on decriminalization of marijuana, according to Peter Meyers, chief counsel of NORML.

There has been a marked trend since the late 1960s, in states and on the federal level, toward decriminalization," Meyers said. "Many states such as Michigan already have proposed legislation, so they will receive our strongest support."

The bill, if passed, would reduce the penalties for personal use of marijuana and penatties for personal use of marijuana and possession or distribution of up to 18 grams to a maximum fine of $100 and a jail sentence of up to 90 days.

Punishment for possession, use or distribution under the current state law is a possible year in jail and $1,000 fine.

The bill was introduced in August 1975 and was shuffled through committees and amended numerous times before being defeated in April 1976.

Perry Bullard, D-Ann Arbor, one of the bill's sponsors, said that support for the bill is now increasing.

"My report is that the incumbents are exactly evenly divided. I hope, if we can get action early, that the bill will be passed before the end of next year," Bullard said. "The effectiveness of NORML, student participation and civil liberties' lobbying will get the bill passed.'

Bullard said that supporters need to get the support of legislators in the downtown Detroit areas. He encourages students to write to representatives in their home districts and to lobby in those districts.

Lynn Jondahl, D-East Lansing, another supporter of the bill, feels that the bill's passage is still an open issue.

"The question is whether we will be able to look at past votes and the opposition and figure out what some of the problems are, Jondahl said

"One of the problems when the bill was voted on was that people were worried that it would come back and haunt them at the election," he continued.

Jondahl said that the opposition presented the whole gambit of the traditional argument that marijuana use is a prelude to the use of harder drugs and that decriminalization may be taken as approval for using

They (the opponents of the bill) said we need a clear public sanction saying we do not approve of its use — that we aren't making it legal." Jondahl said.

If the bill is passed, Michigan will become the eighth state to have a marijuana decriminalization law.

"In all the states which have previously passed decriminalization legislation, possession is considered a misdemeanor, and in a few of the states, there is no arrest record made," Meyers said.

The organization feels that support for decriminalization is growing on a federal level, as well as a state level.

President-elect Carter favors the decriminalization of marijuana. NORML supporters have said they feel that his election will vastly improve the chances of passing national decriminalization legislation

British plan to deport ex-agent turned critic

LONDON (AP) - In a rare move, the British government said Wednesday that it plans to deport Philip Agee, a former U.S. Central Intelligence Agency operative who became a vehement critic of the CIA after quitting the agency.

A government spokesperson said Home Secretary Merlyn Rees had moved for Secretary Merlyn Kees nad moved for deportation of Agee after considering information indicating that the nine-year CIA veteran has "maintained regular contacts harmful to the security of the United Kingdom with foreign intelligence

The spokesperson also said that Agee "has been and continues to be involved in disseminating information harmful to the security of the United Kingdom," as well as helping others to obtain such information for publication.

Agee, 41, responded that "the allegations are totally false." He contended the move was prompted by the United States and aimed to block him from publishing a second book revealing CIA secrets.

The rarity of the deportation step was believed to reflect the seriousness with which the government views the cases of Agee and Mark Hosenball, an American reporter for the London Evening Standard. The move to oust Hosenball on similar grounds was disclosed on Tuesday.

The steps appeared to contrast with Britain's reputation for tolerance of widely varying political beliefs. The nation has given asylum to refugees from the right-Curtain countries. Well known figures now living in exile in Britain include Nguyen Van Thieu, ex-president of South Vietnam

The Home Office spokesperson described as "total and complete nonsense" Agee's contention that the almost unprecedented move resulted from CIA or U.S. government pressure. "There is no American or CIA pressure at all involved," he said. "It is a British domestic security matter. We deny emphatically any pressure."

Asked about possible American pressure, U.S. Embassy spokesperson William Hamilton said he had checked with embassy officials on both Agee and Hosenball and "as far as I can find out there have been no such representations" from U.S. to British authorities in either case.

After his service with the spy agency primarily in Latin America, Agee wrote book, "Inside the Company: CIA Diary," published two years ago. It described agency operations in detail and disclosed names of agents. He is now working on the second book.

The cases of Agee and Hosenball, 25, were believed to be connected, but the Home Office spokesperson refused to comment officially on this or to give any further details of the charges against the

"This was meant to be the final nail in the coffin with regard to IUDs involved in septic spontaneous abortion," Dr. Willard Cates more than a year.

Jr., who directed the study, said in an interview.

The doctors reached their conclusions after surveying all abortion-related deaths in the United States between 1972 and 1974. During that time, there were 33 deaths, and they estimated that 115,000 pregnant women were wearing IUDs and 11.9 million were not.

They found there were about 15 deaths among every 100,000 women who kept wearing their IUDs while pregnant. Among women who did not have IUDs, there was only a fraction of one

"We conclude that the risk of death from spontaneous abortion in the United States is over 50 times greater in women continuing a pregnancy with IUDs than in those without IUDs in place," the researchers wrote.

Until about two years ago, doctors left IUDs in place during pregnancy, because they feared removal would cause an abortion. However, in 1974, the Food and Drug Administration urged doctors to remove the devices, if possible, during pregnancy because of mounting evidence that they caused complications. Since then, the number of abortion-related deaths among women with IUDs has declined. The greatest threat of IUDs now, Cates said, is to women in the early stages of pregnancy. He advised: "If you wear an IUD and are pregnant or have early symptoms of pregnancy, you should get to the doctor as soon as possible and have the IUD removed." Manufacturers of IUDs urge

Bloody battle kills 33 guerillas

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Rhodesian officials said Wednesday security forces killed 33 black nationalist guerillas in the bloodiest battle so far in the four-year-old war. Two white Rhodesian soldiers were killed in the fighting, they said.

On Tuesday, the officials announced 29 guerillas were killed in another battle, bringing to 174 the number of nationalists the white minority government claims have died in escalated fighting this month — nearly 2,000 this year. Only 140 guerillas were reported killed all last year in Rhodesia.

The government has reported 188 of its troops killed this year.

Men sentenced in largest heist

LONDON (AP) — Jail sentences ranging up to 23 years were given Tuesday to eight men convicted in the world's biggest bank robbery — an estimated $12.8 million haul from the Bank of America's branch in London's elegant Mayfair district.

The trial took 93 days and legal experts estimated the cost at $800,000 dollars roughly the amount so far recovered of the cash, gold and gems looted from safe deposit boxes at the bank in April 1975.

There has been no trace of the rest of the loot. The $12.8 million figure is only an estimate. Bank officials and police say the total can never really be known because many owners of safe deposit boxes did not come forward for fear of tax or legal problems.

Brazilian parties claim victory

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Both sides claimed victory Wednesday from partial returns in Brazil's nationwide municipal elections.

Forty million registered voters, reguired by law to cast ballots, chose mayors and city council members throughout this vast country Monday.

The only legal opposition party, the Brazilian Democratic Movement, appeared to be sweeping the major urban centers and was leading 2 to 1 in Rio de Janeiro, a city of five million people. The MDB was ahead by 20 per cent in Brazil's biggest city, Sao Paulo, which has a population of eight million.

 The government-backed National Renewal Alliance, known as Arena, appeared on the way toward winning the largest vote total nationwide as it carried smaller towns and rural areas.

Tito says talks 'very successful'

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — President Tito on Wednesday won a renewed promise of Soviet respect for the independence of Yugoslavia and its Communist party. Tito described as "very successful" his three days of talks with Soviet leader Leonid I.

But a Yugoslav spokesperson also said some major differences remain. A final communique used new language to spell out the Yugoslavs' determination to maintain their independent stand in the Communist world. It said relations between the Yugoslav and Soviet bloc parties would be based on "internationalist comradely voluntary cooperation.'

The formula for Yugoslav-Soviet bloc relations was softer than the "proletarian inter-nationalism" phrase which the Kremlin prefers and which has been used to justify moves including the 1968 Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia. The 2.500-word communique said Tito and Brezhnev want to see Soviet-Yugoslav relations develop along the lines of "strict respect for the principles of sovereignty, indepen-dence, equality and noninterference in domestic affairs."

Brezhnev left Belgrade Wednesday morning after he and Tito bid farewell with three traditional Slavic bear hugs in front of the Yugoslav leader's White Palace.

As the two leaders signed the joint communique spelling out policy differences between Belgrade and Moscow, Tito said: "Our talks were conducted as I expected in the spirit of openness and sincerity. Like comrade to comrade, we said what we have achieved and how in the future our relations should develop."

"I think that our talks were very successful and that it will have great significance for further advancement of our relations," the Yugoslav president said. "And that is also a reply to those who did their guesswork on all aspects."

He was referring to foreign reports about Yugoslavia facing the risk of a Soviet military invasion once Tito is no longer on the scene. Tito, who led partisans against the Nazis in World War II, is 84.

Exhibit evacuated after bomb threat

MOSCOW (AP) — An American Bicentennial exhibit drawing big Russian crowds was evacuated Wednesday after a telephoned bomb threat that left U.S. officials angered and suspicious of a trick to dampen the show's popularity.

The Soviet codirector, Grigory Kuzmenko, said he received a phone call at 12:14 p.m. from the Interior Ministry reporting that an unidentified man had telephoned a warning that a plastic explosive would go off at 12:30.

Arraignment slated for 2 in drug case

By JOE SCALES State News Staff Writer

MSU student Roger Frerichs and East Lansing resident Tellis J. Waller were bound over to Ingham County Circuit Court Wednesday evening to be arraigned on various drug charges.

Frerichs, 202 Philips Hall, is charged with three counts of delivery of marijuana and one count of delivery of methylenedioxy amphetamine (MDA). Waller, 29, of 102 Albert St., is charged with delivery of Both were originally charged with one count each of delivery of hash oil, but that charge was changed to delivery of marijuana after the two men's attorney, Ken Birch, stated that there is no such term as "hash oil" in the law.

The decision came after almost two days' worth of testimony from undercover agents of the Metro Narcotics Squad and officials of the Michigan Dept. of Public Health during the preliminary examination of the two men in East Lansing District Court.

Waller and Frerichs were arrested, along with two other MSU students, on Sept. 23, after a month-long on-campus investigation of Frerichs by undercover agents of the Metro Squad.

While on the stand, undercover agent Rick L. Boyd, on temporary assignment to the Metro Squad from the MSU Dept. of Public Safety (DPS), said the investigation was started as a result of a call made to the DPS from a Philips Hall staff member saying that Frerichs might be dealing in

Boyd stated that they then contacted Frerichs and made two purchases of small amounts of marijuana and one buy of MDA from him during the investigation

Later, Waller was contacted through Frerichs, Boyd testified, and a purchase of what the agents believed to be hash oil was made through various exchanges between the two men and Boyd.

Boyd said he made the purchases with money which "comes from the funds of the Metro Squad." Questions from the defense asking where those funds come from were overruled.

In statements made by Frerichs shortly after his arrest, he said the Metro Squad agents used "extreme pressure techniques' to get him to sell drugs, and had also smoked marijuana with him

The agents stated that they only asked to buy the drugs and that no force or pressure

While on the stand, both agents also stated that they had smoked marijuana from a water pipe, and one agent had smoked what they thought was hash oil, but that the smoking was only simulated.

Boyd also stated that he had never been intoxicated on marijuana to the point where he knew he was intoxicated. When asked by the defense attorney if he knew what it felt like to be intoxicated on marijuana, Boyd Frerichs and Waller are scheduled to be arraigned in Circuit Court on Dec. 3.

Commission aims to clean up river

By JONI CIPRIANO State News Staff Writer

The Red Cedar River brings visions of algae, sludge and muck to the minds of many, but East Lansing area residents may soon see a cleaner river in its place.

According to the Federal Water Pollution Act (Section 208), all navigable bodies of water must be clean enough to fish in and swim in by 1983. Acting under these regulations, Gov. Milliken has designated the Tri-County Regional Planning Commission (TCRPC) as the local agency responsible for submitting plans to see that the Red Cedar River meets these goals.

Though the water quality of the river has improved a great deal due to the installment of a new sewage treatment plant in East Lansing, further improvements are to come. The TCRPC has made an agreement with the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) to develop a plan by July 1977 that will identify water pollution problems and ways to solve them.

"The first step has already been taken," Thomas P. Looby, engineer planner at the TCRPC, said. "East Lansing has sent a 201 facilities plan to the EPA to ask for federal money to alleviate pollution problems."

The plan identifies areas in East Lansing that have sewer systems in which both sanitary and storm drainage sewers are combined, Looby said. When it rains, these pipes are often not big enough to carry the excess water. This water flows into an "interception sewer" which serves East Lansing and the MSU campus. This sewer contains connecting overflow pipes which go directly into the Red Cedar River.

"In effect, diluted, raw sewage flows into the river," Looby said. "The first necessary step is to eliminate this. We have a project in mind with two basic components, awaiting EPA

One part of the project would be to build a storage retention basin to hold the excess flood water, he said. The water would stay out of the river or, if there was still too much water to contain, a great deal of the sludge in it would settle to the bottom of this retention basin.

The basin would probably be built behind Brody Complex, just west of MSU's Limnological Research Building, he said.

"The other part of the plan would be to tunnel an 111/2-foot-in-diameter pipe down the median of Grand River Avenue and down Michigan Avenue," Looby said. "Thus, water can also be stored in this huge pipe during a heavy rain."

In an extremely heavy rainstorm, water might still be discharged into the river even with these two precautions, but the water in the basin and pipe would be chlorinated and free of bulk solids before reaching the river, he added.

"The plans are to start construction on these by December

1977 and to have everything completed by 1979," he said. Realistically, I'd say it will be done sometime in 1980 if EPA funds are received."

An additional problem to be explored concerns the areas in the county that have separate systems for sewage and storm

"In the past, storm water in pipes separated from sewage pipes which ran into the Red Cedar River was thought to be clean," Looby said. "Our study shows that this is not true at all the storm water may be quite polluted."

Some solutions to this problem might include implementing a strict street-cleaning program, since many of the pollutants found in the storm water are picked up in the street, before the water drains into the pipes, Looby said. Other pollutants such as fertilizers and insecticides should be used in moderation, for they often are washed into the storm pipes by the rain. Also, storm drainage could be chlorinated before reaching the river,

"Another sensitive issue revolves around the development of a new mall scheduled to be built in the Lake Lansing Road he said. "The more urban development we have, the more run-off of storm water is going to occur. Land use may be controlled in order to alleviate this problem."

Though the Red Cedar River has suffered a great deal in the past, many experts agree that the river is well on its way to becoming as clean as it was before the Ingham County area developed into an urban community.

Right now, the Red Cedar River is cleaner than it's been in 20 years," said Thomas Bahr, MSU associate professor of fisheries and wildlife. "The new sewage treatment plant in East Lansing, a new sewage system in Williamston and a waste treatment facility at a plating plant in Fowlerville, near the source of the river, have certainly improved the quality of the

Robert C. Ball, MSU professor of fisheries and wildlife and associate director of the MSU Institute of Water Research, said pike and bass are appearing in the river for the first time since

"In the 1920s, the river contained trout," he said. "By 1940, the river contained just bass and pike, and in the '50s and '60s, it only contained carp."

If the proposed plans of the TCRPC are put into effect, trout fishing in the Red Cedar could once again become a reality for East Lansing fishermen.

Students are invited to contact Karna Hanna at the TCRPC to offer additional suggestions on improving the Red Cedar

COMPTROLLER ANNOUNCES PLANS

Business audit of ASMSU set

By GEORGIA HANSHEW State News Staff Writer

ASMSU Comptroller Jim Haischer announced plans to the ASMSU Student Board Tuesday night for a winter-term audit of the business office by the accounting fraternity, Beta Alpha Psi.

In a letter written to ASMSU President Michael Lenz and distributed to the board Monday night, Haischer also attempted to answer questions brought up recently about financial transactions of ASMSU.

Lenz and the Legal Services Cabinet have questioned a $995 payment to the ASMSU attorney last spring for preparation of a lawsuit. The money was withdrawn from the Legal Services Defense Fund, a line item of its budget.

There are conflicting opinons about whether money can or should be used from the line item of a cabinet's budget without the consent of the cabinet.

In his letter to Lenz, Haischer explained how the line items of Legal Services' budget can be spent.

Though not backed up by any written specifications, Haischer said in his letter, the "rules" for expenditure of these items been explained to him by former president J. Brian Raymond and comptroller Barb Paulus. Haischer's letter also said that "the University has us (the business office) under a continuous audit and it looks for things such as greedy treasurers. Haischer said he has been thinking about an audit since last summer, but that he had not contacted the accounting fraternity until last Friday.

He said it was "unfortunate" that his plans for an audit coincided with the ASMSU members' questions about the business office.

Haischer said the new budget, being written up right now, will clarify the problems with the expenditure of line items For example, the defense fund will not be labeled under Legal Services, he said, but under a separate category which will indicate who controls it. Haischer called the planned audit, which will be performed free of charge by the fraternity, "a critical review from Lenz said he was not satisfied with Haischer's plans for an audit by the accounting fraternity, but said he would drop his plans for an audit until after Beta Alpha Psi's audit has been performed.

"Beta Alpha Psi might be sufficient," Lenz said, "if things weren't in a shambles."

He said that he would give up his idea of having an outside audit (by a certified public accountant) "if they (the fraternity) do a full report and there's nothing there. Some important bills, a bill to oppose the Parshall added with a laugh: "It is a little bit tempting to be a Walter Cronkite. It's something that appeals to a lot of people."

Good move, ASMSU

Students who need a quick loan up to $25 have been able to borrow the money since 1965 for up to three weeks, interest free from ASMSU.

And starting winter term, students will be able to borrow up to $30 to hold them over for three weeks, thanks to a resolution passed Tuesday night by the ASMSU board members.

The loan program, which started 11 years ago with a $15 limit, has proven to be one of ASMSU's most popular and useful services. Last year, about 3,500 students borrowed $85,000 from the undergraduate student government.

Any undergraduate with a valid ID may borrow up to $30 for three weeks, interest free. Students who don't pay back the loan on time are charged $1 for each week they are late.

Last year, 95 per cent of the loans were paid back on time. Another 4 per cent were collected with the use of hold cards and still another 1/2 per cent are collected with the help of a collection agency.

By raising the loan limit, ASMSU is also recognizing the inflation that has hit students from all sides this year.

ASMSU should use this decision as a guide in making future ones.

Still time to pass major bills

Contrary to popular belief, a "lameduck" legislature is not powerless. In fact, outgoing members of the Senate and House, who have recently returned to Lansing, are in a good position to finish a number of important matters. In this way, they could leave future business that much less cluttered.

For that reason, we urge Michigan lawmakers to pay heed to the bills that are just small details away from being passed and we also urge them to continue working for the whole of their elected terms.

Certain bills should have priority over other business, since they are fundamental to updating state law and setting the pattern for a fresh start in January.

Revision of the Public Health Code should receive high attention from politicians. Currently sitting in the House Appropriations Committee, this bill is badly needed to bring up the quality of state standards.

The Comprehensive Deceptive Trade Practices bill, now in a House-Senate conference, should also be put at the top of business lists. This piece of legislation needs to be ironed out in areas of defining what is fraudulent, what jurisdiction will cover certain offenses and what industries are already regulated by other agencies. The work, though, should be fast, as consumer protection is of paramount concern to constituents.

A Freedom of Information Act, to carefully outline how citizens can get access to files of various public agencies, is another hot item for lawmakers to clean up on. It is currently up for a vote on the House floor.

In a similar area, a recoding of the Civil Rights Act with modernized definitions of age, sex and marital status is before the House and is an obvious issue begging for action.

Lynn Jondahl's (D-East Lansing) recently introduced bill to compensate workers who lose their jobs from the passage of Proposal A in the last election should also receive fast action Congress in this way will h improve whatever rift occur with industry.

Finally, the legislature has take corrective measures with budget for the current fiscal y to insure smooth operation in st affairs and funding.

While most of these bills major pieces of legislation, the have been sitting in Lansing of being tossed and turned on de too long.

We hope that lawmakers real this situation and respond to call with political responsibil and responsiveness to the peo who elected them and in so cases, re-elected them.

Cousteau

I would like to respond to your claim in the Great Issues editorial that the Calypso program was entertainment and was taking money away from more worthwhile programs.

First, the Calypso program did not cost Great Issues any money. In fact, they came out somewhat ahead on the whole thing. Thus, somewhat more money was availab for future programs. Secondly, the Calypso program was far more than entertainment, though it was entertaining, to be sure. Captain Cousteau and the people of the Calypso have been studying the oceans for over thirty years and have seen a continued sickening of the oceans. If the oceans should die, which is the end to which they are currently headed, the effects on terrestrial life would be equally disastorous. Captain Cousteau, the people of the Calypso and the Cousteau Society are dedicated to revealing the splendor, the delicacy and the fragility of the ocean environments and to fighting for the protection of the oceans. The issue, then, is of utmost importance - the continuation and preservation of life on this planet.

Tennis

As a tennis enthusiast. I appreciate the effort made by the Men's IM Building to make facilities available for a wide variety of activities. However, given the shortage of facilities, it would seem that an effort should be made to accommodate as large a number of users as possible during the hours of greatest demand.

At 3 on a chilly Saturday afternoon intramural prime time as it were - at least 25 other basketball players and I were asked to leave the sports arena in favor of four tennis players. I cannot help but feel that there is an inequity here, particularly given the almost comic unsuitability for tennis of the wooden floor of the sports arena. In the interests of fairness, less popular sports should be scheduled for less popular times.

Lebanon

There has been a great deal of coverage in the corporate press about the situation in Lebanon. There is an intense struggle going on between progressive and reactionary forces that is too powerful to be ignored. But the federal government, through the corporate media, has, without exception, portrayed this struggle as a religious war between Christians and Moslems

This distortion of the truth is nothing new to the American public. For example, documentation now exists to show that Washington intentionally denied the role of the CIA in the 1973 military coup in Chile that overthrew the democratically elected government of Salvador Allende and that the FBI presented a fabricated picture of the shoot-out at Pine Ridge Indian Reservation in the summer of 1975. These are only two examples and many more are to be found.

In all the areas of the world mentioned above, the United States has huge economic and strategic interests: the oil interests in the Middle East, the copper interests in Chile, (Allende nationalized the copper industry and the CIA-backed coup occurred in retaliation) and the natural resource interests on Indian reservations (90 per cent of the uranium, 70 per cent of the coal and 70 per cent of the oil is on Native American land). These are but a few considerations.

It is important that the U.S. public, including this University community, arrives at a clearer understanding of all of these situations. And we will have an opportunity to do so, concerning Lebanon. right here on our own campus. On Friday a forum on Lebanon will be presented at 7:30 p.m. in 105 S. Kedzie Hall. We urge all of you to attend this important event.

Great Issues

The State News editorial (Friday) blasting the Great Issues staff as having "a lack of understanding in all concerned of what a speaker program should do for the University community" was just one more in a long series of personal vendettas being perpetrated by the student "editors" as worthy journalism. Having attended several of the outstanding Great Issues presentations such as "Hearts and Minds" and "The San Francisco Mime Troupe" (quite possibly the finest performance I have ever seen at MSU), I must wonder at the premise of the editorial that Great Issues seeks to provide another form of "entertainment" and not to raise issues or stimulate the learning process. Has the State News forgotten such events as Mo Udall, Vine DeLoria, Peter Davis, Euthanasia, Religion and Politics in

If the Great Issues staff can provide stimulating people, ideas and events and at the same time entertain the folks who attend, well so much the better! At the least it combats apathy and at best it promotes a free and open exchange of valuable ideas and discussion of the issues

The editorial wonders at the "bread and circuses" attitude of those who actually choose the speakers. One might wonder instead at the political motivation of the State News editorial staff. Perhaps Great Issues should bring us a seminar on how a "real" newspaper determines editorial policy.

'Doonesbury'

Today's funnies re ly on ridicule and violence, something Americans seem to enjoy. On Friday, "Doonesbury" sur-prised the world by depicting a scene of love. Now a roar of protest has been raised against that sole example of love. It seems it's OK to show death and destruction, but let's not let children witness sincere affection between people.

Everyone applauded Garry Trudeau when he ridiculed Washington politicians. Perhaps less cheered when "Doonesbury' showed a black woman running for office, but those who overcame petty prejudices gave praise.

Then came the day love hit the funny pages - a refreshing, badly needed change for a world filled with hate. But some people now condemn the brave social commentator, political muckracker and sensitive human that Trudeau is.

Garry Trudeau has started a revolution. May he have the courage to continue bringing to us such social commentaries as in the past. May he ever be a mind-widener. Thank you, Mr. Trudeau, for the day love hit the funny pages

ByMARILYN SHAPIRO

I am one of those poor, unfortunate students who are taking Math 108, and I wholeheartedly agree with the sentiments of Albert Karson: it is a device for defrauding students.

One serious problem is the criterion for determining in which course the student belongs in the first place. This decision is made on the basis of one brief test which consists of 30 rather simple questions, the results of which are hardly indicative of the student's ability. I have spoken with many students in my section and others who feel they are doing poorly in the cour because they were not academically prepared for it. In spite of the fact that they had achieved adequate test scores, they do not even have the background necessary to grasp the material taught in Math 108. Obviously the test is not serving its supposed function and should be revised drastically in order to ne a more accurate guide to placement.

My primary complaint is that Math 108 (and often Math 109) is required for so many students (taking a wide variety of majors) who do not need the same kind of background in mathematics. but are lumped together in this course, physics and accounting

One math professor I spoke with said the Mathematics Dept. can not be blamed for other departments' use of Math 108 as a requirement. Granted that some knowledge of math is often essential, but the College of Business cannot tell me to take Math 107 "Mathematics for Business Majors" if the Mathematics Dept. does not offer such a course. (Many successful, well-educated and well-rounded people don't know a logarithm from a rutabaga, yet they suffer not in the least). It is the unfulfilled responsibility of the Mathematics Dept. to offer an array of classes to suit the diverse needs of the students.

There are many faults to point out concerning the internal workings of Math 108, but allow me to stop here for the time being, and let me rest on this note: I feel I have been robbed of my $97.50 course fees and my extremely valuable - indeed priceless - irrecoverable time. What a stupendous rip-off!

Course deceiving Charges absure

By WALLY HOPP

We read with interest Albert Karson's charges of "fraud" "phony requirements" in Math 108. Using the same logic used, we, as students of Lyman Briggs College, would be protest the "phony requirements" in ATL and humanities. I are meaningless classes and are useless to a vast majork scientific professions. Do you think, for example, that East read his own newspaper? Of course not! He had his wife do him. Humanities and ATL are used as screening devices to college difficult for students who can't speak English and this reason, are predestined to failure.

If this sounds absurd to you, and we certainly hope that and Karson's charges do, then maybe you belong to ever-shrinking group of people who believe that college is than a glorified career center. The ability to think, even a problems that are not easy or particularly interesting, the not be limited to one's own field or profession.

The uses of college algebra and trigonometry in majors is debatable. We leave it to Karson to get as heated about that as he likes. What is not debatable is the value taking a wide sampling of taking a wide sampling of courses (including humanities math) to broaden a student's perspective of the physic social world.

Prof. Karson seems to believe that students shouldn't ha know anything that doesn't directly apply to their majors, on the other hand, argue that knowledge in any form is har "phony requirement" — it's what this university should be about.

Delegates at the state convention voted to dump Kav-anagh a day after the influential labor caucus endorsed former Detroit mayor, Roman S. Gribbs. Kavanagh, it is rumored, made the mistake of taking his "nonpartisan" title too seriously and upset many Democrats and labor leaders by his independent votes and refusal to campaign for the Democratic ticket this fall.

"Delegates should be allowed to express themselves without fear of retribution," Ferency

However, Ferency did have some praise for county Democrats whom he believes are "far above the national average and have done extremely well in moving for change.

"This is one of the reasons the HRP has not done well locally," he said.

Charter proposal defeat stuns proponents

By GEORGIA HANSHEW State News Staff Writer

After 95 meetings and about 350 hours of work, it may be back to the drawing board for Lansing City Charter Commission members.

The proposed city charter, which resulted from nine months of study, meetings and public hearings by the charter commission, was soundly defeated by Lansing voters, 54 to 46 per cent, in the Nov. 2

The loss stunned commission members and proponents of the charter (which was listed on the ballot as "Proposal G") who had expected it to pass.

The proposed charter calls for a sweeping change in Lansing's city government, greatly increasing the mayor's administrative powers while reducing those of the city council, reorganizing the city's 22 departments into 12 and removing most of the administrative power from citizen boards, which presently run the various departments.

The mayor would have the power to hire department heads, currently done by the citizen boards. He could also fire them, unless the city council overturned his decision by a

The mayor would also draw up the proposed budget and could veto line items of the budget, again subject to a 3/3 vote by the council.

The proposed charter also provides a residency require-ment for new city employes, and a "merit system" for hiring d promotions which is similar to the Civil Service System. The number of city council members would increase from eight to nine, making it easier to get a majority or 1/3 vote, and in this fashion, easier to override a mayoral decision.

The citizen boards governing the police and fire departments would retain some of their power, sharing it with what would be a much stronger mayor. The Board of Water and Light is the only board under the proposed charter to remain almost completely independent, though some limitations would

The current city charter, in effect since 1955, provides for a city government which has neither a strong mayor nor a strong council. Sometimes called a "mayor-council-board" form of government, it was originally designed to divide power between the mayor, the city council and citizen boards, in order to avoid the Tammany Hall-type corruption which some "strong mayor" city governments have fostered in the plished, and Lansing's city hall has been relatively scandal-free since the 1955 charter.

However, with no central figure in the government and power successfully divided, it has become increasingly difficult to coordinate efforts between the large number of departments.

It is also difficult to make the citizen boards accountable, said Charles Press, MSU professor of political science, who spoke before the charter commission about different types of city government.

Lansing Mayor Gerald Graves described the city's government as "a mixture of everything where nobody has any responsibility.

"The department head is responsible to the mayor, to the council and to the board," he said. "There's no form of government like it in the whole Midwest."

'The perceived problems in the city government led to an election in the fall of 1975 of nine charter commission members, charged with the task of

neighborhood and minority groups and liberal political groups which appeared at several public hearings held by the commission, called for a change in the division between council members who are elected by wards and those elected

There are presently four city council members elected by ward and four elected at large. The proposed charter would add another at-large representative, to total nine council

The coalition asked that the split favor the ward representatives, with five council members elected by ward. Since there are currently only four wards, this could not go into effect until after the next population census of Lansing, in 1980, when the ward boundaries will be redrawn.

This latter split, said Patrick

Babcock, aide to Gov. Milliken and a coalition member, would "bring the city government closer to the people

However, the commission stuck to its original five at-large and four ward representatives.

Explanations for its defeat ranged from a lack of understanding of the charter on the voters' part, and thus an automatic "no" vote, to the possibility that voters really do not want a change in their city government

"Maybe the people in Lansing really aren't for any type of charter change," said city Councilmember Jack Gunther, who, along with three other members, came out against the charter six days before the election.

The labor vote was unhappy with the residency require ment, Graves said, which partially explains the charter's

Anti-rape group clears myths of crime

The residents of Yakeley Hall funny to see 20 women in the east upper lounge vigorously punching the air and yelling "Hyah!" at the top of their lungs.

But the atmosphere in the lounge was very serious that night as the women practiced rape self-defense techniques demonstrated by Martha Steinhagen of the Kitty Genovese Memorial Anti-Rape

"Our name is a memorial to Kitty Genovese, whose plight is symbolic of all of ours in this society. She was raped and murdered in front of her home in New York City in 1964 while 38 onlookers did nothing to help her," Steinhagen said.

The collective gives presen-tations on rape to any group of women who request it. Its members give a self-defense graphic statistics on rape, describe medical and police pro-cedures and correct what they term the "myths" of rape.

"The first myth is that rape happens only in dark alleys at 3 a.m. But a lot of rapes happen indoors. There was a rape in Wells Hall at 3:30 in the last year," afternoon Steinhagen said.

"Another myth is that rapes are spontaneous sexual crimes done to only beautiful women or sluts. But rape is a violent crime done by a man who wants to dominate a woman, not to be sexually satisfied." she said.

"And most rapes are partially planned, done by someone the victim knows, be it a prof. a friend, or the guy you've only talked to once in your biology class or at the bar," she said.

Since many rapes are partially planned, Steinhagen said, women should try to walk with someone or break established travel patterns if they must walk alone. "But no place is safe," she said.

"Eighty per cent of rape victims are beaten and 60 per cent have gynecological damage. It does no good to be passive, unless he has a weapon. for that is what he wants-to dominate you."

A listener asked, "But isn't it true that you could anger him if you try to hurt

'Not if you hurt him to where he can't walk, see or breathe." Steinhagen replied. "There is a difference between pounding on his chest with your little fists and smashing his knee cap.

Steinhagen, who has been teaching self-defense for two years, taught the women some techniques, concentrating on punching and kicking in vulnerable areas such as the face, throat, stomach, groin, knees and top of the foot. She told them to yell loudly and deeply, to surprise the rapist and get will not be hurt if the rapist hits

"The groin has been highly overrated as a vulnerable spot. The knee cap has been underof pressure to shatter it from the front or to pop it out from hurt a rapist as much as he is going to hurt you. When men have been hurt enough rape will end. They won't feel that the pain is worth it to dominate a woman," she said.

"In the meantime, we need to Kay Stackhouse, adviser to the Panhellenic Council, said that this fall term rush showed a large increase in pledges. There are currently 17 sorority houses at MSU with a total of 829 members. This is 68 more than last year and there were 171 new pledges this year compared to 119 last year.

'It is realistic to say that we should have about 1.000

Women reported to pull highest academy grades

WASHINGTON (AP) - The first women cadets at West Point are doing better in the classroom than their male counterparts, the U.S. Military Academy's superintendent said Tues-

Lt. Gen. Sidney Berry said women cadets "are putting a needle into male hides, causing the men to work harder, and that's all for the best."

Reporting to the Pentagon's Advisory Committee on Women, Berry said 34 per cent of the 95 women cadets are in the top quarter of the Class of 1980 and 55 per cent are in the top half of the class, which totals 1,485 men and women

He gave no statistics for male cadets.

Berry also said there was a higher dropout rate - 15.9 per cent — among the 119 women cadets who entered the academy last July than among male cadets, who lost 10.3 per cent of their number by the end of summer training.

At the same time, the academy's superintendent said women cadets suffered a higher injury rate during field training than male cadets.

"It's nothing to get alarmed about." Berry said. Except for physical training which takes account of physiological differences, Berry said men and women cadets are put through the same academic and combat training courses. A decision was made at the outset to require women cadets to undergo combat training because "we believe that every regular Army officer is better for having personally gone through the combat training we give to cadets," Berry said.

Women are barred from combat duty under

The man-woman relationship has not yet caused any sexual problems, Berry indicated, but "frankly, that is something I worry about."

"It is predictable that one incident is likely to occur at any time in any place where attractive young men and women are together," he said.

LED ZEPPELIN: The Song

Remains the Same (Atlantic)
They are either musical geniuses or travesties, depending on whether one listens to the fans or the critics. Whatever they may be, the members of "Led Zeppelin," (along with "The Who") are the undisputed high priests of heavy metal rock, they are the band even Elton John called the most exciting live entertainment. "The Song Remains The Same." recorded during the band's last tour of the States, supports both claims.

Live albums are generally one of two things. They either recreate studio material, resembling a "Best of" album with audience response, or demonstrate a band's ability to innovate and recycle previous material.

Since his days with "The Yardbirds," Jimmy Page has been one of the true masters of improvisational rock and the "cyber-jam," in addition to being the second greatest white blues guitarist on the scene. This is reason enough why this album falls under the second category.

Only material up to the "Houses Of The Holy" LP is included here, and this is for tunate, since even the staun-chest of fans have been somewhat disturbed by the band's disappearing creative life on its last two releases.

It is legitimate to say every number is better than the original studio rendition. Even a whole side of "Dazed and Confused" or John Bonham's 12-minute drum solo on "Moby Dick" succeed in holding the listener's attention

Naturally, the best cut is an unbelievable version of "Stairway to Heaven." What can possibly be said about a rock and roll classic that has not been said before? Suffice it to say this is proof that heavy metal can include talent and

For those who cannot mentally recreate the flash of a 'Led eppelin" concert with this album, good news comes in the fact that it is also the soundtrack from a motion picture which recently premiered in New York City and is playing in the Detroit area.

When Robert Plant exclaims, "Shake it one time for Elvis" during the "Whole Lotta Love" encore, that says it all. "Led Zeppelin" has not forgotten its roots, nor the true meaning and universal appeal of rock and

"The Song Remains the Same" stands alongside "Rock
'N Roll Animal," "Get Your Ya Ya's Out," "The Who Live at Leeds" and "The Doors Absolutely Live" as one of the greatest "in-concert" albums of all time.

With numerous releases to its credit, "Styx" is about as well established as a band can be. The solidity of its music has been perfected over the years by the work of talented Dennis DeYoung. His capti-vating voice, combined with his ability on keyboards and synthesizers, has helped give the group the class needed to excel among the hoards of hopeful bands and into the ranks of the recognized. "Cry-tal Ball" is "Styx" sending out more of the tight rock and roll songs they are known for.

The first cut of this LP is "Put Me On," a song dedicated to the playing of Styx' new record. "Mademoiselle" and "Jennifer," while cute, are not that interesting, lyrically or musically. The last, but title track "Crystal Ball" is Styx as it should be - intricate, emotional and understandable. The song details the uncertainties everyone experiences in life and the answers continually

The flip side starts out with a basic "Styx" rocker entitled "Schooz." This piece is not packed with much power, but flows respectively. "Claire DeLune," an instrumental with Dennis DeYoung on the piano, is a beautiful intro to the final cut, "Ballerina."

Barnes voluntarily to appear in court

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) -Basketball star Marvin Barnes will return voluntarily to Rhode Island to face a court warrant alleging he violated his threeyear probation, according to his lawyer. Deday LaRene said from his Detroit office he discussed the court warrant with Barnes and the athlete "has no intention of attempting to avoid it." LaRene did not specify when he expected Barnes to come to Rhode Island.

Superior Court Judge William M. Mackenzie signed an arrest warrant Monday. City police contended Barnes' arrest Oct. 9 on a gun charge in Detroit was a violation of his probation.

The former American Bas ketball Assn. Rookie of the Year allegedly had an unloaded handgun in his luggage when it was checked at the Romulus, Mich., airport.

'U' African Studies Center to offer two-term course on recent events

By JUDY PUTNAM State News Staff Writer

As the rumblings from southern African developments are increasingly observed in the United States, the MSU African Studies Center has created a two-term course on recent southern African events. The center, which coordinates programs on Africa, will offer interdisciplinary course (IDC) 390 and IDC 391 winter and spring terms. They will be taught by Robert Boeder, assistant to the director in the center, and will meet from 7 to 10 p.m. on Wednesdays. Guest lecturers will speak on the recent independence of Angola and Mozambique and on the

The course will also focus on diplomatic efforts to achieve majority rule peacefully and on student opposition to the white minority regime in South Africa.

civil war in Zimbabwe, the Black Nationalist preferred term

The center, the largest of MSU's foreign area and language study centers, offers an undergraduate certificate in African studies. According to Boeder, who received a doctorate from MSU in South African history, about a dozen students are currently enrolled in the certificate program. Courses can be taken from a variety of areas.

"African studies is very valuable to the education major in elementary or secondary education who need to learn about the Third World areas," Boeder said.

Boeder said that the program can also be of help to those interested in foreign service or business because of the growing U.S. investment" in Africa and because of the agricultural development projects which have begun.

He also said that he expects a growing student interest in Sahel, a drought-stricken region in Africa which the U.S. government is giving money to for agricultural development. Boeder said there are about 40 faculty members who teach courses directly related to Africa while 50 more, who have an interest in Africa, teach courses occasionally. The center was established in 1960 with a grant from the Office of Education in the Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare as a coordinator of language programs. While nine African languages including Swahili, Kikuyu and Yoruba are being offered through the Linguistics Dept., the focus of the center has shifted from languages to African studies.

Fourteen graduate students have received $54,000 from the National Defense Foreign Language fellowships to study African languages this year. The center also received a grant of $95,000 in July from the Office of Education to continue its programs.

Boeder said one reason for financial support has been the recognition of "a shrinking world and growing American interests in other parts of the world." He also pointed to the "realization that the interests of various peoples and regions of the world are intertwined."

Boeder said the African Studies program has become important for ethnic heritage studies.

By MIKE MACKSOOD State News Staff Writer

Remember last winter, all that white, chalky salt all over the road and your car?

The State Highway Commission pledges it will be different this winter. They say there is going to be less de-icing salt used on Michigan's state highway system this year.

"With a 13 per cent increase in the cost of salt this year, coupled with increasing environmental concerns, we must and will reduce our salting operations," said John P. Woodford, director of the Dept. of State Highways and Transportation.

Woodford said that the department believes it can do an adequate clearing job with better equipment and procedures so they plan to reduce salting operations.

"But the motoring public must recognize that winter driving conditions may be hazardous at times," Woodford said. "Whenever possible, motorists should postpone their trips until after the Woodford said highway maintenance forces will begin snow to salt or sand hills, curves and intersections. General salt applications during storms, however, will be removal operations as soon as in previous years and will continue in traffic accidents because of the decision to use less salt this "We just plan to be more efficient this year in our use of salt," he Wiseman said that efforts will include things like not using salt in low temperatures and not using salt on highways with low traffic volume. A low-traffic highway is one which is traveled by less than 3,500 vehicles a day. "Salt is not effective at 15 degrees and falling so we can be more efficient by not using salt at these temperatures," Wiseman said.

Wiseman said the department has received complaints from environmentalists and motorists concerning the use of salt on "Environmentalists complain that the salt damages the roadside environment and motorists complain that the salt rusts their cars, Wiseman said.

Wiseman said they do not anticipate any increase in traffic accidents this winter due to the policy of using less salt. "During a storm there are usually less accidents, anyway, because people drive accordingly," he said. The highway department policy for this winter will be a bare pavement policy on the 3,200 miles of state highways carrying average traffic volumes of more than 3,500 vehicles a day. This includes most freeways and many heavily traveled highways.

But whatever it is, 263 Abbot Hall has been a remnant of student life at MSU for the last three decades.

The "museum" in 263 is a hole in the wall where water pipes are housed along with three decades' worth of cryptic notes written and left by students living in the room.

The hole in the wall was originally discovered in the 1950s and the event was recorded by a resident who wrote, "You thought this room was so small, huh? Well, this is the upstairs study."

On Dec. 15, 1957, another resident recorded that the hole in the wall had been "switched from a study to a bar.'

been enthralled by the hole. "It is truly a pity that so many people have engaged in the mundane search into the place where the pipes lie," said a note dated September 1967.

A 1972 writer observed that because 18-year-olds were granted the right to drink, the hole was no longer a "booze stash" but, "it's a pretty good place to hide dope..

The notes in the hole have also dutifully recorded tripling in the room, the reassignment of rooms in Abbot Hall when the floor switched from all-male to all-female and the types of marijuana smoke blown into the

Regional pottery guild to display crafts

By MARTHA G. BENEDETTI State News Staff Writer

Within Mason's small, but olished, Sycamore Gallery, 538 N. Cedar St., an industrious and talented segment of the Lansing art community is presenting a select group of pottery through Saturday.

The Greater Lansing Pottery Guild, organized in 1969 as a nonprofit, educational corpora-tion, sets out to create an awareness of and an appreciation of the ancient craft of pottery making within the community

The guild, 8099 Coleman, in Haslett, sticks to high, professional standards and is composed of teachers and students from various walks of life. Most of the teachers hold a master of fine arts degree from universities across the country. Guild offers classes

Classes conducted by guild coincide with the MSU term schedule and provide an opportunity for community people to learn the various techniques of hand building, wheel throwing and glazing Classes are small, enabling guild teachers to give individual attention to beginning and ad vanced potters. Students pay $80 for a class which include: potting materials.

The Sycamore Gallery works in conjunction with Lansing organizations, such as the guild, to improve community understanding and appreciation of handcrafted works and clay Ancient craft preserved Gallery owner Polly Freeman believes the potter's guild is an important vehicle in the preser vation of an ancient craft.

"Our cultural heritage is surviving through clay artifacts," Freeman said. "Pottery gives the artist an opportunity to work with his hands and communicate with the public through clay pieces.

High jobless rates may exist throughout most of his term, President-elect Carter says

WASHINGTON (AP - Jimmy Carter's targets for reducing unemployment during the next few years are not much different from President Ford's.

Carter made that clear in his news conference this week when he said it would be "a likely prospect" that Americans would have to tolerate jobless rates of between 5 and 7 per cent for most of his term as president.

This forecast was not a change in position for Carter who has said during the campaign that his goal was to reduce unemployment to about 3 per cent for adults and 4 per

That presupposes jobless rates higher than that prior to 1981. The October unemploy-

Ford's unemployment goals were for a jobless rate of 7 per cent this year, and somewhere near 6.5 per cent next year, with the jobless rate not dropping below 5 per cent until 1981, when it could be 4.9 per

But Asst. to Treasury Secretary Sidney L. Jones said now may decline only to about 7.5 per cent by the end of this year. And he did not rule out the possibility it could increase above the current 7.9 per cent.

The reason the administration will miss its unemployment goals for 1976 is that the economy has not grown at the rate that had been expected. Jones said unemployment could still be near 7 per cent by the difference between Ford's and Carter's unemployment goals rests in how they would achieve them.

Carter has stressed faster economic growth and job-supporting programs to trim unemployment, while Ford advocated relying on the economy's underlying potential to create jobs without government aid. Carter's advisers predicted during the campaign that the Ford policies would not lead to considering programs to create jobs in high unemployment areas and for groups who have suffered from chronic unemployment through special job creating programs. He said in the news conference he is not yet ready to disclose the details of his jobs programs, but he added, "We believe that we can get the unemployment rate down over a fairly long period of time — two, three, about four years — to the 4 to 4.5 per cent figure before excessive inflation pressures will be felt."
