what some people will go through just to get some of that funky band sound! Marshall Tucker fans braved warm weather, sunshine and cold beer for hours in hopes of getting good seats for the performance.

Dealing saves performance

By KIM SHANAHAN
State News Staff Writer
If it had not been for the sharp ears of Lynda Loomis and her ability to put two and two together, MSU students might not have had the pleasure of hearing the Marshall Tucker Band for $1.01 Sunday.
Pop Entertainment needed $3,800 as insurance money before they could begin selling tickets for the concert. They did not have the money and knew of no place they could go for it. But Loomis did.
Loomis, head of the ASMSU Media Relations Cabinet, is also chairperson of

Marshall Tucker show aids development fund

The organization is still trying to work itself out of severe financial deficit. Pop Entertainment then applied to the ASMSU comptroller for the spare funds, but was turned down.
But the band had already been contacted

After being convinced that the show was bound to be a sell-out and that there would be no risk of losing the money, the administration consented to cover insurance costs in case some unexpected event prevented the concert from taking place.

The $350 that will be contributed to the enrichment program is the first sum of money that students — via STEP — will have donated. STEP was first organized during fall term by the ASMSU Student Board to "acquaint" students with the enrichment program, Loomis said.

The direction of STEP changed when Loomis became chairperson in April. Instead of merely informing students about the program, Loomis said she believed students could have a more direct influence on the program if they could actually contribute money.

In other words, even if they didn't realize it, everybody who bought a ticket to the Marshall Tucker concert also contributed a little bit toward the State Center for the Performing Arts.

It all started with the Marshall Tucker Band. After two shortened concerts in as many years... the band agreed to come back to MSU — and give fans a concert for practically nothing.

Students Toward the Enrichment Program. It was her contacts through STEP and the MSU administration that saved the financially-strapped Pop Entertainment from further financial embarrassment.

It all started with the Marshall Tucker Band. After two shortened concerts in as many years — disappointments for the band as well as for fans — the band agreed to come back to MSU and give fans a concert for practically nothing.

Pop Entertainment initially planned to handle the technical aspects of the concert — setting up the stage, providing ushers, contracting for the electronic equipment, hospitality expenses and providing spare capital to be used for insurance in case the show failed to sell out.

However, Pop Entertainment had no spare money to set aside for insurance.

and deals had been made — there was almost no way to back out of it and a week before the show there didn't appear to be any way to go forward with it either.

That was when Tim Van Antwerp, president of the Residence Halls Association, stepped in to try to save the concert. But RHA already had thousands of dollars tied into the free outdoor concert scheduled for the day prior to the Marshall Tucker concert.

RHA did manage to come up with $1,000 as insurance money but that still left the $3,800 that needed to be raised before tickets could go on sale.

Van Antwerp had no idea where he would be able to find $3,800 so he went to ASMSU President Dan Jones for suggestions.

Jones had none but Lynda Loomis, whose media relations office happens to be the same as Jones' due to lack of office space, did. Loomis was in the office when Van Antwerp came to plead with Jones. She overheard them talking and immediately recognized an opportunity to get the new STEP program off the ground as well as save the concert.

Loomis convinced the MSU administration to raise the backup money so students could indulge in an inexpensive rock 'n roll concert.

The catch to the deal is that five cents from every one of the 7,000 tickets sold will go to STEP. STEP will then take that money — about $350 — and contribute it to the enrichment program in the name of MSU students.

Top WKAR job filled by staffer

By BETH TUSCHAK
State News Staff Writer
Steven K. Meuche, current assistant manager of programming at WKAR radio, will take over the station's top position as general manager July 1.

After final approval from the MSU Board of Trustees, Meuche will take over the duties of current general manager Richard Estell, who has been the subject of a University audit conducted this week.

Director of Academic Services Herman L. King announced Meuche's promotion to station employee last week, some of whom had expressed concern because the position was never posted to outside applicants.

In April King said the position would be filled through internal reorganization, with a current employee being appointed to the position of general manager.

Meuche did not wish to comment Monday on his promotion.

Estell, who produces and narrates the current Radio Reader program, is expected to take an extensive sick leave, continuing only part-time duties at the radio station.

Estell and his wife, Florence, have been the source of complaints from station employees who said the couple took off many unrecorded work hours.

The complaints led to an audit of Estell's money-managing practices, which checked allegations that he may have overbilled or double billed on his travel vouchers.

University auditor Robert Wenner said Monday the audit has been completed, though he could not comment on the results until Estell has had an opportunity to see the report.

Wenner said Estell should receive a copy of the audit within the next few days.

Associate Academic Services Director Erling S. Jorgensen said it is up to Wenner to decide if the audit information should be released.

Mrs. Estell, who ran the station's Talking Book sub-channel for the blind, left the radio station last week on what has been termed sick leave time.

Though other minority employees were recommended for merit raise increases last year, Mrs. Estell was the only woman employee to receive one.

Both Estells have verbally asked for reassignment within the University, Jorgensen said, but he has not seen any formal request for the job change.

"I don't really know quite what the status of employees' at WKAR radio station is right now," Jorgensen said. "Most of the reshuffling will be contingent on the audit."

Laws barring Nazis struck down by court

By MARC WILSON
CHICAGO (AP) — A federal appeals court agreed "with regret" Monday that three laws barring Nazis from marching in the heavily Jewish suburb of Skokie are unconstitutional, clearing the way for a Nazi demonstration there next month. The village said it will appeal.

The ruling by the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed a decision last month by Judge Bernard Decker of U.S. District Court.

Skokie Mayor Albert J. Smith said the village will ask the U.S. Supreme Court for a stay prohibiting a planned Nazi demonstration June 25 pending an appeal to the nation's highest court.

"We will work to thwart the Nazi march until all legal avenues are exhausted," Smith said in a statement Monday.

The ordinances that were held unconstitutional were passed by the Village Board after the National Socialist Party of America announced plans for a "white power" demonstration at the Village Hall.

The ordinances ban marches in paramilitary uniforms and distribution of "hate literature" and make a $350,000 insurance bond mandatory for any public demonstration.

Village officials said a Nazi demonstration would be traumatic to thousands of Skokie residents who survived Nazi death camps during World War II.

Nazi leader Frank Collin said the June 25 demonstration in Skokie might be called off if Nazis are granted permission to demonstrate instead in Chicago parks, but he said there was "a 90 percent chance we'll go" to Skokie.

"The purpose of the Skokie march is to call attention to the fact that we've been denied free speech in Chicago," Collin said Monday.

He said he "calculated on the Jews' hysteria. That's why I chose Skokie. It was the only way to show to millions of Americans that Jews have the power to deny our First Amendment rights."

If the Skokie demonstration were canceled, however, Collin said, "we'd be lambasted in the press, called chickens and cowards... so we'll probably go to Skokie... I am aware that a demonstration in Skokie would be dangerous, very dangerous."

Spartans get NCAA berth

The MSU baseball team, which finished second to Michigan in the Big Ten, received an at-large bid to play in the NCAA Midwest Regional Tournament in Tulsa, Okla.

The Spartans, 33-19, will face Southern Illinois in the first round Friday. The other two teams in the regional are Oklahoma State and host Oral Roberts.

The regional, which will run through Monday, is a double-elimination tournament.

The winners of this and the other regionals will advance to the NCAA finals in Omaha, Neb.

KEG ISSUE MAY SPUR POLICY REVIEW

SFJ rules advisers' act improper

By JOY L. HAENLEIN
State News Staff Writer
In a majority opinion released Monday, the Student Faculty Judiciary ruled that two Mason-Abbot advisers acted improperly when they entered a student's room to confiscate a keg of beer last term.

The judiciary said that Abbot Hall Graduate Adviser Cary Ford and Mason Hall Head Resident Adviser Tom Hadzor did violate Section 1.1 of the Room Entry Policy which states: "Residence Hall staff shall not enter a resident's room without permission of the resident, unless under conditions of immediate and serious threat to the safety or well being of persons or property."

These conditions were not present during Abbot Hall resident Michael Dennis' party last March 2, the judiciary said.

According to Dennis, Ford and Hadzor entered his room without permission and seized the keg of beer. The beer spoiled in Ford's office, and Dennis was subsequently reimbursed for the keg by the Residence Hall Programs Office.

In the ruling the judiciary also requested that the Room Entry Policy be clarified "to provide for the reasonable activity of residence hall staff and at the same time affirm the students' rights to privacy and all other rights accorded students."

The judiciary cited as important issues what form of permission is necessary for staff personnel to enter a student's room and whether privacy rights still exist when a resident's door is open.

If a staff member is considered a "friend" to the student, permission to enter his room is not always necessary, the judiciary said.

However, the opinion cautioned staff members to secure permission to enter a student's room when they are carrying out an administrative action, even if the staff member is a "friend."

Ford and Hadzor may have considered themselves "welcomed" in the room, the opinion said, but they should not have entered Dennis' room to question him without explicit permission to enter.

The judiciary said seizure of the keg violated section 3.1 of the Room Entry Policy, which advises staff members to consult the Department of Public Safety if they witness a violation of University policy.

Fraudulent ticket scheme uncovered by businesses

By DANIEL HERMAN and KAREN SHERIDAN
State News Staff Writers

Plans to sell fraudulent concert tickets were brought to an abrupt end Monday to quick action by local police and promoters, a Lansing Police detective said.

Ray Carter said the scheme attempted sale of tickets to a "Live Center" concert supposedly by Marvin Gaye, Denise Williams and Benson.

of the tickets were sold, Carter said. "I can attribute this to the fact that those selling the tickets and the promoters who saw through them immediately."

ated under the name of "S and M Music," police said tickets were given for consignment Monday to Campus 11, 551 East Grand River Ave., and Diversions, 309 Washington and Busy Bee Market, 402 S. Logan ing to Joe Zamboni, manager of Corners II, the ticket sale was immediate suspicion because of the "fishy" way in which it was con-

ed. said the store was contacted by about two weeks ago by a man who was interested in sponsoring the concert in the area and asking if the store would market the tickets.

While the man did not identify himself, two black males in their mid-20s entered the store Monday and offered Zamboni about 300 tickets for sale. Zamboni said he was tipped off to the fraudulent nature of the sale by the unprofessional nature in which the concert tickets and posters were printed.

Dimitrios Szani, manager of the Lansing Civic Center, commented that, "No one has booked such a concert here."

"These kinds of seams go on every day. The people behind them are sharpshooters — seams," he said.

"The best guidelines to take as a precaution when buying tickets is to call the Civic Center and ask where the ticket outlets are," Szani added.

Mike Rigby of Liberty Bell, a promoter of such concerts, spotted the advertisement as a fraud right away.

"When I saw the poster, I knew they couldn't have gotten those performers — it would have been extremely expensive. Besides, with the kind of entertainment you'd have to charge more than the $6.50 they were asking."

Carter described the incident as a "small operation."

"All the posters were hand printed, and when they didn't have the right letters they wrote them in. They couldn't even spell 'diversions' correctly," he said.

East Lansing and Lansing police said they have no suspects.

Sadat wins popular vote

bar rivals from politics

By AP
Egypt (AP) — President Anwar Sadat, trying to silence a "campaign of about his leadership, won almost unanimous popular backing in a referendum on opponents of the left and right from politics, the government announced Monday.

Interior Ministry said the tough measures proposed by Sadat were approved by 85.4 percent of the voters in the Sunday balloting. It said 9,202,553 voted in favor and 1,560,000 voted "no," and the turnout was 85.4 percent.

government controlled media had campaigned hard for a "yes" vote. An issue of newspaper urging a negative vote was confiscated.

newspapers reported, meanwhile, that eight leftists were arrested in the Nile province of Gharbeya on Sunday for distributing pamphlets urging a negative vote and "inciting voters against the regime."

leftist party, the National Progressive Union, said one of its members in the Egyptian parliament, Abul Ezz el Hariri, also was arrested Sunday, his second arrest leading a demonstration last week that authorities denounced as "endangering the peace."

left and right had opposed the referendum as a "repression of political freedom" fostered by Sadat in 1976 when he legalized opposition groups for the first time in two decades of one-party rule.

Voters approved broad proposals calling for the barring of Communists from government posts in the government, news media or trade unions, and a similar ban on Communist winglers from the days of Egypt's monarchy and on persons spreading "false rumors affecting the national interests of the state or spreading the spirit of terrorism."

Sadat dominated National Assembly must now draw up and enact legislation to carry out the bans.

He ordered the referendum last week, saying he wanted to "crush" his opponents "by democratic means." In hard-hitting speeches earlier this month, he accused his opponents of sowing discord, spreading rumors and deliberately denigrating the achievements of his eight-year-old administration.

Brzezinski describes talks as 'frank'

TOKYO (AP) — Zbigniew Brzezinski, President Carter's national security adviser, met Monday with Chinese Premier Hua Kuo-feng and later described his exchanges with Peking leaders as "frank," a diplomatic catch word often signaling disagreement.

However, the Hsinhua news agency quoted Brzezinski as saying, "Even where we disagree, I believe there is an underlying mutual respect for our separate positions."

Hsinhua, in a report received here said Brzezinski spoke at a farewell banquet he hosted for Foreign Minister Huang Hua and Culture Minister, Huang Chen near the end of his three-day visit.

"Dr. Brzezinski's visit proves beneficial to both sides," Huang was quoted as saying. "It is in the common interests of our two peoples to expand mutual contacts and enhance their mutual understanding and friendship. We shall continue to work to this end in the future."

French police identify Orly victim

PARIS (AP) — French police said Monday they had positively identified one of three Arabs killed while attacking Israel-bound passengers at Orly Airport Saturday as a 25-year-old Lebanese named Mahmoud Awada.

Police said the other two men carried Tunisian passports in the names of Mohamed Nasr, 27, and Tahar Ouergemi, 20. Police said they were believed to be forgeries.

A French official said Sunday the terrorists were planning "a veritable massacre" of passengers waiting to board an El Al Israel Airlines flight to Tel Aviv.

A French police sergeant was killed in the shootout involving the terrorists, police and Israeli security agents. Six persons, including three French passengers, were wounded.

French police said they had received confirmation from Lebanon that the Lebanese passport carried by Awada was genuine. According to the document, Awada was born in Beirut in 1953. He also carried a forged Kuwait passport in the name of Mohamed Jasim, police said.

Price of gold increases on foreign market

LONDON (AP) — The dollar came under some late pressure on Europe's money markets Monday but finished higher than on Friday. The price of gold rose.

Dealers said there was little news during the day to affect the foreign exchanges. They said Monday's dollar movements were due mainly to operators adjusting their positions ahead of the release on Thursday of U.S. trade figures for April.

A chronic U.S. trade deficit due primarily to heavy oil imports, has been a major factor in the slide of the dollar against major foreign currencies over the past year or so.

For the first quarter of this year, the United States posted a trade deficit of $9.68 billion. This is running well ahead of the record trade deficit for 1977 — $26.72 billion.

Diplomats gather for disarmament talks

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Statesmen and diplomats gathered here Monday for a special General Assembly session on disarmament, the first time since 1932 that virtually all countries of the world have met to discuss the issue.

The objective of the five-week exercise, starting today, is to map strategy to halt the nuclear weapons race and seek ways to divert nearly $400 billion spent annually on arms toward assistance to developing nations.

Dozens of new proposals are expected from more than 20 heads of government, 50 government ministers and other envoys representing the United Nations' 149 member countries as well as private citizens' groups.

The conference, which has been in preparation for one-and-a-half years, satisfies the long-sought demands of Third World countries for a large public forum to put pressure on the big powers for a reduction in their nuclear arsenals and conventional arms spending.

Supreme Court to study interest rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court said Monday it will study the interest rates many Americans pay on the unpaid balances of their bank-issued credit cards.

The justices said they will decide whether national banks may charge the higher interest rates of their home states to out-of-state customers.

Millions of Americans use bank-issued credit cards such as the BankAmericard or Visa card, and many of them receive the cards from out-of-state banks. The court's eventual decision could mean significantly lower or higher interest rates for those persons.

The justices will hear arguments sometime next year in the case from Minnesota. State officials and a Minneapolis bank object to the 18 percent interest rate a Nebraska-based national bank charges its BankAmericard customers in Minnesota.

National banks in Minnesota are barred by state law from charging more than 12 percent annual interest for their credit cards.

Terrorist claims responsibility for blasts

NEW YORK (AP) — Small devices exploded at Kennedy and Newark airports Monday, shortly after an explosion in front of the Justice Department building in Washington. A man identifying himself as a member of a Puerto Rican terrorist group claimed responsibility.

Little damage and no injuries were caused by the explosions or by a smoldering fire in a men's room at LaGuardia Airport here.

"We take full responsibility for actions in Newark, New York, Chicago and Washington and corresponding airports today," a caller told the New York office of United Press International shortly after the airport blasts. He said he was a member of FALN, a terrorist group that demands independence for Puerto Rico.

Authorities said they were investigating possible connections among the New York, New Jersey and Washington blasts. But there were no reports of explosions in Chicago. Police said a threatening call was made to the O'Hare Hilton in Chicago about 10 a.m. by a person who identified himself as a member of FALN.

Troops leave ravaged Kolwe

KOLWEZI, Zaire (AP) — Belgian paratroopers boarded air planes Monday and left this African city, its dusty streets strewn with victims of last week's rebel siege, in the hands of French and Zairean soldiers after a three and one-half day evacuation of nearly 2,500 white civilians.

The last unit of the estimated 1,200 to 1,500 Belgian troops climbed into C-130 transport planes at mid-afternoon. Maj. A. Couwenberg, commander of one Belgian battalion, said the troops had been ordered 130 miles north to the town of Kamina.

"We're going home," he said, and it appeared some would return to Belgium.

But in Brussels, Belgian Premier Leo Tindemans said one battalion of paratroopers would stay at Kamina "to guarantee the safety" of Belgians remaining in Zaire's southeastern Shaba Province.

An estimated 800 troops of the French Foreign Legion remained. Their commanders have said their mission is to pacify the province, known as Katanga when Zaire was the Belgian Congo. The Belgian troops said they were here only to evacuate civilians. Zairean troops began arriving in large numbers Sunday.

In Moscow, the Soviet news agency Tass claimed France and Belgium — backed by the United States which provided transport planes to carry fuel and ammunition — were continuing an "armed invasion" of Zaire.

The Belgians and legionnaires drove rebel Lunda tribesmembers out of this copper mining city, home in peacetime to 100,000 persons, over the weekend, allowing the evacuation of whites to Europe. Most of them are Belgian and French.

French officials say the rebels killed at least 170 whites in the siege that began May 13.

Many of the rebels are former Katangan policemen who were driven into Angola during a secessionist rebellion in the 1960s, and who mounted a two-month invasion of Shaba last spring from the Marxist ruled nation where they reportedly are trained by Cubans.

In Brussels, there was a report from a returning refugee that Jonas Savimbi, leader of a Western-backed Angolan guerrilla movement that opposes the Marxist government, had been captured in the new Shaba invasion. This was denied by a spokesperson for his movement in Lisbon, Portugal.

Before leaving Kolwezi, Belgian troops made a final sweep through the white residential districts, calling out in Flemish for anyone hiding to come out. About a dozen Belgians did. They said they had feared to emerge when earlier calls came in French, the main European language of local blacks.

Kolwezi, a sprawling conglomeration of low buildings, lies on a sloping plain. Dense foliage, plants and vines where packed houses of sections. The European suburbs with individual houses, some of them fenced.

The European lifeless Monday strayed dogs and military patrols.

I'd kill again Berkowitz says

NEW YORK (AP) — "Son of Sam" killer David Berkowitz, who had kicked and bit guards who half dragged him into sentencing postponed Monday after he called his wife a "whore" and told her anguished mother: "I'd kill her."

"You animal!" the mother shouted back. Others who to the victims wept and shouted in outrage.

The dark haired 24 year old killer had kicked, bit three court officers and lunged toward a window office where he was being kept not far from the courtroom in Brooklyn.

He was subdued quickly, his arms were shackled two hour delay, he was half dragged by a horde of officers into the courtroom of Supreme Court Judge Corso.

Berkowitz' behavior was in sharp contrast to when, in the same courtroom, he calmly pleaded the murders and attempted murders.

In putting off sentencing until June 12, Corso record data that indicated Berkowitz may have outburst well in advance.

Berkowitz was to have been sentenced first for 1977, murder of Stacy Moskowitz, 20. She was the Berkowitz' year long series of random attacks with revolver on young women and on couples that a through the city.

"Stacy was a whore! Stacy was a whore!" Berkowitz chanted in a loud, sing song voice. "You animal," gasped the victim's mother, Neysa Moskowitz, from seat.

"That's right! That's right! I'd kill her again," shouted as his guards reversed direction and dragged him out.

"You should get killed, you creep!" Robert Violante after him. Violante was with Moskowitz when she was in Brooklyn. Berkowitz's bullets cost him one eye and sight in the other.

As Berkowitz disappeared through a rear door, Violante in his arms and wept.

Corso and judges from the Bronx and Queens were to sentence Berkowitz for six murders and for attempted seven others.

STRESSES ECOLOGICAL COSTS

Carter sets utility goals

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — President Carter, addressing workers at the government's largest electrical utility, today declared that the price of energy "must cover all legitimate costs of production including environmental protection."

Carter's assertion dovetails with long held contentions of the privately owned utilities, oil companies and other energy producers that environmental costs should be included in prices ultimately paid by consumers.

In an address to Tennessee Valley Authority employees, Carter added that energy prices definitely should not cover waste or "Windfall profits at the consumer's expense."

The president told his audience that the TVA "is challenging an international uranium cartel and helping to lead the resistance to expanding oil company domination of all of our energy sources."

Carter said his administration "is with you in encouraging more competition, and less concentration of economic power among the producers of petroleum, coal and uranium."

Later, at nearby Oak Ridge, Tenn., Carter sought to assure government scientists that despite his administration's opposition to developing the breeder nuclear reactor there, the mammoth government-owned facility at Oak Ridge remains a frontier, outpost of energy research.

The president told the scientists that their work "is going to be of increasing importance. We are now addressing questions that have not been addressed adequately."

Carter flew here Monday from Plains, Ga., where he was visiting Sunday and where he attended his niece's wedding.

Carter's visit to Oak Ridge and to Knoxville, Tenn., was also seen as repayment to Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker for his support of Carter's position on the Panama Canal treaties and of the administration sale of warplanes to Egypt, Israel and Saudi Arabia.

In an interview before Carter's arrival at Oak Ridge, Baker said he would continue efforts to keep the Clinch River reactor project alive, but added: "I don't know if we can pull it off." The issue is being debated in congressional committee.

Baker said he and Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., complained to Carter about the rejection of the Clinch River project and that the president said he would take a look at it. But, Baker noted, "Of course, he isn't going to Clinch River."

Baker and Sasser accompanied the president during his visit to Oak Ridge, a city built during World War II to develop the atom bomb. Facilities built for the bomb project later were converted to nuclear research and development.

Faculty members are not unanimous in their support of unionization. Some are pro-union, some are anti-union, and some are undecided. The issue is still being debated.

last time," said Phil Korth, past president of Faculty Associates.

Agreeing that faculty have had time to look at the results of faculty bargaining on the state and national levels, current AAUP president and professor of physics Frank Blatt commented, "I don't think there would be any major outrage which would polarize the faculty by saying 'We've got to have collective bargaining.'"

But other union observers maintain the general MSU faculty ideology has not significantly changed since 1972 and that faculty will vote again not to unionize.

"At this point we have the same issues as in 1972," explained C. Keith Groty, MSU vice president for Employee and Personnel Relations.

"And I see no basic altering in faculty attitudes that would indicate the results would be any different.

"The indicators show it would be an unusual move rather than a common move for faculty to vote to unionize at MSU," he added.

The latest survey of faculty attitudes on collective bargaining, conducted by noted educators Everett Ladd and Seymour Martin Lipset, reports that support for faculty unions has leveled off, with 75 percent of the faculty surveyed nationwide saying they would vote in favor of unionization.

Appearing in the Feb. 13, 1978 Chronicle of Higher Education the Ladd Lipset survey shows faculty support for bargaining has remained nearly constant since the last survey in 1975.

Some 360 two and four year colleges and universities are represented by faculty unions. Such unions account for almost one quarter of the country's more than 600,000 faculty.

Collective bargaining has been most warmly received by faculty at two year colleges, where job security and salaries are much lower than at their four year counterparts.

The majority of organized faculty are located in two year schools, researchers report.

Prestigious four year doctoral granting universities such as MSU have been the hardest to unionize, according to Ladd Lipset.

The two educators claim research oriented faculty — those with several publications and full professors — have much less interest in bargaining than teaching faculty, instructors and assistant professors.

Commenting on a paper about collective bargaining by his friend Seymour Martin Lipset, MSU professor of labor and industrial relations Robert Repas said in 1973:

"I think the primary reason for faculty at major universities being cool to unionizing is that they are basically economic men. The system has been good to them, and it appears to the faculty member that in many cases he can make it to the top — an attitude not so much different from that of the blue-collar worker before he began to unionize."

Some MSU faculty, especially those in the hard sciences, have expressed concern that any salary increases negotiated by a union will result in cuts in supplies, services, curricula and faculty positions.

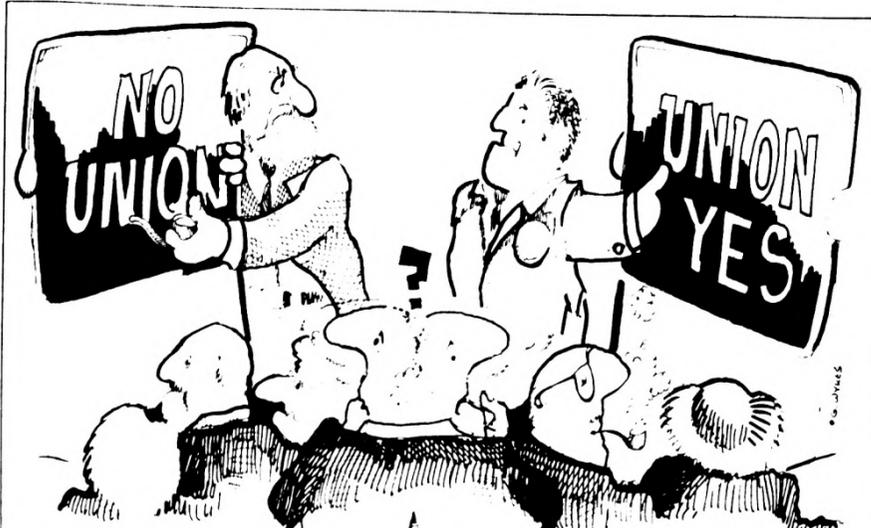

"How do any of the faculty know if we will get more money from the legislature?" one anti-union professor asked, adding that he believes there will have to be cuts in supplies and services if salaries were to be raised.

"They (faculty) see themselves as a member of their profession and are committed first to research and teaching and are interested in doing things that will facilitate that condition," Groty said.

"In that regard, they are more concerned that any university that focuses on wages first rather than working conditions is dipping into resources for research and supplies."

One associate professor of microbiology, who asked not to be identified, said she believed cutting supplies so that salaries could be increased would damage academic programs.

"The university should cut down whole programs, not supplies. I don't believe the University is full of all great programs," she commented.

Bargaining groups battle for upcoming faculty vote

By MICHELLE CHAMBERS
State News Staff Writer

Wednesday and Thursday faculty members will have a second opportunity to decide whether collective bargaining will become a reality at MSU.

An election sponsored by the Michigan Employment Relations Commission to determine the status of future collective bargaining will be held in two stages, one on Wednesday and one on Thursday.

The ballot will offer faculty members three choices:

If it favors collective bargaining, voters will choose between MSU Faculty Associates and American Association of University Professors as the future bargaining agent.

For those opposed to collective bargaining, the ballot offers the third choice: no union.

The election is the product of a long process which began in 1975 when Faculty Associates started collecting authorization signatures from faculty members.

Philip Korth, associate professor of American Thought and Language and former head of Faculty Associates, said the organization began circulating the authorization cards in kind of a low key way.

To the organization's surprise, the cards were signed and returned more rapidly than they had hoped, Korth said.

MERC requires that at least 30 percent of the faculty give their authorization for an election to be organized. The associates met the requirement within two years.

Because AAFP differs with Faculty Associates ideologically, it became an intervenor in the election process.

By collecting authorization from at least 10 percent of the faculty, any organization will be eligible to appear at the election, which will be held in two stages, one on Wednesday and one on Thursday.

Faculty Associates and AAFP are both vying to become the bargaining agent for the faculty.

Faculty Associates has been the major sponsor of the collective bargaining effort because it has dealt directly with MERG and administrators in determining the composition of the bargaining unit.

AAUP, on the other hand, has launched a campaign explaining how AAFP would better represent the faculty in collective bargaining.

But the relationship between the competing bargaining agents is one of "friendly rivalry" and the two groups also take similar stands on the major campaign issues, said Frank Blatt, professor of physics and president of the MSU chapter of AAFP.

Local religious institutions see resurgence of spiritual interest

Those with ties to religion also note that student tendencies to look inward spiritually have paralleled the shift to self-oriented career goals. They say this concern for the self springs from pessimism — students feel there is little they can do as individuals for the world.

But along with this pessimism, they note an openness to discuss differences in religious beliefs. A 1977 Campus Crusade for Christ survey of 700 students revealed that although a majority of students believe in God, some do not necessarily believe in the biblical God.

Students began to steer away from mass action to personal career goals and spiritualism in the early 1970s with the advent of the "Jesus Movement," religious officials say.

"They showed beliefs through their lifestyle rather than taking a stand," said John Duley, who was campus Presbyterian minister from 1962 to 1980. "This led to concern about meditation, spiritual things, Bible study personal living."

Robert Anderson, chairperson of the MSU religious studies department, said the Jesus Movement was "in large part an extension of an earlier reaction to the severe rationalism of the 20th century."

Auto, union officials featured at job panel

Representatives from Chrysler, Olds mobile and the AFL-CIO will be among panelists at a conference exploring hidden job trends in the Union ballroom 1 p.m. Thursday.

Organized by the Students Advisory Council of the College of Urban Development, the conference is designed to give students an inside look at several expanding career fields.

Chrysler will give the keynote address, and two panels will discuss employment trends. The conference is open to the public.

Abuse program set

"He Touched Me," a slide presentation on wife abuse, will be shown by MSU Women's Resource Center at noon Wednesday in the Union Sempore Room.

Two community experts will lead a discussion on wife abuse following the presentation.

Diane Windschman of the Ingham County prosecutor's office, and Mary Ann Stehr of the MSU counseling center, will speak and answer questions.

Security leaks at DPS dangerous

It is, and has long been, fashionable to regard the MSU Department of Public Safety as a bumbling group of keystone cops running around planting parking tickets on the noses of paused pedestrians. But recently a more serious concern has been brought to light and spurred some very well deserved criticism — that being the security of campus police records and files kept on "suspicious" people.

DPS officers, it has been found, do not take the ordinary safety precautions one would hope for when imparting information about students to other alleged law enforcement agencies over the phone. In reality, any individual posing as a police officer can obtain information — and in at least one instance personal comments — about a student by simply calling DPS offices. The security risk here is obvious. There is a certain obligation that must accompany the right — enjoyed by DPS officers — to collect and impart information on the driving license and registrations of students and any personal knowledge, aside from criminal records, that an individual officer may have about a student.

This apparent injudiciousness does not end with the release of information to unidentified individuals. DPS officers have shown equally poor judgment through their widespread use of Field Information cards to form a file on "suspicious" people. The major problem with the cards and file is that the term suspicious can and often does extend to anyone unfortunate enough to strike a displeasing note with a less-than-busy officer.

The purpose of the file, according to DPS directors, is to collect information on and identify potential criminals. They are shared with any interested law enforcement agency. Similar files used to gather and exchange information on political subversives were outlawed recently but citizens' groups have since maintained that political file-gathering still exists, particularly by the FBI.

DPS officials have tried to draw a distinction between the now infamous Red Squad files kept to monitor political activity and the suspicious person files now being maintained, but the line is a very thin one. While we recognize the need of any law enforcement agency to collect information and aid other agencies with their files, we question the discretion allowed individual officers who can fill out the cards on anyone they choose.

It has been charged that DPS officers reveal the symptoms of an underworked police force in that they seem to expend a great deal of energy pursuing drunken drivers on the outskirts of campus rather than patrolling dark campus areas on foot. If this is the case, we would suggest that DPS officials reassess their priorities. Certainly there is a need for specific, written guidelines for all officers to follow regarding collection and release of all information.

Lobbying reform a vital measure

Lobbying reform is once again rearing its unwelcome head in the state Legislature despite all too apparent bandages covering wounds it received in the Senate Judiciary Committee under the heavy hand of Basil Brown. Now on the floor of the state Senate, the measure will have a last ditch effort at life after death — a death Brown and a number of strong lobbyist cohorts tried desperately to bring by watering down the initial measure to the point of being ineffectual.

The battle scheduled to ring within the chamber walls promises to be one of lobbyists and big money versus the people's support groups. Those vehemently opposed to the initial reform measure as introduced long ago by Sen. Gary Corbin and backed by the Democratic Party include the United Auto Workers, Common Cause and other smaller money organizations.

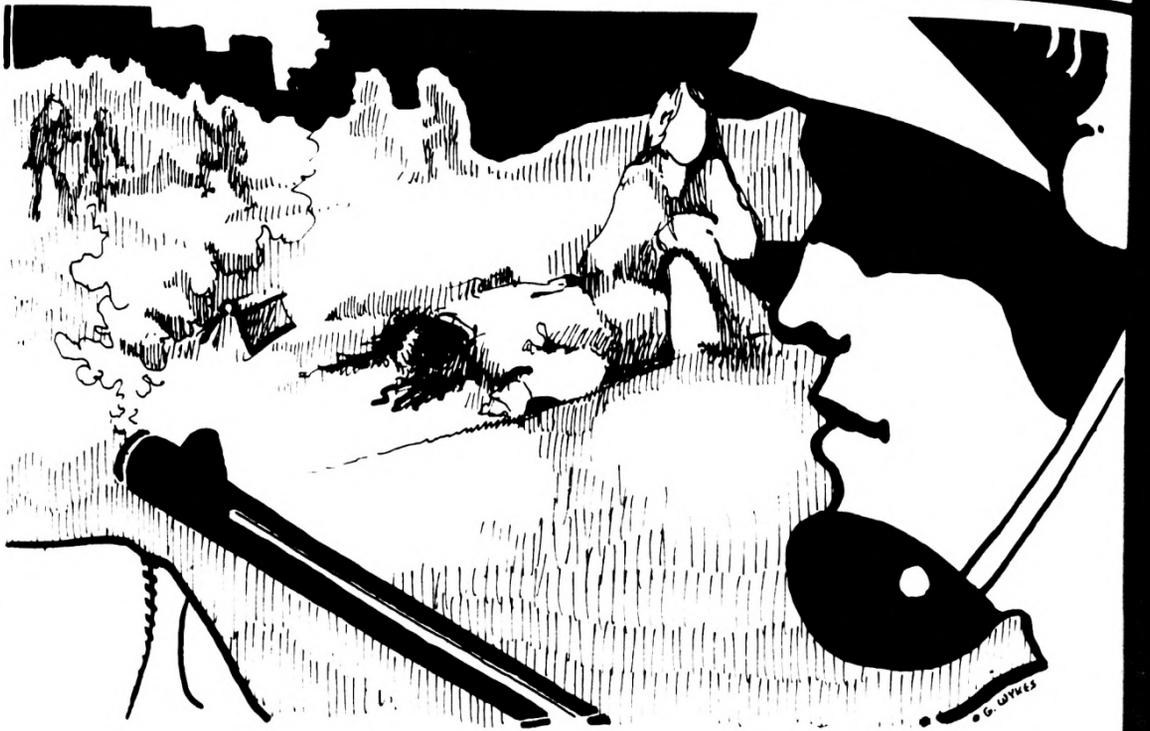

But there is big money working against the measure which would mandate complete disclosure of gifts — monetary and other — accepted by legislators. The State Bar of Michigan, the Chamber of Commerce and the Michigan Association of Realtors are among those who feel the bill would hamper the lobbyists' efforts to get close to legislators and, in effect, do their jobs.

But lobbying does not have to be excessive or illegal to be effectual.

In addition to the legislative battles decided by the power of the big interest dollars, there have recently been several instances where the propriety of loans and special favors given legislators — most of them never repaid — has been questioned.

There is a clear need for reform on both sides of the fence in Michigan — with both the big money lobby and the legislator on the receiving end. The squalor over Sen. Earl Nelson's acceptance of a "loan" from an unofficial dog racing lobbyist shortly before introducing legislation to legalize the sport is a prime example of the abuse that can go under a loosely-monitored lobbying system. Campaign and election expenditure laws have scratched the surface but not gone nearly far enough because the abuses themselves go much deeper. The danger implicit in such a lobbying atmosphere is that money, rather than need or propriety, becomes both the motive and ticket for successful legislation.

The battle over lobby reform is more than a political one. The blatant destruction of the initial reform measure by Brown and his committee must be overcome and a real reform package restored if the state Legislature hopes to be anything but a mouthpiece for the big money interests of Michigan.

Kent State: where responsibility lies

Statements called erroneous

Please allow me to respond to Mark Burton's letter (May 15) in which he blames liberals for the Kent State and Vietnam tragedies. Mr. Burton makes a number of erroneous and demagogic statements which deserve rebuttal. He opens by saying that the National Guard were subjected to "inhumane treatment" by students at Kent State. No guardsmen were killed at Kent State but four students were. I guess cold-blooded murder does not constitute "inhumane treatment" in Mr. Burton's book. He justifies these killings by saying, "They may have inot the words 'may have' been trying to save themselves from being shot." Yet, according to the Justice Department, no students were found to have been armed. It was, indeed, this particular finding which led to several grand jury indictments and a second trial. CBS news film, which was used as evidence, clearly shows the students running in the opposite direction of the guardsmen. It was this particular point in time when the guardsmen opened fire.

Mr. Burton finished his article by blaming the liberals for our failures in Vietnam and for "prolonging the war." He ignores the fact that it was Richard Nixon who milked two elections out of that war while telling us how successful we were. By the election of 1972, it became painfully clear that the Nixon Agnew administration looked upon Vietnam as a political football to be used against liberal candidates. Had it not been for many of the liberals who helped cut off funds for further bombing, the Nixon administration would have kept the war going on endlessly. So where does Mr. Burton get off by blaming the liberals for all this mess? I am sure that his lack of historical facts has something to do with it. Instead of constantly running off at the mouth, Mr. Burton would be wise to take a closer and more accurate look at American history.

'God help us' if we return

After reading the letter by the person who blamed liberals for the killings at Kent State I decided I could not remain in good conscience without writing a reply. My purpose is to state some of my own observations and lessons learned.

First off, the idea of a loud noise being heard before the guardsmen fired seems to be immaterial. Something made the guardsmen fire, and I do not condemn outright those who did.

A former guardsman gave me the impression they were nervous and scared men — much the same age as the protesters — who were uncertain about what was happening in their society and what was happening that day.

Nevertheless, the fact is that throughout the late 1960s, police forces and National Guard units all over the country were trained in effective means of riot control.

Moreover, in the history of the peace movement I do not remember one incident of demonstrators firing on police. Yet, the National Guard was issued live ammunition and responded by firing directly into the crowd.

The statement that the guard was there to protect the public does not coincide with the fact that some of those who were killed and wounded were not demonstrators, but merely people going home.

Also, the amount of threat to the guard does not seem impressive when one looks at pictures of the incident and notes the distance between the guard and the demonstrators.

Secondly, to say that the war was perpetuated by liberals is to call Nixon a liberal, and I don't think anybody is to do that. What weak opposition there did put up to the bombings in North and Cambodia did not stop Nixon bombing anyway. The war was not started by "liberals" or "conservatives" lies about America's purpose in the and a social system in which government acquiesced. The philosophy "no win" or aggressive bombing neither appropriate, but to get out

Finally, to say that "Some U.S. were required to warn Communist advance if they were going to be ridiculous. The actual American Vietnam (at least under LBJ) was the impossibility of distinguishing V and North Vietnamese from South. To do this certain area supposedly cleared of villagers people remaining assumed to be V or their sympathizers. These are then declared "free fire zones" with for the victim's identity removal policy contributed to occurrences such as

I do not wish to condemn "liberal" "conservatives" for Kent State what we are dealing with here is but Neil Young wrote "What if you knew found her dead on the ground? How you run when you know?" What if Kent State is that it proved America willing to kill its youth rather than itself from an immoral war. The killings does not rest with the men, the demonstrators, "liberal" "conservatives." To use any political faction as a scapegoat is examining our society and ourselves out where the real blame lies. If the type of society that the author previous letter intends to return to, there is nothing I can say to stop many others, from doing so. But God all.

A violation of neutrality

It has come to the attention of MSUFA that the trustees' regulation governing use of the campus mail for purposes of discussing collective bargaining is being violated by the Volunteers Against. Members of this ad hoc group are using faculty mail boxes to distribute their material and to bring pressure to bear on faculty to sign the advertisement they plan to buy listing faculty who intend to vote "no agent." Since it is unlikely that an outraged administration will rise up to censure this violation of the rules, Faculty Associates feels obligated to bring it to the faculty's attention.

Some of you may recall that the administration seized Faculty Associates' mail in 1975 on the grounds that we discussed collective bargaining in our materials. We were thus forced to use first class mail and to develop our own mailing lists. By contrast, the administration has immediately provided the faculty mailing list to this ad hoc group "Against" and is unlikely to stop its use of the campus mail system. So much for the administration's respect for the Trustees' resolution of neutrality. The faculty can judge the ethical tone that administrators and "Volunteers Against" have set. The Faculty Associates will continue to work under the rules and to run a positive, open campaign which addresses the issues. Faculty members may be assured that any person who openly identifies with our cause does so freely, for we do not seek to coerce our colleagues. We seek a free, open expression of faculty sentiment at the ballot box.

Bakke supported

With reference to your anti-Bakke editorial last week, I expect many majority (white) students of good will may agree with your viewpoint. Their agreement may come about in part because they are not personally involved in competing (with black candidates) for scarce job or educational opportunities.

If the "logic" of the anti-Bakke people becomes the law of the land, the United States will have institutionalized and legalized racial discrimination.

To serious students who really are interested in attaining knowledge and skills so that they can qualify for good jobs, I say: If Bakke loses, many of us will lose.

SOME OF MSU FACULTY ASSOCIATES

THE FOLLOWING FACULTY HAVE JOINED THEIR COLLEAGUES ACROSS THE CAMPUS TO SUPPORT MSUFA IN ITS EFFORTS TO SECURE PROFESSIONAL BARGAINING RIGHTS.

"I am for collective bargaining at MSU because I feel a greater faculty dignity and a more responsive and accountable administration will result. The proliferation of administrators and their salaries is one very pronounced indication of the power and resource imbalance between administrators and faculty that must be corrected.

Many colleges and universities are voting to implement the collective bargaining process. I have never heard of one institution that has voted to go back to what we at MSU now have." John H. Suehr, Professor, Department of Administration and Higher Education

As a labor historian interested in working people and as a black whose parents are working people I am deep in the union movement. I must support any organization whose aim is to provide working people with necessary tools to determine their lives. Personally I feel that Faculty Associates belong to the tradition of working peoples' unions that I have known and of which I have been a part." Robert W. Thomas, Asst. Prof., Racial & Ethnic Studies Without a sense of unity, a faculty can have no sense of community, and without a sense of community, a faculty can have no sense of professional identity. I believe in and support MSUFA because I am convinced that in unity there is strength." Gladys M. Beckwith, Assoc. Prof., American Thought & Language

"In the face of a steady trend toward increasing administrative control, collective bargaining seems now to be the only viable alternative for the faculty." James B. McKee, Professor, Sociology

Paul Barrett Distinguished Professor Natural Science

"Dignity is the Issue" Milton Taylor Professor, Department of Economics

Angus J. Howitt Professor Entomology

"I endorse the principle of collective bargaining as the best hope for insuring equitable treatment for the faculty—from college to college within the university, from department to department in each college, and from individual to individual within each department." Theodore Johnson, Professor, Music Department

"I support Faculty Associates because FA has consistently been a watchdog of the MSU administration and has consistently fought the arbitrary and whimsical actions of the administration." Tom Wolf, Instructor, Mathematics Department

"Tenure is under attack; academic freedom is under attack; our standard of living is under attack. Some strong-minded individuals will attempt to solve these problems by stoutly tugging on their boot straps to lift themselves a micro inch or so above their colleagues. As a biologist I believe that the individualistic approach shows self-interest... but it is hardly enlightened. If the study of Homo sapiens shows anything, it shows that our species faces adversity and survives by cooperation. I suppose we have been collectively bargaining with Mother Nature for a few million years. The principle is well-established and sound! Remember, cooperative genes survive! That's why I support collective bargaining." Derek T.A. Lampert, Professor, Plant Research Laboratory

Marshall Tucker Band returns

By BILL HOLDSHIP
State News Reviewer

There is nothing so powerful as truth — and often nothing so strange.
— James Monroe

South Carolina's Marshall Tucker Band treated MSU and Lansing to one of the most dynamic high energy sets of Southern boogie, blues, and rock that it has ever seen Sunday night at Munn Arena. The band performed for well over two hours to a super receptive audience (cowboy hats and all that brought the group back for three encores. If nothing else, MTB's performance was the greatest Lansing has ever seen for a mere dollar and a penny.

After an opening introduction by band member Jerry Eubanks addressed to yours truly, the band kicked off with a power house version of "Fly Like An Eagle" (not the Steve Miller song). The energy level never dropped, and the concert was nearly perfect in every way from Doug Gray's superb vocals to Paul Riddle's thunderous percussion. This was especially noticeable during "Ramblin' On My Mind" which individually showcased each band member. In retrospect, the performance was possibly one of the greatest sets MTB has ever performed.

Favorite numbers were featured from each of the band's six albums, in addition to many songs from their new Capricorn LP Together Forever. The new songs were excellent, most notably "Dream Lover" (not the Bobby Darin song — one can't help but wonder where they get such original song titles), and they demonstrated that MTB has a fine follow up to their platinum selling Carolina Dreams.

It was the older MTB standards like "Fire On The Mountain," though, that received the largest ovations and got the crowd on its feet. As one heard the opening chords of songs like "Heard It In A Love Song" and "Can't You See" (which they didn't even play the last time they were in town), one was aware that the band had definitely left memorable music that will survive.

However, honesty is still the only policy, and it must be said that MTB do absolutely nothing that is new. While they are the tightest and the best of the whole wave of Southern bands that hit following The Allman Brothers' international success, they still do nothing that The Allmans didn't do first and better. For that matter, they don't do anything that Duane Eddy, "the king of twang," didn't try first in the 1950s.

By the way, this is a biased review (see accompanying column). You see, the Marshall Tucker Band came back and did exactly what they were supposed to do this time. I will commend them and say that it's great that they finally got it right after three times. After all, practice makes perfect and if at first you don't succeed, try, try again. So the South does it again . . . and again, and again, and again, and again . . . (ho hum).

Tucker: the truth hurts

Blame it on Cain/Don't blame it on me/It's nobody's fault/But we need somebody to blame.
— Elvis Costello

My favorite AM and FM radio song during the summer of 1977 was "Heard It In A Love Song." The Marshall Tucker Band is a favorite of both my roommate and younger brother. This is why it was so weird for me to sit in the press box of Munn Arena Sunday night and listen to MTB member Jerry Eubanks exclaim: "Screw you, Holdship! This time we're here to play for the people and not that damn reviewer!" And this is why I have to laugh when people tell me that Doug Gray yelled "F--- you, Holdship" outside the band's limousine following the show.

I suppose I should be flattered in a way. I honestly had no intention of turning this into a personal matter, but since MTB wanted to make an issue of it, I'm going to print the straight facts: The Marshall Tucker Band performed a concert at the Lansing Civic Center in November of 1977. One complaint that was made against the band's performance at MSU during the winter of 1976 was that it was too short. At the beginning of the November show, guitarist Toy Caldwell stated, "We're going to be here awhile," and everyone expected a long set.

After 55 minutes, the MTB left the stage. The crowd screamed and yelled for nearly 30 minutes. The band never returned for an encore, and no explanation was given. My Southern rock fanatic friends said, "Give 'em hell, Bill!" I did, even though I raved about the band's musical competence. Anyone who has followed my reviews knows that the MTB review was mild compared to the hatchet job I've done on less talented performers. Above all, it was honest.

Several months later, we received two letters from Jerry Eubanks — one that was printed, and a nastier one for me. Eubanks claimed the concert was short because Toy Caldwell had the flu, and that the band usually performs for two and one half hours. I accepted that, although it would have been nice had a healthy band member explained the illness to their fans, and it didn't explain why MTB's prior MSU concert was considerably shorter than Eubanks claimed.

Following Eubanks' letter, I received a letter from Steven E. Wright, an MSU senior from New Jersey. Wright wrote that he is a Southern rock fan, and that he had seen MTB perform five times — twice in New York, once in New Jersey, and twice in Lansing. I quote from his letter: "The length of these shows varied from only one hour to 90 minutes . . . I don't know who Eubanks is trying to fool . . . MTB should be able to play at least three hours every time." (Thank you, Mr. Wright!) I sent Eubanks a copy of the letter with a nasty letter from me that ended, ". . . 10 years from now, people will no doubt be saying: 'The MTB? Didn't they once have a hit single?'"

The truth often hurts, and so the MTB came back. It was commendable, although it didn't help those who paid $7.50 to see them in November but couldn't get tickets this time. The band was overwhelmingly patronizing to the Munn audience. They apparently felt guilty and decided to lay the blame elsewhere. They went out of their way to prove me wrong — which ultimately means that I must have said something right.

Let's put it this way: The MTB performed what may well have been their best performance ever Sunday night. Without that review, East Lansing may not have seen it. (Ah! Such ego gratification!) They should have done it right the first time as most professional bands usually do, but I'll forgive them. They put on an excellent show.

And finally, I won't say it again. Eubanks has said it twice now — once in print and once in front of several thousand people. I've only printed it once (though I did say it first), but why bother to even up the score? After all, they know how I feel. They may be excellent musicians and Eubanks may be a terrific reed player, but it still pains me to know that such people are involved in rock 'n roll.

Awake! 'Breakfast In Bed' is served

ALLEDALE (AP) — The poised young man serving champagne and strawberries to the smiling couple in bed was Joseph Shirk of nearby Grand Rapids, sole proprietor of Breakfast In Bed, a new business designed to make the experience in elegance in your own home.

The contented customers were Beth and Rick Mangold, the first who hired the 22-year-old entrepreneur to make breakfast a special occasion. They weren't disappointed. Shirk arrived at the Mangold home at 9 a.m., toting all the pots, pans, dishes and enough groceries for the breakfast feast.

He served strawberries in champagne on a wicker tray and a case of fresh wild flowers.

Next came bagels and freshly squeezed orange juice, followed by poached eggs in avocado halves, topped with hollandaise sauce.

Finally, fruit, cheese and coffee completed what the Mangolds decided was a great way to dine.

"The whole thing took about two hours," Mrs. Mangold said. "We never felt rushed, and everything was so pretty with white china and flowers. It was really romantic."

Shirk went out of his way to preserve the mood, emerging from the kitchen only long enough to serve the couple, propped against pillows, leisurely enjoying the $25 repast.

The Mangolds, who hired Shirk to celebrate a coming baby, said they never felt awkward in the intimate event, even though Shirk stuck around to collect his dishes.

In the future, however, Shirk said he'll slip quietly out of the house once there's no more food to serve, leaving a trash bag for the diners to put the dirty dishes in. He'll return later to retrieve them from the porch or some other agreed upon spot.

When this breakfast was over, Shirk disappeared, leaving the kitchen spotless. "He did everything professionally," Mangold said.

Shirk said he'd been nervous, but said he felt it went off with just a single hitch: he had to make the Bearnaise sauce twice to get it right. "But I felt good doing it," he said.

Shirk holds a degree in English literature from Grand Valley State College and has worked as a waiter, actor and college financial aid officer. He said he figured the breakfast in bed idea was a way to enter the food service business. "I plan to open a restaurant eventually," he said.

The idea for his current venture came when a friend praised his efforts when he served her breakfast in bed to celebrate her birthday.

"She said, 'Too bad more people don't get this kind of breakfast treatment,' and I decided they could if I did it for them," he said.

Breakfast In Bed offers four different menus. Others include crepes, omelets and eggs benedict. Shirk is open for business every day.

"If anyone's interested in breakfast in bed, Breakfast In Bed is interested in them," he said.

Frat fund-raiser takes in $8,000

Phi Gamma Delta fraternity held its third annual bike-a-thon Sunday for the American Diabetes Association, netting the organization $8,000.

About 65 riders participated in the event, many biking over from Lansing area junior high schools.

The cyclists rode on a six and one-half mile course for up to eight hours Sunday. A Phi Gamma Delta fraternity member said the only problems were a few flat tires and some lost chains.

Martin Horstein, a Lansing resident, collected the most pledges. His collection totals $2,900.

Bike event set by Greenpeace

Great Lakes Greenpeace, an international environmental organization, will sponsor a "Save the Whales" Bike-a-thon Sunday beginning at 1 p.m. at Hannah Middle School, 819 Abbott Road.

Proceeds from the event will be used in this year's publicity campaign to stop Russian and Japanese whale hunting.

Saving whales from extinction is the main concern of the Greenpeace organization, according to member Matthew Perl. Perl said in last year's campaign, Greenpeace boats sailed with whaling fleets in "non-violent" protest of the killing.

Bike-a-thon packets and sponsor sheets are available from the Greenpeace office in the Students Activities Room, first floor Union Building.

Volunteers will also be needed to staff checkpoints along the bike route, Perl said.

representing agents have academic governance should be changed to allow faculty a shared role of authority with administrators.

Both said they view the current role of faculty in academic governance system as simply advisory and consultative.

Though neither of the competing agents has suggested such a possibility, Faculty Volunteeers has pointed out that collective bargaining is not an alternative to academic governance.

Beyond the question of whether collective bargaining should become established at MSU is which organization would be the better agent.

Many actively promotion fac ulty have said AAUP is a weak, ineffective organizer, which is not really involved with faculty bargaining by choice but was forced in because of the other organization's involvement.

One older, tenured anti-faculty union professor called AAUP "gentle and inept."

Another said the group was in danger of being lifted out of power. Still another said the group may be effective on a national level but not locally.

Yet most unionized faculty at four-year graduate and research universities are represented by AAUP. Faculty members who emphasize greater academic power rather than salaries and fringe benefits are often AAUP members.

The major criticism of Faculty Associates by more traditional faculty members is its de-emphasis of academic power for salary concerns.

"The issue of real participation in the decision-making process that affects our professional lives is in the long run more important than the day-to-day bread and butter issues of salaries," Blatt said.

"I have the impression they (Faculty Associates) are focusing on immediate economic issues — they are important but not to the point that one neglects other issues," he said.

Many younger, liberal faculty on campus who are pro-union favor Faculty Associates calling it "better organized" and saying that it has been addressing the current issues. Many see Faculty Associates as having "more clout" in getting more money from the legislature.

Faculty Associates is an affiliate of the Michigan Education Association, which is in turn a part of the National Education Association.

NEA commands the largest number of organized faculty in the country due to its strength in two-year colleges.

While AAUP was ranked by faculty in the Ladd-Lipset survey as the most desirable bargaining agent, it represents the smallest number of unionized faculty. As a result, there has been talk of a merger between the two groups to pair up NEA's state legislative power with AAUP's national influence.

Both sides dismiss talk of the merger as "rumor" however, saying there are too many philosophical differences between the groups.

AAUP points out that only 4 percent of NEA's membership is in higher education and of the 4 percent a small fraction are found in four-year universities.

Because of the small representation of higher education institutions, AAUP contends that policies of the NEA will be based on the larger constituency of primary and secondary schools. Such policies could include funding based on the scheduled hours of instruction as opposed to credit hours.

Faculty Associates, on the other hand, contends that policy for MEA higher education participants is formulated by a smaller unit, Michigan Association for Higher Education.

MAHE is composed of faculty members from 30 colleges and universities in Michigan and is concerned solely with higher education policies.

Faculty Associates also claims that the support of NEA will give it a more powerful voice in ending "current financial constraints."

AAUP maintains the affiliation of Faculty Associates with the national association will put the associates in a compromising position.

"That group will inevitably find itself in the position of either supporting policies beneficial to MSU faculty that are in direct conflict with those of MEA or supporting the MEA to the clear detriment of MSU faculty," Blatt said.

Resurgence of religious interest

students first reacted to the resurgence of religious interest by becoming "hippies" in the "hippie movement" in Eastern religions like Buddhism and Hinduism.

But he said students are disenchanted with the "hippie" movement and started to take Christianity courses.

He said there were as many as 100 students in a Hinduism class in 1977, enrollment in the class steadily declined to 28 students in 1978.

He said only 13 were enrolled in the Hinduism class in 1978.

In contrast, Anderson said there were only 10 students enrolled in a New Testament class before 1972. In 1972, when 900 students enrolled in the department's courses, 141 enrolled in a New Testament class. Now there are 130 students in the New Testament class, comprising 49 percent of the 260 students enrolled in all department courses.

Anderson, who teaches a New Testament class, said the course draws people from a range of religious beliefs and approaches, including a core of "confirmed evangelical" students, and those who take a social scientist view and want to see if religions can be taught with academic integrity.

"Then there are some who feel guilty about not knowing much about their tradition," he continued. "And some feel they've outgrown their faith but get nostalgic and want to take one last look."

State News Debbie Mascarin

on the track, on the road, during rain or shine, jogging is fast becoming the most popular all-weather and any location sport in the country.

BID FOR NATIONALS FAILS

Netters play well but lose regionals

By JERRY BRAUDE
State News Sports Writer

Before the snow even left the ground in East Lansing, MSU's women's tennis team romped over Purdue 9-0, and it looked like it was going to be a sparkling first year for head coach Earl Rutz.

But since then, anything that could possibly go wrong — did. Arduous road trips, illnesses, injuries, and worst of all, falling on the wrong end of close matches plagued the Spartans.

The team salvaged something out of the season by receiving an at large berth to the regionals last weekend. Although the injuries and illnesses were behind them in Muncie, Ind., the close defeats syndrome couldn't be shaken off.

Victories by Debbie Mascarin, Diane Selke and Heather MacTaggart gave MSU a 3-3 deadlock with fourth seeded Wisconsin after singles play.

Figuring that the Spartans could take two of the three doubles matches, Rutz was optimistic that the Spartans would advance to the next round.

Rutz's calculation looked like it was going to turn into reality. MSU's top team of Debbie Mascarin and Diane Selke and second team of Jennifer Brielmaier and Heather MacTaggart won their first sets and were one game away in the second set from facing eventual champion Ohio State.

But almost simultaneously, Rutz saw his hopes fall to pieces as both teams missed easy set ups.

Wisconsin not only went on to win the top two doubles matches, but also defeated MSU's third doubles team of Cindy Bogdonas and Mike Krueger for a 6-3 win, giving the Spartans an opportunity to think about next year.

"It looked like we had it wrapped up, but we just couldn't put it away," Rutz said.

"We were in command, but losing the second set took a lot of steam out of us. We'll need to work on our concentration and confidence because we lost too many close matches this year."

Rutz may have an idea of why the team was knocked out of the regionals, but why the selection committee didn't choose top player Debbie Mascarin as an at large selection for nationals may be an interminable mystery for him.

During the first two days of the singles tournament, Mascarin could do no wrong. She knocked off second seeded Amy Bachman of Wisconsin Friday 7-5, 6-2 and then surprised Michigan's Kathy Karzen, the third seed, Saturday 6-2, 6-2.

On Sunday, Mascarin reached the quarterfinals by trouncing Wisconsin's Joan Hedberg 6-0, 6-2, but then fell to Ohio State's Sue Walton 6-4, 6-0.

"Walton played excellent tennis," Rutz said. "Debbie also had a blister that was the size of a half dollar piece on the ball of her foot. It affected her play, but she won't admit it."

Because Mascarin didn't make it to the semi-finals, she didn't automatically qualify for nationals, but she still had a chance to receive the one at large bid.

Since Mascarin knocked off the second and third seeds, Rutz felt that she deserved to go. But instead, the selection committee chose Kathy Karzen, the third seed that Mascarin defeated, to go to Salisbury State College in Maryland.

"It was a hideous decision by the committee," Rutz said. "Debbie defeated the second and third seeds soundly. The committee operates in strange ways."

Cindy Bogdonas also participated in the singles tournament but bowed out in the first round to Ohio State's Leann Grimes 6-1, 6-1.

"The players gained an awful lot of experience about tennis and improved significantly," Rutz said. "Hopefully, we will have an easier traveling schedule next year which could make us more successful."

MICHAEL KLOCK
Leach shows 'true class'

No doubt about it, the University of Michigan has the baseball player in the Big Ten in its illustrious centerfielder, Leach.

This surprisingly small, somewhat cocky lad from Flint, Mich., has been named Big Ten batting title with a .473 mark and led the Wolverines to the conference championship.

Leach's ability as a football quarterback has often been mentioned by the press. Some people say he just can't pass. Other people say he's a true class.

But when it comes to baseball, it's pretty hard to knock Leach who has an overabundance of ability.

The sad part about Ricky Leach is that he has a lot of energy to do before he becomes the true superstar that he is in baseball.

I'm speaking about an incident that occurred during Saturday's 10-5 MSU win at Kobs Field.

Now we all know how fans are at MSU Michigan, regardless of the sport being played. Frankly, they like the players and fans from the other school.

A typical taunt from the MSU booster is, "Hey, they're chokin' just like they always do in the Rose Bowl."

A typical reply from a Wolverine fan is, "At least we get to go to a bowl game," or, "What do you expect from someone from a row college?"

Anyway, in the seventh inning of Saturday's game, Leach grounded into a double play which thwarted a Michigan rally. As he returned to the dugout, a group of MSU students began poking fun at him. "No vulgarities, just the usual jibing."

Leach responded with a classy move: he spit in the face of an MSU senior, who just happened to be the closest one to him.

"That takes a lot of class, Leach, why don't you do it again?" said the senior, who wished to remain anonymous. Leach reacted by using the senior's face as a cusp again. Frustrated, and hopefully embarrassed, he slammed into the rack and walked away.

For a true superstar, there would have been two ways to go to the fans who were teasing him. One, completely ignore since players aren't supposed to pay attention to the anyway. Two, walk away from the incident but use it as a way to play better, to show these people up.

Leach doesn't put up with any more abuse than a "superstar," so his action was inexcusable.

When the MSU basketball team played in Ann Arbor before the game, some fans carried signs that said "McGee is for real, Magie is an illusion."

Johnson's response after the game, "Sure, I saw the sign used them to motivate me."

On Sunday at Michigan's Fisher Field, everything was normal for Leach. His team won, he was saluting the crowd, and he did a little dance after it was announced he had won the crown.

Now that in itself isn't bad. So what if he thinks a lot of himself? But this weekend Rick Leach proved there is another personality besides his head that is too big; his "rabbit" ears. To be sure, Leach showed a lot of class. Unfortunately, low class.

Rick Leach

Club Sports

The MSU women's rowing crew novice team finished second in a three-team race in Allendale over the weekend.

Grand Valley won the race with a time of 6:04, 10 seconds ahead of MSU. Mercyhurst College finished last with a time of 6:19.

The entire team will be back in action Saturday at the state finals in Grand Rapids.

There will be a women's fencing tournament at 7 tonight in the fencing room on the fourth floor of Jenison Fieldhouse. There will also be a men's fencing tournament in the same room on May 30. Anyone can enter the tournaments.

The 1978-79 MSU cheerleaders were picked after this year's open spring tryouts. The co-captains named are Tim Abler and Jeanne Wrase.

Other members selected were Lori Agnew, Debbie Benson, Pete Betrus, Dave Green, Deena Green, Marty Johnson, Cathy Lilly, Bob Lockwood, Bob Norris, Debbie Rodgers, Jim Ross, Sue Stinson, Mike Stern and Vikki Wiegand.

MSU gets 'educated' at Big Ten

A ninth place finish for the MSU men's golf team wasn't quite what coach Bruce Fossum was looking for this weekend, but according to Fossum something was accomplished in the Big Ten tournament in Columbus, Ohio.

Stickmen conclude season with victory

MSU's lacrosse team finished its season on a winning note Saturday with an easy 15-5 victory over the short-handed East Lansing Lacrosse Club.

The East Lansing Lacrosse Club brought only seven players to the game, so MSU supplied them with four additional stickmen.

The Spartans finished the season with a 9-12 overall record, but were 0-7 in the Midwest Lacrosse Association. "It was a pretty good season," co-head coach Boku Hendrickson said. "I was disappointed, though, that we didn't have a winning season. But it was a good building season. With some of our talent, we have a good foundation for next year and the year after."

Goaltender Bill McGinniss and midfielder Mark Pinto received most improved player awards.

Joe Politowicz led the Spartan scoring with four goals while John Steeh had three. Rich Rick Omel and Steve Rohacz had a pair of goals each. Tim Flanagan, Paul Lubanski, Ken Davis and Duane Anderson also scored.

At Sunday's banquet sophomore Tim Flanagan received the most valuable player award and also received an award for most points.

Defenceman Clay Ferrer received Midwest Lacrosse Association honorable mention honors and received the award from the team as the unsung hero.

Goaltender Bill McGinniss and midfielder Mark Pinto received most improved player awards.

got into a hole that they could never get out of but Fossum was pleased with the way that his team played after that.

"We improved each round and I'm kind of pleased about that," Fossum said. "The kids hung in there and played as hard as they could."

Although the team kept improving, sophomore Rick Grover went the other way and dropped from first place after two rounds of the four round tournament, completely out of the top 20 when everything was all over.

"He just kind of made a few mistakes," Fossum said. "It happened to him."

Grover did lead MSU with rounds of 73, 74, 84 and 81 for a 312 total. Ohio State's sophomore sensation John Cook took the medalists honors in the tournament with a two-over-par-290 total.

The next finisher for the Spartans was senior Tom Baker who wrapped up his career at MSU with a 320 finish. Bill Herrick was next with a 321 score. Eric Gersonde carded a 326, Ed Kelbel totaled 329 and Steve Lubbers finished at 331.

Ohio State won the tournament for the third straight year by 59 strokes over runner up Indiana. OSU posted a 1,483 score for the tourney while the Hoosiers came in at 1,542.

Michigan finished third with 1,550, next came Minnesota (1,559), Purdue (1,560), Iowa (1,563), Illinois (1,579), Wisconsin (1,600), MSU (1,604) and Northwestern finished at 1,638.

"After the tournament I felt much better," Fossum said. "I didn't feel good about the finish but about the way we came back. Between the young people we have now and the help we're going to get, I think we'll be back in business next year."

...and academic concerns - not always a union's ...

... - usually determine the terms of a contract as ...

...strength and bargaining abilities, a faculty ...

...reported in 1975.

... AAUP contract contains an academic freedom clause to ensure faculty members individualism in their discipline.

Salary increases and improved fringe benefits are also major contract provisions.

Central Michigan University faculty, represented by the MEA, renewed their contract last December. Some of the economic and non-economic gains they made include:

- Eight percent salary raises and pre-paid medical insurance increases.
- A pre-paid dental plan beginning in September, the first for a faculty in Michigan.
- Higher retirement benefits.
- Changes in departmental procedures, if not approved by the provost, go to a seven-member faculty committee which has the final decision.
- A new one-step grievance procedure which eliminates formality and complexity. If a grievance is not settled by the assistant provost, it goes before an arbitration board.

Beyond economic gains the other strong argument made for collective bargaining is greater faculty power in university decision making.

The traditional view of higher education saw the administration functioning on behalf of the faculty with faculty having final say over what the academic environment would be. Administrators bought supplies, paid the bills and made sure the classrooms were lit and heated.

But as higher education expanded in the late '60s and early '70s, so did administrations and University bureaucracies.

"I think the University decision making power is moving upward toward the administration and I don't see any reason for not having a countervailing force," commented Kevin Kelly, a 37 year old associate professor of sociology, who said he would vote for Faculty Associates.

Collective bargaining is the best way to achieve greater faculty power instead of academic governance which doesn't really achieve faculty power, a 41-year-old assistant professor of ATL commented.

"It legitimizes the adversary relationship that exists already."

The conflicts of bread and butter issues clashing directly with scholarly ideals of academic freedom will not be resolved by the election. Regardless whether a union wins or not, the faculty ultimately will remain divided in its sentiment toward collective bargaining.

Orbiting debris causes concern

SPACE CENTER, Houston AP - Donald Kessler says it is time to start thinking about space garbage pickups.

The Johnson Space Center physicist says there is still time for solving a growing space junk problem so that future flights will be safe environmentally.

Kessler assures that the space shuttle craft possibly can be used to haul the larger pieces of junk back to earth or eliminate them as hazards by causing them to re-enter the atmosphere for spasations in remote ocean areas.

Making use of data supplied primarily by the North American Air Defense Command, a recent Kessler study indicates about 6,000 objects ranging from active satellites to debris now circle the Earth daily.

Kessler's study caused him to express concern the debris belt could grow into a Saturn-like ring unless environmental action is taken.

He calculates it is a million to one chance for a space shuttle, based on 50 flights a year to be struck by debris.

HOW TO GET A HEAD START ON LIFE AFTER COLLEGE.

Your college degree will get you started in life after college. Army ROTC will give you a head start while you're still in college.

Army ROTC offers you management training. Leadership experience. And a commission as an Army officer. Extra credentials that will set you apart in the job market.

You'll also earn $2,500 during your two years in advanced ROTC and new career opportunities upon graduation as a leader in the active Army, Reserve or National Guard.

Here's how to get started:

THE EARLY START

Start Army ROTC during your freshman or sophomore year with no obligation. You'll find a curriculum that's exciting and flexible enough to fit your class schedule and academic needs.

THE JUMP START

If you're a veteran or Junior ROTC graduate, then you're a jump ahead. You're already eligible to enter advanced ROTC.

THE BASIC START

If you're about to finish your sophomore year, apply now for our six-week summer Basic Camp at Fort Knox, Ky. You'll earn $450 and the opportunity to enter advanced ROTC next fall.

Collective Bargaining Election Facts

COLLECTIVE BARGAINING ELECTION FACTS

Dates - Wednesday and Thursday, May 24 and 25, 1978.
Times - Between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. either day.
Place - Demonstration Hall on the MSU campus (see map below)

Who May Vote - All faculty in the announced potential bargaining unit.

Type of Vote - Persons appearing to vote will be verified on a list of the potential unit, and given a secret ballot to cast.

Determination of Winner - If more than 50% of those voting May 24 and 25 cast ballots for any one of the three alternatives (AAUP, FA-MEA or No Agent) that choice wins. If none of the three receives a majority on May 24 and 25 the two alternatives receiving the greatest number of votes will appear on a run off ballot at a later date, at which time the choice receiving a majority of those voting in the run-off is the winner; such a run-off could be between AAUP and No Agent, between FA-MEA and No Agent, or between AAUP and FA-MEA.

gerous... but a good soldier is not afraid to die for his cause."

His group has been barred from demonstrating in Marquette Park, near Nazi head quarters on Chicago's South West Side.

Joseph Power of the city park district's law department said the Nazis can't march without posting a $60,000 in surety bond.

And he said the Nazis cannot get a parade or demonstration permit because "they are not incorporated or in any way a 'legal entity' that could be held responsible for their actions."

Collin said that despite court orders about how it would look to cancel the Skokie demonstration, the courts grant us our First Amendment rights every where in Illinois, then it would be beating a dead horse... if the courts say we have full rights as Nazis and Americans to march in Skokie or Chicago or any place in Illinois, it would be superfluous to demonstrate in Skokie.

"We would hopefully surprise no one by confessing personal views that the Nazi beliefs and goals are repugnant to the core values held generally by residents of this country," Judge Wilber Pell wrote in the appeals court decision handed down Monday.

"As judges sworn to defend the Constitution, however, we cannot decide this or any case on that basis."

"Ideological tyranny, no matter how worthy its motivation, is forbidden. Our regret at the use the Nazis plan to make of their rights is not in any sense an apology for upholding the First Amendment."

LOOK AT THAT BEAUTIFUL FLOWER!

YEAH

WHAT KIND IS THAT?

WELL, IT'S NOT A VIOLET

YOU SURE HAVE A KNACK FOR NARROWING THINGS DOWN

BETLE BAILEY

MISS BUXLEY IS UPSET WITH ME?

YES, SHE WANTS TO BE APPRECIATED FOR HER ABILITY

SHE WANTS YOU TO NOTICE HER WORK AND TELL HER "GOOD JOB" IF SHE DOES SOMETHING WELL.

GOOD JOB!
