New laws provide taxcut, drought aid

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Jimmy Carter signed legislation Monday cutting $5 billion from the tax bill of low- and middle-income taxpayers and simplifying the tax filing procedure for nearly every-

He also signed a bill speeding $225 million grants and loans to drought-stricken communities in the West.

The tax measure, part of the President's unbalanced economic stimulus package, will provide an overall $34.1 billion in tax cuts over the next 28 months. Its benefits will be felt as early as next week when some tax withholding on paychecks is increased, increasing take-home pay.

One of the great pleasures of a president to reduce taxes, get our economy going and simplify tax forms," Carter said after signing the legislation at the White House Rose Garden ceremony in the presence of congressional leaders.

The bill will cut an average of $2.13 from the weekly payroll tax withholding of 10 million people claiming the new standard deduction. It will eliminate tax payments of $3.3 million low-income families. But 2.2 million single Americans earning more than $7,500 and claiming the standard deduction will pay an average of $1 more a week. Carter said the legislation would reduce about $200, or 30 per cent, the amount of some taxes paid by a family of four earning $10,000. He called that "a very great benefit to the American average family."

He said 80 per cent of the cut would benefit people earning less than $15,000 annually.

The tax cut bill originally included Carter's $50 rebates for nearly all Americans, but Congress deleted the rebates after Carter decided last month they were no longer needed to stimulate the economy.

The legislation, which is retroactive to the beginning of 1977, will make it advantageous for 6.7 million taxpayers who have itemized their deductions to use the standard deduction. The deduction will be $3,200 for married couples filing joint returns and $2,200 for single persons and heads of households.

It used to range from $2,100 to $2,800 for the couples and from $1,700 to $2,400 for single persons and heads of households.

The new law also extends through 1978 the earned income tax credit, which Carter said would "reward hard work" by persons at low income levels. To boost employment, it provides a tax credit to businesses enlarging their work forces in 1977 and 1978.

Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., chairperson of the House Ways and Means Committee, which writes the tax laws, said "the net product is one that will do the job we intended to do."

Carter complimented the lawmakers for the speed with which they acted on the tax measure.

The drought legislation is one of several measures designed to relieve the worst effects of the West's water shortage. The legislation allows the Commerce Department to make loans and grants to communities with at least 10,000 residents that have been hit hardest by the drought. Smaller communities are aided by already existing law.

The money can be used to dig new wells in smaller cities, repair viaducts and buy and transport emergency water supplies "to overcome the consequences of the drought," Carter said.

The money, he added, would provide immediate relief and must be used on projects that will be completed by next April.

Carter visited a peach, almond and olive farm outside of Fresno, Calif., last Tuesday to observe the effects of the drought.

Seated in the lush Rose Garden, Carter recalled that he found western water levels dropping, streams drying up, reservoirs down to 25 per cent of their capacities and mountaintops, normally covered by four or five feet of snow, bare.

Sen. Quentin Burdick, D-N.D., said the bill would be "a very valuable tool in meeting this problem."

Boy, is it hot! Wow, is that cool! Karen Antilla and Chris Burns found a way to cool off without going to the crowded pool or all the way to Lake Michigan. Frolicking in the Horticulture Gardens' sprinklers isn't as popular as going to the pool, but if this hot weather keeps up, it may well be the coolest place on campus.

Dayton Hudson mall saga continues with hearing

By MICHAEL ROUSE
State News Staff Writer
Tonight the East Lansing City Council is holding a public hearing on an ordinance to rezone land for the Dayton Hudson mall.

The ordinance would rezone about 86 of the 170 acres of agricultural land in western East Lansing acquired by Dayton Hudson Properties to commercial use.

The proposed mall would have two levels, 100 stores, two anchor department stores and would open in mid-1980 if rezoning is approved.

The hearing is at 7:30 p.m. in the Hannah School auditorium, 819 Abbott Road. It will be broadcast live on Cable Channel 11.

The following is a history of the Dayton Hudson developments in East Lansing.

In 1960 the land in the northwestern part of East Lansing was an idle field dotted by patches of swamp. It still is, since then the land has been under the eyes of Dayton Hudson Properties in preparation for the day when ground would be broken for a shopping mall and commercial area.

The Comprehensive Plan 1980 for the city development was adopted in May and includes a proposed research park on the land north of Lake Lansing Road and between Abbott Road and S.S. 127.

The research park, which was to broaden the tax base, never got off the ground because East Lansing could not compete with other cities offering free services to lure a corporation here.

At that time, though, a cross-campus highway, an 18-hole golf course in Abbott Park and an MSU student enrollment of 66,000 were envisioned — all of which have fallen by the wayside and have tarnished the credibility of the plan.

Dayton Hudson Properties — through its land holding company, Shopping Centers, Inc. — began purchasing various parcels of private land in 1967.

The Lake Lansing Road site had been considered for a mall since 1960, based on Dayton Hudson's retail market evaluations.

The city manager at the time, John Patriarche, received the rezoning request in July 1976 and the city attorney looked into legal procedures for annexing land in Lansing Township to keep the entire mall within East Lansing.

Dayton Hudson representatives have been researching the rezoning procedure for at least two years before then.

Consultant studies were already near completion — evaluating the retail market for the need for a mall and the impact on the city's finances, environment and traffic.

In October 1976, Dayton Hudson Properties made its pitch to the City Council and unveiled the architectural and consultant reports.

The city planning staff issued a report January 24 on the rezoning request that recommended the approval of a zone change for most of the land requested.

The report is a comprehensive evaluation of data on soil and drainage in the northwestern area, city utilities and services, the economic impact, traffic impact and land use, and it includes a cost-benefit analysis.

Late in January, the Lake Lansing Road widening issue heated up. Planning Director Scott Radway said the scheduled widening would not be sufficient for Lake Lansing Road to handle the onslaught of traffic from the mall and the anticipated surrounding commercial and residential development.

At a City Council public hearing Feb. 1 on the widening question, most residents favored widening the pot-holed thoroughfare, but some said the widening would be a tacit approval of the mall.

Another public hearing was held Feb. 9, this time before the planning commission on the Dayton Hudson issue itself.

Most of the comments were against the mall and its potential impacts on the environment, roads and surrounding municipalities.

Lansing Mayor Gerald Graves proposed that the mall be located in a place where the financial benefits would be more widely dispersed among localities in the region.

Jim Anderson, coordinator of the Citizens for a Livable Community (CLC) environmentalist group, called for an environmental impact statement before any action is taken on the rezoning of land.

Also in early February, the planning commission was looking into the possibility of upgrading the commercial zone requested by Dayton Hudson Properties so the commission could review the site plans of all building permits requested.

In addition to CLC asking for a stall in the rezoning decision, MSU-PURGIM in March called for more studies of the economic impact, drainage problems in the area, air quality and energy consumption and land use planning.

On April 2 members of the planning commission took a tour of several other Dayton Hudson malls in the state to evaluate the impact of the malls on the surrounding areas.

At the April 13 planning commission, a stunning move put the Dayton Hudson (continued on page 8)

High court refuses to hear appeals

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court virtually cleared the way Monday for the conviction of Gen. John Mitchell and White House aide H.R. Haldeman to go to prison for their part in the Watergate scandal.

The justices, without explanation and after recorded disagreements, refused to hear the appeal of Mitchell, Haldeman and D. Ehrlichman, another top aide to President Richard M. Nixon.

Haldeman has been an inmate at a prison camp in Arizona since last month. But Mitchell, once the nation's top enforcement official, and Haldeman remained free pending appeal since the convictions more than two years ago.

Mitchell, 63, and Haldeman, 50, could be in prison within a month.

They have 25 days in which to ask the court to reconsider the decision and to file for all three men indicated that they probably will seek reconsideration.

The hearing request is made or if one is made, the justices will send the case back to the lower court. Judge John J. Sirica presided over the Watergate cover-up trial, ordering Mitchell and Haldeman to

Though college drug use fading, pot, booze still popular at MSU

By KARLA VALLANCE
State News Staff Writer
It's true. The college drug scene is fast becoming a relic of the past.

Marijuana and alcohol are still a way of life for many MSU seniors. More than half of the students surveyed drink at least once a week and just about half smoke marijuana at least "occasionally." The image of the acid-dropping, coke-snorting collegian is, however, definitely a false stereotype.

About 80 per cent of the respondents in a survey of 361 MSU seniors "don't use and have never used" barbituates (downers), amphetamines (uppers or speed), tranquilizers, mescaline, cocaine or LSD. Only 5 per cent have used the hardest stuff, heroin.

While almost half of the respondents smoke marijuana at least occasionally, a surprising 21 per cent used to smoke, but quit. Over a quarter of the seniors have never smoked grass. That divides the seniors just about evenly between smokers and nonsmokers.

However, it is clear that even some of the nonpot smokers want to take the legal sting out of the weed: nearly 70 per cent of the students want to see marijuana either legalized or decriminalized.

A marijuana decriminalization bill should come out of a legislative committee this week and onto the floor of the Michigan House of Representatives for debate.

Six states have decriminalized the use of marijuana: Oregon, Alaska, Maine, Colorado, California and Ohio all provide for traffic ticket-like citations and small fines rather than arrests and jail sentences.

Some of the answers to the marijuana legalization question added stipulations.

"Legalized, no — decriminalized, yes," wrote a male accounting major who smokes occasionally himself.

"It should remain controlled at least as much as alcohol, but the possession or usage of it should not be a crime," said a nonsmoking female zoology major. "It should be legalized, but taxed as cigarettes," wrote a nonsmoking male social work major.

A nonsmoking medical technology major wanted even tighter controls: "It should be dispensed from a pharmacy — some control should be present," she wrote.

MSU compares generally with the national drug use trend noted (continued on page 8)

THEATRE DEPT. NEVER SECURED PERMISSION 'Fiddler' preview may be illegal

By JOE PIZZO
State News Staff Writer
The curtain went up on what was termed a "special preview" of the Performing Arts Company (PAC) production of "Fiddler on the Roof" Monday night in what is probably a direct violation of U.S. Copyright Code. Amateur rights for the performance were not obtained from Music Theatre International in New York, according to a spokesperson for the theatrical leasing agency.

"We'll get in touch with the people involved (in producing the show) and they'll have to pay a royalty," Greg Smith, assistant to the president of Music Theatre International told the State News Monday.

"It's unprofessional — especially for a (university) department training students in the theatre," he added.

Although MSU Theatre Department chairperson Frank C. Rutledge said arrangements had been made to pay the additional $500 royalty fee for Monday night's performance, a subsequent check with the leasing agency found no trace of contact with the Theatre Department or the PAC.

Title 17 of the U.S. Copyright Code prohibits the performance of dramatic works for profit unless permission is secured and royalties paid to the copyright holder.

Rutledge said the decision to open the show one day early was made in a production meeting "around May 12 or 13" and the leasing agency, contacted at that time, agreed to extend the rights for another night and would accept additional royalty payment at a later, unspecified date.

"According to records in the file," Smith said after checking the validity of Rutledge's claim, "We have licenses for five performances — May 24 through 28 — but nothing for May 23 (Monday)."

Any changes in the original agreement would have been noted and on file, he said.

"This is not a performance, it's a special preview," John Baldwin, professor of theatre and director of the production said Monday when reached for comment an hour before curtain time.

The production of "Fiddler" was advertised to the MSU community in Monday's State News as a "special preview" available for $2 admission or a PAC season coupon.

Smith said this met the legal definition of a performance.

"If it's read before one person, it's a performance," he added.

The Theatre Department came into conflict with another leasing agency — Samuel French, Ltd., of New York — last month when the PAC attempted to stage Peter Shaffer's "Equus" without having obtained rights from the agency.

Last-minute intervention by Samuel French, Ltd., resulted in the cancellation of play's scheduled run in Fairchild Theatre, because the agency would not release rights for sale in Michigan before the July 1 scheduled release date.

Smith said there was a difference between the copyright conflict over "Equus" and Monday night's performance of "Fiddler," because rights to "Fiddler" are freely available in Michigan.

Carter proposes land economy

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a special message to Congress, President Jimmy Carter insisted on Monday that the nation can take strong action to protect the environment without endangering the economy.

To underscore his commitment, Carter directed federal agencies to discourage construction and development in floodplains and wetlands.

The President said this would avoid both environmental damage and economic losses.

Carter's 36-page environmental message offered few new policy departures. But he announced or proposed several steps "to build upon Congress' admirable record" by expanding and strengthening present environmental programs.

Carter showed no inclination to back down on the nation's existing air and water quality goals in the face of industry complaints that they are too costly and may hamper economic and energy production.

"I believe environmental protection is consistent with a sound economy," Carter declared.

Environmental measures "like energy conservation, reclamation of stripmined lands and rehabilitation of our cities" will produce new jobs, he added.

Carter reaffirmed his support of Clean Air Act amendments to protect existing high-quality air regions; to apply "best available" pollution controls to new facilities and to limit automobile emissions.

Carter's new actions included: Executive orders for federal agencies to refuse support for development projects in floodplains or wetlands unless there is no practical alternative.

An executive order to close selected public lands to the use of off-road vehicles such as snowmobiles and dune buggies where they can cause serious environmental damage.

A directive to the secretaries of commerce and state to ban whaling within the United States' 200-mile offshore fishing zone, coupled with continued U.S. efforts to achieve international protection of whales.

Genes altered to make insulin

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Controversial experiments in altering genes have resulted in a major breakthrough — scientists turning ordinary bacteria into factories capable of producing insulin.

Scientists at the University of California-San Francisco reported Monday that within six months they may be able to utilize bacteria colonies to produce the drug essential to the survival of 1.5 million diabetics.

A research team headed by Drs. Howard M. Goodman and William J. Rutter said it had successfully taken the special genes that produce insulin out of rats and spliced them into ordinary bacteria that cannot on their own produce insulin.

The next step is to splice human insulin genes into the bacteria. The feat opens the door potentially to further genetic engineering of splicing, or transferring genes from one species to another.

Bacteria might become factories to make antibiotics or other drugs. Plants might be given the ability to make nitrogen out of the air rather than needing expensive and scarce fertilizers.

Some scientists think this ability to put genes together in different ways — called recombinant DNA research — would be a scientific landmark comparable to the atomic age.

Likud bloc leader put in cardiac unit

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Menahem Begin, first in line to be Israel's next prime minister, was placed in a hospital cardiac unit Monday after being ill but doctors said he had not suffered a new heart attack. He had one two months ago.

"There is not any evidence of a heart attack," said Dr. Shlomo Laniado, head of Ichilov Hospital's cardiac section. Laniado described Begin's condition as "good, very good," but said he would keep Begin under observation for several days.

The doctor said it would be "premature" to speculate on Begin's ability to continue his political activities.

Begin, 63, who heads the right-wing Likud bloc, was stricken with a heart attack in March during the long Israeli election campaign. He was hospitalized for three weeks after the attack.

In another development, Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin announced that he would go back to work today. Rabin went into semiretirement in early April after he admitted he and his wife Leah kept illegal bank accounts in the United States.

Rabin told a television interviewer he felt it was his duty "to bring the government's activities to a conclusion, . . . ensuring that everything is handed over by the outgoing prime minister to his successor."

But Begin's illness raised speculation on who that successor would be. Likud leaders said they were confident Begin would be back in action soon. They said he appeared well and joked when he awoke Monday after a restless night under sedation.

"I have no doubt he will have the strength to carry on," said Yechiel Kadishai, a friend and spokesman for Begin.

If Begin should be unable to carry on his work, another Likud member would be named to fill his seat in the parliament, or Knesset. The right to form a government would fall to whomever the party chooses.

Likud leaders said they would go ahead with plans to meet today with Prof. Yigael Yadin, leader of the Democratic Movement for Change (DMC), to negotiate a possible coalition.

The DMC won 15 Knesset Seats in the May 17 national election while Likud received 43. Begin had been confident he could form a majority in the 120-seat Knesset with his party, the 12 seats of the National Religious Party, 5 seats from two ultrareligious parties and 2 from Ariel Sharon's Shlomzion party.

But Likud leaders kept alive the hope of forming a wider coalition including the DMC. Coalition-building was only one of the tasks that kept Begin extremely busy. He was up all night last Tuesday watching election results.

On Thursday he visited a controversial Jewish settlement in the occupied West Bank and declared the West Bank to be "liberated land of Israel."

On Sunday he spent 2 1/2 hours with the new U.S. ambassador, Samuel W. Lewis. He became ill around midnight, Laniado said, and decided to go to the hospital.

The state radio said Begin dressed himself and walked to the car in which he was driven to the hospital.

S. Moluccan terrorists holding Dutch hostages

ASSEN, The Netherlands (AP) — Two South Moluccan terrorist squads armed with sub-machine guns were holding 105 children hostage in a country school and 50 persons captive aboard a hijacked train in the northern Netherlands Monday night, authorities said.

The attackers, virtually repeating a similar double terrorist action of 18 months ago, apparently were making a new bid to force the Dutch government to help them gain independence from Indonesia for their Asian island homeland, once a Dutch colony.

The tandem attacks, launched almost simultaneously two days before the Dutch general elections, occurred about 10 miles from each other in the farm country outside this small city. Police said there were believed to be six South Moluccans in one group and seven in the other.

There were no reports of casualties, though authorities said shots were fired at both locations. At the school, where six teachers were also being held, the gunmen were allowing food and drink to be brought in.

The terrorists issued no immediate demands, but Dutch Justice Minister Andreas an Agt said he understood that letters from the gunmen were on their way to government officials.

In the southern Dutch town of Vaardingen later Monday, police took six Moluccans into custody for questioning after they were seen waiting at the station as a train approached. Police said it was suspected that another hijacking may have been planned there.

The Dutch cabinet scheduled an emergency meeting Monday night and Premier Joop den Uyl went on television to condemn what he called "a horrible act of terror." He said the elections would go on.

In raids in December 1975, two South Moluccan gangs held a train and the Indonesian consulate in Amsterdam for more than two weeks, demanding that the Netherlands agree with Indonesia to obtain independence for the South Moluccan Islands. Four hostages were taken.

The South Moluccans formerly called the Islands, and the rest of Indonesia were once Dutch-held East Indies, an archipelago in Southeast Asia. The South Moluccans are Indonesia's eastern tip.

The Dutch have said there is little they can do for the South Moluccans because they lack control over the one-time colonies. Police said six raiders seized the elementary school at Bovensmilde, four miles south here, as classes were beginning. The school is near a housing complex where 500 Moluccans live, and the gunmen quickly released about 15 South Moluccan children, authorities said.

The gunmen held the schoolchildren in two rooms, where they were covered inside of the windows with paper, police said. They said the terrorists opened fire twice when local South Moluccans tried to talk them and when technicians approached building in an effort to set up a telephone between the school and police. No one was injured.

A crowd of anxious parents who flocked to the scene tried to rush the building shortly noon but were held back by police lines about yards from the school.

Dutch radio quoted one father as saying he had been tension lately between the Moluccan and Dutch communities in Bovensmilde.

The train, bound from The Hague to Groningen, was stopped and taken over by young men and one young woman near the village of Onnen, about 6 miles north of Assen.

New officer to assume Korean post

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The United Nations Command Monday announced the appointment of U.S. Rear Adm. Warren C. Hamm Jr. as its senior delegate to the Korean Military Armistice Commission, replacing Maj. Gen. John K. Singlaub.

President Jimmy Carter removed Singlaub on Saturday as U.S. military chief of staff in Korea for publicly criticizing Carter's plan to pull 32,000 American ground troops out of Korea.

Singlaub had also held the post of chief U.S. Command delegate to the armistice commission. Hamm, 49, a native of St. Albans, Vt., became commander of U.S. naval forces in Korea on May 6. He will continue to hold the post.

Guerrillas claim kidnaping responsibility

BILBAO, Spain (AP) — A Basque guerrilla group Monday claimed responsibility for the kidnaping of industrialist Javier Ybarra in notes delivered to newspapers and radio stations.

Ybarra, 64, head of a family considered among Spain's wealthiest, was abducted last Friday from his home on the outskirts of this city in the Basque region of northern Spain by two men posing as ambulance attendants.

The note from the separatist group ETA — letters abbreviating "Basque Land and Liberty" in the Basque language — attacked the government of Premier Adolfo Suarez for police repression of Basque demonstrations last week. Five demonstrators were killed and scores injured in the unrest.

Teacher asks halt to child pornography

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pornography involving children is a booming new industry that should be curbed by tightening both federal and state laws, an investigating congressional subcommittee was told Monday.

"Let's be clear what we are talking about," Frank Osanka told the House Judiciary subcommittee on crime. "I am referring to books, pamphlets, playing cards, and 8-millimeter films which vividly depict children in sexual poses and-or in explicit sexual acts with each other or with adults. Much of the materials have clear themes of sodomy and masochism."

Osanka teaches a course in prevention of child abuse, largely to law enforcement officers, at Lewis University, Lockport, Ill.

EPA AWARDS PROJECT GRANT Sode predicts lake to be dredged soon

By ED LION
State News Staff Writer

The long-awaited project to dredge Lake Lansing should get under way this summer, Ingham County Drain Commissioner Richard Sode predicted Monday.

An announcement Friday that the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) would grant about $450,000 more toward the project opens the way for dredging to begin, he said.

The project to dredge sediment clogging up the 535-acre lake has been in the offing off and on again since 1923. By dredging the lake, county officials hope to clean up the water quality and restore biological equilibrium for the fish population.

The project already has the approval of the state Department of Natural Resources and the Michigan Environmental Review Board. But before the estimated 1.7 million cubic yards of dredged-up sediment is to be dumped on specially designated areas, the approval of the EPA and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers is needed.

"I don't think we'll have any problems," Sode said. "I'd give approval within 30 days."

Last year the project got bogged down after an environmental study revealed sediments dredged from the lake were to be dumped on marshlands and their environmental nature would be altered. So the commission had to search for new land to dispose the sediments and now Sode said the new areas "if anything, will be improved by the sludge disposal."

The project will take three years once it is started. The costs are set at about $2.5 million. Half of that will be paid by the EPA and the other half will come from Ingham County.

The county has already appropriated $400,000 in its budget for the project and it still must decide how the rest will be raised. Options include establishing user's fees at Lake Lansing, budgeting more general county money toward the project or raising taxes to homeowners in the area that benefit from the project.

Friday's announcement granting another $450,000 from the EPA was needed to raise the $2.5 million. Initially, the county had only asked for about $800,000 in federal funds, but rising costs increased the price of the project.

The dredging will increase the lake from an average depth of six feet to 12 feet. Officials say taking the sludge out is necessary to clean the polluted waters that had been contaminated by runoff over the years.

Dense underwater plant growth brought about by runoff of nutrients into the lake will also be dredged. This will help stop the aging of the lake and will restore the fish population back to normal. The undergrowth had enabled small fish to hide from potential predators, decreasing the lake's food supply and stunting normal fish population patterns.

The dredging is part of a larger program to restore the entire lake area. The County Department of Parks and Recreation has a 10-year goal to turn 700 acres close to the lake into parks. Presently only 40 acres near the lake are set aside for recreation.

Dansville woman charged with the murder of her husband may make the focus of the committee for a cause as that of the Joanne Little case.

Area groups have formed a committee for Francine Hughes, 29, charged with both felony and first-degree murder of James B. Hughes, 31. Hughes was killed in a March 9 fire in the house where she had been living with their four children.

The Francine Hughes Defense Committee will use the case to focus attention on battered wives.

According to testimony at her District Court arraignment, Hughes arrived at the Ingham County Sheriff's Department on the night of the blaze crying, "I did it. I did it. He was sleeping and I set the bed on fire."

Arson-murder case draws attention, spurs local defense group formation

Her husband was found just outside the bedroom of the burning home. Pathologist Laurence Simson Jr. ruled the death was the result of carbon monoxide poisoning and toxic fume inhalation.

Onnie Selin, a detective sergeant with the Michigan State Police Department, said at the arraignment that a gasoline can was found just inside the living room. Hughes had brought the cap to a metal container with her to the sheriff's department, according to Lt. Albert Janutola.

Janutola also testified that a police officer had been sent to the Hughes home on the domestic call on the day of the fire.

The two oldest Hughes children said at the arraignment that their father had struck their mother several times on the day of the fire and that he had ripped up the books she was using in classes at Lansing Business University.

Christy, 12, said her father had often hit her mother.

The defense committee was formed when the Lansing chapter of the National Lawyer's Guild became aware of the case, according to guild member Nelson Brown.

"It raised a lot of questions about battered women and sexism," he said.

Joining the defense committee's efforts are the Kitty Genovese Memorial Anti-Rape Collective, the Ingham Democratic Women's Organization, the National Organization of Women, the New American Movement and the Sisters for Human Equality.

The defense group is working as a liaison between the community and Francine Hughes' attorney. Subcommittees have been formed to deal with public education, legal research, funding and personal support.

"The criminal justice system is very anti-woman for one thing," Julie Maki, member of Kitty Genovese, said when she was asked why the defense committee was formed. "Police have never been sympathetic toward battered women."

Linda Ojala, a member of the lawyer's guild, said she sees the case as a question of women's rights to self-defense.

"Women are not brought up to learn how to defend themselves," she said. "The whole criminal justice system is set up on what a reasonable man would do. The system says it's unreasonable to use a dangerous weapon — for a woman, it might not be unreasonable."

A letter of personal support has been written to Francine Hughes, who is being held in the Mason County Jail without bond. Her lawyer, Aryan Greydanus, said he expects her trial will not be held before August.

Committee members are also planning letter-writing campaigns across the country to solicit funds and raise people's awareness of the case and the problem of battered women.

"This is of national importance, it really is," Brown said.

A defense committee was formed in the Lansing area in 1975 when women's groups across the country rallied to the defense of Joanne Little, a black woman who had killed her white jail guard in North Carolina. Little, who was later acquitted, said that she killed the guard in self-defense as he tried to rape her.

Anti-Iran film rally set

Committee to Stop the MSU Iran Project will hold a rally at 11 a.m. at Beaumont Tower.

The committee is seeking support in a campaign to get the board of trustees to terminate the film project contract with the Iranian government.

The committee is also planning to present petitions and speeches to the trustees at the Thursday night board meeting.

Zolton Ferency, professor of criminal justice, will speak at the rally.

Cabinet to propose added fee for full legal program service

By NUNZIO M. LUPO
State News Staff Writer

Legal Services Cabinet of the MSU Student Board will propose tonight to ask students to pay $1 more per term to fund a comprehensive legal program.

McAdams, cabinet codirector, said he would have to approve putting the program before students by the end of the summer. The referendum could be a special referendum or held at fall registration.

Legal Services is proposing a legal program for students that would employ four full-time student lawyers, eight para-legal assistants, a legal secretary, two codirectors and one budget director.

"There's not doubt in my mind that there's a need for it," he said. "The number of students we have to turn away is incredible."

In a detailed report given to the Student Board last week, salaries were projected at a total of about $75,560 for the staff. This total would not include the operating costs of the office.

McAdams said the $1 was not yet certain but that it looked like that amount would be needed from students each term to fund the office.

"It will be very, very cheap in comparison" to other legal assistance programs, he said. Programs available through companies similar to the one being offered cost as much as $30 a year, he said.

The legal assistance would also be available to graduate students but only in a limited form until winter term 1978 when the Council of Graduate Students could also hold a referendum. ASMSU cannot assess student taxes for graduate students.

The office would be able to handle many types of student problems with the exceptions of profit-making businesses, fee generating cases, drafting of will and real estate matters, according to the report.

The report details how the office and its governing and personnel board will be set up as well as standards under which the student attorneys will be hired.

The report also outlines a review system for students to rate the attorneys and the effectiveness of the program. There will also be an attorney review board under the proposal composed of the ASMSU Student Board president, director of Legal Services Cabinet, the Legal Services budget director and a member of the Judicial Programs Office.

McAdams said he hoped the program would get under way before the end of the school year so it could be in "fullswing" by next March.

McAdams and codirector Greg Hoyle will both be at MSU this summer to work on the program if it is approved by the Student Board and the students.

The report given to the Student Board examines programs available at other colleges, demonstrates the need for it, establishes the legal basis for it and proposes the program.

Black issues to be focus of poet's talk

Madhubuti (Don L. Lee) will lecture at 7:30 in the Erickson Hall kiva, as part of Black Unity Week and to celebrate the spirit of Pan-Africanism on an appropriate day (African Liberation Day).

Madhubuti is internationally known as a poet, publisher and political analyst. He is currently a resident at Howard University, Washington, D.C., and Editor of Third World Press, a Black Book Bulletin.

Madhubuti is perhaps best known for his militant writings of the '60s, when he wrote such as Imamu Baraka (LeRoi Jones) and Sonia Sanchez and Nikki Giovanni setting the stage for the American Black Movement.

Madhubuti is also the director of the Institute of Positive Education (IPE), a school for youngsters at the preschool, elementary and secondary levels.

The topic of Madhubuti's lecture is "The Black World: Contemporary Issues."

The Office of Black Affairs is sponsoring Madhubuti's visit. The public is invited to attend and admission is free.

Visitors to China slated to speak on law, women

Two frequent visitors to the People's Republic of China will be on campus today to speak about the status of women and the law in that country.

Margaret Whitman, a member of actress Shirley MacLaine's women's delegation to China, will answer questions after the showing of the MacLaine film, "The Other Half of the Sky: A China Memoir," tonight at 7:30 in 104B Wells Hall.

Whitman was part of MacLaine's delegation of 15 American women to visit China in 1975, said Joselyne Slade Tien, a member of the United States-China People's Friendship Association, which is sponsoring her visit.

Frank Pestana, a Los Angeles lawyer, will speak on "Law and Justice in the People's Republic of China" at 3 p.m. this afternoon in 101 S. Kedzie Hall.

Pestana will discuss the "social control and legal procedures" of the country though it is "nothing like ours" Tien said.

He has just returned from his sixth visit to China, which was a tour for several West Coast judges. He is sponsored by the MSU School of Criminal Justice.

Both speakers are available because they were in Michigan for a meeting of the Steering Committee of the National United States-China People's Friendship Association. "We could afford to get them," Tien said.

Rally Wednesday against Iran film project

At 11 a.m. Wednesday near Beaumont Tower, the Committee to Stop the MSU-Iran Film Project will hold a rally to voice its opposition to the films being produced at MSU.

All students and faculty are urged to attend the rally. This may prove to be the primary thrust to get the board of trustees to halt the controversial project.

We would hope that student apathy will not scuttle the rally as it has other worthwhile causes in the past. It is time for all of the self-proclaimed "liberal"-minded students who boast support of human rights and civil liberties to demonstrate their true sentiments, especially when the Iran film project directly affects MSU students.

The so-called celluloid "education" being reeled off by the instructional media center is becoming little more than a grade-B travelog which shows what Iran is not.

Iran simply is not and never will be the glorious Persia that the project director, M. Ali Issari, is attempting to emulate through the film project.

The MSU-Iran film project will not help the Iranian people overcome the degrading social and political conditions which now prevail under the Shah's dictatorship.

Moreover, there are no guarantees that the Iranian people will ever see the films once in the hands of the Shah's government.

Realistically, the film project is nothing more than a calculated scheme to give credibility to a repressive regime, complete with MSU's signature, something both the Shah and his friends in the Pentagon would like to have.

MSU has a long history of abetting oppressive governments, despite claims to the contrary. The University's bottom-line motivation is rather openly financial, and it is a discouraging sight to see MSU pocket money at the expense of the human rights of others.

The committee's efforts, despite an overly dogmatic tint, should not go unnoticed or unsupported. The much-touted "educational value" of international programs such as the film project needs to be questioned.

Politics are laced throughout the project despite claims that the films are free of all politics. It is really quite preposterous to even consider a claim of political sterility when the politics of those involved seem to bleed through.

The committee will go before the board of trustees on Thursday to tell why the curtain must come down on the Iran films. Hopefully, the trustees will not suffer from tunnel vision.

Beef up sagging legal services

Any time government gropes for more money, the people should protect their pocketbooks with unmitigable zeal.

A proposed ASMSU tax increase, however, appears to be a worthy project. Today the ASMSU Student Board will consider putting a $1 tax increase on a referendum. Each student would be taxed $1 per term to beef up the ASMSU executive cabinet of Legal Services which is abysmally lacking.

Presently, students seeking professional legal help have to meet with the ASMSU attorney, Ken Smith, who comes in only one afternoon a week. A student must pay $3.50 for 15 minutes of Smith's time. Undergraduate students, working as volunteer assistants, may advise and represent students at University hearings and work on researching legal questions. But the biggest part of the present service is simply referrals to outside agencies.

The new plan, however, would marshal the forces of four full-time attorneys who could assist students with cases other than those producing revenue, dealing with profit-making businesses, drafting of wills or real estate matters.

The bulk of the expected cases would be landlord-tenant conflicts which now comprise 60 to 70 per cent of all calls. The attorneys would also handle misdemeanor and consumer fraud cases.

The four $15,000-a-year attorneys would be assisted by a staff of eight para-legals. Students would not be charged for visits.

An additional tax of $1 per term is not much to ask to transform an effective and feeble Legal Services program into one that may have some bite.

NO, HE'S NOT MINE. I JUST FEED HIM ONCE IN A WHILE...

Study weekend

It has been brought to my attention and the attention of some of my fellow students that final exams are around the corner. As we find ourselves in the last weeks of note taking and cramming for the final exams, we find relief that some institutions of higher education (University of Michigan) believe in assisting the students by having a time provided for studying before exams with classes dismissed. We would like to have a "study weekend" here at MSU.

What is a "study weekend?" A study weekend consists of taking the Thursday and Friday before "finals week" and dismissing classes, but having the professors in their offices available for academic advisement. Add this to the normal Saturday-Sunday weekend and it gives the students four days of study time, relieving the tension for most.

Who benefits from a "study weekend?" Everybody! The students reap the benefits of less tension, organized study, professor-student conferences and hopefully better grades.

Professors benefit by having time with students that want to advance their knowledge, more time for grading final papers, relieved pressure for grading final projects before exams, and some professors can use this time to assist them in making a final exam.

What is now being done to promote this "study weekend?" A few students have organized in the hopes of awaking the administration in obtaining a "study weekend." We will be making a concerted effort to raise the issue in the next few weeks. If you are interested please voice your opinion to administration staff, in hopes for a change in the future. We could all use a "study weekend!"

Lounge sexist

This letter is in reply to one written by Martha Ritter which appeared last Thursday entitled "Keep Women's Lounge." Not only is Ms. Ritter's thesis inaccurate and perverted, it is invidiously sexist.

While there may be a need in this society for "places" where individuals can retreat and get away from others, there is definitely no healthy or humane reason for providing "places" where persons of one gender can get away from persons of another gender or by analogy, where persons of one race can get away from persons of another race.

The institutional legitimizing of such restricted places is a remnant and product of sexism and racism and fosters the perception of people in terms of their gender and race. This perception and behavior based thereon is antithetical to a nonsexist, nonracist society.

The large area of the women's lounge not segregated as a toilet area is indeed discriminatory and contravenes not only Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 but Michigan's Equal Public Accommodation laws as well. These laws so zealously fought for were not designed to operate one-sidedly. On the contrary, these enactments were aimed at eliminating barriers and opening doors previously closed to both women and men. The university must do all in its power to carry out the letter and spirit of all laws forbidding discrimination: to do otherwise would be imprudent and unconscionable.

Rutledge hit

Last school year I had the extreme discomfort to meet and work under Frank Rutledge, chairperson of the Theatre Department. That was followed very quickly by my extreme dissatisfaction with the entire Theatre Department. After a year of graduate study in directing, I was given the impression that because I was a woman I needn't have a degree. This seemed to be the philosophy backed by the faculty chairperson.

I left the University a year earlier than anticipated, but before I left I voiced my discontent with the departmental proceedings to the university dean and graduate chairperson.

Recently, I read in the State News that Rutledge attempted a performance of "Equus" without being granted the royalties, and that he also had a "fair" say in faculty-tenure. If these statements are true, then perhaps a question should be raised concerning the situation. Ever since leaving the University last fall, I have been curious to know whether these are the conditions the students are to learn under. If Rutledge is a reflection of the caliber the University employs on the chairpersonship level, perhaps future students should reevaluate their University preference.

Tickets protested

The East Lansing and campus police a very unorthodox practice of ticketing on the weekends at all times of the day. This practice makes inviting friends and relatives up for the weekend somewhat uncomfortable unless they have a car.

For instance, this past weekend relatives come to stay with me, but whom own cars. To my dismay Saturday morning both were faced with tickets of the tickets was given at 6 a.m. and other was issued at 4 a.m. Both tickets issued as a violation of faculty and parking facilities.

I'm protesting the issuing of these tickets because the faculty and staff don't work through the weekends. Even if did, there is more than enough room for faculty within the dorm parking lot.

Taylor: pack trustees meeting

By MILTON TAYLOR

When the Committee to Stop the Iran-MSU Film Project confronts the board of trustees Thursday night in Kellogg Center it will be difficult — in fact, quite impossible — to rebut their arguments. The committee has four solid arguments:

First, it is indisputable that Iran is one of the leading fascistic countries of the world. Iran is an autocratic government ruled by a dictator, the Shah. But supporting this type of regime, we strengthen repression. We make it more difficult for Iran to be liberated, which it will and must be eventually.

Second, Iran is conspicuous in the world community for both the number and ghastly treatment of its political prisoners. The record of atrocities is so flagrant, in fact, that the country is frequently singled out as a horrible example. Consider, for example, the following news release by Amnesty International:

"An Iranian writer has described the Shah's chief torturer, a man named Atapour, who wears a suit and tie, smokes two packs of cigarettes a day, and grinds each one out on the back of a human hand."

Third, the Iran Film Project violates the University's own guidelines for foreign contracts developed by an

All-University Advisory Committee. These guidelines maintain that our contracts should be "sensitive to the moral, ethical and legal impact of its programs," and they should not "directly benefit instruments of repression in any country where the civil liberties of its citizens are materially compromised."

And fourth, students and faculty have the justifiable right to complain when their University will be used as the vehicle for peddling the propagandistic films in the high school auditoriums of America.

Solid as these arguments are, they still do not constitute a conclusive case. Our Office of International Studies and Programs has huge vested interests in these international contracts. What constitutes 30 pieces of silver for outsiders represents economic survival and jet trips for the insiders.

To be fair to International Programs, it should be borne in mind that your friendly neighborhood professor also has a stake in imperialism. Agricultural economics, for example, has nine projects, three in South Korea.

It should be recalled as well that if ethical and moral distinctions were controlling, we would have withdrawn from Brazil this year, not exalted into Uruguay. The fact that one out of every 500 Uruguayans is a political prisoner, the highest incidence in the world, is apparently irrelevant to the MSU administration.

And the likelihood that there will be at least two SAVAK agents intimidating our Iranian students Thursday night in Kellogg Center may also turn out to be irrelevant. The least that we can do, under these circumstances, is to assure that we will outnumber the SAVAK agents by 500 times. Who knows, you might even meet Atapour.

Viewpoints: MSU-Iran film project

Professor hit for Iran view

By JAMES I. DAVIS

I was disappointed to see so distinguished a member of the MSU community as Wilson Paul stoop so low in his verbal attacks against me in last Thursday's State News in an attempt to defend an indefensible program like the MSU-Iran Film Project. After calling me a "mouthpiece for the Iranian Students Association" and saying I "parroted them before finding out anything about the project" — both outrageously false — the only fault he can find with any of my statements concerning the project is over a minor detail about which government agency in Iran is paying David Frost to make another film series — as if it mattered. A dictatorship is a dictatorship.

And the dictatorship in Iran is a very brutal one, a basic charge which Paul strangely enough does not respond to. Or rather, not so strange, because the charge is true. One does not need to "parrot the ISA." One can parrot Amnesty International or the International Commission of Jurists or the London Sunday Times or the United Nations Commission on Human Rights or the New York Times or the Washington Post, all of which have amply documented the nature of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi's regime.

As for the so-called "phenomenal improvements" in Iran as a result of the Shah's sham "White Revolution" which Paul accuses me of ignoring, I refer him to the Committee to Stop the MSU-Iran Film Project's 44-page booklet entitled "The MSU-Iran Film Project," which deals with the "White Revolution" in depth.

I am not sure what Paul means by ISA "subversives" and ISA "weathermen" but it sure sounds a lot like McCarthyism to me. The Iranian students at MSU have done an invaluable service to the MSU community in exposing the Shah of Iran's regime. They are capable, however, of defending themselves, contrary to Paul's assertions, without need of my "propaganda" services.

I am surprised that Paul would take exception to calling Issari, designer and director of the Iran Film Project "like-minded soul in the cutting room." Issari was probably flattered. Issari says the Shah is "the ideal which the average strives to emulate" in his autobiography, which Wilson Paul's wife, Doris, coincidentally helped Issari write. Issari is very devoted to the Shah — his autobiography reeks of it. And the Film Project, as Issari unwittingly corroborates in his book service to the Shah, connecting contemporary Iran to the Persian empire of 2,500 years ago. As Hitler had his Third Reich, the Shah has his new Persian empire, built with oil money on the backs of the Iranian people.

While Issari and friends deal with broken pottery archaeological rubble, the Committee to Stop the MSU-Iran Project is concerned with something much more tangible, real, more human. We are concerned with the crammed prisons, the horrible torture and the rampant poverty existing in Iran. MSU furthers these conditions by undertaking the film project. We want it stopped. Whatever details we have we are certainly minor in relation to the larger moral issues at stake.

The committee has worked closely with the Iranian students here, but it is incorrect to say that the ISA is the foundation of the committee. We simply recognize a common interest in the struggle for human rights in Iran and the struggle for justice in this community. I suggest Paul be a bit more discrete in slinging such distortions, lest people begin to believe that he is a mouthpiece for some one else.

Davis is a spokesperson for the Committee to Stop the MSU-Iran Film Project.

Softball team readies defense of national crown in Nebraska

By JOHN SINGLER
State News Sports Writer
For the fifth straight year, MSU softball team is World Series bound — this time as leading national champions. Head coach Diane Ulibarri, Spartans and the championship trophy boarded the chartered bus in front of Jenison Fieldhouse Monday afternoon for the 12-hour trip to Omaha, Neb.

The 16-team, double-elimination tourney kicks off Wednesday night for MSU and hopefully will conclude on a happy note Saturday. "The team is eager to show what they've got," Ulibarri said. Last season's largest donation to the championship effort was submitted by now-graduated Gloria Becksford. She won all five games in the World Series. "Our defense is sound. We may get hit more now without Glo, but the defense can handle it," Ulibarri said. Around the infield from first to third the Spartans will have Gayle Barrons, Kathy Strahan, Carol Hutchins and Diane Spoelstra. For Spoelstra, this is her fourth straight nationally competitive season. There was softball last spring, volleyball in the fall, basketball this winter and now the World Series again.

Carmen King will start in left field and Laurie Zoodsma in right. Center field has been split this season between Ann Anderson and Nancy Green. Green's knee injury is acting up again so Anderson will see most of the action in center field. At the plate, the Spartans boast five hitters better than .300. Once on base this weekend, things are likely to happen. "We'll be more aggressive on the bases," Ulibarri said. King is leading the Spartans in hitting with a .424 mark. Others in the top five include Strahan, .333; Zoodsma, .329; Spoelstra, .325 and Barrons, .318.

As is Ulibarri's way with tournaments, she will not announce her pitching rotation until the moments just before the opening game. MSU is expected to match strengths with Northern Colorado practically position by position. Both teams lost top-notch starting pitchers through graduation and while the Bears have found one pitcher to fill the gap, the Spartans have four such qualified starters. Northern and MSU locked up in last year's title game, with the Spartans winning, 3-0. Some of the other teams in the field include Arizona State, Oregon, Connecticut, Ohio State, Western Illinois and the host school, the University of Nebraska-Omaha. The Spartans defeated both Arizona and Omaha in last year's World Series. Ulibarri compared last year's team with this season's squad as both entered the World Series and noted that last season's team was 100 per cent healthy whereas one player, Green, is ailing this time. Three years ago, the Spartans finished ninth in the World Series, two years ago they were fourth, when Omaha won it, and then came last season's national championship. MSU will open play Wednesday night at 8:30, against Connecticut, and will then play Thursday evening at 6:30.

Janet Guthrie gets a great big hug from teammate Dick Simon after she became the first woman to qualify for the Indianapolis 500. She attained 26th position in a field of 33 cars with a four-lap average speed of 188.403 m.p.h.

Large MSU IM leagues no easy supervising job

By LARRY LILLIS
Being a supervisor for MSU's intramural department isn't just a recreational job that is all fun by working with sports. During the spring there are 700 teams and 10,500 players playing softball.

And when the competition gets serious it can mean some headaches for IM supervisors who run the leagues. Scott Malaney, intramural sports supervisor, has been yelled at, spit at and even had his life threatened.

"We're here to serve the students as long as they are reasonable," the 23-year-old supervisor said. "In order to work and do the best job that we can we must be given the chance." But constant conflicts are a job liability, Malaney said. "One night a student who did not like the way I ruled a protest said he was a martial arts expert, and threatened to waste me," he recalled. A supervisor's job is to coordinate everything that goes on, whether it is work on the field during a game or paper work in the office, Malaney said. Supervisors are responsible for hiring and training the umpires used in the games, and they take care of overall game administration. Supervisors must arrange a master schedule and then make up the game sheets, Malaney explained. Every two weeks they must also make out the payroll for other employees. Jamie Bird, also an intramural sports supervisor, described the job of a supervisor as a public relations job. He said it was a service provided for the students, and if the students are not happy it is the supervisor's job to find out why.

Bird said it is important to know how to deal with people. "This is a job in which one has to deal with personalities," Bird said. "If the students would just play to relax then there would be no problems. This (the IM) is not the Big Ten and the students should go out just to have a good time." Bird said that as a supervisor he is the boss out on the field and the more things he can handle himself the less that will reach the office. He said about 90 per cent of all protests never reach the office. No matter what sport you play, it is important to have good officiating, Malaney explained.

"A good official can take charge of a game and not let it get out of hand. If the game is allowed to get out of hand then there will be nothing but a lot of arguing, and nobody will have a good time." One of the major problems faced by supervisors is handling games during threatening weather conditions. Supervisors receive many complaints because of canceled game, Bird said.

The decisions on canceled games due to weather conditions are based on whether the players would be injured in the game. The supervisors have been attempting to play every game possible this year because of a new policy which forbids rescheduling games. "This is one of the hardest decisions we have to make," Bird said. "We're damned if we do and we're damned if we don't."

"I'll go to training camp and see how I feel," he said. "I'm coming here with all my options open." Howe, eight-times the NHL's Most Valuable Player before joining the WHA where he also won the honor, said if he decided not to play any more he would join the team's management.

1977 grid sale continues

Football tickets for MSU's 1977 football season remain on sale for the remainder of the week at the athletic ticket office in Jenison Fieldhouse. The last day of sales is Friday to give MSU students, staff and faculty a jump on the June 1 general public sales. The tickets selling this week are the full-price individual game ticket applications that must be applied for in person at the ticket office. The hours are 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Only the away Oct. 1 first game at Notre Dame and the home Oct. 8 contest with Michigan will have purchase limitations of two per person. Tickets for all MSU games are $8, except for the Notre Dame game tickets which are $10.

MSU students can also buy a package of tickets for the first three home games at a savings of $5. Student tickets will be on sale until the end of the term for $10. The first three games are against Purdue, Sept. 10; Washington State, Sept. 17; and Wyoming, Sept. 24. There is also a package of three tickets for the final three games that can be bought at registration for fall term. Those games are Oct. 8 with intrastate rival U-M; Illinois, Oct. 29; and Northwestern, Nov. 12. Ohio State does not appear on MSU's schedule in 1977. After the tickets go on sale to the general public June 1, the tickets will remain on sale through the summer except for the student-priced tickets for the final three games.

Spartan netmen with in Big Ten; women lose, too

The University of Michigan won the 68th Big Ten tennis championship as expected Saturday, but MSU's netmen finished unexpected eighth place in team points.

It was the tenth straight Big Ten tennis championship for the Spartans as they won three of the six singles titles and all three doubles crowns. The 70 points accumulated by U-M was well ahead of Indiana's 40 points and the 34 points gathered by State and Wisconsin. MSU had 15 points.

The Spartans were coming off a 7-2 win over runner-up Indiana in dual competition the week before the start of the Big Ten championship and head coach Stan Drobae was hoping MSU would top in the final standings.

Due to the inexperience of MSU's net squad showed as only two of the MSU netters had played in the Big Ten tournament before. MSU wasn't able to capture any individual Big Ten titles, either. Michigan's Bill Rennie defeated U-M's Jeff Etterbeek for the prestigious No. 1 singles title. The other two titles not won by U-M were by Ohio State.

Senior Tom Gudelsky advanced the furthest for MSU by winning the consolation round at No. 1 singles. MSU finished the dual with a 7-7 in dual competition and 3-6 in the Big Ten dual play. MSU's women's tennis also didn't have any luck over the Spartans as all three Spartan qualifiers were eliminated at the dual tournament in Columbus, Ohio.

Senior Jodi Ross lost to Wisconsin's Mary Carne in the consolation round of singles play, while the doubles team of sophomore Selke and freshman Cindy Bogdonas were also defeated in the consolation round. They were defeated by the same Serges sisters from Central Michigan that beat MSU's Debbie Mascarin and Jodi Ross at the state tournament.

The women's squad ended the year with a 7-2 dual record and finished third at the Big Ten tournament in April.

Howe and 2 sons sign with Whalers

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Hockey great Gordie Howe and his two sons Monday switched their World Hockey Association show from the Houston Aeros to the New England Whalers.

They signed a long-term contract club officials described only as "multimillion dollar." Two National Hockey League clubs, the Boston Bruins and Detroit Red Wings, courted the Howes, whose contracts with Houston expire June 1.

Gordie Howe, 49, and the sport's all-time leading scorer, said he was not sure if he would play for the Whalers.

"I'll go to training camp and see how I feel," he said. "I'm coming here with all my options open."

Howe, eight-times the NHL's Most Valuable Player before joining the WHA where he also won the honor, said if he decided not to play any more he would join the team's management.

DEAR PAM

Public hearing forum for latest mall showdown

(continued from page 1) issue into high gear and introduced more complexities. By a 5-4 vote, the planning commission voted to recommend the approval of Ordinance 400, contingent upon the passage of the site plan review ordinance. The commissioners who voted for Terry Linger's motion said they had all the information they needed to make a responsible decision. However, the commission was attacked from various sides for its "hasty" action.

MSU-PIRGIM had its first study ready to submit, East Lansing Mayor George Griffiths suggested the recommendation go back to the commission for more thought and CLC retained an attorney to decide if the vote was illegal and if the recommendation for rezoning was in conflict with the comprehensive plan.

The City Council requested a review of alternative uses for the northern tier land by the planning commission, to be completed by May 30. The two alternatives being considered are a regional mall and residential development. The alternative of leaving the land undeveloped had been discounted because of the high cost of purchasing the land from Dayton Hudson and leaving it off the tax rolls.

According to preliminary land use projections, the mall would have a potential impact on the local natural resources and major streets, while the residential alternative would necessitate more schools, parks and city services such as fire, police, water and trash services.

The planning commission's cost-benefit analysis will be presented at a June 1 commission meeting. Meanwhile, the site plan review ordinance was approved by the planning commission May 18. The boundary situation has yet to be finalized. The state boundary commission will have a public hearing Wednesday at 7:30 in the city council chambers.

The Lansing Township board has granted commercial zone for a 24-acre parcel of jurisdiction.

Township officials indicated they favor the 24 acres to East Lansing. Mall representatives have said the mall jurisdictions would not be a major stumbling block to their plans.

The most recent development, which has the most impact on the City Council decision, has not been resolved yet. The ruling from Ingham County Circuit Court Judge James Kallman on the legality of planning commission's 5-4 approval is expected early today.

Attorney Tom Downs, representing the City is anticipating a temporary restraining order any rezoning action and a cancellation of tonight public hearing.

Drug use waning; pot, booze still popular

(continued from page 1) in a Playboy magazine student survey last year: Playboy found more people have tried dope now than ever before (70 per cent, compared to 47 per cent in 1970), but that more are dropping away from the use of it.

Playboy said in an issue last fall: "Almost half of those who have used marijuana are not using it currently. This points up two things: it is relatively easy to quit smoking marijuana and the drug scene on campus appears to be fading rather than flourishing. There are probably more Scientists than acid-heads and more Flat-Earthers than heroin users. Those who have tried and stopped using drugs other than marijuana far outnumber those who currently take them."

The supposed widespread use of "snow" cocaine, is actually very limited. Seven per cent use it occasionally, and a mere 1 per cent use it frequently. Comments on the use of coke, though, included, "I'd use it more often if it weren't so expensive," and "I haven't used it, but would like to try it."

But the most popular drug of all still seems to be alcohol.

Though nearly 6 per cent of seniors responding never had a drop, and 19 per cent touch the stuff, the typical MSU drinking senior drinks about once a week. Only 5 per cent drink "just about every day."

So while these figures exactly predict a deluge of members of Alcoholics Anonymous, drinking looks like firmly entrenched as a college life at MSU.

PETER J. VACCARO
'Oh Coward!' a Company's most brilliant

Last weekend The Company gave its audiences one of the brightest, happiest, slickest and most entertaining evenings of the theatre to have occurred on the MSU campus in a very long time. "Oh Coward!" is a glorious revue, though that itself is hardly a revelation. What is revelatory is The Company's staging of the piece — well directed, well choreographed, well designed, well acted, well danced, well sung. The thing was brilliant.

There is no one to vie, really, with the late Noel Coward's position as the greatest of all English popular entertainers, the man with the self-proclaimed "talent to amuse." Indeed, his genius for rhyming, for patter, for lyric, for theatrical craftsmanship, for composition of the popular song and for that incessant demonstration of glib wit in a more-or-less witless age has made the position indisputable.

But for all the greatness of the Coward talent, as great are the demands on the performer of his work. It's a lot to expect from a student actor, and particularly from an American student actor, so frequently inadequately trained in the precision and elegance of diction even to cope with the language itself. I don't know where Ron Hendon, Jeffrey Nash and Lynn Schnelker got the training, or where they've been keeping their talent, but they've got it and they flaunt it with great style.

Hendon, Nash and Schnelker are all three in possession of fine voices, but we're not talking here about carrying a tune. These three can sing. And they can act. Each shows a great capacity for comic delivery and comic timing; each can separate sentiment from sentimentality; each can understand and speak and sing the language of wit.

Jeffrey Nash's careful direction and Pamela J. Ballge's remarkable choreography are very bit as attractive as are the performers 8 and yes, though I haven't yet mentioned it, these kids look great on top of everything else.

Nash has maintained a quick, lively pace to the show, understanding well the necessity to maintain smooth, fluid movement given the abruptly episodic format of the revue. Ballge's choreography is clean, precise and completely appropriate. In the softshoes, the hornpipes and the regimental patterns is precisely the spirit of English music hall that so characterizes the Coward tradition.

Following the fine successes of both The Company and the Players Gallery this weekend, I eagerly anticipate their merger this summer in a joint season. Judging from what I've seen, these people have a lot to offer, and the idea of combining their talents in tantalizing indeed. As for The Company and its production of "Oh Coward!" — thanks for a happy weekend, and a memorable one.

'Tycoon:' ah, romance, you've failed us

By BYRON BAKER
State News Reviewer

Despite a lavish physical production and a rich performance by Robert De Niro, the film version of F. Scott Fitzgerald's unfinished novel of Hollywood in the 1930s, "The Last Tycoon," is slight — somehow thin.

Some of the sparseness can be traced back to the novel. At the time of his death, Fitzgerald had told no more than half of the story he had planned to write. The book as published is a semipolished draft of the first part of his projected novel.

For all its rough edges, however, the book is a satisfying fragment: a luminous example of the author at the height of his powers, writing with finesse and maturity on a subject he knew. Wisely, British playwright Harold Pinter, who adapted the novel for the screen, has attempted to tell little more of the story than Fitzgerald actually wrote. The problem with the Pinter adaptation is that he seems to tell less of it. The writer has pared down Fitzgerald's tale into the sort of compact script he favors in his other screenplays and theatrical work.

Fitzgerald told his story of Hollywood tycoon Monroe Stahr (inspired by semi-legendary M.G.M. production chief Irving Thalberg) through use of a narrator, a device he had used successfully in "The Great Gatsby." Pinter has dispensed with the narrator and has attempted to forge an objective portrait of Stahr. This robs the work of perspective toward character. Pinter would have us learn about Stahr from Stahr, but we can't — we can only know him from his dealings with others. In this way, Pinter's approach largely insulates us from the character.

We see easily enough that Stahr is king of his domain: a creative master of his medium, he is in control of every foot of film exposed at his studio. Executives, producers, writers, directors, hang upon his every decision.

We also see that his private life is barren and sterile. Since the death of his wife, Stahr has been working himself to exhaustion. He encounters Kathleen (Ingrid Boultong), a mysterious woman who bears an extraordinary resemblance to his late wife. She arouses a long-suppressed passion within Stahr, and he begins to pursue that passion through her.

Some of the picture is beautifully adapted and directed (by Elia Kazan; his first film in seven years). There is a terrific scene, taken almost directly from the novel, in which Stahr demonstrates to a neophyte British author the possibilities of the film medium. There are nice pieces of scenes in which Stahr rapidly orders cuts, issues directives and shows his wisdom and his power. Throughout, Robert De Niro is authoritarian, perfectly realizing Fitzgerald's thesis that "action is character."

The romantic scenes (and one gets the feeling that "Tycoon" was conceived for the screen as a bravura romance) fare less well. Kazan has said that he regards the character of Kathleen as "an apparitional figure, not a real person." The problem is that Ingrid Boultong is not skilled enough an actress or magical enough a screen presence to register as such. She is too insubstantial to motivate Stahr's feelings for her and too blank to reflect them. Mostly, she has a nice oval face and thin teeth. This is scarcely enough to inspire the absorbed attentions of Stahr.

In Pinter's adaptation, the rest of the supporting characters have become bit players who wander about waiting for their cues. Some of them — Tony Curtis as a troubled matinee idol, Dana Andrews as a director, John Carradine as a studio guide — slide into focus, but others — Robert Mitchum as the titular studio head (a la L.B. Mayer); Jeanne Moreau, miscast as an aging star; Jack Nicholson as a Communist labor organizer; among others — remain ciphers.

Gene Callahan's production design is apt, portraying the period feel without exploiting it. Victor Kemper has done serviceable camerawork, and Richard Marks has edited in a fragmented, portentous manner, which almost suggests the picture was once somewhat longer than its current 112-minute running time.

"The Last Tycoon" is a flawed, yet worthy film adaptation of Fitzgerald — it's infinitely better than the movies of "The Great Gatsby" and "Tender is the Night" — but it seems flawed by the same sort of insubstantial treatment that marred those films.

The Paramount Picture is at the Gladmer Theatre in Lansing.

'Laverne and Shirley' edges Nixon

NEW YORK (AP) — David Frost's first interview with former President Richard Nixon was the second-most-watched show for the week ending May 8, outdrawn only by "Laverne and Shirley," according to A.O. Nielsen ratings made available by the show's syndicator Monday.

The program was aired by 151 stations covering 95 per cent of the nation. Syndicator sold out its five minutes of advertising time per hour at $125,000 a minute.

Syndicator Inc., which packaged the interviews by the British television personality, said the May 4 interview, in which Nixon discussed Watergate, was seen in an average of 17.3 million households and received a 24.3 rating.

ABC's "Laverne and Shirley" was seen in 17.8 million homes and drew a 25 rating that week.

The Nixon interview was seen by an average 41 per cent share of the audience that watched television between 7:30 p.m. and 9 p.m. (EDT), Syndicator said. That figure is somewhat less than the 44 per cent estimate based on preliminary overnight ratings from Los Angeles, New York and Chicago.

The second interview the following week, for which national ratings are expected Wednesday, got a 23.6 per cent share in the three overnight cities and the third show got a 16.2 per cent overnight.

The Frost-Nixon interviews was not included in Nielsen's regular weekly survey of prime-time television, which covers only network shows.

Ten-year silence to be rung away by Handbell Choir

By SUZANNE LALK

After 10 years of silence, the MSU Handbell Choir will be ringing again.

The recently revived choir will be playing its first concert tonight at 8:15 in Hart Recital Hall in the Music Building. The 11 bellringers, all MSU music students, are conducted by Al Fisk, a junior choral education major and current director of the Lansing Pilgrim Congregational Church Handbell Choir.

The free concert will feature "Chester," by early-American composer William Billings, an arrangement for handbells, organ, "All Glory, Laud and Honor," and two arrangements by Wendell Westcott, MSU music faculty member and director of the MSU Handbell Choir.

Westcott directed an earlier bell choir, the Spanglers, which toured internationally and was nationally televised. The group gradually dispersed 10 years ago.

Fisk became interested in reviving the bell choir when he found a set of 48 handbells stored away in a closet at the Lansing Pilgrim Congregational Church. The four-octave set of White Chapel bells are made in England and worth approximately $5,800.

"One bell was missing and we are currently trying to repair it," Fisk said. "The others are being repaired so we can ring them next fall."

The handbell choir will be using the bells of the Lansing Pilgrim Congregational Church until MSU's bells are repaired. Fisk has had trouble obtaining approval for funds from the Music Department. Outside sources have offered to subsidize the choir if the funds from MSU do not come through, he said.

Fisk added that auditions for several openings on the choir will be held in the fall for all interested players.

Gallery Chamber Series ends season with concert

The music of Stravinsky, Dvorak and Beethoven will send sweet strains through Kresge Gallery on Wednesday as the MSU Gallery Chamber Series draws to a close.

The last of six concerts in 1976-77 to benefit the Music Department and Kresge Gallery is set for 8:15 p.m. in the gallery.

MSU's Beaumont String Quartet and music faculty member Virginia Bodman will render Dvorak's "Quintet for Bass and String Quartet." Quartet members performing with bassist Bodman are: Verdehr, first violinist; Copes, second violinist; John Johnson, violist; and Rejto, cellist. Also on the program is Stravinsky's "Concertino for String Quartet," Beethoven's "Quartet, Op. 135," and a selection of Beethoven's songs performed by pianist Harlan Jennings. A pianist and pianist Edith Kraus will accompany Jennings. Tickets are $4 general admission at the door and $10 for students.
