Michigan's Diggs hits U.S. policies in Angolan war

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — A Michigan congressman who is holding private talks with African diplomats criticized the U.S. involvement in the Angolan war by calling it "Kissinger's Folly."

Rep. Charles Diggs, D - Mich., told newsmen Sunday that it "may be the most serious foreign policy miscalculation" the United States has ever made." More U.S. aid called for

"As an American I am concerned about the U.S. supporting a reactionary faction on the same side as South Africa in what could be a protracted war," Diggs said. "But as a black American I find it unacceptable for the U.S. and the Soviet Union to shed any African blood in this war by proxy and that two superpowers should arm Africans to kill other Africans."

However, the leaders of two Western backed factions in the Angolan civil war called for more U.S. aid and said they would give up their leadership as a peace move if Agostinho Neto of the Soviet - supported Popular Movement did the same.

U.S. criticized "I am not fighting to be president," said Jonas Savimbi of the National Union (UNITA). Holden Roberto of the National Front (FNLA), loosely allied with UNITA, said he would also step down. Both men were excluded from debates on the second day of the Organization of African Unity peace summit on Angola at the request of pro - Popular Movement (MPLA) delegates. Neto is not attending the conference. Roberto called for a cease - fire and elections in Angola. Both criticized the United States as providing skimpy support against the MPLA. Savimbi said the U.S. Senate vote to cut off arms aid was an abdication of American responsibility. But he said UNI-TA could keep on fighting without U.S. weapons, with the aim of a military stalemate and eventual political compro-

Other splits reported

At the suggestion of Ugandan President Idi Amin, the OAU chairman, delegates held their Sunday morning session at the Hilton Hotel. In the afternoon they returned to the Africa Hall conference center.

Amin had apparently hoped to establish an informal, friendly atmosphere by keep-ing the meeting small — fewer than 100 participants around a u - shaped table in the hotel ballroom. But some presidents objected that the room was too small to hold all their advisers.

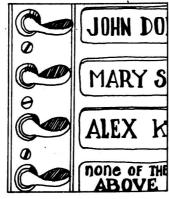

African diplomats said two resolutions were before the summit, one calling for an Angolan coalition and the other favoring the MPLA. Delegates were reported split evenly between the two.

Another split was reported on the wording of an eventual OAU condemnation of foreign involvement in Angola. One version, using relatively soft language, attacked South Africa but did not mention other nations. The other specifically condemned all outside intervention, including the United States and the Soviet

'None of the above' voting option proposed for Michigan residents

By RALPH FRAMMOLINO State News Staff Writer

A new proposal in the state legislature would leave an out for voters who feel they are choosing between hemorrhoids and an abscessed tooth when they pull the lever on election day. Rep. Mike Conlin, R-Jackson, said he will introduce a bill that would put "none of the above" on ballots for voters to use when they feel that the selection of candidates is poor. Conlin said the no-confidence vote idea, one that actually would register a protest, came from his own personal

"I've walked into the voting booth too many times myself and looked at the choices and said 'My God - these are the choices?'." Conlin said

He added that he thought such an option on the ballot would force incumbents to work for re-election by staying in closer contact with their constituents and make the political parties provide challengers of

"I didn't even realize that Nevada was thinking the same thing," Conlin added. He said he also saw several opinions on television that favored the idea

Conlin added that there may be some problems involved with such legislation. He said that a conflict may arise if "none of the above" actually won an election. Another hazard of the bill would be if a person changed his name to None Of The Above and won several elections.

People at the elections division of the Dept. of State said, when contacted by the let the idea of the "none of the above" vote suffocate on his desk, but decided to resuscitate it when he saw favorable public reaction to his bill in the Detroit Free Press 'Sound-off" column.

That paper's poll, the kind which readers call into and give their opinions, totalled 83.2 per cent approval of the idea. The paper had indicated that Nevada has the same kind of law, and Conlin said that was the way he first heard of Nevada's law.

Conlin said that he was originally going to State News, that they did not even know a proposal such as Conlin's existed.

That's a new one on me," said Jim Chapman, a state election specialist.

Chapman said that as a preliminary decision, he thought even if "none of the above" received a majority in an election, the flesh and blood candidate with the next highest total would win.

Chapman only laughed at the idea that someone would change his name to None

FDA investigating food coloring

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Food and Drug Administration said Friday it will decide in 10 days whether a new report on the potential dangers caused by the nation's most widely used food coloring warrants banning the dye

According to the report from Dr. David W. Gaylor of the Arkansas - based National Center for Toxicological Research, Red Dve No. 2 appears to cause a "significant increase" in malignant tumors when fed to rats at high doses. The report also raised questions about the dye's potential for causing genetic damage and miscarriages.

The FDA also proposed for the second time a ban on the suspected cancer - causing DES as a growth stimulant in

It said it was taking the action because DES — diethylstilbestrol - continues to show up in the livers of these animals, even though a 1962 law says no residues may be found in edible tissues after slaughter.

Striking teachers face fines

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Striking city teachers, who rejected what the school board said was its final contract offer, face a fine of up to $25,000 unless they obey a judge's order and return to classes today.

Bargaining resumed Sunday despite the teachers' rejection of the board's offer on Saturday.

Last Thursday, Allegheny County Court Judge Donald Ziegler found the teachers' union in contempt and said he would levy the fine if the teachers did not end their six week - old strike.

Teachers' leaders said they would accept fines and jail sentences rather than return to work without a contract.

Dump search for Hoffa dumped JERSEY CITY, N.J. (UPI) — Federal authorities apparently have abandoned the idea of digging up a Jersey City dump in search of a body as part of an investigation into the disappearance of James R. Hoffa more than five months ago.

A warrant to search Brother Moscato's dump, a 47 - acre landfill where authorities said they believed the body was buried, was returned Thursday.

The Democratic field of presidential candidates became even more crowded early this weekend. West Virginia Sen. Robert C. Byrd became the 11th Democrat Friday to announce his bid for the presidency.

He is simultaneously running for his Senate seat, which expires in 1977, a double race that is allowed in some states.

Food drops, unemployment up

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Sharply lower food prices brought a welcome 0.4 per cent decrease in wholesale prices in December, but that good news was clouded by a continuing 8.5 per cent unemployment rate which made 1975 the American worker's worst year since the Great

The Labor Department reported dramatic improvement in wholesale prices for the year. Unadjusted prices in December were 4.2 per cent higher than the year before compared to a 20.9 per cent jump in 1974.

But unemployment has shown less improvement than any other economic indicator since the current recession bottomed out last spring. It averaged 8.5 per cent through 1975, a rate high enough to cause many economists to predict persistent high joblessness through next year.

Safety device blamed for crash

CHICAGO (AP) — Following a train collision that killed one passenger and injured more than 350 others, the Chicago Transit Authority ordered its employes to immediately halt any train if its safety equipment stops

More than 50 persons injured in Friday's crash on Chicago's Northwest Side were still hospitalized Sunday, five of them critically. Kenneth Bierie, 61, an accountant, died Saturday of injuries received in the accident.

At the peak of the morning rush hour Friday, a rapid transit train collided with a second train which was not moving. The motorman of the moving train had been given permission by his supervisor to continue after a safety device stopped functioning. The device, supposedly fail safe, is designed to automatically apply the brakes if it comes too close to another train.

Simon plans to resign post

KINGSTON, Jamaica (UPI) — Treasury Secretary William Simon said Friday he would resign his post following next November's elections.

Simon made the comment in passing during a news conference summing up the accomplishments of an International Monetary Fund meeting that ended Thursday.

Simon has made no secret since last summer of the fact that he would like to resign next fall regardless of who wins the election. Speculation has it that he plans to run for governor of New Jersey.

Nigerian demonstrators enter embassy grounds

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) -Angry Nigerian demonstrators protesting United States policy toward Angola broke into the grounds of the U.S. Embassy on Sunday, plastered slogans on windows and threw sticks and stones at the building. No injuries were reported.

The attack was the culmination of a protest demonstration in which some 2,000 Nigerian students, university lecturers, workers and others carrying anti · U.S. placards marche four miles from Yaba on the Nigerian mainland to the embassy situated on Lagos island.

The attack followed similar ones on the U.S. Consulate in the northern city of Kaduna and the United States Information Service offices in the western state capital of Ibadan

In the Sunday march, decomandeered monstrators several buses to help take them to the embassy. They carried placards bearing such slogans as "Gerald Ford is a big fool," "Americans must go," and "We want to fight in Angola."

On arrival at the embassy, some of the demonstrators managed to break open the iron gate into the circular driveway. They marched around the driveway, threw sticks and stones and plastered posters on embassy windows before being persuaded to leave by police. Late Sunday, two squads of "Last year there were approximately 22,000 cases of child abuse horrendous."

Dr. Heller said that the problem was too massive for any one social agency to handle but that a lack of coordination efforts among the many agencies involved made quick action impossible.

"My role was to get all these groups together and stay with it up to the present," he said. "The whole group has had its ups and downs and changed but I think it has finally gelled."

The gel that evolved calls for community wide commitment by human services agencies that could provide some aspect of aid to abused and neglected children and their families. Some of these are schools, hospitals, Lansing Police Dept., Catholic Social Services, Probate Court, MSU Dept. of Human Development, Junior League and Project Head Start.

"Without a concerted effort you can't get anything done," Dr. Helfer said. He likened the procedure of action to a chain where every agency knows who to contact as the next link.

"We had a case not long ago where a nurse grew concerned about a mother and the way she was treating her child," he said. 'She knew to contact a social services worker who visited the family, a pediatrician was brought in, the hospital became involved, the mother was approached positively and a foster home

"Now, this case took place over the holidays and it was taken care of in three or four days. Four years ago if we'd tried to do this it would have been chaos," Helfer said.

Prevention is the goal of the new services available to troubled parents in the Lansing area. Besides Parents Anonymous, a national organization similar to Alcoholics Anonymous, a highly successful "parent aide" program has been established. Charles Foster of the Ingham County Dept. of Social Servies said that the program provides various services to help potentially abusive marents through periods of stress.

"We assign a contact person to become a friend to the devastated family," Foster said. "This parent aide provides emergency couseling or babysitting."

"The type of family involved in the parent aide program doesn't have any friends," Dr. Helfer said. "They're isolated, scared, saying you let people in and you get hurt."

The agencies help the family to establish friends; friends that make a family more of a family—though Dr. Helfer said one mother kept calling the aide an "assigned friend."

Foster said that Dr. Helfer was the catalyst in the meeting of agencies that led to the development of the successful Ingham County program, but the doctor, author of "The Battered Child" and "Helping the Battered Child and His Family," is quick to give credit to the many other individuals involved.

"Sure I'm the catalyst who prodded them along and got them organized," Dr. Helfer said. "But once you get people talking to each other a lot of other problems can be solved." He cited a program for Lansing area adolescent mothers as one of the spin offs of the concerted organizations. The Ingham County project was among 18 new state and local welfare service improvements featured in an idea fair at the America Public Welfare Assn.'s annual conference in December. Dr. Helfer, a pediatrician, was named in December to serve or the board of directors of the National Committee for Prevention of Child Abuse, a private, non-profit national organization dedicated to reducing the incidence of child abuse and neglect through media campaigns, publications and training programs

Artist-in-residence offers first lecture

Jorge Luis Borges, famed Argentine writer and MSU artist in-residence this term, will give the first of five lectures tonight at 8 in 109 Anthony Hall.

Borges will speak on "Walt Whitman's Experiment" tonight, followed by lectures given on alternate Monday nights which include: "The Writer of Beowulf" on Jan. 26;
"The Nightmare" on Feb. 9; "Emmanuel Swedenborg" on Feb. 23, and "Blindness" on March 8.

All of the lectures are free. Most widely known for his development of the "short essay" form, Borges is also a highly respected poet. Much of his work has had an affect on philosophy as well as literature. Borges was honored last October at MSU during the Modern Literature Conference of 1975, where he and several noted scholars spoke on his literary achievements. It was during that stay that Borges was first asked to consider the artist-in-residence post at MSU, according to Donald Yates, professor of Romance Languages, who is currently working on a biography of the 76-year-old Borges. Yates said Borges "surprised us all" by deciding to come to MSU so soon.

"Nothing of greater importance to humanities and culture has occurred at MSU," Yates said.

"In addition to writing and conducting free lectures, Borges will be teaching a graduate seminar in Argentine literature during his term-long stay.

Tax hike defeated; new ideas needed

Those who had placed their hopes on last week's ASMSU fee increase referendum as a way out of the organization's financial problems are seriously disappointed that the effort failed.

In economic hard times, it is seldom that an opportunity presents itself for solving our financial problems by increasing the amount of money coming in. More often, we are faced with the necessity of cutting down on expenses

ASMSU attempted to ignore this painful truth by initiating a fee increase, but its failure should be taken as a sign that the student body wants its money spent wisely before it will grant ASMSU any

Here are a few suggestions which would begin to demonstrate ASMSU's commitment to getting the most out of student tax dollars:

•A cutback in office and administrative expenses. ASMSU spends a great part of its budget on postal expenses, telephone bills and office supplies. It is also burdened by administrative and secretarial salaries which are under contract. ASMSU legal services should investigate a way to eliminate this last expense, which amounts to well over $15,000.

•ASMSU should put the clamps on its generous impulse to finance any and all student groups and projects, no matter how limited in

•Perhaps in the long run, the best way out is to establish a separately - financed Union Activities Board which would remove some of the financial burden from ASMSU. By absorbing Great Issues, Pop Entertainment and the Travel Office, and by sharing in the expenses of the office staff, the UAB could relieve ASMSU of part of its expenses.

Such an arrangement would free more dollars for the political functions ASMSU now performs, and would in fact improve and increase the services - especially educational and cultural - that ASMSU now underfunds.

Finally, if ASMSU wants more money, it should come to the students with plans for increased benefits and services, and not as a ship in need of aid before it sinks from its own carelessness.

letters are personal opinions.

They printed Welch's name in two issues, as they print other agents' names, because they want to "demystify" the agency for Americans and give "personal culpability for war crimes" — not to provide a hit list for foreign terrorists.

They got up a hasty, rhetorical statement saying the CIA was guilty for sending Welch on a covert mission. This prompted an unprecedented public tirade from CIA director William E. Colby, who called them

"paranoic and irresponsible." "They are using the casket as a podium, they've sicked every right-wing thug in the country on us," says Tim Butz, 28, a stocky, bearded Vietnam veteran, who at 17 was such a rabid anti-Communist he volun-teered for the Air Force and Vietnam. Because he has been out front, he gets most of the threats that have been coming in to their neat, quiet office. The last one, received last Friday, was from "a friend," who said he had heard seven men in a Silver Spring bar plotting to "come and waste

"The CIA was better prepared for this than we were," says Winslow Peck (an alias he adopted to protect his Missouri family during his anti-war days).

"We've gotten our heads together, and we've stopped taking it personally," says Butz. "We know they're really after Church and Pike and the other critics. It was safe to go after us because nobody had ever heard

Counter-Spy is a quarterly publication sponsored by the Fifth Estate which was founded as a muck-raking operation on the intelligence community by novelist Norman Mailer on his 50th birthday.

The magazine identified Welch as Peru CIA station chief in two issues. The editors found his name first in a 1969 German publication called "Who's Who in CIA," were told it later by two Maryknoll priests who say it in a Peruvian Spanish-language paper and completed their research from clues — mostly gaps — in the State Dept. biographical listing.

Whether Counter-Spy was the source of the Athens News story which printed Welch's name on November 25 is not known, John Horn, the editor, who is Greek despite his name, has told the Greek press that he was called upon by a committee of three men he had never met before who gave him the names of seven alleged agents in all. Horn printed them, with addresses and telephone numbers, and a suggestion to his readers that they call them directly and ask them what they were doing in Athens.

Counter-Spy is having an advisory board meeting this week to decide about continuing to publish agents' names.
Peck thinks in view of the magazine's new world-wide notoriety, they might be targeting them for assassination. Butz is

Says Butz, "All of us here are convinced these things will happen again. The CIA is the most visible symbol of U.S. interference in foreign countries, and it is hated. There will be retribution even if we stop printing

Peck adds, "There is only one way to prevent them from being shot and that is for the CIA to withdraw from overseas and for Congress to abolish the agency. It doesn't look like Congress will do it. This will be a long, long struggle."

MSU

Last week, (Jan. 7) the State News published a very interesting, thought-provoking letter to the editor by Mr. James Clary of Spartan Village. At least I hope it was thought-provoking.

The question of hiring "Community Aides," who would reside in Married Housing and help organize community activities, is one which the Married Stu dents' Union (MSU2) has been debating for some time. As Mr. Clary stated, meetings were held throughout the three villages to explain the pros and cons of this proposed action. What he did not mention is that attendance was atrocious. In Spartan Village, for example, the attendance was eight out of a population of approximately

I do hope to arouse interest in this important and far-reaching idea. MSU2 is a representative body - we try to reflect the opinions of the residents of married housing. When those opinions are not forthcoming, however, we have no choice but to grope in the dark, guessing their wishes and hearing opposition later.

lly, and most important of all, the m majors are intertwined with one through a seamless web of intercontrol. They do not function as dent or competitive, but as cooperatities at every strategic point of the s integrated structure. They are with one another in a symbiotic ship which almost inevitably preiny genuinely competitive behavior.

Vertical integration reinforces this pat-tern of horizontal dominance by the petroleum giants. It is the mechanism for harnessing market power and transmitting it through the successive stages of produc-tion, refining, transportation and marketing. It constitutes the primary barrier to new competition, because specialized firms at any one stage of the industry must live at the suffrance of the integrated majors vulnerable to the constant threat of price squeezes, the denial of supplies, foreclosure from markets. The very fact of vertical integration, therefore, militates against workable competition in this indus try. It relegates competition to the interstices and fringes of the market place.

As the FTC concluded in its recent etroleum report, "The [vertical integrationl system contained all the elements essential to a squeeze on refining profits and could be overcome only if the potential refining entrant could enter [the industry] on a vertically integrated basis." (Investigation of the Petroleum Industry, 1973, p. 26.)

By thus raising the cost of entry at the refining stage, vertical integration in and of itself becomes a formidable entry barrier which few newcomers can afford to hurdle. It is also a barrier to the established dependent refiners many of whom eventually give up the battle for survival and sell out to their integrated rivals. (Acquisitions of independent refiners accounted for 40.7% of the increase in refining capacity among the top 20 oil companies between 1959 and 1969.)

The control of pipelines by the vertically integrated majors has the same anti-com-petitive effects. It gives the majors the power to mollify, discipline, coerce and exclude their non integrated competitors. It gives them the power to determine the conditions for entry and the rules for survival in the petroleum industry.

A final word about the role of government vis-a-vis the petroleum industry. Historically, the government has done for the oil companies what they could not legally do for themselves without clear violations of the antitrust laws. Under the guise of conservation and national defense, the Bureau of Mines set national output quotas, the states authorized prorationing schemes, the Congress approved the Inter state Oil Compact, as well as legislating tariff protection and import quotas. In addition, it subsidized the multi-national giants with special tax off-sets, and both the domestic and multi-national producers with a magnanimous depletion allowance. It made the petroleum industry a government-sanctioned, government-protected, government-subsidized cartel, and enabled it to operate a finely tuned output-restriction, price-maintenance scheme on a worldwide scale.

Recent events, especially since the Arab Oil Embargo, have done little to diminish the market control of the petroleum giants. To be sure, the nationalization, tax and royalty policy of some OPEC countries has had a devastating effect on the owned equity of the multi-national giants, especially in the Middle East, but this has not loosened their world wide grip on refining, marketing and transportation. Indeed, it may be quite reasonable to view the multi-national majors as the marketing agents and tax collectors for the OPEC cartel — doing for the cartel what it appears in order to maintain an exploitative price level on a worldwide scale.

Similarly, Project Independence, born in the wake of the oil embargo, is not likely to weaken the control of the petroleum giants. On the contrary, Project Independence will make us more dependent than ever on the firms now dominating the energy industry. Not only will it assure the maintenance of exorbitant petroleum prices, but yield to the owners of petroleum reserves a windfall gain in the value of those reserves.

incapable of doing for itself, viz. to Against this background, we ask whether proration output among the cartel members it is desirable, in the public interest, to permit the major oil companies to move into those energy fields which, after 1985, will be increasingly vital in assuring the nation of independence from foreign supplies. Specifically, should we, by a major policy decision today, permit the petroleum giants to play a significant role in determining what energy substitutes shall be developed, at what rate, at what cost, and at whose expense? In other words, shall we delegate to a private power complex — subject neither to the discipline of competition nor to effective government regulation nor with a reassuring record of public service - the right to plan our industrial future?

In shaping public policy, we must be mindful of two central principles: first, no person can serve two (or more) masters and be equally loyal to each; and second, no person can reasonably be expected to compete with himself.

If this be so, can we place our faith in private profit maximization by the petroleum giants as the mechanism for promoting the public interest and protecting the general welfare? When a giant business firm is engaged in multi-dimensional operations, when it can choose among its various investments, retarding or suppressing some while favoring others, what guarantees do we have that its price and product policy will be the same as that of many independent competing firms immune from any conflicts of interest?

We respectfully submit that the Exxons of this world will not suddenly or voluntarily surrender their market control. Nor will they start competing against themselves in defiance of the laws of profit and power maximization. If the public interest is to be protected by competition in the energy market, some form of horizontal divestiture legislation will have to be enacted to assure

Rush concert fresh, spontaneous

State News Review Tom Rush, a veteran of countless live performances, is not exactly a new face out in the wilderness.

A part of the '60s folksinging boom, Rush entered the '70s and faced problems his contemporaries never really had to deal with. While James Taylor and Joni Mitchell were being hailed as songwriters supreme, Rush was quietly relegated to Judy Collins - ish realms, being labeled, somewhat unfairly, as an "interpreter" of other writers' material.

Thus Rush's failure to be a singer/songwriter, or at least to be regarded as one, led to a decline in fame that, for him, must have ultimately been quite unsettling. And all the while such accusations were slightly misdirected, as Rush's own material, album per album, was always on the increase.

Now, in 1976, good singer/ songwriters aren't particularly in abundance, and Rush's following, from its "Circle Game" small, loval legion that almost approaches cult status.

Tom Rush can rest assured that his performance at Mcdonel Hall Kiva last Thursday considerably increased his East Lansing following.

As the first of Mariah's term productions, Rush's show was surprisingly homework. Even with the omissions of combat coverage in the Middle East and the Congo, Knightley's book is probably the best work in the subject area of war reporting.

formance - Rush's stage personality was invigoratingly happy, almost youthful.

Further, his manner of performance differed markedly from, for instance, the antics of Tim Hardin, whose show at the Stables just a few years ago was blissful, but almost totally robotic in nature. Hardin's thousandth version of "Misty Roses," in other words, just didn't come across as spon taneously as Tom Rush's thousandth version of "Urge For Going," and so on.

As it happens, there's not much that can be said about Rush's show. Suffice it to say that his choice of songs was well - advised, his guitar surprisingly self - confident and his professionalism evident with every move.

If anything, Tom Rush is certainly not standing still in the mid - 70s.

Word also should be made of Duke Knotts, who opened Rush's show. His vocal style, highly reminiscent of Gram Parsons with a hint of Roger McGuinn, was quite memorable and, with his material, managed to make Thursday's concert

Subtitled "From the Crimea to Vietnam: The War Correspondent as Hero, Propagandist and Myth Maker," Knightley's book traces the develop ment of major military conflicts and how the media fared in reporting the incidents.

The book begins with the exploits of William Howard Russell who, when he jour-neyed to Crimea as a correspondent for the Times of Lonbecame the start (in Knightley's words) "of an organized effort to report a war to the civilian population at home using the services of a civilian reporter."

Instead of stealing war news from foreign newspapers or employing junior officers in conflict-of-interest situations to obtain war dispatches, the Times used Russell to obtain their combat news. Calling himself the "miserable parent of a luckless tribe," Russell reported the bloody blunder of the charge of the light brigade and helped expose the wretched conditions under which the British army was Knightley, special correspondent for the Sunday Times of London, tells in his book of the struggles of reporters to truth about armed conflicts. Many times journalists fought against insurmountable odds to have the facts published about crucial battles. Many times, also, reporters succumbed to jingoistic phrases of "glory or the grave," laziness, censorship or government propaganda, proving at times, as Sen. The lessons concentrate on teaching par-ents the importance of praising the child and giving him or her a good self - image, learning to listen to the child, learning to cope with general troubles families face and a summary lesson in which the parents evaluate the progress they have made due to the course.

Through the series, "You Can Do It" and brochures, people learn to do their own electrical, wall and plumbing repairs as well as develop skills in interior and exterior painting.

Family Living is particularly proud of their College Week for Women which brings thousands of Michigan women to MSU each summer to live and work in residence halls.

Courses are taught by extension specialists — instructors from many MSU departments and experts in business and government. Seminars explore family - related problems such as health care, education and nutrition. Other classes are held on communication and management and parlia-mentary procedure, which enable women to improve leader ship skills.

The extension also has a special Expanded Nutrition Family Program (ENFP). This year alone, 270 youngsters returned to or remained in 84 homes because ENFP aides worked with homemakers to improve home conditions. Since 1969, ENFP has helped low - income Michigan families toward a better life through proper diet practices. During the 1974 - 75 fiscal year, ENFF reached 21,386 families, and over 30,000 youths were in-

Michigan Supreme Court refuses Whalen's appeal

Michigan Supreme Court re-fused Friday to hear a burglary conviction appeal by John J. Whalen, the key government witness in former Justice John B. Swainson's recent federal bribery conspiracy trial.

Whalen, who is being held by federal agents in a secret location for protection, was originally convicted in the 1969 burglary of an Adrian jewelry

His claims that he paid a bribe to Swainson in exchange for a new trial led to Swainson's conviction on perjury charges Nov. 2 and his resignation from the high court five days later.

Whalen again was convicted that verdict was upheld by the Court of Appeals. The Supreme Court refused to hear an appeal of the second conviction, saying Whalen "failed to persuade the court that the questions presented should be re-viewed by this Court."

It also denied his request that Supreme Court justices remove themselves from hearing the case because of possible prejudice stemming from the Swainson affair.

The decision was the latest setback in Whalen's ongoing attempts to stay out of jail. The 30-year old ex-convict

'Horse diaper' still not pinned

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) -A solution to the "horse diaper" dilemma has not been pinned down despite efforts by the new city administration.

Mayor Joseph P. Riley Jr. and the operators of the city's tour carriages met Monday to discuss the diaper problem, but no solution was reached.

The controversy over putting diapers on horses arose during the closing days of the city's last administration. An ordinance was passed as a means of amended to require only that manure be removed from streets by nightfall.

A group of businessmen agreed to remove the manure for one month, and that period of time-now expired-was to be used to work out a solution

At Monday's meeting, Dan Hydrick, owner of Charleston Carriage Co., contended that the carriage operators draw tourist business and the city should bear the expense of cleaning up the manure.

Charleston will not have to suffere manure-ridden streets, however. Hydrick said that he will comply with Riley's request and have his own equipment clean the streets until an agreement can be reached.

NEWBORN PORKERS WORTH TIME

Center's pigs offer research, fun

This little piggy goes to market when he weighs 220 pounds, this little piggy stays home and has a litter every five months and all the little piggies at the MSU Swine Research Center make a lot of noise when a guest comes to call.

Visitors to the swine barns may have to air themselves out after walking through the buildings south of campus on Forest Road, but the sheer delight of watching the newborn porkers squealing for position at their mother's teats makes the odor bearable and part of the scene. Over 700 head of swine snort the days away under the auspices of the Dept. of Animal Husbandry, gobbling 240 pounds of feed by the time they are five months old, which makes them an expensive housepet but a good market investment. The profits from the sale of about 1200 to 1400 hogs a year go back into research, and, according to Joe Strittmatter, manager of the swine barns, 1975 was a very good year.

"Hog prices set a record high of 67 cents a pound," Strittmatter said. "But it doesn't look as good this year."

Strittmatter, a big man with broad features and red hair, believes in the beauty and intelligence of the pink, brown and black beasts he cares for every day.

"Smart? Sure they're smart. You can tell that by the things they do, like working gates loose," he said. "Plus there is no other animal that sets up housekeeping the way they do.

"They set their stalls up in an apartment style, eating in one place, sleeping in another place, urinating in a corner," he said.

The swine showcase of motherhood is the room with a "Quiet! Maternity Ward" sign on the door. Downy piglets scurry around the stalls like pink kittens. Their ears are tion (the left ear is its first name, right ear is the litter name) and the tails are clipped to prevent being nibbled off by a Pregnant sows, their 430 pound bodies swollen so that they can only lie on their sides, dilate their noses and grunt softly. Breeding and farrowing, the swine language word for giving birth, is the only life the sows know.

"We try to keep the females pregnant or nursing," Stritt-matter said. "We first breed them when they are eight months old. The gestation period is about four months, then after the offspring is about five weeks old they are weaned and the sow comes into heat soon after," he said. "Sows are really productive animals.

One of the big factors in their productivity is a new breed of oar imported from Canada called the Landrace.
"He's awful sexy," Strittmat-ter said. "He is valuable primar ily for his mothering ability."

"Sexy" in the world of swine means a long body covered with beige hair, irresistible blue eyes and pronounced privates. The Landrace, housed in the breeding pens that are carpeted

Two thieves attempting to steal a green sofa from Wonders Hall at 11:45 Saturday night had one flaw in their plan-the doorway wasn't quite wide enough. By the time they maneuvered the couch through the south entrance doorway they succeeded in ripping off its bottom legs and gaining the attention of two students who quickly gave pursuit. The chase ended between Wilson and Wonders hall where the two alert students found the legless couch abandoned by the thieves.

An estimated $100 worth of damage was done to the men's restroom on the first floor of Rather Hall Saturday at 10 p.m. Damages included a broken sink and broken stall partition that was pulled from the wall. Police have no suspects.

A garbage truck driver for the MSU Grounds Dept. made everyone aware of his arrival as he entered the department garage at 12:50 Saturday afternoon. Thinking the hydraulic doors were closed on top of his truck he made his way into the garage—breaking the lintel across the doorway and bringing down a shower of bricks and mortar. Damages to the building were estimated at $3,000

State News Staff Writer The supersonic Concorde jetliner may be a noisy machine, but the controversy it is caus-ing everywhere from Capitol Hill to MSU is louder still, and ould send diplomatic sonic ooms from here to Europe and the plane was developed jointly by the two countries -- to decide whether or not to permit trans-Atlantic runs to the U.S.

Last Monday hearings were neld in Washington to review an application submitted by British and French airlines —

A ruling is due within 30 days. Meanwhile, in France, where the jet is made, a Communistled union has urged French airport workers not to service U.S. planes if the United States denies the Concorde landing

The main objections to the supersonic jet have been raised by environmentalists, claiming the plane would increase noise along its flight paths, increase air pollution, waste fuel and possibly increase skin cancer by depleting the earth's ozone layer, thereby increasing dangerous ultraviolet radiation from the sun. A statement released early week by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) stated that service to rectly counter to the noise abatement and other environmental policies and programs of United States, though EPA acknowledged their posi-tion was based on the possibility of expanded SST service in the future. "One supersonic jet in the air wouldn't make a difference But don't kid yourself, there will be more," William E. Cooper, MSU professor of zoology and vironmental Review Board, said in agreement with EPA. "The real question," Cooper explains, "is the long-term impact of supersonic transport at the altitude of 70 to 90,000

At such high altitudes (commercial planes usually "cruise" somewhere in the neighborhood of 30,000 feet) the harmful by products of the jet's exhaust would not be as easily dis-persed because of the thin oxygen. Cooper compares the possible results to the running of a car in a closed garage.

But Dale Linvill, assistant professor of agricultural engineering, presents two counter

"One seldom heard argument is that the military's been flying at those heights (70 to 90,00 feet) for a long time. What has that done?" Linvill asked.

He also pointed out that in the winter the level of the troposphere (the atmosphere below the stratosphere where clouds form and the tempera ture decreases as the altitude increases) comes down in the northern hemisphere, down to the level where airliners are now flying, without any apparent and excessive damage to the ozone or weather.

Cooper answers Linvill by asking what effects the military flights have had and if military flights are "comparable to 200 commercial flights a day." He further notes that the troposphere is "more like 50 or 60,000 feet up, I think, not 30,000. And do the majority of commercial planes fall into this category anyway.

Both experts, however, are opposed to supersonic transport for personal reasons. Cooper opposes it on what he calls "logical grounds."

"What's the advantage of getting to Europe an hour earlier? I'm worrying about the allocation of energy and money. The engineering ethic says that because you build it you have a right to sell it, which means use it. But this is changing. It has to be neat and socially acceptable, too," Cooper said.

Linvill is against supersonic transport on "economical"

"It seems smarter to get 700 people to Europe in seven hours than 50 in two hours. What with our communication systems you can call Europe if it's that urgent," he said.

Trudeau's economic views criticized by top Canadians as a sign of increased authoritarianism in government. "Are we to be lectured by big government, telling us what we shall do and what we shall not do?" asked the president of the under fire from business, labor and political leaders because of a series of year-end interviews in which he maintained the ree-market system in Canada has failed and massive government Canadian Labor Congress, Joe Morris. "Who is he to decide?" ntervention in the economy is necessary. An Ontario-based firm, The Haughton Group of Companies,

But supporters in his Liberal Party respond by saying that rather than writing off the free enterprise system, the prime minister has launched a process that will eventually bring it back good health.

Businessmen charge that Trudeau has become a Napoleon. Labor union leaders say he is making himself an omnipresent big brother. Former Prime Minister John Diefenbaker, a member of he Conservative Party, called Trudeau a little Caesar.

The prime minister has been away on a skiing vacation in British olumbia as the controversy flared but is expected to reply to the attacks when he returns this week to Ottawa. Trudeau's office and many Liberal members of Parliament appear largely unconcerned, contending the prime minister has said little that he hasn't said before. Liberals also deny reports that the party caucus in Parliament is seriously split on the issue and say the whole business will be straightened out when the prime minister returns. The issue arose when Trudeau elaborated in various interviews on concepts put forth by U.S. economist John Kenneth Galbraith, who was born in Canada, on the need for permanent government controls to balance the economic interests of the country. Though he pointed out that he had no master plan for the economy and that he disagreed that economic controls had to be permanent to work, Trudeau's remarks were widely interpreted published a series of half-page newspaper advertisements declaring: "Your government has to be stopped, Mr. Trudeau, before it causes irreversible damage. "You are not emperor. We are not ants."

But many Liberals appeared little upset by the controversy. Montreal Liberal Ian Watson, for example, said the prime minister was tackling economic problems in a pragmatic manner, adding that neither free enterprise advocates nor those in favor of state control had all the answers.

"Mr. Trudeau has said nothing particularly new," Watson said. Most Liberals in Parliament, however, agreed with former Consumer Affairs Minister Herb Gray that the prime minister should clarify his remarks to satisfy his critics.

While Trudeau said in his year-end statements that his economic thinking had been permeated by Galbraith's philosophy, his spokesman added that the prime minister's approach allows more

"Mr. Trudeau is far more prepared to work out an accomodation that fits the genus of the country," the spokesman said.

Trudeau said controls are needed only for the time it takes to change the attitude that more is better, and to bring the economy back into balance. That should not take more than three years, he

Opportunity knocks for cager following win over Buckeyes

State News Sports Writer Someone must make sure the doors at Jenison are unlocked tonight. There'll be a loud knock on the fieldhouse's entrance and it will be opportunity asking to come in.

That opportunity comes in the form of the No. 1 ranked, undefeated Big Ten leader Indiana. The chance for glory for the Spartan basketball team will last for only 40 minutes of action, but it represents an opportunity many teams look forward to.

Following Saturday's 92 - 82 conquest of Ohio State, MSU enters the game with a 2 · 2 Big Ten ledger and 6 · 7 overall.

The Hoosiers, meanwhile, are 3 · 0 in conference play, 12 for the year. In addition, Bobby Knight's contingent has posted 42 consecutive regular season victories and 22 straight · Spartan coach Gus Ganakas views the game with honesty, saying, "We're not stupid. We know they're a superior team. But we've got some guns and some ammunition for them. Of course we approach the game looking to win.

Ganakas continued, "The players and the coaches welcome this opportunity to play the number one team in the nation. It's something each

Without labeling Ganakas as sadistic, consider what the Spartans have to look forward to. The Hoosiers placed four men on the All-Big-Ten's first team last year and three return this year. At forward is 6 - foot -7 Scott May. The senior co captain was named the most valuable player in the conference last year in addition to being a consensus All - Ameri-

Then there's center Kent Benson, 6-foot-11, who destroyed Michigan almost single -handedly Saturday in the Hoosiers 80 - 74 victory. The other forward slot is manned by 6-foot-7 Ted Abernethy.

The guard positions are in the hands of four - year veteran Quinn Buckner and 6-foot-7 Bob Wilkerson.

On paper it appears to be a mismatch. But, MSU captain Terry Furlow cautions Spartan followers, "I'm glad to have the chance to play against Indiana. We respect them, but we're not in awe. Everybody on the team will have to play their very best to beat them. But I do know one thing, they can be beaten." Furlow and his mates exerted sufficient effort Saturday against Ohio State to set the stage for tonight's encounter. Buckeye center Craig Taylor stole the thunder early in the contest as he brought the Bucks back from a 16 - 3 deficit to a 21 - 19 advantage. The 6-foot-10 pivotman scorched the nets for 22 points in the first half as the Spartans clung to a 41 - 39 halftime lead. However, the Spartans unleashed a defensive variation and the Terry Furlow scoring machine in the final half to pull away to the win.

Ganakas explained the defensive strategy, saying, "In the first half we tried fronting Taylor to keep him from getting the ball. But. Kelser ran into foul trouble in that setup. So, in the second half, we went to a drop defense." He continued, "We played Kelser be hind him and dropped other defensive players from the perimeter area to block the area under the basket and force Taylor to the outside."

The strategy worked, as Kelser, Edgar Wilson and Terry Furlow, MSU's front line, limited the Buckeye center to 10 points in that half.

the contest was again Furlow. Stifled with only nine points at the intermission, Furlow exploded for 33 markers in the last half to boost the Spartan offensive thrust.

The 42 points marked the third straight game in which Furlow has gone over the 40 point standard. It also gave him 140 points for his last three games. Ganakas labeled Furlow's performance as superb, and added, "It really isn't go Terry's scoring that's gra the idea that he scored points. Points that we in crucial situations : game. And he did the patient manner. He was cing his shots and he bea with our offensive come

The law encouraged the $100,000 and more that used to large field of 10 early entrants in the Democratic primary cam-paigns, and will make life be the cornerstones of both Democratic and Republican presidential campaigns. difficult for latecomers. But federal subsidies are keeping afloat some Democrats who andidates urge change might otherwise have folded before the first votes were cast. And spending ceilings should prevent any massive media barrage by a single contender. Should the law survive its court test, it will enable the eventual Democratic and Republican nominees to finance their campaigns with federal funds - $20 million apiece.

•The new emphasis on small donations has helped Republican challenger Ronald Reagan

outpace President Ford in raising campaign money. This is a turnabout from the days when an incumbent president could smother challengers financially.

The candidates, including President Ford, are finding the task of raising campaign money to be far more demanding than under the old system.

In the 1972 campaign, for example, then-President Richard M. Nixon held a cozy dinner at the White House for millionaire friends, and three of them - Clement Stone, John Scaife and John Mulcahy donated a total of $3.6 million to his re-election effort.

Today those three could give no more than $1,000 apiece to any one federal candidate. It Even Nixon's 1972 Democratic opponent, George McGovern, who boasted of his broadbased support from thousands of small campaign gifts, floated his early campaign drive on big gifts and loans from liberal millionaires like Max Palevsky and Stewart Mott.

Presidential candidates now cus on raising large numbers of medium and small donations. Sen. Henry M. Jackson draws hundreds of persons to his $1,000-a-person cocktail parties and $50-a-plate dinners. George Wallace sells wrist watches and mails millions of letters seeking donations from country and western music fans, backers of conservative causes and persons who have given Wallace money in the Ronald Reagan raises more than $500,000 a month in gifts averaging $20 apiece, using his own direct-mail campaign.

Jimmy Carter plans a telephone blitz seeking many small the Jan. 19 Iowa delegate hunt. Every private donation that a qualified presidential candidate can prove he received will be matched dollar for dollar by a federal subsidy of up to $250. To qualify, a candidate must first demonstrate that he has broad-based support, by raising $100,000 in donations of not more than $250 each, including a total of at least $5,000 in each

The aim of public financing was to make presidential candidates independent of whatever influence wealthy donors and big-spending special interest groups could exert on them through control of the campaign purse strings.

But it has had side effects. Because it takes so much time to meet the 20-state requirement, presidential candidates tended to declare themselves early. Jackson and Lloyd Bentsen have been raising money for more than a year already. Wallace never stopped raising it after 1972.

Another effect apparently has been to save some candipaigns before the first votes are cast. Four years ago Fred Harris and Sen. Harold Hughes were forced out of the 1972 presidential race for lack of funds months before the New Hampshire primary.

By contrast, this year infu-sions of federal funds have given the announced candidates cash that should keep them going at least until they are tested by the voters in a primary or two. At least one, Terry Sanford, had to use much of what he got to pay off debts. Another side effect of the law to give an edge to men like Wallace and Reagan, whose strong political views can prompt an army of backers to open their pocketbooks.

Reagan raised $2 million in small gifts last year, compared to Ford's $1.7 million, much of it in larger donations. Wallace topped all other Democrats by raising $2.5 million in the first nine months of the year.

Reagan's edge is even greater than it appears at first glance. Because Reagan went after small donations while Ford fund raisers appealed mainly for $1,000 gifts, relatively more of Reagan's money is eligible for the federal matching provided for the first $250 of any donation. Three-fourths of Reagan's money is matchable, but less than half Ford's donations qualify.

Spending limits in the pri-maries should prevent any one candidate from burying the others with massive spending, as John Kennedy did with Hubert Humphrey in the 1960 West Virginia presidential primary. This year, no one may spend more than $200,000 to campaign in New Hampshire, for example, and no one may spend more than $10 million for all preconvention campaigning

To get a better picture of America, aet this free booklet from Minolta.

Minolta would like to send you, free, a 44-page, full-color booklet called "Picture America. A stu-dent's guide to traveling with a camera."

It contains hints on choosing and handling the right equipment and film. Plus techniques for photographing subjects ranging from people to architecture to works of art. You'll find information on composition, perspective and managing special weather and light conditions.

You'll learn how to shoot a moving subject. And how to make still subjects more moving. You'll understand how to make a single picture tell a story. And how to turn one small subject into a compelling photo essay. There's even a fold-out color map of America's most photogenic subjects and the major highways that reach them. Plus a listing of major museums, heir hours and phone numbers.

If you're planning to travel America, send for our free booklet. You'll be glad you did.

Political talk

Wallace also said that this is the last time he will run for president unless he gets elected. Then he would consider seeking re-election.

Harris said he would oppose any covert Central Intelligence Agency activity in Angola and also secret contributions by the CIA to non-Communist political parties in Italy and Portugal.

Of the latter two countries. "if we're going to be involved, and if there is some principal interest, then as in Angola it ought to be public," Harris said. He said he was apprehensive about possible Communist governments in NATO countries but "we can't decide the kind of governments that other people are going to have.'

Bayh said that he can't support Wallace if Wallace wins the Democratic nomination because of his "divisive" actions in Bayh said he has purposely stayed out of the Florida presidential preference primary so as not to hurt Carter's chances because "I want Gov. Carter to beat Wallace" there.

Shapp was asked why he is running, since he is one of the least known of the 11 Democrats seeking the nomination.

"I like the position I'm in," said Shapp. He said nobody gave him a chance when he first ran for governor of Pennsyl vania either "but I went in and I

MONEY MAN DOES IT AGAIN!

"Money Man"

has returned after the beginning of classes, but before finals.

Result:

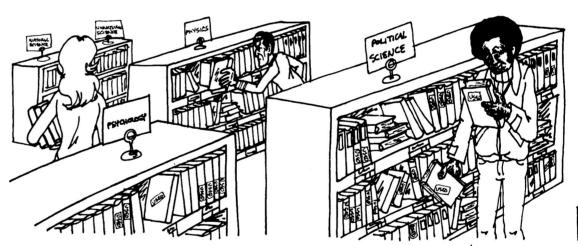

He's bought more used books than we have ever had.

So What?

We have a special staff marking these books for resale.

You Can

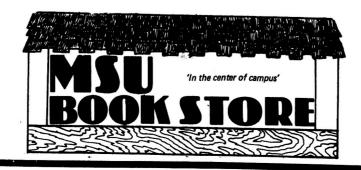

Now buy these used books this late in the term. They are all in the proper course sections.

Stop In

For this last chance to buy used books for the winter term.

OPEN Mon. Jan. 12 & Tues. Jan. 13 FROM 7:30-5:30
