DPS to outline search policy for concerts

By MARTY SOMMERNESS
State News Staff Writer

An agreement to formulate a written policy detailing the policy Dept. of Public Safety (DPS) officers will use in searches of concert-goers resulted yesterday from a meeting between representatives of the MSU administration, DPS, Entertainment, ASMSU and their attorneys.

The search policy will not be adopted in time for Monday's Loggins and Messina concert in Jenison Fieldhouse at 8 p.m., ASMSU will post monitors at each gate where there is a DPS officer.

The monitor will scrutinize the activity of the police officer, noting if any concert-goers are stopped and searched, how the police officer deals with the search and what is done with any material that might be confiscated.

Also agreed upon by the representatives at the meeting were "extensive" pre-concert security planning sessions to be held between the DPS and Pop Entertainment officials before every future concert.

The temporary agreement reached at Thursday's meeting headed off possible ASMSU court action against the DPS.

Had no such agreement been reached, the committee, having been empowered to take legal action by the ASMSU Board at its Tuesday meeting, might have carried through its threats of seeking a temporary restraining order against the DPS for the searches and sue the campus police for damages to gate receipts resulting from the adverse effects of the searches.

"A great deal was accomplished," said

ASMSU attorney Ken Smith. "In a way, it's too bad there aren't more of these meetings. We're going to enter into an agreement about policing the events."

"There might very well be some problems coming from the agreement. We said we're not going to accept it blindly. We're going to look it over," Smith said.

ASMSU president Brian Raymond said that as a result of the meeting the DPS will "reduce their search policy to writing."

After the policy is in writing, copies will be sent to Eldon Nonnamaker, vice president for student affairs and services; Leland Carr, MSU vice-president for legal services; the Ingham County prosecuting attorney and the ASMSU committee concerned with the searches, Raymond said.

"We'll meet with our attorney once we get the document and we'll hash it out and see if it's acceptable to ASMSU," Raymond said.

If the student government does not approve of the DPS policy, Raymond said ASMSU might take the issue to court.

"We have assurances from the DPS that the DPS is going to drastically modify its search procedures at the Loggins and Messina concert," Raymond said.

"They (the DPS) don't think there'll be the need for the same intensive search there was for Jethro Tull," Raymond said.

"The alcohol is illegal. We're not changing our tolerance. We're still going to keep our policy against it," Raymond said.

"We have to protect the welfare of the students. At the same time, we want to protect the rights of the student," said Raymond, noting that ASMSU could be held responsible for negligence if a concert-goer is injured at the concert-site by a flying wine-bottle or beer can.

Raymond said that tickets for future Pop Entertainment concerts may have the words "Alcohol is not allowed" printed on the stubs.

Leland Carr was once again unavailable Thursday for comment on the meeting.

Major Adam Zuta, commander of the DPS, refused to comment on the meeting, saying any press releases on the subject would have to come from Nonnamaker's office.

Zuta did say, however, that DPS coverage of concerts on campus started "almost at the inception" of rock concerts.

The police attended the events "So we could insure the rock concerts could continue," Zuta said.

Before the DPS began patrolling the functions, Zuta said rock concert-goers were plagued with audience members getting drunk, throwing bottles and "vomiting down people's collars."

Nonnamaker said the meeting produced a "general agreement there is reason to enforce the MSU ordinance" prohibiting alcohol.

Report issued by prosecutor

WASHINGTON (AP) — Watergate Prosecutor Henry S. Ruth leaves office today after issuing the final report from the 28-month investigation of a scandal that forced Richard M. Nixon to resign the presidency.

Ruth turns over the job to Charles Ruff, who will handle it on a part-time basis while continuing to teach three courses at the Georgetown University law school.

Ruff, 36, becomes the fourth and probably the last Watergate prosecutor and will direct the remaining investigations and handle appeals pending from the major trials and convictions.

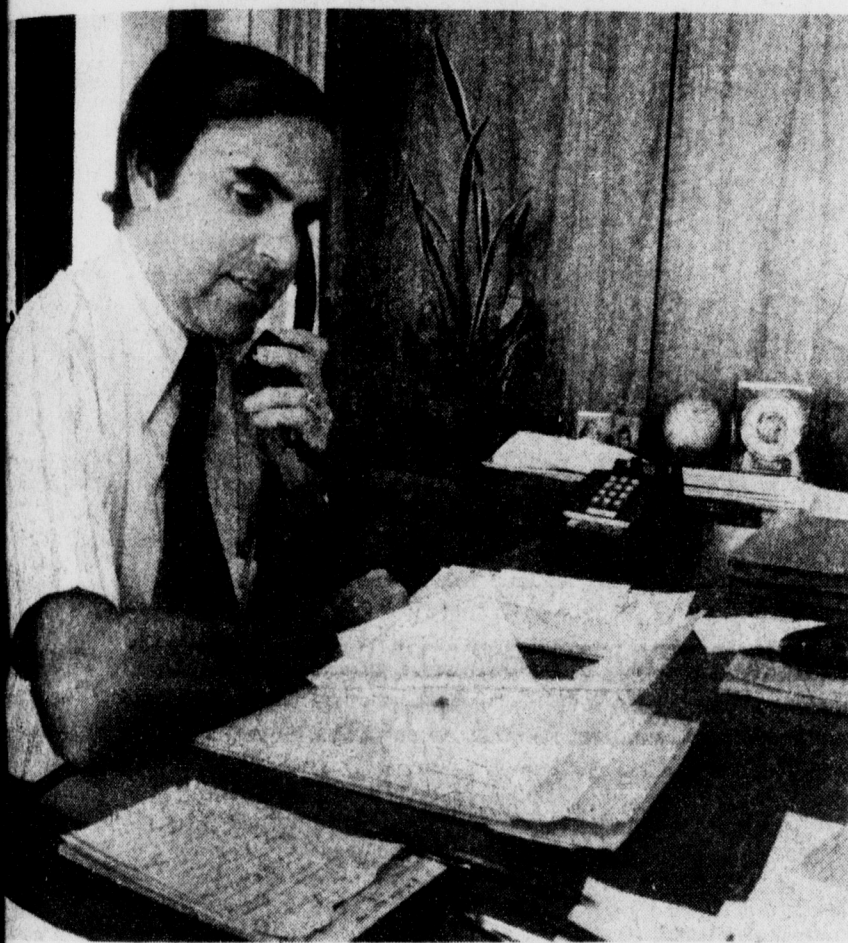

Despite intensive investigations, the special Watergate prosecutors never were able to crack some of the scandal's most celebrated mysteries, such as who intentionally erased 18 1/2 minutes in one of Nixon's White House tape recordings.

Another of the unsolved mysteries surrounded the handling of a $100,000 campaign contribution funneled from industrialist Howard Hughes to Nixon's best friend, Charles C. G. "Bebe" Rebozo.

And in its final report Wednesday, the Watergate prosecution force shed no new light on why the original burglary at the Watergate offices of the Democratic party was undertaken. It did not even address the question.

Pop Wilkinson handles MSU bills, assembles huge University budget

Roger Wilkinson

Editors note: This is the first of a series of articles the State News will present over the coming issues designed to introduce the University community to those faces in high places called MSU administrators.

By SUE WILLOUGHBY
State News Staff Writer

Roger Wilkinson, vice president for business and finance and the man behind the University bankroll, does not burn the midnight oil counting pennies and devising outrageous schemes to save MSU a dollar. And he is a far cry from Ebenezer Scrooge.

But he will admit that this year's University budget was easily the most difficult job he has had to face in his 16 years at MSU.

"I think I've spent more time on the budget this year than any year since I've been here," Wilkinson said as he sat in his shirt sleeves in his office.

He was not the only person spending sleepless nights trying to balance the books. A large portion of the budget is put together by his assistant vice president, Steve Terry, and budget officer Bob Lockhart.

But the final recommendation for the budget that was put to the board of trustees is the combined efforts of Wilkinson, Jack Breslin, executive vice president, former provost John Cantlon (now vice president for research and graduate studies) and President Wharton.

"I think we all had a miserable summer with this year's budget," he said with a wry grin.

Most of the difficulties with the budget stemmed from the lack of firm information from the state legislature on the amount of this year's appropriation. As a result, estimated figures for the budget and a needed tuition increase were all delayed.

The delay was not really anyone's fault, Wilkinson said. The real problem was Michigan's unstable and uncertain financial situation.

"Our figures changed daily, and we had to delay the budget process twice," he said. "But the legislature was just as frustrated as we were with the whole Michigan financial situation."

The legislature is caught in the middle with appropriations because the Michigan Constitution requires that they pass a

Professor formulates task force to counsel governor on science

By MICHELE BURGEN
State News Staff Writer

An MSU professor is formulating a task force that would provide the state's chief executive with continuing counsel in all areas of science and engineering.

William C. Taylor, professor and chairman of the Dept. of Civil and Sanitary Engineering, said several mechanisms to provide the governor with needed information could be implemented in a system that would serve as a model for other states.

With the funding to come from the National Science Foundation, Taylor hopes to set up special task forces that will study specific issues and answer the governor's questions for information.

This task force approach has already been utilized in the Seafarer project in the Upper Peninsula. A team of nine specialists in the fields of engineering, biology, ecology and physics studied the feasibility of an underground dispatch system that would broadcast to U.S. submarines anywhere in the world. Within a month the report recommended the go-ahead for the project, which the governor accepted.

"Whatever the issues are, we can put together a task force to fit them," Taylor said.

"If the governor next week comes up with a medical question, we'll get doctors from all over the state."

Usually, a report could be on the governor's desk within as little as 30 days.

Another objective of Taylor's plan is the establishment of a long-term commission of science experts to keep the governor abreast of current developments.

"This would be a year-long project. We would file a report when we think science would take a role in the governor's decision-making," Taylor said.

The commission would also offer advice to the governor whether or not the information is solicited, Taylor said.

He said a commission of this sort would consist of no more than a dozen advisers, serving without pay on a part-time basis.

Each adviser would be responsible for individual research and would have to be available on request of the governor.

Taylor said the various commission members would be chosen from colleges and universities in Michigan and also from the Michigan Academy of Scientists.

The rationale behind the one-year commission, as opposed to a permanent group, is to keep the areas of expertise flexible. Taylor said other states do have permanent advisory commissions, but their function is limited to the members' respective areas of proficiency.

In some states, such as Pennsylvania, the commission has evolved into an arm of the state government instead of remaining a separate advisory council, he said.

In other instances, the commission has become absorbed in departmental quagmire, rendering it somewhat ineffective.

Finally, Taylor will organize various workshops, seminars and conferences to inform the state's policy makers — legislators and administrators — on future issues and developments in science-related arenas.

Taylor, the governor's science adviser on a part-time basis, is also a member of the Program Council, a cabinet group that advises the governor on policy matters.

Taylor said the idea for the project was initiated last spring when the National Science Foundation agreed to sponsor advisory systems in four states. He admitted that as the governor's only science adviser, he did not have the knowledge of all the issues that would arise.

Funding for the project will begin with a contract with the foundation, to be signed about Nov. 1.

COED LIVING DISPROVES FEARS

Floors show wild success

By CAROLE LEIGH HUTTON
State News Staff Writer

Five years ago the mere discussion of implementing coed floors in MSU residence halls was viewed as immoral and unthinkable. Such thoughts were induced by fears of rampant sex creating dens of sin all over campus.

After four years of debate the board of trustees very reluctantly passed a proposal by a one-vote margin that allowed for coed residence hall floors. Now, one year after their inception, the general consensus is that this innovative housing technique is a complete success and all the fears were groundless.

There are presently five floors, one in each of the larger campus residence halls, that are coed by suite. McDonel, Holmes and Wonders Halls were the first to experiment with this type of housing assignments beginning in September 1974.

After observing these three floors for one year, the University decided to expand the program to include Wilson and Case Halls in the fall of 1975. Though further expansion of the program is somewhat limited by the number of residence halls employing a community bath arrangement, the existing set-ups have met with no objection from University officials.

Robert Underwood, residence halls manager, described the coed floors as popular, and added that "they seem to be working out very well." The one problem being caused by their existence, Underwood said, is overcrowding on other floors in the residence halls.

"As a general rule coed floors are underassigned," Underwood said, explaining that this is due to the policy of not assigning incoming freshmen or transfer students to these areas. The problem is being alleviated, however, by what Underwood termed "a modification of the original policy," which allows transfer students and freshmen to move onto a coed floor by their own choice once the academic year has begun. The modifications also allow for the assignment of transfer students to the floor with the provision that they be advised of the situation in advance.

Eldon Nonnamaker, vice president for student affairs and services, feels that "coed floors have worked out very well."

Simon says inflation perilous

WILLIAMSBURG, Va., (AP) — Treasury Secretary William E. Simon said Wednesday that inflation has put the free enterprise system in peril and that President Ford's combined tax and spending proposals are an attempt to blunt inflation.

Simon said Ford's proposals attack inflation by attempting to curb the growth in government spending. And "the critical question is not what will happen if we succeed in slowing the growth in spending but what will happen if we fail."

Kissinger calls Nixon artificial

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said privately this week that former President Richard M. Nixon "barely governed" during his last months in office and was an odd and "artificial man... who never enjoyed meeting people" the Washington Post reports.

At a banquet in Ottawa held in his honor Tuesday night by Canadian External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen, Kissinger's table conversation was picked up over a microphone and accidentally transmitted to reporters, the newspaper said in Thursday's editions.

Kissinger also was quoted as telling dinner companions that Nixon was "one of our better presidents. You know he was an odd man. But he was very decisive in his own way. He went to the heart of a problem."

Industrial production soars

WASHINGTON (AP) — The output of the nation's mines, factories and utilities scored its largest monthly advance in nearly 11 years during September, the Federal Reserve Board reported Thursday.

The federal bank said industrial production rose 1.9 percent in September for the fifth consecutive monthly advance since the recovery from recession began in April.

The report said the latest advance, unlike the earlier increases, extended virtually across the economy, including raw materials and business equipment as well as the consumer goods which had initiated the advance.

Dropout calls Ford unlucky

MERIDEN, Conn. (AP) — A fatherless high school dropout who was thrust into the national spotlight when his car hit Gerald Ford's limousine says Ford's "got bad luck."

"I have nothing against him, he's a good President," James Salamites said. He added he's planning to write an apology letter to Ford, "but I'm not sure what I'm going to say."

Salamites said he has had inquiries from several people who want to buy the battered car as a collector's item. But he said, "I'm thinking of saving it. It might be worth something."

No charges have been filed by police in connection with the Hartford accident. They took the blame themselves for not blocking the intersection for the presidential motorcade.

The accident left Pearl Salamites without a car, with towing and storage bills and with a sudden disruption of her family's middle class routine.

She said she was concerned about who will pay for the damage to her car, though she is insured. She said she wants to buy a new one.

A Ford Motor Co. spokesman, whose firm leases the presidential limousine, said the Insurance Company of North America — which insures the presidential limousine — might pay for repairs to Salamites' car.

Mass march in Sahara dispute

RABAT, Morocco (AP) — King Hassan II of Morocco called Thursday for 350,000 volunteers to follow him in a "peaceful march" to "recover" the disputed Spanish Sahara territory. He challenged Spain to open fire on the marchers.

The king's announcement followed a ruling by the International Court of Justice at The Hague that it could not recognize Moroccan and Mauritania sovereignty claims to the West African desert territory.

Morocco's claims to the phosphate-rich northern part of the territory are opposed by Spain and Algeria, both of which demand a referendum among the Sahara's nomadic population of 80,000 that could lead to independence.

Mauritania wants the southern and western parts of Sahara. The dispute has brought combat-ready troops of Algeria, Spain and Morocco to the territory's borders.

Smog perils Athen's Acropolis

ATHENS (AP) — Pollution over the past 40 years has caused greater damage to the ancient monuments on the Acropolis than they suffered in the previous four centuries, a United Nations report said this week.

Minister of Culture Constantine Tripanis, in announcing the report, said antiquity experts from the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) proposed an immediate start on protection of the 2,500-year-old marble temples and statuary. They said the famed monuments overlooking the city of Athens should be covered with plastic or nylon for the winter.

Tripanis said the report stressed that if protective measures were not taken before winter, "the monuments might be irretrievably damaged."

Ignored subpoena invites fight

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger may be inviting a showdown with the House Intelligence Committee by refusing to give the panel a subpoenaed memorandum that alleges U.S. mishandling of the Cyprus crisis.

Kissinger said at a new conference in Ottawa on Wednesday that he has offered to personally give the committee "a summary of views" on the Cyprus crisis handling.

But he added, "We will not submit documents, even without names." Chairman Otis G. Pike, D-N.Y., already had indicated doubts Kissinger would fully comply with the subpoena, saying the committee would take up Kissinger's response when Congress returns next Tuesday from a week-long Columbus Day recess.

The committee subpoenaed the memorandum in a dispute over a Kissinger directive prohibiting lower level officials from telling Congress what recommendations they made for policy on such matters as the Cyprus crisis last year.

The memo sought by the committee was written by former State Department Cyprus chief Thomas Boyatt, who told the committee that it details what he considered to be U.S. mismanagement of the crisis.

Boyatt also told the committee he had been instructed that under Kissinger's new directive he was not to testify on what his own recommendations had been during the crisis.

A former U.S. ambassador to Cyprus, Taylor G. Belcher, told the committee that operations officials had tried unsuccessfully to get Kissinger to intervene and prevent the Greek coup that triggered the crisis and subsequent conflict between Greece and Turkey.

Kissinger said he is willing to testify "in substance" about junior officers' recommendations in such crises but he said he is not prepared to identify the officers who made the recommendations.

"It is essential for the integrity of the foreign service that they can make recommendations that are not subject to later public scrutiny," Kissinger said. Besides protecting junior officers from fear of public disclosure of mistakes, a top Kissinger aide told the committee the directive is aimed at preventing them from carrying on public debate.

But Pike has countered that Boyatt is willing to testify and does not need such protection. Although there is no indication what action the committee might take on Kissinger's stance, it already has approved a resolution for the full House that would back the committee right to enforce its subpoena.

Peron returns to presidency after month-long health leave

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Isabel Peron resumed her presidential duties Thursday, taking back her mandate from acting president Italo Luder in a simple ceremony after a month-long health leave, the government said.

Luder, who is president of the Senate, had briefed Mrs. Peron earlier on the national situation, but no details were made public.

Police scoured subway and sewage tunnels under the vast Plaza de Mayo for terrorist explosives in preparation for Mrs. Peron's first public appearance Friday.

The newspaper La Opinion reported that Interior Minister Angel F. Robledo told military leaders that the return to office of Juan D. Peron's 44-year-old widow would open a dynamic new phase of her regime, perhaps with key cabinet changes.

It was an obvious attempt to answer criticism of her failure during her 15½ months in office to make any progress toward restoring law and order or improving the gravely ill economy.

But La Opinion also said Mrs. Peron may take another health leave this time in Spain, where she and Peron lived in exile and where their former bodyguard and closest adviser, Jose Lopez Rega, is now living.

Two Peronist provincial governors warned that a military coup was still possible.

Peron returned to Buenos Aires Wednesday afternoon after a 32-day "rest for health reasons" at an air force rest camp in Cordoba province, 450 miles northwest of Buenos Aires.

She was greeted at the airport by the acting president, who is president of the Senate, and members of the cabinet. She went from the airport to her suburban home without breaking the official silence she has maintained since leaving office Sept. 13.

In preparation for the rally today, the walls of buildings throughout Buenos Aires were decorated with colorful posters, one showing the president's smiling face superimposed on shouting masses of workers, and another in which she was flanked by cloud-like images of Peron and his late second wife, Evita, the Joan of Arc of the Peronist movement.

The rally commemorates the 30th anniversary of Peron's release from prison after demonstrations organized by Evita and the start of his rise to power. It is billed as "a show of faith and revitalization." But with the Peronist movement badly split between conservatives and leftists, many observers doubt it will draw the mammoth turnout the president needs to help keep her in office.

Death ending unique job of toking rodent Marty

SAN JOSE, Calif. (UPI) — Marty, a marijuana-mouse who used to raise police narcotics evidence, is dying, but not from an overdose. Officers say it is old age and a broken heart a lost love.

Marty's companion, a field mouse named Maudie, died two weeks ago and hasn't been the same since.

"He's getting progressively worse," officer Jim LeBlond Thursday.

He said Marty, the police mascot, has started fur and even refuses to eat marijuana seeds.

Marty's nocturnal ramblings in the locker were stopped last year when policemen trapped him with marijuana, caught him red-eyed and stoned.

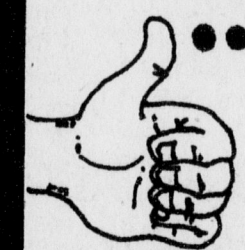

An attorney accused police of illegal entrapment but a dismissed the suit when said Marty had been added to the force as a mascot.

Marty underwent tests at the University of California at Los Angeles established he was addicted to marijuana.

RA accepts prize, rejects proposal

By JANE NICHOLS

Wednesday was an eventful day for Susan Farhat. Not only did she receive a marriage proposal, but she also won $5,000. She rejected the money, but not the proposal. Resident assistant in E. McDonell Hall, Farhat was a prize winner in the Michigan Centennial Lottery. The Bureau of the Lottery reported that there were prizes given, totalling almost $3 million. The Bicentennial Lottery was a one time only drawing.

The cost of a Bicentennial ticket was $5 but Farhat did not pay a penny for either of the two tickets she was holding. She won them at a bingo game in mid-August.

She and a friend went to the bingo game, which was sponsored by the Knights of Livonia "for lack of anything better to do." She won a game and was given two Bicentennial lottery tickets as a prize. She thought so little of the tickets, she was going to give one of them to her friend, but luckily, the friend refused. Dazed, Farhat said, "I could've given the winning ticket away."

The drawing was Tuesday evening and Farhat was ready to go to bed when her suitemate asked if she was going to check her tickets. Not expecting to win, she said no. But a friend down the hall, had conveniently written the winning numbers down.

Susan got out her two tickets and checked. With one of the tickets she checked as far as the first four numbers and then became extremely excited, thinking she had won $500.

"She was trembling," said a friend, "and I said 'No, check the fifth.'" Farhat did and seeing that that number coincided too, she became even more excited.

It seemed too good to be true, so Farhat had her friends call a radio station to double check the number. When she was assured that she had indeed won $5,000, she began calling close friends and relatives.

"My father," she said, "told me to sign my name on the back of the ticket and go to bed. Then he called this morning to see if he was dreaming."

Since the beginning of the lottery, Susan estimated that she has spent $15 on tickets. Pressed for money, she stopped buying tickets.

"I would've never bought a five dollar ticket," she stated.

Susan is a junior, majoring in social work, ate iron mining bill may get shaft

Things are looking bad for Senate Bill 1003, which would exempt iron mining companies from suits under the state's Environmental Protection Act once 30 days have passed from the time a company received a state lease.

On Wednesday, Gov. Milliken repeated his threat to veto the legislation if it passes. Thursday, representatives trying to push the bill through the House (it has passed the Senate) pulled the bill off the daily calendar for the fourth time in a row, indicating that they can't muster up enough support for the bill.

Rep. Jack Gingross, D-Iron Mountain, said Thursday that consideration of the bill would be delayed "until we can meet with mining company officials to decide on possible courses of action."

budget gets its first red scare

Everytime someone turns on a light on campus, MSU administrators see red. At that time will be the color of the MSU budget unless the Michigan Senate overrides Gov. Milliken's veto of a section of a bill that would have picked up the tab for the university's utility bills.

The section would allow the state to reimburse MSU for higher utility bills. Because of it, the University did not even figure utility costs into the budget, and there is a good chance that the 1975-76 budget will be the first one to slip from the red into the red.

George Wilkinson, vice president of business and finance, said MSU could be out as much as $2 million.

AMTRAK soils the 'golden spike'

People who ride the AMTRAK trains are not as pooped by the end of their journey as others who follow behind the train for any length of time.

Jim Gibbons, AMTRAK reservation worker, said that long distance trains which travel 70 to 90 miles per hour, leave a large distribution of waste when someone uses the toilet. In other words, the contents of the bowl go flying all over. Passengers are asked to flush only when the train is on its way, since a nonmoving train leaves a big, ugly pile.

Disinfectant is also spewed out with the contents. New turboliners retain the waste until they reach the station, but trains in Michigan are of the older variety and do not have the retaining capacity. The waste falls only on railroad property.

AB/SE seeks petition signatures

The Union Activities Board/Student Entertainment (UAB/SE) is trying to get 11,000 undergraduate signatures so that they may be allowed to get on a list for winter term registration.

The group, which sponsors such activities as the Player's Gallery, Showcase and Travel America, would like undergraduates to vote on whether the UAB/SE may permanently reserve a box on the fee payment card so that students could pay a 50 cent tax each term. The amount collected would go towards the group's expenses.

Proposed fire station: a smouldering issue

By RALPH FRAMMOLINO
State News Staff Writer

East Lansing voters may add fuel to the smoldering controversy surrounding a proposed fire station if they allow the city to go ahead and build the structure.

Proposal "A" on the ballot for the November 4 election requests permission from voters to allow the city to borrow over one million dollars for the construction of a new fire station.

Fire and city officials, along with some of the council members, said that the proposed $1,120,000 fire station is badly needed because of the inadequacy of the current structure next to city hall to house modern equipment.

But opponents to the new station say the site which the city has already purchased for the station is too far from the area where most of the fires occur.

Larry Kestenbaum, head of Students to Keep Enough Protection from Terror for the Inner Community (SKEPTIC), said that the city plans to move the new fire station north of Saginaw Street, but that most fires occur south of Saginaw Street.

"The area of very high incidence of fire is around the present fire station, the area commonly called the student ghetto," Kestenbaum said.

He said that in 1971, eight of the nine major fires in the city happened south of Saginaw Street, in 1974, 10 or 11 major fires started south of the street. Kestenbaum categorized a major fire as one that caused more than $2,000 of damage.

Kestenbaum also said the property bought by the city for the proposed station was forced on them by Albert White, an East Lansing developer. He said the land was poor, and that it would cost the city $200,000 to make the ground suitable for construction.

Councilman George Griffiths explained that he does not particularly question the need for a new fire station, but he thinks that the city is not going to locate the station in the best place.

"Frankly, it (the locating of the station) smells to me," Griffiths said.

He also said he feels impeded from openly opposing that locating of the station.

"I find it very difficult to oppose it because my opposition would be construed as 'Griffiths doesn't want it by his house'," he said.

John Patriarche, East Lansing city manager, said the decision to locate the new fire station north of Saginaw near Bessemer Drive was taken from a computer study done of the area in 1969.

"This is our prime choice from our computer study," Patriarche said. He said the study, done by the International City Managers Assn. considered the growth potential, existing streets in the city, and location of fires.

Patriarche said future city growth is one factor that weighed heavily in the decision.

"In ten or twenty years, the area will grow — if the drainage problem is resolved," Patriarche said. He maintained that even though the station is north of Saginaw, fire engines from the proposed station and the current one on campus will be able to reach the more densely populated areas within three minutes, an acceptable time by fire department standards.

"We can respond to the central business district from both stations within a matter of a few minutes," Patriarche said.

Arthur Patriarche, East Lansing Fire Chief and brother of city manager John Patriarche, said that the time to respond to a fire will be an additional thirty seconds from the present time.

"I met with the business people and they said they had no qualms about us going one mile north," Chief Patriarche said. "How soon you get the call once the fire starts — that's the important part."

Chief Patriarche also said that a problem with the land, called a "muck problem," would add an unexpected cost to construction. Muck is fine sand with the consistency of coffee grounds. The parcel of land the city has purchased has from nine to seven feet of surface muck, with one pocket going down to 27 feet of muck.

He said the city anticipated paying $100,000 for the land improvement, but a report from the architects showed an estimate of $200,000. Patriarche said that the city decided not to simply condemn houses in another area to get better land because that process would be just as expensive.

East Lansing councilman John Polomsky said if the funds were approved at the election, it may take up to five years to build the new station. He said that the Union Building on campus is built on muck land founded on 80 foot pilings.

But he said that he had reservations about the fire station site.

"If we go there, I'm not sure we can serve the bulk of the population as well as with the present site," Polomsky said.

If there's not enough room in your room, would you lift wood for a loft?

If you do, you should prepare for the consequences if you are caught, which is what happened to four men from Bryan Hall early Thursday morning.

The four were arrested at about 12:30 a.m. in X-Lot. They had a load of lumber and plywood, which had apparently been stolen from a construction site in Meridian Township.

Police are also looking for the person who got his wood by taking it out of the platform tennis cage in the East Complex on Wednesday, when some redwood planks and support beams were discovered missing.

Ummmm-hunnnh...ummm-hunnnh...ummm-hunnnh. Click. Buzzzzzz. That's the only part we could print.

The rest of the obscene telephone calls to a Fee Hall man were less printable. It all began about 3 p.m. Wednesday when a lewd-minded female turned the traditional telephone tables on the man who was presumably studying quietly.

After about eight calls between 3 p.m. and 11 p.m., the man, who probably was not used to such talk, finally got so disgusted he called the police.

The Safety Services Dept. has moved out of the quonset huts and into the new Dept. of Public Safety Building.

The new telephone number is 353-5360. All numbers at the quonset huts have been disconnected.

A woman in the Women's Intramural Building was confronted by a leotard-wielding man Wednesday evening.

The man observed the woman dancing in room 118 there at about 7:30 p.m. He first tried to take pictures of the woman but she objected. When the man approached and asked her to change into a pair of black leotards he just happened to have with him, the woman retreated and called the police.

50 GATHER FOR RALLY

Local support for UFW still high

By JAMIE CONROY
State News Staff Writer

At a United Farm Worker (UFW) rally Thursday, well-worn signs reading "Say No to Gallo" and "UAW Supports Farm Workers Struggle for Economic Justice," show that local support for the UFW fight for economic justice still continues at MSU.

Before the rally started, the small group of about 50 were gathered on the leaf-strewn lawn near Beaumont Tower talking and laughing. Only the few UFW flags resting on the shoulders of some distinguished the group from a Sunday church social.

The rally was held to inform UFW supporters about a law in California that now enables farm workers to have secret ballot elections to determine which union will represent them. The gathering was peaceful and the UFW supporters generally unenthusiastic until the speakers sparked some interest.

Ed Youman, Lansing organizer for UFW support activities, said the bill, called the Agriculture Labor Relations Act, is a major victory for the UFW, but the growers who employ the farm workers are trying to scare them into continuing to vote for the Teamsters union.

"Gallo is serious about screwing up this bill," Youman said. "Farmworkers say that if they vote for the UFW, they'll get fired. It's pressure like that that's keeping elections from being fair."

Youman added that since the bill went into effect Aug. 28, 235 elections have been held at growers' farms. Out of that, 118 have been UFW victories, 83 have been Teamster wins, 20 were undecided and 35 were "no union" decisions. But the UFW has been unsuccessful at the Gallo farm where the growers are doing everything they can to insure that farm workers do not vote UFW.

"So keep boycotting Gallo," Youman said to the clapping crowd. "Don't listen to bureaucrats, keep boycotting."

Father Pete Dougherty, a member of a task force that went to California to view first-hand the situation of farm workers there, detailed some descriptions of Teamster "abuses" against farm workers.

"You don't really hear about the oppression there in the press releases you get in Michigan," Dougherty said. "You don't hear about the beatings by Teamster goons or the smashing of UFW cars by goons. There is a whole aura of intimidation that is constant in California."

But Dougherty applauded the spirit of the farm workers on the strike lines.

"There are UFW meetings on Friday nights at a park there (in California) that are a spiritual, social, economic and political kind of thing. Their way of life is being expressed at those meetings," Dougherty said.

"They are aware of our boycotts and pickets in California," he added. "And they are grateful." To that the group gave a resounding "Viva la causa!"

Then, to further the enthusiasm and UFW funds, a UFW flag, straight from California and personally autographed by Cesar Chavez, was auctioned off.

And the crowd cried "Viva!"

Father Pete Dougherty talks to a small gathering of UFW supporters about Teamster abuses against farm workers in California. Dougherty was a member of a task force that went to California to view abuses first-hand.

Feelers should keep hands off

Going to an MSU concert is much like walking through New York's Central Park at night — there are always people hanging around eager to rifle your pockets, clothes and purses.

The only difference is that the people invading your person in the MSU case are the ones who are supposed to prevent that very action.

It requires little more than a vague awareness of Constitutional law to realize that the arbitrary search of individuals without anything even distantly resembling probable cause for the search is a mockery of civil rights.

And for the Department of Public Safety to compound that by conjuring up a parody of probable cause and defining it according to the whims of officers shows the need for a comprehensive, codified, written policy for the behavior of public safety officials at public events.

One must realize that the DPS has had a virtually blank check, granted by All-University Policy, to conduct security at public meetings as they see fit.

But in a meeting Thursday with representatives from ASMSU, the DPS, the University administration and Pop Entertainment, ASMSU, the original paper tiger, took the necessary plunge by asking that a written policy on searches be devised.

It is from this written policy that the solution will appear. One cannot count on the whim of the DPS to protect civil rights in situations such as concerts, where officers feel the compulsion to seize upon whatever means necessary to do their job.

A workable policy must impose and enforce a stringent definition of the exact nature of probable cause — such as the neck of a wine bottle protruding from a pocket.

Should they feel the urge, however, concert-goers should do their drinking or smoking prior to the function to minimize the need for searches.

But since there is no policy, and since they are so clearly outside of the constitution, DPS officers should have the human decency and the legal propriety to keep their hands off.

Myth and madness on the tax cut front

Federal election time is rolling around again. You can tell, because the politicians are again talking about tax cuts.

President Ford is pushing a $28 billion cut in taxes paid by individuals and business. Democrats in Congress seem determined to slash taxes by at least $17 billion.

The difference, this time, is that the politicians, both Republican and Democrat, are also talking about spending cuts to go along with the tax slashes.

Maybe the folks in Washington have sensed that the folks at home would rather spend their own money than have it spent for them by government bureaucrats.

The trouble is that most of the talk about spending cuts is just that — talk. The time schedule and procedures in establishing budgets make it virtually impossible for federal spending to be cut significantly next year.

But tax cuts are almost certain, and will be wise policy this year. They will interject new spending power into our still lagging economy. Moreover, it will shift control of national income back to the public instead of their supposed servants.

Some of the specifics of the tax cut, however, should be questioned. In particular, the continued high investment tax credit is a strange policy. This credit is supposedly an anti-recession tax cut, based on the theory that businesses will invest in more equipment, and thus stimulate the economy. The theory, however, does not hold water.

The problem during recession is not a lack of capital equipment — it is underutilization of existing equipment. In fact, in the short run, an increase in capital expenditures is likely to displace more jobs than it creates.

The best form of tax incentive to increase employment would be employment tax credit, which would subsidize the salaries of workers hired since some period, probably in the deep recession. No other use of incentive would do so much to increase employment and end the recession.

Thus, the cutting talk about these days is part myth, part madness. The cut, however, will be welcome.

VIEWPOINT: AMERICAN VIOLENCE

By TOM ALDERMAN and LAWRENCE THARP

The recent attempts upon President Ford's life, which caused him to cancel his planned appearance at the MSU — U of M football game, are not the way to change the political direction of this country. Another death is not the answer.

Ford caused hundreds of needless deaths in the Mayaguez incident. Ford and his Secretary of State have threatened war against the oil exporting nations. Ford and his Secretary of Defense have threatened to use nuclear weapons in South Korea and elsewhere. Ford authorized the sale of nine billion dollars of military equipment to such countries as Iran, Saudi Arabia, South Africa and Israel, governments which perpetrate the most severe political repression upon people within their power. Ford and his advisers have announced their intention to use U.S. food surpluses as a means of expanding U.S. control over the starving nations of the world. Ford sees nothing wrong with the CIA, which has organized assassination attempts upon foreign heads of state and has helped to overthrow democratically elected governments, such as Allende's in Chile.

The President has ordered or approved the deaths of thousands of people around the world. Yet, it is foolish to think such killing can be stopped by a presidential assassination. Ford does nothing that his predecessors in office — Kennedy, Johnson and Nixon — did not do. Their removal from office has not stopped the worldwide use of terror, violence and death by the U.S. government, and neither will Ford's removal from office, by a bullet or by other means.

No, the resort to violence is not simply the President's doing; rather, it is characteristic of the U.S. government and the economic system it represents. Nothing short of changing that system will put a halt to it.

The continuing resort to violence by the U.S. government may seem irrational, immoral and contrary to the ideals upon which this nation was founded. Yet, threatening the oil exporting countries, giving aid to cruel dictatorships like that of Park Chung Hee in South Korea, "destabilizing" the former Chilean government, selling arms to repressive governments, and using food supplies to bring profits to U.S. agribusiness and starvation to the world's poor are the foreign policies of the U.S. government. These are the policies by which foreign governments are encouraged to be friendly to U.S. owned multinational corporations. Far from being irrational, the use of violence insures continuing U.S. corporate ownership and control of businesses in such places as South Africa and South Korea, an increasing flow of billions of dollars in profits from the poor nations of the world into the pockets of the American rich, and the maintenance in power of foreign ruling elites who are friendly to U.S. multinational corporations, however hated those governments may be by their populations.

People who are opposed to assassination and the systematic use of violence necessarily oppose the use of U.S. power to support corporate interests abroad. They must demand an end to CIA involvement in other countries, we must demand a cut in the military budget, we must demand that the U.S. government never be allowed to employ nuclear weapons, we must demand that all aid and arms to repressive governments be stopped, we must demand an end to the use of force to manipulate hungry nations into subservience to U.S. corporate interests. In no other way can we put an end to the system of American violence.

... to smoke or wear magenta

William F. Buckley

They have made a pretty good effort in recent months to adjust to the problem of the anti-smoker, so that now when we board an airplane we are politely asked, "Smoking, or non-smoking, sir?" I have been giving routinely the answer, "I don't smoke, but I don't mind it if others do" — the only answer I could plausibly give, unless my wife and I occupied separate dining rooms.

Of course such an answer is the horrible equivalent of saying at a cocktail party, when asked "What can I bring you from the bar?" — "Anything. Anything at all." People who say that mean to be accommodating. Actually, they merely confuse and exasperate. I'd rather a guest asked me for a Brandy Alexander than for "anything at all." To be sure, I would have to learn to make a Brandy Alexander.

But there remain uncrystallized civil accommodations, notably the typewriter. Now I am, for reasons unknown and irrelevant, the most instinctively undisturbed of men. I even hesitate to hang on the door-knob outside my hotel room the sign that says DO NOT DISTURB — without first attempting to write in, "Please." It horrifies me as much as the English that we decorate our national parks with such barbed-wire phrases as "KEEP OFF THE GRASS." I'd have made a very good Jap. All the above on the understanding, of course, that when the bugles sound, I am ready and dressed to bomb Pearl Harbor.

Like other journalists, I am saddled with the problems of The Typewriter. Wherever I go, I must use it. No, I don't mean at restaurants, or at public receptions at the White House or at funeral processions. But other times: notably, on planes and trains.

The other day, traveling New York-Washington, I elected to go by AMTRAK, thinking to have my dinner and begin typing my notes for a television program that would begin at 9 in the morning, followed by a second beginning at 10:15. I chatted with a friend during the brief dinner hour, then went to work. I had no sooner begun to type when I was accosted by a tall middle-aged man, with the bearing of an ex-colonel, who approached me and said in tones loud enough to sound over the 100 m.p.h. noise of a train whistling through the night on tracks laid down during the Grant Administration: "I want you to know," he said without any introductory civility, "that I think you are the rudest man I have ever seen. My wife and I paid over 60 dollars to travel on this train and to have a little peace and quiet, and all we get is the sound of your typewriter." He marched away, and all eyes were on me. Did I want to move? The porter asked me. Move where? I replied — the car was full.

I resumed typing but, actually, I found that I was not concentrating on my work. Suddenly every stroke of a key sounded like an acetylene torch triggered under a honeymooner's bed. It is a psychological cliché: the ticking of a clock that is entirely unnoticed can be made — in a movie, say — to sound like the rumbling of a juggernaut merely by having somebody say casually, "When that clock reaches midnight, London will be destroyed."

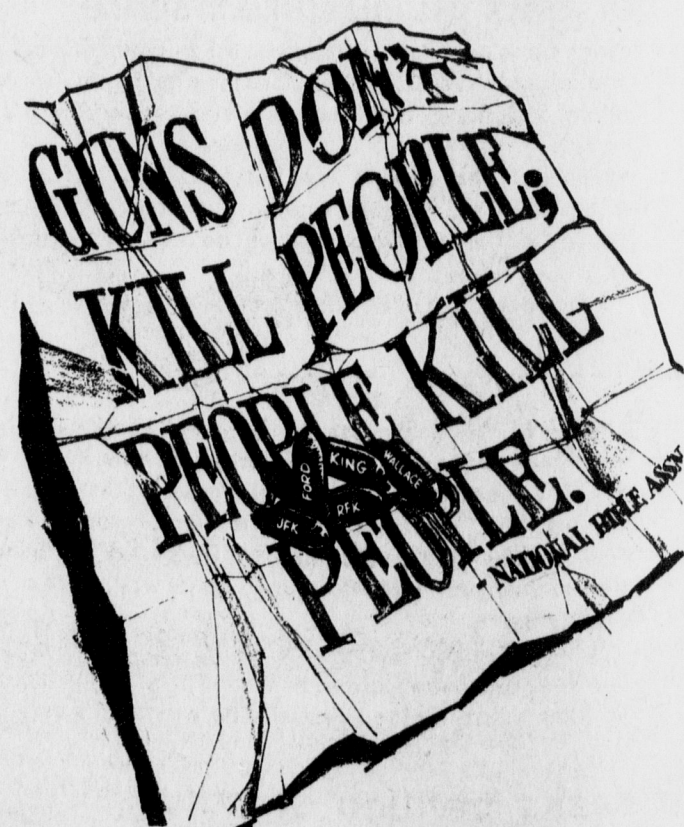

Every note I tapped sounded louder than the others. Every pause between strokes sounded like a provocative attempt at cacophony. People around me who had been dozing, or reading, utterly unaware of the sound of the typewriter, were suddenly looking at me malevolently. This I'd have understood easily enough if they knew what I was writing. But for all they knew, I was copying out "Twinkle Twinkle Little Star..."

I don't like rules, but they can be liberating. If the sign says, "Smoking Permitted Aft Of These Seats," then it is only a matter of ascertaining which way is aft before lighting up; and nobody has a legitimate case against you. You guessed it. I think they should get around to signs that say "Typing Permitted Aft Of These Seats." Aft of those seats could put you with one foot in the baggage compartment, but at least you would have your own turf.

Some will say that, really, we are asked to make too many concessions: that people should try to curb their sensibilities. There is a case for this too. I don't like magenta. Should I have said to the gentleman on the train: "I'll make a deal, pal. I'll stop typing if you will tell your wife to go to the ladies' room and come back dressed in another color — any other color." "Magenta Permitted Aft Of These Seats." To be sure, we are left without a solution for the man aboard an airplane who can't stand wings. Washington Star Syn.

THE NO-GUN THEORY

MARTY SOMMERNESS

Cherries, cherries and more cherries this summer with a visit by the innocuous big honcho fudge, President Gerald Rudolph Ford, who participated in the 49th annual National Cherry Festival.

For those who are not devotees of the red orbs, the Grand Traverse region grows so many cherries that Traverse City is the "World's Cherry Capital," by authority of the state legislature.

After the last hurrah and the festival had closed shop for another year—after Ford had split for D.C.—500,000 fudgies had left more than five tons of garbage on the streets of Traverse City.

Quite a gift.

Traverse City merchants went all out to cater to the fudgies during the festival week. The fudgies could buy anything they wanted—made from cherries or constructed from a cherry pattern. Anything at all.

Stores sold underwear with cherry patterns, cherry wine, cherry cheese, cherry soda pop, cherry pie, cherry butter, chocolate covered cherries, ripe cherries, cherry red t-shirts, almost-ripe cherries, post cards with photographs of cherries, unripe or over-ripe cherries, cosmetics made from cherry pits, cherry cheesecake and of course, cherry fudge, made in honor of the world's cherry capital.

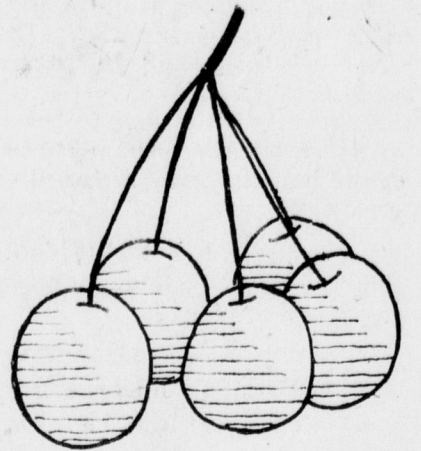

The city even has an ordinance in effect stating the legal minimum of cherries that may be used in cherry pies destined for public sale—to help keep the honor of the cherry capital sterling, or cherry red as the case may be.

Then the cherry harvest began. As low man on the newsroom totem pole, I soon learned to loath cherries. I wrote dozens of stories about cherry this and cherry that. Whenever some governmental bureaucracy made any decision about cherries, such as what price the fruit would be sold at or how much of the crop would be harvested, good old Jimmy Olson Marty got stuck with the story.

Whenever a change in the weather occurred—a heat wave, a cold snap, a storm, no storm, hail, lots of rain, no rain—a story always had to be written about the viability of the cherry crop. Why did the gods decree that I had to write cherry weather stories? I even got allergic to the bloody red berries when I once worked in a canning factory.

George Washington had the right idea when he started chopping down those pernicious trees. Too bad those fellows in the cherry red coats side-tracked him.

Life is not always a bowl of cherries, but a summer in Traverse City is far from the pits.

New York City is a summer festival, Traverse City is a summer haven for the craziest of the crazies. I know, since I am summer as a newsroom intern for the one called itself "Northern Michigan's Greatest Daily," the Traverse City Eagle.

Everybody knows where Traverse City is, almost everybody. On state road 1, it is that little yellow acne pimple on

PIRGIM REPORTS

Getting out before the holocaust

If you or your family live within 20 miles of Huron, Monroe, Midland, Charlevoix, Benton Harbor, Michigan, you are among the one and a half million Michigan residents who would be required to evacuate homes in the event of a nuclear accident at the plants operating or under construction.

Under the rules of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, utilities are required to develop emergency operations plans for power plants—which include the evacuation of everyone within 20 miles of the plant.

Perhaps you are surprised to learn that such plans exist. If so, you are like most Michigan residents who are kept uninformed about the minimal precautions and regulations placed on the operations of nuclear power plants.

Yes, when you consider that 20 miles is only slightly greater than the radius within which the consequences of a major accident are expected to be felt.

Also very minimal when you consider that a 1965 Atomic Energy Commission report projected that a major nuclear accident could result in 45,000 deaths, 100,000 injuries, and damages of $17 billion, including "an area of disaster... equal in size to the state of Pennsylvania."

Unfortunately, this study was suppressed for eight years, until finally forced into the public domain as a result of a Freedom of Information lawsuit.

Isn't such an accident very unlikely? Well, no one can accurately predict the results of a nuclear accident. And if the unlikely results could be cataclysmic.

Power plants cannot explode like a nuclear bomb. The most serious accident would be the result of a loss of cooling water, which would result in overheating of the plant and melting of the nuclear core. This in turn would cause powerful chemical explosions and the widespread dispersion of solid, liquid and gaseous radioactive material.

The reactor itself would melt into the earth below it, and no one has been able to determine how deep it would go or what would stop it. This is known in the trade as a "China Accident," since, as far as we know, the reactor could go all the way through the earth.

If loss of cooling water threatened such a disaster, the reactor's Emergency Core Cooling System (ECCS) is designed to immediately bring in new coolant. However, this system has never been operationally tested. It has been tested with a computer simulation six times, and failed to operate on all six tests.

In 1966 there was a partial core melt at the Fermi I breeder reactor in Monroe, Michigan. The explosion was narrowly averted. The reactor was permanently shut down and dismantled.

In April 1975, the ECCS at the Brown's Ferry Power Plant, in northern Alabama, was totally disabled by a fire started by a maintenance worker using a candle to test for an air leak. Had the main cooling system failed, while the ECCS was disabled, the reactor would have exploded.

On August 6 of this year, the thirtieth anniversary of the atomic bombing of Hiroshima, PIRGIM filed a petition with the Michigan Public Service Commission asking the Commission to order all utilities under its jurisdiction annually to mail their customers summaries of the relevant evacuation plans.

The existence and nature of these plans must be made clear to all of Michigan's citizens. In the event a nuclear accident took place and an evacuation were required, it would be disastrous without adequate knowledge and preparation.

Evacuation would be even more difficult in winter snow or rush hour traffic. And, of course, nuclear evacuation has special problems of its own, such as the fact that victims of radiological contamination become radiologically dangerous themselves to people who try to assist them.

One of the major problems of our technological society has been our willingness to embark upon technological adventures without examining full costs and implications. Nuclear power is perhaps the most critical and potentially serious of these moves. We must examine it critically and cautiously.

Under Michigan law, the Public Service Commission has 90 days to either grant PIRGIM's petition or give reasons for denial. If it is granted, we will have taken a major step to ensure public safety and to promote a continuing debate on the whole question of nuclear power.

(PIRGIM REPORTS is a column provided to campus newspapers by the Public Interest Research Group in Michigan, containing reports for PIRGIM's student constituency on the effects of PIRGIM's work, information from the Capitol acquired by the PIRGIM professional staff, and current issues PIRGIM is researching or working on.)

Letter policy

The Opinion Page welcomes all letters. Readers should follow a few rules to insure that as many letters as possible appear in print.

All letters should be typed on 65-space lines and triple spaced. Letters must be signed, and include local address, student, faculty or staff standing—if any—and phone number.

Letters should be 25 lines or less and may be edited for conciseness to fit more letters on the page.

No unsigned letters will be accepted. Names are withheld from publication only for good cause.

Liked 'Fantasticks'

After two years of reading State News reviews, the vast majority of which appear to be little more than desperate attempts on the part of the reviewer to prove his sophistication and refinement, I suppose I should be inured to pretentious, amateurish hatchet jobs. But reading Darryl Grant's "review" of the Players' Gallery's first-rate production of "The Fantasticks," I reached the limits of my tolerance.

To take issue with specific points in Mr. Grant's piece would be pointless. Suffice it to say that he has obviously refused to look an inch beneath the surface of "The Fantasticks," a beautifully written, timeless parable containing some of the finest music I've ever heard. Thank God that Mr. Grant had the common decency to admit, however reluctantly, the fact that the audience loved it.

Special prosecutor issues final report

The Watergate prosecution report said Nixon escaped indictment for Watergate crimes because of murkiness in the Constitution. The report said a constitutional amendment should clarify whether an incumbent president can be indicted.

"The worst time to answer such questions is when they arise," the report said. "Perhaps the best time is the present, while the memory of relevant events is fresh."

The key proposal was for constitutional clarification of whether a president can be indicted or only impeached and removed from office.

Another was that the president's campaign manager or top campaign officials should not become attorney general, as John Mitchell was.

The prosecutors were adamant against creating a permanent special prosecutor, because he would be "largely immune from the accountability that prosecutors and other public officials constantly face." This could become "a potential for abuse of power that far exceeds any enforcement gains that might ensue," the report said.

Here, in brief, are the recommendations made by the Watergate Special Prosecution Force in its final report:

•CAMPAIGN WORKERS

The President should not nominate and the Senate should refuse to confirm any person nominated for attorney general, U.S. attorney or a high Justice Dept. position who served in a high-level position in the President's campaign.

Presidential nominees for heads of such agencies as the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Internal Revenue Service and Secret Service should be highly qualified persons with independent reputations who have not played leading roles in the President's political campaigns.

•NATIONAL SECURITY

The administration should establish a policy and disclose it publicly stating the precise power claimed by the administration in the name of "national security" to authorize warrantless foreign intelligence searches and seizures.

Congress should exercise effective policy oversight of law enforcement and intelligence agencies to provide a restraint against the possible misuse of such agencies.

The Central Intelligence Agency, FBI and Internal Revenue Service should formulate written policies stating purposes for which intelligence is to be gathered and the methods used to obtain the information. The policies should be submitted to a presidentially appointed domestic intelligence board, which would have the authority to make public recommendations and hear justifications for each policy.

•JUSTICE DEPT.

Each departmental employee should have to record in memorandum form all oral communications with persons attempting political persuasion or securing out-of-channel access to departmental personnel.

•CONFLICT OF INTEREST

Government attorneys should be required to press for a judicial ruling on whether an attorney representing several clients poses a conflict of interest and, if a conflict is found, the attorney should be replaced.

•FREEDOM OF INFORMATION

The Freedom of Information Act should be amended to make clear that information furnished on a confidential basis to Federal law enforcement agencies is protected from disclosure.

•LAW ENFORCEMENT AGENCIES

Such agencies as the Secret Service, FBI and IRS should respond to presidential direction in broad policy areas but be prohibited from becoming part of the President's political apparatus.

•CAMPAIGN CONTRIBUTIONS

The Justice Dept. should establish a policy to prosecute aggressively government contractors, unions and corporations that make illegal political contributions.

Election laws should be amended to permit officers and shareholders of corporations with government contracts to be prosecuted for making illegal political donations. The statute of limitations of illegal contributions should be extended from three to five years. Persons who lease property to the federal government should be prohibited from making political contributions.

•FEDERAL ELECTION COMMISSION

The Federal Election Commission's authority should be expanded to permit it to publish campaign conduct standards and investigate campaign tactics.

Public hearing scheduled concerning status of SWU

The ASMSU board has set a date for a public hearing between University administrators and representatives of the Student Workers Union (SWU) concerning the status of SWU.

The meeting will be at 7 p.m. Tuesday in room 328 Student Services Bldg.

Only the ASMSU board, two representatives from SWU and two representatives from the University will be allowed to attend the meeting, but it will be broadcast over radio station WMSN, 6.40 on your AM dial.

Members of the press who wish to attend the meeting must contact ASMSU president Brian Raymond at least 24 hours before the meeting.

Each group will be permitted to give their point of view concerning the status of SWU.

The hearing will allow the ASMSU board to hear both sides of the issue concerning the revocation of the SWU's student status, their university account and the removal of the phone from SWU's office.

After the hearing ASMSU will decide what appropriate action to take regarding the matter.

Kelley joins in fight to protect preserve

Michigan Attorney General Frank Kelley has joined the fight to save the Henry Ford Wildlife Preserve in Dearborn.

Kelley announced Thursday he will join in an effort by a citizens group which is seeking a court-ordered halt to construction on the preserve by the Ford Motor Land Development Corp., a subsidiary of the Ford Motor Co.

The suit is an attempt to block construction of 500 condominiums which would be a part of the huge Fairlane Development project.

Kelley called the 130-acre beech and maple forest "an irreplaceable natural resource."

"The purpose of the lawsuit is not to block commercialization of the area, but to create a more environmentally responsive project," Kelley said.

"We look back and remember all the natural and recreational areas lost to brick and cement structures," Kelley said. "If we had taken greater care in designing our cities to benefit people, our urban centers certainly would be better places to live in."

TV series studies women's struggle

By KATHY ESSELMAN
State News Reviewer

"Shoulder to Shoulder" recounts the struggles of the women's suffrage movement in Great Britain. It follows the fortunes of the Pankhurst family who acted as the motive force in implementing the legislative policy to give women the vote.

The PBS-TV series does an admirable job of tracing the interaction of the suffrage movement with rise of the labor unions. Both movements grew to prominence during the waning days of the empire. The movement rose to public attention as the age of industrialism devoured the English countryside and the masses gained identity under the red flag.

"Shoulder to Shoulder" lacks the heightened rhetoric which enlivened the women's suffrage movement. It seems dry measured prose which documented the muckraking Fleet Street newspapers which fueled the cause and perhaps inadvertently built up momentum for its acceptance. Cool and considered in its approach, the series displays little understanding that history is written in blood, and the facts constitute only its chalk-white bones.

The series, though created and produced by women, is written and directed by men. This might explain the cool organization and lack of involvement which characterizes the series so far. There seems to be no lack of planning or organization but rather a lack of emotional involvement.

Like its illustrious cousin, "Upstairs, Downstairs," "Shoulder to Shoulder" is born of woman. Verity Lambert, Midge McKenzie and Georgia Brown created and produced this look at the roots of the modern women's movement. Lambert acts as producer and McKenzie as story editor.

The second episode—which aired Sunday at 9 p.m. and will be rerun Saturday at 9 p.m. on WKAR-TV, channel 23—introduced Georgia Brown as Annie Kenney. This working class woman joined the Pankhursts in their work after a rally and later distinguished herself as an organizer who conquered London with but two pounds in her purse. Georgia Brown creates a delightful portrait of this irresistible steamroller of a woman. She plays her as a "character" with a working class accent, a knack for organization and an irresistible enthusiasm which obliterates obstacles and objections.

The supporting cast measured up to the abnormally high standard of acting that seems normal in these British imports. British imports are to television what Rolls Royce is to cars, not flashy but nonetheless first rate. Patricia Quinn endows Christobel Pankhurst with energy. Angela Down suffers exquisitely as Sylvia Pankhurst. Sian Phillips interprets Emmeline Pankhurst, the mother, with patrician control.

The direction the series has taken emphasizes the political and organizational aspects of the movement. Although performances were uniformly good and the photography was attractive, this series lacks the extras that would come with a more generous budget. It is a BBC production in association with Warner Brothers, and the BBC's current budgetary strictures seem evidenced in this work.

"Shoulder to Shoulder" proves interesting and informative, but looks too much like a history text and too little like a drama. It airs as part of "Masterpiece Theater" Sunday nights at 9 on WKAR-TV, with reruns on the following Saturdays at 9 p.m. and Thursdays at noon.

Banjo player Rosenbaum will appear at coffeehouse

Banjo and fiddle player Art Rosenbaum will perform at 8:30 p.m. today for the Ten Pound Fiddle coffeehouse in the MSU Union grill.

Rosenbaum sings and plays southern mountain banjo breakdowns and songs, unaccompanied ballads from the U.S. and the British Isles, fiddle tunes from Appalachia, the Midwest and Ireland, and guitar blues.

The concert is sponsored by the MSU Folksong Society. Admission is $2.00 or $1.50 for MSU Folksong Society members.

The folksong society will also be conducting open hoots every Tuesday evening at 8:30 p.m. in the Union grill. Admission is 50 cents for anyone wanting to sing, play, or just listen.

Tim Weisberg undaunted by delay

MARTY SOMMERNESS
State News Reviewer

Tim Weisberg must have been a little bit of a coffeehouse regular at the Mariah Coffeehouse on Wednesday evening, a fact which was not lost on the audience. Weisberg, no longer accepts the usual house engagements, but he liked past appearances at the McDonel Hall Kiva, he had an exception and returned to the MSU for two performances.

about returning to MSU again. The first of the quintet's two performances, scheduled for 8 p.m., was pushed back until 10 p.m. The delay was caused by a faulty sound system — a problem that Mariah seems plagued with far too often.

After the performance started, the sell-out crowd heated the kiva into a veritable sweltering black hole of Calcutta. The steamy, oppressive heat did not have adverse effects on the musicians or the audience, but the bugs in the sound system still were not worked out by the time the set started. "We're sorry you had to sweat so long in the heat," Weisberg said. "We were having some problems with the sound system. Thank you for your understanding, we appreciate it."

Weisberg, showing his favor for Mariah, wore a green and white MSU jersey with "75" and "Tim" printed on it when he and his sidemen took to the stage.

berg's tones, probably due to the sound system problems. Despite all of the hassles of the concert, Weisberg's music communicated with the audience. When the group softened down for the ending of a song, the five musicians held the wall-to-wall crowd of people in an almost hypnotic trance.

The warm, humid air hung like a pall over the crowd that had jammed the kiva to see and hear a musician who is attracting a growing national audience. The perspiring people did not seem to mind the heat. They were there for music and music they got. Weisberg is a true professional.

If Weisberg liked Mariah, the Mariah audience certainly liked Weisberg, for they gave him a whistling, cheering standing ovation in the pressure-cooker kiva.

The first set was two hours late. The room was jammed with people. The air conditioning broke down and the room was a pressure cooker. Even the sound system did not work. Despite the sweltering heat and the sound system, flutist Tim Weisberg and his four band were able to draw an enthusiastic ovation from the audience at Mariah Coffeehouse Wednesday night in McDonel Hall. Problems or not, Weisberg and the Mariah staff made sure the show went on.

Bills would control radioactive transport

By MIKE ARNETT
State News Staff Writer

Inadequately regulated transportation of radioactive materials is creating the potential for accidents that could result in hundreds of deaths, a State House subcommittee was told Thursday.

The testimony was made at a House Public Health subcommittee public hearing on House Bills 5317 and 5318. The bills would set up more stringent control over radioactive material transportation than is now exercised by the federal government.

The bills are the result of a 1974 report by the Public Interest Research Group in Michigan (PIRGIM) which detailed the carelessness with which radioactive medicine and waste materials are transported.

Marion Anderson, PIRGIM projects director and author of the report, told the subcommittee of a number of deficiencies in the current way in which radioactive materials are transported:

•The lack of training of truck drivers, inspection of trucks and warning systems in trucks in case of leaks.

•The inadequate manufacture, testing and inspection of the casks used to transport radioactive materials.

•The failure of transporters to take weather and road conditions into account when the trucks are routed.

A former PIRGIM volunteer, Carol Smith, told the subcommittee of the time she followed a truck containing radioactive wastes.

"The truck went very fast and passed cars on curves," Smith said. "When the driver stopped to eat he left the truck running and the door open. The material could have been stolen for bomb-making purposes."

Testimony by Barbara Clark of the Michigan Student Environmental Confederation brought out the potential problem that the legislation may be an illegal preemption of federal government powers.

"We do not think these problems should preclude action on this bill," Clark said.

"The bill was written as a result of concern that existing federal regulations over the transportation of radioactive materials are inadequate.

"We believe the final decision, should the bill be enacted into law, should rest with the courts," she said.

Rep. David Bonior, D-Mt. Clemens, sponsor of the bills, said several similar court cases in other states have been decided in favor of the states.

HB 5317 allows for state involvement in the regulation of radioactive material transportation.

HB 5318 creates a radioactive waste transportation commission which would implement specific rules to increase the safety of nuclear material transportation. It designates fines of from $5,000 to $50,000 for each violation of those rules. The subcommittee will hold public hearings in Kalamazoo and Southfield before bringing the bill before the full committee.

Wilkinson's job includes more than signing paychecks balanced budget. Wilkinson's responsibilities go beyond fiscal decision-making, though. He is also in charge of the management of campus housing and food service, as well as maintenance and the physical plant.

"I really have less direct fiscal contact than most people think," he said. "I spend most of my time with people and resolving various problems. I'm really another type of ombudsman."

Wilkinson's office is run rather informally, he said. People know their responsibilities and come to him with the major problems. And there is a lot of shared decision-making.

Planning for the budget is a full-time project in itself.

"We've already started on next year's budget, and we're already 30 to 40 days behind," he said.

One problem he is busy with right now is whether or not the state will pay for the University utility bills. Under the present proposal, the state would pay all utility expenses after receiving an audit of the year's expenses.

Gov. Milliken has vetoed the bill, calling it an open-ended request that may not fit into the state budget.

If the proposal is defeated, it would mean a $2 million deficit in the MSU budget, because the cost of energy had not even been figured into this year's expenses, Wilkinson said. It would also be the first year that MSU had not maintained a balanced budget.

Rising energy costs have been a major factor in the increased cost of student housing in residence halls and married housing, he said.

Despite the fact that he had been either acting vice president or vice president for seven years, Wilkinson says he never tires of his job.

But Wilkinson is probably best known for his signature at the bottom of your paycheck, or for his healthy array of African violets.

"If you look in most offices in the Administration Bldg., you see them, and they all come from right here," he said with pride as he pointed to a bunch of plants near the window. "My secretary does all the work, but I take all the credit."

Coed halls a success at MSU

We seem to have developed a pretty good mix of the various types of housing," he said, "and options such as quiet wings, coed by suite and single sex floors and residence halls as examples of what MSU offers on-campus dwellers. Gary North, coordinator of residence halls programs, and a member of the committee that drafted the original proposal, stated that "there is nothing opening any different on the coed floors than on any other."

Student response to the coed floors has been overwhelmingly favorable, both this year and last. The views expressed by members and resident assistants (RAs) alike seem to indicate a more relaxed atmosphere than that of the single sex floors to which the residence hall veterans were accustomed.

Keith O'Neal, 456 W. Wilson Hall, one of the floor's RAs, offered his opinion. "Being on the coed floor cuts out a lot of the big problems of being an RA, like freshmen, triples and pimps. It's a more mature atmosphere and there's more consideration for others."

Barb Abramson, 489 W. Wilson Hall, frankly described the coed floor as a "more realistic way of living. You learn to know guys as people," she said, "Not as prospective boyfriends."

These sentiments are echoed by members of other coed floors on campus as well. Barb Patek, 268 N. Case Hall, the floor's RA sees no problems resulting from the living arrangement on her floor, and feels that "everything is more natural and at ease."

A male student who lived in Case Hall last year and opted to try out the new coed floor, Tim Dewalt, 258 N. Case Hall, said, "An all-guy floor has a sort of team atmosphere that a coed floor doesn't have. I'm really enjoying it so far."

Case Hall manager Jack Strickland noted that the only problem he could connect to coed living on residence hall floors was the question of intramural football competition. He feels that a coed floor may be at a disadvantage to an all male floor.

Despite the fact that there was a big turnover this year on the floors that are coed for the second year, returning students still view it favorably. The large turnover is in part attributed to the fact that the original floors were comprised solely of upper classmen.

Sue Wainwright, 558 W. Holmes Hall, RA on another coed floor, described the older atmosphere in this way: "People are interacting as human beings, and that seems to be a big problem that I see on other floors."

Another RA, Sue Farhat, 569 E. McDonel Hall, elaborated on that idea, saying that coed floor living "takes away the games between all male and all female floors."

In accordance with the modifications of the policy of housing officials, several transfer students were assigned to the coed floors this fall. Due to an oversight many of these students were not notified prior to their arrival on campus, but as of yet none have objected to the living situation. Most seem to be enjoying it as much as those who signed up for it.

Tom Rourke, 476 W. Wilson Hall, never lived in a residence hall before transferring to MSU and was assigned to the coed floor. "It's a lot of fun," he said, "Not loud and noisy like you'd think."

In an effort to de-triple some of the very crowded halls some coed floors are now housing freshmen students. Linda Orman, 671 S. Wonders Hall, recently moved from a triple to the coed floor, and feels that it is "just great."

Coed residence hall floors seem to have lived up to the expectations of students and administrators alike, and therefore will be a permanent housing option in the five residence halls in which they are now being offered.

LUNCH TIME, OR ANYTIME AT THE CAVE...

An intimate dining experience

For a welcome change from the crowded, busy street known as Grand River, why not walk down the flight of stairs at 110 Abbott road to the Cave of the Candles? You will be immediately enveloped in the rich and secluded atmosphere, far removed from the din of streetnoise. The lounge and restaurant area transmit the feeling of intimacy and warmth, with the numerous nooks, crannies, and enclaves in which to dine and drink.

Why not enjoy this intimate dining atmosphere today, for lunch? Lunchtime at The Cave features such items as eggs benedict, quick lorraine, various salads, and always a lunchtime special, for something different. A fine array of sandwiches and complete dinners are also available for lunch. The service is quick and efficient, and the food is prepared with the care the Cave is noted for. Make lunchtime a special time, and dine at The Cave!

The Cave of the Candles for dinner has always been a treat. Appetizers include such delicacies as escargots, blue point oysters, New England clam chowder, and Caesar salad for two, to name a few. Entrees include live lobsters (flown in fresh daily), various steaks, roast Long Island duckling, and an offering of seafoods (crab legs, scampi, fresh trout and others). There are also dinners for two. A wine steward is at your service to aid on wine selections, to complete your meal.

Perhaps you might like to try the Sunday Brunch at the Cave. The brunch runs from 10:30 A.M. to 2:30 P.M., featuring different types of eggs, fresh fruit and quick lorraine.

You might also like to try a drink at The Cave Lounge, with delicious hors d'oeuvre to accompany, starting at 4:00 p.m.

MSU icers win scrimmage

MSU's hockey team will have its second opportunity tomorrow night to become acquainted with game-type conditions when the Spartans conduct their annual Green-White game at Munn Arena.

The Spartans had their first taste of action Wednesday night when they crushed Western Michigan, 9-5, in an exhibition at Munn Arena.

Although the score was in MSU's favor, assistant coach Alex Terpay believes other benefits were reaped from the verdict over Western.

"We had a chance to give ice time to everyone, and that's needed after a couple of weeks of practice," Terpay said. "The Western game gave the players the chance to see the finer points we had been stressing in practice."

Terpay also noted that several freshmen players performed well against WMU, thus giving the Spartans a basis for team depth.

On the negative side, Terpay cited the need for more conditioning on the part of some players and improvement in the defensive play by some forwards.

A total of eight lines and five goalies will dress and play in tomorrow's scrimmage. That will be the last action the Spartans see until next Friday when Ohio State invades Munn for the first regular season game.

Aside from giving the players an opportunity for game action, Spartan fans are welcome to come early tomorrow for a photo session. Players will be available for photos and autographs from 6:45 p.m. to 7:20 p.m.

The scrimmage, sponsored by the Blue-Line club will begin at 7:30. There will be a $1 admission charge.

MSU tries to end Gopher jinx

By LARRY MORGAN
State News Sports Writer

If MSU can regroup its offense and come up with a victory Saturday, the Spartans will do something only one other MSU team has done.

The only victory by a Spartan team at Minneapolis came in 1953 when Biggie Munn's first Big Ten team won 21-0 enroute to a championship tie and the Rose Bowl bid.

This year, however, a championship and Rose Bowl bid don't appear too likely for either squad. Both the Gophers and MSU are 3-2 overall and 0-2 in the conference.

However while MSU has lost to OSU and U-M, Minnesota dropped games to Indiana and Illinois. The last time MSU and Minnesota met was 1972 when the Gophers beat the Spartans, 14-10, at Minneapolis.

Saturday's contest is the highlight of Minnesota's annual Alumni Homecoming weekend, with kickoff slated for 2:30 p.m. East Lansing time.

MSU coaches said Minnesota has a fine offensive team with the ability to move the ball. But while the team shows basic football skills in one game, the Gophers are also capable of running a multiple offense.

The Gophers also feature some fine Michigan players, including three starters. Team captain and All-America candidate, Keith Simons, a 250-pound defensive tackle from Belleville, will be starting his 39th consecutive game for Minnesota. Simons started his first game as a freshman and hasn't missed a game yet.

Tony Dungy

Starting quarterback, Tony

Dungy, a Jackson Parkside graduate, is having a successful year passing. Last week against Illinois, he passed for 216 yards and three touchdowns.

A former Flint Central student, George Washington, alternates with Simons between defensive tackle and nose guard. Washington leads the club in tackles with 49 in five games.

Other Michigan recruits include Frank Mosko, the Gopher's punter with a 39.1 yard average; Gary Acromite of Lincoln Park, an offensive guard; Ron Wrobel of Detroit Servite, who plays defensive end; and linebacker Steve Craine from St. Clair Shores Lakeview.

Minnesota also features two fine running backs in Bubby Holmes with 327 yards and a 4.7 average and J.D. Pride who has 325 yards and a 4.1 average. Pride is their biggest running back at 6-5, 220 pounds.

While trying to stop Minnesota's offensive attack on one hand, MSU will try to move more consistently offensively, Bill Davis, assistant to Coach Denny Stolz, said.

"If we can keep the same backfield intact for more than one half, we can move the football into the end zone,"

Keith Simon

Davis said.

"We can definitely move the football, as we've felt we could, against anyone this year," said. Levi Jackson has improved steadily throughout the year after suffering a bruised rib and a hip pointer against U-M last week. Spartan coaches expect he will be in good shape for game.

Defensive back John Breckner, however, will not make the trip to Minneapolis. He injured his ankle Saturday and it has improved enough so he can play.

One interesting sidelight to the battle of the coaches is the fact that both former Spartan assistants are coaching.

The Gophers' Cal Stolz served as MSU's ends coach 10 years, 1959-1968, before moving on to head coach Wake Forest. He took over Minnesota in 1972. Stolz served as defensive coordinator for MSU for two seasons, 1971-1972, before jumping up to top spot following Dan Daugherty's retirement.

I.M. Notes

Netters handed first loss

By ANN WILLIAMSON
State News Sports Writer

As MSU women's tennis coach Elaine Hatton said, "it couldn't have been any closer."

The Spartans gave U-M its toughest battle of the season Wednesday afternoon on MSU's varsity tennis courts, but it still wasn't enough as the Wolverines handed the Spartans their first loss of the season, 5-4.

"The girls did their best," Hatton said. "Both teams were tied 3-3 at the end of singles, but we lost the match during doubles. It was very, very close."

Diane Selke, "Mike" Kruger and Pam Zwer were the three Spartans who defeated their Wolverine opponents in singles, with Selke taking the number two position, 6-4, 6-3. Kruger winning the number four position, 6-4, 6-4 and Zwer claiming the number five spot, 6-3, 6-2.

Only the number two doubles team of Hicks and Zwer were victorious for the Spartans as they defeated Jody Strom and Missy Pollick, 6-7, 6-4, 6-2.

"I think this match will make the girls work a little harder next time," Hatton said. "They're more determined to win now."

The Spartans will attempt to bounce back from the loss Saturday when they travel to West Lafayette, Indiana to face Purdue.

The Boilermakers currently hold an impressive 6-0 record, and coach Hatton is predicting another tough match for the Spartans.

"We haven't played Purdue in a couple of years but they have a very strong team this year," she said. "I saw some of their girls play at the Dorothy McClure Tournament we competed in earlier this year so I know the match is going to be tough."

"I'm hoping to improve our doubles play this weekend, especially since that's why we lost against U-M. Many girls just don't have much experience in doubles but we've just got to improve there," she added.

The deadline for entering the men's intramural Turkey Trot (cross-country type running event) is noon next Wednesday. The event will begin at 5:30 p.m. Wednesday on Old College Field. Contestants may run individually or as a team member. Teams must be represented at the Scratch Meeting 4:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Old College Field stands. In case of bad weather the meeting will be held in room 208 Men's IM.

Residence hall, fraternity and independent athletic chairmen should begin play-offs to determine their four-men badminton teams. The deadline for leagues is noon Friday, Oct. 17. All matches will be held in G-11 Men's IM. The schedule residence hall — 6 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 28; fraternity — p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 29; independent — 6 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 30.

Tryouts

The MSU lacrosse team will hold tryouts at 3:30 p.m. Tuesday at Old College Field. An interested contact coach Fred Hartman at 355-5878. Stan Ludwig at 332-5185.

Soccer team at Classic

MSU's soccer team goes on a new venture this weekend.

And, if coach Ed Rutherford's team is successful, the Spartans stand a good chance to gain national recognition.

MSU will join Ohio State, Indiana and Wisconsin at Columbus, Ohio, tomorrow and Sunday, for the first annual Big Ten Classic.

"I've always gone into every game I've coached with the idea, my team could win," Rutherford said. "I'm taking the same attitude to Columbus this weekend."

The Spartans square off against the host Buckeyes tomorrow night at 8:30 while Wisconsin and Indiana open the Classic at 6:00 p.m. The winners play at 2:30 Sunday for the championship.

"Ohio State is a strong team. We beat them last year 1-0. And, Indiana was the only team to defeat us last year, so it should be interesting," Rutherford said.

MSU takes a 5-1 record into the Classic. The Spartans defeated Oakland University Wednesday, 1-0, on a goal by Fraser Pahad with 20 minutes left in the game.

Halfback Paul Kennedy sat out the Oakland game and will not make the trip to Columbus. Kennedy is still suffering from a head injury he received during the Albion game.

PEGGY GOSSETT

Lines at the sidelines

Not everything that crashes and clatters wears a helmet, and not everyone who sees action on Saturdays plays football. For each action on the field there is an opposite and equally interesting action on the sideline.

Joe Hunt nearly intercepts a pass and an ABC cameraman rushes down the sideline to photograph the downtrodden U-M receiver but, alas, another gold-jacketed ABC man gallops up with despairing news that he is plugged into the wrong plug. No lin.

Hunt tromps and stomps about the end zone obviously angry about his almost-but-not-quite interception and ABC films it, for that use but on Johnny Carson's football flukes?

A sign goes up in section 12: "MSU beat the blue EZ as ABC." The cameras turn to film the sign but nearly the entire section stands up leaving only the sheet corners visible to cameras.

"Way to go, kids," the cameraman spat.

Perched at the MSU sidelines, a Lansing Police Dept. chaplain noted he was praying for either team to win and explained that even Notre Dame doesn't implore the Lord for a victory.

"It would be a pretty facetious prayer to say, 'Dear Lord, help us win the game,'" the chaplain noted. "Notre Dame prays to play the game right, not to win."

Down the field Sparty pranced like Dancing Bear and allegedly addressed Mt. Olympus for a win. The gods were out to brunch.

It's halftime and 48 signs go up: "We love MSU, ABC and the limp."

Back in action, an MSU coach yanked a Spartan off the field to chew him out. Bo merely chewed his wad of double-bubble. The cameraman atop the scoreboard downed a Coke and tossed the empty cup over the edge of the stadium.

The ball turned over to U-M causing big brother ABC to hustle to the other end of the field, catching unsuspecting Adidas in the tangles, and snaking around ankles and turf chairs with wires. Photographers bang cameras fighting for front row kneeling space and six sets of toes are crushed. Nothing compared to 22 sets of trounced toes on the field.

A sign goes up: "Bethesda: Ring Bells Chimes."

Rowcamp who lined up with horrendously blood-spattered pants looked more like a war casualty than a college athlete. Sports Illustrated should only see him now. The magazine's defensive player of the week was hit again, and rose up from the mottled tackle, with even more crimson stains gushing.

A maize and blue cheerleader lost footage, landed flat on her rear and three MSU fans rose to a standing ovation. ABC filmed the whole blushing incident.

A sign goes up: "Lou Reed is Jack Webb's son." A photographer asks who is Lou Reed. I ask who is Jack Webb.

No matter. The teams trot off the field and Bo extends his paw to Denny. The game is over, done, gone. Apparently we lost but the entertaining sideline scenarios kept some from feeling depressed. For those who indeed watched the field Wordsworth left comfort:

"And nothing will bring back the hour, of splendour in the grass, of glory in the flower; but we will grieve not, rather find strength in what remains behind."

Harriers shoot for top

The MSU women's cross-country team will be traveling to Midland Saturday to compete in the Midwest Amateur Athletics Union (MAAU) Championships.

The Spartans will be looking for a first-place finish Saturday after two straight wins so far this season. The MAAU meet will determine the cross-country state champion, while also qualifying the top ten teams in the meet for the "Meet of Champions" to be held next weekend in Detroit.

SPARTANS FAVORED AGAIN

Golfers host annual invitational

This year's home opener for the MSU women's golf team also happens to be the season finale.

Today and Saturday the Spartans will host their annual Spartane Golf Invitational at Forest Akers Golf Course. The Spartans are favored to win the invitational for the sixth consecutive time. Tee-off times are scheduled for 9:30 a.m. today and 8:45 a.m. Saturday.

"I'm pleased that we will have a field of 75 women for this invitational," coach Mary Fossum said. "Our toughest competition will probably come from Minnesota, since they've got some good depth on their team and Indiana should give us the next best battle."

MSU will be represented by two teams, "green" and "white", and will face squads from U-M, Minnesota, Indiana, Purdue, Ferris State, Bowling Green, Mankato State, St. Mary's College, Central Michigan and Western Michigan, along with individual representatives from Marshall, Wayne State, Oakland University and the University of Cincinnati. Coach Fossum said that while she always expects one of the top five Spartans to win the medal in the invitational, she realizes that the women will be under a sizable amount of pressure this weekend.

"The girls always go out there to win and play the absolutely best game they can and if they miss a shot, I tell them not to worry about it," Fossum said. "It's hard with golf because you never have any kind of releaser like you do with contact sports, but you just can't let one shot affect the rest of your game."

"All the girls have a feeling of excellence for the team and for the school they represent. I'm very proud that they can hold up so well with that kind of pressure behind them," she added.

Spartans representing the "green" team will be captain June Oldman, who won the medal in the invitational last year, Linda Smith, Joan Garety, Karen Escott, Sue Ertl and Jan Bailey. Members of the "white" team are Sheila Tansey, Peg Carlson, Cindy Vollmer, Cindy LeClair, Terri Weber and Laurie Everett.

Top individuals from other teams to watch for are Nancy Bunton from Marshall University, Julie Gumlia and Sue Jaqua from Minnesota, Betsy Richart from U-M and Janina Parrott from Wayne State.
