nod of approval to Wharton's handling of a shrinking MSU budget.

"President Wharton has been very receptive to student leaders' ideas, in one sense," said Art Webb, director of the Office of Black Affairs (OBA). "But he hasn't been very responsive."

Webb's reaction typified the reaction of many of the student leaders polled. For the most part, they do not feel their opinions have been stonewalled from the decisionmaking process, but they do feel their advice is taken lightly. Former ASMSU president and Student Workers Union advocate Tim Cain reacted to the Wharton administration negatively:

"Wharton is very good at insulating problems and plugging students into channels that don't really get them anywhere," Cain said. "He has a very detached way of behaving and usually says he can't do something about a problem. But I'm sure he does it in a tongue-in-cheek manner because in actuality, he can do something about most anything he wants to."

Student leaders were almost as unanimously criticial of Wharton's coverup of the NCAA investigation as they were positive about Wharton's handling of the University budget. One student leader who has relatively frequent contact with Wharton termed the financial wheeling and dealing his forte, in fact.

"I have seen him presenting our case at the Capitol and President Wharton is a most impressive man down there," said Bea Lin, undergraduate representative on the Academic Council Steering Committee. "He's probably the most impressive person down there in terms of presenting a case for a University budget."

The NCAA investigation, on the other hand, drew criticism from the students. "I'd say his stock probably went down a little with the students in his handling of the NCAA investigation," said Ray Ger man, president of the Council of Graduate Students (COGS). "He didn't come across as an efficient administrator. His shifting of power to Breslin and Burt Smith didn't look good when he had to reclaim it later to straighten things out."

Tuition increases, not surprisingly, drew the most fire from student leaders. On that score, students think Wharton has opened up the channels of communication, but come short of acting on student recommendations and acting on them before a decision has already been made.

"The amount of student involvement on tuition hikes has increased during the past two years, but it's still far from what it should be," ASMSU president Brian Raymond said. "Wharton needs to take a tougher position with the faculty and

Raymond, as ASMSU president, termed Wharton's accessibility as "almost impossible at times, and usually "very difficult." (continued on page 8)

In the aftermath of one of the most when three white-robed and hooded MSII students marched across South Complex protesting reverse discrimination, the leader of the group said that he was subsequent ly intimidated and coerced into moving off

Reactions to the midnight march of Feb. 16 went on for several weeks with the controversy peaking with a demonstration against the State News by the Concerned Students for a Better Press

The spokesperson for the three students said on the Friday following the march that they had a meeting with Dave Palmer, area director of South Complex; Carl Taylor, director of minority affairs, and staff members from Wonders Hall

"They (the MSU staff) basically told us that we had brought the campus to a riot situation," he said. "They wanted to intimidate us from our stand."

The leader said the managment wanted to shut the group up because it did not want to deal with the situation. He said those words were never actually said, but the three students were given the impression that they would be kicked out of the dormitory.

"They implied that we might get kicked out of school," he said.

The leader of the group has been living off campus since the incident took place, though the other two have remained on campus. He said he was told he had been singled out for being the spokesperson of the group.

Though he experienced no direct confron tations, he said he received many threatening phone calls and all three of the students feared retaliation. "If I would have stood up for what I believed in," I never would have gotten out of this school," he said. "I think I would have had violence perpetrated against me.

It was because of the threats that the three students did not attend a meeting with black students in Wonders Hall a few days after the protest to discuss the group's Hall, would not comment on the students'

reasons for the march, the leader said. "They told us, particularly Palmer, that the ony way to defuse the explosive tension on campus was to blame the State News for misquotes, misrepresentation and sensationalism," he said. "This accident could have been avoided if the companies had followed the requirements" of Michigan's Occupational Safety and Health Act, said Keith Molin, state labor

'We regard their failure to insure the integrity of the hoisting device as a knowing, willful violation of the safety act and will ask the Monroe County prosecutor to issue an appropriate warrant charging each em ployer with a felony," Molin said.

A spokesperson for Detroit Edison declined comment until the accusations are reviewed. Gordon McJilton, vice president of Ferrel, said: "We have seen nothing in writing yet. My company's position is we will probably contest any citation as this equipment was not owned by us.'

Molin said the Labor Dept. itself will assess fines of $10,000 each against the firms under civil provisions of the safety act. Those fines can be appealed in court. The law's criminal provisions, under which a prosecutor must initiate court action, also provide potential $10,000 fines and one year in jail, he said.

The four workers were riding in a metal basket suspended from a metal cable gunning through a block atop the 800-foot high smokestack. The basket was about 273 feet up when the hoisting gear collapsed, dropping the cable and the men in the basket

Cable car accident injures 20

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — More than 20 persons suffered minor injuries Wednesday when an apparent mechanical molfunction abruptly halted a cable car, jostling passengers and sending some sprawling into the street.

The accident occurred as the car was moving uphill one block from the edge of San Francisco Bay.

Officers said 23 persons were treated at hospitals "for humps and scrapes.

The city's 38 rickety cable cars, a symbol of San Francisco for more than a century, were idled for 38 days because of a municipal workers' strike. Each was tested before being returned to service when the strike ended May 8.

The cars move at an average speed of nine miles an hour over the city's hills. They are operated by a 101/2-mile-long underground steel cable.

University hiring unconstitutional rules Virginia district court judge

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS and THE STATE NEWS

Virginia Commonwealth University's (VCU) preferential hiring of women and the institution's employment quotas based on sex constitute reverse discrimination and are unconstitutional, a federal judge said.

U.S. Dist. Judge D. Dortch Warriner ruled Tuesday in a suit filed by Dr. James Albert Cramer, who contended he was passed over in 1974 for two permanent teaching jobs at the Richmond School which were later given to women.

Warriner said Cramer was correct in his complaint that he had been victimized by VCU's "affirmative action program," aimed at eliminating past discrimination based on

And at MSU, the issue of whether affirmative action constitutes reverse discrimination rages on.

Last February, the issue exploded when three people, wearing white sheets and hoods, marched on campus to protest what they called discrimination against whites. In another incident, William H. Council rejects fireworks for city's July 4 festivities

By MICHAEL ROUSE State News Staff Writer

East Lansing's Bicentennial celebration will proceed not with a bang but a whimper (with due regards to T. S. Elliot) since fireworks will not be seen in the city skies on July 4.

At Tuesday night's city council meeting, a request for a fireworks display in Alton Park submitted by the Bicentennial Committee was rejected on the ground of safety, cleaning up sparkler wires and the traffic problems resulting from the expected hoardes of spectators. However, Mayor George Griffiths, reminiscing on his childhood experiences of seeing Fourth of July fireworks displays, said he wanted to see fireworks in East Lansing

Police Chief Steven Naert said many streets were blocked in previous years when fireworks displays were held because there are not sufficient parking areas.

"I know it's acting like Scrooge at Christmas time, but because of the traffic problem emergency vehicles cannot get through," Naert said.

Councilmember Mary Sharp said cars could not move in or out of the area and holding the fireworks in Alton Park this year "would be asking people to come in with loaded guns." When it became known that Lansing is planning a fireworks display in the new riverfront park, the council, except for Griffiths, swung to a refusal to permit a display in East

"I think we should support regionalism and all go down to Lansing," Councilmember

Larry Owen said. Owen's remark was also in reference to a previous discussion on if East Lansing should contribute $1,500 to the Convention Bureau of Greater Lansing.

Councilmembers John Polomsky and Sharp defended supporting the Convention Bureau because of the national advertising, restaurant and motel business increases and other indirect benefits from conventions that may be held in the Greater Lansing area.

The motion to provide the $1,500 failed by a 3-2 vote. The council also unanimously approved the first phase of a three-phase plan to alleviate the flooding of the Red Cedar River contracted with Hubbell, Roth and Clark, Inc.

The plan calls for a combined storm-sanitary sewer to carry water spillage to an underground retention basin on Kalamazoo Street and then to a treatment center. A facilities plan and the sampling of the underground soil near the river have been budgeted for with approximately $85,000, City Manager John Patriarche said. However, the actual construction of the sewer will have to be financed by a bond issue of about $18 million.

In other council action: •The council voted to lower the franchise fee paid by National Cable Co.—which provides cable television to the city and MSU married housing—from 5 per cent of its subscription rates to 3 per cent. The Federal Communications Commission notified the East Lansing Cable Commission that unless the higher franchise fee paid to the city was used solely for regulatory purposes, it could not be justified and held up recertification of the cable system.

MUCC's petition drive outstandingly successful

The Michigan United Conservation Clubs (MUCC) announced Wednesday that its signature drive to place the bottle bill banning the sale of all throwaway bottles on the November ballot was an "outstanding success," with about 364,000 John Hancocks

"We are just so happy and grateful to the people of Michigan," MUCC executive director Tom Washington, said. "The number of signatures collected far exceeds our target number of 300,000.

Under Michigan law 212,000 signatures 8 per cent of the last gubernatorial election turnout - must be obtained to place a referendum on the ballot.

MUCC plans to file the reams of petitions at the Board of Canvasser's office Friday. The signatures must be validated there.

Wednesday's announcement was the culmination of a long campaign which may very well get the bottle bill on state books

Originally introduced in the legislature in 1973 by Rep. Lynn Jondahl, D-East Lansing, the bill never made its way out of the House and died in committee. MUCC then took up the ball, starting a blitz campaign to get enough signatures to put the bill before the voters.

Proponents of the bill have said that by banning the sale of all throwaway beverage containers in the state, the bill would effectively reduce highway litter and help preserve the environment. They also contend, contrary to the bill's critics, that the measure will bolster Michigan's economy creating 4,100 new jobs and adding $18 million to state payrolls.

The bottle bill's critics, however, say that the bill is impractical in that it will disrupt treatment in its affirmative action program but only encourages women and min to apply for positions. To meet the goals and timetables of the affirmative action program, he said, a female would be chosen over an equally qualified male.

"We hire the best qualified people,"

Perrin said. The judge in the Virginia case said the school's programs violate the equal protection clause of the U.S. Constitution and the Civil Rights Act of 1964, which bans discriminatory hiring practices.

There will never be sex or racial peace until the idea of sex or racial discrimination is dead and buried. The primary, the only beneficiaries of 'affirmative action' plans and their siblings are the thousands of persons engaged in the civil rights business, bureaucrats, lawyers, lobbyists and politi-ngton said that he is confident the voters of Michigan will pass the bill into law November 10, but said MUCC's job is by no means done.

"We still have a long way to go," he said. "Now we have to convince the voters to come out and vote for the bill."

He said that he thinks the bottle industry, which is vehemently opposed to the measure, will amass a large media campaign against the bill. To counter its efforts, he said, MUCC and the host of environmental groups supporting the bill will start a "Help Abolish Throwaways Fund" to raise money for a pro-bottle bill publicity drive. He mentioned plans are being prepared for a fundraising concert to be held this summer on behalf of the bill

Basic skills background lower at college level

By MARICE RICHTER State News Staff Writer

The old problem of underpreparation in basic skills areas - reading, writing and mathematics - continues to grow on the

More and more students entering Michigan colleges and universities lack sufficient education in basic skills areas, according to James Hamilton, asst. provost for special programs at MSU

Hamilton who also serves as president of the Michigan Council of Educational Opportunities Programs (MCEOP), said that a survey completed and coconducted by the council in October 1975 reveals a 25 per cent increase in the number of underprepared increase in the number of underprepared college students over the past four years. The survey given by the MCEOP and the Michigan Dept. of Education was completed in 68 of the 91 post secondary institutions across the state. "We were trying to make some assessment of the experiences of Michigan colleges and universities as they relate to the underprepared - how the institutions are responding to the needs of the underprepared," Hamilton said.

The survey was compiled by administrators of higher-education institutions and was based on enrollment in remedial courses. "Enrollment in remedial math courses has been exceptionally high," he

The most recent test results of MSU's current freshman class indicate that the need for remedial education is on the rise.

The mathematics and English placement ests were given to a class of 7,228 in 1975. Of this number, 803 students were screened into remedial English (American Thought and Language 101, 102 and 103); 833 were screened into IS194 (Improvement Service, which is basic arithmetic and 3.063 were laced in the Mathematics 081 and 082 series for improvement of fundamental

These figures indicate that in the area of English, 11.1 per cent of the students needed remedial education this year as opposed to 9.7 per cent in 1973 and 9.9 per cent in 1974. In the area of arithmetic, the figures for 1975 indicate an 11.5 per cent increase over 11.0 in 1974 and 10.1 in 1973. The algebra results show that in 1975, 42.4 per cent of the students needed remedial education as opposed to 41.6 in 1974 and 40.7 in 1973

Arvo Juola, instructional evaluation consultant, said that the problem of an increasing need for remedial education is part of a trend. "In the period from 1960-1967, the reverse situation was in effect and there was a dramatic rise in ability levels. The period from 1967 to 1970 was a period of leveling off and from 1970 to the present the trend in skill levels has moved downward

Juola said that he expected the drop in skill levels to continue, with even more students needing remedial education in the incoming freshman class than in the current

He attributes the rise in student skill ability during the 60s to pressures of society at the time. "The post Sputnik era was a time of emotional drive to think seriously. That, coupled with the war, made the competition for higher education greater so the need for more skills was higher," Juola said.

Hmailton attributes the reverse of this occurrence to two factors:

 The substantial increase in accessibility of higher education for students of all socio-economic backgrounds.

•Decreasing emphasis of reading, writing and math skills on the high school level.

"Underpreparation affects students of all ethnic, economic and social backgrounds. The educational systems in this state have not been responsive enough to the needs of students on the high school or college levels," Hamilton said.

The MCEOP is recommending that the Michigan Dept. of Education establish developmental skills programs in high schools and provide colleges and universi-ties with student developmental centers for helping underprepared students acquire

The threat of financial disaster

If you think this year's budgetary problems at MSU have been bleak, next year's may be even bleaker.

The legislature has cut the already-pruned MSU budget request by an additional $8 million; pending final action by the House, it appears that the final budget for higher education in the state of Michigan will be far below the needs of MSU and the other Michigan schools.

Many administrators and members of the MSU Board of Trustees have admitted that it is likely that students will be asked to help make up this deficit in the form of a tuition increase.

Though no one can ignore the fact that our hard times are the result of a general privation throughout the state coffers, both the legislature and the governor must share the blame for being short-sighted and unprepared for this budgetary crisis.

Michigan, formerly one of the top 10 states in the support of higher education, is struggling with a funding model which will eventually bring us back to 25th. However, no one is sanguine about such a model's chances in the immediate future.

With the recently announced scholarship cutbacks and the inadequate number of summer jobs available, the tuition increase will inevitably hit many students when they are already down.

Steps must be taken to insure that this most recent budgetary disaster does not irreparably alter either an individual's educational future or the educational future of the University as a whole.

• The state legislature should seek tax reform and stop attempting to face the current crisis through willy-nilly budget cuts which rob valuable programs of much-needed funds. In this regard, the Michigan Citizen's Lobby petition drive for tax reform should be supported.

• HEW must be urged to maintain funding of the Basic Educational Opportunity Grants and other federal scholarships at current or increased levels.

 The administrators must continue to seek cutbacks in nonessential areas and services. The past year has shown the administration worthy of praise for keeping the onus of the budgetary burden away from academic areas. However, more effort simply must be extended.

• Finally, the students themselves must raise their voices in defense of higher education. Washington, Lansing and our own administration building must be made aware that students are concerned, not simply over their own educational futures, but the future of higher education as a

In times of financial crisis, it is often easier to cut from programs of long-range benefit, hoping that the crisis will be short and the damage minimal. However, this shortsightedness in regard to state support of higher education has placed institutions like MSU in a dangerous situation.

It is education - and not emergency relief programs like food stamps, welfare and unemployment insurance - which ultimately offers us a hope of improvement. Both the individual and society depend upon technical and liberal training to assist in solving the major problems confronting them.

This is what education means, and that is why we cannot go on meeting each funding shortage with tuition increases, service cuts or a beggarly passing of the hat.

The intelligence committee and 'Day of the Jackal' spy tactics Without going into to detail of the proposed new law governing the activities of our intelligence agencies, it is reasonable to say that it is designed to bring under representative scrutiny a) what our intelli-gence agencies are doing; and b) how much money they are spending.

It is critical to ask whether that scrutiny is to be exercised by a committee of legislators who can be counted upon to prefer the public safety to the satisfaction of their own political vanity, but that gets you into problems. How do you say in constitutional language: We are going to set up an oversight committee which will exclude Michael Harrington of Massachu-setts? The dear old Constitution prohibits bills of attainder, so you have to come up with legal ways of describing Michael Harrington, and that is a tough one.

Then, as a practical matter, you need to ask whether that oversight committee is going to stop, automatically, drastic covert actions of the kind that tend to win popular favor, and professional criticism.

e distinction is best drawn from the work of our novelists. I have drawn attention before to The Day of the Jackal. Here the protagonist is a hired killer, and his assignment is to execute Charles de Gaulle. The suspense is very great, and the huge best-seller owes that success to the narrowness of de Gaulle's escape. But do you know how the French intelligence people managed to save his life? Well, to begin with they kidnapped somebody from Rome. Getting him to Marseilles, they tortured him, and got from him a couple of words - a clue. Oh yes, he died from the John Ehrlichman, former aide to Richard Nixon, has written a novel in which President Kennedy orders, at the last minute, the assassination of a priest traveling with the invading army to the Bay of Pigs. The idea is that Kennedy discovered that the Russians would counter our invasion of Cuba and come back at us with nuclear ferocity. On the other hand, the invasion was already launched, and could not be aborted.

The President hit on the idea of destroying the spiritual force behind the military mission: the equivalent of slipping Joan of Arc a mickey finn just before she took on the British. It is not projected that the admirers of President Kennedy will cavil at the action he (allegedly) took, under such circumstances.

The new oversight committee is on the one hand desirable — we do need protection against capricious use of intelligence capabilities; on the other hand, it is a schematic example of efforts by lawyers and jig-saw makers to pin down with exactitude the rules by which we govern ourselves in a spontaneous world substantially dominated by tyrants. If we go down, they are saying, it will be with punctilio.

Career and liberal educations contest

"You can't eat for eight hours a day nor drink for eight hours a day nor make love for eight hours a day — all you can do for eight hours a day is work. Which is the reason why man makes himself and everybody else so miserable and unhappy.

That is William Faulkner's understanding of one of our greatest illnesses — this thing called work, where we take what we do most often and conceptualize it as the thing keeping us from doing anything else which we would rather be doing.

Perhaps work is miserable and unhappy for those who are not challenged by what they do and perhaps the biggest problem yet to come in this country is in finding a way to reconcile the growing gap between the number educated and the number of jobs needing the educated.

Somehow the experts have all come to agree that it is better to be stupid if you have a menial task, rather than be educated, because if you are educated, you won't be happy with a job that does not demand use of your fabulous cranium.

"Who Needs College?" and "Is College Worth It?" etc., ad nauseam are some of the favorite topics of news magazines and human interest pages. Everyone is looking at the university; prying into its motives, trying to elicit a reason for its being here.

DAN SPICKLER

You see, college doesn't guarantee a good paying job for everyone anymore. Certainly, if you do get a job, chances are you will be underemployed. So . . . is college really worth it, gosh, golly, gee?

I find the question asked most often by angry, ignorant people. People don't, I admit, enjoy paying this University all that money to graduate as a sundae preparer at Howard Johnson's or an assistant to the sundae preparer.

I don't blame them, but I do think the opportunity for a richer and fuller life, and a ore cosmopolitan life, resides in their future.

Books at the library are free and if you've been reading them here, hopefully you will continue reading them when you leave the school. And hopefully your years at the university gave you a chance to do some extended thinking about politics religion, truth, etc., and hopefully you will come out a better and more responsive citizen.

And while you are under-employed as a recent graduate of MSU, you have a better chance of becoming employed in a more challenging field later on.

The whole idea behind an MSU (back when they created the Morrill Act) was to train people in the technologies, but also to bring the arte and activities to produce the bring the arte and activities to produce the strength the bring the arts and culture to the people. One ngous chatauqua. .

Of course, the University is so big and diverse that we have places for those just coming in for two years of technical instruction and we have at the same time those folks who won't ever leave the college scene, the professional scholars.

I believe this equating in the sixties of "to get a job . . . get an education" was wise, but promised less than the greatest benefit of higher education.

Thank you

Thursday night we were among the privileged audience in Room A Snyder Hall who were honored with, in our opinion, one of the greatest performances to occur on campus this year.

A small group of Justin Morrill College students, directed by Sears Eldredge, performed dramatic readings from Edgar Lee Masters' "Spoon River Anthology."

We were very impressed by the strength and skill with which the performers presented their roles. The actors moved their audience with the pathos and humor of the characters they portrayed.

Their polished performances were obviously the result of long hours of work with script, lighting and set design. The play was a total effort by the entire group.

We offer strong praise for Sears, too. He is a man of talent and the audience as well as the players were the fortunate recipients of his ability.

We want to thank Sears and his class for a memorable evening.

Now that I am at the end of my first two years at this hallowed institution and have completed seven straight terms of agony and ecstasy working for the State News, I think an analysis of just what I have learned at this midpoint of my college career is deserved.

To begin with, what have I gleaned out of those 94 credits which have cost me over $3,500 so far to obtain? Nothing, or next to nothing. I really did not realize how little of substance I have learned sitting in those disgustingly uncomfortable chairs in Berkey Hall until I sat here trying to remember something important I have picked up in a class here. It really is quite sad that I have made the Dean's List every term but one and still feel as if I've gained nothing. At the risk of feeling depressed over all those wasted hours, look back over your own experience here and try to pick out exactly what you know a lot more about. Pitiful, isn't it?

I guess I should have expected it when my first adviser told me to pick my classes by instructor and not by course material. The reason was clear — pick a person who will be entertaining, because you're not going to learn much, anyway. Might as well make class bearable while you wait to collect your credits.

There is a constant hoop and holler that liberal grading has given rise to a GPA inflation that is cheapening our diplomas. The critics complain that professors today grade too easily and subsequently contribute to the problem. I think the real truth lies in the fact that nothing of any real substance is being taught in classes these days and that a ring-tailed baboon could pass them with just a little coaching.

It's a constant joke around our news-oom, where most people are too busy to attend classes, that if you want a 4.0 you go to class once a week and not so many times a week if you want a 3.5. The whole situation reminds me of a small rinky-dinky college in my home town that has a reputation for being a pushover. "Pay your fees, get your Bs" is the motto we pinned on it. Unfortunately, here is has become "Pay your fees, get your 3s." So, has my college experience been a total waste so far? No. I was lucky and got involved in something that made all the money I've spent worthwhile and has taught me the real lessons of life I'll never learn in a classroom. I work for a newspaper. I've seen people at their best and their worst during my two years as a reporter and editor for the State News. I've had cocktails with movie stars, watched people try to save their houses from flood waters, been with winners celebrating a victory and losers holding back tears over defeat, seen things I wished I hadn't seen and heard things I knew I couldn't repeat. And I've learned some very grim lessons from it all.

I've learned that many people are weak and many are strong and that you can never tell one from the other until the moment of truth. I've learned that no one can be trusted. I've seen people start out with ideals and high principles and soon bargain them away for security and power. I've n people avoid a person like a leper when he's fallen from glory but flock to his side when he's on top again. I've learned that even with all the activities and the mass of students inhabiting the community that still there are a hell of a lot of lonely people and that those in the limelight don't care if there are or not. I've found out that even wellknown personalities will admit to loneliness under the right conditions and I've learned that other personalities wouldn't care if all humanity was wiped out — but that both will always present a smiling exterior. I've learned that our generation is not going to do anything to save the world.

We are apathetic, leaderless, uncaring and self-centered. I've learned that we are cannibals at heart and that student will turn on student while administrators sit back and smile. I've seen students given a little bit of power and immediately turn into a classic reactionary — abandoning the old dedication to their fellow man along the way. I've seen persons you always disdained turn out to be your real friends and people that seemed incompetent turn out good. I've learned that love and lust are interchangeable words to many people who draw no distinction between the two and cannot see one, either. And I've learned that even the most educated man on a campus can often be the most ignorant and close-minded.

But possible the saddest thing I've learned is exactly what myself and my journalist colleagues are. We are parasites who live off the exploitation of human tragedy. And let me tell you from this viewpoint, there is a hell of a lot of it for us to exploit. Yes, it's been quite an education

The Tenants Resource Center clarified housing complaints, handles problems with security deposits and eviction and points out housing options to people in need of housing.

Don Svoren, adviser for offcampus housing, said a student looking for summer housing should have no problems. His office has had 272 unit listings

Building reeks with odor problem

Rooms 27 and 28 in the Chemistry Building are suffering from distinctive odor problems and after several weeks of investigation the origin of the odor is yet to be found.

You can walk in the room and smell the odor and then it's gone," Carl Eigenaur, public safety engineer, said.

The pungent smell was reported to the public safety officials several weeks ago. Since the Chemistry Building is fully equipped with glass piping, the engineers first suspected that there might be a broken or leaking pipe.

"We've gone through the whole area and can't find a failing system," Howard Smith, maintenance service manager, said. "The drains are not leaking." Smith added that the odor

END-OF-SCHOOL-AND START-OF-TV-RERUNS HI-FI SALE

Now that school has let out, what could be more boring than sitting in front of your television and watching summer reruns? Certainly nothing that we can think of.

That's one of the reasons we're having such a big Hifi Sale right now. Nothing we know of can help ward off the summer doldrums better than a good hifi system. (The other reason for having a Hifi Sale right now is that we have a lot of speciallypurchased name-brand components in stock that have to be cleared out to make room for new merchandise).

Although we're selling it for only$199, this first sale system delivers an awful lot of high fidelity sound-thanks to the EPI "Book 1" Microtower speakers.

By making use of the centuries-old organ-pipe principle, these unique bookshelf-size loudspeakers can pump out a lot of basseven with low-powered receivers. So we combined them with the high quality (if modestly-powered) Concord CR-110 am/fm stereo receiver. It features good FM reception and a full complement of controls and inputs. The dependable BSR 2260X automatic turntable with a Shure M-81 magnetic cartridge completes this value-packed system.

Our $249 Sale System (not shown for lack of space) is an even better value. It brings together the handsome Rotel RX-102 am/fm stereo receiver, big 2-way Studio Design Model 36 loudspeakers (8-inch woofers, 1 3/4-inch tweeters) and the BSR 2260X with a Shure cartridge.

For only $299, you can get a great system with EPI 60 "Linear Sound" loudspeakers, the Kenwood KR-1400 am/fm stereo receiver (10 watts min. RMS per channel; at 8 ohms; 50-20 KHz; under 1% T.H.D.) and the lighttracking BSR 2260X automatic turntable with the Shure M81 magnetic cartridge. Together. these components provide widerange response, sensitive FM reception, ample control facilities, and fine record-playing capabilities. What more could you ask from a $299 system?

KENWOOD BSR

With great components from Marantz, Ohm. Garrard, and Pickering, we don't think you'll find a better-sounding $399 component system than this one. The brand-new Marantz 2215B am/fm stereo receiver puts out 15 watts minimum RMS per channel (at 8 ohms; 40-20KHz; 0.8% T.H.D.) Its tuner section is both sensitive and selective, so you can receive distant stations with ease, and still get clean reception in crowded metropolitan areas. If you're like most people, you'll like the way Ohm E loudspeakers sound. And their high efficiency means they'll rattle the windows with the Marantz receiver driving them! The well-put-together Garrard 440M automatic turntable has a lowmass, tonearm, viscous-damped cueing, and a Pickering V15/ATE-4 magnetic cartridge to keep your record sounding great.

And we're willing to quarantee that you won't find a better-sounding or more feature-packed $549 system than this one anywhere! The system features famous KLH 6 loudspeakers (with real walnut enclosures). Since 1958, these extraordinary loudspeakers have been the ones to beat when it comes to smooth response from the lowest to the highest audible frequencies. (The speaker complement includes a 12-inch acoustic-suspension woofer and a 13/4-inch direct-radiating tweeter). With 30 watts minimum RMS per channel from 30 to 20 KHz. (into 8 ohms) and no more than 0.5% T.H.D., the Marantz 2230 am/fm stereo receiver delivers ample power to drive the KLH 6's to their full (and considerable) potential. In addition to excellent reception of all available FM broadcasts, the Marantz 2230 offers enough control facilities to please the most finicky "button-pusher". The Philips GA-427 auto-return turntable has beltdrive, a low-speed synchronous motor, a unique shock-absorbing sub-chassis, and precision tonearm for flawless reproduction of your records. It comes complete with an Audiotechnica AT 90E Dual Magnet cartridge with an elliptical diamond stylus. The Dual Magnet construction assures optimum stereo separation-even at the highest audible frequencies.
