The Pentagon wants the weapons for potential use by the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) forces which are far outnumbered by Soviet and East European tanks and troops.

Carter said if nuclear weapons were ever used in a conflict, the neutron warhead would result in much less destruction. At the same time, the President said he continues to advocate elimination of ownership of nuclear weapons by all nations.

In an interview before the Senate debate, Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., a leading opponent of the weapon, said he might try to block a vote with a filibuster.

Hatfield said there is evidence that the neutron weapons, to be encased in artillery shells and Lance missile warheads, would be a threat to civilian populations in war zones.

The senator said that far from being the so-called clean nuclear device described by its supporters, a neutron weapon could "a gaseous cloud of radioactive chemicals which could kill thousands of people in its path before dissipating into the upper atmosphere and lingering for thousands of years.

Carter said he has not yet made a final decision on whether to place neutron warheads in the hands of U.S. troops. But he indicated he wants to go ahead with production so that he will have that option at a later date.

The exact amount of proposed funding for the weapons is classified. Before the July 4 recess, the Senate met in closed session for two hours of classified debate. After that, Hatfield narrowly lost an initial attempt for cutting off funds, but a new vote was scheduled for this week.

One congressional source said Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., chairperson of the Armed Services Committee, is confident that the neutron bomb will survive the Senate vote.

Parents of slain student arrested at Kent State

KENT, Ohio (AP) - The parents of a student killed during an antiwar demonstration at Kent State University on May 4, 1970, were among the first of more than 190 persons arrested Tuesday in a peaceful protest against plans for construction near the site of the shootings.

Sgt. John Peach of university police said 192 persons were taken into custody — with little resistance — after they defied a court order to leave a section of campus where the university plans to build a $6 million gymnasium annex.

Sarah and Martin Scheuer, parents of Sandy Lee Scheuer, who was killed when National Guardsmen fired on the 1970 antiwar demonstration, were led away by police as the arrests began.

Scheuer said she decided Tuesday morning to be arrested. "I don't want the gym built there," she said after being taken into

The Scheuers' arrest was followed by that of Alan Canfora, who was wounded at the demonstrations even years ago.
"The campus police handled themselves admirably," said Canfora, standing outside the jail with his hands handcuffed behind his back. "I feel we learned a lot from seven years ago. Maybe my peers and friends don't understand. . . but this is a continuation of May 4, 1970."

General Motors Corp. given tax break

By MICHAEL KLOCKE

A compromise tax abatement plan for Lansing's General Motors (GM) plants was approved Monday night, settling a controversial issue which has been before Lansing City Council for more than a year.

The Lansing Fisher Body and Oldsmobile plants will be expanding and the tax abatement will cover $100 million worth of expansion at Fisher Body and $33 million at Oldsmobile. The Fisher Body taxes will be reduced and frozen to 75 per cent while Oldsmobile taxes will be reduced 50 per

The original abatement request from GM was for 100 per cent at both Fisher Body and Oldsmobile. When the tax freeze for Oldsmobile was reduced to 50 per cent, city council still defeated the tax freeze on June 14 by a 3-3 vote. Five votes were needed for approval.

But when the abatement at Fisher Body was also reduced, Councilmembers Terry McKane and Robert Hull changed their votes and the tally was 6.1 in favor of the voted for the abatement Monday.

million in taxes. According to McKane, who is chairperson of the council's Committee on Finance, the tax freeze approved Monday means that the city will forego about $10.6 million and there will also be $4 million extra in unabated taxes from GM.

"But that's only if GM doesn't provide any jobs to the Lansing community, McKane said. "The abatement could be more than made up if more jobs are provided."

That there will be 1,300 new jobs created increase the Lansing tax base, has been the major claim of GM. Oldsmobile divisional comptroller Edward Vogt said there would also be a "spin-off effect on the other businesses in the area."

The GM promise of new jobs was one of GM request. Councilmember William the subjects debated Monday. Council-Brenke, who did not vote on June 14, also member Richard Baker, who voted no on the abatement, said GM could not be The original abatement would have meant that the city would forego $13.5

Chemical truck overturns in Tenn.

ROCKWOOD, Tenn. (AP) — A chemical tank truck overturned Tuesday on a interstate highway above Rockwood, and Mayor Arvel McNelly ordered the town of 6,000 evacuated as noxious yellow fumes spread down a mountainside toward it.

As the mayor took to the radio to warm citizens in this East Tennessee community, there was still confusion over what substance was involved.

One person in town said the fumes smelled "sulphury." Police at the scene told a radio reporter the substance appeared to be bromine gas. A police officer in town said it was boric acid.

There were no confirmed reports of casualties from the fumes.

State Sen. Ray Baird, who lives in Rockwood and publishes a weekly newspaper in the center of town, said the truck, which overturned on Interstate 40. was "up on the mountain above Rockwood and these large yellow fumes are descending down on the east end of the

FDA continues McDonald's glasses probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) has found no evidence that lead in decals on decorative glasses marketed by the McDonald's hamburger chain can contaminate the liquid inside, an FDA spokesperson said Tuesday.

However, he said the agency is studying whether there are other possible health hazards from the glasses.

"FDA tests show that even though decorative decals used on the exterior of the glasses contain lead, there is no evidence that the lead can contaminate liquid inside the glasses," the spokesperson said.

He said the FDA will continue to work with the Environmental Protection Agency and the Consumer Product Safety Commission to determine the safety of the glasses.

He noted that unanswered questions remain, including whether there is a potential health hazard from children gnawing the decals.

He added that a big difference between the two positions in that as associate provost, he made recommendations to the provost; now, recommendations will be made directly to the President Clifton R. Wharton, Jr. Winder also now attends board meetings, an experience he finds "very pleasant" so far.

As chief academic officer of the University. Winder currently has some top priority proposals to consider. One of these is a proposal from the Computer Center to install a new CDC Cyber 175 or "main frame" central computer system. The system costs between $3.5 and 4 million dollars and operates up to nine times faster than the one currently used, according to Computer Center officials.

The proposal has been approved so far by Herman L. King, director of academic services and now has reached Winder's desk. Winder said he, along with John E Cantlon, vice president of research and graduate studies and Roger E. Wilkinson vice president of business and finance, must first consider the academic justification of the proposal, weigh the advantages the system would bring to research and graduate work and then examine the financial feasibility.

'Assuming all things are positive, we'd have a recommendation for the president, Winder said.

However, Winder said it would be a matter of months" before such a recommendation can be made. Center officials determined that an ideal time to install the system would be when students would not be subject to inconvenience, such as during

Though the ages often used in most child pornography legislation is 12 and under, the Lansing ordinance will include any obscene materials showing children under 18 years of age.

Also included will be people "represented to be" under the age of 18 if they are shown as actively or passively engaged in sexual conduct or sadomasochistic abuse.

The pornography ordinance that had been in effect in Lansing covered only the display of obscene material after publication. The ordinance did not cover publication of pornography or child pornography.

Young gymnasts train at MSU

To become a world class gymnast and capture the world's attention in the Olympics as Olga Korbut did in 1972 and Nadia Comaneci did in 1976 — you have to start young. And MSU has a gymnastics school for the young as part of its sixth annual MSU Sports School.

MSU men's gymnastic coach George Szypula is the director of a staff that includes four assistant coaches from Michigan high schools and members of MSU's gymnastics team.

The coed gymnastic school is for students aged 9-17 and is operating in three one-week sessions that began Monday, with the final one beginning July 24.

For related story on the MSU summer sports schools, see page 8.

Kent State's lessons endure

The events of this past week have riveted public attention to the bloody memory of Kent State.

On May 4, 1970, four fatalities resulted when national guardsmen loosed a volley of gunfire into a group of student demonstrators. Nine others were injured. Responsibility for the tragedy has never been legally fixed.

A federal civil suit filed by families of the slain students against the governor of Ohio, the former president of Kent State University, the adjutant general of the Ohio National Guard and several guardsmen was thrown out of court, but that decision is under appeal.

As if to underscore the agony and uncertainty of this long appeals process — not to mention the entire Kent State debacle — a county judge Monday ordered that demonstrators who have been occupying the shooting site for 61 to build a memorial to the dead

The order was carried out Tuesday, and 190 demonstrators were arrested. Violence was merdays be evicted. Protesters want cifully avoided. One Kent State is more than enough.

The same judge ordered that the construction of the gymnasium be postponed pending a hearing — a small but perhaps significant victory for the protesters. Those who participated in this demonstration deserve the highest praise for their diligence and sense of purpose. The 61-day sit-in - "tent city," it was called — was in the finest tradition of civil disobedience.

The University wants to build a gymnasium.

'Koreagate' needs investigation

The time has come for a full-scale, no-holds-barred. investigation into the Korean money scandal which has engulfed Capitol Hill.

On Monday, 115 present and former members of the U.S. House confessed to having received "favors" from South Korean businessman and lobbyist Tongsun Park. These favors included illegal campaign contributions, gifts and entertainment.

In answering a questionnaire distributed by the House Ethics Committee which is probing the scandal, several House members apparently admitted to violations of the law. Early indications are that the Justice Department will seek indictments against these congressmen.

Even if these indictments are handed down and a few of the guilty punished — a dubious assumption at best, given the ability of most governmental representatives to resist accountability - it is doubtful that the full dimensions of "Koreagate" will ever be fully exposed. Its sheer size, both chronologically and in numbers of people allegedly involved, is intimidating.

Evidently the South Korean government has been trying to buy influence in the halls of Congress at least since 1967, with the goal of insuring a continuation of America's military presence in that country. The fact that Congress has to the strongly resisted any attempts to will American ground forces from South Korea may not be related to the efforts of Park associates, but the possibility is clearly there

FBI trying to smear Andrew Young?

WASHINGTON - United Nations Ambassador Andrew Young, already under fire for his outspoken opinions, has now been accused of misusing his influence.

The FBI has investigated charges that he improperly pressured federal prison authorities to grant special favors to a prisoner with alleged links to organized

The investigation was conducted in such secrecy that Young's name was omitted from the court records. The charges against him, however, have the smell of a smear.

On April 29, FBI agents interrogated the controversial U.N. ambassador for 40 minutes. They suggested that he may have worked "too diligently" in behalf of Michael George Thevis, a big-time pornography distributor now behind bars.

In other interviews, FBI agents dropped dark hints of bribery. A Justice Department source told us outright that Thevis had contributed heavily to Young's past congressional campaigns.

We, therefore, conducted our own investigation into the charges against Young. We could find no evidence that Thevis had ever contributed a penny to Young. We also concluded that Young had done nothing improper.

When we confronted the FBI, a spokesperson said only that Young "is not under investigation by the FBI." The implication is that the FBI also found no evidence of wrongdoing and, therefore, cut short its

Yet Steven Ludwick, who is in charge of criminal investigations for the U.S. attorney's office in Atlanta, notified the courts that Thevis had secured a transfer "as a political appointee and eventually the appointee himself."

This clearly implies that the appointee, whom we can identify as the beleaguered Andrew Young, was guilty of wrongful intervention. Ludwick presumably based the accusation upon the FBI's investigation. Young's former assistant, Julius Hollis, also told us that he has been "intimidated" by FBI agents.

The possibility that the FBI might have tried to cause trouble for Young is disturbing. He was an associate of the martyred Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., who had been hounded and harassed by the FBI at the instigation of its late chief, J. Edgar

The rigid, revered Hoover, conservative in his ways and narrow in his outlook, had grown up in Washington when it was still a quiet, segregated Southern town. To Hoover, the struggle for equal rights by blacks smacked of rebellion. He, therefore, directed a shameful smear campaign against Dr.

There is a lingering suspicion that Hoover's point of view may continue to FBI. Thus it is important to review the details of the Young Thevis relationship.

Thevis was convicted in federal court of conspiracy to commit arson and of transporting obscene material across state lines. His prison file, according to our sources, is stamped "Special Offender." This is a term, we are told, that is used to designate organized crime figures.

A spokesperson for Thevis denied that he has any ties to the underworld. He is also in constant pain, the after-effects of a past near-fatal motorcycle accident. He continues to need special medical attention, as noted by the judge who sentenced him. Last year Thevis asked his congressman to help him secure better medical treatment.

The congressman happened to be Andrew Young; it was his duty to assist his constituents with their problems. Quite routinely, his staff helped to arrange Thevis' transfer from the Terre Haute, Ind., penitentiary to the Lexington, Ky., prison, for medical reasons.

For a congressman to intervene in a prison hardship case is neither unusual nor improper. But Thevis continued to press for medical furlough so his own doctors could perform a hip operation. This was opposed federal authorities who feared Thevis might skip the country.

But once again, Young's staff prepared a letter to the Bureau of Prisons in Thevis' behalf. The first draft was typed on congressional stationery. Young, meanwhile, moved to the United Nations. So the letter was retyped on his new U.N.

The letter supports Thevis' request for medical furlough and concludes: "Please investigate will be released in view of his needs for further surgery." Young signed it.

A month later, FBI agents called on the legislative aide who drafted the letter, Julius Hollis, and demanded to know why Young was pushing the case so hard. According to Hollis, the agents not only intimidated him but insinuated that Young might have misused his government posi-tion. They also made an oblique reference to bribery. Hollis said.

Yet the subsequent report to the court states that the inmate's "efforts to obtain favorable treatment via intervention by a political figure . . . included an offer of a political contribution which was turned

Warrants mixed or probationers by Mich. court

By CHRIS PARKS

LANSING (UPI) — A Michigan Court of Appeals panel, taking issue with an earlier appeals court ruling, says judges have a right to require probationers to waive their constitutional protection against warrantless searches.

In a 2-1 decision Tuesday, the appeals panel approved a judge's order requiring a probationer to submit to a search by a probation officer or a police officer at any time as long as the search is conducted "in good faith and not for harassment."

Howard Simon, executive director of the Michigan chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union, said the contradictory rulings have set the stage for the Michigan Supreme Court to resolve the

Tuesday's ruling upheld the decision of Oakland County Circuit

Judge Arthur E. Moore. It came in the case of Michael Richards who was placed on probation for three years after being convicted of breaking and entering with intent to commit larceny.

Richards challenged the constitutionality of the terms of his probation. He also questioned his conviction claiming police used an improper photo identification procedure and that the judge erred in his instructions to the jury.

The appeals panel upheld both the conviction and his probation

The probation order required that Richards "voluntarily consent that any police officer or probation officer may at any time search him personally, his portion of the home in which he resides or the cle which he may be operating and may take urinalysis or blood test of him for the purpose of ascertaining whether or not he is violating any law or term of probation, and shall carry such consent on his person and shall exhibit it to any police officer or any probation officer at any time requested in good faith and not for harassment.'

"A separate panel of this court has previously held that the court has no power to require, as a condition of probation, the kind of waiver of constitutional protections which is found in this order, and that the probationer's consent to such a condition is in legal effect coerced and therefore a nullity," the court majority said.

However, Judges Daniel F. Walsh and Glenn S. Allen said they found the dissenting opinion in that 1975 case more persuasive In his dissenting opinion, Judge Nathan J. Kaufman held that "warrantless searches must be vacated and held naught."

Graduate students to attend seminar

How to find out what grant money is available and how to effectively apply for that money will be two of the questions discussed at a workshop on proposal writing being held for graduate students this Thursday.

The workshop, sponsored by the Office of Research Development and the Council of Graduate Students (COGS), will meet from 3 to 6 p.m. in the Board Room of the "Most people working on advanced degrees need to get grants when they finish if they want to do the research they feel they should do," said Donald L. Batkins, former president of COGS. "But it often takes them a long time to get a grant because they are poorly prepared in applying for one."

Batkins and other COGS members worked closely with Jack
B. Kinsinger, assistant vice president for research in the MSU Office of Research Development, in initiating and organizing Thursday's workshop.

"The grant system has become the standard technique used for distributing money by the federal government and many foundations," Kinsinger said. "States and even communities are giving grants. You can't get away from it."

The first session of the workshop will deal with selection of an agency, interaction with that agency, and construction of proposals. It will be conducted by C. Robert Muth, assistant to the dean for special programs in the MSU College of Education.

In the second session, a panel of graduate students will discuss their successes and failures in applying for grants. Discussion leaders will be C. Kurt Dewhurst and Marsha MacDowell, recent graduates who have been very successful in receiving grant money for the Michigan Folk Art Project.

Kinsinger will speak last on the peer review system, which is the method by which proposals are transformed into grants, and the assistance the Office of Research Development can give to graduate students.

The workshop is the first of its kind and will be used as a model for another workshop to be held during the coming academic year. There is no admission charge for the workshop.

Let me live out my years in heat of blood! Let me die drunken with the dreamer's wine! Let me not see this soul-house built of mud Go toppling to the dust - a vacant shrine! John Gneisenau Neihardt

The most, make that only, intriguing quality of the White Spot Cocktail Lounge and Grill No. 1, located at 910 W. Saginaw St., Lansing, is its name. The White Spot Cocktail Lounge and Grill No. 1. Hmmm. Of course, the casual barhopper might not at first have any idea as to what the "white spot" of the bar's name refers. But luckily, in any case, the White Spot Cocktail Lounge and Grill Nos. 2, 3, 4 and so on have yet to be built.

That, however, is not to steal any of the glory of No. 1. Indeed, the White Spot seems to be as much a place for losers as for boozers. Physically and spiritually, it is an incredibly vacant shrine.

Take, for example, though one might best prefer not to, the inhabitants of the White Spot. On a recent Friday evening, perhaps 15 people cluttered the club, two of whom were women, one of whom was the waitress.

To some, a lack of people, especially women, might indicate a socially stagnated — nay, even rotting - tavern. This is, of course, untrue Except for the fact that the patrons settled in the White Spot rarely moved or spoke, if at all, and that all of them seemed somewhat more fermented than the bar whisky, the White Spot was a veritable hot spot.

Actually, the patrons, who ranged from about 30 to 70 years old, might be commended for their lack of conversation. Just as their tailbones seemed affixed to their chairs, their eyes seemed variously attached to entering strangers, beers, the television, or points ten feet in front of their

Such staunch attention (it is well known) can only with difficulty be achieved - especially in places outside of funeral homes and mausoleums. But then again, the White Spot does have, not only in atmosphere but in personage, similarities

Simply because a bar is more or less (let's leave it as more) deserted, and because the patrons either sit alone without talking or sit together rarely talking, and because the bartender cards

In faith, the pub should be appraised in terms of something other than its (hic) customers. The people at the White Spot, in all fairness, are probably very nice - to each other, that is

And so to move on to the bar itself, which is fairly large, not just in length and depth, but again in height. Even the Brawny Towel advertisement, the one with the Paul Bunyan look-alike, could be filmed in the White Spot. The ceiling is no less than 16 feet high, possibly 20.

A celestial level ceiling, with all its empty accompanying air space, doesn't have to make a room seem barren. But at the White Spot, it does. It is aided greatly by occasional dangling lights and a lot of stark chairs and tables (which look as if they might have been stolen from a railroad station cafeteria in 1962). An unoccupied rear section contains an equally unoccupied pool table and two unused, unlighted pinball machines. After all, this was a Friday night

Reference has been made to the high ceiling, which obviously enough, is supported by high walls. These walls — and this is a point in favor of the management - are in places covered by svelte decorations which detract from the overall comatose, graveyard atmosphere.

Along the whole of one rear wall, for instance about two-thirds of the way up and rising directly from a grill, is an 18-inch exhaust duct. More classy decorations break the monotony of the wall opposite the bar itself, which is adorned with several chic yellowed food signs on the order of "Giant Deluxe Salami Sandwich, $1.50." As is often the case (here, a basket case), bad taste is avoided. Instead, it is replaced by tackiness.

The highlights of the White Spot, nevertheless, are two elevated TVs, one with a giant screen and prurient novelty napkins with lines like "Gold digger: mining her own business." For some reason, only one of the televisions, which sit side by side, was on.

Last, and certainly least, when a pair of weak-bladdered, prominently bellied beer sippers make their third trip to the bonded and insured bathrooms in as many TV advertisements, and as their final flushes swirl around those white porcelain Standards, the casual bar-hopper can finally hazard a guess as to just what the "White Spot" of the White Spot refers.

Better to be nibbled to death by shrimm than to suffer the rapture of 'The Deep

State News Reviewer

The most noteworthy aspect of The Deep is its largely breathtaking undersea photography, which must certainly rank as the brightest and most realistic footage of this type yet to appear in a feature film. The subtly lighted aquatic camerawork achieved by veteran British director of photography Christopher Challis and special underwater cinematographers Al Giddings and Stan Waterman is a giant step forward from the mostly indifferent visual results gained from the hallowed industry tradition of filming such scenes in tiny studio tanks, aquariums, or even

Few such technical short cuts have been employed here: fully 40 per cent of the picture takes place underwater (the credits proclaim "The Deep was filmed live on location in four oceans"). and one can surmise that much of the film's nearly $9.5 million budget was devoted to solving the tremendous technical problems incurred underseas, and to developing special photographic equipment to do the job.

Yet, it is not unreasonable to wish that fledgling producer Peter Guber had channeled a bit less of his large production outlay into the underwater photography, and in its stead had hired a competent script doctor to dramaturgically repair the muddled, foolish screenplay by Peter Benchley and Tracey Keenan Wynn.

The Deep is, of course, based upon the novel of the same name by Benchley, who had earlier wrote a novel called Jaws, which became the highly successful film sharker of the same name. Producer Guber, who made an expensive pre-publication purchase of The Deep's film rights shortly after the gigantic box office receipts of Jaws began rolling in, must have assumed that Benchley's name and readable prose would necessarily a successful picture make.

But, Jaws was successful primarily due to the unstinting creativity and intelligence of screenwriter Carl Gottlieb, who ended up rewriting scenarios submitted by Benchley and other writers into a tight, involving script, and due to the directorial wizardry of Steven Spielberg, a director keenly aware of how to create - and enthrallingly sustain - suspense.

Wynn, Benchley's collaborator on the script for The Deep, is a promising scenarist still in his early thirties — but, he has little sense of dramatic construction, and no feeling for the careful crafting of suspense, and neither does Benchley. A lack of the two vital components was more readily concealed in the set "good read" Benchley favors writing, than up on the Pa

commander Gen. Alexander M. Haig Jr. said Tuesday that leading allies had given the neutron bomb "enthusiastic support" and he urged its inclusion in the allied arsenal in Europe The question was raised at a news conference at his headquarters near this south Belgian town.

In Washington, President Jimmy Carter urged key senators Tuesday to support funds for production of the bomb. He has said he will make a final decision in August on whether to go ahead with it after he receives the results of studies under way.

Haig said he was astonished at the intensity of the debate on the neutron bomb, which kills humans by radiation but leaves buildings relatively unharmed. Troops can occupy the area the next day, according to experts. But opponents say it could produce a deadly radioactive cloud that would spread farther than anticipated.

Haig said development of the bomb has been in progress since the early 1960s and that everyone in the "family" concerned with nuclear matters knew all about it.

See related story on page 1.

"We have a vested interest," he said, "in seeing this system provided to the alliance in order to modernize our theater nuclear

The last phrase refers to the possible use of nuclear weapons on the battlefield rather than against the territory of the Soviet Union

Haig emphasized that NATO is defensive, that its main purpose is to deter an attack by a potential aggressor.

nuclear, we build that deterrent on the uncertainty on the part of the potential aggressor of the nature and scope of our response," he

He insisted that the use of the neutron weapon, like the use of any nuclear weapon, is under Carter's authority. Its use would be, he said, "an escalatory step which political authority, quite rightly, must cope with.

Haig, who used to be President Richard M. Nixon's chief of staff, was appointed by President Gerald R. Ford to command both American and allied forces in Europe. His appointment has been renewed by Carter.

He called the news conference to discuss results in a short-term program to improve allied forces. The program was initiated by Carter at the London summit meeting of the alliance in May.

counting Office report. John Kumpf, an E-Systems' spokesperson, said the net worth shown by the audit was overstated somewhat. He cited a second Coopers and Lybrand audit of the Air Asia, dated Jan. 31, 1975, showing its net worth at $3.2 million.

And he said even that figure was too high.

"We want to make clear that we assumed some major liabilities. The biggest one was an employe retirement or termina-tion obligation," Kumpf said Tuesday. "We feel that was understated. Since we acquired Air Asia, we have paid out more than that estimated liability. Nevertheless, Kumpf said, "We're not denying" that Air Asia was a good buy.

Not only was the purchase a good one for E-Systems in terms of assets, it was a good one in terms of profits. In the 10 months before the deal was con-summated on Jan. 31, 1975, Air Asia earned $1.35 million in profits, a CIA document revealed.

One way accounting experts gauge the cost of buying a business is how many times larger the cost of buying the company is than one year's profits.

In this case, E-Systems paid only about 1.5 times earnings for Air Asia. For comparison, recent stock market prices show that one would have to pay 10 times earnings to buy all the stock in American Telephone and Telegraph, seven times earnings for General Motors and five times earnings for Lockheed Aircraft.

Or, to buy all the stock in E-Systems would cost seven times earnings.

E-Systems has had a long, close relationship with the CIA. The company is a major

Athletic dreaming begin

By CAROL SINGER

At some time in a young athlete's career, almost every young athlete dreams of playing before large college crowds or in one of the professional sport's world championships.

The MSU Sports School allows over 3,000 budding athletes a chance to use facilities on the campus of this Big Ten conference school.

There are 19 sports schools sponsored by MSU. The co-ed sports of gymnastics and track are currently in session, MSU head coaches supervise most of the programs as MSU gymnas tics coach George Szypula and MSU track coach Jim Bibbs are working with the students.

Also in session are girls' basketball, headed by MSU women's coach Karen Langeland, and a cheerleading camp headed by Mary Flynn, a former MSU cheerleader.

Students range from nine through 18 years of age. However, the age varies with each

Gene Kenney, sports school director, explained that the athletes are placed in groups according to age and ability for instructional purposes. All the assistant coaches that work under the head coach are either mentors from other colleges or high schools. There are also several MSU athletes that work in the program.

"You couldn't find a finer coaching staff in the whole country than what we have here," Kenney said. "Not only do they relate to the university students, but they also do a great job with the sports school youths," Kenney said. "You must remember also that your staff is the heart of any school."

Soviet city attempts snuffing out cigarets

Smoking is still a popular vice in the Soviet Union's first "no-smoking city," but antismoking campaigners haven't given up.

One year after Sochi launched a campaign to snuff out cigarets, many citizens of this pleasant Black Sea resort 850 miles south of Moscow seem slightly embarrassed by with polite invitations to smoke if they wish to, but to be discreet about it.

Driving from the airport past a sign saying "Welcome to Sochi — Please Don't Smoke," a taxi driver invites his passengers to have a cigaret, "but please just hold it down so no one sees it."

Though restaurants all have no-smoking signs and ash trays smokers are tolerated when they light up. In some cases, restaurants are even more lenient than in Moscow, where a new antismoking ordinance in

But Dr. Vladimir N. Sarmakeshev, a leader in the Sochi campaign, refuses to be dis-

"This is not the work of one job. We mustn't be disappointed by the early results. We must find new means."

Indeed, there are some indications of success among the early results. Though few statistics have been gathered, Sarmakeshev said there appears to have been a 15 per cent drop in sales of cigarets in the city. He had no exact figures for

He also said an educational campaign he has organized in schools is showing some early signs of success. Sochi Mayor Vyacheslav Voronkov initiated the antismoking effort last summer, saying he would rely on a campaign of education and social pressure. "We're hoping that it will soon be as ridiculous to appear in public with a cigaret in your mouth as to walk down Kurortny Boulevard in your pajamas,"

Cigarets were banned from beaches, restaurants, government offices, public and private pitals. But the restrictions were not backed up by any regulatory measures.

"If we see

transportation, schools and hos-

smoking, all we can do is ask him to stop, and explain the dangers of cigaret smoke to himself and the people around him," the doctor said.

Along with the citywide propaganda effort, a serious medical campaign against smoking is under way at Sochi's 53 health spas. An estimated 30,000 patients a year take part in programs to break the habit.

Internships available to students

Paid internships are available at the King Center for Social Change in Atlanta, Ga., and the Washington Center for Learning Alternatives in Washington, D.C.

Students from all MSU colleges may apply Deadline for King Center applications is July 25 for a fall term internship and the deadline for the Washington Center is Oct. 15 for a winter term internship.

Students who meet the criteria of the clearing office and are selected will be placed in an internship of their choice in such areas as community organization, urban planning and labor organization, said Dave Purcell, coordinator of the Experiential Education Program. The clearing office is located in the College of Urban

HEW plan may subsidize adoptions

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Carter Administration proposed on Tuesday to pay the maternity medical expenses of pregnant women who choose to bear their babies and give them up adoption rather than seek abortions

Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. said elements of the plan to provide federal subsidies for adoption of hard-to-place children are "obviously an alterna

Both President Jimmy Carter and Califano oppose using federal funds to pay for abortions

Carter reiterated his opposition to abortions Tuesday and defended as "reasonably fair" recent Supreme Court decisions that states are not obliged to pay for medically unnecessary abortions with welfare funds.

. . there are many things in life that are not fair, that wealthy people can afford and poor people can't. But I don't believe that the federal government should take action to try to make these opportunities exactly equal, particularly when there is a moral factor involved," Carter said at his news conference.

The federal government should pay for abortions only "when the woman's life is threatened or when the pregnancy was a result of rape or incest," the President said.

The adoption plan, similar to one already passed by the House and awaiting Senate action, ventually would cost more than a half billion dollars a year in federal subsidies to families and matching funds to states that improve their foster care programs. Vice President Walter F. Mondale, sponsor of one subsidy bill in the Senate before he was elected vice president, outlined the administration plan at a briefing with Califano. He said the plan is designed to "strengthen, rather than undercut, the family."

Califano said the proposal would provide "a couple of thousand dollars a year" to needy families that adopt traditionally hard-to-place children - those over 2 years old, children with mental or physical handicaps, minority group children and siblings who for one reason or another are deemed inseparable.

The present federally supported foster care program, Califano said in testimony prepared for the Senate, "is a classic example of a perverse incentive system" that is viciously antifamily.

He noted that the government now spends $171 million a year to help pay the expenses of children in foster homes but discourages foster parents from adopting the children by cutting off the payments — and in many states Medicaid eligibility — at the moment of adoption.

"This is theater-of-the-absurd government policy," Califano said.

Federal foster care funds, which would be increased to more than $300 million by the mid-1980s, would be available in the form of adoption subsidies to families. Such families would have to meet a still-to-be-written test of need based on their income.

More than $200 million eventually would made available to states on a matching passes to encourage them to develop better to develop better to care facilities and procedures and to give a child welfare programs incentives to try to families together or reunite them.

Neither Califano nor Mondale mentioned Neither Camano not aspects of the plan alternative to abortion aspects of the plan whether those provider whether the pro asked by a reporter whether those pro had been dropped.

In a multimillion dollar civil suit, the National Guard, the individual guardsmen who fired the shots. Rhodes and the university were cleared of liability in 1975. That case is under appeal in the U.S. 6th Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati.

Those arrested Tuesday, including two wheelchair users, were taken by bus and van to the county jail.

A university spokesperson said most of the demonstrators would be charged with contempt of court and released on $25 bond. Some may also be charged with resisting arrest. A defense fund for the bond money has been collected over the past months.

Bastille Day to be honored

Some of the activities on the itinerary are:

· Folksingers who regularly perform at the Olde World restaurant will be playing on an outdoor stage in front of the Olde World.

· Belly dancers and Can-Can dancers will perform. • There will be appearances by Yo-Yo the Clown on his unicycle and Shuffles the clown with his mime acts. · There will be a dunking booth set up, three artists will be exhibiting their work and bingo will be played. At 7 and 8 p.m. a magician will perform in the restaurant and do magic tricks at patrons' tables after each show. The dancers, singers and clowns will move inside the Olde World when the street opens.

WKAR-TV will be filming

the event.

The origin of the Bastille Day celebration was the brainchild of Olde World owner Ernest St. Pierre. He envisioned a Fourth of July community celebration, but since many East Lansing residents leave town for that holiday the date was changed to Bastille Day, said Sue Harris. manager of the Olde World restaurant.

Last year about 500 people were counted taking part in the festivities Harris said. No food or beverages will be served.

Another major responsibility of Winder's is his role in the University Long Range Planning Council, which will be going into full swing this year.

"The purpose of all that," Winder said, "is to try to identify the most important commitment this University has and ought to continue with for the next five to ten years."

General duties of the provost is another continuous responsibility for Winder.

They include supervising class registration, handling faculty personnel matters and developing new academic pro-

"Our job is setting a tone for whole academic enterprise." Winder said. This involves providing sound management of colleges, schools and departments. All policies dealing with academic activities, instruction, research and service could come to the attention of the provost.

As provost, Winder is salaried at $47,700 a year and will be occupying the same office

Previous to his five years as associate provost Winder was dean of the College of Social Science for seven years. He came to MSU in 1961 as a professor of psychology and directed the University Psychological Clinic.

A few hundred persons who avoided arrest by staying off the construction site stood nearby and shouted for police to leave the campus.

Over the weekend, university President Glenn A. Olds had tried to persuade students to leave. They refused unless he promised the gym would not be constructed. They contend the building, which would be about 120 feet from the actual scene of the shooting, will

After listening to legal argu ments on Monday, Judge Jo-seph Kainrad of Portage Coun-Common Pleas Court ordered demonstrators from the area before 8 a.m. Tuesday. But he also delayed construction activity until after another hearing on July 21. The demonstrators - the

May Fourth Coalition - voted later Monday to remain on the site to be arrested.

As the deadline approached, those arrested walked up the hill from which National Guardsmen shot the 13 persons in 1970, formed a square, and linked arms and legs. A deputy read the court order and distributed copies. A der tor collected the copies them in a waste can.

Gov. lauds legislatur on good '77-78 start

LANSING (UPI) — Gov. William G. Milliken congratual legislature Monday on a good beginning to its 1977-78 added that much remains to be done.

Milliken said he was pleased that lawmakers completed the work on the 1977-78 budget before leaving on their recess, but expressed disappointment that the spending plan million above his recommended level.

"It is unfortunate that more restraint was not presen final passage of the budget," he said.

Milliken hailed approval of the $75 million "rainy day" PBB-control bill, a $10 million summer youth employment and repeal of a scheduled state income tax decrease,

This fall, he said, the legislature should give high propassing a State Police budget which includes funds for patrols of freeways in Detroit and outside cities as well. "We believe in service to the community," the union spokes-

Ann Arbor bus drivers walk out

ANN ARBOR (UPI) - Some 215 city bus drivers walked off the job Monday, stranding 8,000 commuters in the latest city employe strike to hit southeastern Michigan.

The drivers, members of the Transportation Employes Union, walked off the job at 12:01 a.m. Monday after they overwhelmingly rejected the new contract offer from the Ann Arbor Transportation Authority.

"We have absolutely no bus service today," said Karl Guenther, executive director of the authority. "We hope to provide some modest service, but there's nobody to drive. It's a total shutdown."

Supervisors were able to keep one bus running during the day to serve handicapped residents who needed emer-

The striking city workers drive buses in Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti and in rural areas of Washtenaw County, providing special transportation to the disabled and elderly.

Negotiators for the drivers and the transportation authority were scheduled to meet Tuesday with a state mediator.

The Ann Arbor strike was the third strike by city workers to hit southeastern Michigan this summer. Municipal employes in Warren returned to work Monday after voting to end a two-day walkout. Some 8,000 workers in Detroit staged a one-day walkout last week which virtually halted city ser-
