Arms sale reactions mixed

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Israel saw the U.S. Senate's approval of a three nation Mideast plane sale as a diplomatic slap in the face. Egypt praised it as an expression of the American people's will, and Saudi Arabia said it showed Jewish influence waning in Washington.

The conflicting views came Tuesday from the three recipients of the $4.8 billion arms sales package approved Monday in a 54-44 Senate vote.

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin expressed "deep regret" at the approval. He accused the Carter administration of renegeing on "an absolute and unconditional commitment" made in September 1975 to sell Israel F-16 jets and said "there is no justification" for including Egypt and Saudi Arabia in that deal.

Israel will get 75 F-16s and 15 F-15s in the sales package. Saudi Arabia will receive 60 F-15s and Egypt 50 F-5Es.

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat said the U.S. decision "is proof of the American people's support for President Carter's peace efforts in the Middle East."

In a statement issued by his office, Sadat said the deal is most significant because "for the first time the Arabs were able to overcome the special U.S.-Israeli relationship that has so far obstructed Arab purchases of U.S. weapons for their own security."

Saudi Arabia's government radio said the Senate action was a clear indication "the Jewish lobby in the United States is weakening" and Israel is losing its "influence on pressure groups in America."

The radio commentary, monitored in Cyprus, said, "This heralds a new era in relations between the United States and Israel, during which Israel will no longer be able to influence U.S. policy, which will henceforth be dictated by American interests."

Begin, in a Tel Aviv speech to Israeli manufacturers, said, "We are very sorry" the sale was a package deal for Israel and the Arabs.

Then, without naming America, he said, "An effort is being made to dictate peace terms to us to pressure us into a position from which it will be not only difficult but impossible to defend our civilian population."

"Peace terms cannot be dictated to Israel. Peace terms can only be negotiated with Israel," he declared to thunderous applause.

Defense Minister Ezer Weizman also was critical of the U.S. administration but urged Israelis to drop the "narrow" subject.

Speaking in a television interview, he said the issue was more important politically than militarily, and the threat from Arabs having advanced American planes could be dealt with if Israelis "think, plan and prepare. There is nothing impossible."

In Tel Aviv, an Israeli official who asked not to be identified said, "The Americans are now getting even handed and you know how we define even handed: you get slapped in the face with one hand, and then with the other, equally hard."

To some Israeli observers the Senate vote reflected Israel's loss of prestige in the United States stemming from the current stalemate in Mideast peace talks. They said many Americans blame the deadlock on Jerusalem's opposition to Cairo's peace terms, including total Israeli withdrawal from occupied Arab territory and creation of a Palestinian homeland.

The Egyptian foreign minister said the sale of the first American warplanes to Egypt will "encourage us to continue our peace efforts."

Egypt is depending on Washington to lever peace concessions from Israel and in recent interviews Egyptian President Anwar Sadat said the sale was important as a symbol of U.S. intentions to the Arabs.

military advantage over the Arabs, but with the supply of U.S. fighters to Egypt and Saudi Arabia "we're going to lose that edge."

Moshe Arens, chairperson of the influential foreign affairs and security committee of the Israeli Parliament, told reporters that until now Israel had enjoyed a qualitative

The Israeli press called the Senate vote "a failure on the part of the Israeli lobby" in Washington and accused Begin of failing to voice Israeli's objections strongly enough.

Cartwright quits, concedes guilt

LANSING (AP) — State Sen. Arthur Cartwright pleaded guilty Tuesday to a charge of chiseling on his expense account, agreed to resign and pledged that he would not seek re-election.

His departure on May 31 will be the second occasion this month that a Michigan lawmaker has left the Legislature under the cloud of a criminal conviction.

Cartwright, a 68-year-old Detroit Democrat, pleaded guilty to a charge of defrauding the state of less than $100 — specifically, of submitting an expense account for $45.80 for an Atlanta meal when in fact he spent $4.16.

In exchange for the misdemeanor conviction — which carries a maximum penalty of a $100 fine and 90 days in jail — the state agreed to drop five felony charges against Cartwright involving other alleged expense account fraud.

Cartwright's plea came only five days after the House voted to expel Rep. Monte Gerald, D-Madison Heights, because of a conviction for embezzling $24,000 from a law client. Cartwright's attorney said the controversy over Gerald hurt his chances of getting a jury not biased against politicians.

"A jury would have had a difficult time coming to grips with finding my client not guilty," said Dennis Archer. "He (Cartwright) didn't feel he would get a fair trial."

Attorney General Frank J. Kelley said in a statement the agreement "effectively serves the end of justice. I believe decisive action was necessary to remove a questionable public official from office and help restore public confidence in government."

Under the plea bargain accepted by Ingham County Circuit Court Judge Thomas Brown, Cartwright also will reimburse Michigan the entire amount — $692.22 — the state has accused him of taking under false pretenses, according to the attorney general's office.

Sentencing was set for June 7 at the earliest.

Cartwright will get a $12,072 annual pension as a 13 and one half year veteran of the House and Senate. He would not get it if expelled, as was likely if he was convicted.

VICTIMS CALLED 'CURFEW BREAKERS'

Zimbabwe battle leaves 50 dead

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (Zimbabwe) (AP) — Fifty blacks described as "curfew breakers" were killed and 24 wounded when they were caught in cross-fire in a battle between government troops and nationalist guerrillas, the military command announced Tuesday night.

It is believed the largest number of civilian deaths in a single engagement in the five-year war by black nationalist guerrillas against white rule in the country.

The communique said the shooting took place Sunday night when a security force unit on a bush patrol discovered a group of guerrillas addressing tribe members in a curfew area.

The communique announced a total of 87 deaths, including two soldiers, eight guerillas, 13 persons described as "terrorist collaborators" and 14 civilians. The victims, all but one of whom were black, apparently died in the three days since the last war bulletin was issued.

Almost all areas along Zimbabwe's more than 1,500 miles of borders with black ruled states are under a dusk-to-dawn curfew. The curfew also is in force in parts of the country up to 100 miles from the border and applies to parts of the day in areas where guerrilla presence is particularly strong.

According to the military, the security force patrol opened fire on the guerrillas addressing the tribe members, killing one as he was making a speech.

"This resulted in other groups of terrorists opening fire from different positions at security forces, across and through the tribesmen," the communique said. "In the resulting firefight 50 curfew breakers were killed and another 24 were wounded."

According to unconfirmed reports, the battle took place in the Gutu tribal reservation 120 miles south of the capital.

The 10-week-old bi-racial transition administration predicted the fighting, now covering two-thirds of the country, would die down following the agreement by the white-minority government to hand over power to a popularly-elected black government by the end of this year.

White Prime Minister Ian Smith, now joined in a ruling transition council with three moderate black nationalist leaders, conceded in an interview Monday the cease fire was taking longer than expected to "get off the ground."

Guerrilla leaders have denounced the Salisbury agreement and pledged to step up the battle to gain control of this breakaway British colony.

Curfew regulations provide that persons outside their homes after hours can be shot on sight.

The estimated 6,000 guerrillas now fighting within the country are known to hold regular political indoctrination meetings in rural areas.

Of the more than 9,000 people officially reported killed in the past five years, more than 1,000 have been described by the white-ruled military as guerrilla helpers, recruits or "cross-fire" victims. There have been regular reports of curfew breakers being killed, but the circumstances are not usually described.

U.S. troops may rescue Americans from Zaire

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon says paratroopers and Air Force jets Tuesday in the event they locate American civilians in Zaire. The Defense Department stressed that the rescue of personnel or aircraft has been the priority.

provide details on the number of troops and planes affected by the alert.

For the second time in 14 months, rebel insurgents are attempting to take over Shaba Province in Zaire, a Central African nation that was a former Belgian colony.

State Department spokesperson Hodding Carter said the first concern of the United States is the welfare of 73 American citizens residing in the Kolwezi area of southern Zaire, which has been the focal point of the new fighting. Sixty-two of the Americans living in Zaire are employees of the Morrison Knudsen firm, based in Idaho, which has been constructing a power project in Kolwezi.

Earlier Tuesday, at a breakfast meeting with congressional leaders, President Carter suggested he would like Congress to ease its restrictions on his power to send U.S. military aid abroad.

Carter, who is concerned about renewed fighting in Zaire, indicated such legislation "would be very welcome." House Minority Leader John Rhodes said after the meeting.

Rhodes added, however, that Carter did not specifically request a relaxation of the controls, which were enacted in the wake of the Vietnam war.

"But he certainly indicated it would be very welcome and I got the impression that there would be a legislative proposal to accomplish that," the Arizona Republican said of Carter.

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance met with House and Senate leaders later to discuss the possibility of taking what he called a "dispassionate look at existing laws to see if changes can be made."

"I would hope this could be done promptly," Vance said as he emerged from the meeting. (continued on page 14)

Stronger spouse abuse bills passed by House

NEW YORK (AP) — On a series of unanimous votes Tuesday, the state House approved strengthening the hand of the police and courts in dealing with domestic violence. At the same time, Gov. William G. Milliken said he will ask the Legislature for $1 million to establish a shelter for battered wives and their children in Detroit.

Spouse abuse bills were the subject of lively debate in five public hearings held by the state and two extensive "statewide working sessions," but they slipped through the House and over to the Senate Tuesday without debate.

The package, introduced last September by Rep. Connie Binsfeld, R-Maple, would make it easier for police to prosecute wife beaters by dropping the present requirement that officers must witness the assault in order to make an arrest. The bill would give judges wider discretion in spouse abuse cases, allowing them to grant a second chance by ordering mandatory counseling instead of jail.

Offenders who meet certain requirements could have their record erased.

Measures in the package require law enforcement agencies to keep better records on domestic violence cases and improve judges' ability to protect battered wives from further attacks through the use of restraining orders.

The new Domestic Violence Center would be able to accommodate 40 adults and 140 children up to three weeks at a time, in addition to providing services to those who stay in their own homes.

In addition to the emergency shelter and counseling service, the project calls for an educational and research program.

Lansing council may approve money dredging, overriding mayoral veto

By JANET HALFMANN
State News Staff Writer

The City Council will probably override the mayor's veto of the Lake Lansing dredging project formally submitted Tuesday.

The council took no action on the veto Monday, but will vote on it next week. Six of the eight council member votes are needed to approve the funding over the mayor's veto.

The project is virtually assured since the $25,000 partial payment of the lake dredging project was passed unanimously by the council last week.

The city's remaining pledge of $100,000 would be paid if a park agreement with Ingham County can be worked out.

The $25 million lake restoration project is also being financed by $25 million in federal funds, $400,000 from Ingham County, $200,000 each from Meridian Township and East Lansing and $100,000 from the lake assessment district.

The veto statement, Mayor Gerald W. Graves said $176,000 of the amount being put in by the county was actually a contribution from Lansing.

The county collects about 44 percent of its property taxes from city residents, he said.

"I am not opposed to the Lake Lansing project, as such," Graves said. "However, I am opposed to the 'double dipping' from the pockets of the taxpayers in this community."

Councilmember Richard J. Baker criticized the mayor's argument. Fifty percent of the users of Lake Lansing are Lansing residents, he said.

"There's a lot of double dipping that goes on on both sides," he said. "But to say that Ingham County is doing nothing is not true."

Baker also pointed out that the county is contributing additional funds to develop two park areas around the lake.

Councilmember James D. Blair agreed the veto would be overridden, though he had originally argued the same points as the mayor.

"The council came to a compromise between two varying positions," he said.

In other action, the council approved the city's purchase of the Jury Rowe Warehouse in the 300 block of East Michigan Avenue for $125,000.

The property will enable the city to expand Riverfront Park and provide warehouse space for city departments.

The council also approved the $38.4 million budget for fiscal year 1978-79.

A job classification and salary level study for city employees done by Hay Associates will also be implemented.

The study recommended that the salaries of over 300 city employees be frozen for up to three years.

Guerrillas hold against Ethiopian offensive

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Rebel guerrillas are holding fast against a two-pronged Ethiopian offensive launched to crush the 16-year-old independence rebellion in Ethiopia's northern Red Sea province of Eritrea, the biggest rebel group claimed Tuesday.

A statement said the purported pincer offensive by 40,000 Ethiopian troops was primarily aimed at closing rebel sea supply routes and breaking a six-month guerrilla siege of Eritrea's provincial capital of Asmara.

"The heaviest fighting is flaring along the entire Eritrean coast, from the northern port of Massawa to the southern port of Assab," said a statement issued by the Eritrean Liberation Front-Revolutionary Council.

In Washington, Defense Department spokesman Thomas Ross said the United States has received reports of sporadic fighting in Eritrea, but "nothing to indicate it has escalated."

The rebel statement claimed 20,000 troops mounted the four-day coastal assault behind relentless air and naval strikes.

OPEC cutting back oil production

KUWAIT (AP) — Oil Minister Ali Khalifah al-Sabah said Tuesday the entire Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries has begun cutting back crude oil production by 20 percent.

Several OPEC members have pushed for production cuts to offset a current world oil surplus created by new oil supplies from Alaska, the North Sea and Mexico.

The OPEC production cuts appeared aimed at balancing world oil supplies and stabilizing demand for its crude oil exports.

Al-Sabah said all 13 members of the oil cartel are participating in the program which calls for an overall cut of eight million barrels a day from last year's average daily production of 34 million barrels.

Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, Saudi Arabia's oil minister announced in Kuwait last week that his country, the world's largest crude oil exporter, had cut daily production by 1.5 million barrels from last year's average of 9.5 barrels a day.

Courtroom crowd jeers dissident

MOSCOW (AP) — Policemen tussled with reporters outside and spectators jeered defendant Yuri Orlov inside a courtroom Tuesday where the dissident leader was being tried for "anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda."

Emerging from the second day of the trial of her physicist husband, Trina Orlov said a "crude" courtroom crowd laughed and jeered him as he testified and Judge V.G. Lubentsova repeatedly cut him off.

Foreign reporters, Orlov's fellow dissidents and a U.S. Embassy representative have been barred from the courthouse where the founder of Moscow's Helsinki human rights group is on trial.

"It's a spectacle and a circus. It's really not funny, because the main thing is Yuri has lost the right to defend himself properly," Mrs. Orlov said.

Uniformed Soviet police shouting "Enough! Enough!" tussled with reporters interviewing Mrs. Orlov. They pushed the group away from the courthouse and at one point tried to seize a reporter's tape recorder.

Industrial output increases

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's economy turned in a strong performance in April as industrial output rose 1.1 percent and housing starts increased 6 percent. The increases marked the second good month in a row following the winter slowdown.

The Federal Reserve Board said Tuesday that production gains were widespread throughout the economy. They were led by autos, business equipment and durable materials, including metals.

In a separate report, the Commerce

Department said April housing starts were at an annual rate of 2,189,000, up from the March rate of 2,060,000 and 15 percent ahead of the construction pace a year earlier. Single family housing starts were 1,502,000 at an annual rate, up from the March rate of 1,444,000.

Building permits future housing construction also increased 6 percent during the month to an annual rate of 1,752,000, up from the March rate of 1,347,000 the agency said.

Carter to release aid to Nicaragua

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration has decided to release $12 million in non-military aid for Nicaragua, due in part to pressure from Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Texas.

State Department sources said the administration plans to continue holding up about $5.3 million in military sales credits approved by Congress for the regime of President Anastasio Somoza.

The administration, citing human rights abuses by the Somoza government, has made it a policy to do nothing to assist him in resisting widespread pressures within Nicaragua for his resignation.

For that reason, according to a State Department source who asked not to be identified, the department had been refusing to release the $12 million in economic aid, primarily in the form of educational and economic development loans, or the $5.3 million in military aid appropriated by Congress in the 1976, 1977 and 1978 fiscal years.

Hearst's attorney plans strategy

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — As Patricia Hearst settled in to prison routine Tuesday, her attorney said he plans one last-ditch effort to obtain the convicted bank robber's freedom.

George Martinez refused to discuss details of the legal strategy or to give a timetable. But he said he would ask U.S. District Court Judge William Orrick Jr. to modify the seven-year prison sentence.

Orrick is on vacation until the end of the month, but Martinez has 120 days from April 24, when the U.S. Supreme Court refused to reconsider its denial of review, to ask for a hearing.

"Our strategy is to proceed in a guarded way and to develop, if we can, the factors and circumstances on the issue of modification in a way that will satisfy the judge," Martinez said.

Authorities said Hearst spent a quiet first night Monday at the campus-like federal prison facility at Pleasanton, about 30 miles east of San Francisco. The four-year-old prison houses 300 women inmates in wooden buildings without bars.

Zairean troops battle invaders

By The Associated Press
Several hundred Zaire government paratroopers dropped into the embattled area around the southern town of Kolwezi Tuesday to join the fight against rebel invaders holding that important copper-mining center, Zaire's Radio Kinshasa reported.

Diplomatic reports late Tuesday from Lusaka, Zambia, south of the central African nation of Zaire said eight Belgians and an Italian had been killed in the fighting. Zaire's embassy in Lusaka could not confirm the reports.

The Belgian Foreign Ministry confirmed a Belgian working for a mining company died in the Kolwezi fighting. There are no reports of American casualties.

Zaire reported gains against the rebels elsewhere in the southern province of Shaba, but this could not be confirmed.

In Washington, President Carter was reported ready to ask Congress to ease restrictions on sending military aid to such friendly nations as Zaire. During a similar invasion last year by rebels trying to seize Shaba — the former Katanga Province — the United States provided only non-lethal equipment for communications and transportation to the central government.

State Department officials, meanwhile, were considering an evacuation of 80 to 100 Americans from the battle zone. The Johannesburg Star newspaper, in a dispatch from Zambia, said all able-bodied white men in rebel-held territory had been placed in protective custody.

In Brussels, the National Front for the Liberation of the Congo, which claims responsibility for the attack, said civilian casualties were a result of bombings by government planes and could not be blamed on the invaders.

The statement said the attack was not aided by Cuba or the Soviet Union, and promised invading troops would not harm European or American civilians "in any way under any pretext."

The French Embassy in Lusaka said five French military advisers to Zaire's pro-Western government were captured by the rebels. Their fate is unknown.

The official Zaire radio, monitored by the British Broadcasting Corp. in London, said the paratroopers were dropped around Kolwezi to join government ground forces in the area and "retake the town and the airport." It gave few details, but reliable sources in Belgium, former colonial ruler of Zaire, said the fighting was heavy.

Food stores and the homes of Europeans were being looted inside the rebel-held town of 100,000 people.

The rebel force of mated 4,000 exiled tribesmen crossed into late last week — infiltrating through from training bases in and quickly seized Kolwezi north of the border.

Zaire's foreign minister ba di Lutete, said during a visit to West Congo that government troops had retaken the town of shaba, 60 miles west of But this contradicted from Belgium that remained in rebel hands.

Firefighters battled an early morning fire that destroyed a hotel in Jellico, Tenn., killing at least seven persons and injuring 15. Many of the victims were elderly, permanent residents of the hotel which was built near the turn of the century.

TENNESSEE HOTEL BURNS TO GROUND

Fire claims seven lives

JELLICO, Tenn. (AP) — Fire swept through an aging residential hotel Tuesday, killing at least seven persons, officials said. A mother tossed her infant daughter from a third-floor window into the father's waiting arms, then jumped herself to escape the flames.

Firefighters were searching for more possible victims in a pile of bricks — all that was left of the three-story building after the early morning blaze brought down its roof and upper floors.

The state fire marshal's office said four more bodies might be in the debris.

"We are still looking for people who may have been there last night," said Arnold Overton, police and fire dispatcher in this rural community in northeast Tennessee near the Kentucky state line.

George Schnitzer, a state fire marshal's spokesperson, said three men, three women and a child died in the blaze.

The hospital said four of the victims were Iva Marie Brookman, 77; J. T. Hopkins, age undetermined; James Miller, age undetermined; and Miller's 3-year-old son.

Eleven persons required hospital attention, and six were admitted for treatment of smoke inhalation or injuries sustained in their escape. Police Chief Charles Bruce said he believed 29 persons, many of them elderly, were registered Monday night.

Cause of the fire was not known.

Dan Sanderford, administrator for the community hospital in the northeast Tennessee town of 1,300, said a temporary morgue was set up in a looser room at the facility.

The bodies were badly burned, he said. "By looking at them, you couldn't tell their age or sex."

Grievance rules unresolved

By MICHELLE CHAMBERS
State News Staff Writer

Council failed to approve a permanent Faculty Grievance Procedure Tuesday. The document will be discussed during this academic year. The procedure was submitted to the council by a subcommittee on Feb. 22. The procedure was not approved, it will continue to be discussed next year. The council does not meet during summer term. The council was still working on the third section of the seven part document Tuesday. The meeting was adjourned. Dr. H. Horne, professor of chemistry, made a motion to extend the usual meeting time of 5 to 5:30 p.m. so the current council could take action on the document changing section three of the document. The motion was seconded to the motion. Dr. Norrell, chairperson of the Academic Council steering committee, said she was in favor of leaving the document unapproved. She would suggest to the steering committee that the amendments already included in the document be included in the document presented to the next Faculty Council. Lester M. Hyman, chairperson of the University Committee on Faculty Affairs, asked who would support and explain the document next year. As chairperson of the committee which composed the document, Hyman has been spokesperson for the procedure since it was submitted in February. He said he did not want to be chairperson of the committee next year, though he is serving on the committee until June 1979. During the meeting, no permanent action was taken on an amendment to substitute the section dealing with the appeals process following an initial grievance hearing, but several amendments were made. The major change to the amendment was a provision allowing both parties involved in a grievance to strike no more than five names from the list of the 29 member University Appeals Board. The change would allow the two parties to remove a board member from the appeal procedure because of a possible conflict of interest, but limiting the number to five would eliminate the possibility of striking every member from the board.

City plan for future gets unique critique at informal hearing

By BRUCE BABIARZ
State News Staff Writer

Students and East Lansing homeowners can help plan the future of the city in an informal hearing at 7:30 tonight at Hannah

Middle School, 819 Abbott Rd. The East Lansing Planning Commission will make a presentation with a "provocative" critique of the "Comprehensive Plan, 1980," said James Van Ravensway, city planner.

The comprehensive plan, developed in the '60s, was designed to project the growth of the city through 1980. But, unforeseen problems outdated the plan. City planners are trying to educate citizens on what is wrong with the old plan and develop a new one based on residents' needs and desires.

The informal meeting will begin with a four-minute film on the history of the United States which ends with pictures of former president Richard Nixon. A visual critique of the plan will be presented in a slide show with an informal discussion to follow.

Also to be discussed is the city's unconventional critique of the 1980 comprehensive plan, "Plan it Again, Sam." "Sam" is a fictional city planner who travels back in time to 1967, when the original plan was passed, to see what the city was like at the time the plan was developed.

A Humphrey Bogart character who acts as a former planning commissioner buys Sam a "stiff drink" and explains the city's perspective in developing the original plan. The idea to do "something different" with a city report originated with Tom Korstosky, a city planner and primary author of "Plan it Again, Sam."

"In the critiquing the original plan we came up with a lot of technical material like the design of sewer systems which we thought would turn people off. So, I started out writing a short story," Korstosky said.

After two drafts with different approaches planners decided to stay with the Bogart theme.

"The Bogart draft had the strongest image that people could relate to," Korstosky said. "I think it's interesting because it attempts to tie issues, facts, and figures together with a story line."

Everyone planners talked to liked the "Sam" idea. Korstosky said adding there was an element of "risk" involved in writing the report.

If rejected by the Planning Commission, they would have to write a conventional report and the deadline for its completion was drawing near. Korstosky said.

"We decided to take a chance on it — it's been worth it."

Halt or I'll bite!

Taking the bull by the horns, or rather the horse by the tail, Porky, a part-shepherd puppy, put the bite on Cornflakes at a Lansing farm. Cornflakes patiently waited for Porky to release his grip, but failing, was last seen dragging the dog through the corral. Presumably, the owners of both the dog and the shrimpy stallion scolded both for "horsing around."

Restaurant smacked by hit-and-run driver

A car drove through the window and part of the side wall of Moon's restaurant at 231 M.A.C. Ave. at about 2:30 Tuesday morning, East Lansing police officials reported.

No one was injured, officials said. Sue Herron, Moon's day manager, said only employees were in the restaurant when the accident occurred.

"They had no idea what was going on. There was an explosion when the car hit, and everybody thought it might be a bomb," she said.

Herron said after the car came through the wall it "just backed up and drove away. It was what you might call a hit and run."

East Lansing Deputy Police Chief Robert Foster said the car had been identified and located.

"We found most of Moon's window in the car," he said.

Foster said the owner of the car had also been identified and contacted, adding that "he (the owner) said he was so crooked he doesn't remember anything."

Police declined to comment further or to relate other details concerning the case until today.

KNOWLEDGE

I ask myself what I know at thirty-eight and two degrees past high school
I know something about people something about poetry
how to bake a quiche so it won't curdle how to swing a hammer for nailing cedar I've forgotten the constellations I knew once
I'll learn them back!

These answers are somehow unsatisfying
Whatever I know
only touches the surface of things as water spiders do thought riding the silvery film of pressure meeting pressure
I do know
it's not tension alone that keeps water spiders afloat
I saw in a book
how each holds tiny balls of air clenched in its insect fists Fist?

That claw, hand, nail, or — pincer
What do you call the digit of an insect by which it holds a pearl of air and thus contrives to walk on water?
A thing worth knowing which I don't.

The sale of a fleet of advanced F-15s (above) to Saudi Arabia has provoked intense controversy and disagreement between, among others, Jimmy Carter and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin. We agree with Carter, and the 55 U.S. Senators who endorsed the arms pact, that the sale of these jets to Saudi Arabia will have long-term benefits that outweigh potential short-term debits.

Prime Minister Begin

President Carter

Selling jets as a risk for peace

The Senate Monday handed Jimmy Carter a big victory. It voted 54-44 not to interfere with the sale of jet fighters to three nations in the Mideast — Israel, Saudi Arabia and Egypt. Egypt will receive 50 F-15Es, while Saudi Arabia will be sent 60 of the more advanced F-15s. Seventy-five F-16s and 15 F-15s will go to Israel. To sweeten the pot, and make passage of the arms package more palatable to the Senate, Carter agreed to sell Israel another 20 F-15s, to be delivered in 1983-84.

Upon wading through this thicket of numbers, the crux of the matter, we believe, is this: for the first time the United States will sell advanced fighter planes to Saudi Arabia. The sale is not, as its opponents contend, designed to undermine Israel and recompense Saudi Arabia for its decision not to raise world oil prices. It is designed to bolster the bargaining position of moderate Arabs in the simmering Mideast dispute, forestall the possibility that Saudi Arabia will tap the Russians as arms suppliers, enhance the credibility of the United States as an impartial judge of Mideast affairs, preserve the credibility of Jimmy Carter in diplomatic chambers around the world, and, perhaps most importantly, avert the possibility that Egyptian President Anwar Sadat will resign because the peace initiative he launched six months ago is today foundering badly.

That is an exhausting list. It is a list which, we believe, dispels the notion that the debits of the arms sale outweigh its benefits.

Had the sale been disapproved, the diplomatic reaction would have been cataclysmic. Carter, who promised Saudi Arabia delivery of the jets, would have looked foolish and inept. Israel, detecting support from the U.S. Senate and, by extension, the American people, would have been encouraged to continue pursuing its inflexible line in the Mideast peace talks. Anwar Sadat would have been perilously undercut. In sum, the role of the United States in Mideast affairs would have been plunged, perhaps irretrievably, into disarray.

We share the anxieties of those who believe that the United States should stop being the arms merchant for the world, but look askance on the contention that the arms package will increase the prospects of war in that part of the world. Israel and neighbors are already armed to the teeth; the surest way to thwart armed conflict is to negotiate a settlement acceptable to all parties.

The United States, by selling these planes to Saudi Arabia, has served notice on Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin that Israel can no longer rely on Washington's knee-jerk support. As things stand now, if the sale does nothing to enhance the potential for a reasonable Mideast settlement, nothing at all will be lost.

Are Title IX demands reasonable

Coerce MSU into compliance

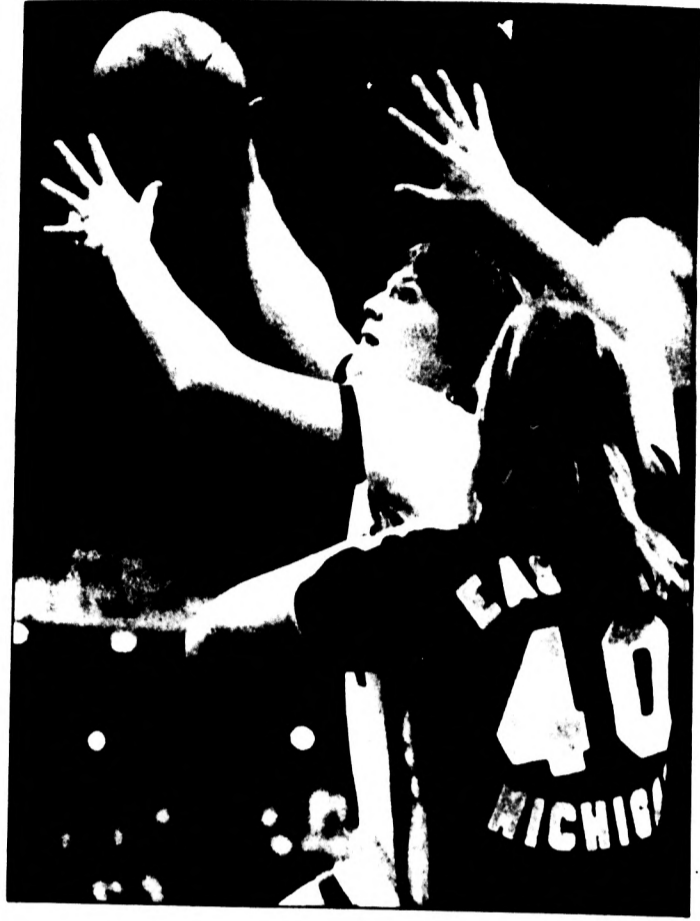

Following is a statement circulated with petitions at the women's sports banquet.

You are all probably aware of the fact that the women's basketball team has filed a public complaint against Michigan State University charging them with flagrant violations of Title IX of the Equal Education Amendments of 1972. All of us as women athletes have suffered from blatant discrimination because of our sex. This University has cheated all of us out of our legal rights for the past six years. They have chosen to follow a policy which not only disregards our rights as athletes but has also caused a steady depreciation in the quality of our total program.

We can no longer be passive in pursuing our rights. Obviously legal sanctions are not enough, we must coerce the University into obedience with them. We must collectively fight the self-denigrating attitude which makes being treated as second class athletes acceptable. Become familiar with your rights as an athlete. Examine your own programs for discriminatory practices. Contact Mary Pollack, the Title IX coordinator, and familiarize yourself with the procedures to follow in filing your own complaint. Sign our petition. Show your support by helping us circulate it.

This is for all of us; it will not be done for us, we must do it together.

Mariann R. Mankowski
Kathleen J. De Boer
Representatives of the women's basketball Team.

Women basketball players have filed a complaint with the University officials charging that the University has shirked its responsibility to provide, under Title IX, equitable funding and treatment for both men and women athletes. The controversy promises to become even more pressing as the federal deadline for Title IX compliance, July, approaches.

Women eagers ask too much

An open letter to Ms. Kathleen DeBoer and Ms. Marianne Mankowski, representatives of the women's basketball team:

As an auxiliary member of the athletic program here at Michigan State University, I am aware of the problems affiliated with the women's athletic program. Agreed, the women who locker in the Women's IM must double and sometimes even triple up in one locker. You deserve a separate locker room or at least a section of lockers in the Women's IM. Your only problem is that you are trying to make known your problem by using the men's program (basketball in particular).

You are demanding the same thing the men's basketball teams gets (a plane trip or buses for travel). The last time you went to the post season playoffs (regionals) was here at Jenison Fieldhouse this past season on your own campus. You brought back the University a small amount of money and the fieldhouse was not even close to a sellout. Conversely, when the men's basketball team went to the regionals this past season, they came back with over $40,000 for the University athletic budget and every regular season home game was sold out.

Men's athletics has been going on for over 100 years while competitive, organized women's athletics has been going on for a mere six years. How can you expect to do in less than 10 years what took men approximately 100 years to achieve — a superior program of athletics? Quit being so damn demanding of University athletic officials with deadlines for decisions and ultimatums.

Your argument goes on to state that "women athletes have suffered from blatant discrimination because of sex." Do you realize that men's track, lacrosse, tennis, cross country, golf, swimming and even wrestling all travel by University station wagons to away events? Don't you think they get "exhausted" after five to 10 hours in a car also? The only sports that travel "in luxury" (plane or bus) are the revenue sports and women's basketball definitely is not a revenue sport at MSU.

In conclusion, I would like to point out what I consider to be an extreme lack of class displayed at the Women's Sports Banquet last Tuesday. As athletes, guests, etc. entered the banquet there you were with a petition for sign. At such a function, most of the females I have talked to said they were obligated to sign just because of the situation. They also felt that it was their place for you to be peddling the petition such an event.

Lately your actions have shown a lack of thought, and you should think you further damage yourselves, the women's athletic program, and MSU until after you act representative of MSU athletes can you expect, support from the University community.

Italy is facing a battle for survival in its fight with terrorism, and should not — indeed, cannot — afford to give in to Red Brigades' demands. The urban guerilla gang has been making headlines around the world with its kneecap shootings of Fiat executives and conservative editors and finally its kidnap-slaying of former Prime Minister Aldo Moro.

The Italian authorities appear inept at stopping the guerilla group. Moro's body was found in a car parked in downtown Rome a few blocks away from top political offices. How the kidnapers were able to elude a massive dragnet is still a mystery, and the wild shootings continue to mount.

Moro's family and reportedly only a small segment of Italy's population were in favor of releasing Red Brigades prisoners in exchange for Moro. Such an exchange would have played right into the hands of the Red Brigades and could have very well toppled Italian democracy.

The Red Brigades are an ultra-leftist group. They are very much opposed to the moderate leaning of the Italian Communist party, which gives parliamentary support to the ruling right-of-center Christian Democrats.

The Red Brigades want to "attack at the heart of the state" and bring chaos and alienate and radicalize the Communists. They say it will trigger polarization along the left and right that would lead to a massive struggle — presumably a revolution — and an eventual leftist victory. The newspapers I've been reading haven't really reported whether Italy is experiencing a rising crest of "law and order," neo-fascist type sentiment. But the survival of Italian democracy hinges on how much rightist sentiment is rising and the government's ability to hold fast against the terrorists.

The Communist party has recognized the dangers to democracy of an accommodating policy toward the terrorists. They have been the most vocal in calling for no deals.

The situation in Italy is very volatile right now. It is a tinderbox that could easily explode.

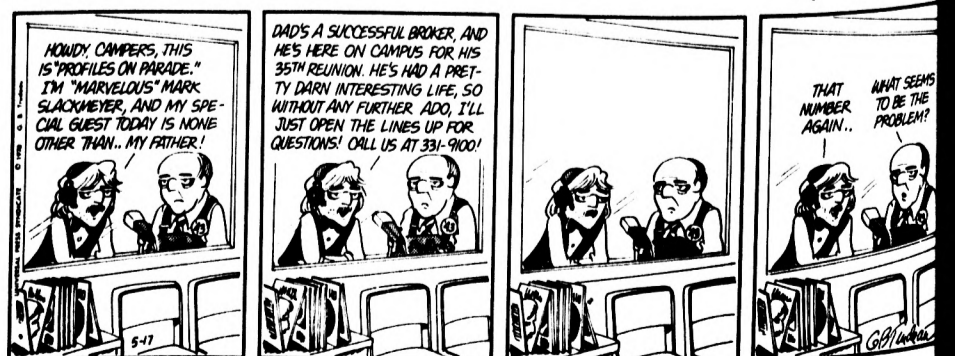

Since World War II the cleavage along left-right lines has slowly diminished. The historic compromise whereby the moderate right Christian Democrats and the moderate left Communists would rule together could be near at hand. Presently the Christian Democrats without official Communist participation in the cabinet. But the Communists actively consult with Christian Democrats as part of the "parliamentary major" situation would be allowed to peacefully, Italy could soon become a Western European country with a coalition of Communists and conservative nations, leading perhaps to a stronger and better equipped to handle perplexing problems of our time.

The Italian government should be able to ensure that democracy and peace hold out. And other nations should hold out their full support.

Italy is at a historic crossroads, able to make the proper turn, a turn that could be ushered in throughout the

'JAZZ' IT SURELY ISN'T

Gale funks the disco

By RENALDO MIGALDI
State News Reviewer

I'm knocking on the door of Eric Gale's dressing room at Dooley's just after his first show Monday night. The door opens a crack and a guy checks my press card. "Eric, this guy from the newspaper wants to talk to ya."

I am let into a tiny room just large enough for the eight members of Gale's band, plus three or four other people, to stand in. Eric Gale the Famous Guitarist is standing in the corner, combing his thinning grey hair in front of a dusty mirror. "Mind if I ask you a few questions?" I say.

"Sure, as long as they're not too involved," he answers.

So first we establish that he was born in Brooklyn, and that he began playing guitar at "about 10." Then I ask him about early influences, and he starts listing jazz sax players: "Charlie Parker, Dexter Gordon, Sonny Rollins, Hank Crawford..."

"How about guitarists?" I break in.

He stops combing his hair to look at me, shakes his head and shrugs. "Anything I hear I can play, so it doesn't matter," he says. A couple of the other musicians chuckle quietly.

Hmm, this cat sure is a cocky s.o.b., I think to myself. Either he's arrogant as hell, or else he just knows what kind of quotes newspapers love to print.

But Eric Gale is really just a veteran finger whiz with years of experience as a studio session musician (when I asked him who he'd played with, he just said, "name somebody") but no firm artistic commitment.

He's got his guitar language mastered but is without anything interesting to say. His solo work seems motivated primarily by ego and financial considerations: since Gale — despite whatever he may say about his jazz roots — seems content to grind out the old Charlie Christian-B.B. King licks over the backing of a competent but colorless funk disco band.

Technique alone is not enough. Music that can be considered art aims either for the heart, the gut, or the mind. But Eric Gale's music aims for the wallet. It's class, it's style. It's superficial as passing fashions. Don't call this music "jazz," because if we're going to use categories to describe music, they'd better be meaningful, and merely having a sax player in your hand does not make your music "jazz."

But the audience dug it, and everybody had fun, and that's cool. Except for the fact that the performance only lasted an hour, counting an encore. It was cut short to allow the management to clear the place for the next show. Of course, the first one would have lasted much longer if it had not started an hour and a half late.

The man running the concert, Brad Parsons of Pyramid Productions, blamed the delay on the fact that Gale had just recently fired his sound man, and hadn't yet hired a new one. This, Parsons said, made the band's preliminary sound check slow and difficult. "In essence," he said, "instead of dealing with one road man we're dealing with eight separate musicians."

What did Eric Gale think of an audience that had stood in line outdoors for over an hour to hear him play? "Pretty stiff," he said.

I asked if he thought 150 people who'd stomped and clapped in unison for a second encore could really be called a "stiff" audience. "I think they were trying to bring us back up there because of the hype, you know," he replied. "While I was up there, I didn't feel 'em at all."

"Well," I said, "what did you think of the set you just finished playing?"

"Good sound check," he immediately answered. "Next one'll be better."

A puzzling degree

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — Will Shortz' vocation is a puzzling one. He holds a bachelor's degree in enigmatology — the study of puzzles.

"For instance, if each letter of the alphabet is assigned its corresponding numerical value — that is A is 1, B is 2, C is 3 and so forth — what seven-letter word totals just 21 points?" Shortz asks.

Shortz is compiling his own collection of assorted mind torments which will contain 200 original word puzzles.

Networks gird for fall battle

NEW YORK (AP) — With the 1977-78 TV season over, the networks' battle for the fall is on again, as ABC builds on its lead at the top while CBS and NBC plan assaults.

ABC was first to unveil its fall prime-time schedule on May 1, and — no surprise — the changes were minimal. In contrast, CBS' fall schedule was announced the next day, and NBC's, made Monday, bore little resemblance to the fall battle plans for last season.

That way because ABC was No. 1 in the 1977-78 season, CBS' second by virtue of a good last fall of the season, and NBC not even close. And ratings mean dollars — lots of dollars.

In 1976-77, for example, the last year for which the figures are available, ABC netted $63 million more in profits than runnerup NBC, a situation attributed almost wholly to ABC's ratings supremacy.

Notably, the fall schedules at ABC and NBC were drafted without the physical presence of Fred Silverman, the man generally credited with engineering ABC's rise to the top.

Silverman announced in January he would leave ABC to become president and chief executive of NBC.

MSU asking for trouble

Women's athletics are fading at MSU, but it's through no fault of its own.

In the early days of women's sports at MSU, the women's teams lacked credibility; not so much because the operation was loosely run, but because MSU was one of the first schools to establish any kind of women's program in 1972.

MSU teams won easily and often by routs over other teams that looked inept because their talents were so far behind MSU's. It's hard to build interest in women's athletics when many of its athletes showed so much inexperience.

But MSU hasn't faded because its athletes are becoming equal to what inferior schools had in the early days of their women's programs.

All it took to catch and pass MSU was making opportunities in women's programs comparable to men's. The Spartans have always had problems when they tried to compete nationally against schools in other regions of the country that placed a greater emphasis on women's sports than the Midwest schools do.

It used to be easy for MSU to qualify for the national tournaments because it won the state and regional titles regularly. Somehow the few women athletes in the state interested in college athletics migrated to MSU to make the Spartans teams a cut about the other state colleges.

But now that's not enough to keep MSU's women's sports progressing. The deadline for meeting Title IX requirements (federal legislation prohibiting sex discrimination in federally-funded educational institutions) is July 21 and MSU is in danger of not passing, especially with a complaint from the women's basketball team on MSU's record.

Women's team don't expect to receive the money that revenue-producing sports like football, basketball and hockey get, but they do expect to have better facilities than lockerrooms that have no lockers, one toilet and four showerheads in a showerroom that is for both MSU and its opponent.

Going down the 1977-78 school year budget, the women's sports have budgets almost equal to the men's in the non-revenue sports.

For instance, the men's track team had a budget of $15,000 and the women's track team a budget of $14,812. Men's tennis had $7,000 and women's tennis has $6,225 for this spring. Women do come out ahead once, with $5,198 for cross-country, while the men had $2,703.

Meanwhile, the women's basketball team was asked to play its 27-game schedule on a budget of $10,953. That seems woefully short for 24 players on the varsity and JV teams when you consider the budgets of the track and tennis teams — teams that play a shorter season and generally only on weekends.

While track and tennis will likely always be non-revenue sports, women's basketball is a sport that can make money at MSU. Women's basketball is becoming popular enough at many southern and eastern schools to generate crowds in five figures.

It's hard to find out if women's basketball can do that at MSU when its budget is just barely above a non-revenue spring sport.

But it's not just a matter of winning and losing, or the threat of federal funds being withdrawn from MSU for not meeting Title IX, that MSU's administration should be concerned about.

The administration has left MSU very susceptible to a lawsuit by taking its time making women's opportunities equal to men's. It could happen very soon. Think of all that bad publicity.

SPARTANS HOST ALUMNI SATURDAY

Former gridgers come back to MSU

By JOE CENTERS
State News Sports Writer

With spring football practice winding down to an end, the Spartans have one more objective before packing up for the summer. That's playing the annual Varsity-Alumni football game at 2 p.m. Saturday at Spartan Stadium.

More than 40 former Spartans will be in East Lansing for the game, including a few "notables" for the Alumni.

Playing at tight end for the Alumni is Ken Hines, a 1969 graduate who is a native of Stroud, Okla. The 6 foot 3, 227-pound Hines was a one time "brick throwing champion" from Texas.

Also playing for the Alumni, are Gary and Dave VanElst, the two pig farming brothers from Middleville.

The oldest player in the game is Dave Behrman, who graduated from MSU in 1962.

Other stand out players for the Alumni are kickers Tom Birney and Hans Nielsen, East Lansing's Richie Baes, quarterback George Mihau and former split end from the Denver Broncos, Gordon Bowdell, plus a host of other one time Spartans.

"We may have the all time coaching staff on the other side of the field," MSU Coach Darryl Rogers was quick to point out.

Earl Morrall is the head coach again for the Alumni this year, and he will be helped out by Ed Rutherford, Henry Bullough, Rollie Dotsch, Al Fracassa, Fred Mushinski and Jimmy Rye.

This game will be the last time that the Spartans will play against anyone besides their own teammates until the Sept. 16, season opening battle with Purdue.

"I think anytime we can practice and condition against someone besides our own team, it's a benefit for us," Rogers said. "Our football players like the Green and White game because it's a challenge against ourselves, but they also like the Alumni game because it's another challenge for them."

The game will be modified only in the kicking department to protect both teams from the downfield blocking. Extra points and field goals will be used which will give a big advantage to the Alumni, who have both Birney and Nielsen.

"This week we'll have to find someone who can kick a conversion," Rogers said with a smile.

A weakness for the Alumni, according to Rutherford, who is the coordinator of the team, will be at the fullback position. But Rutherford added that he has been talking to Morrall and the ex-quarterback doesn't plan to run the ball very much.

The Alumni won't have their first workout until Thursday, but Rogers doesn't feel that will bother them.

"It's amazing," he said. "For a one-shot deal they don't have to be in condition. They're not in long enough to get tired."

The Spartans will play a straight defense with no variations and the Alumni will have cue cards diagramming their plays to make things a little more even.

The game promises to be a good one and it should be a lot of fun for everyone. Tickets for the contest are $8 for special press box seats, $4 for adults, $3 for faculty and staff and $2 for any student (MSU or younger).

All of the gate receipts from the game, which is being hosted by the MSU Student Foundation, will be given to the MSU women's athletic program.

The fans can also benefit from the game. The tickets will be printed in equal quantities of white and green colors. Following the game, if the Spartans win, those holding a green ticket can cash it in for a regular McDonald's hamburger at any one of the four local restaurants in the East Lansing area. If the Alumni win, the white ticket holders will win a free hamburger.

Now that spring practice is almost over, Rogers can start to evaluate what the team has accomplished so far.

"I think the first thing to do in the spring is to make individual sound players," Rogers said. "This week, for the first time, we come together as a team. I don't know if we'll have a proficiency, but we're not worried about that until our opener fall."

That opener may not be for a long time, but Rogers said his staff will start in June working for that Sept. 16 showdown.

MSU outfielder Kenny Robinson slides back to first base during the first game of MSU's doubleheader Tuesday with Eastern Michigan. The Spartans easily won the first game of the twinbill, 12-2, behind the hitting of Kirk Gibson and the pitching of Mark Pomorski. Gibson had two 2-run homers and a bases loaded triple and Pomorski went the distance to pick up the win.

In the nightcap, Gibson hit a seventh-inning homer that put the game in extra innings. MSU eventually lost the game, 8-7.

Gibson, who now has nine roundtrippers in his last eight games, has 16 home runs and 51 runs batted in. Both are MSU season records.

MSU is now 31-18 for the year and it hosts Oakland University 2 p.m. today in a doubleheader at K Field.

Fundraiser set for Dooley's Thursday

MSU Varsity football coach Darryl Rogers and Alumni coach Earl Morrall will help auction off football tickets, basketball tickets and jerseys at Dooley's Thursday night in an athletic fundraiser for MSU's Ralph Young Fund.

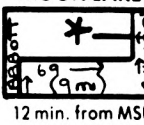

Athletic director Joe Kearney will also be there to help Rogers introduce the coaching staff, while Morrall will introduce the alumni players.

The event kicks off Saturday's second Varsity Alumni football game at Spartan Stadium. Proceeds from ticket sales to the game will go to women's athletics.

WVIC disc jockey Bob Berry is the master of ceremonies and will auction off two season football tickets, four tickets to the Notre Dame game at Spartan Stadium, one autographed varsity football, one autographed Detroit Tiger baseball bat, three football jerseys and two basketball tickets to the game of your choice.

Affirmed, Alydar to meet again

By BILL MOONEY
 The Preakness Race Course in Baltimore is a pleasant place, regarded by botanists for its shade (oak trees and infield) and the black-eyed Susans, the flowers of Maryland. It is the late J. Edgar Hoover used to go there every year during the racing season, but he reserved in a quiet room at the clubhouse where he would drink cinnamon tea and read a copy of the Morning Post. The rigors and pressures of the FBI forgot Hoover was a two dollar man. Hoover could be at the Preakness at Pimlico this coming year, but more on either side of Alydar.

he was 11 lengths behind Affirmed; yet he made up more than nine of those lengths in the last half mile including four in the stretch, only to lose by a fast diminishing length and a quarter. If he had started his drive a furlong sooner, wouldn't he have won?
 Well, it's not quite that simple. One does not turn a horse on and off like the ignition of an automobile. They run essentially when they want to and if Velasquez is correct in stating that Alydar had trouble getting hold of the hard packed Churchill Downs track, then he had a legitimate dilemma on his hands.
 Velasquez is no neophyte when it comes to riding slow starting horses. For several seasons back in the early 1970s he had the mount on Loud, a gelding owned by William Haggin Perry. Loud was so lethargic in getting out of the starting gate that he was twice banned from the track by the New York Racing Association. He was great sport to watch; that is, if you didn't bet on him. He would plod along for the first half of the race falling as much as 25 lengths behind the leaders. Velasquez astride him glancing quizzically from side to side as if he were trying to drive some foreign compact car which he did not know how to shift. This would continue until the head of the stretch and then, magically, Velasquez would find the right gear and VRRROOOM! Loud would take off.

 Loud would charge through the stretch with the fury of a mad banshee (with Velasquez more holding on for dear life that riding him) but he would always fall about 1/2 length or so short at the finish line. He did win the Travers at Saratoga as a three year old (dubbed the "Summer Derby" by racing people) but otherwise he seemed to perpetually come in third. It was a cause of considerable frustration for both Perry and Velasquez who eventually formulated a theory that if Loud were to run in longer races, he would have more time to make his charge and end up a winner. So they tried him in several mile and one quarter races. He kept coming in third. Next, they tried him at a mile and one half. Third again. Then a mile and three quarters. Third once more. Finally, they put him in the two mile Jockey Gold cup at Belmont Park, New York. He finished second.
 The next logical step would be to put him in a race longer than two miles. Unfortunately, such traces do not exist at the major tracks on the North American continent.

 Alydar is not beset by the same sort of gremlins who stayed the soul of Loud, but he does have a consistent habit of finishing second to Affirmed, having now done so five times in seven meetings. And Pimlico has a longer backstretch and sharper turns that Churchill Downs, factors which favor front runners. Indeed, 41 percent of the distance races of one mile or longer were won by front runners at the Maryland track last season. That's a hard statistic to beat.
 Of course, there is always the possibility that a longshot might win. Fewer stakes races follow form more than the Kentucky Derby; favorites have won six out of the last seven, with only second choice Bold Forbes breaking the string in 1976. On the other hand, four longshots have won the Preakness over the same span of time. Elocutionist paid $22.50 on a two dollar wager in 1976, Master Derby a whopping $48.80 in 1975 and Little Current $28.20 in 1974. In 1972, a state-fair speedball named Bee Bee, carrying 45 year old jockey Eldon Nelson who rode the race of his life, led from wire to wire in a driving rainstorm and paid $39.40, beating the likes of No Le Hare, Key to the Mint and 3 to 5 favorite Riva Ridge.

 This year's Preakness has its list on longshot hopefuls. Iron Legend and Noon Time Spender have won a few races, largely against undistinguished opposition. Game little Believe it will give it another go, but as trainer Woody Stephens admits, he doesn't have the greatness of either Affirmed or Alydar.
 Alydar was shipped to Pimlico last Saturday and his trainer, John Veitch, has already given him several seven furlong workouts on the track, hoping to get the horse to move faster in the early going and to make him familiar with the racing surface. Affirmed's trainer, Laz Barrera, has rejected this strategy, publicly stating that Alydar couldn't catch his horse if he had a whole extra furlong to run.
 Perhaps, a furlong, when coupled with the mile and three sixteenths distance of the Preakness, comes to one and five sixteenths miles. It will be close, and Alydar may or may not catch Affirmed this Saturday.

Lion rookies impress Clark

PONTIAC (UPI) — Detroit Lions Coach Monte Clark says he is encouraged by the potential shown by top draft picks Luther Bradley and Al Barker and recent acquisitions Tom Skladany and Freddie Scott in spring drills that recently ended.
 Clark said he was generally impressed with the young talent just as he had been with the veteran players who reported to the Silverdome last month.
 "I thought the veterans and rookies compared favorably with what I expected," Clark said. "I also think many can dramatically improve their performances by July's training camp."
 Clark said the rookies have been given weight and running programs, and will be tested when they return this summer. "This way I can tell the difference between those that show they want to be a part of the team and those that just say it," he said.
 Clark said he was particularly impressed with the performance of new offensive linemen Bill Eifer, Amos Fowler and Homer Elias as well as with defensive backs Dwight Hicks, Mark Patterson and Bradley, the Lions No. 1 draft choice.

METHOD CAN CAUSE LOSS OF 'FEELING' Joggers 'dissociate' to stop pain

By ROSEMARIE AQUILINA
 Runners are constantly looking for ways to take their minds off pain from long distance running and, in some cases, "dissociate" themselves from reality. University of Arizona sports psychologist William Morgan says.
 "Dissociating may cause a runner to lose feeling, even of a nature, heat stroke, heat exhaustion or mental disorientation is described as self hypnosis a runner uses to cut off from physical feeling. The runner becomes so out of touch with his body, he may overextend himself too early in a race and hold back his energy too long.
 When pain and discomfort come, there is a lot of mental effort to take place while you are just talking yourself through it," Cheryl Flanagan, head coach of the MSU women's track team, said.
 "Sometimes runners won't remember what happened in the race," she added. "The good runners won't feel the discomfort of the race because they get so involved; nothing else seems to matter."
 Flanagan, who once held the women's world record for the mile, feels that a good runner will block pain without losing touch with reality.
 "If you are out there if you are putting your mind somewhere else, you are not running," she said.
 Flanagan's cross country coach and assistant track coach Jim Gibbard said, "Pain is always involved in long distance running. The more you run, the more pain you are going to feel," he said. "Running 26 miles is not the best thing to do. Long distance is in terms of six to 10 miles. I don't feel it's harmful."
 "The jogging craze that is coming now, people can really dissociate," Gibbard continued.
 "Great athletes can go through a pain barrier, the good ones will go up to the point of a pain barrier, stop there and not themselves further," Gibbard said. "The people that are not successful in long distance running are those that back down at that pain barrier."
 Flanagan and Gibbard said they have their runners do the same kinds of things they will encounter in the race so they are prepared.
 "For those who are not long-distance, competitive runners, but occasional joggers, a doctor's physical is recommended by Flanagan and Gibbard.

 Flanagan and Gibbard also suggest using moderation when beginning to jog and using a combination of running and walking.
 "If a person hasn't been running," Gibbard advised, "I have developed a method I suggest to them."
 Begin by running a very slow 220 yards, then walk 220 yards. Slowly increase to jogging 220 yards followed by walking 220. By the first week, a half-mile jog followed by a half mile walk. The second week they should build up to a 440 yard jog. This should be an easy jog — a very slow jog. It is best if the runner can then work up to two miles.
 Gibbard said a run on a flat footed heel then up on the balls of the feet is the best way because it will not add to leg cramps or put any stress on the achilles tendon. Another ideal way to run is on the grass. A pavement surface, because of the hard pounding, will add pressure to your body.
 A thick soled, high arched running shoe is recommended as well as loose clothing in warmer weather and warm clothing in colder weather.
 "There's no set way to jog and that's the beauty of it. It's individual. . . one of the freest sports," Flanagan, who has been running for the past 13 years, said.
 "Running to me is the most complete exercise there is," said Gibbard, who has been running most of his life.

Mayor puts on hooker benefit

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The mayor of Miami Beach is inviting judges, a couple of sheriffs and a load of city officials to a party at his beachfront home to raise funds to help prostitutes legalize the world's oldest profession.

The guest of honor at the $15-a-head cocktail party June 2 will be the founder of a national hooker's lobby called COYOTE. Cast Off Your Old Tired Ethics. Funds raised will go to the pro-prostitute group.

Mayor Leonard Haber readily admits he was surprised when his wife sprung the party idea on him, but says he wholeheartedly supports it.

"I thought it was delightful," he said Tuesday. "I've already been teased and kidded a bit. But I think we have a medieval attitude toward prostitution. We need to meet the problem and do something very contemporary and very rational."

Some of his colleagues might not agree. Miami Mayor Maurice Ferre, one of 350 persons invited to the event, says he won't go. Others, such as Miami Beach Police Chief Larry Cotzin and Dade County State Attorney Janet Reno, haven't received their invitations yet.

Dr. Merry Haber, the mayor's wife, said usually when she plans a party she doesn't let her husband know until that night. "But I did call and read the invitations to him," she said. "I thought perhaps there might be something sensitive."

Sensitive? Even Mrs. Haber admitted that some few voters might be offended. Her 44-year-old husband only started his two-year term last November.

"I suppose some people might, but it's something we support," said Mrs. Haber, 36. "You can't shy away from such things just because you're in politics. We both feel it's important to stand up for the rights of people."

MOTOCROSS, MUSIC ARE PLANNED Museum bike-a-thon set enthusiasts of riding can earn money for the museum's Day program Sunday. Riders can lap a 4, 6, or 8 mile course to rack up the points. Registration for the bike-a-thon will begin 8:30 a.m. at the museum. Riders can be observed from either the museum or the Lansing Jaycee Auxilium building. Practice for a rough terrain motocross will begin at 10 a.m. and will be followed by a parade at 11 a.m. the same day. Afternoon activities will include a talking bike, unicycle and racing demonstrations, motocross, bands, clowns and safety films. The play "Glass," which deals with humanity's responsibility to control scientific endeavors, will be presented by the Otrabanda Theater Company at 2:30 and 4:30 p.m. The Lansing Police Department will be on hand to register bikes and to teach bicycle safety. Mechanics will also be available to give free bicycle checks. The "hands on" Impression 5 museum was founded in 1972. It encourages people of all ages to learn by going through interaction with various exhibits. All bike day activities are free with the exception of a $2 admission charge for the science play. More information is available by calling the museum at 882-2437.

Consumer talk held

A Michigan assistant attorney general will speak on consumer protection at 3:15 p.m. today in B 104 Wells Hall. Edwin Bladen, assistant attorney general for consumer protection, will address a group of business law students and the public, said Arthur Wolfe, assistant professor of business law and office administration. Bladen will speak on the functions of the consumer protection division and enforcement of the Consumer Protection Act. Bladen will offer some remedies to consumer problems, Wolfe said.

Women, health to be discussed

The lecture is sponsored by Women's Studies Colloquia Series, New American Movement and MSU's sociology department. The lecture and health care will be presented by Barbara Green, author of "Witch-hives and Nurses," at 4 p.m. today in 341 and 342

U.S. may dispatch troops

 a meeting with House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass. Vance called the Zairean military situation "somewhat confused" and said the evacuation of American nationals from Kolwezi "may be necessary."
 He said the United States did not plan any military action anywhere in Africa. But Vance did say attempts are being made to escalate delivery of military supplies already designated for Zaire. A State Department spokesperson said the United States is delivering to Zaire communications equipment and spare parts for C-130 transport planes and a Cessna 310. The equipment is part of a $17.5 million military aid package that had already been designated for Zaire in the current fiscal year.

'U' to host tests for All-America flower

By LINDA WOLOHAN

As usual, things are bloomin' crazy around campus. This season even includes a beauty contest of flowers.

The 1978 All-America selections Flower Trials will take place on the MSU campus in late May.

MSU is one of 31 testing grounds in the United States and Canada chosen to test, display and judge new flower varieties by All-America Selections.

The professional flower-judging organization recommends high quality varieties to seed companies, farms which cultivate flowers for seed and home-growers.

MSU was awarded All-America Selections official flower seed test garden status in February.

The trial has already begun behind the scenes. Seedlings are currently growing under the direction of horticulture professor Lowell C. Ewart, selected as judge of the MSU trials by the All-America Selections council of judges.

Sometime in the next few weeks, the seedlings will be transferred outdoors and planted in beds designated as trial areas. Then they will be rated by Ewart, president of All-America in 1974 and former member of the board of directors.

Varieties such as petunias, snapdragons, marigolds, impatiens and begonias will be tested, Ewart said.

The trial beds are located east of the Horticulture Building, covering a large part of the East Circle campus area. The MSU trials will be open to the public at all times.

The new flower varieties will be rated on the basis of several criteria, including:

- Seed germination — how well the seeds will grow.
- The degree to which the varieties are disease and weather resistant.
- Purity of the flowers. If a flower is supposed to be yellow, it must be completely yellow, not touched with pink or white.

James Wilson, executive secretary of All-America, said MSU was picked as a test garden for several reasons.

"We chose MSU largely because of Ewart. We trust his judgment and expertise," he said.

In addition, MSU has a high national reputation in its past testing of flowers, he said.

"We pick testing grounds on the basis of geographical representation. We've never had a trial in Michigan before. Michigan's climate is also good for annuals, the type of seeds that are being tested," he explained.

"Because of its location, MSU will also become a likely stopping place for international growers touring our trials this summer."

All-America was founded in 1932 and is a non-profit educational corporation, Wilson said.

Scott Vallade of Smith Floral Co. in Lansing said professionals take All-America's recommendations seriously.

"Their selections are usually nice-looking plants and they grow well," he said.

All points given to a certain variety will be computed together by All-America at the organization's headquarters in Los Altos, Calif., to give it an average. Winners are selected on the basis of the highest averages, Ewart said.

All-America will begin publicizing the results of the trials in October.

The All-America trials operate under strict standards, Ewart said.

"A flower variety can be great in many aspects, but if it doesn't satisfy the needs of American and Canadian growers, we won't use it out," he said.

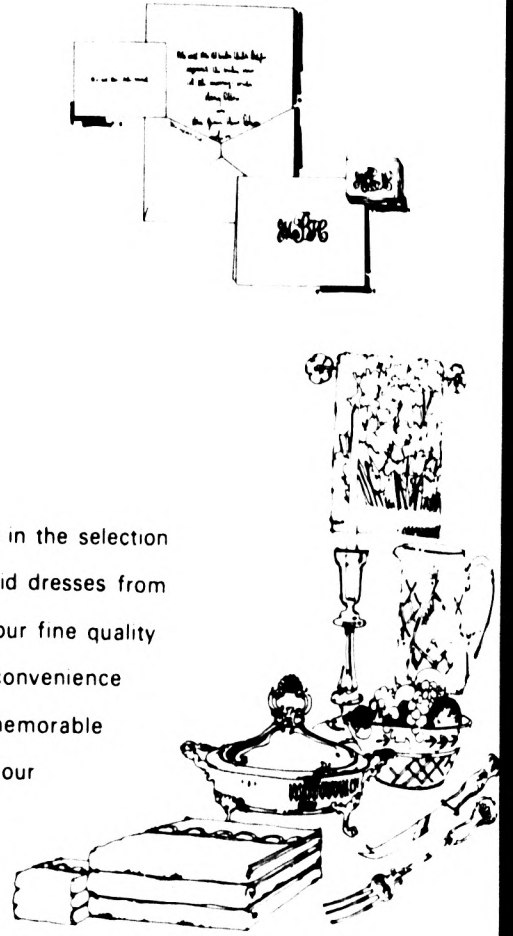

"This MSU trial will be partly responsible for recommending only top-quality seeds."

Is the "NO AGENT" crowd looking at the campus through rose colored glasses??

Of course not! We know there are problems at MSU. Like our colleagues, we are deeply concerned about, and committed to their solution. Where we differ sharply with the pro-union group is in our assessment of one purported solution, collective bargaining. COLLECTIVE BARGAINING WILL NOT SOLVE OR ALLEVIATE THE MAJOR PROBLEMS FACED BY FACULTY AT MSU, AND IN SEVERAL CASES, COLLECTIVE BARGAINING WILL ACTUALLY EXACERBATE THEM. To support our contention, let's take a look at some of the questions faculty are asking as a referendum nears.

I

I'm concerned about the increase in administrators at MSU. Will collective bargaining reduce administrative personnel?

Not a chance! Remember, many new administrative posts result from social trends over which collective bargaining has no control: e.g. the increasing number of federal guidelines the University must follow. Most important, however, is the fact that collective bargaining would add to the number of needed administrators rather than reducing their ranks. It's impossible to impose a whole new bureaucratic structure on the University community without providing the bureaucrats to run it. A sizeable portion of the several hundred dollars you would be assessed annually in union dues would go to pay union bureaucrats.

III

Wouldn't collective bargaining provide a means of effectively resolving legitimate faculty grievances?

The history of collective bargaining at universities doesn't offer any assurance that it would. By and large, bargaining agents have been unsuccessful in dealing with grievance procedures. Moreover, the present governance system at MSU has hammered out a grievance procedure that will work. Although it hasn't always been easy, progress has been made. Faculty Volunteers believes we should continue to bank on a proven system, rather than falling prey to vague promises and "pie-in-the-sky" exhortations.

II

Would collective bargaining eliminate the undesirable trend toward greater use of temporary faculty?

We'd like to hear from the pro-union groups just how it would! Once again, the increased reliance on temporary faculty stems from social factors such as declining enrollments and the widespread tendency to hire persons on so-called "soft money" for service on grants and contracts. While we are disturbed by the possibility that temporary faculty will be exploited, we challenge the pro-union spokespersons to explain specifically how collective bargaining will solve this problem. Will researchers be denied the opportunity to hire temporary help on grants? Will collective bargaining turn the declining birth rate around?

IV

Isn't collective bargaining inevitable? A lot of colleges and universities seem to be organizing.

Collective bargaining is inevitable only if 50 percent of the voting faculty casts a vote for one of the bargaining agents. Collective bargaining is not inevitable as long as we have the power to determine our professional destiny. In charting that destiny, it's up to you to pick your image of MSU and to define your future aspirations for the University. GREAT UNIVERSITIES DO NOT HAVE COLLECTIVE BARGAINING. FOR COLLECTIVE BARGAINING IS INIMICAL TO THE VISION OF A GREAT UNIVERSITY. Where is collective bargaining at the other Big Ten universities? At Ivy League universities? At Berkeley or Stanford? You know the answer. What is your reference group?

Isn't collegiality a myth, anyway? And if it is, shouldn't we put our cards on the table and admit that the University community operates on an adversary model?

Remember, concepts such as collegiality and adversarialness differ in degree, even though some pro-union spokespersons would have you believe they are either present or absent. There is a degree of adversarialness in the present system, but under a collective bargaining arrangement, adversarial relationships would be more pervasive. Whenever collective bargaining has been instituted in universities, the administration has become much more demanding about the items that are "negotiable." Such items include, but are not limited to, number of student contact hours, number of office hours, reductions in supplies and equipment budgets, and number of square feet of office space.
