move around in, into the plush comfort of the Kellogg center where a simple call to room service could relieve you of the munchies?

Well, that just may be possible, because at Tuesday's Associated Students of MSU (ASMSU) board meeting a bill was introduced to help break up triples by allowing over assigned residence hall students to move into Kellogg Center.

The bill request that "a committee of the ASMSU board meet with University officials to discuss the feasibility of housing students in Kellogg Center and to plan to put the plan into effect."

Though the bill seems a bit far fetched, the sponsor of it, Curtis Stranathan, ASMSU representative for the College of Arts and Letters and Justin Morrill college, said he is absolutely serious about it.

He said he got the idea from University of Michigan administrators who rented a hotel in Ann Arbor last spring for overassigned students.

George Fritz, manager of Kellogg Center, said the idea would be great if it would work but has doubts that it would.

"There are times this term and next term even, that Kellogg Center is already filled up for," he said. "It just wouldn't be practical to have students move in on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday and move out again on Thursday."

It costs $20.84 a day for two people to live in Kellogg Center, while it costs only $2.25 a day for students to live in a dorm. Neither estimate includes the costs of food.

Therefore, it would cost the University an additional $18.59 per day for every two students it moved into Kellogg.

Fritz said even if the rooms were available now it would probably still be impossible to move students in because Kellogg is constantly receiving calls for space.

"The building is filled 60 per cent of the time," he said.

The coordinator of Residence Hall Programs, Gary North, said his office will review anything anybody proposes but he thinks that Kellogg Center is already committed to various contracts.

"By the time the feasibility of that proposal is looked into the problem will have been resolved," he said.

Helene Nilan, 1213 Hubbard Hall, one of the estimated 1,200 unfortunate students tripled this term, said she thinks the idea is excellent.

"It would cut down on the number of triples and give the people who live in triples much more room," she said.

Nilan said, however, that she would not like to move to Kellogg Center because the room she is in now is the room she requested.

Another student, Kurt Sanderson, 435 E. McDonell hall, said that in spite of the tripling he does not want to move to Kellogg Center.

"I suppose that would be a pretty good move, but as of yet I don't think anybody in my room feels that crowded," he said.

MSU student wins hefty cash sum, leaves show startled, stunned

By JAMIE CONROY
State News Staff Writer

Little do you realize that the correct answer to a question like "What do you sit on in a living room other than a chair?" could net $200.

And that's just for starters.

After seven days on ABC's game show, "You Don't Say," MSU student Janine Priss, junior, B319 Bryan Hall, earned for herself the nice, even sum of $14,000.

Priss said that the first days after her phenomenal win, she just walked around the house stunned while her mother asked her if she was alright.

Not everybody has the chance to feel stunned after winning $14,000, though. Many apply, but few are chosen.

The contestants who appear on your TV set, laughing excitedly and exchanging witticisms with emcee Tom Kennedy, were not chosen just because they happened to be passing by the sound stage at the right moment. Careful interviewing by the producers determines who will rub shoulders with the celebrities who also appear on the show.

Priss had to fill out a lengthy application which called for her to list as many football players, politicians and actors names as she could think of because "You Don't Say" is a program about famous names. After about 10 days, the studio called her and she was on her way to unforeseen fortune.

"An announcer tested my voice to see how loud it was and we also had six practice sessions, so that when it came time for the actual filming, I wasn't that nervous," she said.

Because they film five complete shows in one evening, Priss had to lug four changes of clothes with her to the studios from her Los Angeles home. She said the producers do not like pastels; they encourage bright, solid colors. Kennedy seems to set the example. Priss said every 45 minutes he comes out in a sample of his flashy wardrobe which includes items like orange ties, green jackets and white shoes.

"Before the filming actually starts, you go backstage where there's a big mirror and the make-up man sits you down and puts color in your face," Priss said.

While the stars and contestants are being made-up, the show's producers wander around in jeans, the applause signs start flashing and the studio audience gets settled in their seats.

"I wasn't too aware of all the activity going on because I concentrated on the game," Priss said. "But the game area that you see on TV is really bright — gold and silver — and it's much smaller than it seems. You look out into darkness."

Out in that darkness, a man frantically gesticulates to the audience, trying to communicate enthusiasm. The producers encourage the audience to laugh if they think something is funny. People out in TV land like to see happiness, the producers say.

Viewers out there also like to see contestants win big money and if they see big money won on "You Don't Say," they will probably keep tuned to ABC. That's why the producers want contestants to win, Priss said.

"But a person can only win up to $20,000 and be on two game shows every five years. Otherwise you could make a career of this," Priss said.

Studio employees keep a close guard on the whereabouts of the contestants before the game starts so no one can secretly slip them answers, Priss said. And the only time they can talk to the celebrities, like Lee Majors, Larry Hovis and Mary Ann Mobley, is between commercials.

"I didn't have the nerve to go up to them. They had to seek me out. But what do you say to Lee Majors?" Priss said. "They were always friendly and sometimes joked with the audience."

Our of the $14,000, the Internal Revenue Service will probably take about $3,000. But Priss is not complaining. She will still have $11,000 that she's not sure what she'll do with.

"It's funny, but right now I'm borrowing money from my mom. But she trusts me to pay her back," Priss said. "I have credit now."

From averting suicide to giving info, Listening Ear Center helps area residents

By FRED NEWTON
State News Staff Writer

Janet is an MSU student with problems. She broke her leg last week, has three exams within the next two days and is afraid she might be pregnant. She is depressed.

Janet is fictional but for others she may be very real.

The Listening Ear, East Lansing's Crisis Intervention Center and the oldest existing center in the state, is geared toward helping area residents with their problems — whether it is as minor as needing some information about campus or as major as battling loneliness on a Saturday night.

Housewives, college and high school students are among the staff who have kept the "Ear," as they call it, continuously open since it was formed in July 1969.

"A lot of people need to talk out their problems," said Sue Pohl, a sophomore at East Lansing High School and the youngest staff member. "Many times they can solve their problems themselves after talking about them."

Pohl is one of 100 community volunteers who puts in a minimum of four hours a week working at the Ear, located above Campus Sports at 547 1/2 E. Grand River Ave.

In contrast to Pohl, Shirley Brown is a 46-year-old mother of two who works at the Ear when she's not a therapist at the Mason Community Mental Health Center or an abortion counselor in Lansing.

To Brown, the most gratifying reward is the end of a conversation when "someone says they really feel better and that I've really given them something to think about."

"None of us pretend to know the answers," she added. "But we at least try to refer them to someone who might."

The most common personal problems are loneliness and depression. Suicide, though infrequent, is a personal problem that also arises.

"I've gotten a couple of attempted suicide calls," said Jenny Downs, an East Lansing High School senior. "The first time I was really nervous especially when the person hung up. You never know what happens."

Most of Downs' calls, however, deal with people looking for information.

"One day I got 10 calls from people wanting to know where to get help for VD," she said. "It almost got to the point where I'd pick up the phone and automatically say the number for VD help before anyone said anything."

The staff is required to go through a comprehensive training program in empathy to acquire skills in listening and understanding problems people might have. The majority of volunteers, however, have social work and psychology training which prepares them for the job.

In 1973 the Ear recorded over 16,000 contacts with individuals of which 85 per cent were over the telephone.

Among the calls that volunteers have dealt with include problems with drugs and alcohol, incest, marriage and the law. Volunteers say that the peak time for loneliness calls are Friday and Saturday nights and holidays and that more people call about suicide in the spring.

A fall training program will begin within the next few weeks on the MSU campus for new volunteers. For more information about exact dates and times call the Ear at 337-1717, which is also the 24-hour open-line number.

SN refund

Students registered for 10 credits or more who do not wish to read the State News or use its services may receive a refund of the $1 subscription fee paid at registration by presenting their fee receipt card at 345 Student Services Bldg. through Oct. 3, from 8 to 12 a.m. and 1 to 5 p.m.

Ear' center empathizes

By IRA ELLIOT
State News Staff Writer

Empathy is, according to Webster, intellectual or emotional identification with another. It is also a skill, which the Listening Ear teaches in only a week.

The "Ear" considers empathy a prerequisite for staff members to deal with callers — often emotionally disturbed callers.

And MSU psychologists say the week long training program is effective in dealing with these problems.

Marsha Worby, associate director of the MSU psychology clinic, said "Ear" does a good job. She said that not all persons can learn how to be empathetic, but most can.

"The skills one can learn in empathy training can be useful in everyday life, in relating to family or friends," Worby said.

Albert Rabin, professor of psychology, agrees that in a "limited way" empathy can be taught. He said a close relationship with someone at an early age is necessary to learn how to empathize. This is often a child-parent relationship, Rabin said.

"Empathy is not from outside, it's from inside," said Arthur Seagull, associate professor of psychology. "A two-year-old is empathic, only we are taught by society not to discuss our feelings openly. Empathy training can reach forgotten skills. As a skill it can be taught," Seagull added.

Since the only training necessary to work the "Ear" is given in a one week training program, a volunteer's competence in dealing with callers is sometimes questioned.

Rabin said that the volunteers could probably not do much harm. "The Listening Ear offers no therapy but serves as a 'listening post,'" he points out. Those in need of more professional psychiatric care or counseling are referred elsewhere.

Those referred to Rabin were "reasonable referrals," he said, and had received "no erroneous kinds of information," from "Ear" workers.

Worby agreed, describing her referrals as "most professional."

Seagull said the "Ear" has a good training program with "conscientious" volunteers. However, he declined to comment on the actual success or failure of workers in dealing with callers.

MSU under consideration for cyclotron

By DENNIS O. BROWNE
State News Staff Writer

You can't teach an old dog new tricks, but MSU scientists may be teaching some very old elements some new stunts if a heavy-ion cyclotron project goes through here.

If MSU is chosen as the site for the new multi-million dollar National Science Foundation cyclotron, scientists here will be stirring up a batch of experiments that read like a Star Trek story.

Boldly researching where no scientists have researched before, MSU could become an international forerunner in nuclear physics, cooking up projects as diverse as creating new elements to checking out theories for new methods of producing economical energy.

A cyclotron, basically, is a device that scientists use to throw atoms of one element at atoms of other elements. Because the centers, or nuclei, of atoms are as small as you can get and still be much of anything, the only way scientists have to study them is to throw them against each other and watch how they bounce. Greatly simplified, this is the purpose of a cyclotron.

In the past, scientists have been limited to throwing only the lightest of elements around. Now with the development of heavy-ion cyclotrons scientists will be able to toss everything at everything, starting a whole new ball game in nuclear research.

MSU's Cyclotron Dept., under the direction of Henry G. Blosser, already has its foot inside the door for consideration as the cyclotron site. At this time, working under a $1,017,200 National Science Foundation grant, a prototype superconducting magnet to be used in the new cyclotron is being built here. It was agreed that the construction of the magnet must allow for mobility to another site. Hopes are, though, that the initial commitment to MSU will be followed through.

"We have no definite word on the final project," Blosser said. "But usually once you start something somewhere, it's easiest to finish it there."

Until the new, heavy-ion cyclotron is built, scientists will not be absolutely sure of what it will be capable of. Optimism is running high, though, that many beneficial discoveries will be made through its use.

Much of the credit for bringing the cyclotron project to MSU belongs to Blosser. A Ph.D. from Virginia, Blosser worked on cyclotron research for four years at Oak Ridge National Laboratory before coming to MSU. Two of those four years at Oak Ridge he was the leader of a research group.

"We have in H.G. Blosser one of the cleverest, most talented men in cyclotron design today," said John Cantlon, vice president of research and graduate studies at MSU. "He in a sense won a national competition for the grant with his expertise in the field."

Working with MSU's present cyclotron, Blosser has gotten results surpassing those achieved by anyone working with comparable equipment. He sees this as the focal point in his success in getting the grant for MSU.

"The name of the game is to convince them that you can best do the job to be done," Blosser said. "The only way you can convince them of what you can do is with what you've done. You have to be able to stand on your past record."

The cyclotron project has the potential to be very beneficial to MSU and the economy of the surrounding area.

One immediate benefit of the project would be elevate MSU's physics engineering programs to the status of a Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT).

Besides that, it would bring additional millions of dollars of payroll money home to roost at MSU. If the past is any indication, once the National Science Foundation gets a heavy-ion cyclotron built the foundation will continue to support the builder.

Twelve years ago MSU's present cyclotron laboratory was built with a $2,526,000 grant from the National Science Foundation. Since that time the foundation has provided over $8 million for the operation of the facility.

Besides the cardiac massage of pumping money into the local economy, the cyclotron project will probably draw new technological industries to the area where it is built.

"Any research builds a foundation of knowledge upon which technological industry is built," Cantlon said. Cantlon cited the example of the electronics industry springing up in the Boston area because of the research done at MIT. He hopes that by bringing the cyclotron project here this sort of process will begin to take place in the Midwest.

"In the past, technology has sprung up on the East and West coasts around research while the Midwest has excelled in agriculture," Cantlon said. "With the car industry faltering as a pivot point in the economy it is about time some new industrial diversification was brought to the Midwest."

Some of the discoveries the scientist hope to make with the new cyclotron could prove beneficial to society at large.

By producing heavier than uranium elements MSU scientists hope to get new elements with a wide array of useful characteristics, not to mention the countless number of new compounds to be found in the scientific kitchens once they start mixing the new stuff with all the old stuff.

"Take the case of man-made Californium 254," Blosser said. "Since it was discovered it has become an important material with uses from oil well research to medicine."

Californium 254 may sound like a West Coast highway to the layman, but it and the other new elements scientists hope to discover may do much to improve the human condition.

Henry G. Blosser, director of the MSU cyclotron, personally mans the controls of his atom tosser. If a National Science Foundation grant goes through here at MSU, Blosser may be at the helm of a nuclear research project that Dr. Strangelove would be proud to head up.

ASMSU shows yellow stripes

"The University may request ASMSU (Associated Students of MSU) to suspend the registration of a student organization if: a) The organization is found guilty of violating an ordinance or written policy or regulation of Michigan State University, or b) the organization is found guilty of failing to discharge its financial obligations to the University." — MSU Student Handbook, p. 59.

The University administration's decision to revoke the student organization status of the Student Worker's Union (SWU) is clearly in violation of all policies regarding student organization status.

The administration's argument that no labor union can be a student organization, supported by an irrelevant analogy to such faculty groups as Faculty Associates, has no support in written regulations.

But ASMSU's decision made Tuesday night, to allow SWU to be thrown out of their offices and be deprived of their University account (to which they were entitled as a student organization) pending judicial ruling, amounts to rank cowardice.

Only ASMSU has the authority to kick SWU out of its offices. The administration does not have the right, and the judiciary does not have the right.

If ASMSU were to decide to revoke SWU's student organization status, then SWU would have the right to appeal to the judiciary. Until then, however, there is nothing for the judiciary to decide.

ASMSU's buck-passing can have only one effect: to undermine the authority of student government over student affairs.

Until ASMSU shows some self-respect and stops allowing its authority to be pre-empted by other bodies, it cannot pretend to be a government in any sense of the word.

Stop the tuition sting

Students still reeling from a whopping $2.50 per credit tuition increase this term may swoon away altogether if the proposed $1 per credit contingency surcharge comes into effect this winter.

The proposed surcharge would offset further across-the-board cuts in state spending because of revenue shortfall. The cuts will require legislative approval.

To the University, the cuts mean a cruel decrease in a budget already brutalized by the twin monsters of slashed appropriations and soaring costs. The response of the board of trustees has been to cut program budgets and to increase tuition.

If ever there is a time for student action, now is the time.

ASMSU President Brian Raymond and the student board have begun to mobilize a campaign, in cooperation with other student governments in Michigan, to pressure the state legislature for more funds. The legislators must be made to realize that higher education cannot bear the brunt of Michigan's revenue woes — and that students, already plagued by an inadequate job market and increased fees, cannot be stung again.

Moreover, the committee established by ASMSU to study the University budget should get to work immediately. Perhaps a group of students will be less understanding than the administration is toward the expenses of our massive bureaucracy.

The ingredients for action are two: at the state level, we must work for funding adequate to meet the needs of higher education and at the University level, we must insure that funds are spent for education and not red tape.

'I DON'T THINK SHE'LL TRY ANYTHING — SHE SAYS SHE'S BEEN CLEARED BY THE SECRET SERVICE'

Women's league objects to cartoon

WASHINGTON (AP) — The League of Women Voters has protested an editorial cartoon in the Washington Star which it calls a slap in the face of women advocating the Equal Rights Amendment.

The drawing by cartoonist Pat Oliphant portrays a stout woman holding a gun — presumably across the street from the St. Francis Hotel in San Francisco, site of last week's assassination attempt against President Ford.

One police officer standing in front of her is saying to another: "I don't think she'll try anything—she says she's been cleared by the Secret Service."

What aroused the ire of the League of Women Voters was Oliphant's little bird, his trademark, saying: "Ireland has the ERA—we have the ERA."

A spokesman for the Star said the letter from the league's president, Ruth C. Clusen, had been received and would be published, but that the newspaper would have no comment.

"Oliphant's cartoon in the Wednesday edition of the Star is a slap in the face of women around the country seeking to assure the protection of individual rights through the ratification of the ERA," a letter said.

"In effect, Oliphant vaulted far beyond the bounds of satire into the area of sheer bad taste and ignorance. It's hard to believe that Oliphant believes that giving women equality under the law threatens this nation's security."

"His little bird just laid the type of egg that few concerned Americans hoping to achieve equality for all will soon forget."

Lament ticket oversell

I would like to express an opinion to whomever is responsible for the overselling of tickets to the MSU-OSU game in East Lansing on Sept. 13, 1975.

The idea of "general admission" tickets to fill in unoccupied seats might have been a good one, had one stipulation been placed on them — that first priority be given to reserved seat ticket holders.

My husband and I (both dues-paying alumni) attended that game. Our two tickets were part of a block of eight purchased with friends from Ohio (some of whom were also MSU alumni). My husband and I arrived at the game and took our seats. By the time the next two of our group arrived, their seats had been taken by "general admission" ticket holders. The remaining four people holding reserved seat tickets never even made it up the ramp into the stadium. They had driven in from Ohio for the game and were not allowed to claim their reserved seats.

The entire first quarter of the game was a pushing and shoving match between other reserved seat ticket holders (who found themselves "out" their seats) and "general admission" ticket holders.

To further complicate matters, the police in attendance, when called in for assistance, merely took the position "first come-first serve."

I believe, and I know many others who concur with this opinion, that MSU made a tremendous mistake in overselling the tickets to the OSU game. There were many who had driven in from out of state for this game and upon arrival at the stadium, discovered that their reserved seats were already occupied by "general admission" ticket holders, and further, that this unfortunate situation was sanctioned by the police and ushers in attendance. Can MSU afford to continue this practice of overselling tickets at the expense of alienating so many of its alumnae and other regular football fans?

I, for one, would like to see a public apology made by those at MSU who were responsible for this most unfortunate decision, to all those who were denied the reserved seats they paid for by the sanctioned presence of "general admission" ticket holders.

Hopefully, MSU will review this policy before the initiation of ticket sales for the 1976 football season.

Surprised by column

Dear Bruce Ray Walker,

Your article "Non-Sexist Staffer Makes Kind Offer" in Thursday's State News surprised me. Your friend's suggestion about women helping him launder and clean his residence hall room seemed to this student woman (as a veteran "housewife" of four years) to be rather naive. The idea of practical experience for housekeeping is great. However, let's allow young men to learn it, too. They will be more sophisticated and more attractive to young women.

At any rate, if young women help you,

Bruce Ray and your friend, with laundry and cleaning, that is cool and it would be more mature of you to volunteer your skills in return. For example, you could perform or teach the women helpers bike and auto repair, stereo maintenance, study skills and tutoring. This returned help would justify calling your relationship "symbiotic."

If the generous women help you, you can help them back.

Church's rogue elephant may exonerate Nixon

Mary McGraw

Richard Nixon has been invited to come and testify before the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence Activities. He could do worse for a re-entry forum.

Judging from the deferential treatment accorded to former CIA Director Richard Helms, who was profusely thanked for saying absolutely nothing, the former president could expect the "respect" he used to bomb small countries to get.

Nixon has something else going for him. Already the groundwork has been laid for a thesis that he was victim as well as author of the offenses a House Judiciary Committee deemed impeachable.

And this is because the chairman, Frank Church, coined a phrase a while back about the CIA, a catchphrase that has now caught him.

During the secret hearings on assassinations he called the CIA "a rogue elephant running out of control."

Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., took vehement exception to it, as he does to any harsh reflection on the agency. Church is now trying to vindicate himself and almost every time he does he vindicates Richard Nixon. He may be also smoothing the way for a vindication of John Kennedy.

The Huston Plan, that egregious collection of constitutional abuses, has been the unlikely vehicle of the Nixon rehabilitation. The approval of that plan, which was canceled five days later only because of the objection of J. Edgar Hoover, was cited in the second count of impeachment voted by the House Judiciary Committee as an "abuse of power."

But Tom Charles Huston, the spectral young man who gave his name to the plan, testified that some of the worst things about it had been in effect when Richard Nixon took office and that neither he nor Richard Nixon knew about burglaries and mail openings, though they both were obviously all for them and sanctioned them in their plan.

Church triumphantly trotted out his "rogue elephant" for further inspection.

"Not only the CIA but the FBI and other agencies failed to tell the President that certain operations for which they sought his approval had gone on for years before," he said, very pleased. "Though he revoked them, mail openings continued."

One reason Church is so sensitive about the wild animal of his invention is that he is anxious to avoid any taint of partisanship or excess in the inquiry, which will undoubtedly determine his political future. The hearings, which are televised, could lead on to presidential fortune. But it could be hard to launch a campaign on a report which laid the responsibility for murder plots at the door of the Democrats' dead idol.

Church did not tax Huston on his protests of Richard Nixon's ignorance about ongoing illegalities made legal by the plan. Incurably polite, Church accepted everything Huston said. A subsequent witness, James J. Angleton, a retired CIA official who was theoretically in charge of these activities, suggested dryly that Huston might know more than he told.

It is unlikely that Nixon on the stand would contradict Huston's testimony of innocence. In fact, he might seize the occasion to make a speech about civil liberties and the invasion of privacy.

Sen. Walter F. Mondale, D-Minn., who has forsaken presidential ambitions, put the Huston Plan and Nixon's part in it in a different light.

It has been designed to correct the failures of the FBI, which could not find the foreign funding and direction which Richard Nixon was sure were at the bottom of the antiwar movement. Its members, Mondale noted, were upper and middle-class "credit-card revolutionaries."

"The agencies were continually pressed," Mondale said, "to find evidence that was not there. The power of the agencies is the power of the president."

Richard Nixon would doubtless enjoy discoursing on the "revolutionary violence" he professed he had to stop at any cost. He might also welcome the new chance to appear as a dupe, a favorite Watergate posture.

He is not, however, the issue. Where the phrase "rogue elephant" counts is in the matter of assassinations, which will not be publicly aired. The question there is, "What did John Kennedy (or Robert, his brother) know and when did he know it?"

The CIA was "running out of control" on squirreling away poison and reading other people's mail. Or, rather, it was and it wasn't. It did these things against orders, but with encouragement perhaps never stated, but felt. The lips said no-no, but the eyes said yes-yes. At least that's what the mixed record says so far.

HOLD YOUR BREATH AND PRAY

Car inspection daytime nightmare

The nightmare of night-

You're driving down one of the area's major streets in that 1953 Studebaker your grandfather gave you to drive to school.

About a half mile down the road you see a State Police car inspection lane known for its surprise attacks on area vehicles.

Suddenly you remember the two hubcaps that were stolen last year, and the brake light that was shot out last week by the neighbor kid or the back window that was shattered last spring by an anonymous golf ball.

"My God!" you think to yourself. It's too late to slam the car in reverse and take a different route. The only thing to do is cross your fingers and hope not to be pulled over at random.

Ooops! A State Policeman signals you over. Too late to commit suicide.

A couple of hard-looking individuals you think you might have seen in a grade B movie entitled "Alabama Highway Patrol" ask you for your registration papers, among other things.

While you sit in the car they check such things as wiper blades, brake lights, tires and the exhaust system.

One of the inspectors says you're one of the lucky 340,000

Michigan motorists out of millions that will have their cars randomly inspected this year.

For once in your life you wished for bad luck.

The inspection is over in less than 10 minutes and fortunately you had only two minor violations which you must have fixed in a couple of weeks and reinspected.

If the violations were major, the inspector says, you might have received a ticket and been required to pay a fine.

"Thanks," you say to the officer as you drive off.

In the rear view mirror you see another car being pulled over. The front bumper is three inches from the ground and there is no front windshield.

"Things could have been worse," you think to yourself.

Bicentennial debates scheduled

By DENNIS O. BROWN
State News Staff Writer

Hear ye. Hear ye. MSU has joined the Bicentennial fervor by participating in a Bicentennial Youth Debates (BYD) program.

This program will offer an excellent opportunity for students with forensic backgrounds to put their skills to use in competing for over $39,000 in scholarship money.

The contest is open to any student under the age of 25 who has not yet received a bachelor's degree.

There will also be a division of competition for high school students.

MSU will be holding a school competition on Oct. 18. Winners of the school contest will go on to district, sectional and regional contests.

The official American Revolution Bicentennial Administration's sanctioned purpose of the BYD is to encourage students to examine American history and values through the vehicle of debate.

No doubt, students will also be encouraged to drive the vehicle of debate while striving to win scholarship awards, of $1,000, $500 and $250 on the sectional level and $6,000, $3,000 and $1,500 on the regional level, in each of three events.

The three events will be extemporaneous speaking, persuasive speaking and a Lincoln-Douglas debate, which is a one-on-one, no-holds-barred debate.

Winners of the regional competition will go to a noncompetitive national conference which will feature discussions between students and national leaders. Some of the national leaders present will be serving as members of the BYD National Advisory Council.

A list of the initial members of the council reads like a who's who in the American power structure. Though incomplete at this time, the council already does include: George Meany, president of the AFL-CIO; William F. Buckley Jr., editor of National Review; Barry Goldwater, U.S. senator; Walter Cronkite, CBS News; Dean Rusk, former secretary of state; and Francine Neff, treasurer of the United States.

The Bicentennial Youth Debates Program is a project of the Speech Communication Assn., the largest association of professional speech educators in the nation. Additional funding for the BYD was provided by a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities, a federal agency established by Congress to support research, education and publications in the humanities.

The American Revolution Bicentennial Administration considers the BYD to be one of their major bicentennial programs.

Topics, regulations and an introductory analysis are on two-hour reserve in the undergraduate library. Students wishing to compete should pick up and return registration materials at 216 S. Kedzie Hall by 5 p.m. Oct. 13.

Any questions about the contest should be directed to either the MSU school coordinator, Ben Bonk, 353-1564, or the district coordinator Dennis J. Lefebvre, 353-4678.

Discovery of oil deposits predicted by geology prof

By CAROLYN FESSLER
State News Staff Writer

MSU geology professor James Fisher has predicted the discovery of oil and natural gas formations in northern Calhoun and Kalamazoo counties.

A successful strike in the well drilling would mean further reduction in Michigan's heavy dependence on out-of-state oil and natural gas.

Private land owners whose properties are above the predicted well sites southwest of Lansing have already leased their land to oil companies for exploratory drilling purposes.

Fisher, through maps he has drawn of the rock layers in the earth's subsurface, has a rough idea of where to find the oil-bearing areas but he said that pinpointing the exact location to drill is another matter.

"Imagine New York City covered with 6,000 feet of sediment," he explained, "and then, without a street map, trying to locate the tip of the Empire State Building by poking a steel rod through the ground."

The analogy of a city full of tall buildings is appropriate because the new deposits, he said, will be trapped in steep-sided pinnacle reefs deposited about 400 million years ago.

A pinnacle is a spire of rock 300-400 feet high created by underwater organisms that build themselves up to the surface as the ocean floor sinks. The pinnacles lie in what Fisher calls a "narrow" 15-mile wide belt stretching across the southern and northern parts of Michigan's lower peninsula and extending into the waters of Lakes Huron and Michigan.

"They are narrow in that some parts of Texas have belts over 100 miles wide," he said.

Currently Michigan imports about 95 per cent of its crude oil and only produces about 10 per cent of the trillion cubic feet of natural gas it uses annually for farming and industry, Fisher said. These figures, he added, could change in the state's favor if the drilling should be successful.

"Natural gas is contained in these reefs and it's hopeful that we will soon be changing that 10 per cent figure to 20 per cent," Fisher said. "And any oil find at all will help a great deal to cut down on our oil importation load."

Fisher is organizing a petroleum geologists conference to be held at Kellogg Center of Continuing Education on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday. The potential importance of the reefs and the problems inherent in tapping these resources will be discussed by the geologists.

Canadian-made shoe.

Roots, all 10 styles of them, look like a new idea in shoes. The heel is gently recessed so you walk a little more naturally. This gradually helps strengthen the muscles in your lower legs. Your posture improves. Roots comfortable built-in arch support and rocker sole help shift your body weight with every footstep, so walking becomes less work.

Yet Roots may still remind you of shoes from a bygone age when craftsmanship was king. John Kowalewski and his sons see to that. The Kowalewskis are the core of Roots production. Their eyes help select our leathers. Their hands help shape them into Roots.

Personal involvement reaches into Roots shops, too - the only places our shoes are sold. Here you'll be fitted by people who know Roots inside and out. At Roots, you see, we do more than stand behind our shoes. We stand inside them, too.

Positions for students opens on council

By FRANCES BROWN
State News Staff Writer

Opportunities abound at MSU for students to participate in major academic decisions, but few students jump at the chance to become involved.

For the 1975-76 school year, dozens of undergraduate and graduate student positions are open on the Academic Council's student council and its various standing committees.

The Academic Council, the main governing body at MSU which participates in decisions on all major issues relating to educational policy, is composed of the elected Student Council, the Faculty Council, the deans of the colleges within the university, the directors of university programs, the president and the provost.

Students in each of the university's colleges elect one or two representatives to the Student Council. In addition, the Council of Graduate Students (COGS) elects six representatives and 10 at-large students have already been elected. Currently four colleges have not elected representatives and three COGS positions have not yet been filled.

Council vacancies
In the past, there have been vacancies on the Student Council for long stretches of time. By Jan. 13, 1975, two student council positions were still not filled. Some students resign partway through their year of office, resulting in vacancies. And a few times only one person has run for the Student Council position in some colleges.

"Students don't know what Student Council does," said Beatrice Lin, undergraduate representative to the Academic Council Steering Committee. "We have a very important position in the University government. We have formal lines of communication with administration — we should be able to present the students' perspective easier than other student groups."

Student representative
One student representative position is open to majors in the College of Communication Arts and Sciences. Nominating petitions for this position may be obtained in the Office of the Dean, 113 Auditorium, and in all the departmental offices. Completed petitions must be returned to 113 Auditorium by 5 p.m. Oct. 13. A student's name will appear on the college ballot if that student's petition is signed by 25 undergraduate students currently enrolled in the College of Communication Arts and Sciences. A college-wide election for the position will be held Oct. 20 and 21 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the Auditorium lobby.

In addition, one student representative position to the Student Council is open in the College of Arts and Letters, one in the College of Osteopathic Medicine and one in the College of Veterinary Medicine. Students in the class of '77 in the College of Veterinary Medicine will vote for a representative next week.

Students in the College of Arts and Letters who are interested in the position for that college can contact Bea Lin or the asst. dean's office for more information.

No information is presently available on the College of Osteopathic Medicine position. Donald Batkins, vice president for University affairs for COGS and graduate representative on the Academic Council Steering Committee, urged graduate students to contact the COGS office, 316 Student Services Bldg., to insure adequate student representation.

"Now more than ever graduate students need to get involved with the University academic governance as a tightening University budget threatens many areas affecting graduate students," Batkins said.

Standing committees
In addition to the college representative positions, numerous seats are open to students on the standing committees of the Academic Council.

Five undergraduate and two graduate positions are open on the University Committee on Curriculum, which reviews and approves or rejects all changes in undergraduate courses and degree requirements.

Two undergraduate and one graduate position are open on the University Committee on Academic Policy. This committee consults with the provost on the establishment, disbandment or merger of undergraduate and professional academic programs and advises the provost on policy pertaining to curriculum revision, methods of instruction, evaluation of instruction and advising and counseling for undergraduates. It also consults with the provost on policy pertaining to admissions, financial aid and the distribution and use of educational and research resources.

Academic Environment
Two undergraduate and one graduate student positions are open on the University Committee on Academic Environment which studies business office procedures and policies, University plans for public safety, buildings and lands, traffic and transportation facilities and other matters affecting the academic environment.

Two undergraduate and one graduate student positions are open on the University Committee on Faculty Tenure.

Five undergraduate and two graduate positions are open on the University Committee on Student Affairs. Three of the undergraduate positions are selected by ASMSU. This committee reviews policies relating to the academic rights and responsibilities of students.

One undergraduate seat may open on the University Committee on Academic Governance which reviews college bylaws and considers appeals of reviews of department bylaws. It also facilitates elections to the Academic Council, the Steering Committee and the standing committees.

Two positions for either undergraduate or graduate students are open on each of the Advisory-Consultative Committees: the University Committee on Honors Programs, the University Committee on International Projects and the University Committee on the Library.

Committee appointments
The Student Council is currently in the process of making appointments to these committees. Interested students must complete an application and submit it to the office of the secretary for academic governance, 10 Linton Hall, by 5 p.m. Monday. Interviews will be held Monday between 5:30 and 9 p.m. in the same office.

Two positions for either undergraduate or graduate students are open on each of the Advisory-Consultative Committees: the University Committee on Honors Programs, the University Committee on International Projects and the University Committee on the Library.

Reassignment shocks board have a better idea, but I will probably go along with the recommendation."

Rumors and speculation have run rampant since the announcement Tuesday night.

One report had quoted Bresnahan as admitting in a letter to the trustees that he made a mistake in his recommendation of Smith for the athletic director position in 1972. But both Martin and Robert Perrin, vice president for University and federal relations, have said that no such letter exists.

Perrin who was unaware of the shake-up himself Tuesday night, blamed the speculation on the fact that the change was made public sooner than the administration had anticipated.

"But as for the speculation that the switch was a direct result of NCAA investigation — why, that's nonsense. There's nothing to that rumor," he said.

Perrin also denied that a new office, to be called the vice president for athletic relations, would be formed as a result of Smith's reassignment.

Clarification

In a story on the front page of Tuesday's paper — "U.S. 27 to have addition" — it was incorrectly stated that the ad hoc committee that was considering the environmental impact statement for the project was a Dept. of Natural Resources (DNR) committee. The committee was actually a part of the Michigan Environmental Review Board (MERB).

Savoy Brown tradition continues

Tuesday night at the Silver Dollar Saloon, the members of the newest version of Savoy Brown proved that they are indeed quite worthy of the name they bear. For while some of the better known members of the band are long

And to convince the nearly sellout crowd of that fact, what better way could there be to start a Savoy Brown concert than with "Tell Mama"? As vocalist/keyboardsist Paul Raymond picked up a rhythm guitar, the audience—who no doubt were most familiar with that cut and the entire "Street Corner Talking" album—responded enthusiastically. Savoy Brown were in fine form for the rest of the night.

The last Savoy Brown crew, who were responsible for the most recent "Boogie Brothers," was one of the most interesting mixtures of British Blues Bands imaginable. The band included

In fact, one of the night's best members, "Hero To Zero," will be featured on the new album, and if that can serve as any indication, the new Savoy Town LP should be the band's best effort since the unequalled "Street Corner Talking."

'Beacon Hill' displays fine cast

The drama depicted on Beacon Hill" takes these developments one step fur-

The series is adapted from the phenomenally popular "Upstairs, Downstairs," which will begin its third season on CBS this winter. When CBS decided to add the series to their schedule, they decided to transfer the setting to Boston from the Edwardian London of "Upstairs, Downstairs," and the time to the 1920s. They also imported Beryl Vertue from England as executive producer and appointed Jacqueline Babbitt producer of the series.

Stephen Elliott dominates the onscreen cast as Stephen Lassiter, the head of the clan. He is a rough-edged, honey-tongued politician who escaped the bogs of Ireland, married money, consolidated a fortune and became political boss of the Boston Democratic machine. Any resemblance to Rose Kennedy's legendary father Honey Fitz, for whom John F. Kennedy was named, is not purely coincidental. A devoted family man, devout Catholic and unscrupulous manipulator, Lassiter embodies the bosses and Tammany politicians who wrested control of the cities from the Boston Brahmins and their equivalents in other cities. These rough men cleared the way for the immigrant population to participate in the new faces join women netters

By ANN WILLIAMSON
State News Sports Writer

This year's MSU women's tennis team could best be described as a squad with a lot of the new and very little of the old.

Five of the six starting singles players from last year's team are — Sue Selke, Diane Suterko, Diane D'Angelo, Allison Eggs and Becky Dickieson — leaving the Spartans with only one returnee from a year ago: seniors Pam Zwer and Kathy Jo Kruger and sophomore Marilyn Smenzwik.

But the Spartans were fortunate in acquiring what coach Elaine Hatton hopes to be some suitable replacements for the team that finished with a perfect 3-0 record last fall. Juniors Kathy Madore and Meryl Siegal and sophomore Sue Brevitz from the varsity team, have joined the squad along with six new freshmen, Mary Hicks, Jeanie Vogel, Marjorie "Mike" Kruger, Linda English, Kay Kelly and Diane Selke. Selke is the younger sister of last year's team captain, Sue, who captured the Big Ten in the No. 1 singles position for three consecutive years.

Diane may not have as much experience in tennis as Sue, but I think she has a lot of potential," Hatton commented. "Diane seems to have a much better all-around game than Sue ever had. She's a very coachable athlete, but you just can't put her in the same category as Sue. Not yet, anyhow."

While losing so many varsity players at one time is enough to give any coach ulcers, Hatton isn't ready to write off her team as a contender yet.

This is going to be a rebuilding year, that's for sure," Hatton said with a laugh. "But we've definitely got some good freshmen — Selke, Vogel and Kruger will probably be playing in our first sets."

It has hurt us to lose all those varsity women, but with work and a little more experience, we're going to have a good team. I've got some strong singles players but many of them have never really had much experience in doubles, so we'll have to work on that," she added.

The Spartan's first test of the season will come Friday and Saturday at the Dorothy McClure Memorial Tennis Tournament at Alton University in Decatur, Ill. MSU will be represented by women. Hicks, Selke and Zwer will participate in singles and Kruger and Smenzwik in doubles play in the tournament which features individual rather than team competition.

"This is a big tournament with a lot of good competition," Hatton said. "Last year 21 schools sent representatives, so I expect to see about the same number there this weekend, which gives the girls an opportunity to meet good players from all different schools, most of which we never get to play. I'm waiting to see how the girls perform this weekend and next week — it should show me a lot."

Consider the series ticket.

At Lecture-Concert Series we specialize in bargains. For example, MSU student single tickets for each of the 5 concerts on this year's Chamber Music Series cost only $3.50 + $2.50 + $2.50 + $2.50 + $2.50. That's $13.00 for 5 professional chamber concerts. That's a bargain.

But now consider the series ticket: Instead of buying 5 separate tickets, you can visit the Union Ticket Office just once and buy a series ticket at 50% off the regular series ticket price. (Any full-time MSU student is eligible.) This series ticket for the same 5 professional chamber music programs costs $10.00. That's a better bargain.

The other 3 series tickets listed below are fantastic bargains too, but this is the only week we can make this offer to you. During this week only, these 4 series tickets are 50% off for any full-time MSU student.

Season

By EDWARD L. RONDERS
State News Sports Writer

Beginning his 25th season as MSU hockey coach, Amo Bessone faces the task of shoring up a defense riddled by graduation.

With the start of preseason practice Monday, Bessone initiated the search for replacements for departed defensemen

Dennis Olmstead and Paul Pavlich and goalie Ron Clark. "We recruited three defensemen and one goalie during the off season," noted Bessone. "We were hit hard in that area by injuries last year, so we went out to get some depth for this year."

referred to are Jeff Barr, Ron Heaslip and Doug Counter, all freshmen.

The other newcomer is goalie Dave Versical, a transfer student from Macomb County Community College.

Also on defense will be Pat Betterly, Tim McDonald, Jack Johnson and Kelly Cahill.

Cahill missed the latter part of the '75 season with a knee injury. However, Bessone expressed optimism saying, "Kelly had knee surgery and the doctors say that the knee is as good as new. He did an outstanding job for us last year, especially killing off power plays."

While Bessone is concerned about defensive depth, the Spartan offensive firepower might be the envy of the Western Collegiate Hockey Assn. (WCHA). Senior Tom Ross, who led both the country and the WCHA in scoring last season with 38 goals, returns as an integral part of the two top offensive lines.

Ross will center a line with wingers John Sturges and Brendon Moroney. The other top line will find Steve Colp at center, flanked by wingers Daryl Rice and Robbie Harris.

Those six players accounted for 142 of the 191 goals the Though MSU finished a disappointing fifth during the '74-'75 season in the WCHA, Besone has set his sights high for the upcoming campaign.

"I always make the league championship our number one goal," he explained. "After that comes the playoffs and the Normally a one-game losing streak is nothing to lose any sleep over. Unless you are a cross country team and your season is only six meets long.

So the Spartan squad will try to snap this losing streak Saturday when they host Illinois State at the Forest Akers

Golf Course in their home opener. It's the first time the two schools have ever met in a dual meet.

"It's a very important meet for us," coach Jim Gibbard said. "We have to get the kids back in stride after last week's loss."

"We're going to change our strategy for this Saturday and try to open up the race after the first couple of miles instead of waiting like we did at Notre Dame," Gibbard said.

MSU lost its first outing of the season when the Fighting Irish managed to place the second, third, fifth and sixth runners enroute to their 24-33 victory.

Hammer files guilty plea in campaign money case

WASHINGTON (AP) — Multibillionaire Armand Hammer pleaded guilty to illegally contributing $54,000 in contributions to the 1972 re-election campaign of former President Richard Nixon.

U.S. District Judge William B. Jones accepted the plea from the Occidental Petroleum Corp. chairman and announced a date for sentencing could be set later. Hammer, 74, was released without bond.

The plea came after a highly unusual series of exchanges between the slight, gray-haired Hammer and the judge. When the judge asked if Hammer understood that a guilty plea would result in imprisonment, Hammer disagreed.

Hammer replied that whether he could be sentenced to jail was legally disputed.

At least six times Jones asked if Hammer understood the possibility of imprisonment. Each time Hammer reiterated the matter was disputed.

Finally, the judge said, "If I cannot get an affirmative answer to that question, I cannot accept this plea."

He called a recess to allow Hammer to consult with his attorney. On his return, Hammer again was asked if he understood he faced the possibility of imprisonment by pleading guilty.

Hammer quietly replied, "Yes, sir."

The money was funneled through former Montana Gov. Tim M. Babcock, who pleaded guilty nearly 10 months ago to similar charges.

After Hammer's plea was accepted, a spokesman for Occidental issued a statement saying that the charges against its chairman did not involve any corporate funds.

The Occidental board of directors has expressed complete confidence in Hammer's integrity and leadership, the spokesman said.

At issue was an ambiguous section of the law which defense lawyers have interpreted as prohibiting any jail term.

Another section of the statute sets a maximum one-year jail sentence and $1,000 fine for each violation. Hammer pleaded guilty to three separate counts.

The information, or charge, to which he pleaded said three separate contributions totaling $54,000 were made by Hammer but listed as coming from Babcock and four other men.

Asst. Special Prosecutor

Thomas McBride said in addition to those specific charges, an apparent coverup attempt was made to conceal the contributions as various Watergate investigations got under way.

McBride said Hammer was aware of an attempt to attribute the $54,000 to a fictitious loan source. Later, the prosecutor said, false answers were given in response to a questionnaire sent by the Senate Watergate committee.

Senate kills bill for oil decontrol

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Republican effort to remove federal controls from the price of domestically produced natural gas was rejected by the Senate Wednesday.

The vote against a proposal by Sen. Paul Fannin, R-Ariz., indicated Republicans and gas-state senators may have the strength to win a more gradual removal of price controls as advocated by the Ford administration.

The vote against the Fannin proposal was 57-31.

The gradual phase-out of controls would mean higher prices, but the increase would not be so sharp as under the Fannin amendment.

The Ford Administration contends that higher prices are necessary to reverse the decline of natural-gas production. There is wide agreement that natural gas, which heats 55 per cent of U.S. homes, will cost more in the future and on the need to avert any gas shortage this winter, mainly in 14 Eastern states.

Senate Democrats want to solve that problem before tackling the complex issue of long-range pricing of natural gas. But Republicans and gas-state senators, fearing Congress won't want to act once the emergency is averted, are trying to force the long-range question onto any emergency bill.

Republicans have a second proposal that would phase out price controls over a period of years. The Democrats are standing by with their own long-range solutions which, instead of removing price controls, would extend them to gas that now is free of controls.

The two sides also disagree on how to handle the threatened shortage of gas this winter. Again, price is the problem.

The Democrats, led by Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., want to allow gas-short pipelines, through June 30, to buy gas directly from the producing states—mainly Louisiana, Texas and Oklahoma—for about $1.25 per unit. That is almost 150 per cent above the current price.

Sen. James B. Pearson, R-Kan., in a solution endorsed by Ford, would allow such purchases but without any price ceiling at all.

The Federal Power Commission (FPC) says either approach would allow the diversion of enough gas to reduce the expected shortage to the manageable levels of 1974.

At the heart of the dispute over various solutions is the two-level natural gas pricing system.

The FPC regulates the price of all natural gas that is sold outside the state in which it is produced. Under a formula that is supposed to cover costs of production and a reasonable profit, that interstate gas now sells for about 52 cents per unit of 1,000 cubic feet (mcf).

But gas that is sold within the same state in which it is produced is free of controls. The figures vary, but the average for this intrastate gas is about $1.25 per mcf.

George C. Scott and William Devane in Fear On Trial

Xerox is proud to present a major television special starring George C. Scott and William Devane. "Fear On Trial" is the gripping dramatization of the true story of John Henry Faulk, a CBS broadcaster who was unable to find work because a group of self-appointed arbiters questioned his beliefs and his patriotism.

In the 1950's and early 1960's, the hysteria of Communist witch-hunts, defamation and blacklisting drove teachers from their jobs, forced ministers from their churches and put performers and writers out of work.

"Fear On Trial" is the story of one man who chose to fight back.

Tonight on the CBS-TV Network.

Spanish terrorists kill 3 more policemen

MADRID (AP) — Arms outstretched in the Fascist salute, hundreds of thousands of Spaniards massed in tribute Wednesday to Gen. Francisco Franco. But terrorists killed three more policemen in bloody defiance of his authoritarian regime.

Franco, celebrating the 39th anniversary of the start of the civil war that brought him to power, accused the rest of Europe of mounting a "leftist conspiracy" against his government in the wake of the firing squad executions of five men convicted of killing police.

Hours before the crowd was declaring that "a united Spain will never be vanquished," gunmen struck in three areas of Madrid. The separate attacks came within five minutes of each other, police said, four days to the hour after the Saturday executions.

A 22-year-old policeman died instantly, two died in hospitals of their wounds, and a fourth was seriously wounded. The new attacks raised to 22 the number of policemen killed in political violence since January 1974. Fourteen civilians died in the same period.

Security forces launched a massive hunt for the killers, throwing roadblocks around the city and checking all traffic.

From the balcony of the National Palace, Franco thanked the crowd thronging the Plaza de Oriente for "serene and virile demonstration of support," which he said made "amends for the attacks abroad" on Spain and Spanish property.

According to the official text, Franco told the crowd the international outcry over the executions "shows, once more, just what we can expect from certain corrupt countries now giving perfect proof of their constant politicking against us."

The government claimed one million persons massed in the plaza, but newsmen and photographers estimated the crowd at about 300,000. The Madrid labor organization had issued orders for members to appear, and the mayor had also put out the word. Madrid has a population 3.6 million.

As Franco spoke, gangs roamed downtown Madrid threatening foreigners.

Across Western Europe, organizations and officials continued efforts to isolate the Franco regime. Much of the opposition is led by Marxists or democratic Socialists with historical animosity to Franco dating from the Spanish civil war.

The Executive Commission of the European Common Market decided it would be "impossible" for now to negotiate a free trade pact with Spain. The Common Market has twice refused Spain formal association with the nine-nation bloc.

A transport boycott against Spain began ahead of its scheduled Wednesday midnight starting time in Sweden. The charter flights to Spain did not get off the ground, and transport workers said 20,000 tourists were likely to be stranded during the next four days.

Boycotts also were declared in other Scandinavian countries for various periods.

The cooperative unions of countries decided to stop buying vegetables from Spain at the time being, informed sources in Sweden said. They said the move involved Spanish vegetables sold at some 45 stores with an aggregate annual turnover of about $2 billion.

Defiant troops get concessions as pressure in Portugal mounts

LISBON (AP) — Mutinous troops siding with the pro-Communist staff of a Lisbon radio station ended their day-long defiance of government orders to pull out of the station Wednesday after they were promised that civilian police would not take their place.

But there were strong indications that Portugal was dividing into two armed camps as the moderate-line government of Premier Jose Pinheiro de Azevedo sought to impose its authority against increasing left-wing resistance.

The Socialist party, which backs Azevedo, warned that "minority groups" of the "adventurist and pseudorevolutionary left" were planning to attack the premier and assault information media.

While Azevedo wrestled with the Communists at home, top-level Soviet officials turned out to welcome President Francisco da Costa Gomes to Moscow. The welcome appeared to reflect Soviet concern over recent setbacks of the Soviet-backed Communist party in Portugal.

The mutiny at Radio Clube Portugues ended when the pro-leftist troops walked out eight hours after Azevedo ordered them to withdraw.

A bearded private of the Queluz Infantry Regiment said the troops had refused to withdraw because they felt the civilian police, often identified with Portugal's ousted rightist dictatorship, would turn Radio Clube Portugues over to reactionaries.

It was the second time this week leftist troops have balked at carrying out Azevedo's crackdown on Lisbon's Communist-controlled radio and television stations.

When the premier ordered troops to occupy all Lisbon stations on Monday and put an end to anti-government broadcasting, soldiers sent to Radio Clube Portugues and to Radio Renascenca joined forces with the leftist staffers and refused to obey orders.

Senior officers finally restored control over Radio Clube and the government sent reliable commandos to occupy Radio Renascenca — the voice of the Roman Catholic Church until it was seized by its leftist workers — and take it off the air.

Azevedo pulled the military out of all Lisbon stations Wednesday except Radio Renascenca. But the government said police would be deployed around all stations and that any statement by political groups would have to be cleared with the Information Ministry.

The premier said he was confident his government and the ruling military Revolutionary Council would not have to reimpose "emergency measures . . . to defend authority, revolutionary discipline and the revolution itself."

Christian-Moslem fight breaks two-day Beirut peace, 66 killed

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Night-long fighting broke a two-day lull in Beirut's Christian-Moslem warfare, and police reported Wednesday at least 66 more persons killed and 60 abducted.

There were mortar and machine-gun battles in the neighboring eastern suburbs of Ein Rummaneh, a Christian district, and Moslem Chiyah. Officials said snipers had closed all eastern and northern approaches to the city.

The renewal of warfare was touched off by the killing of three Druze Moslem leftists. Police spokesmen said Christian militiamen of the conservative Phalange party pulled them out of a car and shot them at a roadblock on the outskirts of Ein Rummaneh.

Socialist leader Kamal Jumblatt, the country's most prominent Druze, said he got the names of the Phalangists involved from the commander of the security forces. He demanded their immediate arrest "to spare the country very grave consequences."

Jumblatt accused President Suleiman Franjeh, who is a Maronite Christian, of allowing the Phalangists to attack Moslem neighborhoods and commit atrocities without punishment.

Franjeh called a cabinet meeting to decide whether to order 2,000 army troops into downtown business districts to safeguard banks and shopping areas and free more police forces to try to restore the cease-fire in Chiyah and Ein Rummaneh.

Shops and banks that reopened Tuesday after two weeks of commercial paralysis were closed again Wednesday. The rival armed factions were rebuilding street barricades had town down in combat with a cease-fire last week. Police estimate 5,870 were killed and 17,972 injured in the fighting so far this year. Damage estimates of business losses are still compiled, but preliminary figures range from $2.5 billion to $10 billion.

Report verified by Breslin

"We're going to put together a job designed for Burt," Breslin explained Wednesday.

Breslin denied Smith's removal had anything to do with current NCAA investigations of MSU's football recruiting. Breslin also denied that Smith's reassignment would be Breslin's own duties in the athletic department. As executive president, Breslin also oversees the budget and activities of the athletic department.

Though Smith has been under fire from the public and for many of his practices as athletic director, Breslin would comment whether or not Smith was incompetent and whether that incompetency had any bearing on the University's decision to remove him from office.

Smith was not in his office all afternoon, and could not be reached for comment on his situation.

"This is no reflection on Burt's dedication to MSU," Breslin said. "However, it is a high-pressure job and we have been concerned about the impact on Burt's health and his ability to continue to meet the administrative demands of this position."

Smith recently underwent abdominal surgery.

Some of the problems in the athletic department have been NCAA investigations, including the use of an East Lansing attorney's credit card by ast. football coach Howard W. the walkout of the basketball players last Jan. 4, the unexpected rehiring head basketball coach Gus Ganakas, and his 1970 to send Ohio State University to the Rose Bowl instead of the State News sources claim that many alumni perturbed Smith's handling of the MSU athletics have applied pressure on Breslin over the past year to remove Smith from office. Breslin never confirmed this however.

Breslin had been planning on announcing the Smith resignation Thursday, but moved up the official announcement Wednesday after all-night meetings with President Wharton at Cowles Hall.

Breslin did not appear to be very happy about the announcement.

People in the athletic department had were not completely surprised with the announcement, however.

"We had wind of this a few weeks ago," said an employee of athletic department who wishes to remain anonymous. "We thought the rumors were probably true. Burt's removal was just a matter of time."
