Michigan fell over $31 million short of proraduate student needs in the 1974-75 year, according to a special House committee, headed by Rep. Thomas , D-Westland, reported Tuesday that tudents who probably had sufficient r financial help received none. Those did receive aid averaged about $345 than they needed.

committee found that 126,000 undertuates applied for aid at 90 Michigan ges - about 44 per cent of the total raduate enrollment at those schools. 75 per cent were expected to qualify scholarships on the basis of need.

rown said the report was the most ehensive accounting ever made of the geassistance picture in the state.

but strongly urged that data be inually updated so that any changes are proposed can be based on "firm. dand factual information."

rown said the study showed that many lents clearly qualify for aid but do not we it and many others who felt they help but were unable to qualify

The justices on Monday stayed Gilmore's execution by a 3-2 decision. Their two-paragraph decision Wednesday granted a moion by Gilmore's new attorney to withdraw the appeal filed by two court appointed attorneys Gilmore had fired.

In a dissenting opinion, Justice P. Frank Wilkins said legal problems remain to be resolved.

George W. Latimer, chairperson of the Utah Board of Pardons, said it is up to Gov. Calvin Rampton to grant any reprieve until the board meets to consider possible options of reducing the sentence. The board's next scheduled meeting is next Rampton was not immediately available for comment.

One of the court-appointed attorneys who had filed the appeal said after Wednesday's ruling it looked "very likely" the execution might be carried out. But he said no decision had been made whether the two attorneys would continue fighting to avert Gilmore, wearing white prison garb and handcuffs, appeared before the black-robed justices and said: "I believe I was given a fair trial, and I think the sentence was proper, and I'm willing to accept it like a man and wish it to be carried out without

During the hearing the court accepted California attorney Dennis Boaz as counsel for Gilmore. This effectively relieved the two court appointed attorneys who had filed Gilmore's appeal over his protests.

'U' development plan advocated by report

MSU should formulate a master development plan, re-evaluate its expansion program, keep the revenue it gets from on-campus parking tickets and make the University Health Center and Kellogg Center self-supporting, according to a report released Wednesday by a committee looking for ways to streamline state facilities.

The findings of the Michigan Efficiency Task Force, composed of prominent Michigan citizens, also recommended that the Michigan higher education system centralize its management to prevent duplicity of efforts and called for the closing of some of the smaller community colleges that "are not cost-efficient."

Gov. Milliken appointed the committee to make recommendations on every facet of state-run organizations to insure efficiency.

MSU's current system of planning its programs through separate five-year reports from each department and college should be changed into one comprehensive master plan, the report said. This would lead to a more coordinated planning process, it said

The current agreement whereby MSU annually turns over the $175,000 it nets from parking tickets to East Lansing and other jurisdictions should be changed so the state can receive this revenue, the report said. Under the law, state universities can retain revenues they net from violations. the report adds, and a "sharing of income might be considered (with East Lansing) as an alternative to maintain good relations.

The University should re-evaluate its eight proposed construction projects that would cost initially about $108 million. "With the possibility of a decline in student population statewide, overall coordination of capital expendutires policy is needed to avoid duplication or overcapacity of educational facilities," the report said Adjustments should be made in the operations of the health center and Kellogg Center, the report said, to prevent future losses of those facilities. The health center had a $1.5 million deficit for fiscal year 1975 the conference center lost about $148,000, the report said.

Fee rates should be changed, charge-backs should be established and the University should consider locating the health center at a different location to cut losses, the report said. If the Kellogg Center continues to lose money, rental fees should be increased and other steps should be taken to make the center self-support-

On the broader educational front, the report recommended a centralized planning authority be established for higher educa tion, business procedures of the universities should be standardized, energy conservation policies of institutions should be coordinated and operations should be consolidated where possible. The report also recommends graduate programs given at more than one institution be studied to see if duplicity can be prevented, pre-admission processes be centralized in all state schools and duplication of recruiting activi-

The report, contained in a 195-page book, also evaluated most other state programs, ranging from the Cemetery Commission to the Michigan Housing Authority. It said if the proper steps are taken the state could save an overall $200 million annually.

Enrollment drop linked to costs not being met

NEW ORLEANS (AP) - Enrollment at nearly half the nation's public colleges and universities has dropped this year, a sharp reversal from 1975

"Rising costs are the principal reason enrollments are down," says John Mallan, governmental relations director for the American Assn. of State Colleges and

The decline came as a shock to state schools, which showed a 9 per cent enrollment increase last year and had expected another 4.5 per cent hike this fall.

Mallan blamed state governments for failing to provide money to meet rising costs. This forced public schools to increase charges to students to keep going, he said.

Jacob Stampen, the association's senior researcher, said it now costs a public college student about $3,000 a year, up 40 per cent in the last five years.

The collective — named for Kitty Genovese, a woman who was raped and murdered over 10 years ago in front of her New York home — operates a hot line from 7 to 8:30 p.m. Sunday through Thursday. Women may call the ASMSU Women's Council at 353-8859 to report assaults, obscene phone calls or acts of exhibitionism. These reports will be used to compile

Some of the myths the collective refers to are: "women only get raped late at night when they are walking alone" and "rapists only go after beautiful women in short skirts and low-cut blouses."

Capt. Ferman Badgley of the Dept. of Public Safety (DPS), said the myths were

"Any girl, woman or male is a target for pe," Badgley said. "It can be very embarrassing for a male to admit he was raped, so they are generally reluctant to turn in reports. However, males do get

"Several rapes were reported in the Music Build where a rapist dragged a woman to the kitchen of a dormitory and raped her there," he said.

The DPS is very concerned with making women aware of the potential to be raped at MSU, according to Badgley.

"The DPS has prepared a presentation on defense, and we also have some films to make people more aware, which are available upon request," he said.

He advised women who have to be out alone at night to buy a bus pass or ride a bicycle on a well-lighted road.

Budget crunch hurting quality of college

This is part of a State News series exploring the effect of the budget crunch on the individual colleges.

State News Staff Writer The growing cost of petroleum is not only squeezing money out of the driver's pocketbook, but is siphoning the quality out of the laboratory program in the College of Every department in the College of Natural Science relies heavily upon laboratory exercises for course instruction, and the spiraling costs for such materials is adversely affecting the quality of courses in such departments as engineering, nursing, geology, physics, zoology and microbiology. The College of Natural Science also faces financial trouble in light of a 1 per cent cut in its overall budget. The cut was ordered by the University Administration for the current fiscal year to meet a tight MSU budget. The administration is seeking an average 2½ per cent retrenchment throughout the entire University. Many of the chemicals that are used in laboratory experiments are made from petroleum bases, and due to the rising costs of gas and oil, the chemicals have increased in price by 200

"Our budget for laboratory supplies has had some increases, but the rate of inflation far exceeds them." he said. Byerrum said other problems, such as class size, were plaguing the college's budget as much as shortages in the laboratory.

Because of the budget, the number of faculty members over the years has remained constant, but the increasing student enrollment has created much larger-sized classes within the College of Natural Science

We are reaching the upper limits for class size. Any further cuts would certainly affect the quality of our programs," Byerrum said.

The College of Natural Science provides more credit hours than any other college in the University, many of them for undergraduates. Therefore the majority of the college's budget is devoted to faculty salaries and that, according to Byerrum, is the problem with a tight budget.

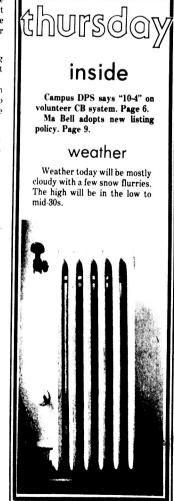

'Our problem is that most of our budget goes to faculty salaries and any budget increases we have go toward pay increases," Byerrum said.

'We have been accommodating by upping the size of our classes. I just hope we don't have to limit the enrollment numbers next time," he said. Though the pay scale for faculty was still competitive among other institutions around the country, Byerrum said that position could quickly drop if the limitations on the college's

"We were inspected fairly recently and we got a good rating," he said. "We have been given a 10-year extension so I don't think we are in any trouble with North Central." Byerrum did say that the continued cutbacks in the budget could have a great effect on

Two hanged for attempt on Sadat

CAIRO (AP) - Two men have been hanged for leading an attempt to overthrow President Anwar Sadat in April 1975, the semiofficial newspaper Al Ahram reported Wednesday.

Saeh Sarreya, a Palestinian, and Hassan Anadoly, an Egyptian, were convicted of leading an armed attack on a military technical college in Cairo in which 11 persons were killed and 27

The two men planned to arrest Sadat and change the Egyptian constitution, the government said. The newspaper said they were hanged in a Cairo prison Tuesday.

A security court sentenced a third man. Tallal Ansary, to death, but Sadat commuted his sentence to life imprisonment a year ago. Others convicted of taking part in the plot were given prison terms ranging from one year to life.

"Despite the lack of credible evidence that any causal factor existed, the continuous public reports linking the hotel to reports of the illness has been ruinous to its business," Chadwick said.

He quickly added that "is the only commitment Carter has made to me that any problems we have he will give them immediate consideration.

Policewoman kicked off force

FLINT (UPI) — Black policewoman Madeline Fletcher, who stood trial this spring for shooting a fellow officer, was fired Wednesday for allegedly ignoring regulations at a police academy where she had been seeking recertification. Fletcher's dismissal was announced at a news conference by Police Chief Max Durbin. Durbin said he hoped her departure will bring to an end a "distrustful situation" in the Flint Police

The 21-year-old policewoman admitted at her trial that she shot her partner, a white man, in a dispute over who would drive their patrol car. However, she was found innocent of charges of assault with intent to do great bodily harm less than murder and felonious assault.

Hart says gang crime is down

DETROIT (UPI) - Detroit's Police Chief, William L. Hart, has pronounced the city's youth gang problem momentarily solved.

In an appearance before city council Tuesday, Hart said gang violence has decreased in recent weeks with the onset of 20-degree winter weather.

Hart said he has ordered 100 police officers taken out of a special citywide patrol unit that was formed this summer to control youth crime. The officers will be reassigned to "high-crime precincts of the city," Hart said.

Brown has been accused of using welfare files to help a Detroit appliance firm track down defaulting creditors — a service for which Brown allegedly accepted fees.

A spokesperson for the governor said Tuesday it was not clear the use of information from state welfare files betrayed confidences or amounted to clear violations of the law.

Jackson smuggling scheme foiled

JACKSON, Mich. (AP) - Southern Michigan Prison officials say four prison inmates smuggled loaded pistols into the institution, apparently thinking they would get quick paroles if they reported the gun cache. Instead, the four - along with one prisoner's wife — were arraigned Tuesday in Jackson County District Court on felony charges of conspiring to import three .25-caliber automatics and 45 rounds of ammunition into the 5,700-inmate prison.

Officials did not say how the pistols were smuggled into the facility. But they said the scheme apparently was based on a mistaken assumption that convicts who report hidden guns would be awarded with early parole.

And, in other action, the occupy Beirut State Board asked that legislation be introduced in the state legislature that would allow local governments to fund their schools through an income tax in crisis situations.

State School Supt. John W. Porter had urged the state board to go on record against raising the legal drinking age, saying there was inadequate proof that a change in the law is

But the State Board, on a 5-2 decision, voted to support a bill now in the legislature that would raise the legal age to 19. The drinking age was lowered from 21 to 18 in 1972 when the new Age of Majority was enacted.

Bills currently in the House and Senate to raise the drinking age will die automatically if not acted upon by Dec. 31 - which is unlikely - but their sponsors have pledged to reintroduce them next year.

Syrian troops

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) Syrian tanks and troops descended on embattled Beirut from three directions Wednesday in a swift occupation designed to extinguish the 19month civil war. Housewives and shopkeepers waved from balconies and cheered from open windows.

"If they're coming to help our country, then we welcome them 100 times," said Joseph Salloum, a grocer in a Christian quarter on the southeastern edge of the city, as the Syrian T62 and T54 tanks clanked into the capital in a massive display of power.

Shelling between the Moslem and Christian sections of the city continued right up until the arrival of the Syrians, now acting as the vanguard of Pan-Arab peacekeeping force.

In southern Lebanon, the leftist Lebanese Arab Army claimed six Israeli tanks and personnel carriers attacked the town of Bint Jbeil, three miles north of the border, and were repelled after an hour long

Domestic resources stressed by expert

By NANCY JARVIS State News Staff Writer

The chief administrator of the Federal Energy Administration (FEA) said the development of domestic oil and gas is essential if the nation wants to achieve energy

Frank G. Zarb, chief administrator of the FEA, speaking at Kellogg Center Wednesday, said that in addition to domestic production, Americans must double the attainment and consumption of coal, increase reliance on nuclear power, stockpile projects to prevent another oil embargo and practice additional energy conservation methods.

Zarb's address was part of a statewide effort this month to inform citizens of the necessity and means of conserving energy. November has been designated as energy month and is intended to make Michigan citizens realize they are not beyond the energy crunch of 1973 and that a similar situation could encore.

If this winter has normal temperatures, Zarb said, "we should be OK." But he said that if the winter proves to be severe, there could be energy shortages resulting in disrupted industry with no delivery to plants and layoffs.

"The problem has not gone away," he said.

The United States paid $3.4 million to foreign countries for oil this year, Zarb said, and added that the potentials for another oil disaster are "mighty real." He said the upcoming December meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Companies (OPEC) will probably end in increased oil prices but there is no reason for this increase

"They (OPEC members) don't have instructions from their governments," he said. "There is no inflationary basis for them to raise prices."

He added that there are some "moderate" OPEC members who will not want an increase but that others will justify an increase by saying it is expected in America.

Addressing the nuclear power situation, Zarb said nuclear power should be increased from the present 9 per cent to 26 per cent of the nation's total source of energy. He said that 'an explosion of a power plant is not a real possibility."

Zarb said the government has basically ignored the questions of nuclear waste disposal and recycling but it "could be adequately handled." He said that the disposal situation is as much an international question as a national one. He also emphasized the need for the United States to excel in nuclear technology, "or we will lose the ability to lead in

Solar power, Zarb said, will reach about 9 per cent of our energy needs by 1990-95. He said that a greater increase in this source is unlikely because even with breakthroughs in orbiting systems and storage tanks, it will take about 20 years to design, construct and finally produce solar power

Americans currently waste about one third of their total energy. With rising prices and decreased resources, every bit of energy must be used, Zarb said. As for future changes, he said the energy policies will probably remain basically the same under the Carter administration.

"I cannot imagine any major ones (changes)," he said. "He (Carter) feels the five points (those needed to achieve energy independence) are the best.'

Masterson said he believes that "teaching math in large lectures results in a low percentage of learning experiences." Doyle argued with Nordhaus' viewpoint and said the large lecture teaching method cannot continue.

"If they are going to keep professing to teach this material they can't continue to teach it this way," Doyle said.

The textbook used in Math 108 has also been subjected to severe criticism by several faculty members.

"The book is atrocious, it is one of the worst reading books I have ever seen," Masterson said. "I would like to change the text, and if there isn't a better one available we should draw our own."

Doyle said the text is highly questionable but that a majority of the faculty are uninterested in the problem and "spend half their day in the coffee room putting down students and other faculty."

Masterson and Richard Hill, associate professors of math, both said they are examining other math textbooks to find an alternative for the present one.

"I'm in the process of looking at books now," Hill said. "There's no question that there are things about the present text I'm unhappy about. However, if we decide to change texts in 108 we have to be careful that the next text will be around for a while, since there are so many students who purchase the book."

Ludden said the current text has a large collection of problems and students can learn from them.

"Personally I don't like the book too well," Nordhaus said. "I find it difficult for students to read, but it does have good Recommendations that many of the colleges re-evaluate the requirement of Math 108 as a prerequisite for other courses, have been requested by Masterson and Doyle.

"I think departments should be seriously questioned so they would seek to find out what level of math their students need," Masterson said. "The accountability of the department needs to be explored by an outsider. It is unfortunate, but there is a high degree of departmental chauvinism around here."

"Re-evaluation of the departments should start with the provost," Doyle said. "He should recommend forcing the colleges to give reasons other than tradition for requiring Math 108.

MSU Poultry Science Club is holding its eighth annual turkey hthe Thanksgiving holiday. The club has ordered 650 turkeys ing from seven to 24 lbs. and priced at 65 cents a pound.

Terry Wing, coordinator of the turkey sale, said sales are brisk

Wing said the turkeys are of the finest quality and the price is a little cheaper than the grocery stores.

"We took a survey of local prices when we bought the birds and the price is a little less or about comparable," he said.

Turkey prices tend to go up with the increasing demand for them around Thanksgiving, but since the club's birds were ordered weeks ago, the prices will remain stable.

Last year the club sold over 800 turkeys. The sales finance club activities which this year will include a trip to the Southeastern Poultry and Egg Assn. convention in Atlanta. In the past, MSU's Poultry Science Club, which is one of the largest in the nation, presented bicentennial turkeys to Gov. Milliken and President Ford. If conversation runs short around the Thanksgiving dinner table.

here are some turkey tidbits to liven things up. The turkey industry in the United States is a billion-dollar business. An average of about 135 million birds are raised annually, with one million of those coming from Michigan.

The average consumption of turkey per year in the United States is about nine pounds, compared to about 120 pounds of beef per person. Turkey, however, has more protein value than beef. Choice chuck steak has about 21 per cent protein, while turkey has about 25 per cent protein.

The turkey industry is rapidly expanding from just plain roasted turkey. Turkey meat is being processed into turkey hot dogs,

The turkey has come a long way since the days the Pilgrims feasted on it. Today's birds are of much higher quality and are plump and juicy because of scientific breeding.

Today it takes about 20 weeks of scientific breeding to produce an average-sized turkey for the dinner table. A 20 pound turkey requires about 62 pounds of feed and most turkeys are bred to obtain mostly white meat, the taste preference of the majority of meeting.

"The former format was so much better. There were many more listeners last year because of it," Cistrunk said. "However this year, the station managers want us to use a format that totally limits the playing of soul music. The station doesn't even have much of a selection in soul, rhythm and blues and jazz music to choose from."

As a result of not including programing, Cistrunk said that there is also some discontent among the other black disc Alice Evans, a telecommunications major, agreed with Cistrunk in that there was a better format last year.

"There has been an immense cutback because of the present format. Before, a disc jockey could play almost whatever he or she wanted. Not so this year."

However, because of Evan's blindness, she said her music selection is much broader than the other disc jockeys'. She personally equires her music to put braille labels on it.

Anthony "Tiny" Porter, a telecommunications major, agreed that he is not completely satisfied with the present radio format.

All disc jockeys at the station must select the music they play on the air from charts that are required to include various types of music. If particular records are not on the charts, disc jockeys cannot bring any in from outside sources. The charts are not to be confused with the popular music charts, such as the Top 10 or 40.

Charles Seaman, WMSN station manager, said the current station format offers a broader scope because all types of music are played during the day, night and weekends, as opposed to the designated hours for the rhythm, blues, soul and jazz music of last year's format don't believe in formats or any traditional kind of programing when it comes to this radio station." Seaman said. "The music isn't aimed at any special audience. We're trying to hit as many people as possible.

Seaman said that there are fewer blacks working at the station for their own personal reasons but that the air hours of those still Cistrunk said the decline of seven black disc jockeys in one year to the present three indicates the need for improvements in the station's radio procedures.

MSU trustees to meet tonight

The MSU Board of Trustees will hold an informal briefing session tonight at 7:30 in the Heritage Room of Kellogg Center. The trustees will meet with representatives from various student groups to discuss issues with the board.

The regular monthly meeting for the trustees will be on Friday at 9 a.m. in the Board Room on the fourth floor of the Administration Building.

The board will discuss the actions of PIRGIM during fall term registration Friday morning. Charges have been leveled against PIRGIM for hassling students who chose not to contribute to the organization.

The board of trustees will also approve 1977-78 budget requests to be given to the state legislature. Both meetings are open to

The burgeoning fight against nuclear power suffered a blow in last out to be. Far from it. Last year, a group of 2,300 reputable scientists week's elections when initiatives that would have restricted nuclear power plants were on ballots in six states - and were stunningly defeated in all of them, even in normally progressive states like Oregon and Colorado.

The nuclear industry not only provided a heavy-spending media blitz to convince voters that nuclear power really is safe cheap, practical and wonderful, but were aided by a suspiciously well-timed report by the Energy Research and Development Agency (ERDA) that the anti-nuclear side angrily called "pro-nuclear propoganda."

It can't be denied, though, that there is a hefty margin of public support for nuclear power. According to a Gallup poll taken last July. 71 per cent approved of it. But the same polls show that the same people do not feel that safety precautions are stringent enough on current nuclear development. The public isn't giving the full go-ahead, and it isn't calling for a dead halt either.

People realize that nuclear power is not the panacea it has been made warned that the dangers of nuclear power were so serious that construction of new plants should be cut sharply. This put to rest rumors that nuclear power had to be safe because no experts doubted its safety.

The scientists stressed three major points: • Grave doubts about the safety of the nuclear reactor. Though there have not been any accidents yet, malfunctions, errors and defects run rampant in the existing 50 or so nuclear plants.

There is no feasible way of getting rid of nuclear waste, which retains its radioactivity for thousands of years. Gov. Milliken assured northern Michigan leaders Tuesday that a lot more studying would be done before the state would allow Alpena to become a nuclear waste

• The relationship between commercial nuclear reactors and nuclear explosives: safeguards are so weak that three armed men would be able to overtake any nuclear plant, which could too easily result in illegal nuclear weapons in the hands of terrorists.

It comes down to some painfully difficult choices: develop the ris nuclear power, remain vulnerably dependent on foreign energy sour or rely on fossil fuels that are rapidly ruining the environment.

We don't think the risk is worth it. The danger — and cost — involv is far too high to be aiming a comprehensive energy plan at. ### Book smuggling hurting all

With the cost of running the MSU Library increasing every month, it is time for the University community to help the Library in combating the dishonest activity of smuggling books past "checkers" and keeping them. The Library is to be commended in its purchase of a new "Tattletape"

The childish dubbing of such a detection device certainly fits the mentality of those persons the system is designed to catch. The price, though - a nice, $77,000 tag — quickly quells any laughs.

The Library will be installing tapes in the most expensive books and the ones most likely to be stolen. A doorway device will then detect books which were not checked out properly.

While we do not like seeing any students losing their jobs, including the present 19 book checkers, it will save the Library money.

Library costs are soaring and the state, hard put to respond to the need for more funding, may actually begin to cut back allotments. By stealing books and forcing the Library to take expensive action, criminals show only embarrassing selfishness and a lack of understanding of the very function of the Library as an institution.

All users should cooperate in seeing that book-stealing is discouraged by helping to prosecute

Math 108

The provocative Karson letter of Oct. 27 is worth campuswide concern. With a large campus threatened by Carter's lust and Ford's repression, we note the pervasive sadism of Math 108 forced on hundreds of unwilling victims. If the whole program were moved to Spartan Stadium it could easily be mistaken for the spontaneous outpouring of Chilean democracy today.

This is the 100th year since the birth of the U's most distinguished permanent president, David Friday. It is a good year to settle the 108 question. Friday's solution would be direct, efficient and humane. (By the way, where is Friday Hall? A small piece of Brody, perhaps?)

First, he would issue orders to all colleges and departments requiring 108 to justify the ritual by arguments independent of tradi-tion, in spite of common belief this would reduce the number of victims by 50 per cent. Next, class size would be immediately limited to 25 and the coffee room on the second floor of Wells would be reserved for classes only. Those found drinking coffee in the ping pong room would be subject to tutoring in 108 on a one-to-one basis. This alone would provide enough staff to handle anything and put an end to the widening 2S War that comes from guerilla junior staff who have not recently noted the lack of urgent need for their research.

Hiring practices in admissions department shady

"Anyone that feels that their civil rights have been violated by this office, I strongly suggest that they promptly file complaint with the Civil Rights Commission for the adjudication of the matter. We have done no wrong whatsoever."

The comments were made by Ira Polley, asst. provost for admissions and records, and were in response to shady hiring practices in MSU's admissions department. It is particularly exemplified by the recent hiring of a white transfer and financial aids

My reasons for suspecting some administrators in the admissions department of questionable hiring practices are primarily derived from the inconsistent and contradictory information - or lack of it received from various administrators in the admissions office.

Let me show what I mean by tracing the events that led to the placement

In July, a position was posted for a transfer and financial aids counselor. The position was reposted Sept. 7 because of 'changes" in the nature of the job, according to Polley. However, this is where the first of many "convenient coincidences" comes in.

The first interviewing committee that reviewed the finalists for the originally posted Level 10, $11,000-$16,000 job consisted of the following: Marvin G. Rist, associate director of admissions and financial aids; Ira Polley; Charles F. Seeley, director of admissions and scholarships; James A. Tate, associate director and coordinator for developmental programs; and Richard E. Hensen, associate director of

However, it was the interviewing committee for the reposted position that made the final decision of who was to be hired. This second committee consisted of the same people, but excluded James A. Tate. Tate is

I asked Polley how members of the interviewing committee were selected. He said they were primarily selected by their "availability" at the time of the given interviews. The following question immediately crossed my mind: How was Tate so "available" for the first committee and not the second? There was, in fact, no black person on the second interviewing com-

When contacted about the interviewing committee, Tate said, "I was not informed or included in the second interviewing committee. I do not know why I wasn't included. I was quite surprised to find that I was not even contacted.'

While I was asking Polley questions concerning the interviewing committee, he leaned forward and boasted, "We have the most integrated offices (admissions) in the University. .

My immediate reaction in my own mind to Polley's claim — whether it is true or not was, "If you have such an 'integrated' office, why couldn't you find at least one 'available' black to sit on the interviewing committee?" Ironically, all of the other committee members were "available."

Also, the counseling position that was posted the second time distinctly stated that the counselor would be working with minorities. If this (minorities) was not a concern in posting the job, why was it even

It is reasonable to assume that this position would have been favorably suited for a black person. Especially since there are no black transfer counselors anywhere in MSU's admissions department. A transfer counselor primarily visits various universities and colleges where students might transfer to MSU.

I asked Hensen how blacks and other minorities responded when a black accompanied a transfer counselor during recruiting.

"It doesn't matter who speaks to blacks or other minorities when we go on recruitments. The students have always been most gracious," Hensen said. "I have never seen a distinction in the response of students whether a black or white person goes to recruit in predominantly black schools."

In view of such a response, I have no other choice than to consider him either hopelessly naive or lacking in one of the five senses. Despite the incredulity of Hensen's statement, what is even more incredulous was when I simply tried to find out who vacated the transfer counselor position that was given to Jane Averill, the woman who eventually got the job.

"The position was probably formerly held by Terry L. Dunham, admissions coun-selor," Polley said. However, when Seeley was contacted, he said the position was vacated by Joel C. Bryant (although when I recontacted Seeley, he had a memory lapse and said he never said Bryant's position was the one filled). Tate said that it was his former position that was vacated and Hensen said it was someone else's.

All of these discrepancies were under one roof: the admissions department. It is pretty ironic to me that no one could even come to a general consensus about who vacated the presently filled job.

Is there so much bureaucracy in the admissions department that no one even knows who is working where? Or could it be that there are some administrators in the admissions department with something to Tate said that it was his former position in the admissions department that was filled. However, Tate was in a different salary level because of some seniority with the University. Different salary levels can also change the job title of a particular job, though the duties may be identical.

Jane Averill was hired at a lower salary level but if she is in fact doing the same duties that Tate performed, she is in fact doing the same job.

If this is so, her placement violates affirmative action plan. As information has it, there qualified black available for the position. Also, if it was Tate's position other position held by a black that w replaced with a black person, the obvious that the number of black ad trators further declines.

Does this mean that the affirmative plan of the University is meaningle you readers to judge the "strange" of the situation for yourself.

contribution to government."

Students feel there is a chance

the level of precision with certain types of economic data, such as GNP," Pachon said. "But the research is based on soft data and to a large extent is not conclusive.'

Pachon said one problem with measuring quality of life through social indicators lies in whether the indicators are measured subjectively or objectively.

Objective measurement in cludes techniques such as collecting data concerning unemployment, number of recreational facilities and per capita income, and is not based on attitudes.

One example Pachon gave of subjective measurement of indicators is to simply ask people how they feel about factors affecting the quality of life.

Subjective measurement is instrumental when indicators Shingleton said that as the exist that can differ from government gets more involved person to person while the in providing social services, the persons are experiencing the same condition, said Stephen result will be an increase in the number of jobs available for Withey, director of the Survey students in the public sector. Research Institute at the University of Michigan.

"In our work we try to relate the two types of measure-ments," Withey said. "We use subjective measurements to find out how people feel about their lives and then we try to determine why they feel this way using objective data."

"We are mostly psychologists here at the institute," Withey said, "so we tend to rely more heavily on subjective measures because they are what we want Withey said there are about 15 social indicators which his institute uses regularly to determine quality of life.

"A person's family - including spouses or very close companions and children - is one of the most important factors," he said.

"The next most important factor concerning quality of life is a person's job, or lack of it," Withey said. "People can dislike their jobs for a number of varying reasons, such as pay scale or working conditions.

Other social indicators which the institute looks at to determine quality of life are leisure time and how it is spent, neighbors and friends, community and standard of living, community services, govern ment services, medical services, activities of local govern ment, general economic condi tions, the media and activities of the federal government. Pachon said the two methods of measuring data on social indicators sometimes leads to discrepancies in determining the actual quality of life.

"For instance, crime rates don't always accurately reflect the rate of crime in communities, because many crimes do not get reported." he said. Therefore, the subjective measure of crime in a community could be much greater than the objective measure, which would consist only of reported crimes."

"If the component social in-dicators are not completely accurate," Pachon questioned, "then how reliable can we expect the aggregate factor to

On the other hand, city and state governments seem to be showing an increase in the number of employes. There is "a firm growth" in these areas, Shingleton said.

'U's' DPS joins volunteer CB system

By JOE SCALES State News Staff Writer

The recent craze of Citizens Band radios (CBs) has caused many a policeman to pull out his hair in frustration as CBers on the nation's highways use their expensive toys to get around the 55 m.p.h. speed limit.

The tables are turning in the Tri-County area, however, with the implementation of a program designed to use volunteer CBers as "an extra set of eyes and ears" to help police locate crime and

The program is called the Tri-County Community Radio Watch (CRW) and according to Corp. Ron Kiersey, an East Lansing policeman helping to organize the CRW, it has been "very successful" since its beginnings a little over a month ago in this

The CRW currently has about 300 volunteers, mostly from Ingham County, who have been screened by police officials to undergo training in first aid and traffic control.

The program is an attempt to organize the numerous CBers who want to help police by calling in accidents or look for suspects and victims, but often just get in the way because of their lack of knowledge in what information police need.

All police agencies in the Tri County area, Ingham, Clinton and Eaton Counties, are participating in the program, with MSU's Dept. of Public Safety (DPS) the most recent to join.

"It would be foolish for us not to have some sort of interest in it," said Maj. Adam Zutaut of the DPS. "There are not enough policemen on the street to prevent all crime. The more eyes and

Next Ms. Black MSU will be chosen Sunday

The finalists have been chosen and the gears are in motion for the major black social event of the year, the Ms. Black MSU Pageant, to be held this week-

The pageant, which was developed to help bring black students together, will be held Sunday in Dooley's Restaurant at 3 p.m. The finalists will be introduced in the Black Caucus room of Wonders Hall Saturday at 8 p.m. and a cabaret will follow at 10 in Wonders Hall

Music for both events will be provided by "Vary Nasty" and tickets are $2 for each event or $3 for both. They can be purchased at the door The finalists, representing dorm complexes, campus organizations and Greeks, are:

Cynthia Joseph, Ms. Black Cedarwoods, a sophomore from Shaw Hall, majoring in language;

Karen E. Thomas, Ms. Black West Circle, a sophomore from Campbell Hall, majoring in accounting;

Denise Miller, Ms. Black Brody, a sophomore from Rather Hall, majoring in special education;

Sheila A. Robinson, Ms. Black Greek, a junior in biochemistry, representing Delta Sigma Theta Sorority; Kathleen A. Leonard, Ms.

Black East, a junior from Holmes Hall, majoring in special

E. Jacqueline Davis, Ms. Black Organization, a junior in music therapy and education, who is representing the Black Orpheus Gospel Choir;

Dal-Mar Thompson, Ms. Black South, a sophomore from Wilson Hall. The panel of nine judges, which includes students, the former Ms. Black MSU, professionals and members of the Lansing community, will base its decisions on talent, interviews and a question-answer

The winner and the runnerup will receive an expense-paid trip to Western Michigan University for the Miss Black State of Michigan College Contest.

and sabres are Schmitter's world The grand master of the foil and sabre has stayed active in fencing competition since his college days and his list of titles and honors are nearly endless: foil and sabre champion of the National Turner Society in 1936, sabre champion and foil runnerup in the 1936 Great Lakes Exposition, 1938 foil and sabre champion of Michigan, 1955 art of teneme cavewoman, confronted each other with a pair of Lakes Exposition, 1938 Ioil and sabre champion of Michigan, 1950 foil runnerup in the Midwest Masters Meet and the tally goes on.

"As long as I can move, I'll be competitive," the 69-year-old coach said. "I tell these guys who I fence 'don't respect my age because I'm not going to respect yours."

The work and the hours Schmitter has spent to promote the sport, however, are even more impressive. The ageless swordsman was the 1959 coach of the U.S. fencing team in the Pan American Games, spent 11 years on the NCAA rules committee, was elected to serve on the 1960 and 1964 Olympic fencing committees, was honored "Fencing Coach of the Year" by his colleagues in 1957 and finally in 1972 was named to the Helms Foundation Fencing Hall of

But by far the most important date to his fencers and local enthusiasts is 1939, the year Schmitter arrived at MSU and became the fourth head coach of the program.
Schmitter, who is beginning his 38th season at MSU, has ompiled a coaching record of 223-184-2 with his 1963 and 1971 teams finishing as Big Ten champions and his 1966 squad placing fourth in NCAA competition.

It hasn't been easy though.

"When I want to recruit an athlete, I sing him the MSU fight song and that's about it," Schmitter said. "We just don't have anything to work with.

"New York University and Wayne State have scholarships to work with and get the cream of the crop," he continued. "The majority of my players start from scratch when they come out for

But the sport is popular at MSU and the Spartan coach said he hardly has a section in his fencing class that doesn't fill up. And that is where he does his best recruiting.

"This is one of the few sports you can come out for absolutely cold and make it," Schmitter said. "Fencing is a physical chess match, a game of moves."

And Schmitter plans to checkmate his Big Ten opponents this winter with a healthy, but young set of pawns. The MSU coach lost seven seniors from his last season's squad and some, like Big Ten epee champion Jon Moss, will be hard to replace.

Schmitter will be counting on Fred Price, Mike Rathburn and Mark Krusac in the foil this season, senior Mike Bradley, a vastly improved Chris Thomas and Wayne Yee in the sabre and senior captain Bill Peterson and his younger brother, Bryan, in the epee.

Bill is going to be good this year and so will his younger brother. Schmitter said of the younger Peterson, a freshman. "Bryan had some high school experience in fencing and my job will be to polish

Along with Bill Peterson, Bradley should be another one of MSU's top fencers. The senior compiled a 38-10 record last year and despite a shoulder injury finished sixth in the Big Ten.

"I should be able to win the Big Ten pretty easily this season," said Bradley, who has compiled a three-year record of 87.38 at MSU. "In fact, I've got my eyes set on making All-American. I think I have a good shot, I've been working out all summer and taking lessons Others who are returning for another season of action are senior John Daniels in the epee and sophomore Rob Williamson in the foil. "A strange thing has happened, very peculiar, my budget has creased," Schmitter said with a smile. "Despite the money problems, I think fencing is here to stay.

MSU to host Julliard Quartet

State News Staff Writer

Considered by some as the "vanguard" of American string quartets, the Julliard String Quartet will become artists-in-residence at MSU for an indefinite period, beginning in October of

Since its inception in 1946, the quartet has only served as artists in-residence at the Julliard School of Music. This is the first time they have ventured outside that arrangement, though they have been made similar offers by other universities.

One reason the Quartet chose MSU, commented violist Samuel Rhodes, "was because last year, during our Beethoven cycle, the rapport was so wonderful. You can feel it when an audience is cold and indifferent, but when we performed here, it was like when a sports team plays at home."

Cellist Joel Krosnick discussed the possibility of integrating music and art programs.

"I want to expand and work with the art department. I am interested in talking about art history and then giving demonstrations of music from the same historical period," he said

The quartet consists of Robert Mann, first violinist; Earl Carlyss, second violinist; Samuel Rhodes, violist; and Joel

Tom Waits to return to East Lansing for Mariah Cofeehouse concert

Latest album, 'Small Change,' noted for unusual variance of material

Back some time ago, two years to be exact, when that big white barn on Grand River Avenue" was not a "slip your disco" palace, but a quaint and environment known as the Stables, an indescribable character opened up a bill that included Martha Reeves, former leader of Motown's famed "Martha and the Vandellas."

This fellow who opened up was quite a sight to behold crumpled suit, well-worn shirt, skinny black tie, poor-boy cap affixed to a sweaty brow. A continuous Old Gold found its way to a mouth that emitted a sandpaper scratchy voice. His other hand, when not ticklin' the ivories, kept a hand-jive beat of snapping fingers.

He sang about a run-down jalopy, "Ol' 55," and after his short set, a member of the audience approached him and said he did a good version of that "Eagles" song.

Tom Waits wrote that song, which the Eagles covered on an album long after Waits recorded it on his first album back in 1973. Tom Waits has an identity problem, but by looking at him you could wonder why. He could be mistaken for a skid row wino or Bowery derelict. But in reality, Tom Waits is one of America's songwriters and Since that unfortunate incident two years ago at the Stables, Waits has put two more albums behind him, the classic, "Heart of Saturday Night" and the live album, Night Hawks at the Dinner. He has appeared on a PBS Soundstage" and has acquired a respectable following. Thus, there is reason to rejoice for Tom Waits has his fourth Asylum record in the racks entitled "Small Change."

It is a pure joy. Waits sings about drunks, hucksters, drinking pianos, strip-tease ladies and jitterbug boys, all in that Waits style which is hard to pin down. Possibly that's a reason for his narrow appeal. Notable songs on "Small Change" are the hauntingly beautiful, "Tom Traubert's Blues," the fast-talk-ing "Step Right Up," and his strip-tease salute, "Pasties and a G-String.

Mariah Coffeehouse will present Waits in concert Saturday in the McDonel Hall kiva at 8:30 p.m. and 10:30 p.m. Tickets are available for $3.50 at Elderly Instruments and are $4 at the Second violinist Carlyss received scholarships from both the Paris Conservatories and the Julliard School of Music, where he received the Morris Leob Memorial prize, the school's highest award for strings. Carlyss joined the quartet in 1966.

Violist Rhodes studied with Sydney Beck and Walter Trampler, and frequently performs at the Marlboro Music Festival in Vermont. Rhodes joined the quartet in 1969.

Cellist Krosnick gave the first performance of Gyorgy Legeti's, "Cello Concerto," and has toured with the University of Iowa String Quartet and the New York Chamber Soloists. The newest member of the quartet, Krosnick joined in 1974.

The quartet will continue to give 150 concerts a year, but for about four days, at the beginning and end of each term, its members will come to MSU to conduct seminars and give individual instruction. Plans also include one concert each term on the Lecture-Concert Series and a spring chamber music festival.

Though every member of the quartet (with the exception of Krosnick) composes, the quartet never performs works by its

"We have a standing rule that we never play each other's compositions," Rhodes laughed.

The quartet has been instrumental in the performance of modern American works, and it gave the world premier of Elliott Carter's second and third string quartets. Rhodes said he feels that the younger the audience, the more willing it is to accept

Made in Czechoslovakia in 1964, "Black Peter" displays the same manner of humanism, wit and sense of spontaneity prominent in Forman's subsequent work-the Czechoslovak-ian "Loves Of A Blonde" and "The Firemen's Ball," American "Taking Off" and the Academy Award-winning "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest." Newsweek has written of "Black Peter:" "...timeless comedy about an adolescent boy's fumbling efforts to adjust to his proletarian destiny, it already embodies all the pleasing virtues and motifs that were to be enlarged in Forman's later films...a fine sense of comic irony."

ISU meeting.

before a strike deadline last Friday. The council is the governing union body of representatives from Chrysler plants in the United States and Canada.

The rank and file membership will ballot on the agreement next Monday and Tuesday with an announcement expected Nov. 17, just one full day before the strike deadline the union has set at GM. Workers will leave their jobs at 117 plants in 21 states if GM doesn't agree to a contract that matches the labor pacts worked out at Chrysler and at Ford during a 28-day strike. Bluestone said GM's proposal on financing of the Supplemental Unemployment Benefits (SUB) fund was identical to the plan worked out at Ford and matched at Chrysler. The fund, which provides laid-off workers with up to 95 per cent of their regular pay, ran dry at Ford and GM during the industry's 1974-75 slump. The only bargaining sessions since the deadline was established Monday have been at the subcommittee level and mainly on conomic matters. They'll probably continue at the low level until just before the strike deadline when UAW President

Leonard Woodcock and Bluestone take full charge of the talks. Subcommittees Tuesday dealt with parts warehouses, health and safety, overtime, skilled trades rates and SUB. The automaker is expected to match the basic agreement worked out at Ford and

Of greater concern are noneconomic issues involving seniority, the use of overtime while workers are laid off and the firm's so-called "Southern Strategy." The UAW claims GM has interfered with its attempts to organize fewer than 3,000 workers at six recently opened plants in the South.

GM has countered, saying the union's demand for a neutrality pledge—a so-called "Sweetheart Clause"—would place a "restriction on what the law provides and what our legal rights are and what the rights of the employes who vote in the elections are.

A strike against GM would be unprecedented since the union has never struck both the pattern-setter and then a second auto firm in the same bargaining year. This year's contract talks began in mid-July to work out agreements covering 730,000 U.S. and Canadian workers.

A walkout would close 117 GM plants and facilities in 21 states. Chrysler, which still has 128 of 205 hourly and salaried bargaining units without local agreements to supplement the national contract, said two facilities which had been hit by wildcat grounds removed wildcat pickets during the day Tuesday and the afternoon shift workers were expected to report at their normal times. The firm said its manufacturing and assembly operations seeks to increase power strikes on Monday returned to normal operations Tuesday.

The phone book, which has been charged with discrimination against women, may be facing changes soon The Michigan Bell Telephone

Co. asked the State Public Service Commission (PSC) Tuesday to approve a plan to permit husbands and wives to e listed together in the telephone directory.
"We have the formal application and we will now look at the monthly rate which the company proposes to charge for the service," Robert Otstot, PSC communications manager, said.

Married customers who subscribe to the proposed plan would list the husband's and the wife's name under one be alphabetized in the directory under each of the two names.

In one combined listing the wife's name would appear first, such as "Smith, Mary — John."
The other listing would list the husband's name first, such as "Smith, John - Mary."

The additional listing would cost 45 cents a month, the same charge that now applies to a second listing.

Ostot said the PSC can approve the request without a formal hearing because the request involves a new offering which would not adversely affect present subscribers.

The plan presented to the PSC points out that presently wives could get their own listing at the same rate as the proposed double-listing rate.

But the report says that some women are concerned about having their names listed separately because of the possibility of obscene phone calls or other harassment.

Rell Telephone has a longstanding policy which allots one listing free of charge per number in the directory. This has meant, in most instances, that phone numbers are listed in the husband's name, which leaves wives with a loss of identity, women have charged.

Women in New York, Vermont, Idaho and Washington have filed formal complaints public service commissions in their states, alleging that the policy cuts women off from important channels of

Ex-farmer tells of PBB woes

By JENNIFER L. SHELER GRAND RAPIDS, (UPI) -

Gerald Woltjer was once a dairy farmer, with more than 200 registered Holstein cattle and a productive farm in nearby Coopersville.

That was before PBB came along.

Now Woltjer is bankrupt and on welfare. His cattle are gone and his family is only now beginning to recover from a variety of unexplainable unexplainable maladies that, Woltjer is convinced, were the result of eating food contaminated by the highly toxic chemical.

Woltjer, his wife and five children were among 1,100 Michigan residents examined here by a team of New York doctors who are trying to learn if public health has been damaged by polybrominated bia deadly fire retardant that leaked into the state's food chain through a livestock feed mixup in 1973.

"I hope the study shows, and I know it will, that there is a definite problem here with PBB, that it's not safe even at low levels," Woltjer said. "Then maybe they'll find some way to help us sick people."

Woltjer bought his Coopers ville farm in the spring of 1974, about the time PBB contamination was beginning to surface on other Michigan farms.

Over the next year and a half, he watched his cattle slowly grow sick and die. Dozens of calves were aborted or died shortly after birth. Many cows failed to breed and production dropped off

He shot his herd, and a few months later, sold his farm at public auction and moved into a rented house nearby.

Though he is now on welfare and more than $500,000 in debt, Woltjer said he is concerned most for the health of his wife and five children who during the past three years had eaten meat and dairy products from his contaminated herd.

'We all had chronic diarrhea, dizziness, headaches," he said. "The kids had stomach problems and missed a lot of school. My two little ones had started losing hair and had bald spots. My 5-year-old girl and I both had bladder infections, the same as the cows."

Other problems, Woltjer said, included sore joints, numbness of the limbs, skin rashes, burning eyes and severe fatigue. "I'd get so tired I couldn't move," he said. rashes, Woltjer said he and his family were given medication for the various symptoms, "but our doctors couldn't explain it. I asked if it could be PBB and they said they didn't know much about it.

Since they left the farm in September, Woltjer said, his family's health has improved somewhat, but he is still suffering occasional dizziness, fatigue and burning eyes.

"The important thing now is to get the word out that PBB is poison, no matter how small the amount," Woltjer said. "The state had been covering up, saying it's safe in small amounts. You talk about Watergate, this is 'cattlegate' millions of people are involved.

"You folks in Chicago, you better watch out because they're shipping this meat to you by the truckloads. You're eating it now. They're sending it to the institutions and restaurants, trying to get rid of it because many people up here Prison
