

Naturalness Cited As Needed Quality In Social Behavior

Miss Toni Taylor, Assistant Editor of McCall's, Tells Co-ed Group That Modern Women With Modern Manners Give Best Impression.

Nothing is as interesting and impressive as a modern woman with a modern manner," said Miss Toni Taylor, entertainment editor of McCall's magazine, in a talk at an open meeting of the Home Economics club Monday night. This was the first meeting of the Personality Clinic which the club is sponsoring, and which will be continued during the first weeks of next term.

Miss Taylor went on to define the modern woman as one who has a code of social behavior of her own which is practical, natural, and useful, drawn more from self-analysis than from etiquette books.

Such a code is part of a person's manner, along with good nature and appearance and a pleasant voice, and it fits a person so she is able to deal quickly and sensitively with all social situations, even if she disregards all the rules.

To get such a code, one must plan for situations ahead of time, and know what is expected in each case. To know what sort of person one wants to be, have a definite picture, and work toward it. Be natural, with no pretence, know how to put other people at ease, have your own opinions and be able to defend them; do not condemn customs as such—all these factors contribute toward the modern manner.

Miss Taylor is in charge of the Personality Clinic and entertainment articles.

which appear in McCall's magazine, and answers questions in letters on all topics from why Alice won't eat her spinach to why someone who had planted tulip bulbs got bogonias. The majority are on questions of manners and etiquette, and she reads part of one from a Japanese girl who was coming to America to be married, asking about our customs here.

In answer to questions, after her talk, she described the process of make-up on McCall's, and told of the various interesting editorial positions which are needed in getting out the publication. She also discussed how to get written material, both fiction and non-fiction, published in women's magazines.

State Orators Are Defeated By Notre Dame

Decision Awarded to Irish Following Arguments on Labor Laws.

Notre Dame defeated State in debate last night when the two teams met in opposition on the question, "Resolved, That Congress should be empowered to fix minimum wages and maximum hours for industry." The decision was returned by Prof. K. G. Hance of Albion college.

The State team, composed of Fred Helen and Donald O'Hara, upheld the affirmative view of the proposition. Notre Dame was represented by Charles Osborne and Thomas Mulligan, who presented the negative arguments.

The affirmative based their arguments chiefly on the need for minimum wage and maximum hour legislation. Quoting statistics and authorities, they cited examples of sweat shop conditions and of low paid wages in certain industries. They also maintained that the people of the United States desired such legislation. "In certain states where minimum wage legislation was ruled unconstitutional, it was enforced even after it was ruled out, simply by force of public opinion," they asserted.

The Notre Dame team attacked the affirmative stand principally on the grounds that it was impractical. They challenged to present a single instance of a successful minimum wage law on a national scale in the United States. They requested a specific plan of minimum wages and maximum hours that the affirmative would endorse as adequate. They quoted authorities who were friends of the affirmative view, but who had misgivings as to the practical difficulties to be met in establishing the plan.

Professor Hance, in giving his decision to the negative, expressed his belief that the Notre Dame debaters were superior to State chiefly on their methods of attack and defense.

When Greek letter ladies and Greek letter gentlemen get together to put on a party, the results will be satisfactory, as the Interfraternity-Panhellenic party Friday night seemed to indicate. Dick Jurgens was enthusiastically received. Everyone grand-marched with spirit. And again, there was a lady, looking alluring in her formal gown.

Rachel Minges, president of Panhellenic council, and her escort, George Daniels, led the grand march. For the occasion, Rachel selected a white taffeta gown on princess lines, and with a drop shoulder effect. It was trimmed with bands of red, in two different shades, around the hemline and on the shoulder straps.

Jack Hamann, president of Interfraternity council, escorted Lois Sherman. Lois wore a violet colored frock on Grecian lines. In the back it was plaited and fell in a graceful train at the hemline. She wore a white orchid at the neckline in front.

Alice Goddard, who was co-chairman of the party, wore a white crepe gown with a smart banded cape. It was cut on fitted lines, and with it, Alice, wore rhinestone accessories. Bart Collins was her escort.

Rex Lamerson, co-chairman from the fraternity group, brought Ardis Nugent as his guest. She wore blue slipper satin. It was cut on full lines, with a huge, flaring skirt, and a square neckline.

Cynthia Krupa wore a light blue chiffon gown. It had a full skirt, and the outstanding feature of the dress was the jacket which was made up entirely of tiny blue petals. Cynthia was with Roy Makiela.

Eleanor Bishop wore an unusual blue crepe gown. It had a train of rose, violet, and green taffeta. This same taffeta was used as trimming around the V-neckline in front. Eleanor's escort was Al Drury from Birmingham.

From the Independent Men's Hop, which was held Saturday night in the Little Theater, we hear about the entertainment presented by showman Larry Hamilton. There were "pieces" and songs, and even an original musical composition.

There is "heat" news lately, too. Tower Guards held a reception in the Women's building parlors for honorary members, alumnae, and members of Morde Board.

The Chi Omega gave a tea for the faculty Sunday afternoon, with their newly elected president, Jennie Blakely, in charge.

At Y. W. C. A. meeting tomorrow night the actresses will be in charge. Two one-act plays will be presented under the direction of Celia Merrill. The public is invited to see these plays. They will be given at 7:30 in the social hall of the Peoples church.

Co-ed Fencers Defeat Wayne In Close Meet

Victory is Second of Year for Team; Plan More Meets Also.

After the meet both teams attended a tea, where the girls from State met Bela de Tucson, coach of the Wayne team, and members of the physical education faculty there. Mr. de Tucson, nationally known fencing master and head of the Salle de Tucson, Detroit fencing school, teaches the girls in a class organized for credit and meeting twice a week.

State's Co-ed Fencing club is an organization of second-year fencers who meet with George Bauer, men's coach, once a week and who take charge of instructing beginning fencers in open W. A. Helen Jepson tells why she chooses Luckies for her voice

LOVELY PRIMA DONNA OF METROPOLITAN OPERA SAYS: "A season of opera and concert means my voice and throat must be consistently in perfect condition. Therefore, although most of my smoking is done while I am on vacation, it is all important to me that I be careful in choosing my cigarette. I smoke Luckies because I enjoy their taste and because I feel it is wiser for me to choose a light smoke for my voice."

Helen Jepson

An independent survey was made recently among professional men and women—lawyers, doctors, lecturers, scientists, etc. Of those who said they smoke cigarettes, more than 87% stated they personally prefer a light smoke. Miss Jepson verifies the wisdom of this preference, and so do other leading artists of the radio, stage, screen and opera. Their voices are their fortunes. That's why so many of them smoke Luckies. You, too, can have the throat protection of Luckies—a light smoke, free of certain harsh irritants removed by the exclusive process "It's Toasted". Luckies are gentle on the throat.
