Funding cut for work study

By MICHAEL ROUSE
State News Staff Writer

The MSU work study program will be losing $435,000 less in federal funding for the fiscal year 1976-77.

The almost one-fifth cut in federal funding may result in less money being paid to each work study employee or fewer students being able to get work study.

This year, said Ronald Roderick, associate director of Financial Aids, there will be less number of work study students.

Last year, the MSU work study program received $2,251,565 from the government, including a supplemental appropriation of $200,000 received in August.

"It doesn't look like there's a supplemental grant in the offing this year," Roderick said, "but you never can tell."

The federal subsidy provides 80 per cent of a student employee's wages and the employer pays the other 20 per cent, as required under Title IV of the Higher Education Act of 1965. On a national scale, 1985 students are employed in college ments, "don't rely too much on work study," he said.

Charles Rettke, business manager of the MSU libraries, said he does not yet know what the impact of the federal funding cut will be on students working in the libraries.

Rettke said the number of work study employees compared to regularly paid employees is "about half and half."

"It may be true that there will be fewer work study students in the library," Rettke said. "However, there are other factors involved, such as the supply of jobs in the area."

Mary Ayoub, who works 10 to 15 hours a week at the reference and information desk in the library, said she is planning on working in the library next year and is dependent on her job.

If her job was eliminated because of the federal funding cut, "I probably wouldn't be able to return to school," Ayoub said.

Jane Setla, who also works at the reference and information desk, said she would "probably have to take out more money in loans to go to school."

"I'd rather work than take out a loan," Setla said.

Officials to study car firm charges

By RALPH FRAMMOLINO
State News Staff Writer

Officials of the secretary of state's office will review today an investigation into charges against Williams Volkswagen, 2845 E. Saginaw Ave., that the firm sold a used car to an MSU student last March with the understanding it was a demonstrator model.

Rosemary Dolan, director of the Dealer Licensing Division of the Dept. of State, said she will review a report from a state investigator of the charges against Williams. She said that she will also seek legal counsel on the matter.

"I haven't really studied it," she said, "but just from a quick glance at it, it seems to me there is enough evidence for a formal hearing."

State investigator John McGuirk looked into allegations brought against the dealership by Laurie Aaron, 528 W. Fee Hall.

Aaron brought charges against Williams April 30, claiming that the car she was told was a demonstrator model was actually a used car. State records show that the car had been previously owned for four months, during which it had sustained $400 worth of damages in a back-end collision.

McGuirk said that a "series of coincidences" made him write the report on Williams, though he feels the problem was caused by bad communication between the customer and salesperson.

The coincidences McGuirk referred to included: that Aaron was not told the car was used; the finance contract and purchase order were marked incorrectly; and the previous owner's name was erased in the owner's manual Aaron received.

"They (the salespersons at Williams) threw the word 'demonstrator' around a little easy," McGuirk said. He said he thought the entire thing was a "mistake" and that misrepresentation was "possible, feasible — but not probable."

"Fraud is one of the hardest things to prove," McGuirk said.

He said Aaron's charges would be difficult to prove since she got her money's worth.

Aaron first became aware that the car was used after looking at her service files in October. In January, she and Wayne Williams, owner of the dealership, discussed the history of the car.

"When I talked to Laurie Aaron back in January," Williams said, "I divulged the history of the car."

Williams said Aaron was not told the car's previous history because of "an error of communication" by Charles Hagen, Williams salesperson.

Williams said he did not know the car was in an accident because his dealership did not do the repair work.

"There was no intent by the company to defraud the customer," Williams said, "even though the facts appeared we intentionally misrepresented the car."

"If this is the way the system works, then I can live without the system," Williams said about the prospect of state disciplinary

BUT NOT AS MANY AS THIS YEAR

Fall term to bring triples again

By JOHN TINGWALL
State News Staff Writer

The verdict is in. Fall term 1976 will be a normal school year for MSU's freshman class. There will be football, there will be fee increases and, yes, there will be tripling.

To nobody's surprise, the MSU residence hall system will be packed to the gills again fall term, but probably not as crowded as it was in the fall of 1975.

Robert Underwood, MSU residence halls manager, unofficially estimates that MSU may be over the hump in terms of residence hall tripling, with the 1,000 tripled rooms dropping to 600 this coming fall.

"Right now," Underwood said, "we're anticipating 18,172 students in the system built to accommodate 17,500 students. But at this point I'm uncomfortable with any projections because we've taken a big drop in residence hall sign-ups as of last week."

As usual, incoming freshmen — the people most likely to be tripled — have been forewarned to expect an extra roommate in the fall. But at this point, Underwood is not certain if that message had to go out at all. He declined, however, to comment on how substantial the drop in room sign-ups has been.

"But tripling has been a puzzle to me, by God," Underwood said. "It's on the top of the gripe heap for various student groups, but we've had almost 250 voluntary triples last term. The student make the adjustments and apparently don't mind it."

Underwood has the evidence to substantiate that claim. There are still over 100 triples on campus, all voluntary, with students collecting a $54 rebate for each term they remain in a triple. In the Brody Complex, for instance, there are 12 rooms sitting empty, while 50 rooms remain tripled.

Gary North, residence halls program coordinator, said students are more than willing to take advantage of the rebate offer that now extends throughout the year, even after vacancies open up in the residence halls.

North attributes the drop in residence hall crowding to better job prospects, effects of the enrollment ceiling and a gradual but steady decline in college-age population.

"We could never justify building new housing now," North said, "especially when this is only a one-term problem and any new housing would probably stand empty three terms a year, after the fall term crowding has been dispersed."

"And in addition, everything we've read indicates our entrance rate, like all colleges, will continue to decline through the late 1970s."

As emergency housing measures, North said the sophomore on-campus living requirement will be waived again next year, and the conversion of Fee Apartments to medical school offices will be postponed at least another year. More married housing units in Spartan Village — 150 in all — will also be available fall term, he said. They will accommodate 300 students.

The Residence Halls Programs office has conducted studies, North said, which found that neither grades nor drop-out rates of students are affected by tripling.

Dorm dwellers face increases; rates may soar

Residence hall manager Robert Underwood estimates that the 1976-77 room and board rates will be raised by about $60 per year, from the present $1,342.50 to about $1,400.00 per year, pending approval of the trustees.

Student sign-ups will continue this week today from 6:30 p.m. and Wednesday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. for dormitory dwellers interested in reserving rooms in other residence halls.

Off campus dwellers will be able to sign up for on-campus housing Tuesday and Wednesday, May 18 and 19 from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at the residence hall of their choice after paying a housing deposit in W-190 Holmes Hall.

Ford, Church hope to gain momentum

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — President Ford's attempt to regain his front-runner status in the Republican presidential race and the late-start strategy of Democrat Frank Church are on the line Tuesday in Nebraska's presidential primary.

Ford hopes to rebound from four consecutive defeats by Ronald Reagan in the contest for the state's 25 nominating delegates and in the separate and unrelated popular vote "beauty contest."

Church and Jimmy Carter are in the center of the Democratic race for 23 delegates, though there are 11 names on their party's ballot.

Carter, maneuvering to close party ranks behind his candidacy, has arranged a private meeting with AFL-CIO President George Meany.

The two men, who talked once on the telephone but who have never met, will get together Friday in Meany's office across Lafayette Road from the White House.

Meanwhile, Church did some last-minute campaigning in Nebraska Monday, emphasizing his contention that Carter is soft on the issues.

He said at a Capitol steps news conference here that Carter's campaign has been marked by "generalities which may be calculated in such a way as not to offend the people with whom the candidate may disagree."

"Such campaigning, it seems to me, fails in serving the purpose of informing the people so they will know precisely where the candidate stands on the issues."

Carter spent the day at home in Plains, Ga., and was not campaigning in any of the states with primaries on Tuesday.

The race took on significance largely through timing: Ford needs to stop Reagan's momentum and Church becomes the stop-Carter man-of-the-week at a time the former Georgia governor has become a clear favorite for the Democratic nomination.

Secretary of State Allen Beermann predicts a record 415,000 Nebraskans will cast ballots, choosing party nominees in three congressional races, a U.S. Senate contest and a host of local elections as well as the presidential race.

toward the Democratic nomination. The Idaho senator's staff estimated he spent $125,000 here, with campaign offices in seven cities. Carter spent two days there and spent an estimated $40,000.

Ford campaigned in Omaha, the city of his birth, on Friday and addressed the University of Nebraska at Lincoln commencement exercises Saturday. Reagan spent two days and about $50,000 in the campaign that centered largely on electing delegates.

Crossover voting, which Ford's camp blamed in part for his earlier primary defeats, is not allowed in Nebraska. But the popular vote does not decide delegate selection.

Reagan's followers slated target delegates early, advertising the preferred delegates' names and urging that they be selected. Ford's Nebraska campaign chair-

MD fund drive gaining ground in tramp-a-thon

"Your help is their hope," reads the sign in the background, as members of Sigma Chi Fraternity, 729 E. Grand River Ave., attempt to get the jump on other sororities and fraternities competing to raise several thousand dollars for muscular dystrophy.

"We've been jumping since last Saturday," said Paul Dannhauser, a 19-year-old sophomore, as two members of a 12-man team continued a marathon quest for 168 hours of continuous trampoline activity.

"We take two-hour shifts and won't stop until next Saturday at 4 p.m.," he said, "rain or shine."

Dannhauser, who is coordinator of the fraternity's drive, said that by jumping, the fraternity hopes to attract enough interest to raise a good share of the money.

"We also have other activities scheduled for the week," he said. "Yesterday Alpha Phi had a car wash in our parking lot and raised $128 and today WVIC set up a remote broadcasting station from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. in front of the house."

"We had a license to sell beer last Saturday and hope to get another one for this weekend," Dannhauser said. "We've already got a band scheduled, so it should be a good weekend."

Drives for muscular dystrophy are not new to the fraternity, Michael Green, a 22-year-old senior, said.

"Last spring we did the same thing, but tried to break the world's record for continuous trampoline jumping," Green said. "But we fell short by about a month."

Green said that while the main purpose of the drive is to raise money for M.D., he hopes it will promote unity within the Greek system.

"Due to weather problems we got off to a bad start," Green said, "but we're still looking for a four digit number."

Jet crashes, 4 Americans die

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Four foreigners, identified by the Boeing aircraft company Monday as Americans, were among those reported killed in the crash of an Iranian Air Force 747 cargo jet in Spain on Sunday.

Sixteen persons were aboard the plane, an official Iranian news agency report said, and Spanish police said all died in the crash.

Boeing identified the Americans aboard the plane as Paul Hardman, 44, pilot instructor, of Ft. Worth, Tex.; Robert Wilson, 53, flight engineer, of Zenith, Wash.; William Townsend, 45, loadmaster, of Rapid City, S.D., and John Forsyth, 43, mechanic, of Lancaster, Calif. All were employed by Boeing and stationed in Tehran.

The crash was the second for a Boeing 747 since the jumbo jet went into service in 1970. The other, flown by the West German Lufthansa airline, crashed at Nairobi, Kenya, on Nov. 20, 1974, with 49 persons killed and 98 survivors.

Ford nominates new ambassador

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford nominated a GOP national committeemember Monday to be ambassador to Luxembourg, succeeding Ruth L. Farkas, appointed by former President Richard M. Nixon following a controversial donation to his re-election campaign.

The nomination of Rosemary L. Ginn, committeemember from Missouri, continues the tradition, established by President Truman, of assigning a woman to the post.

Farkas resigned last week. Her appointment by Nixon is part of an ambassadorship-selling investigation by the Special Watergate Prosecutor's Office. Farkas and her husband, a department store owner, contributed $300,000 to Nixon's 1972 campaign.

FDA recalls canned peppers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration Monday announced the precautionary recall of about 100 cases of canned cherry peppers of the type eaten by seven persons who were stricken with botulism poisoning.

About 1,700 cases of the peppers were distributed in one-gallon glass jars since last October to wholesalers in 16 states for use in restaurants and institutions. The FDA said none was sold for home use.

The peppers were distributed to wholesalers in several states throughout the country. Michigan was not among them.

The jar lids are coded with a number, 1 through 8, followed by MAR 1977D. They carry one of the following brand names: Best Maid, Lee, Pick-O-Pak, Decoy's, Morton's, Nifda, Nugget, Dreher's First Pick, Millar's, Quail, Code, Frosty Acres, New State, Kraft and Western Maid.

Kodama faces further charges

TOKYO, Japan (AP) — Yoshio Kodama, alleged kingpin in the Japanese part of the Lockheed scandal, was charged Monday with violating the foreign exchange law. The indictment was added to tax-evasion charges lodged earlier against him.

Lockheed executives testified before a U.S. Senate subcommittee in February that of $12 million spent on promotion efforts in Japan, more than $7 million went to Kodama and $2 million to unidentified Japanese government officials. Lockheed payoffs have also been reported to officials in several other countries.

In the Netherlands, the daily newspaper Algemeen Dagblad reported that a government commission has cleared Prince Bernhard of allegations that he received $1.1 million in Lockheed bribes, but that he must have known that his associates were getting payoffs.

Anarchist leader dies in jail

STUTTGART, West Germany (AP) — The death of anarchist Ulrike Meinhof in her prison cell produced bombings in Paris and Rome, paint smears on the home of the West German ambassador in Copenhagen and a demonstration by 300 people in West Berlin.

The body of the 41-year-old coleader of the Baader-Meinhof Gang was found hanging by a piece of towel Sunday morning from one of the bars on the window of her maximum security cell in Stammheim Prison.

Meinhof, Andreas Baader and two other leaders of the gang that called itself the Red Army Faction have been on trial in Stuttgart for nearly a year. They were charged with a series of terrorist attacks four years ago in which four American servicemen and a German policeman were killed.

Six whaling firms combine

TOKYO (AP) — Under international criticism and restricted to smaller quotas, six Japanese fishing companies have closed their whaling departments and set up one joint firm to do all their whaling.

The new Nippon Kyodo Hogeiki Co. has jobs for only about half the 3,000 persons who formerly worked in the industry. But management and labor agreed in late April on a plan to take care of the rest by voluntary retirements and transfers to other types of fishing.

An employee of the new firm commented: "We do not catch whales for fun but for eating. The anti-whaling people should realize that some 300,000 dolphins are killed annually and dumped back in the sea by American tuna boats."

British Liberal leader quits

LONDON (AP) — Jeremy Thorpe quit Monday as leader of Britain's Liberal party after what he called a "sustained witch hunt" connected with allegations he had a homosexual relationship with a male model.

The 46-year-old lawmaker again denied the charges relating to his association with model Norman Scott.

Thorpe had also been accused officially of an error of judgment in taking a nonexecutive directorship in a secondary banking concern that crashed.

He will stay on as a member of Parliament and was expected to attend a meeting with his colleagues at Westminster Tuesday to elect a new leader.

Military meat fraud admitted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Present and former inspectors Monday acknowledged receiving payoffs in what Senate investigators call a multimillion dollar military meat fraud. One former inspector said he was provided with call girls.

Spec. 4 Nadja Hoyer-Booth, 20, told a Government Operations subcommittee she received football tickets, perfume, clothing, weekend trips and food from packing plant executives.

"They never asked me to look the other way," she testified. "But I knew I wasn't doing proper inspections."

Charles Reidinger, a former military inspector, said he was given $200 in cash monthly and call girls on two occasions while he was a supervisor in charge of the Army's meat inspection service in Boston.

Reidinger said he got the money for "no nitpicking" in meat inspections. He did not say whether the call girls were for himself or for others.

Hoyer-Booth said she received the payoffs from executives of the G&G Packing Co. of Boston. Reidinger said his payments were arranged by Frank Goldberg and Harry Goldberg, owners of G&G and Blue Ribbon Frozen Foods Co. of Hamden, Conn.

Meat company officials were to testify later in the hearings. Subcommittee Chairperson Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., has alleged that Army inspectors received "thousands of dollars" in bribes and other favors, including the services of prostitutes, for approving inferior meat destined for military consumption.

The substandard meat — usually cheap, tough or fat — was being sold to the Pentagon by some commercial meat houses for as much as $4 a pound, Chiles said. He called it a conspiracy to defraud the government of millions of dollars.

Hoyer-Booth, still an inspector for the military, said she worked as an inspector at the G&G plant in 1974 when she was 18 years old. She said she had received only one day's instruction.

Early in her service at the plant, she said, a fellow taught her how to steal roasts by wrapping them in sa hamburger. On occasion supervising agents would ask her meat, she testified.

She told the subcommittee that some boxes of meat inspected by "X-ray vision" and samples to be tested were taken from the topmost boxes.

She said she once rejected a beef shipment because it was too much fat — and then had to remain at the plant until p.m. while employees made changes.

"That was the last time I ever rejected anything," she testified that she never observed any spoiled meat shipment but that some roasts were too fat and that some were too small or too big — which she said she considered things.

Both she and Reidinger have been named in a subcommittee memorandum as having allegedly received cash or other gifts from Ferdinand Romano, former general manager of the plant.

RAINSTORM ADDS TO MISERY

New tremors jolt Italy

UDINE, Italy (AP) — New tremors jolted northeast Italy on Monday, toppling weakened houses and damaging a national museum. A rainstorm added to the misery of the displaced thousands living in tent cities.

No new casualties were reported from two sharp tremors recorded early Monday. The national police in Rome listed the death toll at 815, but employees in the office coordinating rescue work here said 914 bodies had been recovered and 400 persons were missing.

An overnight rainstorm turned the crowded tent cities into lakes of mud. Officials said that some 25,000 people fleeing collapsed or threatened homes were now living in tents.

In Gemona, one of the towns hardest hit by the quake, survivors pulled wooden planks from the remains of houses to make paths through the mud.

Officials reported heavy damage to the National Archeological Museum in Cividale del Friuli, an ancient Roman city 10 miles from this provincial capital, as well as to churches and other old buildings. The officials said the museum's Roman remains and medieval art treasures would be transferred to a safer place.

The damages in Cividale added to a lengthening list of art works and historic monuments ravaged by the earthquake and some 50 aftershocks. Art experts urged rescue workers not to disturb the rubble of ancient churches and thus jeopardize their eventual restoration.

Virtually all the ancient castles and towers in the area were reported damaged or destroyed, including the famed castles of Gemona and Collaredo. The towers of several medieval churches collapsed. The complaints from survivors centered on the unsanitary conditions, lack of organization and absence of hot food in tent camps set up by the Interior Ministry.

Dr. Salvo Catania, a physician serving a tent camp in Gemona, said: "There was no organization at all when I arrived. There were no drugs, no squads searching for survivors and injured for 24 hours. We had to light fires in the middle of fields to sew them up."

Doctors said that for the moment there was no danger of epidemic as 80 per cent of the survivors had received shots against typhoid and cholera.

But they said lack of sanitary facilities and garbage disposal could cause problems in coming weeks.

The U.S. Embassy in Rome reported that the United States has provided an initial $473,620 in earthquake assistance and experts were flying in from Washington to plan further relief efforts.

Break-ins conducted by FBI, committee staff report says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI has conducted hundreds of break-ins, "despite the questionable legality of the technique and its deep intrusion into the privacy of targeted individuals," a Senate intelligence committee staff report says.

The break-ins, officially known as "surreptitious entries," were conducted for the purpose of photographing or seizing documents and installing bugs, according to the report released Monday.

The report is one of a series prepared by the intelligence panel's staff to back up recommendations in the committee's final report.

The Justice Dept. still permits the bureau to conduct break-ins to install bugs and refuses to rule out the possibility of using unauthorized entries or "black bag" jobs to obtain documents from foreign intelligence targets, the 17-page report noted.

"Although several attorneys general were aware of the FBI practice of break-ins to install electronic listening devices, there is no indication that the FBI informed any attorney general about its use of black bag jobs," the report said.

The FBI was unable to provide the committee with a complete accounting of the total number of break-ins because most records were destroyed soon after an entry was accomplished, the report said.

"Almost as many surreptitious entries were conducted in the same period against targets of criminal investigations," the report said.

The report named the Ku Klux Klan and the Socialist Workers party as two of the targets of FBI black bag jobs.

As described by the report, agents who performed break-ins would sometimes request the cooperations of a landlord in entering the premises. In other cases, the agents simply would enter through unlocked doors or pick the lock, the report said.

One break-in specialist said "only in a small proportion of the cases to which he was assigned was it necessary to pick a lock."

A partial list of material obtained from break-ins against the Socialist Workers party included correspondence detailing plans to obtain petition signatures to get the party on the ballot in the 1960 elections, a letter sent to President Eisenhower, a list of party members active in trade unions, photographs of party members and letters relating to the health of the national party chairman.

Health center might boost emergency, in-patient rates

By NANCY ROBERTS
State News Staff Writer

Students planning to get hurt or sick better do it now, because a proposal for rate increases for emergency and in-patient care at the University Health Center is being discussed and will possibly be voted on today.

Robert Hook, University Health Center business manager, said that the budget and finance committee of the MSU Health Care Authority will consider a 10 per cent increase in in-patient care and a 300 per cent increase in emergency care.

In-patient care includes private, semiprivate and ward rates. The present rates are $60 for a private room, $50 for a semiprivate room and $45 for a bed in a ward.

Emergency care is currently $6 and may increase to $18 if the proposal is passed.

The proposed increases will be discussed today at the budget and finance committee meeting. Hook said the increases may also be voted on today. He added that if the proposal is passed, he has "no idea" when it would take effect.

"It will depend on the committee's recommendation," he said.

The budget and finance committee will make recommendations to the Health Care Authority which, in turn, will make the final decision.

Even with the rate increases, in-patient and emergency care at the health center will still be less expensive than at other hospitals in the area.

Sparrow Hospital's rates are $85 for a private room, $74 for a semiprivate room and $72 for a bed in a ward. Emergency care costs $18.

St. Lawrence Hospital's rates are $86 for a private room, $76.50 for a semiprivate room and $74.50 for a bed in a ward. Emergency care is a minimum of $26.50, but officials at St. Lawrence said that probably more fees are involved for an emergency patient. Typical additional fees include hospital care for $16.50 and a doctor fee for $10.

"I have the impression that Olin rates are below Blue Cross and prepaid medical fees," Elliott Ballard, assistant to President Wharton, said.

Ballard said the MSU Board of Trustees has control of the Health Care Authority but that the authority's recommendations usually become the policy.

"Our prices are too low," he said. "We are not getting the return we are entitled to."

Several MSU health care officials were only vaguely familiar with or even totally unaware of the proposed increases.

Health Care Authority Administrative Asst. William Carr had heard about the inpatient rates but "had no idea" of the actual figures being discussed.

Roger Wilkinson, vice president of business and finance, had not heard about the proposal as of Monday.

"I haven't heard anything to this effect," said John Howell, assistant provost to health programs. "I find this very surprising."

FACULTY ASKS FOR RECOMMENDATIONS

Promotion procedures criticized

By FRANCES BROWN
State News Staff Writer

The MSU Board of Trustees rejected a resolution on May 11 which "condemns in the strongest terms the policy of the many annual spring recommendations for faculty promotions for approval on May 21, but the procedure for recommendations to the board was criticized by faculty members.

The Economics Dept. unanimously adopted a resolution on May 11 which "condemns in the strongest terms the policy of the many annual spring recommendations for faculty promotions for approval on May 21, but the procedure for recommendations to the board was criticized by faculty members.

Prof. Lawrence Lawrence said the Economics Dept. was "based on errors" but "Through the Economics

Dept. faculty decided that copies of the motion be sent to the dean of the College of Business, the acting provost, president Wharton and all members of the board of trustees, Provost Boger said he did not receive a copy.

Boger is scheduled to meet with Victor Smith, chairperson of the Economics Dept., today to discuss the resolution.

The usual procedure for recommendations to the board of trustees on faculty promotions is for the senior faculty members or faculty advisory group of each department to make a recommendation to the department chairperson, who in turn makes a recommendation to the dean of the college. Each dean makes a recommendation to the provost, who finally presents a list of faculty members to be considered for promotions to the board of trustees.

Boger said he would not discuss the number of faculty members who will be recommended for promotion or reveal their names until the day after the May 21 board meeting.

A survey by the State News of the colleges in the University revealed that most college deans have submitted their recommendations to the provost but the lists are not released to the faculty.

"You can assume that if your name was recommended to the department chairmen by the department advisory committee, then you're going to be recommended to the provost," said Keith Goldhammer, dean of the College of Education.

But C. Patric Larowe, professor of economics, criticized Provost Boger for what he called a "gag rule" calling for secrecy of the lists of recommendations.

"Our contention," Larowe said, "is that faculty members who may be up for promotion should be informed as to what is happening to their promotion recommendation as the process is operating, not have to wait until the board of trustees acts upon their promotions."

"We further contend that faculty members in the departments need to know how promotion recommendations are progressing so as to enable the faculty in general to participate in the promotion process and to correct any mistakes that may be made by the administration because it's acting upon incomplete or inaccurate information."

The recommendation does allow for faculty members denied promotion to ask for an explanation, but Larowe questioned the fairness of the policy.

"If a faculty member can ask why she or he has been turned down," Larowe said, "but can't find out whether it was the action of the department head, the dean, or the provost, the aggrieved faculty member isn't going to get useful information."

Under the current Interim Faculty Grievance Procedure a faculty member may file a grievance against any administrator.

for June 1 trial

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The federal Bureau of Prisons refuses to release Patricia Hearst to state authorities for a June 1 trial in Los Angeles, her prosecutor said Monday.

Deputy Dist. Atty. Sam Mayerson said he would urge the judge in Hearst's case to proceed with the kidnap, assault and robbery trial of her codefendants, Symbionese Liberation Army members William and Emily Harris.

The three, who traveled together as fugitives, are scheduled to have a pretrial hearing Wednesday.

Candidates trek across Michigan

The calm before the storm will end today when candidates in Michigan's May 18 primary begin thundering into the state, and at least one candidate — President Ford — will be thundering a bit more than he had planned.

Democrats Jimmy Carter, Morris Udall and George Wallace will join Republicans Ronald Reagan and Ford in a tempestuous trek across the state during the remainder of the week.

Ford aides announced Monday he will make two campaign trips to Michigan, instead of one, in an effort to prevent the possibility of Reagan gaining a major upset in Ford's home state.

Ford will spend Wednesday in the Detroit area, beginning with a morning press conference at Somerset Inn in Troy. He will then campaign at two suburban shopping centers before speaking to the Economic Club of Detroit at 3:30 p.m.

His second trip on Saturday and Sunday will take him to Ann Arbor and to the annual Tulip Festival in Holland.

Arizona Congressman Udall will spend eight days in Michigan, including a stop at a service station in Detroit today to dramatize what he says are former Georgia Gov. Carter's inconsistencies on the oil controversy.

Udall will leave for media interviews in Lansing Tuesday afternoon and hold a telethon at 9:30 p.m. on Lansing's Channel 6 WJIM. A Udall spokesman said the congressman will answer questions called in by viewers.

Alabama Gov. Wallace will arrive at Capital City Airport in Lansing at 1 p.m. Wednesday, and will speak at the airport before a scheduled 1:30 p.m. press conference. Wallace will also visit Detroit, Muskegon and Battle Creek on Wednesday, followed on Friday by stops in Grand Rapids, Saginaw, Flint and Detroit.

Carter will make appearances in Detroit and Flint on Thursday, though no definite schedule has yet been announced.

Reagan will make stops in Battle Creek, Kalamazoo and Flint on Thursday evening, followed by a Friday morning press conference in Detroit. He will also speak before the Economic Club at Cobo Hall Friday afternoon.

Nonreturnable ban left up to the voters

It seems that when it comes to important issues in this state, citizens can't count on lawmakers to take productive action, and are forced to take up the petition and pen and act themselves. This has been the case with the nuclear energy moratorium and the graduated income tax. Now it is the case with the ban on nonreturnable beverage containers.

The state bottle bill, HB 4296, hasn't budged an inch from the House Appropriations Committee since it was first bottled up there last November.

The Sierra Club has now entered the picture on behalf of Michigan citizens by launching a petition campaign aimed at putting the nonreturnables issue on the November ballot.

If the conservation club gets the necessary 300,000 signatures, Michigan voters will have the decision to ban nonreturnable beverage containers.

We endorse the Sierra Club's attempt to eliminate this unnecessary pollution from our environment and urge MSU students to sign the petitions when the opportunity comes up. MSU is targeted for 20,000 signatures.

There has been much debate over the issue of jobs as it relates to the throwaway ban. Both sides claim their position will create more jobs. We feel that the realities of this issue are insignificant when compared to the issues of environment and natural resources. It may be true that the nature and number of jobs will change somewhat, but we cannot find any evidence to support the claims of economic disaster. Some plants may find it necessary to shift production, but pronouncements of wholesale liquidations are little more than scare tactics.

State lawmakers don't seem to appreciate the issues of environmental pollution and resource wastage involved in the production of throwaways.

Yet, all appearances seem to point to the state's support of the idea. Nonetheless, the legislature, despite the throwaway ban's merits, has been sitting on it for months.

Thus the situation has become one of doing it yourself if you want it done at all.

MSU students and Michigan voters should be glad that a group with the stature of the Sierra Club has stepped in on their behalf. There is no reason why the club's job in this petition campaign should be made any harder than it already is.

Booze age under siege

Certain prominent state groups, among them the PTA, are beginning to urge their support for changing the current legal drinking age of 18 to the previous 1971 level of 21.

Apparently, high school teachers, policemen and parents are becoming alarmed at the increase in alcoholic consumption by teenagers and its harmful effect upon their morals and educational achievement.

We believe that parents and community officials are overdoing it, placing more blame on the current drinking age than it deserves as a corrupting influence on high school-aged youth. Perhaps they should look to the failures of the educational system as a whole or the deficiencies of the community itself in developing the character of its youth.

A repeal of the 18-year-old drinking age would create an unaccountable disjuncture between the age of majority and the drinking age, certainly an absurd contradiction in our legal definition of adulthood.

Carter loses a liberal

WASHINGTON — The resignation of Robert Shrum, a 32-year-old speechwriter, is like the fall of a sparrow in the growing cosmos of Jimmy Carter's triumphant campaign.

Shrum represented Jimmy Carter's opening to the left. A certified liberal who had written for John Lindsay, Edmund Muskie and George McGovern, Shrum joined Carter on April 19 because he thought "Carter had found the idiom to reach across the deep divisions of our time."

Nine days later, the night of Carter's Pennsylvania sweep, he quit, persuaded that Carter is really a Republican at heart and, moreover, "manipulative and deceitful." Last weekend, Shrum made public his letter of resignation, in which he told the front-runner that he wasn't sure that Carter believed anything except that he should be President.

Shrum says his problem was that he could not handle the difference between the public Carter and the private Carter: the Carter who spoke fervently of the plight of miners before a labor audience and the Carter who on the campaign plane told Shrum he opposed increased black-lung benefits for miners, because "they chose to be miners."

The Carter camp's reaction to the defection of their first outsider was of interest. On Friday, when the word began to get around, the Carter people said Shrum was still on board. On Saturday, they said he had never been on the payroll. (This was technically true; although a salary of $23,500 had been agreed to, Shrum had neglected to fill out the forms.)

On Sunday, Carter angrily refused to "comment on that young man." On Monday, Carter, smile back in place, called Shrum "a superlative speechwriter" and suggested that Shrum's departure had been caused by professional pique because Carter had not used all his material. The candidate also, inexplicably, insisted that he preferred to write his own speeches, which, if literally true, raises the question of why Shrum had been hired at all.

Shrum says that after five days he knew he was in the wrong place, but was persuaded to stay on by Press Secretary Jody Powell and by Pat Caddell, an old friend and fellow alumnus of the McGovern campaign. He left after composing the Pennsylvania victory statement.

Shrum, who is out of a job and has, in the eyes of one professional, "ruined himself because he has broken all the rules," doesn't think his action will have the slightest effect on Carter's nomination.

"But he lies," says Shrum, "and nobody will say it. I can't excuse myself from saying something because I tell myself that it wouldn't make any difference. Too many people did that during the Vietnam war. Carter doesn't believe he isn't telling the truth. It's just a constant and pervasive thing."

Faced with a choice between Carter and Ronald Reagan, Shrum says, he would vote for Carter. But if it's Ford, "I'd have to think hard about it. Although I disagree with Ford, he seems at least to me to be an open and reasonable man."

The Shrum commotion coincides with the publication in Harper's of a review of what the "I-will-never-tell-a-lie" candidate did to counter the publication of an article by Steven Brill in Harper's March issue, called "The Pathetic Lies of Jimmy Carter."

Lewis Lapham, the author, who is also editor of Harper's, charges that the Carter forces launched a campaign of character assassination against Brill, a 25-year-old writer who had also, as it happens, once worked for John Lindsay.

Jody Powell asked for an advance copy, "to prepare ourselves to reply." He promised Lapham, "on my honor," not to distribute it. But what he did, according to Lapham, was to give "The Pathetic Lies" to reporters friendly to Carter and circulate it among Georgia supporters, who began calling and writing to protest "the garbage." Brill was tagged as a man who had flunked out of Yale law School and who had been retained by Birch Bayh, and identified widely as "a liberal hit-man" and a "hatchetman."

Before the article reached the stands, Carter was telling sympathetic Granite Staters that "The Pathetic Lies" was "very, very vicious, full of untruths."

Time magazine attacked Brill, imputing motives and cast doubt on his lion. The day the magazine appeared, Lapham says, Carter agents in Florida handing out Brill's critical study of Jackson (which had been commended by the ADA) as the "work of an accurate and truthful reporter."

The Harper's study may have had effect as the Shrum resignation of thousands who are racing to the polls to cast their ballots for a sure winner.

In the short term, the Carter camp probably will close ranks to outside matter how "superlative" their conclusion. But the general election worry because of the doubts among same liberal Democrats who stayed 1968 and hang back from Carter, they do not believe he is what he says. As one Democrat put it, "Lots of Democrats will vote for Ford because he'll be there for four more years. If it's Carter, he'll be gone in eight."

Reagan best bet for GOP

If it had been President Lyndon Johnson against Sen. Eugene McCarthy (or against Sen. Robert Kennedy), the verdict would have been unambiguous. Johnson won his first contest against McCarthy, but McCarthy's vote (42 per cent) was so impressive, wrested as it was from an incumbent president, Johnson knew it was all over and promptly announced he would not run for re-election. Ronald Reagan authorized a prediction that he would take 40% of the vote in New Hampshire. But December reports from the polls showed him leading the President among Republican and independent voters nationwide, and his aides were carried away. Before Reagan could stop them, they were talking about defeating Ford in New Hampshire, then going south to Florida for a knockout blow.

What has happened is, so far as I know, unique. The narrow loss in New Hampshire took the steam out of the Reagan movement and caused a loss in Florida, though again by a narrow margin: and at this point, another Ford victory in Illinois suggested it was all over. But North Carolina changed all that. And, now, Texas.

The victory in Texas was simply unsimilable by strategists in the Ford campaign. There are no excuses. Ford came in as a sitting champion, only slightly dented in North Carolina. He poured into Texas everything a President has to vouchsafe: his royal presence, the air force fleet, the large sycophantic crowds, the wife, the son, military bases, judgeships. Reagan ran a relatively parsimonious campaign, using public transportation because Congress, horrified by the excesses of Richard Nixon at election time, is itself withholding public funds, having first made it difficult for challengers to raise private funds. Reagan's victory, under the circumstances, was on a grand scale. It was indeed a rout of a sitting president.

More time than necessary has been given to examination of the Panama Canal issue, and the differences between Reagan's and Ford's understanding of the technical meaning of sovereignty. Sen. Goldwater, who once recommended sending the Marines to protect Guantanamo Bay, appears shocked at the prospect of sending U.S. troops to defend the Panama Canal, for reasons not instantly clear.

The fact of the matter is that Panama is not, research indicates, "sovereign" American soil. But the net of the matter is that we exercise rights over the Canal "as if" we were sovereign in the area. And the response to Reagan's blunt insistence that this is no time to dilute our authority over an area which would otherwise be dominated by a dictator whose hero-on-earth is Fidel Castro strikes Texan voters and, I should think, Wisconsin voters, as strategically sensible, and symbolically imperative.

Panama aside, there is in the timber of Reagan's voice something of a no-nonsense devotion to the idea of stopping the growth of government. By contrast, Ford is looked upon as someone who would prefer the government be curbed, but who could not muster a popular mandate that would bring significant pressures to bear on an disciplined Congress.

People who have never voted Republican in a primary in their lives gave their hand to a Republican president their own old-time Republican John Tower — and said they Reagan.

The pressures will now intensify. Mr. Ford knows that if he brings still pressure to bear against Reagan, the tactics of Rockefeller against Goldwater in 1964, the nomination may not be having. But I suspect that a few Republican voices, now that even knows who the Democratic contender be, are likely to be whispering themselves this morning: Carter Ford? . . . Carter versus Reagan second is unquestionably the better Republicans.

Jimmy Carter

I may not be Sen. Birch Bayh, but I hope Micki Maynard will not mind if I respond to her May 5 State News column entitled, "Just where does Jimmy Carter stand?"

I am probably more in the fog concerning the intent and direction of her article than she might be concerning Carter's stand on the issues. I would have expected the article to have been better researched, so as to present to the readers an objective analysis (pro or con) of the many issues Jimmy Carter has taken a position on.

To state that Carter has not taken a firm stand on any issue is utter nonsense. To quote the Oct. 13, 1975, edition of Time magazine, "There is not scarcely a national issue on which he (Jimmy Carter) has not developed a firm stand." Or the Nov. 18, 1975, editorial of the Christian Science Monitor which said, "People will come to their own conclusions as to whether Mr. Carter is right on the issues. But at least he appears willing to address them with ideas in which he believes."

The reason why I quote these two sources is because they appeared approximately six and seven months ago. In the intervening months, there have been many opportunities to read and hear the policies of Jimmy Carter.

Item: Jimmy Carter favors the Equal Rights amendment.

Item: Jimmy Carter supports the HJUM Item: Jimmy Carter supports the Humphrey-Hawkins Employment Bill.

Item: Back in the days before supporting Civil Rights was popular, Jimmy Carter was the only white male who refused to join the White Citizens' Council and his family was the only one to vote to let black families into their church.

I could go on and on but space does not permit me the luxury, however our organization will be canvassing the campus with more detailed position papers.

For those who read the newspapers and magazines, the case of Jimmy Carter's "vagueness" on the issues has faded with each opponent.

Ethnocentricity

In response to Hilla Cross' letter of May 4, where do you get this silly idea of one language, one country?

The people of Puerto Rico are U.S. citizens just like you and me, yet their language is Spanish. The native-born Hawaiian, no doubt, speaks his own language much of the time. And consider for just a moment the native American. He was speaking his own tongue long before your ancestors immigrated here. If you desire more examples, try the Cajun (French) of Louisiana.

The point is that a language sanctioned by the government does not mean it is the only language of the land. We could all do without such ill-conceived ethnocentricity.

U-M research

So Mike Macksood (Viewpoint, May 5) is against the U-M experiments because they may lead to genetic engineering.

I agree there are many valid concerns about this research, but I can't take his blanket condemnation very seriously and neither should anyone else. If Mike suffers from diabetes, phenylketonuria, muscular dystrophy, Huntington's chorea or any other of a host of diseases with genetic causes or components, I'll reconsider.

Otherwise, his position appears to be: "I'm all right, to hell with anybody else."

Special case

I have just checked my illegally parked motorcycle which is sitting in front of East Holmes Hall. It has a ticket. This comes as no surprise but, since I have received so many, I feel compelled to comment.

A motorcycle is not a car. A bike has only two wheels and occupies very little space.

There were five bikes in one parking where we were ticketed. A motor also expensive and vulnerable. $1,000 invested in my bike and I do not appreciate having it vandalized. Ag should park it in the X-lot. However term it was there and during the co the term it was vandalized three times (financial) loss of $13. The first and times both proved dangerous for caused brake failure, the other sei engine. Both were discovered of highway. When my brakes failed I though I was driving low speed and damage myself or my bike.

It looks to me like the University giving me three choices; take it home, ticketed or have it vandalized. The lousy choices. I recognize the University position on motor vehicles and I understand the necessity of the same. But I think that a motorcycle is a special case of its increased vulnerability and de size. I know that I am not the only with this sort of problem (Did vandalized? There is a motorcycle sit X-lot that has been completely ste and I would like to hear from the res on-campus bikers. VIEWPOINT: GENETICS

Why have a doomsday view?

By PATRICK COMER
The "Pandora's box" argument put forth by Mike Macksood (State News May 10) reveals visions of Hitler's superman race and like philosophies. When the question of research that addresses itself to genetic aspects, it is likely to be defeated. Anything can go wrong, it is safe and easy to say such projects.

supposes that, in the process of the University of Michigan's studies, any fabricated life-form might encounter the conditions that will allow explosive growth. We must remember that during the study these organisms are highly isolated and any conditions favorable to them in the laboratory are not likely to occur in any abundance in the natural state.

As to his argument that "... in 1968 scientists may have the power to almost totally engineer the nature and functions of living things," we should pay particular attention to the words "may" and "almost." True, genetics is an up-and-coming field, that money is the main determining factor.

As to the human factor, I personally doubt that any one person or group of persons could effectively "exploit genetic engineering to serve immediate human needs (and become famous in the process)." The current state of genetics disallows this. How anyone could "exploit genetic engineering" without necessary knowledge or technology is far beyond me.

"We have no business messing around in this area." False. We have every right and responsibility to do so. Considering his interests lie in the biological fields, Macksood seems to have forgotten his introductory courses here.

Our world (and who could guess how many other worlds) is literally saturated with organisms that cause much human suffering and disease. I am speaking of bacteria and, particularly, viruses. No other organism has caused so much furor and debate as the virus. Just think for a moment what it might mean to the human race if a geneticist could get a firm handle on the processes of replication in the virus. It could open up vast areas of human medicine, plant and animal breeding and other areas that could revolutionize life on earth.

We may even be on the way to understanding the basic processes of genetic inheritance, the key to life itself and the means to the survival of the species.

Potter Park Zoo not far away

"You belong in the zoo!"

That was one of the nicer things your mom yelled at you for tearing up the house at a time when life was free and uneventful and your biggest problem was remembering where you put your crayons.

And then you got to see what a zoo was really like on the fourth grade class field trip or on a Saturday with your parents when you begged your father to give you five cents to buy peanuts to throw at the monkeys.

That may have been long ago but it is not so far away. Lansing has the Potter Park Zoo, said to be one of the best run and financed zoo-park operations for a city its size anywhere.

Over 500 animals reside in the zoo, which is located within the 102-acre park on Pennsylvania Avenue, just south of the I-496 expressway.

Within the five acres that is the actual zoo are housed dwarf horses, badgers, llamas, a bird-house with over 40 different species of birds and a pit area where wolves, a coyote, bear and dingo roam.

There is also an elephant called Bingo, named by the students of the Bingham Street School who won a citywide school contest to earn money to buy the elephant back in 1972. The "baby elephant," as it is still called, weighs nearly 4,000 pounds and zoo officials say he is only half grown.

Just recently a baby animal feeding area was opened where visitors can buy bottles of milk for 25 cents and are allowed to go inside and hand feed the baby goats and lambs.

The zoo is open all year round though the buildings are only open daily between 10 a.m. and 8 p.m. In front of the zoo there are acres of land to fly kites, have a picnic or just serve as a place to go to spend a warm spring afternoon.

Unfortunately, the fickle weather has prevented the zoo from letting out some of the animals from their indoor winter housing.

"We've been wanting to put the monkeys out on the monkey island," zoo director Jerry Miller said. "But with the weather being like it is we'll just have to wait."

ASMSU Student Loan Office

solves short-term money woes

by DOROTHY NEATON
If money grew on trees, no one has found a solution to the problem, but the ASMSU Student Loan Office is the next best thing — money.

The ASMSU Student Loan Office was started in 1965 with the idea of supplying needy students with quick cash.

It takes only three minutes to get a $25 short-term loan, interest-free for three weeks.

The office, at 307 Student Services Bldg., is open to undergraduates with a current ID card.

"Students like the informal loan arrangement," says Pullman, ASMSU local president, "because it is simple with no questions asked." To take out a loan, students go to the loan office in the Student Services Bldg. and fill out a short form and a self-addressed post card as a reminder when payment is due. After the form is completed, a check is made out for the amount of money requested. The check can be cashed at most local banks.

During any given week, the loan office gives out an average of 190 loans or approximately $4,750, Pullman said.

The majority of the loans are collected, she added, but after the three-week limit, there is a $1 per week late charge assessed.

"A lot of students think the dollar penalty is a little steep," Pullman said. "But it is more or less to force the students to pay the money. Most complaints come from people who get upset when they get to registration and can't pay off the loan there. They must come back to the loan office to pay it."

A financial hold card will be issued for outstanding loans at the end of the term and there is a $2 fine. Students who have received a hold card will not be eligible for another loan for one year, because that student is considered a bad credit risk.

The ASMSU Student Loan Office is funded by the 50 cent student tax at registration each term. Graduate students pay the same tax, but have no loan program established and must go to the Financial Aids Office, which handles loans of more than $25.

The Financial Aids Office offers loans from $25 to the entire amount needed to pay for a school year, but requires more time and information. Students will have a two-day wait, and must arrange an appointment with a counselor before the money will be paid.

Maintenance computer monitors troubles

By DONNA BAKUN
State News Staff Writer

When a fan belt wears thin or a roof needs inspection, the MSU Physical Plant staff knows just what to do. With the help of a terminal located in the Physical Plant on Stadium Road, maintenance men are able to pinpoint trouble spots or plan routine inspections of all academic buildings.

The terminal, which is linked to the CDC 6500 Central Control Computer in the Computer Sciences Building, is part of an all-University preventive maintenance plan designed to prevent breakdowns in the electrical, plumbing, heating, air conditioning and structure of the buildings.

not a new concept, but the addition of the computer to maximize efficiency and minimize repair costs is.

Howard Wilson, director of building services at the Physical Plant has been involved with the program since its inception in 1968.

"We took inventory of all mechanical equipment, noting what we should do on a monthly, annual and skill level," Wilson said. "At that time we manually wrote out assignment slips, and in 1972 when the feedback system was adjusted, the assignment slips were entered into the computer's memory bank. The cards are programmed to eject from the computer when repair dates near," Wilson said.

The terminal also issues maintenance work on a fixed frequency level that revolves around the schedule of the academic year. Approximately 20 per cent of the total maintenance program is channeled through the Physical Plant terminal, and presently 50,000 man hours are filled answering work assignment slips during the year.

Dormitories also participate in the preventive maintenance program.

"We use our own card system, but we use the Physical Plant terminal," said Robert Underwood, manager of residence halls.

Has the program been successful with the addition of the computer?

"Our volume of repairs caused by breakdown is lower than it used to be, and this is a factor in reducing energy consumption," said Wilson.

The computerized maintenance program has received commendation from the Assn. of Physical Plant Administrators.

"We're very proud of our system," Wilson said.

$27.50 will buy parts of bridge

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — For $27.50, you'll soon be able to buy a piece of cable from the original Golden Gate Bridge. About 19 miles of cable, replaced after 39 years of holding up the graceful span, will be chopped into four-inch lengths, mounted on redwood bases and sold as souvenirs.

Promoters expect to start selling the chunks of mounted bridge cable through the mail by mid-May, relying exclusively on magazines for advertising.

The 500 pieces of cable were replaced at a cost of $8 million because rust was eating away at the points where they attached to the roadway.

Anita Lee, a versatile athlete and a freshman on the women's track team, expresses excitement during the Big Ten women's track meet held at MSU May 1. Lee will be traveling to Kansas State University with 13 other teammates this weekend to participate in the AIAW national championships.

Lee's future looks promising

By CATHY CHOWN
State News Sports Writer

If my life depended on it, I probably couldn't even jump over a four-foot bar. If a band of Indians were chasing me, I couldn't jump across a 10-foot moat filled with alligators. But there are probably those who could. Anita Lee, a freshman on MSU's women's track team, has been jumping over five-foot bars and 18-foot "moats" since she was just a kid.

When Lee was nine, "Father laughed at the prospect of my participating in a track meet," she recalled. But when she tried running and jumping, his mind changed.

Lee competed for the Detroit Track Club in the Youth Games in New York that year. The next year she set her first record at the Youth Games in St. Louis in the long jump.

Lee set a national record in the long jump, and a world record in the high jump the following year. A 17 foot 7 inch leap in the long jump, and a 5 foot leap in the high jump. Pretty damn good for an 11 year old.

But it didn't end there. When Lee was 12, she set another national record in the long jump, this time jumping 18 feet 6 inches. She had to quit because of an injury when she was 13, but Lee said that she needed a rest anyway because she might have gotten sick of track before she got any older.

Lee had three years of high school experience at Detroit Cass Tech before joining forces with the MSU squad.

In 1972 Lee won the long jump and high jump in the state high school track meet. In 1973 she won the long jump and the 80 yard hurdles, and placed second in the high jump.

The next year, Lee again won the state meet long jump and high jump.

Coach of the women's track team, Nell Jackson, said she expressed an interest in having Lee attend MSU and also felt Lee came here because of the good program that MSU has. Lee herself added that an old friend of hers, Jim Bibbs, acting coach of the men's track team here, had something to do with her choosing MSU.

"Coach Bibbs always keeps track of what 'his girls' are doing. He is always popping up somewhere and always seems to know what you're doing," Lee said.

Though Lee likes long jump and hurdles best, she most adequately filled a much needed high jump position. Lee jumped 5 feet 9 inches in practice while her best competitive jump was 5 feet 8 inches, is the current MSU record.

She also holds the MSU record in long jump, with a leap of 1 1/2 inches, which she jumped at the Becky Boone Relays last month.

"Anita is a strong competitor. She is a talented and versatile performer, as she also can compete in the pentathlon," Jackson said.

Jackson said, however, that Lee hasn't had the opportunity to spend as much time training as she would like. Lee added that she needs to "get used to the routine here."

"I just want to do well in everything, but the time just goes so fast," Lee said.

Lee has captured her share of first-place laurels already this season. She won the long and high jumps in the OSU Invitational Pentathlon at Bowling Green and set records in the long jump and high jump at the Becky Boone Invitational, in addition to other firsts.

Going to the Olympics in 1980 is a pretty high goal to set. Lee can get in shape, that is her goal.

"It's difficult to get in shape when you are in school. You have to have our down periods, from all the pressure," Lee said. Currently, she puts in about three hours a day, enough to be relaxed about practicing without pushing it.

The Olympics are not for another four years, and right now she is worrying about the Assn. for Intercollegiate Athletics Women (AIAW) national meet to be held this weekend. An outstanding freshman just could win her events.

Women's grants near

By JOE KIRBY
State News Sports Writer

It's been a long wait but it appears that MSU women may be getting closer to achieving athletic equality with the Spartan men.

Plans are currently in the works to begin offering athletic scholarships to women this fall and officials in the MSU athletic department are busy trying to get something together before the athletic budget is due.

"We are putting together some formats right now and studying what the money effect will be over a four-year period," athletic director Joe Kearney said. "They will start this fall and we do anticipate making an announcement in the next few weeks."

Currently only two other Michigan universities, Central Michigan and Eastern Michigan, have plans to offer women's scholarships this fall.

Central Michigan was the first to announce a program for women athletes. Central's program, which was announced last December and will begin this fall, is unique in that no recruiting will be involved.

The women must first earn a place on the team before they are eligible for the grants. Central has a three-year program which means that in 1979 the women will have the same number (84) of scholarships as the men in all the nonrevenue sports.

Eastern Michigan's program is similar to Central's except that the scholarships can be offered to incoming freshmen. After three years, Eastern will offer 84 women's scholarships which is equal to the men in the nonrevenue sports.

Eastern asst. athletic director Carol Huston said it would be up to the individual coaches to decide how they wanted to use the scholarships.

"We are encouraging freshmen women to investigate our program," she said, "because the scholarships are available to incoming freshmen.

"We are very pleased with the cooperation we have gotten from our administration in setting up our program," Huston added.

Nell Jackson, MSU asst. athletic director in charge of women's athletics, said it looks like MSU will be offering some scholarships for women this fall but the specifics haven't been worked out yet.

Jackson said she would like to see a program where the University could offer scholarships to incoming freshmen but added that the women are limited by the Assn. for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (AIAW) in the recruiting procedures they can use.

The AIAW states that the school cannot pay for a visit to campus by the athlete but the athlete can visit at her own expense, a university representative cannot be paid for recruiting and the women's athletic director is responsible for all recruitment and must maintain a file of all letters that are sent out.

SURDAM, WILLITS LEAD SPARTANS

Stickmen trounce East Lansing

By GREG SCHREINER
State News Sports Writer

The MSU lacrosse team put another game in the win column Sunday as the Spartans dumped the East Lansing Lacrosse Club by a score of 14-9 on the secret practice field.

The East Lansing club consists mostly of MSU alumni, such as Ron Hebert and Mike Richard, both of whom finished their lacrosse careers at MSU last season.

Another member of the East Lansing club is Fred Hartman, Spartan head coach. Hartman alternated between coaching the MSU squad and playing defense for East Lansing.

"It was a fun game for everyone," Hartman said. "We (MSU) needed a game like this to keep us fresh."

If not for Sunday's game, the Spartans would have had a two-week layoff before next Saturday's regular season finale against fellow Midwest Lacrosse Assn. member OSU.

Kevin Willits continued his torrid scoring pace for the Spartans as he tallied six points on the day, pumping in three goals and three assists.

Dave Surdam was high goal man for MSU as he put five shots past the East Lansing goalie. Doug Peterson added three goals of his own, while Harley Luplow picked up a goal and an assist; Mike Waite, a goal and two assists and Tim Topalian pushed in a goal to round out the Spartan's scoring.

Hebert was high scorer for East Lansing as he fired two goals into the Spartan net and added two assists. Richard also tallied two goals and he added one assist.

Hebert was leading scorer on last year's MSU squad with 33 points and is currently ninth on the Spartan all-time scoring list. Hebert had been the MSU goalie for three years prior to 1975.

Richard concluded a three-year stint with MSU at midfield in 1975, finishing with 15 points for fifth best on the team. He ranks 14th on the career scoring list.

In the first quarter of Sunday's game, East Lansing and MSU battled to a 1-1 tie as Surdam and Hebert scored. The East Lansing squad went out front by two before the Spartans could come back with three to take a 4-3 halftime lead. Luplow put the Spartans out in front to stay as he put his goal in with no time remaining in the half.

MSU outscored East Lansing 5-3 in both the third and fourth quarters. East Lansing rallied to within 11-9 in the fourth period before Surdam slammed home his fifth goal for insurance for the Spartans.

The win lifts MSU's season record to 3-9. The Spartans will need a win on Saturday against the Buckeyes if they want to avoid a winless league season. OSU is coming off a 10-7 loss to Bowling Green, a team that beat MSU 23-8.

I.M. Notes

Entries are being accepted today and Wednesday only, starting at 8 a.m., for team golf, fraternity and residence hall. Only 40 entries will be accepted and can be turned in to 201 Men's IM Bldg. Charge for students is $3.25 and $4 for faculty.

Batsmen move to third; will meet WMU today

With Sunday's dumping of OSU in a doubleheader, the outlook for the MSU baseball squad has changed.

"We're close now," says asst. coach Frank Pellerin. "We have a shot at taking the Big Ten and we're going to do our best to take it."

The result of MSU's new incentives will be evident today as the Spartans journey to Kalamazoo to face the Broncos of Western Michigan University in a scheduled doubleheader.

"We're taking six pitchers down there with us," Pellerin continued. "The guys that pitched this weekend won't go with us, so they'll get a chance to rest up."

Rick Moore, junior southpaw, will take the mound for the Spartans in the first game of the twinbill, while Don Beck is slated to start the second game for MSU.

The two games signal the start of a six-game road tour that includes four games against Big Ten rivals this weekend. The Spartans will be in Evanston, Ill., on Saturday to meet Northwestern in a doubleheader before going to Madison, Wis., for a twinbill against Wisconsin on Sunday.

The season will wrap up a week later as MSU will take on U-M in a single nine-inning game in East Lansing on May 22, and a single nine-inning game in Ann Arbor on May 23.

The JV squad has a busy schedule this week as they play six games in three days. The Spartans played at Lansing Community College in a doubleheader Monday night, will meet Alma College in a twinbill at Kobs Field today at 1 p.m. and will face St. Clair Community College for two games on Wednesday.

An Epiphone guitar is carefully designed, crafted and assembled from the finest rosewood, maple, and spruce. So it looks more expensive than it is. But here's the greatest part. Epiphone sounds and plays every bit as good as it looks. So before you buy, shop around. And compare. For action, feel and sound. We think you'll find that Epiphone looks, plays and feels like $300. Referral center slices red tape people could name maybe six. "We don't pretend to be experts or know everything about each agency, but if a case comes in we work until we find an agency that they (the client) feel is suitable and will help them," she said. "There aren't many agencies which do that."

Set up 10 months ago by Rep. David C. Hollister, D-Lansing, the office has already handled 503 cases and 66 information requests through the eight members of its volunteer staff. "This office is very unique in several ways," Hollister said. "It's unique in that there is no tax money coming in. It's all supported by volunteer contributions. It's also unique because we have a couple of Republicans on our board of directors — Dick Sode, Ingham County drain commissioner, and Pat Babcock of the governor's office. It is a community center and its purpose is to try and solve problems."

Capitol. Work is usually carried out in limited office space with only a secretary and volunteer aide.

Hollister stressed that the center is not "the Hollister office" even though it is associated with his legislative office. Furthermore, the freshman legislator does not serve in a decision-making capacity on its board of directors.

Fett, a VISTA worker, said the center's greatest value probably lies in the fact that it will handle any problem that comes through the door.

"We do a lot of information referral," she said, "but they remain our clients and we do the followup." Fett added that being associated with a state representative does make a difference.

"There is certain information that we are entitled to and there are certain avenues open to us that wouldn't be open to us if we weren't associated with Dave (Hollister)," she said.

The center has successfully closed 346 of the cases brought to its attention. Others remain open or are classified as "on-going" if the center is unable to provide immediate help, as in the case of an appeal or multiple problems which prevent speedy resolution.

The center draws people from all walks of life who share a desire to become involved.

"We have a lot of college kids working here getting credits, we have volunteer senior citizens working here just for the sake of working, we have housewives working here, we have one person that's been placed here on the job training program of another agency. So, there's a wide variety of people working here with a wide variety of interests. They're all out here to serve somebody," Hollister said.

worms." Arthur Vener, professor of social science, said unconventional marriages are healthy for society.

"People are finally coming out of the closet and expressing themselves," he said. "The non-conventional marriage is a good marriage and makes for greater social integration."

"The institution of marriage is by no means breaking down," he said. "If anything, it is getting stronger as the number of marriages is increasing."

Goldberg said she and Pulliam were just two crazy people who like to do everything differently from the rest of the crowd.

"We are both really silly, and instead of having a stiff, formal affair, we want to have fun while we do it," she said. "It was either this or show up nude at city hall."

She said her parents don't know about the plans, and will not find out until she is good and ready to tell them.

"Crosby's parents are really cool and enthusiastic about the whole thing," she said. "However, with my parents it is the type of thing you tell them about after you do it."

The ceremony will be a short, simple affair done by taking the traditional vows before a local judge.

"The whole thing will take about five minutes and the judge will read it right from the book he always uses for everyone else," Pulliam said. "But of course we will have 'Tiptoe Through the Tulips' as background music."

After the ceremony the newlyweds plan to have a short party and then return to work. "The guys at the station offered to throw a little party in the studio after the ceremony," Goldberg said. "After that I have to go back to work, but the weekend we will take off to Toronto for a short honeymoon."

Provosts to discuss rights at second open meeting

Acting Provost Lawrence Boger and Associate Provost C.L. Winder will participate in the second of a series of open meetings of the MSU chapter of the American Assn. of University Professors Wednesday to discuss University budgeting and faculty rights.

The topics for discussion grew out of a spirited meeting last month.

"Last month's meeting generated a free-wheeling discussion," said Zolton Ferency, president of the chapter, "which, at one point, seemingly had former Acting MSU President Walter Adams taking an opposite point of view from that of his wife, Pauline Adams, a member of the influential University Committee on Faculty Affairs."

The acting provost and associate provost have been asked to speak on whether the faculty has the right to participate in policy-making on the University budget and whether the faculty, through established University committees, such as the faculty affairs committee, has access to the information to engage in such participation.

The meeting will be held Wednesday at 8 p.m. in the Fireside Room of the University Club. All faculty members are invited.

Photography exhibit shows female talent

The work of nine women photographers is being exhibited on campus for the next two weeks.

The exhibit, whose theme is "Women Photographers," is photography from the feminine perspective and will include the work of local artists, faculty and students from MSU and Lansing Community College. The show is being sponsored by the Honors College.

The exhibit is the result of a year-long effort by Gretchen Hull, a senior graphics major and photographer, to find an outlet for the work of women artists. James Pickering, director of the Honors College, offered the space and funding for the special showing.

Spanning a wide range of subjects, "Women Photographers" will present an artistic medium conveying technical mastery and sensitive imagery. The results of several photographic techniques from xerography to the use of infrared film will be seen.

The exhibit is being held in the upper lounge of Eustace Hall Monday through Friday from noon to 4 p.m. through May 21.

Tourists want Churchill's pot

LONDON (AP) — Winston Churchill's wartime chamber pot is under lock and key nowadays, because souvenir hunters were ransacking his old underground headquarters, says curator Christiana Truter.

Truter says the late prime minister's silk cushion, historical records, ventilation fans and even pencils have vanished from the fortified complex 60 feet under the treasury building on Whitehall — even though visitors are admitted only in small groups by appointment.

RHA rep expects thousands to attend free MSU concert

By MICKI MAYNARD
State News Staff Writer
The blues will be up front Saturday — blue skies if the weather cooperates along with the blues of singer Bonnie Raitt as the Residence Halls Assn. puts on its second annual Riverside Free-For-All.

The outdoor concert, which is free to all MSU students, will start at noon on the riverbank by the MSU Auditorium.

This year's concert is sponsored by RHA and funded by the MSU residence halls, the Student Media Appropriations Board, Interfraternity and Panhellenic Councils, ASMSU and Pop Entertainment.

Along with the red-haired Raitt, the concert will feature the rock band Little Feat, currently riding the FM radio airwaves, as well as gospel singer Mirabai and the Stratton-Nelson Band.

Concert coordinator Pat Vachon of RHA said that if the weather turns out well, at least 6,000 people and possibly 10,000 are expected to line the riverbank.

Last year's Free-For-All drew 6,000 for three acts, which included Taj Mahal. Vachon said the concert will be held outdoors even if it rains, since there is no building on campus that can hold the expected crowd.

The concert is free because MSU students in effect have already paid for it through various registration fees, Vachon said.

Saturday's concert will include two of the rising stars in today's music scene. Bonnie Raitt has been around for the past few years, but her popularity has soared in the last twelve months.

The freckle-faced singer was featured on the cover of Rolling Stone magazine, with an article that marked her ascension to the blues music heavens.

Her music could be described as a blend of blues and rock, marked by her own free-flowing style. Raitt is no stranger to the East Lansing music scene, having appeared in MSU concerts as well as at local nightclubs.

Sharing top billing with Raitt is Little Feat, which has received some favorable reviews for years but has only recently become the rave of hard-rock fans.

The four-man group paid its dues by playing with such acts as Harry Nilsson, Carly Simon and Delaney Bramlett. A much publicized stint with Frank Zappa's Mothers of Invention sent Little Feat running to fame.

The expense of having two top acts was solved by some ASMSU teamwork. Originally there were two concerts scheduled for Saturday — one by RHA and one by Pop Entertainment.

However, when Pop Entertainment heard of the outdoor concert plans, the ASMSU cabinet decided to join forces with RHA and have two top acts on one bill.

Adding a gospel note to the outdoor concert will be Mirabai. The female vocalist will be making her first East Lansing appearance and includes traditional songs as well as new numbers in her act.

Rounding out the bill will be the Stratton-Nelson Band. The local group, a long-time favorite with MSU audiences, will start the concert with songs by the Beach Boys, Three Dog Night and some of their own tunes as well.

RHA is asking that students refrain from bringing glass containers to the concert area. There will be concession stands at the site along with plenty of trash containers.

Parking will be available free at Shaw, Giltner and lots. However, Vachon hoped no one would Friday night and stay the field.

"The equipment be arriving around morning, so people have to move or get a truck," he said.

Vachon said RHA advertising the campus because it to be an MSU student. One local disc jockey announcement for on his program and chastised for it.

"We're not advertising cause we don't want kids and people from town coming here to when they would be $6.50 at home to see said.

Also, the act stipulated that the be limited to MSU.

Four Seasons back at top of pop

By LEE MARGULIES
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — The song that has returned the Four Seasons to the top of the pop music sales charts after a prolonged absence deals with a man's first sexual experience. It started out as a song about the night prohibition was repealed.

good. The whole track, from the time we put it on, was an upper."

So he and Parker chose what Gaudio understatedly calls "a little more universal theme" for their revised lyrics and went ahead with the song, updating the title from 1933 to 1963 in the process.

"December 1963" put the

to be back?

"It's exciting," the 34-year-old producer-songwriter said. "It's damned exciting, that's all."

Not that the Four Seasons were wallowing in self-pity and misfortune all those years. Gaudio says the group has played a minimum of 150 concert and club dates a year since he and Valli put it together in 1962. That turns a handsome profit in itself, of course, but it also serves to keep interest alive in their old records.

Which is very alive indeed, Gaudio said.

"Frankie and I own outright. We own all products from 'Sherry' own the copyright thing because we have publishing company, like Gaudio-Valli. We gross in excess of a year."

McCartney still has appeal; packs 'em in at Olympia

By TOM SHANAHAN
Special Reviewer
DETROIT — It's neither Wingmania or Beatlemania that twice packed Olympia in Detroit to see Wings perform. Instead, the crowd of all ages showed its enthusiasm equally for Wings music and a few selected Beatles songs.

Paul McCartney's own "Yesterday" got the strongest response from the crowd but that didn't take anything away from the audience responding to Wings music. It only showed that McCartney's music can stand the test of time.

Though McCartney stole the show in the minds of the audience that saw an "old friend" return to the stage, the concert was not made for him to dominate. It was just the appeal and relaxed nature of McCartney that attracted the crowd's attention. Just as he was the pretty boy with the Beatles, McCartney was adored by the women who came to see Wings.

And just as when he was with the Beatles, McCartney gave them his attention. Friendly nods, winks and silly faces from McCartney gave the concert a warm, personal feeling.

But all the clowning wasn't McCartney's. Guitarist Denny Laine also enjoyed entertaining the audience, but he didn't sacrifice any of the musical talent he first showed as a member of the Moody Blues.

Wings had gone through several personnel changes before McCartney came up with the group that made huge successes of the albums, "Venus and Mars" and "Speed of Sound."

The first member McCartney added was his own wife — who was never a musician until she met McCartney. McCartney has made a respectable singer out of her.

The fun for McCartney is when he performs. He delighted the crowd with his gestures but also enjoyed himself as he rocked along the stage. McCartney moved from the bass guitar to the piano but never slowed the concert's pace in the process.

Even when they changed strides from Wings music to five selected Beatles songs and then went back to Wings, the group didn't lose any of the momentum it had built up. It was a steady stream of music for two hours and 15 minutes. The closest the performance came to being slow was when McCartney took the stage alone for "Blackbird" and "Yesterday."

Critics say it's his catchy music that attracts people, like his current hit, "Silly Love Songs." They say the lyrics don't have the meaning as when McCartney teamed up with John Lennon.

But if it's the simplicity of his music and lyrics that sells his albums, it's the same style that makes his concerts so entertaining for him and the audience.

McCartney is a born performer and he puts on a show that can't be matched with the simple idea of excellent music.

The drastic change in theme for "December 1963 Oh, What a Night" came last September when the five-man group was recording a new album for Warner-Curb Records.

"We decided that if we didn't change it we were going to leave it off the album," recalls Bob Gaudio, an original Four Season who quit performing with the group four years ago to run the business side of his partnership with lead singer Frankie Valli. Gaudio produced the album and wrote all the music in collaboration with Judy Parker.

"The lyric was a little too clever, a little too cute," he said. "But the music felt so

Four Seasons back on top again — a spot they occupied frequently during the mid '60s with an amazing string of hits that included "Sherry," "Big Girls Don't Cry," "Walk Like a Man," "Rag Doll" and "Let's Hang On."

Gaudio can't remember when the Four Seasons last had a No. 1 record, but he says last year's "Who Loves You" was their first tune even to crack the top 10 in six years. How does it feel

Lansing opera guild to bring 'Magic Flute' to area theater

Ingmar Bergman's highly acclaimed film of Mozart's "The Magic Flute" is coming to the Lansing area, thanks to the Opera Guild of Greater Lansing.

The guild coaxed the Butterfield motion picture theater chain into bringing the film. The State Theatre has turned over opening night to the opera guild to use for a benefit performance to try to wipe out a $2,300 debt left from last January's production of "Tosca." The guild figures that if it can sell each of the theater's 800 seats on opening night, it can raise $2,200, enough to almost cover the debt.

Opening night will be Friday and the guild has set the ticket price at $5: $2.25 is the admission charge and the remaining $2.75 is a tax-deductible donation to the guild. Otherwise, tickets are $2.50 for the rest of the week's performances.

The guild is not just trying to bring the film in to raise money, said guild friend Jennifer Smith.

"The philosophy behind bringing the film here is to popularize opera," she said. "We just really want people to see the movie."

The film is the opera. Bergman goes behind the curtain captures the person both the audience actors themselves.

The film, which playing to sellout at major cities across the country, will be a "marvelous opportunity for East people," said Adelaide, a guild friend who mental in coaxing East Lansing.

Ticket sales have been good as the guild though — only about have been sold for the night performance.

Tickets are available door.

MAESTRO VASSAR CLEMENTS EXCELS

Guest artist to fiddle around at Mariah-sponsored concert

By SEAN HICKEY
State News Staff Writer

Over the past years, a mysterious fiddle player smoking a pipe has been popping up at recording studios everywhere and playing with over 70 different acts. Who is this mad fiddler and where did he come from?

The fiddler in question is Vassar Clements, who has recorded with such groups as the Allman Brothers, Paul McCartney, the Grateful Dead, the Byrds and even the Monkees.

Clements, along with his seven-piece band, will be appearing at MSU this Thursday through the Mariah Coffeehouse.

Vassar's first instrument was a guitar and not the fiddle. He eventually switched to the fiddle at age 13 when the local group he was with needed a fiddler.

Though Clements has been fiddling the better part of three decades with most of the top names in bluegrass, he's been appearing increasingly with pop and rock groups,

"Clements is trying to expand into other fields, especially pop and rock. The seven-piece band that he is using will provide a varied arrangement

"As far as Clements is concerned, he is not interested in promoting himself as a bluegrass fiddler. He is trying to express himself into other as-

Allman Brothers and other names such as Gritty Dirt Band and Garcia.

"Clements probably has interest to other bluegrass because of his posture to a variety of bands. As for his fiddler and allows to take a different route he plays," Kirkwood said.

One of the fiddlers Clements uses is estimated about 250 years old. The fiddle has a man's torso on the back and the carved into a head of a man. Although the slightly out of tune used it on his album Clements.

The concert will be in McDonel Hall shows are scheduled 7:30 p.m. and the p.m. Tickets cost $3 and $3.50 at the door bought at Wazoo Elderly Instrument Union.

"Clements is trying to expand into other fields, especially pop and rock. The seven-piece band that he is using will provide a varied arrangement and will indicate or prove that he is taking new directions," Tim Kirkwood of Mariah said.

Clements, who has played the fiddle professionally for 25 years, earned his reputation through bluegrass and country music. But only recently has his interest spread to the pop and rock music audiences.

pects of music," Kirkwood said. In 1968, Clements toured with John Hartford, Faron Young, the Earl Scruggs Revue and other top name bluegrass artists. Since then, he has been appearing with artists from other musical fields.

Recently he performed in concert with Dickie Betts of the Carter declines Udall debate

By STEVE ORR
State News Staff Writer

It would be a classic debate: the smooth Georgian versus the wry giant, with the hardnosed host as intermediary. But alas, it may never be.

Such a meeting, between Democratic presidential candidates Jimmy Carter and Morris Udall, has been suggested twice by candidate Udall in the past week.

On Saturday, Detroit talk-show host Lou Gordon conferred with Udall and promised the Arizona congressman a slot on his show either Saturday or Sunday evening. Udall promptly fired off a challenging mailgram to Carter's national headquarters in Atlanta. Among other things, the mailgram said the debate — which Udall aide Ira Jackson said could be taped at Carter's convenience — would be "a boon to the political system."

Rex Granum, Carter's press director in Atlanta, said Monday he did not think Carter would have time to tape the show. He said he had not seen the mailgram, but that he had "heard some mention" of it.

Then, while speaking, he touched off a series of charges and countercharges:

•Granum apparently assumed Udall had already charged the Carter campaign with avoiding the debate. "This is not anything really new," he said. "We're used to the charge of Carter trying to duck Udall."

Granum said Carter had appeared with Udall twice on ABC's Issues and Answers television show and on several League of Women Voters' forums. "It's a new wrinkle, not a new charge," he said. He also said he had spoken to the producers of Gordon's show and WXYZ's Haney's People show in Detroit about Carter appearing there.

Granum's assumption that Udall was charging Carter with dodging the debate apparently was ill-conceived. Earlier Monday morning, Udall aide Jackson had not accused Carter of dodging the debate when discussing the challenge. He had, however, chided Carter for spending only one day campaigning in Michigan, as opposed to Udall's eight.

After Granum had made his faulty assumption, the Udall people were contacted again. Jackson said, "We're not charging Carter with anything. We're offering him an opportunity. The Democrats in Michigan want to hear him speak directly to the issues."

Then Carter campaigners in Detroit were called. Charlotte Scott, a campaign leader, immediately defended Carter as Granum in Atlanta had. "This is exactly what Udall did in Pennsylvania," she began. When interrupted and told the Udall people were not charging Carter, she stopped. She then said there are no plans for the debate.

"Carter's running in all the states," she said. "His time is divided between so many of them... He prefers to be out with the people in person, rather than spending an hour in a studio, even though that would reach more people."

The producers of the Lou Gordon program and Haney's People both said they had initiated talks with Carter campaigners designed to schedule an appearance on their shows, but that his timetable had prohibited such appearances. Nancy Lenzen, producer of Gordon's show for WKBD-TV, said she is still hoping for a Carter appearance on her show. She said she had tried to get him before Udall mentioned the idea of a televised debate. Mike Zeko, producer of Haney's People, said the same and added that Carter's schedule is "outlandishly impossible."

To confuse things more, producer Lenzen mentioned she had been told by a reporter from the Royal Oak Daily Tribune that Udall people had been alleging a Carter dodge as the Carter people had alleged.

DOES NOT CHANGE GUILTY PLEA

Court denies Ray's appeal

CINCINNATI (AP) — James Earl Ray's bid to overturn his guilty plea in the slaying of civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. was rejected Monday by the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

The court said Ray's contention that he anticipated a reopening of his case "is at best highly implausible."

"It is more likely that he simply reasoned that a shrewd attorney might find a way to overturn his conviction regardless of the voluntariness of the plea," the court said in rejecting Ray's appeal for a new trial.

One of Ray's attorneys, Robert I. Livingston, said he will ask the U.S. Supreme Court to review the appeal.

The unanimous decision concluded that U.S. District Judge Robert B. McRae of Memphis, Tenn., was correct in February 1975 when he refused an appeal after a hearing on the events that led to Ray's March 10, 1969, guilty plea in Shelby County, Tenn.

Ray is serving a 99-year prison term.

Another of Ray's attorneys, James H. Lesar, contended that Ray did not fatally shoot King in Memphis, Tenn., on April 4, 1968. Lesar argued that former defense attorney Percy Foreman coerced Ray into a guilty plea and that Ray had been framed. However, Lesar said he had no information about who actually shot King.

The district court ruled that Ray had not proven claims that either Foreman or Ray's previous attorney, Arthur Hanes, was more interested in profiting from books about the case than in defending him.

The appellate judges said they disapproved of the fee arrangement between Ray and the lawyers, which was based on publication profits, but the judges said this did not prove he did not receive a good defense.

The district court found that Foreman did not induce Ray to plead guilty and that Ray understood the stipulations of his guilty plea to first-degree murder as explained by Judge Preston Battle. The court noted that Ray said he did not necessarily agree with U.S. Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark and FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover that there was no conspiracy.

Both courts found that though some government procedures including screening Ray's mail, copying his letters and monitoring his conversations in jail were improper, "they did not prevent him from communicating with his attorneys or cause any actual prejudice to the rights of Ray."

"Considering all of the relevant circumstances surrounding Ray's plea," the appellate court said, "we agree with the district court that the plea was entered voluntarily and knowingly."

Ray, who was arrested in England in July 1968, said Hanes had been in contact with a writer before Hanes met with Ray to discuss his defense. The proceeds from books and stories were to go for attorney fees and Ray's defense. Ray fired Hanes two days before his trial opened in 1969.

He then hired Foreman who advised the guilty plea, but Ray alleged that Foreman did so to increase the saleability of the story. The court noted that testimony indicated that the guilty plea actually deflated the publishing value of the story.

"Ray simply had not proved that Foreman made many of the statements attributed to him by Ray in urging him to plead guilty," the appellate court said.

The court said, however, that Ray's attorneys acted improperly by accepting the fee arrangements based on publications. "Despite our disapproval of such a fee arrangement, however, its existence does not necessarily mean that Ray was denied effective assistance of counsel."

Boston schools must stay open despite fiscal woes, judge rules

BOSTON (AP) — U.S. District Court Judge W. Arthur Garrity Jr. Monday ordered Mayor Kevin H. White to take "all actions necessary" to keep the city's financially troubled schools open until June 22.

The judge said closing the schools next Monday would violate state and federal laws and would deal desegregation "a body blow from which it would never recover."

Under state law, the city must keep its schools open 180 days. Judge Garrity said the closing would also violate his federal order to desegregate.

The judge decided not to detail ways the city could raise money to cover the $17 million deficit, but he made a few suggestions.

Garrity said the court

"should never, except when absolutely necessary, get that deeply involved in the details of municipal finance." He said he was "still contemplating" a specific order if the mayor failed to come up with a resolution to the fiscal problem. City Treasurer James Young said if he is ordered to pay more than the $154 million budgeted for the schools, "the money has to be borrowed. The question is how and from where." At the hearing Saturday, Romona Hilgenkamp, executive director of fiscal affairs for the state Dept. of Education, said Boston could lose $7.4 million in state aid by shortening the school year.

Marilyn Strickler, an asst. city corporation counsel, stressed the need for controls on future school department expenditures.

Ford seeks Neb. victory man, William Barrett, opposed slating as against state tradition. But after Reagan's campaign effort Ford's people announced lists of target delegates.

Of the 11 Democrats listed on the ballot, nine either did not campaign here, or have withdrawn from active campaigning entirely.

The names of Sens. Hubert Humphrey and Edward M. Kennedy appear on the ballot, though both remain noncandidates. Other Democrats listed are Sen. Birch Bayh of Indiana; former Oklahoma Sen. Fred Harris; Washington Sen. Henry Jackson; Sargent Shriver; Ellen McCormack, former Alabama Gov. George Wallace and Rep. Morris K. Udall.

Nebraska law requires the secretary of state to choose names in February for the May ballot and he is to include all those "who are generally advocated or recognized as candidates in the national news media." Humphrey and Kennedy had their names withdrawn, but when Oregon decided to list them on the ballot there, they were automatically reinstated in the Nebraska primary.

A Domino's pizza delivery man reported being robbed at gunpoint of more than $50 behind Campbell Hall Sunday night, campus police said.

According to the delivery man, he had just delivered a pizza at about 11 p.m. and was near the loading dock of Campbell Hall when he was grabbed from behind and robbed by a man who said he had a gun. The delivery man said that he never actually saw the gun, though.

The robber ran off in a northwesterly direction after taking $57.50 in cash, $1.50 in Domino's coupons and the delivery man's driver's license. Part of the money was in an East Lansing State Bank deposit bag which had the word "Domino's" stamped on it.

Police described the thief as a white male of college age, about 6 feet 6 inches tall and weighing 240 pounds. He was wearing a blue nylon jacket and white garden gloves.

A 24-year-old Detroit man was arrested by East Lansing police early Thursday morning for illegal entry to a residence on Collingwood Drive. One of the arresting police officers was cut on the hand when the suspect stumbled and caused the glass on the door to break.

Police said that the man appeared to be very intoxicated and was later released on $100 bond pending arraignment in East Lansing District Court.

Police said that they had received a call from someone in the house, saying that a person had tried to climb in a window and had then entered a side door to a hallway which led to the kitchen.

When police arrived the suspect was sitting on the steps inside the hallway with his eyes closed. He stumbled and fell into the glass after officers told him to stand up and put his hands in the air.

Someone has finally found an alternative to leaving hundreds of copies of the State News laying around the hallways on campus. Campus police reported finding a car in the Brody Hall service area Sunday morning that had been completely covered with newspapers.

Police said that the car had been covered first with plastic bags and then newspapers were plastered on using an unidentified mixture like flour and water. Police peeled off enough of the newsworthy upholstery to reveal the license plate, but said they never received a complaint from the owner.

The presidential primaries are here and so is the guerilla warfare that often goes along with any political campaign. Members of the Udall for President group, whose headquarters is at 601 East Grand River Ave., report that a large 12 foot by 8 foot banner, which was hanging on the side of the building, was taken sometime between Saturday night and Sunday morning.

A spokesman for the group said that he had no idea whether the prank came from the opposition or was merely an act by some unaffiliated thief.
