Trustees suppress unfavorable audits

By ANNE S. CROWLEY and BOB OURLIAN
State News Staff Writers

Angry board member releases secret documents

Use of the MSU Data Processing Department involving mismanagement, utilization of equipment and possibly book-making operations totaling hundreds of thousands of dollars has been reported by two separate audits being conducted by the MSU Board of Trustees. The audits have revealed that MSU's Data Processing Department is in need of organizational reorganization, better personnel management and improved use of equipment, among other recommendations. But the MSU Board of Trustees has voted to quash the findings of the audits, one conducted by Robert Wenner, director of MSU's internal auditing department, and another by Ernst and Ernst, an accounting firm.

The trustee vote, however, was close — 4 to 3 — and at least one member of the board was angered by the secrecy and divulged the audit results to the State News. "It's extremely hypocritical of the University to plead poverty to the state legislature and beg for more funds when it is obvious that it can't successfully manage the funds it is already being given by the legislature," said Michael Smydra, D-East Lansing. Smydra said that the acting director of the department, Don Perrin, ought to be removed, adding that humanitarian considerations make such an action difficult. He also assailed the board and Wharton for not attempting to investigate charges against the department as soon as they surfaced.

The Data Processing Department handles computer needs of the University regarding student, personnel and department records. Wenner's audit also revealed that gambling forms were processed by MSU's computers for the 1976 college and professional football pools and the 1976 Michigan

High School Athletic Association's basketball tournament from the state quarterfinals to the finals.

Smydra said such gambling pools are a state crime and that Terry Kuhn, manager of computer facilities, designed the gambling system.

The Wenner audit was ordered by MSU President Clifton R. Wharton Jr. early last October, at least four months after he received an exhaustive list of dozens of allegations by Charles Miller, a lead systems programmer in the department, alleging mismanagement, incompetence and the waste of hundreds of thousands of dollars through inefficient utilization. None of Miller's allegations were specifically refuted by Wenner.

Wharton's memo to the trustees, which accompanied the audit reports and responses, was stamped "confidential." The board voted at its March meeting to review the reports in executive session.

After the investigation was begun, Miller was given an official disciplinary reprimand for violating departmental security provisions when he admitted Smydra to his office through a side door, Smydra said.

"I saw other employees do it while I was there, it goes on all the time, but Miller is the first person ever written up," he said.

He added that it was common practice to do so because the side door was more convenient to several offices.

"The intent of the rule is to identify visitors present in the department," he added.

Election bid withdrawn by Faculty Associates

By KRISTIN VAN VORST
State News Staff Writer

MSU Faculty Associates (FA) has withdrawn its petition for a collective bargaining election filed with the Michigan Employment Relations Commission (MERC) last month.

MERC ruled over spring break that the FA did not have the required number of authorization cards (30 per cent of the proposed bargaining unit).

But Philip Korth, FA president, said the call for a collective bargaining election will be made again within the next month.

Korth said, "It's annoying but not much of a setback."

The FA based its estimate on the size of the proposed bargaining unit from the figures published in "Faculty Facts" that list the number of faculty members at 2,311. The number of voting faculty members according to Korth is 2,266.

The FA then subtracted the medical schools' faculty (which is not included in FA's proposed unit) and estimated the number to be about 1,975.

The total figure for the bargaining unit, according to the MSU administration and accepted by MERC, is 2,298. However, this figure was not released until after the March 11 meeting between MERC, MSU and the FA.

Thirty per cent of the figure estimated by the FA is less than 600, but it submitted in excess of 700 cards to MERC.

Before the hearing the administration was not legally obligated to show the faculty list of how many are included in the bargaining unit.

According to Korth, the FA should receive the list of faculty names by the end of the week.

"We will then find out the whole picture of what happened," Korth said. "It will be the first time we will have real data."

Even with the higher number of 2,298 the 700 plus cards submitted by the FA would have been more than the required 30 per cent to demonstrate sufficient faculty interest in a collective bargaining election.

But, the FA has also learned that some of the cards submitted were not counted because they were signed in 1975.

Korth said the questioning of the validity of the cards did not become an issue until after the FA's refusal to accept the bargaining unit proposed by the administration. He said normally this kind of questioning comes before the bargaining unit is discussed.

However, Keith Groty, assistant vice president of personnel employe relations, said, "Stale cards had nothing to do with MERC's decision. Stale cards are a next-time issue."

But Groty added that the reason MERC rejected the old cards was because they did not show current interest in collective bargaining.

The administration rejected three proposals made by the FA:

- FA proposed persons employed half time or more for two terms be included in the unit. The administration proposed that persons must be employed at least half time for three terms in an academic year to be included in the unit.

- The FA proposed that chairpersons, their assistants and associates be included in the unit while the administration wants to exclude them.

- The FA petitioned that all faculty members whose duties are performed 51 per cent or more of the time in the medical schools be excluded from the unit while the administration's proposal was to include them.

Korth said that of the faculty units on campus the "temporaries are the most exploited."

Groty said that the temporary faculty issue is "a small one." He said the difference between the two proposals is only 50 people.

Neither one of the proposals include the temporary faculty members hired on a term-to-term basis.

Korth said the temporary faculty members are given "teaching responsibilities but are not allowed to freely participate fully in academic life."

He said the temporary faculty is valuable to MSU and "should be taken for what it is."

Groty said that the FA is "playing the numbers game," on the issues of the medical (continued on page 18)

NAVY TO CONTINUE PRESSING FOR PLAN

Subcommittee cuts Seafarer funds

By MICKI MAYNARD
State News Staff Writer

Controversial submarine communication Project Seafarer was dealt a devastating blow Tuesday when a U.S. House subcommittee voted to cut off its funding. The long-sought action, money for the Peninsula antenna grid program was approved by the Research and Development Committee to the House Armed Services Committee.

aide to Rep. Bob Carr, D-East Lansing, said the full committee will likely follow the subcommittee's recommendation and kill the Seafarer program. However, Navy officials said they would appeal up on Seafarer, and would take the case to the full committee hearings. "We're not killed until it is killed in full committee," said a Navy spokesperson in Washington, D.C. "We're going ahead with it."

who testified several times before the subcommittee, said Tuesday that the project had little chance of passing through the full committee hearings. The subcommittee was considering a bill authorizing the construction of a small test version of Seafarer.

Mike Arnett, an aide to Carr, said the recent veto of the project by Gov. William G. Milliken had no effect on the subcommittee's decision.

The governor announced his decision on a recent trip to the U.P. The veto followed months of demonstrations against the project.

Arnett said the subcommittee made its decision from a military standpoint. He added that the group disapproved of Milliken's involvement in the matter.

Navy officials also criticized the governor's role in the Seafarer issue, saying that it would set a dangerous precedent for other states.

One person said Milliken's vote would not affect the Navy's plan to go ahead with hearings in the U.P. on the project.

The Navy spokesperson questioned Milliken's right to veto the project, saying that he knew of no official document that gave the governor the right to do so.

"Only Congress and the President can make decisions on national defense matters," he said.

However, an aide to Milliken said the governor was given reassurance by the Carter Administration that his verbal veto authority from former President Gerald (continued on page 18)

Possible infractions mar election

By NUNZIO M. LUPO
State News Staff Writer

Despite reports of lax security at ASMSU Student Board elections, Barry Griffiths, elections commission chairperson, said Tuesday he does not believe the student government elections will be invalidated. Results of the election may be available this afternoon, according to Griffiths and Timothy Cain, an elections commissioner.

Griffiths conceded it was possible for students to vote twice because empty ballots were left on tables. "We try to go through and throw those away but that happens," he said.

At least one student was given the opportunity to obtain two ballots from a poll worker. The student folded his ballot and went back to get another. He was given another ballot without returning the first. This student, however, did not use both ballots.

Later, the student, a College of Business senior, said, "You could pick up a stack of ballots. Nobody's going to care anyway." He added that the poll worker asked him to "rip it up."

"That's just really poor on the part of the worker and the commission," Griffiths said about the incident. He said that incidents of this nature could invalidate the election but only if the race was close and several infractions could be verified.

Voter turnout on Tuesday appeared to be higher than last year. However, in last year's election only 52 per cent of students signing out ballots actually voted in the presidential race.

Michael Lenz, current Student Board president, said a poll taken by the Counterforce Slate indicated that the presidential race was close between its candidate, Mary Cloud, and Kent Barry of the Spartan Spirit Slate.

Lenz, who gained office as a Counterforce member said, "We were trying to decide how much effect the State News endorse-

Boger accepts presidential job, plans departure to Oklahoma

Lawrence L. Boger hopes to leave around June 1 to become president of Michigan State University. Boger said he is committed to reporting to the State "as soon as possible," with an expected deadline of July 1. In the meantime, he said, he will busy himself with things in shape for his successor by taking up short-term projects he has been assigned, transferring responsibility for long-term projects to other administrators and refusing assignments which would take him more than a month to complete.

When from a list of over 150 candidates, Boger said he did not apply for the position. He announced last spring when the former president announced he would resign by last year, he said he learned through his circle of friends that he had been nominated for the position. Soon after, he said, a letter came from the State telling him that he had been nominated and requesting that he send credentials. Boger said he did not know who originally nominated him for that position, but added that the Oklahoma State nomination coincided with similar nominations elsewhere.

Declining to describe those other opportunities, he said they caused him to rethink his future and decide whether he wanted to leave MSU and take such a position.

"Until a month ago, I would have bet and given you odds that I couldn't be pried out of East Lansing," he said. "But the more I learned, the more attractive Oklahoma State became as an institution and a location."

The Presidential Screening Council at Oklahoma State was looking for someone with administrative abilities and an agricultural and international background. Boger has served as an instructor of agricultural economics, chairperson of the department and dean of the college before being named provost.

President gives approval to arms sale increase

By RICHARDE E. MEYER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Jimmy Carter, who calls past U.S. arms sales policy too unrestricted and dangerous, has approved more than $2 billion worth of military construction contracts, logistical support and NATO arms sales, his spokesperson said today.

White House Deputy Press Secretary Rex Granum said Carter is awaiting completion of an interagency review of arms-sale policy before deciding on an additional $1.6 billion worth of military sales proposals approved by Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance.

Rhodesia issues policy statement

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Rhodesia's white government said Tuesday a constitutional transition to black majority rule was "imperative" but pledged to fight black guerrillas "with the utmost vigor until we have destroyed the terrorists."

The government issued a policy statement including a nine-point blueprint for a new constitution to usher in black rule.

The statement came as Prime Minister Ian Smith met in Cape Town with South African Prime Minister John Vorster on proposals for a Rhodesian settlement.

Security officials, meanwhile, said a white soldier and a white police officer had been slain in new clashes with insurgents, bringing the number of security force deaths this year to 56 and to 277 for the entire four-year war.

Chinese mobilize against drought

HONG KONG (AP) — Millions of workers were mobilized and provincial conferences were held last week in various Chinese provinces in connection with the nationwide campaign against drought, Chinese provincial broadcasts have indicated.

A broadcast from east-central Honan province said a conference held under the Honan provincial revolutionary committee was told there has been drought in the province for six months.

The conference, held March 19 through

24, ordered prefectures and counties to make agriculture a priority directed that all sectors "establish the idea of taking agriculture as the foundation."

The broadcast from provincial capital Chengchow said, however, the province set a new record in grain output last year.

A Canton broadcast from southern Kwangtung province said some 2.6 million people had been mobilized to fight drought and carry out spring farming in Fushan prefecture.

Bermuda Triangle study planned

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union and the United States will cooperate on a study of the Bermuda Triangle, a patch of the Atlantic Ocean near Bermuda, noted for ship and plane disasters, Tass reported.

The agency said nine Soviet vessels will participate in the joint project, to be called "Polymode," starting this June. The project follows a Soviet expedition in 1970 that found whirl formations in the region.

The formations, according to Tass, range up to several hundred kilometers in area and resemble cyclones in the atmosphere in their structure. They reach to a depth of several thousand meters.

Tass said U.S. scientists researching the region have discovered similar formations.

The Tass dispatch said the U.S.-Soviet effort would be aimed at making "calculations and forecasts of the interaction of the ocean and atmosphere in shaping the weather and the climate."

Congress delays action on energy bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of Congress, curious about President Jimmy Carter's forthcoming energy policy and concerned over key parts of his energy reorganization bill, are delaying action on the measure.

White House energy adviser James R. Schlesinger claims the "broad outlines" of the policy are known. It will include a call for more conservation, increased reliance on coal and less emphasis on nuclear energy, easing of price controls on oil and natural gas, and better automobile fuel economy.

A stiff tax on gas-guzzling cars and a possible rebate for buyers of energy-efficient vehicles are being considered, Schlesinger says.

But many members of Congress want more specifics.

Congressional leaders have signalled their unwillingness to create the new energy department until they know exactly what kind of sacrifices the President will ask of Americans in his April 20 energy message.

Federal court issues Breathalyser rule

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court ruled Tuesday that states cannot enact tougher truth-in-packaging laws than the federal government.

The court upheld decisions by lower courts that a California law, used by a county official to ban the sale of Rath Bacon and flour packaged by three companies, is pre-empted by more lenient federal statutes.

Thirty-three states had sided with the county officials in arguing that states should have the power to impose stricter standards in packaging in order to offer greater protection to consumers.

The California law used by Joseph W. Jones, directory of the Riverside County's Department of Weights and Measures, requires exactly accurate labeling on packages.

Court rules on packaging law

BOSTON (AP) — Massachusetts drivers can no longer have their licenses suspended for refusing to take a Breathalyzer test when police suspect them of being drunk, a federal court has ruled.

The 1st Circuit Court of Appeals issued the ruling in a suit by Donald Montrym, a 46-year-old Acton man whose license was automatically revoked for 90 days after he refused to take the state-mandated test. The court said the law is unconstitutional because it deprived Montrym of due process.

The 2-1 ruling could restore driving privileges to up to 1,000 drivers whose licenses have been temporarily suspended under the law, the Massachusetts Registry of Motor Vehicles estimated.

ERA needs Carter's help, feminist says

LANSING (UPI) — A Detroit area feminist wants President Jimmy Carter to use his presidential muscle to force hold-out states to ratify the Equal Rights Amendment.

Lee Kefauver, a member of the National Organization for Women, said she is writing to Carter suggesting economic boycotts and federal aid cutoffs be used to put the women's rights document over the top.

Time is running out on the ERA and it is three states short of ratification.

Kefauver said Carter has been highly vocal in his calls for the protection of human rights abroad but suggested "he look closer to home to correct such faults."

U.S., Cuba negotiators held secret meetings, Rogers says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Representatives of the United States and Cuba have been secretly meeting for almost a year, a principal American participant said Tuesday.

The high level meetings at airports and in a New York hotel involved talks about establishing normal relations between the two countries, said William D. Rogers, former assistant secretary of state for Latin American affairs.

"What we were doing was explaining, as Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger had said publicly, that hostility was not a permanent part of our policy," Rogers said in an interview.

The talks, described by Rogers as "exploratory," were treated as confidential. They became known publicly after the Carter Administration authorized the current round now underway in New York on fishing rights and maritime boundaries. Those talks were announced last week by the State Department.

"The basic point was to find out if we could talk," Rogers said.

"You have to start out asking the other fellow. That's what we were doing. Logically, those kind of talks would not be announced."

Sources said that as a result of the meetings and other contacts by a handful of U.S.

senators, some dozen Americans held in Cuba on drug-related charges were released and the United States moved to support lifting of economic and diplomatic sanctions by the Organization of American States against Cuba.

The talks, from late 1974 until Cuban military intervention in the Angolan civil war in September 1975, covered a number of other issues as well, including expanded travel for Cuban diplomats in the United States and the eventual removal of barriers to trade by foreign-based subsidiaries of American business firms.

When the current fishing talks were announced by the State Department last Friday, they were generally believed to be the first known meetings between the two nations since the United States suspended relations in January 1961.

The earlier round was begun in November 1974 with a telephone call by Lawrence Eagleburger, a close aide to Kissinger, to the Cuban mission at the United Nations explaining the Ford Administration's interest in meeting with Cuban diplomats.

Subsequently, the sessions were held at National Airport in Washington, at John F. Kennedy Airport in New York and at the Hotel Pierre overlooking Central Park. Rogers and Eagleburger were the principal American participants.

In a Houston, Tex., speech on March 1, 1975, Kissinger, signaling a return toward a resumption of normal relations, said, "We see no virtue in perpetual antagonism between the United States and Cuba."

Trustees approve 'U' action committee

By PATRICIA LACROIX
State News Staff Writer
In its March meeting, held while students were away on spring break, the MSU Board of Trustees voted to form a board committee on affirmative action. The committee was approved in response to the recent controversy surrounding discrimination within the University structure.
In other action, the board also approved a $2.4 million contract with the government of Uruguay to assist that country in approving its agricultural techniques and voted in favor of reorganizing the standard agenda of its meetings.
The recommendation made favoring the formation of the committee on affirmative action was the result of a study conducted jointly by the ad hoc committee composed of Trustees Blanch Martin, D. East Lansing, Don Stevens, D. Bloomfield Hills, and Aubrey Radcliffe, R-East Lansing, as well as Jack Breslin, executive vice president, and Ralph Bonner, assistant vice president for human relations.

The purpose of the committee, as outlined in Martin's proposal, will be to "facilitate the board's commitment to affirmative action and equality of opportunity in all aspects of the University's activities." State and federal laws regarding affirmative action and equal opportunity will be reviewed as they relate to the University.
Martin said he suggested the formation of the committee because he "got the feeling from talking to people around the University" that the board was not behind the affirmative action issue, and could possibly serve some purpose in helping the Human Relations Department.
"We are quite concerned about this, after all," he said.
Martin said that the ad hoc committee had several different ideas as to what it could accomplish. One possibility is that the committee could gather reports from the various University departments and colleges having difficulties getting minorities to join their staff.

Some of the problems in this area stem from financial limitations, Martin said, and he suggested that the committee could obtain and award special financial allocations to ease these restrictions.
In addition, the committee could act as a check on University departments which are not fulfilling their obligations in regards to equal opportunities for minorities.
The agreement which the board of trustees approved in regard to Uruguayan agriculture is not entirely unique, since three other U.S. universities are also currently involved with the project.
Uruguay, with its military dictatorship form of government, contacted the universities in an effort to better its agricultural techniques.
The four universities involved in the project will train extension agents from that country, which, in turn, will operate demonstration farms designed to teach poor farmers in the country.
In addition, advanced agriculture degrees will be awarded to Uruguayans after study in the United States.
The agenda reorganization which was approved after little discussion is designed to eliminate basic routine work which the board previously dealt with, Breslin said.
"These routine items were placed on the agenda (for board action) when the University was relatively small," he said.
The items which were previously intended as items needing action by the board now will be classified as report items not needing board action.
Breslin said one area affected by the reorganization is the listing of positions which have been reclassified according to work load.
In accordance with a new regulation enacted in February, the trustees for the first time this month made public their monthly expenditures handled by the University.
The expenses are broken down into several categories, including long distance telephone charges, travel, lodging and subsistence and University entertainment.
The expenses for January totaled $630,311, which is paid by MSU.
The expenses rung up by the various trustees ranged from a high of $232.19, spent by Radcliffe, to a low of $9.49, spent by Martin. Trustee Raymond Krowlikowski, D-Birmingham, did not spend any money in his connections with the board.

CATA-MSU bus integration plan revised

By MICHAEL ROUSE
State News Staff Writer
The Capital Area Transportation Authority (CATA)-MSU bus service integration is not dead.
The plan seemed to suffer a crushing blow last month when the Farm Lane bridge was closed to heavy vehicles because of the surface material. The bridge along one of the proposed on-campus routes developed by representatives of East Lansing, MSU, CATA and the County Regional Planning Commission, have been working on the project since the meeting of the East Lansing Transportation Commission Monday night. An alternative plan prepared by the planning department was unveiled.
Instead of driving over the Farm Lane bridge, the Burcham Drive - Hagadorn and North Harrison Road buses would go to the street.
The buses would stop at seven places on the street and there would be a 20-minute wait between buses. They would operate from 7 a.m. to 10:30 p.m. Monday through Friday and the fare would be 10 cents.

The purpose of the CATA-MSU bus integration plan is to allow East Lansing residents to have direct access to the center of campus.
University officials have been wary of the plan out of a fear that the MSU bus system will be taken over by CATA. However, Duane Kooyers, administrative assistant for CATA, said the few stops on campus will hopefully not interfere with the classroom to classroom and dormitory to classroom service provided by the MSU system.
The transportation commission unanimously voted to recommend to the City Council that the proposed extension of CATA routes be tried and studied for nine months beginning September 19. The city's subsidy for the service would be $39,600.
"The alternative route will be used only if the Farm Lane bridge is not fixed by September," said Ken Woods, planning staff member who has been working on the project.

The question of accessibility for handicappers will not be addressed with the trial bus run because full-size CATA buses accessible to handicappers will not be available for about 18 months, Woods said. After that, it will be up to CATA to decide where the six specially equipped buses will run, based on demand, Kooyers said.

The plan will have to be approved soon if the funding is to be included in next year's city budget.
"MSU is not expected to act until it gets the formal CATA request," Kooyers said.

"If the plan is approved by the City Council, it will be reviewed by CATA and the CATA board before being submitted to University officials."
In other action at the meeting, the commission voted to hold its April meeting in a location accessible to handicappers.

E.L. residents plan hearing, ponder boycott
A boycott by East Lansing against goods manufactured by corporations that have major investments in the Republic of South Africa and support the apartheid regime there will be the topic of a public hearing tonight.
The hearing will be held at 7:30 p.m. in Hannah Middle School auditorium, 819 Abbott Road.
The resolution before the City Council, which has been proposed by the Southern Africa Liberation Committee of the East Lansing Peace Center and other organizations, calls for the East Lansing government to cease doing business with Caltex, (Standard of California and Texaco), Firestone, General Motors, IBM, IT&T, Kennecott Copper, Mobil, Motorola and Union Carbide.
The provisions of the resolution would expire when the Organization of African Unity recognizes a representative government.
Representatives of the nine corporations were invited to the hearing, but as of Tuesday afternoon only IBM will be represented and IT&T will send some pamphlets, city administrative assistant Mary Padilla said.

Seafarer probably dead - thanks to public

The vote by the House subcommittee on Research and Development of the Armed Services Committee to cut off funding for Seafarer is a welcome but long overdue action. The full House can still revive funding for this outrageous Navy-sponsored boondoggle, but the chance of this occurring is exceedingly small. The audacity of the Defense Department in seeking to impose Seafarer on the people of the Upper Peninsula against their will has been exceeded only by the spinelessness of the state and federal government in allowing this fiasco to continue. Gov. William G. Milliken, former President Gerald Ford and President Jimmy Carter all piously asserted that the fate of Seafarer rested ultimately with the people of Michigan.

All three eventually found it expedient to equivocate on this pledge.

Ford left office without any serious attempt to interpret the will of the people, and Carter came into office saddled with a campaign pledge to veto Seafarer if the people of Michigan so desired. The people did desire — by referendum margins as high as 30 to one.

Carter's failure to veto Seafarer in the face of overwhelming public opposition to its construction indicates that he succumbed to pressure by the defense establishment and special interest groups. Under the circumstances, one must view the possibility of Carter fulfilling his other campaign pledges with skepticism, if not downright cynicism.

Defense Secretary Harold Brown's letter to Milliken, which seemed to suggest that Milliken did not have veto power over Seafarer was the pretext Milliken used to veto the project. While this action was welcome, it is undoubtedly true that Milliken's long delay in heeding the wishes of his Michigan constituents encouraged the Navy to press forward with its plans for Seafarer.

It appears that Seafarer is now dead — no thanks to the governor, the president or the Defense Department. Public pressure has worked its will, but only after a protracted period of frustration and uncertainty. The people deserve better.

Boycott U.S. firms

In late 1976, 30 U.S. investors visiting Johannesburg relaxed after the main course of a banquet and anticipated dessert. They were delightfully surprised by the piece de resistance, ice cream shimmering with flecks of real gold. They were satisfied.

Earlier that year, over 260 black Africans were killed in riots spurred by apartheid, South Africa's official policy of segregation. Black Africans became outraged that they have not shared in South Africa's phenomenal industrial growth.

They know that a white South African averages over $470 in earnings a month while they average $60. They know that 93 per cent of white students attend high school while only 9 per cent of blacks have that privilege. They know one-half of the children born in Bantustans — black districts — die before reaching their fifth birthday.

They were not satisfied. There are 17 million black citizens and 4 million white citizens living in South Africa. Yet South African blacks cannot vote, strike or join a political party. The black unskilled worker averages 56 cents to $1.26 per hour. In other words, South Africa is a paradise for foreign investment.

And U.S. firms have invested heavily. Nearly 50 per cent of the auto market and 44 per cent of the oil production in South Africa is controlled by U.S. firms.

A report issued by the State Department described U.S. firms as "blending into the woodwork" of South Africa. And why should these firms disturb their Eden of industry?

Maybe from indignation voiced at home. The South African Liberation Committee is now proposing a boycott of nine major U.S. firms with large holdings in South Africa. The resolution, modeled after ones passed in Madison, Wis., and Gary, Ind., calls for the boycott of such products by the city of East Lansing.

If the resolution is passed — as it should be — it may forewarn corporate titans like GM and IT&T about the moral obligation of multinational corporations. Perhaps with a strong show of support, the resolution will condemn the subtle colonialism exhibited by U.S. firms in South Africa. The meeting will take place tonight at 7:30 at the John Hannah Middle School, 819 Abbott Road.

Board bungles again

Once again the MSU Board of Trustees and administration played political games with the students and faculty. It was during spring break that the board met to hear both sides of the controversy surrounding the Brazil Project.

One cannot help but feel that ulterior motives were involved. Especially since those that would have voiced opposing viewpoints away from campus. According to Blanche Martin, chairperson of the board, the members had hoped to hear both sides of the controversy. But instead, only one side was heard as a result of negligence of administration's part.

Martin also stated that the board's position had not changed and he believes Secretary Elliot Ballard notified C. Patric "Lash" Larowe, one of the most outspoken opponents of the Brazil Project.

But regardless of an attempt to contact Larowe, the board should have considered the many students who were out of town. Such actions can only lead one to believe that the board did not hear both sides. With so controversial a subject being discussed, the board should pay strict attention to when it calls meetings.

The board should reschedule the meeting and invite all concerned to discuss the controversy. Such a meeting should be publicized well in advance. By doing this the board could eliminate the thought of wrongdoing.

Pornography

Banning pornography on campus would repress our freedom of speech? Rubbish. Porn can be purchased in several theaters within walking distance of campus. The State News editorial position on Feb. 16 really demands only that porn be convenient, that is, in an MSU classroom. In view of all the negative publicity this University gets (you didn't know?), all we need is to further antagonize supporters throughout the state by protecting what is clearly a minority (and money-making) interest on campus. Good grief! Why not sell booze in B-106 Wells? I'm not even sure I'm against porn as such, though I suspect it (and other forces) increase male domination of women. (Okay, so some women like porn. Big deal.)

My point really is that we're allowing something on campus that is very offensive to many of the people who pay for this campus simply because most of us are not brave enough to say we don't want it here.

Whitewash

The debate continues — to either condone or condemn the act of civil disobedience in which Lawrence Sharp poured flour-water "whitewash" on the clothing of CIA representative John Maury. Let us ask ourselves some questions in the light of two themes that emerged from the evening.

According to Maury's line of thinking, the "dominant ethic" is supreme (doing what society or government authority tells one to do). Repeatedly, Maury defended CIA actions by using the Eichmann defense used to evade responsibility for six million deaths: "I am not responsible. I was only doing what I was told to do."

In contrast, Zolton Ferency called upon us, especially MSU professors considering questionable corporate or government contracts, to use our own consciences, to take individual responsibility for our actions knowing there will be consequences in acting contrary to the dominant ethic.

Did Sharp's action, contrary to the audience's sense of propriety, challenge us to see beyond the public relations facade to the evil of the CIA? If the amiable older gentleman had been dressed in a blood-stained uniform, would the audience have cheered the nonviolent act of total disrespect for an organization that deserves none? And if we don't agree with the "whitewash" as a symbol or an effective protest, will we bother to find alternative ways to take meaningful action in opposition to CIA atrocities or will we be content to discuss it dispassionately in comfortable academic surroundings?

Ethics

RE: Lawrence Sharp's "whitewash" article in the Michigan Free Press on March 20. What do the guardians of professional ethics of the Fourth Estate say about a reporter who is also a newsmaker and then writes a story about his own activities?

Ralph Turner
Professor

Biased

I knew, of course, before I attended the Maury-Ferency-Larowe discussion on March 7 what position Maury would take. He was formerly affiliated with the CIA. And I knew what positions Ferency and Larowe would take. They have been very verbal about their views.

But H. Lynn Jondahl was to function as the moderator of this discussion, and apparently my idea of what a moderator is to do and Jondahl's idea are very different. He not only physically placed himself in such a position that he was aligned with Ferency and Larowe so that he had to turn towards Maury, but the questions Jondahl asked of him stemmed from a biased position. He did very little to keep the discussion moving forward, but did even less to keep the question and answer period moving forward. As a person in public office Jondahl ought to know better. For shame!

VIEWPOINT: SOUTH AFRICA

Boycott American corporations

By DAVID DWYER

At the time of this writing, South Africa, a country on the southern tip of Africa, is the most racist country in the world and is likely to remain so unless something is done about it. The Southern African Liberation Committee (SALC) believes the South African white-minority government is the most racist government in the world because it has enacted laws which allocate political and economic rights according to race. No other country has such brazen laws.

- Blacks may not own land in South Africa except on reservations (Bantustans) which comprise only 13 per cent of the (least desirable) area of that country.

- Blacks may not vote.

- Blacks may not organize labor unions nor strike for higher pay.

"The South African white minority government has done everything within its power to conceal not only the inequality, but also the brutal inhumanity that has been practiced there. They use the term 'apartheid,' which supposedly means 'separate but equal,' to mask the bitter fact of their racism."

- Blacks may only work at a particular job if no whites can be found to fill that job.

- Blacks may not travel where they wish; they must seek permission from white authorities.

The South African white minority government has done everything within its power to conceal not only the inequality, but also the brutal inhumanity that has been practiced there. They use the term "apartheid," which supposedly means "separate but equal," to mask the bitter fact of their racism. Yet if apartheid means separate but equal, then why does the state spend only $30 per year on educating a black child and $340 per year on educating a white child? Why is there an eight to one income gap between blacks and whites? Why are there such laws as those above?

In defense of the current racist government in South Africa, sympathizers will say that things are improving and if left alone, the racism in South Africa will gradually come to an end. This defense falsely implies that the white minority government is doing everything within its power to eliminate the inequality. This is simply untrue. As the Soweto insurrection last summer has reaffirmed, like so many such events in the past, every black gain has been accomplished in spite of, not because of, the South African white minority government. Every black gain has been won at great cost of black effort, black suffering and black life.

What then can an American do, black or white, to help eliminate the misery caused by South Africa's racism? Ask yourself the question, what does American corporate investment do in South Africa? Is it promoting or discouraging human equality in that country? The corporations would have us believe that U.S. corporate presence has had, and will continue to have, a strong moralizing impact on the white minority government so that gradually the concept of apartheid will blur and disappear from our memory, and that in time, because of their inhumanity, will cease to exist there.

This corporation position is grossly inaccurate. First, it is the fact that corporations have never been moralizing in their actions. Their willingness to break the laws of any country, read daily in the papers, has never been for the purpose of morality, but rather for self-interest. As we have learned in this country, corporations have never made concessions to workers without worker effort, worker suffering and loss of life. We expect the corporations to behave differently in South Africa especially when we know that the major attractiveness of Africa to American business is its cheap black labor?

Secondly, this rose-colored view of the corporations is contradicted by the head of the white-minority South African government who explicitly states: Every time a South African product is purchased, it is a brick in the wall of our continued existence.

For these reasons, it is obvious that the South African would have a far better chance for self-determination were it for the over $1 billion in investment that American corporations have made in that country. What then can be done to discourage further U.S. corporate involvement there?

One such step is the proposed selective boycott of corporations which have substantial investments in South Africa. A boycott of such U.S. firms is presently being carried out by city governments of Gary, Ind., Madison, Wis., and other cities. Boycotts have been observed to have the following effects:

- They bring the question of apartheid and how to resolve it to the attention of the American people.
- They discourage other corporations from making investments in South Africa.

"As we have learned in this country, corporations have never made concessions to workers without worker effort, worker suffering and loss of life. Why do we expect the corporations to behave differently in South Africa, especially when we know that the major attractiveness of South Africa to American business is its cheap black labor?"

- They ask the corporations involved to specifically detail their role in apartheid in South Africa (and the way that they with these problems will clarify their position as a moral influence or as a profit-making institution).

Currently there is a proposal that the City Council of East Lansing support such a boycott of selected U.S. firms with substantial investments in South Africa. SALC urges everyone attend the public hearing on this issue tonight at 7:30 p.m. at Hannah Middle School to either lend support to the proposal or learn more about it. Dwyer is a professor in the Anthropology Department member of SALC.

Attorney offers evidence in DES case

Says manufacturers marketed drug despite cancer danger

By MELANIE DEEDS

DETROIT (UPI) — An attorney for 184 Michigan women whose daughters took the drug DES to avoid miscarriages said Monday there is overwhelming scientific evidence that the synthetic estrogen caused cancer in the daughters.

manufactured and sold under its chemical or generic name by many companies and never marketed under a brand name. "This is a scandal," he said. "The issue of DES is so scandalous, so wrong, so frightening. "Science has overwhelmingly shown that the drug caused these problems."

used by 500,000 to 2 million women. In the late 1960s, scientists discovered that female offspring of women who took DES were developing abnormal glands in their vaginas and cancer or precancerous lesions of the cervix. The drug also has been used to fatten up chickens, but was outlawed for that purpose by the government in 1959 because of evidence that it caused cancer.

women, but not for chickens," Charfoos said. Monday's hearing was aimed at determining whether the daughters can sue major drug firms for allegedly exposing them to cancer. Wayne County Circuit Judge Thomas Roumell took the case under advisement, following four hours of arguments.

Charfoos said all the women plaintiffs underwent surgery for removal of cancerous or precancerous lesions. Some had part or all of their female reproductive organs removed.

One of those women, Lynn Levine, 26, of Farmington Hills, underwent major surgery two years ago for the removal of cancer. "I hope this case saves lives," she said. "I was devastated. It completely changed my life. My plans for a family were eliminated."

"There are thousands and thousands of women who could be affected by this."

Lane Bauer, an attorney for Eli Lilly who is representing all 16 drug companies named in the case, said the plaintiff's charges were like "trying to plug a sinking rowboat."

The liability accusations, he said, were based on the "preposterous allegation of a general marketing scheme for the avowed purpose of concealing the ones who made the product."

Bauer said there is no basis for the lawsuit because the majority of the women "cannot identify the company or product that injured them."

"The question is whether or not the plaintiffs have the right to proceed against these defendants when they have admitted and acknowledged that they cannot identify the drug or the manufacturer," he said.

Sponsor pleads for 'immediate effect'

By ED LION

State News Staff Writer The sponsor of a state measure designed to reduce the amount of PBB in the food supply and provide compensation for affected farmers said today chances of its passage by the House are "pretty good."

but he is worried whether it will be given immediate effect. Rep. Francis Spaniola, D-Corunna, said the bill, which is scheduled for House debate today, should be passed to take immediate effect because "obviously we've already waited too long."

The measure, if passed by a simple majority of the legislature, would take effect by law April 1, 1979, 90 days after the current House term ends. A vote of two-thirds of both houses is required for immediate effect. "I think it's very important that this bill gets approved and with immediate effect," Spaniola said. "The scientific community seems to be divided on PBB's harmful effects, and we really don't know its effects for sure. But there is concern and I'd rather we be safe than sorry."

tees. If passed by the House, it still would need Senate approval before passage, and two-thirds endorsement for immediate effect.

Spaniola said a vote of the bill, but not for immediate implementation, would practically be a vote against the measure.

"Putting it off for so long just increases the danger that might come from the chemical," he said. "We've obviously let it go too long and I think we should act right now."

Michigan Farm Bureau Services has come out against the measure and legislative sources said it has launched an "intensive lobbying effort aimed at its defeat."

Since PBB, a toxic fire retardant, was accidentally mixed into Michigan livestock feed in 1973, hundreds of chicken and livestock had to be slaughtered.

A team of scientists has tentatively linked the chemical to neurological disorders found in farmers.

In other PBB action, a U.S. Senate subcommittee will be in Lansing Thursday to hear testimony on federal proposals to deal with the PBB problem.

Emergency guidelines idea called 'impractical' by PSC

LANSING (UPI) — Michigan residents won't get a set of instructions on what to do in the event of a nuclear power plant accident because the state Public Service Commission (PSC) says the idea is too impractical.

In its unanimous decision Monday, the PSC also noted that nuclear disaster planning is a little out of its field.

A spokesperson for the Public Interest Research Group in Michigan, (PIRGIM) which proposed the notification scheme, said the decision "reflects a refusal by the PSC to require the utilities to come to grips with the nuclear safety issue."

There are three nuclear power plants operating in the state and two more under construction. In other action, the PSC adopted rules designed to open commission business to greater public scrutiny.

PIRGIM had proposed that each electric company be required each year to provide its customers with emergency instructions, including evacuation plans.

The proposal was opposed by the utilities. The PSC said the instructions proposed by PIRGIM would either "be so general as to be subject to misinterpretation and would be of little help; or, if written to cover the wide range of possibilities, would be too complex for the public to understand or follow in an emergency."

New rules adopted at the PSC meeting will allow, for the first time, citizen comment at commission meetings.

Santana favorites, Utopia's theatrics and Mason's guitars

Gregory Walker of Santana

State News/Robert Kozloff

Musical variety spiced the end of the winter concert season as Pop Entertainment showcased an acoustic Dave Mason and a pulsating Santana. Pyramid Productions presented a heavily theatrical Utopia extravaganza.

Mason played sundry acoustic six and 12-string guitars, which complemented his strong vocals. Along with two competent backing musicians, Mason injected new life into songs from his "Alone Together" days, introduced a couple of compositions from a new album yet released, covered the Eagles' "Take It To The Limit" in fine style and encoored with the Mason trademark, "Only You Know And I Know."

Santana raced into throbbing renditions of old familiar songs and material from the past two albums. With an outstanding performance by Carlos Santana on guitar and a torrid tempo set by Chepito Areas on timbales,

Santana proceeded to arouse the audience with "Black Magic Woman Gypsy Queen" and fast

Renowned concertina artist will present concert tonight

The Ten Pound Fiddle will present world famous English concertina player Alistair Anderson in concert today at 8 p.m. in the Union Parlors.

The English concertina is a small, hand-held instrument with pushbuttons on each of its ends, joined by musical bellows. Anderson has been playing this European-crafted instrument for a dozen years, and is the leader in its revival within the past few years.

His repertoire consists of traditional music from his homeland, the Northeast part of England called Northumberland, and the music of Ireland and Scotland, sprinkled with ragtime pieces and classical compositions.

Former member of England's well-known traditional band called the Ranters, Anderson has three solo efforts to his name and has written a book on how to play the English concertina. He has played numerous folk festivals in Europe and the United States.

Admission is $3 for the general public and $2.50 for MSU Folksong Society members.

Academy Awards ceremony for another year. Sheets and gossipy article speculation can be led to the ash-can. The can center their Oscars mantelpiece at home or proudly display them at work. Mostly, they will their agents to begin planning new and better ceremonies.

Ceremony marked by a and a panache uncommon annual presentation, 100 Academy members "Rocky" as 1976's Best Actor. The late Peter Finch won Best Actor in a Role for his performance in "Network." In an emotionally charged moment, Faye Dunaway, who had won the Best Actress award, was named Best Actress for her work on "Network."

Jason Robards, as had won the Best Actor award, was named Best Actor for his work on "The Paper Moon."

Leonard Rosenman, who won the Best Adapted Score award last year for "Barry Lyndon," reprised in the same category this year for his adaptation of Woody Guthrie's music for "Bound For Glory."

But Jerry Goldsmith, composer of the musical score for "The Omen," edged out the late Bernard Herrmann's music for "Obsession" and "Taxi Driver."

Barbra Streisand and Paul Williams, predictably, snared the Best Song statuette for their hit, "Evergreen."

George Jenkins and George Gaines won the Art Director award for their ambitious recreation of the Washington Post newsroom in "All The President's Men."

In an interesting side-note, "Black and White in Color," an entry from the tiny West African country of Ivory Coast, beat out the better-known French "Cousin, Cousine" and the Italian "Seven Beauties."

This year, the awards ceremony was produced by William Friedkin, director of "The French Connection" and "The Exorcist." Friedkin marshaled an impressive assembly of figures from the new Hollywood: the four hosts were Richard Pryor, Ellen Burstyn, Jane Fonda and Warren Beatty, with appearances by Marty Feldman, Chevy Chase, Neil Diamond, Jack Nicholson, Jeanne Moreau and Liv Ullmann. A special moment came when Jane Fonda introduced Lillian Hellman, Fonda, who portrays Hellman in the upcoming "Julia," acknowledged her place in American letters and feelingly attempted to expiate the author's 20-year exile from the Hollywood community due to her refusal to cooperate with the infamous House Un-American Activities Committee. Slowly, in unison, the audience gave Hellman a standing ovation. Hellman cut through the incipient sentimentality by reminding the industry that the blacklist succeeded because the men who ran the studios confronted Joe McCarthy with "the courage and resolve of a bowl of mashed potatoes."

Other highlights of the evening included an elegant dance interpretation of the demonic Latin chant from "The Omen," "Ave Satani." Chevy Chase's odd appearances at odd moments during the proceedings; and Norman Mailer, who presented the screenwriting awards, likening the role of the screenwriter to the famous story of Voltaire's visit to a male brothel: when queried about his experience Voltaire commented that though he liked the experience, he did not plan to return. "Once a philosopher, twice a pervert."

Those who revel in this pleasant perversion celebrated themselves Monday night.

'U' contract OKs student training in Battle Creek

By MICHAEL MACKSOOD
State News Staff Writer

A formal agreement affiliating Battle Creek's Lakeview General Osteopathic Hospital and MSU's College of Osteopathic Medicine was approved by the MSU Board of Trustees at its March meeting.

The contract will facilitate development of teaching programs and the clinical training of osteopathic medical students in the Battle Creek area.

Myron S. Magen, dean of the College of Osteopathic Medicine, said the agreement with the Battle Creek hospital is one of 15 such agreements the college has with hospitals in Michigan.

"The purpose of these affiliations is to allow the students to be trained in hospitals in communities so they get a perception of what the real world, off the University campus, is like," Magen said.

Magen said students in their third year go into the community to gain clinical experience and have contact with real patients and practicing physicians.

James G. Lyon, assistant to the dean of the College of Human Medicine, said the college also works with about 20 hospitals in this type of affiliation.

"The students spend their first two years on campus and then are assigned to a community hospital for their clinical education in the last two years," Lyon said.

Both Magen and Lyon said the affiliations with community hospitals are working out very well and have received excellent feedback from students.

Magen said that though the program is somewhat tough to administer, it gives students an excellent opportunity to encounter the types of environments and problems they will face as practicing physicians and so is very worthwhile.

Students are taught by practicing physicians in the community who are made clinical professors. These are unpaid, volunteer positions.

MSU faculty oversee the programs in the various communities.

Magen and Lyon both said the affiliations not only benefit MSU's medical schools but also the hospitals taking part in the program.

"The program keeps the hospital staff on their toes by continuing education," Magen said.

"Volunteer physicians enjoy the contact with students and teaching them," Lyon said. "The program also may serve as a pipeline to bring new physicians into the community."

Magen said the affiliations with the hospitals saves both the state of Michigan and MSU money.

"The state saves because there is no need for state money to be used for a duplication of facilities," Magen said. "Also, clinical professors were paid instead of contributing the time."

Treaty proposals lack Soviet response

MOSCOW (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance said Tuesday that the lack of a Russian response to American proposals for a comprehensive nuclear arms treaty might mean the Soviets are seriously interested.

Vance told reporters at the end of his second day of meetings in Moscow that the treaty proposals he made Monday had not come up once in five hours of talks with Foreign Minister Gromyko.

"Indeed, I'm glad it didn't come up today," Vance said, "because it indicates to me that serious consideration is being given to the question of SALT and the proposals which have been tabled."

More negotiations were scheduled for Wednesday, and Vance said it was possible he might extend his stay.

Instead of SALT, the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty, Vance said he and Gromyko spent the day discussing nuclear test bans, troop cuts in Central Europe, controlling the spread of nuclear weapons, and demilitarizing the Indian Ocean.

In Oslo, Norway, scientists reported that the Soviet Union had apparently set off an underground nuclear explosion at its Asian testing ground on the morning of the second day's talks in Moscow. There was no mention of the test at Vance's meeting with reporters.

He said they "touched very briefly" on conflicts in southern Africa, where Soviet President Nikolai Podgorny this week pledged continuing support of black nationalist movements fighting to topple white minority governments in Rhodesia and South Africa.

"We agreed in a number of these areas to set up follow-on working groups to continue the discussions we started today," Vance said.

Vance apparently sought clarification Tuesday of an earlier Gromyko statement which some thought indicated that the Soviets might not insist on participation by Palestine Liberation Organization in Middle East peace talks, a shift which would excite Israel.

Scouts may have violated law

DARIEN, Conn. (AP) — For running this town's after-dark ambulance service, the 40 teen-age scouts of Explorer Post 53 got a national award. They also got a complaint to the state labor department.

The post, which has 27 young men and 13 young women, was honored Monday by the Voluntary Action Center in Washington as one of the nation's 10 outstanding volunteer groups.

On the same day, Harvey Kagan, president of Professional Ambulance Service in Wethersfield, Conn., complained that the troop violates state labor laws by exposing the teen-agers to hazardous working conditions. State Labor Department officials said they will investigate.

"We're going to be very pugnacious about this," said John Doble, who founded the post six years ago. "I can't conceive that anyone would have any kind of legitimate gripe against this kind of thing."

COMMISSION CITES DEATH STATISTICS

Safety caps save lives, group says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Those safety caps on aspirin bottles may be aggravating to adults but they're saving children's lives, according to the Consumer Product Safety Commission.

In 1972 there were 46 children in the United States who died from aspirin poisoning, commission officials said. But three years later that number had dropped to 17.

Beginning in 1973, federal law required aspirin to be packaged so that the contents were not readily accessible to small children. Since then other potentially harmful products have been included in the packaging law, and officials said overall poisonings of children by such substances have declined 47 per cent.

"There seems no doubt" that the special packaging "is exactly what the reason is" for the decline in aspirin poisoning, said Tom Davis of the commission.

Fred Marozzi, chief of the product analysis branch of the commission's division of poison prevention packaging, said that though there had been many educational programs seeking to teach parents the hazards of aspirin, the major decline in poisonings of children did not come until after the safety packaging came onto the market in 1973.

market one size in standard, easy-to-open packages as long as it is marked not for use in homes with children.

And, he said, prescription medicines can be provided in nonsafety packages if requested by the patient or a physician.

"But we try to walk a thin line on this matter," Marozzi said, noting that the commission wants to provide the simpler packages for people who need them but doesn't want them in too widespread use where children can get at them.

And, he noted that persons who do require the older type packages need to exercise extra care when children are visiting them.

While the safety caps seem irritating, commission tests show most adults can open them but that most children under five can't.

The criterion calls for 90 per cent of adults to be able to open the bottles within five minutes after reading the instructions.

For children, 85 per cent must be unable to open it by themselves in five minutes, and 80 per cent must be unable to do so even after seeing it opened.

Americans leave Kolwezi as rebels continue advance

KINSHASA, Zaire (AP)—Initially all remaining Americans were evacuated Tuesday from Kolwezi, Zaire's mining town, in the path of advancing troops.

Official sources insisted the situation was unchanged in northern Shaba province, formerly called Katanga. But unconfirmed reports said the Zaire staff had retreated from Kolwezi to two towns about 60 miles to the east on the main road to Lumumbashi.

Protestant missionaries were the last Americans known to be in the Kolwezi area, and have indicated they do not intend to leave.

A chartered plane carrying American engineers employed by the Morrison-Knudsen Corp. of Boise, Idaho, landed in Kananga, some 400 miles north of Kolwezi.

They were accompanied by two other Americans employed by the state-owned Geomines copper mining complex in Kolwezi, which produces more than 65 per cent of Zaire's export earnings.

Another Morrison-Knudsen engineer left in the private plane of the defense attache at the U.S. Embassy in Kinshasa.

A C130 of the Zaire air force evacuated some 20 foreign reporters from Kolwezi, after Zaire authorities told them their presence in the area was no longer desirable.

The rebels on Saturday captured the strategic town of Mutshatsha, 60 miles west of Kolwezi and continued their advance Sunday in the direction of the rich "copper belt" around Kolwezi.

Unofficial reports placed rebel advance units within 30 miles of Kolwezi on the strategic Benguela railroad leading into Angola. These reports were not confirmed by official sources, but a spokesperson for Morrison-Knudsen said the decision to evacuate the project was taken "on perfectly adequate grounds."

Report links smoking, birth control pills

NEW YORK (AP) — Women over 40 who use birth control pills run a much lower risk of death from heart attacks than recent reports had suggested — as long as they don't smoke.

But pill users in their 40s who smoke more than 15 cigarettes a day die of heart attacks or blood clots nearly 12 times more frequently than those who don't smoke at all.

These were the major findings of a new study of mortality risk and oral contraception that was reported Tuesday by research analyst Andrudh K. Jain of The Population Council.

The new data analysis follows recent studies in Great Britain and the United States that indicated pill users in general, and especially those over 40, faced a much higher risk of death and both fatal and nonfatal heart attacks than others.

Those studies have resulted in widespread fears, especially among women around 40, about use of the pill. On the basis of those studies the Food and Drug Administration has proposed a revised labeling of oral contraceptives for physicians and patients. The proposed revision for physicians states that "the use of oral contraceptives in women in this age group (40 and over) is not recommended." The proposed revision for patients states: "Though it is your decision, it is recommended that if you are over 40 years old you do not use the pill because of an increased risk of heart attacks from the pill."

But those studies lumped together both smokers and nonsmokers among pill users and therefore did not take into account the synergistic effects of pill and smoking combined. A synergistic effect is one that is greater than the simple addition of two factors.

Further, during the period covered by the earlier studies, 1968 to 1972, the estrogen hormone content of birth control pills was higher than it is now, according to Dr. Sheldon J. Segal of The Population Council. He said that indicated that current pill use might produce lower mortality figures.

Jain, summing up his study, said: "The safety of the pill should be considered separately for smokers and nonsmokers because the effects are different."

"Women over 40 who take the pill and do not smoke are not exposed to substantially higher risk of death." Jain and others at a news conference said they did not know what physical mechanism would account for the excess mortality among pill users who smoke.

Though The Population Council, a private nonprofit organization does not make formal recommendations on these medical matters, Jain has sent a detailed letter to the FDA.

The Jain study found that the annual mortality rate from heart attacks and blood clots for women aged 40-44 who use oral contraceptives but do not smoke is 7 per 100,000 — or roughly a third the risk of death from pregnancy and childbirth among women who use no birth control.

But the pill users in the age group who do smoke face a mortality risk of 59 per 100,000, the Jain study found. And among heavy smokers — more than 15 cigarettes a day — the risk rises to 83 per 100,000.

Among women aged 30-34 and 35-39, respectively, the mortality risks from heavy smoking and pill use are 16 and 23 per 100,000. These figures are slightly higher than the risk of death from pregnancy and childbirth among women using no birth control and significantly higher than the risks associated with other contraceptive methods and with abortion.

In contrast, the risk of death associated with pill use alone is only two per 100,000 among the 30-34-year-olds and four among 35-39 year-olds.

Bill may abolish state primary

LANSING (UPI) — A bill to abolish Michigan's presidential primary has been reported to the floor of the state House and may well have the support of influential House Speaker Bobby Crim.

The measure was unanimously approved by the House Elections Committee following a brief discussion Tuesday. Its sponsor, committee Chairperson Alfred Sheridan, D-Taylor, said he hopes repealing the state's presidential primary will contribute to the movement for federally-sponsored regional primaries or at least force the legislature to save the added expense of the vote by scheduling it to coincide with the state general primary.

"I think this is going to force the issue and that's what I'm really after," Sheridan said.

Crim, a Davison Democrat, said he is leaning in the direction of backing the Sheridan bill because of the expense of the primaries and his feeling that they are too open to abuses and do not provide an accurate picture of voter sentiment.

Crim also said he would favor regional primaries, saying the current system of multiple state votes exhaust and impoverishes the candidates.

Sheridan said the 1972 and 1976 presidential primaries cost the state a total of nearly $5 million, and noted the voter turnout in each was only about one-third of the eligible population.

Sheridan opposed the establishment of the state presidential primary in 1971, but said he is not against the primaries "in principle."

Merging the general primary with the presidential primary, as some states have done, would save the expense of a separate spring presidential ballot, he said.

The state has covered the cost of the presidential primaries, while local governments pay for the general primaries. Sheridan said adding the presidential voting to the general primary would not make it more expensive to conduct.

"I don't feel we can afford the luxury" of two separate primaries, he said.

"I'm not sure under the present circumstances, the presidential primary is worth our money," Crim agreed.

"It is obvious the primaries are being raided by the opposite parties," he said, claiming Republican cross-over votes contributed to Alabama Gov. George Wallace's victory in the 1972 Michigan Democratic primary.

Michigan first established a presidential primary in 1916, but later abandoned it because people felt it was "a too darned expensive popularity contest," according to Howard McCowan, an elections specialist in the secretary of state's office.

Cunningham's to become Sam's clothing emporium

With major renovations expected to begin next week, the vacant Cunningham's drugstore on the corner of Abbott Road and Grand River Avenue will be transformed to a Sam's clothing store.

Sams, which has been located in Ann Arbor for 30 years, will offer primarily denim slacks, work boots and western shirts, said Dave Lillie, manager and part owner. Lillie said major renovations will begin if construction drawings are approved next week. The company is shooting for an opening date in the second week in May.

PLAIN TALK FROM ARMCO ON FINDING A JOB:

How the energy crisis chills your chances

So you're getting your degree and looking for that perfect job. More power to you. Literally. You'll need it. America will have to find the energy it takes to make you a job.

Expressed as heat, this nation spends at least 71 quads of energy a year. That's 71 quadrillion BTUs. A 71 followed by 15 zeroes. Since one BTU will heat a pound of water one degree Fahrenheit, we're talking about bringing 219 trillion pounds of ice to a boil. That's a glacier thirteen miles long, two miles wide and a mile thick. Every year.

Each working man and woman's share of our 71 quads comes to 800,000,000 BTUs. Of course all that energy isn't spent on the job. Nor do all jobs take the same amount, although most spend more than we think. But when you look at our available energy and the 89,000,000 people at work, then 800,000,000 BTUs is each job's share.

Now think about the 18,000,000 more U.S. men and women experts say will be looking for jobs over the next ten years. At 800,000,000 BTUs apiece, we'll have to come up with an extra 14.4 quads of energy to create new jobs for them.

At Armco, we face the energy problem every day because it takes about 29,000,000 BTUs to make each ton of steel. Our energy bill last year came to over $300,000,000. The cost keeps climbing every year. No wonder companies conserve energy. We have to, even though most of Armco's energy comes from coal which we mine ourselves. When companies can't get energy, people lose their jobs. We all learned that during the winter. The energy crisis is here. And it's huge.

Plain talk about ENERGY

We Americans already know how to solve the energy crisis. We have the technology to reach solutions. Yet each solution comes with its own set of political problems. Natural gas mustn't cost too much. Offshore oil mustn't spoil our beaches. Coal mustn't rape the land or poison the air. The atom mustn't threaten to destroy us. Energy conservation mustn't interfere with spending BTUs for worthy reasons.

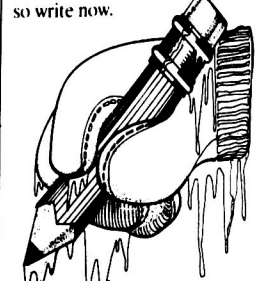

Fair enough. But so far, we're paying more attention to the problems than we are to the energy itself. We've got to stop making every social goal an ideological crusade. We need to think things through and make rational trade-offs if we're ever going to get those 18,000,000 additional jobs.

Next time some zealot crusades for anything, test the crusade against this question: Does it produce at least one BTU's worth of energy? If not, it won't do a thing to help you get a job.

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you take Rover on vacation with you when you fly, the travel cost could jump 84 per cent under new regulations being considered by the Department of Agriculture.

And it is also going to cost more if you want to add a Fido or Kitty or another pet to your household, according to department economists.

The new government rules would apply to the transportation industry and the added costs are expected to be passed to pet stores and owners.

The new rules set standards for pet containers, length of time the animals can be left in a terminal, how often they must be fed and watered and other health and safety requirements.

The new rules result from changes in the law that Congress made last year after publicity about organized dog fighting. Animal-welfare groups also have long complained about mistreatment of animals during shipments between dealers or

Dept. of Agriculture considers increases in animal travel costs while accompanying owners.

The new rules would cost consumers, business and the government altogether almost $11.5 million a year, department economists said.

The Agriculture Department says it could not enforce the rules unless Congress allows it $500,000 and 17 more veterinarians a year.

USDA staff economist J. Dawson Ahalt said the new rules should result in less illness and death among the warm-blooded animals covered: dogs, cats, hamsters, guinea pigs, monkeys, rabbits and others, such as wild animals headed for zoos.

The new rules also should save money by cutting down on damage claims, veterinarian fees and "loss of the investment" when animals die.

To comply with the new regulations, carriers and handlers of the animals would have to spend $40 million on facilities and equipment. Paying that off would cost $5.25 million a year, the department estimated. With added labor costs of $5.7 million annually, the industry's increased costs would total $10.95 million a year, it said.

If the added costs to pet purchasers a year were passed on only through new rates for the 818,000 animals covered each year, "the cost impact could be as high as $18.40 per animal," Ahalt said.

If the costs were spread over rates for all animals shipped each year, including hogs and cattle, the increases could go as low as $6.75 for a dog or cat. The rate within the United States for shipping such an animal is $19.85 now, he said.

The USDA is taking written comments on the proposal until April 22 before issuing a final version. Comments should be sent to Deputy Administrator, USDA, APHIS-VS, Room 708, Federal Building, 6505 Belcrest Road, Hyattsville, Md., 20782.

Applications being accepted for Red Cedar Log positions

Applications are being accepted for paid editorial, business and advertising positions on the Red Cedar Log Yearbook staff for the 1977-78 academic year. Openings that are available include editor-in-chief, assistant business manager, publicity coordinator, copy editor, layout editor, photo editor, reporters and photographers. All positions will begin fall term.

The Red Cedar Log, the official yearbook of MSU, is staffed entirely by students. It is a financially independent University publication and operates on a yearly budget of more than $80,000, which is entirely generated by the staff itself.

Interested students who are qualified for staff positions can apply by sending or bringing a letter of application and a resume to Jack Hillwig, yearbook adviser, School of Journalism, 110 Linton Hall. Applications must be received by April 15 and must include a local phone number. Interviews for the major positions will be held the following week. For further information, contact Hillwig at the School of Journalism.

Crash probe reveals lack of clearance

SANTA CRUZ DE TENERIFE, Canary Islands (AP) — Investigators said Tuesday a KLM jumbo jet was not cleared for takeoff when it sped down the runway and slammed into a Pan American jetliner in aviation's worst disaster. The crash took 575 lives.

The announcements by Dutch and Spanish investigators probing the collision of the two Boeing 747s were made as a U.S. Air Force C130 flew from the island with 58 of the 71 survivors of Sunday's collision, including the Pan American pilot, Capt. Victor Grubbs of Centerport, N.Y.

THE DUTCH PILOT, Capt. Z.A. Vedhuizen van Zanten, was killed in the collision along with the other 248 persons aboard the KLM jet.

U.S. officials said seven of the 68 survivors had asked to leave the plane when it landed at Las Palmas on neighboring Grand Canary island, and the others would continue to McGuire Air Force Base, N.J. The most seriously injured were to be flown to the U.S. Army burn center in San Antonio, Texas.

Franz van Rejsen, head of the investigating team from the Dutch Civil Aviation Authority, said taped conversations between the control tower and the two planes showed the KLM pilot had been given preliminary clearance but not final takeoff clearance.

"BUT THE KLM plane started, which is not in accordance with normal procedure," van Rejsen said in a statement read by a KLM press officer. "We presume there was a misunderstanding in the KLM cockpit regarding the position of the Pan American plane on the runway."

The press officer said he spoke for van Rejsen and not for KLM.

Earlier, Juan Linares, deputy director of Santa Cruz airport, told reporters the Dutch plane "did not receive clearance from the control tower to take off."

In Amsterdam, a KLM spokesman said it would have been "completely unthinkable" for the pilot to have started his takeoff without proper clearance. The spokesman said KLM would hold further comment until it had examined the recorder that tapes cockpit conversations, as well as radio communications. He said the recorder had been impounded by Spanish authorities.

VAN REJSEN SAID the Pan American pilot had been ordered to taxi down the main runway behind the Dutch plane. "It is clear that the Pan Am pilot heard the Dutch pilot say 'I am taking off,'" the investigator said.

In Madrid, the newspaper Pueblo reported the Pan American pilot saw the Dutch plane approaching and screamed over his flight recorder "This man is crazy... What is he doing... He is going to kill us all!" There was no confirmation from official spokespersons.

Van Rejsen said ground fog had reduced visibility to less than 330 yards by the time of the collision. He said the Pan American plane swerved onto the grass verge and KLM plane struck it at a 45-degree angle.

Van Rejsen also said investigators needed to gather more information before blame could be established.

DOUGLAS DREYFUS, head of a U.S. National Transportation Safety Board team, said the Spanish government had agreed to allow the flight recorder and cockpit voice recorder from the Pan American jet to be taken to the United States for examination. He said he understood the in-flight recorder and cockpit voice recorder from the Dutch plane had not been found.

Pan American said 13 survivors stayed behind in Santa Cruz, and the airline was arranging commercial flights back to their homes.

Those who boarded the Hercules C130, a propeller-driven plane, included 28 litter patients, officials said. Those continuing to the United States were to transfer in Las Palmas to a C141 jet for the flight across the Atlantic, the Air Force said.

An Air Force spokesperson estimated the plane would arrive at McGuire about midnight Tuesday EST.

Some of the injured walked aboard the Hercules. Others on stretchers were given injections by Air Force nurses before boarding.

THE EVACUATION plane flew into the Santa Cruz airport over the wreckage, landed on a parallel taxiway.

Earlier Tuesday, the two airlines complained about the Spanish investigation. A spokesperson for Pan American termed an official Spanish report absolving the control tower of responsibility in the collision "premature and uncalled for."

A spokesperson for KLM said the investigation seemed unusually slow.

KLM said it was sending a team of dentists to Santa Cruz to help Spanish authorities identify the remains of the Dutch victims. A spokesperson said 90 per cent of the bodies were burned so badly they can be identified only through dental records.

French insurance companies said they had already paid $20 million to Pan American. The KLM plane was insured for $40 million, the French companies said.

Insurance sources in Las Palmas speculated that the final settlement may cost insurers times as much as any previous air disaster.

International treaties call for a maximum payment of $60,000 for each European passenger and $75,000 for each American passenger killed in an air-

Hitters explode in Texas to balance spring mark

State News/Linda Brody

Kathy DeBoer and the Spartans weren't successful in the National AIAW tournament held March 23 through 26 in Minneapolis. MSU quickly dropped out of that tournament with two consecutive defeats to Tennessee and Utah. The Spartans advanced to the national tourney for the first time after successfully capturing the regional title.

By MIKE LITAKER

State News Sports Writer
Coach Danny Litwhiler promised more power out of the MSU bats this season and the Spartans hitters turned it into a guarantee over spring break in Edinburg, Tex.

MSU dropped five of its first seven outings in Texas before reeling off a four-game win-streak to even its record at 6-6. The Spartans closed out the Southern trip last night with a doubleheader against Pan-American.

After hitting only 20 home runs all last season, the Spartan bats have already pounded out eight roundtrippers, five of those coming from outfielders Jerry Weller and Al Weston.

Litwhiler may have solved some of the questions surrounding the pitching staff with solid performances from Sherm Johnson, Larry Pashnick and Brian Wolcott and improvement from Todd Hubert.

Wolcott went four innings in relief against Wright State to pick up the Spartans' first win of the season, 5-4, thanks to a three-run, ninth inning rally.

The freshman from Plymouth went the distance against Lubbock Christian to gain his second win, 8-6, on a two-run blast by Weller with Ken Robinson on base.

Robinson has been a story in himself in the tough Southern tournament with his timely hitting and has moved Ty Willingham out of the center-field job for the time being.

His solo homer against Pan-Am last Saturday helped the Spartans to a wild 12-10 win with Don Beck coming out of the bullpen for the victory.

Hubert is the only other Spartan hurler to post a pair of wins, his first in almost two years at MSU, and owns the top earned-run-average on the pitching staff with a sparkling 0.84.

The senior righthander beat Wright State 4-2 and Southeast Oklahoma State 11-2.

Weller aided the Wright State conquest with his second homer of the spring while first baseman Randy Pruitt speared a shoe-top liner and turned it into a triple play.

Hubert helped himself with a five-hitter against the Oklahomans, to hand the Savages only their second defeat in 23 ball games. Al Weston provided the firepower with a three-run homer.

Junior righthander Larry

Pashnick strengthened his bid for a starting role this year, evening his record at 1-1 with a 9-5 triumph over Pan-Am. Randy Hop and Weston each homered in the contest.

Hop was the only serious casualty on the trip when he was hit on the hand by a pitch last Saturday against Pan-Am and will be out of action a week to 10 days with a bad bruise. He will be examined for a possible fracture when the team returns to East Lansing this afternoon.

The pain in Hop's hand may have subsided a bit after his replacement, Dave Radke, took the Pan-Am team to downtown Edinburg with a grand-slam home run. Weller clobbered his third homer of the season with two men on after Robinson had hit his solo shot in the home run derby.

Johnson pitched extremely well in his last two outings despite an 0-2 record. The senior southpaw lost a 1-0 heartbreaker to Southeast Oklahoma and tossed seven scoreless frames against Pan-Am on Monday before reliever Jim Cotter was nicked for three runs in the eighth, losing 3-1.

"The pitching seems to be turning around for us," said Litwhiler, who went with Pashnick and slow-starting senior Jim Kniivila last night.

"We've turned the walks around for a change and that's been a help," concurred assistant coach Frank Pellerin.

The rest of the positions are virtually the same since the team went south two weeks ago.

With Robinson's emergence in the outfield, Weller has cemented the designated hitter role on the strength of his potent bat.

"Weller seems to do better when he's not playing regularly being the DH or pinch-hitting. Maybe he gets mad at me and takes it out on the other team," Litwhiler laughed.

Weston has hovered around the .300 mark in the hitting department while pacing the squad with 10 RBIs. Hop and rightfielder Pat Simpson lead the team in hitting, with both players over the .400 mark.

Spartan women quickly bounce from AIAW roundball tourney winning state and national championships for the Spartans in the history of the women's basketball.

Both teams shot well in the first half. Tennessee shot 54 per cent and MSU shot 50 per cent. But the Lady Vols later outdid the Spartans in defense to boost their halftime score of 38-36.

State of Cleveland, Miss., beat Louisiana State, 68-55, in the finals to win the tournament. Tennessee placed third.

"It was no disgrace losing to the University of Tennessee," MSU coach Karen Langeland said. They definitely were a better team."

Both teams shot well in the first half. Tennessee shot 54 per cent and MSU shot 50 per cent. But the Lady Vols later outdid the Spartans in defense to boost their halftime score of 38-36.

"Their aggressive defense stuck to us like glue," Langeland said. "They wouldn't let us run our offense and we didn't make as many shots because of it."

MSU's shooting percentage dropped to 38.5 per cent in the second half below Tennessee's 50 per cent.

Diane Spoelstra led the Spartans scoring with 12. Sue Conlin followed with 11 and Jill Prudden tipped in 10.

Tennessee's 6-foot-2 center, Patricia Roberts, led its fast break and provided a performance which Langeland coined "the best in the country."

The Spartans lost in a consolation game against Utah, 63-62.

"I still haven't figured out why the team played so poorly," Langeland said. "We weren't psyched out because we knew we could finish fifth if we came through in the consolation bracket."

MSU was ahead at the half, 33-25, and by one with 16 seconds to go in the game thanks to a free throw by Karen Santoni. But Utah managed to rebound and score.

Baylor of Waco, Tex., won the consolation bracket, beating Southern Connecticut, 71-69.

In the semifinals of regional competition March 11 the Spartans beat out Ohio State, 75-63, went on to beat Grand Valley, 65-49, and then fulfilled a Langeland prophecy.

"I had said earlier if we took the Ohio State game we would win the tournament and we did," she said. "And they didn't give it to us. We had to work for it."

Kathy Deboer scored 18 points ahead of Prudden's 15 and Spoelstra's 12 against the Bucks.

MSU later worked all players hard for its 90-75 win over Wisconsin-Lacrosse to win the competition March 12.

"We played all 12 players against their seven," Langeland said. "We kept them running with a straight man-to-man defense the whole game. It just tired them out."

Langeland and her squad are pretty tired out themselves after a long, tough season. With a record of 23-6 they will await the next season with hopes of competing at the national level again.

"Participating and watching national competition was a tremendous learning experience," Langeland said. "We are going to be a different team next year."

MSU's Brighton is runner-up, Iowa State wins NCAA title

Sophomore Dennis Brighton took the NCAA All-American title in the 134-pound weight class at the 1977 NCAA Wrestling Championships in Norman, Okla., on Saturday.

Brighton, who was the defending champion, won his first title in the 134-pound class by defeating Iowa State's Rudy Johnson, 7-2, in overtime.

In the semifinals, Brighton avenged an earlier defeat by edging Leroy Smith of Oklahoma State, 2-1, in overtime.

Minnesota's Pat Neu put a stop to Brighton's antics after a disputed referee's decision, 4-2. "Dennis Brighton was a surprise, a very pleasant surprise," Peninger said. "He really came on in the nationals and did a tremendous job."

The Spartans' slate for the 1977-78 campaign reads nine wins and nine losses, seventh in the Big Ten and 17th nationally. Peninger is currently in the midst of the peak of the recruiting season and laments about its inherent drawbacks. However, "If you can't stand the heat, stay out of the kitchen," he said.

Injuries spelled the biggest drawback to any success the Spartans may have had this season and with only two graduating seniors, Peninger can't wait until next year.

Lindsay's 'cheap shots' cost Wings Howe clan?

DETROIT (UPI) — The Howe family has been hurt by "cheap shots" taken against them by new Red Wings General Manager Ted Lindsay and almost certainly won't be signing with Detroit next season, according to Gordie Howe's wife, Colleen.

"Mr. Lindsay took a few cheap shots about things he doesn't even know about," Mrs. Howe said in an interview Monday night with the Chicago Sun-Times that was published in the Detroit Free Press.

"He says there's not room for anyone on his team who takes checks when others are not paid," she said of Lindsay in reference to a report that the Howes, including Gordie and sons Mark and Marty, were paid by Houston of the World Hockey Association when some other team players reportedly were not paid.

She was also angered by comments attributed to Lindsay that he wouldn't trade Detroit's No. 1 pick to Boston for the rights to Mark.

"He said he wouldn't trade," Mrs. Howe said. "Since those are his feelings, then well, I don't know about signing with Detroit. I guess we'll remove that possibility, that is of going to the Wings, unless we hear something from team owner Bruce Norris to the contrary."

Two weeks ago after being named the Red Wings' new GM, Lindsay said, "There's not room on this club for one strong man and one strong woman," apparently referring to Mrs. Howe.

"I don't understand the situation to Mr. Lindsay," Mrs. Howe was quoted as saying. "If I wanted to hire someone, I wouldn't take pot shots at them."

"This is very sad; we are very, very disappointed. We don't like his actions. We won't tolerate this attitude. Maybe, we might be in his way."

She said Boston, which has also been dealing for the Howe family, would like her husband in its organization.

"They've bent over backwards," Mrs. Howe said. Gordie Howe spent 25 years with the Red Wings of the National Hockey League before returning to action with Houston after being offered the chance of fulfilling his dream of playing professional hockey with his sons.

The Red Wings had hoped to lure the Howes to Detroit in hopes of rebuilding the club, currently locked in last place in the Norris Division with the worst record in the league.

final. The first five finishers in each event are named All-Americans.

Senior Stan Mavis just missed qualifying for the mile final as he ran third in his heat in 4:06.8.

"I think it was a fine performance by both of them considering the conditions," stated acting head track coach Jim Bibbs. "It's very difficult to get up as high as they do for the Big Ten meet and then have to do it again a week later at the NCAA. They ought to have two weeks in between."

"But that's not taking anything away from Herb and Randy. With the pressures of the NCAA meet on them, I think they did very, very well."

For Lindsay and Smith it was an indoor season of duplicate distinctions.

Each of them placed fifth in the nationals, won a Big Ten title and registered the second fastest time in the NCAA for their respective events.

Lindsay, a senior from Reed City, won the Big Ten two-mile, but it was a three-mile race in the Maple Leaf Games in Toronto that gave him the second fastest collegiate time of 13:16.4.

Tony Staynys of Western Kentucky recorded the fastest time of 13:11.8, run in that same meet.

Lindsay's three-mile time was also an all-time Big Ten best.

Smith, a freshman from Jackson, won the Big Ten 60-yard dash in 6.17, which placed him second in the country. The only sprinter faster was Greg Edmonds who won the NCAA in 6.12. Olympian Harvey Glance of Auburn ran second at Cobo in 6.18 and had the third fastest time.

Smith also set a collegiate record earlier in the season in the not-so-common 50-meter dash. On that weekend in February, half of the track squad participated in the Central Collegiate Meet in Ann Arbor while the other half went to the Highlander Games in Hamilton, Ont.

Smith tied the Highlander Games' 50-meter dash record of 5.6 which set the collegiate record in the process.

Bibbs explained why Smith was entered in the Highlander Games.

"My 6.1 at the Central Collegiate is the last record I hold," said the former sprint star at Eastern Michigan University.

"So I sent Randy off packing to Canada. He didn't mind anyway," he said.

Men's gymnastics coach Szygula's enthusiasm for the 1978 season.

The Spartans, under Szygula, tied for the national championship in 1958 and won the Big Ten title in 1968, so the MSU head man has an eye on 1978 for a very good reason.

"I'm hopeful, more than anything else," he said.

MSU divers capture All-America berths

MSU diver Dave Burgering repeated as an All-American with a fifth-place finish on the three-meter board in the NCAA finals held March 24 through 26 at Cleveland State.

Jesse Griffin finished seventh in the event to join Burgering in the All-American category, the second consecutive year that two MSU divers have gained the honor. Marc Stiner captured All-American status a year ago but finished down in the competition this year.

The Spartan 400-yard freestyle relay team of Shawn Elkins, Mike Rado, Jim Daw and John VandeBunte eased into the MSU record books despite a 21st place finish at the NCAA meet.

MSU diver Dave Burgering repeated as an All-American with a fifth-place finish on the three-meter board in the NCAA finals held March 24 through 26 at Cleveland State.

An umpiring meeting for those interested in working in MSU's intramural softball league will be held Thursday at 6 p.m. in 208 Men's IM Bldg.

Rules and hiring procedures will be discussed and a high turnout is expected, so attendance is mandatory to become an umpire this spring.

A manager's meeting for the softball league will be held on April 4, 5, and 6 for those wanting a team in the league. The meetings will begin at 6 p.m. in the Men's IM Building sports arena. Rules and entry forms will be given to the managers that must be returned by noon, April 7.

Friday is the deadline for singles ladder paddleball tournament. It will begin at 5 p.m. Monday.

Thomas in top 24 at national contest

Chris Thomas, MSU's sole representative, made the final round and finished in the top 24 in sabre competition at the NCAA Fencing Championships last weekend in South Bend, Ind.

Notre Dame, tourney host, capped its second straight unbeaten season by winning the title, barely defeating defending champion New York University. Wayne State finished third.

Thomas, a junior whose father was a Big Ten champion in sabre in 1955 and '57, grabbed Big Ten honors in the weapon this season, qualifying him for the national tournament.

The meet went pretty much the way Charlie Schmitter, MSU head coach, thought it would.

"The teams that recruit heaviest and spend the most money on fencing finished on top," he said. "They're the big guns."

The MSU mentor hastened to qualify the team's 11-5 record by saying that two of the five defeats were to Notre Dame and Wayne State, one-three nationally.

Schmitter has already begun preparing for next season, losing only three fencers to graduation.

"We're going to get more out of our foil people," he said. "I'm also thinking of putting on a spectator's clinic."

It would consist of four or five intrasquad meets in each weapon (foil, epee and saber) with explanation of rules and scoring as the matches progressed.

school and chairpersons. He said the difference between the proposed bargaining unit by FA and the unit proposed by the administration is 220 faculty members.

Korth said he does not understand why MERC "took such a conservative position."

But Grotz said, "MERC has been clear and consistent" in its ruling since 1972. He cited five different instances in which MERC ruled in favor of the exclusion of chairpersons from the bargaining unit and the inclusion of medical schools.

"The University decision is based on prior MERC rulings. We didn't just make it up," Grotz said.

Grotz said that the unit as proposed by the administration now was agreed to by FA in 1972.

"It was good enough then," he said.

Korth said the FA would compromise and agree to the administration's proposals for the first two issues and would propose to hold separate but concurrent elections by grouping the three medical schools in one unit and the rest of the University into its own unit.

"These are noncompromising issues that have already been decided by MERC," Grotz said.

Funds cut for Navy plan

Ford was still intact. Former Senate Majority Leader William Fitzgerald, D-Detroit, who had often criticized Seafarer in the past, said he thought the subcommittee's action was "good news."

"I'm very pleased that they took that action," he said. "It shows sensitivity to the political climate, although it's turned into a political football lately."

Fitzgerald laughed when he heard of the Navy's promise to continue pursuing Seafarer. He pointed to Carter's campaign promise that Seafarer would not be located in Michigan.

"The Navy may not want to give up, but I'd prefer to have the President on my side rather than some guy in the Navy department," Fitzgerald said.

Project Seafarer has been involved in controversy since the idea was proposed in 1975.

Mismanagement found in unit

"I was given a guided tour of the department and met with many of the employees, so there was nothing clandestine about my visit," Smydra said.

Miller is guilty of violating the ordinance unless he appeals it, Smydra said, but added that the appeal process is stacked against him.

The first appeal is to Donald Perrin, acting director of the Data Processing Department, who wrote the reprimand. Next is Steven Terry, assistant vice president for finance, who is Perrin's superior, and Roger Wilkinson, vice president for business and finance, who is Terry's superior. A hearing involving arbitration by a member of the American Arbitration Association is the last step, Smydra said. Miller is currently on the final step.

If proven guilty, Miller will be considered a security risk for high-level responsibility, as the reprimand remains in his employment record.

Either Wharton or the board of trustees individually could dismiss the reprimand, but both have refused to do so, though no fault could be found with Miller's work and he has been given merit raises and promotions in the past, Smydra said.

Among Miller's allegations was a charge that Perrin is not competent to direct the department because he has not learned the "technical intricacies" of data processing and does not have a college degree. Further, when Perrin took a programmer aptitude test with other employees in 1962, his score was substantially below the passing level and "assumed to be the lowest score recorded for any employee in the department," Miller said.

The Wenner audit found that all personnel salary history forms had been completely retyped to add social security numbers, but that Perrin's test scores and academic background had been omitted from his record.

Acknowledging the legitimacy of many of Miller's charges, Smydra said, "Unfortunately this department (data processing) doesn't always do what's best for the University."

Environmentalists decry costly water projects

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Jimmy Carter's efforts to halt several costly water projects were endorsed Tuesday by environmentalists testifying before congressional committees.

Senate and House Appropriations subcommittees, which earlier heard calls for continuing the projects, were told that the construction caused by the dams and ditches would far outweigh any potential benefits.

Brent Blackwelder, Washington representative of the Environmental Policy Center, urged the Senate panel to "pay close attention to cogent arguments presented" against the projects that Carter has proposed sidetrack on safety, environmental or cost-benefit grounds.

Frank Welsh, a Phoenix civil engineer who is leading the fight against the $1.8-billion Central Arizona Project, called that proposed water system a "waste of hard-earned money."

Welsh said Phoenix, which would be served by the project, already has enough tapped well water to support a population of five million for 100 years of drought. Supporters of the project want cheap, subsidized water for agriculture, even though crops could be more economically grown elsewhere, he told the House subcommittee.

The $457-million Oahe, S.D. irrigation project also came under fire. Tom Fischbach, farmer, said Oahe is a pet project of big banks, concrete companies and equipment manufacturers.

Costs and benefits of the project are far out of line, Fischbach said, because 110,000 acres would be consumed to irrigate 190,000 acres at a cost of $2,000 an acre.

The Senate panel heard specific criticism of Russell Dam in Georgia, Trinity River Project in Texas, Meramec Lake Project in Missouri, the Lukfata Lake Dam in Oklahoma and others.

Ross Clark of Due West, S.C., president of the Upper Savannah River Defense Association, argued that the Army Corps of Engineers has claimed "bogus benefits" for the Russell Dam project.

"The corps attributes 16 per cent of annual benefits to recreation," Clark said. "The Bureau of Outdoor Recreation has repeatedly stated that the project will destroy unusual, higher-value recreation such as stream trout fishing, deer and wild turkey hunting, scientific and nature study in an excellent setting, canoeing."

He conceded there probably would be marginal benefits in the form of power production, but said they were "almost certainly offset by glaringly obvious costs... such as loss of potential industrial sites, unmitigated wildlife losses, permanently degraded water quality, loss of very productive farmland and forests" and others.

Testifying against the Trinity River Project were Edward C. Fritz, chairperson of the Texas Committee on Natural Resources; Howard Saxion, chairperson of the Lone Star Chapter Sierra Club, and James F. White, Dallas, chairperson of Citizens' Organization for a Sound Trinity.

"The President of the United States was absolutely right the first time, when he challenged the Trinity River Project," Fritz said.

Saxion said the $500-million Tennessee Colony Reservoir to be created by the project "would inundate well over 100,000 acres of bottomland hardwoods and riparian (river) habitat, which is rapidly disappearing due to the activities of the Army Corps."

Genetic experiments to begin

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government scientists will conduct potentially risky genetic experiments to see if there is any truth to speculation that so-called "recombinant DNA research" can be dangerous.

Recombinant DNA research involves the new technology of artificially transferring genetic material from one species of organism to another, and recombining it to produce new inherited traits.

Some argue that it can be beneficial, such as in correcting genetic disease or producing new drugs and vaccines. Critics say new and virulent forms of life for which there is no defense could be created and escape into the community.

National Institutes of Health scientists said Monday the risk analysis research probably will begin in June at NIH facilities in Bethesda, Md., and Frederick, Md.

Drs. Wallace Rowe and Malcolm Martin will try to genetically alter cells to be dangerous and to see if the cells harm animals.

The scientists say stringent safety conditions specified by NIH research guidelines should guarantee that the public is not exposed to any risks from the experiments.

Rowe told a briefing of congressional representatives and local officials that there are many ways this new technology could benefit man.

"But, the reason it is being held back is that we don't know the risks," Rowe said. "Now we'll have the opportunity to evaluate any risks in a studied way."

Dr. John Nutter of NIH said the agency is planning a national recombinant DNA research center at Ft. Detrick in Frederick. The facility, formerly used for military biological warfare experiments, belongs to NIH.

Nutter said officials anticipate that the facility can be renovated and equipped for $3 million and operational by the summer of 1979.

A national research facility could be used for further risk studies, for training scientists to do the work elsewhere and as a place for NIH scientists to conduct genetic research.

Paul L. Crum, acting president of the Frederick County Board of Commissioners, said he had received few inquiries from the public about doing this controversial research in his county. Crum said he had no objections as long as the research is tightly regulated.

"If the government doesn't control it, it's going to go on anyway," Crum said. "That's what concerns me. And if anyone's going to do it it should be the government."

Meanwhile, on Capitol Hill, the man in charge of research safety at the National Cancer Institute told a House subcommittee that the general public has never been hurt by infectious material used in biological research in the past.

W. Emmett Barkley said that two primary levels of safety precautions in use for infectious material research in the past would be supplemented by two additional levels of precautions. "The use of secondary facility safeguards, as is required for...

recombinant DNA experiments will make the likelihood of potential hazard to the public and general environment even more remote," he said.

Barkley said safeguards would include isolation of experiments in what is known as the biological safety cabinet, an open-front cabinet with air flowing inward.

Scientists, he said, would wear wrap-around surgical gowns, protective gloves and would have to wash their hands immediately after removing the gloves.

More stringent safety precautions would be required for some kinds of DNA experiments, including conducting all research in enclosed cabinets that are gas tight. Scientists would work by inserting their hands into gloves that are attached to the cabinet.

Institute offering internships

MSU Institute for Research on Teaching (IRT), sponsored by the National Institute of Education, is accepting applications for 10 internships starting in September.

IRT, created in April 1976, designs and implements a variety of programs for research on teaching and dissemination of the knowledge generated by research.

Results of IRT research is disseminated to teachers, teacher-educators and those making educational policy decisions.

IRT is staffed by professors from various departments and people from the State Department of Education.

The institute is seeking interns with at least a bachelor's degree who have a background in various areas from sociology, psychology, anthropology, economics, business, communications or education.

"All interns will participate in the Research on Teaching Training Program and take part in one or more of the institute's research programs."

The internships, which are for the 1977-78 school year, will pay from $408 per month depending on experience and background.

The deadline for applications is April 15. Anyone wanting more information may contact Lawrence Lezotte, project manager, in 203 Erickson Hall.

WILLIAM WINDOM plays "THURBER"

A rare and memorable evening based on the enchanted stories and fables of the American humorist, James Thurber. Best-known for his Emmy Award-winning role in NBC-TV's "My World and Welcome to It," Bill Windom is frequently featured in film ("Brewster McCLOUD"), on stage and TV specials ("Sam Sheppard: Guilty or Innocent") and series ("Police Woman", "All in the Family").

As "Thurber," Mr. Windom uses material in which the author included himself, then turns story teller, holding audiences as only a veteran of numerous movies and Broadway plays can.

CHIPS STACKED IN CITY'S FAVOR

Detroiters snack to fame

DETROIT (UPI) — First it was "Motor City," then "Murder City." Now the town can claim still another nickname, "Muncher City," for its emergence as the largest consumer of potato chips.

Jack Grifo, president of Superior Potato Chips, figures local per capita consumption of the salty snack has reached about seven pounds a year, compared to the national average of four pounds.

"No where else would you find a figure anywhere near that," he said over the roar of machinery that spews out 3,000 pounds of chips an hour in his northwest side plant. "Based on our figures and estimates of competitors, we know Detroit people are No. 1. They love their chips."

Philip Hakim, general manager at Superior, added that not only are Detroiters potato chip gluttons, but they exhibit "extremely discriminating taste" in their choice of chips.

"In the East and Southwest, the consumer prefers a chip that is dark in color and heavily saturated with oil," Hakim said. "My good grief, you couldn't give away a product like that in the Midwest, especially in Michigan."

"The demand in this market is for a dry, crisp chip that is light in color."

Superior is so aware of buyer fussiness that it throws away each chip that is even the slightest bit brown, which indicates a high content of sugar that caramelizes during frying.

Several Superior employees earn their pay just eyeing millions of potato chips that jiggle by on a conveyor belt, making sure each tidbit reaching the bagging machine is light in color.

The unusually competitive potato chip market in Detroit features more than a dozen brands produced by six local manufacturers—Superior, A & P, Wrigley, New Era, Better Made and Frito Lay.

In comparison, Chicago is a one-chip town, and in New York, Frito-Lay and Wise have equal shares of the market. Second to Detroit is Boston with four.

Due to the fierce competition, manufacturers are constantly upgrading their equipment and trying to improve their product. A new $300,000 3,000-pound-an-hour machine is being installed at Better Made to complement a 2,000-pound-an-hour device.

Though Better Made is aware of the local dislike for the brown chips, General Manager Bob Marracino said the firm saves them for special customers.

"There are people here that love them, that come to buy them regularly," Marracino said. "Many people would be angry if we stopped selling them."

Better Made's retail store at its east side plant caters to "regular customers" demanding the freshest chips available. That's where the brown chip mavericks find their treasures.

Among the droves of buyers at supermarkets are other producers, who regularly sample the rival chips to keep up on innovations.

"We've got a whole room of their chips," said Grifo. "Sure we buy them. We want to know, to taste, when something is different."

At Better Made, officials study both chips and packaging. That firm, for instance, has just introduced a new bag that appears to be made of aluminum foil.

Apparently to help the competition analyze the new container, each one has a message reading: "The foil-like material of this bag is designed especially to fight the two major enemies of potato chips — moisture and light."

Competition aside, Better Made and Superior both staunchly defend the product against criticism from nutritionists and weight-watchers.

"It's nutritionally good for you," said Grifo. "It's just potatoes, salt and vegetable oil."

A recent study conducted by the National Potato Promotion Board showed that net usage has declined 4 per cent from a year ago, partly because of "nutritional concerns."
