COUNCIL REPORTS FINDINGS

The proportion of minority students to nonminorities at MSU rapidly decreases from freshman to senior year, according to a 1976 study by the minority advisory council. Racial minority admissions were examin

During 1970, the percentage of on-campus minority students was nearly 6 per cent of the total student body. During the next two vears minority enrollment increased to 7 per cent and 8 per cent respectively.

However, the percentage figures have been dropping since 1973, according to the report. The report also stated that MSU has experienced an overall increase in nonminority students that may account for some of the decline in minority enrollment.

Contrary to the pattern developed by undergraduates, graduate minority student enrollment has risen from 6 per cent in 1970 to 8.5 per cent in 1975.

The study attributed the difference in graduate and undergraduate minority en rollment to more aggressive recruitment of minority students at the graduate level. After completing the study and the report

F lot crossing delayed due to late equipment

State News Staff Writer

While MSU students risk their lives each day, the construction of a pedestrian railroad crossing over the Grand Trunk Rail line between South Complex and F lot remains uncompleted and delayed for an indefinite period of time.

Fred Hyde of 533 E. Holden Hall, who has crossed the railroad for several years to get to his car in F lot, said there is danger even with the half-completed crossing.

"You can hear them blowing the whistle at Harrison Road, otherwise there is no way of knowing if trains are approaching." Hyde Hyde said the trains usually speed through the area going 30 to 60 m.p.h.

"I've heard of several close calls, especially in the winter. Many times people slip while crossing the tracks, sometimes when trains are nearby," Hyde said. Larry Bird of 533 E. Holden Hall said that students were still using the seven or eight different paths in spite of the half-com

"People just keep walking over the fences. Many of them are beaten down and rusted. Some don't even have poles," Bird

It was not a close call when a 19-year-old transfer student was killed in the fall of '74 while trying to do the same thing between X lot and East Complex. In January 1976 a pedestrian crossing was installed there.

At cost of $112,500, the University started construction of a similar crossing at F lot last spring, but Grand Trunk has yet to install the warning flashers and the asphalt paving between the tracks.

"We can't complete our work until the railroad company completes their end of the deal," Milton Baron, director of Campus Parks and Planning, said.

The University has already installed sidewalks leading up to the track posts for the guard rail and lighting. Baron said the construction but said it took over nine University would finish its end of the deal months for the equipment to arrive for the by completing fencing of the tracks and crossing at X lot last year.

putting up chains between the poles when Grank Trunk finished its construction.

He said the University is unable to do any work in the right-of-way of the railroad even though MSU is paying for the entire project.
"We were ahead of our schedule with our target date, which was the first day of registration, and we would have made it except for the delay by the railroad company," Baron said.

Clayton Jones, engineer technician for the Grand Trunk Western Railroad Co. in Kalamazoo, said the delay was due to the delivery of flashing signal markers which were ordered nine months ago.

"The equipment we ordered for this project has not come in yet. It is being held up by higher priority work," Jones said.

Jones said the flashing markers were really the only protective device for the crossing and without them the crossing could not be opened. If anyone was injured Grand Trunk would not be liable because the injured person was trespassing, he said.

"Trespassers are trespassers no matter where we hit one along the line. It's been like that all through history," Jones said.

Jones said it was up to the University to see that nobody used the incompleted crossing until the construction was completed and said that MSU would be liable for any injury.

"The University has the responsibility of installing fences. We are not responsible to put up a fence at all." Jones said

Baron said that it was illegal for students to cross the tracks since it was the private property of Grand Trunk and that it was not a safety responsibility of the Univer-

As of right now, the only work Grand Trunk has done is to put railroad ties between the tracks and warning cables. Jones said he could not estimate when

White control of army, police demanded by Rhodesian leader

GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI) - Rhodesian Premier Ian Smith said categorically Monday that whites must control the army and police in an interim government leading to black majority rule.

Smith told a news conference three days before the opening of the Rhodesia conference that he is not prepared to negotiate on this point.

"Clearly that is not part of the room for negotiation," he said.

Black Rhodesian nationalists attending the conference said exactly the opposite that continued white control of the two ministries is "absolutely" unacceptable. Smith said that if the conference arrives at an impasse it may be a good thing if Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger came to Geneva. He said that this would have to be a decision of the British conference chairman, Ivor Richard.

Smith reiterated earlier statements that he came to Geneva on the basis of the six-point peace package put forward by Kissinger in September.

The African nationalist leaders, claiming they were not consulted, have said they "completely reject that package," setting up an apparent impasse with white leaders three days before the formal start of peace talks. They are demanding majority rule within a few months rather than the two-year period in the Kissinger proposal.

"I am not suggesting that there are terms that can't be discussed," Smith said. "But we must negotiate within the framework of the Kissinger agreement."

The two outstanding points of the Kissinger package, he said, are that the head of a biracial Council of State charged with drafting a new constitution be a white and that whites keep the defense and law and order ministries.

It is the duty of the Geneva Conference to set up the Council of State, which in turn has to appoint a black first minister of a Council of Ministers, Smith said.

Smith said he would welcome African majority rule as soon as possible.

Airliner crashes in Colombia

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — A DC3 Colombian airliner with 22 persons aboard exploded and burned Monday seconds after taking off from a small town about 115 miles east of Bogota. Civil Aeronautics officials said all aboard were presumed dead.

The Civil Aeronautics Dept. said the propeller-driven plane, belonging to the air taxi company El Venado, crashed while taking off from the town of Yopal. No information was available immediately on the identity or nationality of the passengers.

The plane was on a domestic flight between the cities of Villavicencio and Cucuta, on the Venezuelan frontier. when it burst into flames and crashed just after takeoff from the airport Yopal.

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — The United States and West European nations will try to kill a Soviet inspired plan to curb traditional press freedoms at a major UN meeting opening Tuesday, western sources said Monday.

The conference is expected to be the most controversial in the history of the UN Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization. It is scheduled to be opened by President Jomo Kenyatta and will run for almost six weeks.

Workers protest at plant opening

VALENCIA, Spain (UPI) -- King Juan Carlos I and Henry Ford II inaugurated a new Ford automobile plant Monday in a ceremony overshadowed by workers' demands for full political and labor

As the King toured the plant in the company of Ford Motor Co. executives, the workers handed him a letter demanding the granting of the "fundamental and inalienable human rights" to Spaniards and the admission of all political parties and labor groups.

The letter, handed by the secretary of the Ford workers' elected bargaining body, also demanded that the government cancel a recent wage freeze and grant full amnesty to workers fired for their participation in illegal strikes.

New bank governor named

JERUSALEM (AP) — The Israeli cabinet on Sunday named Arnon Gafni to be the new governor of the Bank of Israel. The original nominee, Asher Yadlin, is in jail on suspicion of fraud.

Gafni, 44, is director-general of the Finance Ministry. He will take over the bank Nov. 1, a cabinet spokesperson said. His new job is the country's second most powerful economic post, after finance minister.

Yadlin remains in jail while police investigate accusations that he accepted kickbacks on land purchases made while he was director of the sick fund of the Histadrut, Israel's mammoth national labor union. The fund runs most of the country's hospitals and clinics.

High voter turnout reported

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) -- The official Czech news agency (CTK) said Sunday that 99.7 per cent of those eligible to vote cast ballots in general elections over the weekend.

They voted for candidates of the Communist-led National Front, which was the only ticket offered.

A total of 198,119 representatives were elected to federal, state, district and local parliamentary bodies by more than 10 million voters, the agency said. Some 350 were elected to five-year terms in the two chambers of the Federal Assembly parliament.

Earlier, officials said 32.2 per cent of the candidates were under 35 years old and about 30 per cent were women. Forty per cent of the candidates were not members of the Communist party members, the officials said.

Wash. highways have more litter

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) - Washington highways have 7.5 times more bottle and can litter than comparable highways in Oregon, according to a survey by the Oregon Journal.

The Journal said it compared 10 1-mile sections in each state. The sections had comparable traffic volumes and use.

It found 294 containers per mile in Washington and 39 in Oregon.

Statistics from the two states are being used in campaigns in Maine, Michigan, Massachusetts and Colorado, where bottle bills similar to Oregon law are on the ballot for the Nov. 2 election.

Oregon attempts to control litter through a measure which requires deposits on all beer and soft drink cans and bottles and bans pull tab cans.

Agreement stops layoff plans

DETROIT (UPI) -- Several thousand workers at Ford Motor Co. plants faced temporary layoffs this week but the No. 2 automaker said a local agreement it reached this weekend with a key parts supplier clears the way for resumption of normal production.

Ford, which was hit by a 28-day strike by 170,000 workers until a national agreement was reached in mid-October, said it would have to lay off up to 10,000 workers at various plants this week until parts inventories were replenished. The in-plant agreement with the Cleveland stamping facility that makes fenders, doors and other body parts for most Ford assembly plants was reached Friday and covered 3,700 workers.

Ford's production workers at facilities in 22 states ratified a national agreement Oct. 12. But Ford had trouble returning to full production because of delays in settlement at key locals.

The pound bottomed out at $1.5730 - its lowest value in history in dollar terms.

Then second thoughts set in and the pound recovered slightly. By late afternoon it was trading at $1.5920 to the pound, down 5.65 cents since the markets closed Friday. Chancellor of the Exchequer

Denis Healey defended the pound in the House of Commons this afternoon, repeating denials of the newspaper story that touched off the rout.

That story said the U.S. Treasury and the International Monetary Fund had decided the pound should drop to $1.50 as a condition of the IMF's pending $3.9 billion loan to Britain.

"Neither I nor any minister could accept responsibility for irresponsible newspaper article or for the market's decision to pay more attention to that article than to the unequivocal denials from those whose views it purports to describe," Healey said.

Jondahl for House

Lynn Jondahl, D-East Lansing, is aiming for term number three to represent the 59th district in Michigan's House of Representatives and in our opinion has certainly earned the right to retain his office, as his fine record shows.

Republican challenger Don Bunka is running primarily on one issue in the hopes of luring students from their traditionally heavy support of Jondahl.

Bunka, a small businessman from Okemos, argues that Jondahl has not done enough to see that the state spends more on higher education, thereby cutting the costs of tuition. He particularly points out that MSU students receive less per student from the state than such schools as U-M.

The response by Jondahl is that the current funding situation is a result of past lobbying efforts by MSU spokespersons who went before the legislature claiming it costs less to educate a student at Jondahl says that he sees the miscalculation involved and has taken steps to repair it by requesting to join the House Appropriations Committee, a move that Bunka argues is wrong. Bunka claims that he would, if elected, join the House Colleges Universities Committee. which he, with all his political experience (this is his first stab at politics), says is the right way to go about correcting things.

Which committee will be most effective may be arguable. The important thing to see is that it is just not true that Lynn Jondahl is doing nothing about the problem.

matters tends to make us wonder more about who the effective man is, rather than which committee it is most proper to join.

On a much broader scale Don Bunka continually brings all issues back to his true concern: limiting state taxes, thereby making Michigan a more lucrative state for corporate growth and small bus-

How Bunka plans to push for more funding for education and at the same time limit state taxes is beyond us. Jondahl backs Proposal D, which would put Michigan on a progressive tax plan, and opposes Proposal C, which would limit state taxing powers. Bunka votes in reverse on these two issues.

Most notable in Jondahl's record is his hill to reform the ancient Michigan Juvenile Code, which calls for a lessening of dependence on courts and jails thereby forcing an active concern for rehabilitation and more sensitive understanding for disturbed youths.

Jondahl is also a leader in protecting the environment and is a top spokesperson for banning nuclear develpment in the state until more facts are in on the safety of such systems.

Jondahl supports education in more ways than his opposition of Proposal C and backing of D. He is intensely interested in the cultural development of the state and by example (he is a member of the clergy) shows that a man who respect ideals can confront the sour realities of day-to-day pol-

New role for ASMSU

Tonight ASMSU will be talking about the directions MSU's student government should take: Should this undergraduate body of college and living unit representatives concentrate on campus-only issues or should it reach out into the real world?

When examining its priorities tonight, ASMSU should remember only one third of the 43,749 MSU students actually live on campus.

It is necessary that the ASMSU board remember while issues such as tripling, on-campus living requirements, are important, issues such as Proposal C, health care, transportation and housing are just as important.

It is not enough to concentrate on the problems that affect only on-campus students. ASMSU must represent the student body in the real world, in demanding and requesting action on issues that affect MSU students and of higher education.

But while ASMSU is deciding where the organization should go this year, it must not forget itself. Over the past years, members have spoken of revising the elections code and revamping the structure of the board. It is necessary that this be done this

Currently and historically, ASMSU has spent too much time bickering and making speeches. Too much effort has been, and is, wasted on power plays and petty politics. As long as less than one-third of the student population votes in ASMSU elections, the only way ASMSU can legitimately claim to represent students is by

So far this year, ASMSU la taken an admirable stance Proposal C, a resolution on ballot this November that we limit all state taxes and expent tures to 8.3 per cent of the combined personal income of Miningan. And even though it was t the last minute, the board voted back the tuition march and rain

But most importantly, but times the board did more than ju pass a resolution. They got k tively involved. If ASMSU ish work effectively and gain respect of the student body, it necessary that representatives more than attend a weekly med ing and pass bills.

Unfortunately, it is still selective few who are don anything worthwhile. The rest the board continues to represent their own self-interests and ignor the needs of the student body

ASMSU requires a large tin commitment on the part of electe representatives. To be effective requires the weekly meetingsh be only the tip of the iceberg, in action must continue all weeks representatives actively con paign, research and lobby by student concerns.

Representatives who are m willing to put in the required tim to do a good job for students has no right continuing in office a ought to resign or be forced a immediately.

As the elected representative of the student body, ASMSU an obligation to actively work! students in the University, int city, on campus, in the commun and in the state.

I recently attended a class offered by James Madison College called "Presidential MC 290) in which the guest turer, Michael Rubner of James Madison there, was scheduled to lecture on foreign sucs in the current campaign. instead of merely presenting the issues, and presenting the respective candidates' views on them. Rubner took advantage of his position in the classroom by deliberately and obviously favoring one candidate over the other, using words such as "bipartisan, "public" and "honest" to describe his candidate, while reserving such words as outmoded," "nasty," "un-American" and immodal for the opposing candidate. Though later in the lecture he admitted his partisanship, such an admission was hardly necessary when everyone attending had alreads perceived his opinion.

I deeply resent this attempt by Rubner to size my tuition money for his blatant and electioneering on the academic poor.m Though I defend his right to an opinion, I do not believe he should take advantage of his position as professor as he has so obviously done in this case.

Mockery

The series of presidential debates is making a mockery of free elections. Under the new campaign spending law, the federal government has already given Carter and Ford a combined total of over $25 million to pay for their bumper stickers, posters and campaign buttons. Now, with these debates, the two capitalist candidates are handed the most extensive and powerful communications networks in history

The debates represent a gift of free air time worth literally millions of dollars. Minority parties wouldn't have been allowed to buy such exposure even if they had the money. To top it off, this restrictive political censorship is passed off as "a historic exercise in the democratic process.

Imagine what the debates might have been like if Socialist Labor party candidates, Levin and Blomen, had been there to ask Ford and Carter why they support a system that breeds racism, poverty and war? Or any of a hundred other questions that could have brought into focus the differences between candidates like Ford and Carter, who represent capitalism, and those of the Socialist Labor party, who represent a new socialist form of society based on production for use and control of the industries by the

Wasting votes

In the 1968 presidential election many of my classmates in graduate school were so and Nixon that they voted for Dick Gregory.
I understood their predicament, but had little sympathy for their later laments wher Nixon: bombed Cambodia in 1970, created the Burger Supreme Court that has restricted civil liberties and opened the floodgates to executions of prisoners now on Death Row and began the series of abuses collectively known as the "Watergate

A similar problem may confront some students today who are disturbed at the choice between Carter and Ford and view a vote for McCarthy as a way out of their dilemma. Let me remind them: 1) McCarthy will not win, and the extent to which the protest vote for Dick Gregory in 1968 affected Nixon's behavior (not at all) suggests that a similar protest today will be equally ineffectual, 2) four more years of Ford will further entrench conservative trends in the federal judiciary and mean a further erosion of the civil liberties once protected by the Warren Court. 3) the current Administration's insensitivity to unemployment and the problems it engenders will continue to impose burdens on lower- and middle-income families, 4) Ford and Kissinger are likely to flirt again with U.S. involvement in wars of liberation, as they did in Angola.

The choice seems clear: to waste a vote for McCarthy (and thus cast half a vote for Ford), or to choose Carter, recognizing that he is more in tune with the interests expressed in the peace and civil rights movements and with the concerns we all share for individual liberties and social

Amnesty policy

The substantial contrast between Jimmy Carter's support for a pardon of Vietnam War resisters and Jerry Ford's opposition to a pardon for anyone but Richard Nixon mpels me to state my concern on this major national issue.

As a veteran of 250 reconnaissance flights in the Vietnam War, I feel strongly that fairness requires a full amnesty policy for Two years after the final withdrawal of U.S. personnel from Vietnam, the scars of that 10-year long misadventure linger on in the hearts and minds of millions of Americans. For thousands of Americans who resisted the draft or who left the military because they could no longer stomach the operations being conducted, or who received less than honorable discharges from the military, the psychic wounds of that war have not yet begun to heal.

These victims of the war should be brought back into full participation in the life of our society. Many acted from conscience but many were also simply caught up in the grinding wheels of this brutal and u

Only the president of the United State can take the leadership in declaring a full amnesty for these American victims of our Vietnam War policy. President Ford has failed to heal these serious wounds in our society. His limited and conditional clemency proposal was so worthless that only 10 per cent of the resisters were willing to sign up for it.

To bring our society together and heal the wounds of the Vietnam War, the president must issue a full and unconditional amnesty for all of the Americans who resisted the war ld not accommodate themselves to the military machinations of the war. If this president won't issue a full amnesty, we need a president who will.

So often when students are attending school they neglect their civic opportunity to vote. This is especially true when they relocate themselves in an area other than the one they have previously been registered in. A pinch for time is often a reason along with an unfamiliarity with a new voting district and the candidates therein. Because of this, numerous efforts have been made to get the students registered and set up convenient polling places while extensive canvass campaigns by political contenders have been initiated for the student benefit.

The advantage to all this work is for the students' behalf. The students at MSU are an integral part of the East Lansing community and it is imperative to them to exercise their vote in order that the politics of this community represent them properly An important gain was earned in the Professor of economics 18-year-old vote along with simplified voter registration.

It's time in the upcoming election to utilize your vote for the man who has stood fast for the student cause at MSU. Bob Carr nised in the '74 campaign to return on weekends to his constituency. And he has: returning not only to East Lansing but to this University, holding weekend forums all over campus. He was then and remains now the students' Congressman. And he is returning again to the students for their support in the Nov. 2 election as they have supported him in the past.

Debates: only voters lose

There has been a lot of talk around the campus lately regarding the presidential race, and rightly so. At least for me, the decision will be hard. But there is one thing that remains disturbing. In a surprising number of discussions, there is one issue that is most frequently left out and, even more disheartening, is the fact that it could decide the election for many voters.

What I'm referring to is the television debates. Millions from America and foreign countries followed the history-making talks and each word from the candidates was carefully listened to, evaluated and criticized. The result? A "winner" was chosen and publicized, making the "loser" appear bad in his national image.

Among the candidates for the highest office in America there is no winner or loser until the votes are tallied during the night of Nov. 2. It's ridiculous to treat the debates like a boxing match with Carter throwing lefts and Ford using uppercuts. That was not the intended purpose of the talks.

The debates were held to inform the voters and to test the reasoning power of the candidates while under extreme pressure while virtually being on their own.

.Both Ford and Carter should be commended for their efforts. I'm sure both men realize that each of them made mistakes, though some have been publicized more than others. And, I'm equally convinced that they would hope the American people will be fair in their judgment of the debates and weigh each candidate not only from his television appearances but also by his p records.

Many discussions regarding the debat have left out one very important variable these men are not gods, nor are trained award-winning actors. They virtually laymen in the field of televis just like most students on this campus the people in the United States.

Before making a decision in just all less than two weeks, please take this point o consideration. Ask yourself, if were summoned to debate on man television a topic with which your line would you be able to deliver a first iar, would you be able to deliver a fund performance? Being a public figure he necessarily mean a man has to throw the all big a public figure he all big a public figure he necessarily mean a man has to throw the all big a public figure he all big a p all his personal emotions.

And, I don't think anyone would ke penny if he were to wager that a candidates were extremely nervous staring into hundreds of bright lights dozens of cameras, and knowing several million pairs of eyes were walk every move they made, some prepare make a decision based only on physical movements or how many times end them slipped up in their answers I like to think voters would be fairer 10th country and more honest with themsel

If discussions regarding the prerace continue to be dominated by "won" or "lost" the debates, the cand will not suffer in the end the voltage for displaying their narrow mindeds ultimately proving that they are ist losers.

What do we mean by shoddy mainten ance? Well, in a tight market, not only can landlords extract excess profits from sound buildings but they can even get away with renting substandard facilities. We've heard of cases where tenants are forced to conspire with landlords to pay $80 a month to share an unheated attic or damp basement. Without rent control, landlords will have little incentive to keep housing from deteriora-

When you boil away the rhetoric of political debate, you will recognize that the real issue is one of accountability. With rent control, landlords will be more accountable for the rents they charge and the quality of do we mean by exorbitant rents? the services they provide. If tenants play an active role in helping to verify excessive rents and shoddy maintenance, they will be sure to benefit. Of course, landlords who are presently keeping their property up to code benefit by rent control.

With regard to the State News editorial criticism of rent control, we are forced to wonder if the writer has even examined a copy of this year's proposal, let alone a review of rent control programs in over 200 communities in other states. We suggest that the editorial staff members begin reading the city's official report on rent control, and then reconsider their stance.

The critics of rent control have an easier job than we have. They do not have to come up with an alternative program. All they have to do is induce a sense of doubt about rent control. Remember, economists would hardly describe our rental housing market as perfect competition. So when you go to the polls Nov. 2, consider the rent control proposal carefully, consider what you know about the housing market situation and what it may be like next year without rent control, and vote for what you think is best for yourself and your community.

Why a 'no' vote is right

By MARY LUTTRELL

Your editorial of Oct. 18, with its headline "Rent control deserves defeat" was the first symptom of what we hope will be an awakening on the MSU campus to the destructive impact of rent control on the availability of rental housing for MSU students in the East Lansing community.

Implementation of rent controls guarantees, in brief, about a four-step effect on any com munity on which it is imposed.

 It shifts some of the tax burden from the rental property owner to the homeowners and local business.

• Private investment in construction ceases and government housing must fill the void.

• There is a general deterioration in the quality of the housing and environs as main-the throwaway bottle ban, as a tenance costs are reduced by rental property owners who cannot depend on rent review boards to allow such expenses.

 Housing shortages intensify. Because this unpleasant development is the aspect with which most MSU students might be confronted, this column will center on the significance of the increased shortages as they will affect the sidential patterns of future MSU students.

Documented statements from economists at the University, added to the views of those involved with rent control programs everywhere, support the fact that rent control breeds housing shortages. The diminution process develops in these ways: Because the rental property owner does not want the hassle of dealing with a governmental bureaucracy, bottles were responsible for over 11,000 hospital emergency cases in one year. Children are often the victims of broken thrown-out bottles, and pull-housing uses are changed. Some housing is sold to become owner-occupied. (In East Lansing, these would be the single family residences that students enjoy renting in a co-op type manner.) Some apartments be come condominiums. Other housing is torn down or aban doned. What has been detailed here has happened in other rent-controlled cities.

To further compound the problem, occupancy loads are restricted in several ways. (1) Rental property owners restrict the number of tenants in order to lessen the wear and tear on the dwelling unit as it becomes affordable by fewer

In addition, tenants in rentcontrolled areas become much less mobile than in noncon trolled areas. Having found an inexpensive place to reside, tenants locate for longer periods of time than normal. The property owner, hoping his maintenance costs will be limited because of infrequent turnover of tenancy, encourages the use of long-term leases.

Substantiating our position that the housing shortage here will be felt more by the studenttenant than any other group of tenants are quotations from local authorities.

Quoting from the "Report on Rent Control" published by the East Lansing Office of Housing Policy and Program Development on Oct. 15, 1976: "The dispersion of MSU students outside of East Lansing may also result from deliberate land lord decisions to permit only nonstudents to rent their units Generally, the fewer the number of inhabitants, and the older the inhabitants, the less wear and tear a dwelling unit would experience. At present, there is evidence that many professional families or individ uals are unable to compete with groups of students for desirable housing in the city. Reduced rents might change this. Thus, selective occupant selection could be utilized by landlords as one technique to hold down

Further documenting this: Byron Brown and Daniel Saks. MSU professors in economics, in their "Scorecard on Rent Control," an article published in the State News, Oct. 30, 1975, said, "Future students in East Lansing Rental Housing. . .Probable losers, since housing quality will adjust to the lower level of rents. Neighborhood quality will deteriorate. Landlords will allocate existing space in an arbitrary way."

In the past, the usual process for leasing a dwelling unit for fall was started in the spring. With rent controls in force, the rental owner will look to the Lansing area market for longer-term tenancy, and the prac tice of leasing in the spring for fall rentals will disappear. Quoting the California Court of Appeal decision, declaring the Berkeley Charter Amendment unconstitutional: "rent controls tend to exacerbate a shortage of rental housing. Uncertainty about receiving a fair return on capital invest-ment tends to discourage the construction of new rental units and the replacement of old, deteriorated rental units."

For those of us who are interested in providing good housing for the MSU student your editorial action of Oct. 18 was most welcome. Correction of the inequities in the housing situation should come from a much improved transportation system, a much improved hous ing code enforcement and encouragement of investment in new construction.

The rent control measure facing East Lansing voters on the Nov. 2 ballot will be described by 113 words. But, if passed it will put into effect an amazing supporting document of over 7,500 words which will give vast powers to a five-man board. This document strips away most of the inherent rights of property owners and gives proposed rent control unlimited access to the pocketbooks of the East Lansing tax payers to support the program. It boggles the mind to find that in the proposal no formula for maximum rent or for minimum rate of return on investment is given. In fact, it contains no figures on the number of staff to be hired, no salary figures, no estimate for required office space, no estimate on office equipment needed and no proposed opera-ting budget. All these vital decisions will be in the hands of members will be required to have any training or experience or proven expertise in property or financial management.

At 26 points in the document where a specific figure should appear, some form of the word reasonable" has been substituted.

What the 7,500 words does do — is to slip a noose around the financial neck of every owner of rental property. It legalizes the confiscation of rental property income by the board and empowers the board to bludgeon the owner of rental property with his own money. This rent control proposal does absolutely nothing to benefit the students living on campus. All housing units financed or subsidized wholly or in part by federal or state funds are exempt from this rent control measure. Furthermore, rent control will do far less for students living off campus than its promoters claim.

Just as quickly as the rent control board reduces the maximum rent on a housing unit, the owner can, and probably will. reduce the number of tenants permitted, as a means of reducing the wear and tear or his property. Owners will select a class of renters who are more permanent to cut down on the rapid turnover of tenants from the student population. This could result in little or no reduction in rent per person. Some owners will opt to sell further reducing the supply of available rental units. Several thousand students have already found their own solution to high rent by securing housing in Lansing at a savings of 25 to 40 per cent The excellent CATA system makes this very feasible and lots less expensive than living in East Lansing.

'C' criticized by Jondahl

By ED LION

State News Staff Writer Rep. Lynn Jondahl, D-East Lansing, said Monday that MSU students could expect sizeable tuition increases if a measure to place a ceiling on state expenditures is passed by voters next week. But Jondahl said at this point it would take 'a minor miracle" for Proposal

Jondahl also told reporters at a press conference in Giltner Hall that disparities between per student funding at University of Michigan, Wayne State University, and MSU could be accounted for in differences in their educational purposes. He has been criticized by his Republican opponent, Don Bunka, for not MSU students' interests by alowing the state to give less money per student to MSU than at the other two univer-

Jondahl said that the proposed budget ceiling setting state expenditures at 8.3 per cent of the combined state personal imcome would result in cutbacks or freezes in higher education outlays.

"The only way to keep the budget intact would be to raise tuition." Jondahl said, "and that middle classes right out of the Jondahl quoted figures saying that if a budget limitation had been in effect for the present fiscal year starting Oct. 1, that state would have had to cut its budget by 4.5 per cent. To offset a 4.5 per cent reduction in MSU's state appropriations, tuition would have to increase about 12.5 per cent, he

Jondahl said varying reports have indicated that state supported colleges and universities would have to raise tuition between 10 and 35 per cent to keep up services if Proposal C voters on Nov. 2 in the form of a constitutional amendment.

Proponents of the measure say it will restrain tax increases, increase the legislature's cost accountability and hold back rampant growth of government. But opponents, including the MSU Admin istration, the board of trustees and student government, say it would constrict the legislature, and result in cutbacks in state services, and result in an increase in tuition and property tax reliance.

Jondahl said at this point many people "just hear the part about tax limitations and it

"It would take a minor miracle for it to fail," he said. "But if we could inform the people of its full consequences see a reversal," he said.

Jondahl said if the measure passes he expects a court battle because of its imprecise language and its conflict with other pre-existing portions of the Constitution.

Jondahl said Bunka's attacks on him for not insuring that MSU gets the same per capita state funding as the other two universities were ill-founded because each "university has a different educational purpose and has different needs." MSU has always been thought of as a land grant, professionally oriented school, U-M as a center for research and Wayne State as a school where urban residents can obtain a low-cost education, he said.

Bunka had criticized Jondahl for not representing the college constituency since MSU last year received $2,191 in state funds per student, while U-M received $2,928 and Wayne State received $2,392.

Esch denies charges of fighting impeachment

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

U.S. Rep. Marvin Esch, the Republican candidate for the U.S. Senate in Michigan, says charges by his Democratic opponent. Donald Riegle Jr., that he voted to kill the impeachment investigation against former President Nixon are unfounded.

Esch's position was supported by Con gressional records

Riegle had charged Esch with voting to ripple the "impeachment, and, in fact, if he had been successful, Mr. Nixon would be in the White House today.'

Esch said the motion he voted against on Feb. 6, 1974, was for ending discussion about adding a series of amendments to the main resolution H.R. 803 calling for the impeachment probe. "I voted against that amendment to shut off the debate because I wanted consideration of another amendment which would have placed a specific time limit an April 30 deadline on the investigation which would have protected the rights of the minority party Republicans on the Democratic-con trolled Judiciary Committee," Esch said.

A third amendment under consideration would have limited the scope of the committee's subpena power.

Esch said he felt Republican committee members should have the "same rights interrogation and investigation as the Democrats on the Judiciary Committee

"The record shows that, even though a were unable to get such minimal rights!

The Congressional Record, the office minutes of Congress, and the Congression Quarterly, an independent chronide d Congressional activities, showed Esch votel to continue floor debate on the amendment - not to kill the impeachment probe

Meanwhile, Gov. Jerry Brown, D.Calif today will appear with Riegle at a afternoon press conference at Detroit Metropolitan Airport and later at a recep tion at Aquinas College in Grand Rapids.

Arizona Congressman Morris Udall, who finished a distant second to Jimmy Cartern the race for the Democratic presidental nomination, will attend a rally Tuesday a MSU while Sen. Birch Bayh, D Ind., wl attend a fund-raiser in Riegle's hometownd Flint on Wednesday,

Professors say Taylor lacks economic know-how

State News Staff Writer Tax reform and job creation are the main economic issues to have surfaced in the 6th district and, according to two MSU economic professors, Cliff Taylor, Republican candidate for Congress, does not seem to have a clear understanding of Daniel S. Hamermesh, MSU economics professor, and Charles C. Killingsworth, Uni versity professor of economics and labor relations, claim that Taylor's job plan is not viable.

Hamermesh has contributed to Congressman Bob Carr's campaign in the past. Killings money to either candidate, but been testifying for a number of years before commit-Washington to encourage the expansion of public job programs.

incentives to small businesses and industries to hire more employes just does not work," Hamermesh said.

For the past four years, a program of this type called the Work Incentive Program, has been in operation, Hamermesh sor! The program, which pro vides a 20 per cent tax credit that hired welfare employes, only employed 30,000 people in it best year and half of them were disqualified for the credit because the firms did not retain them for the necessary two

"The fastest and most efficient way to generate these jobs is through the balanced program of job creation in the private and public sectors proposed by Congressman Carr, Hamermesh said.

Killingsworth goes even further to say that each job created in the public sector will result in two new jobs in the private sector, for the econ-omy will be stimulated with additional spending power.

When you create jobs in the public sector, the ultimate effect is to create them in the sector, too," he said. Not all government jobs are made-up jobs. Are all private sector jobs real? Is the men's room attendant at the Waldorf -- a private sector job -performing a real and neces-sary job?"

Killingsworth and Hamermesh also disagree with Taylor's proposal to relieve the burden carried by middle and lower income taxpayers by tions to $1,000. "This would mean that for every single dollar of tax say ings for a family of four making $16,000 per year, the family making $40,000 per year will save two dollars," Hamermesh

It is more equitable to use a tax credit approach such as the Tax Reduction Act of 1975 and the Tax Reform Act of 1976. both of which Congressmen Carr voted for, Hamermesh said.

"These acts gave personal tax credits that reduced taxes by the same amount regardless of income level - the $16,000 per year family received the same break as the $40,000 per year family," Hamermesh said.

It is irresponsible to talk about balancing the budget without specifying how this will be achieved, Killingsworth

"Reduced expenditures or increased taxes are the only way to balance the budget," Killingsworth said. "The best way to balance it, in the long run, is through full employ ment."

A sure way to increase unemployment by causing layoffs in the private sector is to budget during a period of high mended by Taylor, Hamermesh

"Mr. Taylor's proposal would very likely drive the unemploy ment rate nation wide above 10 per cent within a year and put it over 15 per cent in Michigan." he said. "A balanced budget is a guaranteed job destruction pro

"Mr. Taylor does not seem to understand this most basic issue," Hamermesh said, "I invite him to sit in on one of my "conomics 201."

Three vie for sheriff's office

By DONNA BAKUN State News Staff Writer

The role of the Tri-County Metro Narcotics Squad and the philosophy of law enforcement represent divisive opinions among the three candidates for Ingham County Sheriff.

Sheriff Kenneth L. Preadmore, the 16-year Republican incumbent; Libertarian Martis Goodwin; and write in candidate Peter Coughlan are vying for the four-year office, which carries an annual salary of approximately $22,210. There is no Democratic candidate on the November ballot.

Preadmore, who said the absence of a Democratic candidate was "not unusual" because of his record as sheriff, feels the Metro Squad is necessary to the county to avoid overlapping drug investigations. Preadmore views the Metro Squad as the "total county policing agency" which grew out of a series of activities resulting from the "drug culture" of the '60s. "The concept of the Metro Squad is to combine groups that do a job at the most economic cost," he said.

He added that conflicting search warrants, questioning of suspects by a multitude of police agents forced the county to arrive at a more professional way to operate the department.

The Metro Squad moves under the direction of the Ingham County prosecuting attorney, Preadmore said, and does not make

"As long as the public files a complaint, we have to respond to it,"

Preadmore said his Metro Squad budget of money spent on investigations is "right open" to the public, with "every penny accountable and available." He added that individual case information was the property of the prosecutor until the case was Opposing Preadmore, from the Libertarian party, is Martis Goodwin, 28, a law student at Lansing Community College. Unlike Preadmore, Goodwin is campaigning to abolish the Metro Squad, which he said is operating in violation of the public's right to

Workers say support for McCarthy changed

By MARY ANNE KENEALY

In 1968 Eugene McCarthy was a strong candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination but his hopes were dashed by Vice President Hubert Humphrey.

In 1972 he ran as a Democrat again, but got into the race after George McGovern, the party's nominee, was clearly in front.

This year McCarthy is running as an independent candi date and campaigners are finding support is not what it used

"It's a far cry from '68," said Dave Bockoton, MSU student coordinator for the McCarthy campaign. I leaflet support for McCarthy was a care, I think they are disillusioned with government since whole Nixon thing,' Bockoton said.

The McCarthy campaign Sunday night attributed many factors to what they termed a lackadaisical public attitude the week before the election. Among the factors they cited were a twoparty system which they say does not give people much of a choice on candidates, an issueless campaign being conducted by Carter and Ford and inade collect interest," Moore said of quate public education on the McCarthy is now on the ballot in key electorate states, and the campaign workers are positive about his chances for election. "The whole campaign can be won in 10 days," Shrikumar Poddar, McCarthy's national finance chairperson, said. Poddar said that effective campaigning of what he called "real issues" could get McCarthy 12 per cent of the Some of the McCarthy cam-estimated in national polls that only 43 per cent of the American voters are planning to vote. All McCarthy needs to win, Poddar said, would be 12 per cent of that vote. McCarthy, who has said that vice presidents only "clutter up the campaign," has a different vice presidential nominee in every state because it is required for the ballot. He does plan to choose his actual vice president until after the election, should he win.

rapists, murderers and muggers, not the gays and prostitutes," he Goodwin voiced the Libertarian party platform of legalizing all drugs, including heroin, to eliminate crimes resulting from support of a drug habit. He said that harassing of gays and prostitutes constitutes a violation of the public's right to privacy.

Goodwin, who said he has never seen the Ingham County jail, said a person should seek out rehabilitation and not be forced to rehabilitate. The police force, he said, must work with the rehabilitators.

Write-in candidate Peter Coughlan, an MSU junior in criminal justice, said the sheriff's position should be visible, as should public input regarding issues such as the Metro Squad. Neighborhood councils would report to the Ingham County Board of Commissioners and the sheriff's office on such matters, Coughlan

However, Coughlan said he personally feels the Metro Squad is wanted, and favors an investigation of the squad's tactics Rehabilitation, Coughlan said, should be a part of law enforcement, but he added that punishment is necessary for society to maintain its respect for the law. Drug and alcohol problems should not be political issues, he said.

Coughlan said he would like to see more police patrols on foot instead of in cars, and this would remove the feeling that police are Both Coughlan and Goodwin agree that there are too many people in jail for noncriminal offenses. Coughlan opposes plans to build more jail space and Goodwin feels that by removing the noncriminals, such as gays and prostitutes, the jail would be better suited to accommodate the "genuine" criminal.

Preadmore has been nationally recognized for the development of the Ingham County Jail. He said he is satisfied with the jail's drug treatment program, which he plans to continue and expand. Rehabilitation, he said, should make people productive.

Preadmore said he has been working on the expansion of the county paramedic program to rural areas, and added that he would also like to see more police protection in these areas.
"I work for the people," he said.

Governor halts penalty of execution for 90 days

By ROXANNE BROWN State News Staff Writer

If all had gone as planned today, a Georgia inmate would have made history as the first man executed in the United States in John Eldon Smith was convicted of murdering his girlfriend's husband in January 1975. He currently waits in a Reidsville State Prison cell while capital punishment abolitionists fight for his life. Georgia's Committee Against the Death Penalty ignited mass protest of Smith's execution to insure that if he were to pay the highest price for his crime, it would not go unpublicized - as Georgia officials had hoped.

The committee, a coalition of civil liberties, black and political organizations, urged citizens all over the country who are opposed to the death penalty to send telegrams to Gov. George Busbee. On Oct. 18, the Committee Against the Death Penalty spoke out against capital punishment before Busbee at a press conference. Protest of the October slated execution became so intense that the Georgia governor was forced to announce a 90-day stay, which moves Smith's execution date to January 22, 1977. In the meantime the Georgia Committee Against the Death Penalty plans to approach the Reidsville parole board, in plea of a pardon or grant of clemency for Smith. Since the 1972 ruling of the U.S. Supreme Court which declared all death statutes unconstitutionally cruel and unusual, 35 states have written new death penalty statutes. The Supreme Court approved the death penalty statutes of Florida. Texas and Georgia in July of this year. The court ruled that the death penalty under circumstances can be imposed by certain states, as long as it is not mandatory for certain crimes, Organizations throughout the United States against capital punishment have agitated a recent movement over the legal and moral issues of the death penalty. Organizations such as the NAACP Legal Defense Fund, the Student Coalition Against Racism and the Civil Liberties Union are in the process of forming coalitions on a national level to protest the opening up of another 100 to 140 executions in the 14 states with death statutes similar to those upheld in July.

There are over 600 persons, 12 of them women, on death row in the United States. According to a recent census, 310 of those on death row are black, and all of those awaiting the death sentence are of the lower income bracket.

Glaring racial and economic inequities in the use of the death penalty is of foremost concern of the abolitionists against capital

Another Reidsville, Ga., man, Troy Leon Gregg, waits on death row along with 36 Georgia inmates for the setting of execution

Gregg was found guilty in the shooting of two men who picked him up when he was hitchhiking across Georgia in 1973.

David Kendall, attorney for the NAACP, said Gregg and 21 other inmates in Georgia, Florida and Texas who were denied rehearings Oct. 4, "represent the cases furthest advanced procedurally and in these cases executions could come as early as six to eight weeks

Marvin Zalman, MSU criminal justice professor, said that the death penalty can be stopped through strong public pressure. People shouldn't expect a turn around of the courts, unless public opinion is changed, he said.

Zalman also stated that some of the individuals strongest in opposition to capital punishment are people in corrections. The criminal justice professor believes that states having the death penalty experience "undue tension and a rotten atmosphere within the corrections system.

"I disagree with the death penalty's use as a controller of crime," said Zalman, "I think it's effectiveness in reducing crime is marginal. There are lots of reasons for crime.' Zalman said that he personally would encourage citizens to join in the protest of capital punishment and that he personally would join Director of the American Civil Liberties Union, Deborah Levy, believes that at least one executuion will probably have to take place to arouse enough opposition to turn back the tide. "I think that when we come to that actual execution," says Levy, "people are going to turn away from capital punishment just as they did 10 years ago.'

If the imminence of an actual execution in this country does spur people to re-enact protest measures of the early 1960s, then crowds may well gather once again at prison gates in all-night vigils protesting capital punishment in the United States.

Ears may be hurt by alcohol

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) -Warning: a University of Utah professor of audiology has determined that drinking may be hazardous to your ears.

Martin Robinette said results of a six-week study he conducted at Wayne State University show that stapedius muscle of the middle ear, which normally contracts to protect the eardrum from loud noises, doesn't operate as well when a person is tipsy.

In the sessions of the study where alcohol was used, subjects suffered a greater amount of temporary damage to hearing ability, Robinette said.

The tests showed, he said, "a hearing loss from noise when there is alcohol in the system."

Lawson was more concerned with any mistakes he made than whether or not he felt that he had played his best game.

"I'm always thinking of mistakes," the senior from Lake Charles, La., said when asked to evaluate his performance. He pointed out that if he had gotten his pass off to split end Byrd a little quicker it would have been good for a touch down. He was even critical enough of himself to point out another mistake.

"(Kirk) Gibson had his man beat. I'll take the blame - if I'd have got back quicker he would have had six."

The extent of Smith's injury isn't known yet, but both will practice with the first unit all week as they have all season. And if Smith can't play, or gets hurt again, the poised Lawson will be ready again.

Forum set on issue of street closure

By MICHAEL ROUSE State News Staff Writer

East Lansing residents will have a chance to comment on the temporary closure of Grove Street at a public forum Friday at 7:30 p.m. in the city hall council chambers.

Tree planter boxes have blocked the street to through traffic since Aug. 1 in an attempt to divert cars from residential streets. The closure was the result of action taken by the Street Closure Committee of the Bailey Community Assn., led by city councilmember John Czarnecki.

In deciding on closing Grove Street, quadrants of the Bailey neighborhood were canvassed for resident concerns on the traffic situation. Some of the solutions to excessive traffic through a neighborhood are a complete closure, a traffic

"Grove is the only street that has been acted on," Czarnecki said. "No other streets are proposed to be closed."

'We're looking for more feed back from the people who live there and from the community

Czarnecki said the closing of streets may benefit the people living in the immediate area but be a disadvantage to

At the last city council meet ing, Chitra Smith, 621 M.A.C. Ave., criticized the council for catering to a minority of people who wanted to "throw frisbees in the street." She said closing Grove Street places a burden on the residents of alternate streets where traffic is diverted

Czarnecki responded by say ing that the street closure is an attempt to make the neighbor hood more residential.

One woman contacted by Czarnecki in a door-to-door survey said she did not like the Grove Street closure because she did not feel safe walking along the street without cars present.

"The object is not to shift traffic from one place to another," Czarnecki said. "The closure is meant to force people to use major streets meant to handle the traffic, not residential streets.

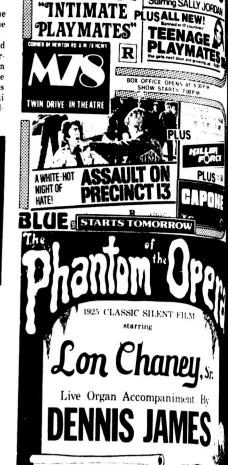

Czarnecki said he has not received any negative comments from the police or fire departments about servicing the neighborhood with Grove Street closed.

"The emergency vehicles can still get through by going around the blockade over the curb and onto the grass," he said.

Grove Street will be closed until January, when a deter-mination will be made on to continue the closure. If the street becomes closed permanently, Czarnecki said the area could be landscaped into a minipark.

Kubrick spins off odysseys like clockwork

Director's daring cinema reaches mass audiences with artistic film statements

The American cinema has become second rate. While all over the world men like Fellini and Bergman and Truffaut have made quality films, American artistic substance has been made secondary to profit and commercial potential of

The money and power is still great here, but the number of top-notch directors has dwindled to almost nothing. Americans produce pablum like "Bad News Bears" or "The Apple Dumpling Gang" or "The Way We Were" most of the time with an occasional "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" (directed by Czech Milos Forman) or "Midnight Cowboy" (directed by Briton John Schlesinger) to keep the critics at bay.

Artistic American cinema must first make money: a hard lesson Orson Welles learned with "Citizen Kane." The technically adventurous masterpiece (maybe the finest American sound film ever made) in 1941 was a box-office flop and Welles was never again given full artistic control over a film by the studios

But in the last 15 years, one young American was able to combine serious philosophical and artistic film statements with box-office appeal.

Stanley Kubrick's 1962 film, "Lolita," followed by "Dr. Strangelove" in 1964, then "2001: A Space Odyssey" (1968), "A Clockwork Orange" (1971) and his latest film, last year's "Barry Lyndon," represent Kubrick's quintet of highly artistic films that sell. While many of the foreign classics play to small commercial followings and college film societies, Kubrick reaches the masses with really daring cinema.

His black humor, making grotesque satires of the sacred cows other overly timid Americans genuflect to, is his trademark: in "Lolita." a 12-year-old nymphet seduces a middle-aged man; "Dr. Strangelove," the American military establishment is pursued with savage humorous force as it provokes a nuclear war with the Russians over the "international Communist conspiracy" to sap and impurify our vital body fluids by putting fluoride in the drinking water. Making American generals look like cornball paranoids was clearly risky (in pre-Vietnam '64) to the film's financial success, but Kubrick and his studio (Columbia) did.

The film was a hit anyway, but it is through his last three films, painstakingly planned and executed, that Kubrick has claimed certain status as a master. These films constitute a trilogy — the future (2001), the present (Clockwork) and the past (Barry Lyndon) — and display his virtues as a director.

He has a rare sense of form and tempo but, beyond that, he has a sense of what makes a picture, having begun his career as a still

Tragic hero Oedipus star of Cocteau's play, 'The Infernal Machine

The MSU Arena Theater will be the scene for the production of "The Infernal Machine," an offbeat version of the age-old classic involving the problems of Greek tragic hero Oedipus. "The Infernal Machine" runs Thursday through Sunday and Nov. 3 through Nov. 6. Curtain is at 8:15 p.m. play is based on the Greek tragedy of Oedipus, who kills his father and marries his mother - in both instances. "The Infernal Machine" refers to the gods' plot against helpless Oedipus, director Farley Richmond, associate professor of theater, said.

"The moral is, man can't control his own destiny," he added. The play as to be presented at MSU is the work of French playwright Jean Cocteau, who was active during the 1920s and 30s, and managed to make the work a criticism of Hitler Cocteau, best known for his film "Beauty and the Beast." reflected many of his personal beliefs in the play, such as

'Barry Lyndon:' a travelog through history; brooding in serious, respectful tones State News Reviewer

Stanley Kubrick's much-maligned film of Thackeray's "Barry Lyndon" has returned to town after a lengthy absence, and perhaps the picture is deserving of some further reflection.

Certainly, as has been previously written, the film is ravishingly beautiful: the sets, costumes, cinematography were all properly Oscared and otherwise acclaimed.

But the praise and appreciation possibly, the understanding of the film — ended with the carefully chosen, respectful phrases regarding the picture's visual design. Critics seemed perplexed that "Barry Lyndon" was not, say, "Tom Jones," and latched onto that admirable John Osborne-Tony Richardson adaptation of Henry Fielding's comic opus as a hard and fast example of how this sort of historical piece should be done.

But, when Thackeray wrote "The Luck of Barry Lyndon," he was not yet a great novelist (the maturity, and the greatness of his "Vanity Fair" still to come) and neither was he the master satirist that Fielding was. Resultantly, "Barry Lyndon" and "Tom Jones" are very dissimilar books. Where Fielding conveyed his acidic view of the period through a genunine comic sensibility, Thackeray missed the mark of satire. His book leaves a dark impression of the flat inevitability of individual destinies which marked his subject and his period.

Just as Thackeray's book differs from Fielding's book, so is Kubrick's "Barry Lyndon" removed from the Osborne-Richardson "Tom

MSU bluegrass performers try to 'make people smile'

Rv MARTHA G. BENEDETTI State News Staff Writer

"After giving the student body so much grief in class, we are going to try to make up for it by playing bluegrass music," said Charles "Farley"
MacCluer, MSU mathematics professor and fiddle player in The Blue Grass Extension Ser-

The group, which plays every Sunday night at Art's Bar, 809 play tonight at Moon's Highwheeler Restaurant and Bar.

"We feel that through per forming for the student body, we can further student-pro-fessor interaction, which is sorely needed," MacCluer said. "As professors, we believe in a more relaxed relationship with the students and bluegrass music is our way of promoting

The Blue Grass Extension Service began five years ago with five MSU professors. There are still five however, two of the original moved to Nashville and were replaced by Bill "Junior" Layman and Jack Clarkson.

Layman drives a truck for a living and plays bass for the group. Clarkson, an MSU medical student and business manager for the group, plays man-

Along with MacCluer, there is Ron "Doc" Rosenberg, a MSU professor of mechanical engineering who plays guitar and Erik "Billy" Goodman, an MSU systems science professor who plays banjo.

The group members have various ties with Southern culture. Goodman is from Winston Salem, N.C., Clarkson is from Arkansas and MacCluer stems from Put-In-Bay, Ohio. Layman and Rosenberg have relatives in Kentucky.

"Our group started out messing around with bluegrass, it was a joke," MacCluer said. "Then it became big business. We are now the second-best bluegrass band in Michigan.

'BOC's' 'Agents of Fortune:' packing punch in new form

BLUE OYSTER CULT: AGENTS OF FORTUNE (COLUMBIA – PC34164)

With songs such as "Cities on Flame (with Rock and Roll)" and "Buck's Boogie," BOC has always had the distinction of being one of the truest-to-form "raunch" and roll bands of the last five years. The guitars, at times numbering five leads playing at once, have always been the overpowering base of

After numerous records with this bulldozing style, the group has done a turnabout and considerably improved its music. "Agents of Fortune" is the proof of this surprising rebirth of Blue Oyster Cult. "This Ain't the Summer of Love" is the lead cut which has the essence of past "Cult" music in it, with that elusive ability to ceiving a lot of airplay and it is handling this overexposure well. Piano and the vocals of Eric Bloom accentuate the tune "Morning Final," while Patti Smith lends her own brand of "Cult" singing to "The Revenge of Vera Gemini." Don't become disillusioned, loyal BOC fans, because the band still packs the punch you grew on, but has fortunately decided to present it in a whole new form. This form gives a good balance of music and vocals with more of an effort seeming to be made in the direction of impressing the listener instead of overpower ing him.
