Students march on Capitol

Student march protests climbing education costs

By PAUL CURTIS
and BRUCE BABIARZ
State News Staff Writers

Approximately 150 MSU students protesting higher education costs and any further tuition hikes marched from Beaumont Tower to the state Capitol Wednesday chanting "Fight the Hike," and "Higher tuition: Hell no."

The protestors chanted "Two, four, six, eight, can't afford to graduate," while waiting to be addressed by Zoltan Ferency, MSU associate professor of criminal justice.

"I'm pleased you all took the trouble to come down here with this message," Ferency said. He quoted a line from the Michigan Constitution which says in part, "schools and the means of education shall forever be encouraged."

"I think we have a right to demand that they carry it (the constitution) out," he added.

THERE WAS A day higher education "was perhaps a luxury, (but) that day has long since passed," Ferency said.

"Education is a necessity. It ought to be afforded to everybody. I resent the fact that these legislators want the students to pay for tuition hikes," he added.

"The burden of high tuition has been placed on those least able to pay. If it has to rise, find other means to support education," he said.

"I would rather see 10,000 to 100,000 students go to college than see a nuclear submarine or MX missile."

State Rep. Lynn Jondahl, D-East Lansing, also said the state should fund higher education.

"The responsibility for funding higher education rests with the state of Michigan," Jondahl said. "This step is the first step is what has to be done."

JONDAHL URGED STUDENTS to set up coalitions with elderly persons who need social services and who might want to be part-time students. Students should form a coalition with handicappers who also need money for higher education, he said.

"When we fail to adequately support education, we fail the society as well as the students. We are underwriting students and higher education. Education is an investment in the future and the present," he said.

Jondahl also said that the government should invest in higher education which is an "investment in the future for all of us," he said.

By funding higher education society will be "getting the insight and skills needed to help solve the problems surrounding us," Jondahl said.

State funding of higher education has been a problem in the past, is a problem now, and will be one in the future because of the Headlee amendment, which limits state taxes and therefore state expenditures, he said.

"There are ways to adjust our tax system," Jondahl said. "But it (Headlee) tied our hands."

STUDENTS SHOULD NOT listen to people who say the enemy to funding higher education is money appropriated for social services, Jondahl said.

"Your enemy is our inability to set up an equitable taxing system," he said.

Sen. William Sederburg, R-East Lansing, said the Legislature has cut the budget for higher spending from almost 25 percent to about 16 percent.

He urged students to visit and write their legislators and demand to be heard on the issue of increased tuition costs.

Jim Weber, director of Higher Education Management Services, told the protestors that the legislature is crating a self-fulfilling prophecy by limiting higher education funding.

ENROLLMENTS ARE DECLINING because costs are going up and the state is not funding colleges because of declining enrollments, Weber said.

MSU Trustee Aubrey Radcliffe, R-East Lansing, urged the students to participate in MSU trustee meetings for tuition hikes and legislative appropriations for higher education.

"Change will only occur when enough good people with courage speak out and give them hell," Radcliffe said.

Almost 150 MSU students marched from Beaumont Tower to the Capitol Wednesday in protest of the continuing increase in the cost of higher education, waving a multitude of signs and chanting slogans. For more pictures, turn to page 10.

ASMSU Student Board Chairperson Bruce Studer said the most effective part of the rally would be for students to visit their hometown representatives and ask them about high tuition. It will show the congressmembers that people form their own districts are rallying, not just MSU students, he said.

The legislature appropriated $119.6 million to MSU for the 1977-78 budget and appropriated a total of $680 million for higher education in Michigan during that year. MSU receives the second largest state appropriations following the University of Michigan, which received $138.8 million for fiscal 1977-78.

Women complain of discrimination by city personnel

By ROLAND WILKERSON
State News Staff Writer

The city of Lansing has been charged with exercising discriminatory hiring practices by city Councilmember Richard Baker and two Lansing women.

At the City Council meeting Tuesday night, Baker said the city has a "poor track record in hiring of women and minorities," and that it discourages minorities from applying by requiring too much information with a job application.

After the meeting, Baker talked about the experience of a Black woman, Doris Parr, who had not been able to get a job with the city.

Parr, 2808 Canarsie Drive, said she went to the city's personnel department in July to fill out an application in hopes of finding a job as a manager or supervisor.

PARR SAID SHE was interviewed by personnel technician Gene Pangle, who told her that she needed her discharge documents from the army, her college grade transcripts, her Social Security card and her birth certificate before he could process her application.

Parr, still unemployed, said she did not have time to accumulate the materials because she had to direct her efforts to finding a job.

She went to the Human Relations department in October, and asked to fill out a complaint form, but was only given a blank sheet of paper to write on.

Parr said she finally received a complaint form only after phoning Baker in the presence of the Human Relations Director Richard Letts.

In a meeting between Pangle, Letts and Parr, Pangle denied requesting the detailed documents before processing the application, Parr said.

IN A TELEPHONE interview Wednesday, Pangle said he "couldn't talk about" the situation.

Letts said Wednesday that Parr had been considered for a job in the finance department, but was turned down because she did not meet the requirements for the job opening.

Parr said that she has never received word from the city about a job opening.

"I never received a call saying that I was being considered," Parr said. "I'm still waiting."

There are very few Blacks in any type of management job at City Hall. —A. Shirley Turner

A. Shirley Turner, 1400 Mary Ave., said she also experienced similar problems.

TURNER, ALSO BLACK, said she had been told by an interviewer with the city that her application would not be accepted until she turned in the Social Security card and grade transcripts.

Turner said the interviewer also asked if she was divorced.

The information requested was for too personal considered that she "hadn't even asked what positions were open," Turner said.

Turner said that she had undoubtedly been discriminated against.

Commenting that City Hall is "lily white," Turner said, "There are very few Blacks in any type of management job at City Hall."

"While Mayor Graves is in office, we will not see any Black progress in City Hall," she said.

Turner said she has not filed a complaint with the city because she was waiting to find out if Parr would be successful in the complaint she filed. Turner added that if no further action was taken by the city, legal action on her behalf is a possibility.

Mackays give reception today for students

President Cecil Mackey and his wife Clare, will hold a reception for students tonight from 5:30 to 7:30 in the Multipurpose Room of the Brody Building.

The reception is free and open to all students.

U.S. firms 'illegally' hiring foreign engineers—AEA

By KY OWEN
and REGINALD THOMAS
State News Staff Writers

EDITORS NOTE: This is the first of a two-part series dealing with the hiring of foreign engineers by U.S. companies. Part I deals with a lawsuit against seven firms filed by the American Engineering Association.

The hiring of foreign engineers rather than Americans in the aerospace industry, will not directly affect college graduates at the present time but could affect them in a few years, the chairperson of the American Engineering Association said.

Richard L. Hurwitz said seven American aerospace companies are violating immigration laws by hiring and retaining "cheap foreign labor" instead of American workers, thus holding down the wages of American engineers.

While salaries start high for recent engineering graduates, the pay increases for only a few years and then levels off. This salary cycle may become complicated by the use of foreign labor in the aerospace industry.

AEA, which was organized last spring, is a group of engineers formed from the Council of Engineers and Scientist Organization.

The AEA filed a civil action suit against the seven companies in Los Angeles Central Circuit Court on Oct. 16, seeking an injunction against the hiring of foreign engineers and requesting a Senate investigation into immigration laws.

U.S. COMPANIES are allowed to hire foreign engineers on a temporary basis when there is a high demand for labor, but workers are laid off when the demand decreases.

For example, if there is a special project which needs more before approving them, he added.

Companies cited in the suit are Boeing Corp., McDonnell-Douglas, General Electric, Lockheed Corp., Martin Marietta, Northrup Corp. and a Grumman Corp. unit. The suit also names two aerospace engineering referral services, LPL Technical Services and CDI, along with the labor and immigration departments and the U.S. attorney general.

Spokespersons for the corporations have termed the allegations falsehoods.

Hurwitz said by keeping foreign engineers the companies are compressing the wages of experienced engineers, adding recent college graduates are not directly affected by the layoffs now but face repercussions in the future.

"They'll (the graduates) be in an area with experienced people," Kukuda said, and many of these could be foreign workers.

"IT AFFECTS EVERYONE on down. It's got to be a concern," Kukuda said.

"There are plenty of American workers. They're (the companies) are trying to get cheap foreign labor," Kukuda said.

"On an average (aliens) are paid 30 percent less than Americans," Kukuda added.

"Foreign engineers are being paid less and are cutting the number of jobs for American engineers," said Frank R. Wall, communications director for AEA.

"Ninety thousand engineers were laid off between 1970, and 1975, and 57,000 foreign engineers were on the job while Americans were on the streets," Wall added.

CONTROVERSY ARISES FROM a difference of opinion as to whether there really is a shortage of American engineers. The AEA says there is no shortage while LPL, various university and college deans, and members of different engineering unions say there is.

AEA claims the shortages are fabricated by the companies so they will have justification for hiring foreign engineers. The AEA also said because American engineers are leaving the industry there is no accurate record on the number of engineers out of work.

AEA added that because local employment offices no longer provide professional job assistance, the companies cannot count the number of possible workers.

The problem is a Catch 22 situation. Workers are not considered unemployed unless they are actively seeking employment. Because workers do not apply for unemployment compensation after being laid off, and do not register with the employment offices, they are not considered unemployed.

Arnold C. Lubash, president of LPL, stated that American colleges and universities have not graduated many engineering majors until recently. He said enrollment in engineering fell during the late 1960s and early 1970s. This, Lubash said, is now being felt by the engineering industry.

BUT WALL FEELS there are enough qualified engineers around. Wall did not comment on whether enrollment in colleges is down but he did say that in 1969 there were between 1.5 and 1.6 million practicing engineers in the United States. He said currently there are 1.1 million practicing engineers.

"There are over half a million practicing engineers out there," Wall said. "There is a sufficient number of engineers but the foreign engineers are undercutting the work force."

Immigration laws hearing begins

By KY OWEN
and REGINALD THOMAS
State News Staff Writers

Congressional hearings concerning an investigation of the immigration laws begin Monday in Boston and will continue through 1980.

A joint house and Senate committee will be investigating the overall problems with the laws, said Frank R. Wall, director of communications for the American Engineering Association.

The association has filed a suit against nine American firms, the labor and immigration departments and the U.S. attorney general. The suit charges the companies with illegally hiring foreign engineers and charges the government with failing to do its job.

Under the Immigration and Naturalization Act, non-immigrants are allowed to enter the United States to work on a temporary basis.

THE STATUTE STATES that one of its intentions is to protect the American labor market from an influx of both skilled and unskilled labor.

In order for aliens to enter the labor market, the Secretary of Labor must certify to the attorney general and Secretary of State "that there are not sufficient workers in the United States who are able, willing, qualified and available at the time of application for a visa and admission to the United States."

Kenneth J. Kukuda, attorney for AEA, said companies apply for the visas by filing a labor certification form, which must be approved by the Department of Labor.

The association is suing the labor department because it believes the department is not fully investigating the applications, Kukuda said.

"We're saying 'you guys aren't doing your job,'" he said.

ANOTHER CHARGE THE association has made is that the companies are renewing the visas, and therefore hiring the aliens on a permanent, not a temporary, basis.

Richard L. Hurwitz, chairperson of AEA, said he thinks "temporary" means one year.

But the law does not specify what temporary means.

Arnold C. Lubash, president of LPL Technical Services, a company named in the suit, said the labor department never said it was illegal to renew temporary visas.

A spokesperson for the labor department refused to comment on the case.

ONE OF THE AEA's main complaints is that the hiring of alien engineers is cutting the salaries of American workers.

According to the statute, "the employment of such aliens (temporary workers) will not adversely affect the wages and working conditions of the workers in the United States similarly employed."

The statute, as it pertains to wages, was upheld by a federal court in the case of Ozhurman vs. the Regional Manpower Administrator of the Department of Labor, when the court denied an alien a visa because he was to be paid less than the "prevailing wage."

AEA is also charging the companies with allowing aliens to work on defense projects which require special clearance not attainable with temporary visas.

Kukuda said the government usually relies on the companies to enforce the regulations.

Wall said AEA has passed information to the American Security Council concerning a commercial aircraft company which is using aliens on defense projects.

He added the group passed information concerning Northrup Corp., but the matter has been resolved.

Gen. Daniel Graham of the American Security Council said there are some restrictions on who can receive clearance, but said he did not know exactly what they were.

He said he passed the information on Northrup to the Department of Defense and said he knows of no other investigation.

ANALYSIS

engineers immediately, the companies can hire foreign workers.

Temporary visas are issued to the workers at the request of the companies. When applying for visas, firms are asked if they would hire an available American, if the firm searched for an American applicant, and if wages paid to the foreign workers will be comparable to those paid to Americans.

The AEA lawsuit centers around these three points.

AEA Attorney Kenneth J. Kukuda said the companies are not meeting these stipulations and the federal government is not enforcing the regulations.

"SOMEBODY IS NOT doing their job," Kukuda said. The labor department is not investigating labor certification applications

Earthquake flattens villages in Iran

(AP) — A strong earthquake flattened at least 18 villages in northeast Iran early Wednesday, killing at least 500 persons, rescue workers said. Scores were reported injured.

Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the nation's revolutionary leader, called the quake "tragic and frightening."

The tremor was felt in the holy city of Mashhad, 500 miles east of Tehran, but none of the famous domed mosques, tall minarets or other buildings there suffered any damage.

Sources in Mashhad said bodies were still being dug out by troops rushed to the wide area of destruction. Hundreds of peasants were said to be homeless.

"It is possible the death-toll will exceed 1,000," said Mohammed Ali Shirazi, reached by telephone from Nicosia, Cyprus.

Shirazi, son of Ayatollah Ali Shirazi, Mashhad's religious leader, said the quake struck before dawn local time, crumbling dwellings on top of thousands of sleeping villagers.

'French Connection' replaced for heroin

MARSEILLE, France (AP) — A growing "Middle Eastern Connection" using laboratories in Turkey to process opium from Iran has all but replaced heroin's famed "French Connection" between Southeast Asia and the West, narcotics agents say.

"Western Europe is being inundated with Middle Eastern heroin," said one international narcotics agent. "In 1977, about 75 percent of the heroin in Europe was from Southeast Asia. Today it's nearly 90 percent from the Middle East. We've seen a complete turnaround."

The political upheaval in Iran and resultant lack of law enforcement have allowed illicit opium growers there to double their crop this year to about 600 tons, according to international narcotics experts here and in Paris.

In the early 1970s, before the "French Connection" was broken, Turkish or Iranian opium was made into a crude morphine base and smuggled, among other places, to this Mediterranean port. Here it was refined into nearly pure "Made in France" heroin that fetched top-dollar in the United States and Europe.

Now, according to narcotics agents who declined to be identified by name, Turkish traffickers have developed their own laboratories, cutting out the "middle-men" and making it extremely difficult for the remnants of the "French Connection" to find morphine base.

Israeli gov't expels mayor, others resign

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The Israeli government Wednesday reaffirmed its decision to expel the Arab mayor of Nablus, who authorities claim is sympathetic to PLO terrorism. The Cabinet decision brought a rash of resignations from Arab officials in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip. The mayor's supporters sought help in Washington, at the United Nations and in Canada.

By the end of the day, according to a spokesperson for the West Bank military government, all elected officials of the West Bank's 25 towns had resigned, and the mayors and town councilmembers of Gaza City and Khan Yunis in the Gaza Strip had followed suit to express solidarity with the jailed Bassam Shakaa.

Although the occupied territories remained generally calm, police in Nablus discovered a time bomb and Israeli troops exploded it without problem, officials said.

Some youths threw rocks at Israeli cars in Nablus, where shops were closed for the fourth straight day in sympathy with the mayor, jailed Sunday without explanation.

Relaxing can prevent heart attacks

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — People who learn to relax through biofeedback techniques can significantly reduce high blood pressure and other factors linked to heart attacks, an English scientist said Wednesday.

A study of 192 British workers found "relaxation training" significantly lowered high blood pressure, cut smoking and probably reduced cholesterol levels, said Dr. Chandra Patel of the University of London's School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine.

She outlined the study at an American Heart Association conference here.

"We used a program of training in relaxation and mental relaxation in the form of meditation," Patel said in an interview. "It also helps people handle their day-to-day stress by integrating relaxation into everyday life."

The therapy, she said, is easy to learn, involves no drugs, has no harmful side effects and, once mastered, can be turned on and off to deal with stressful situations such as traffic jams.

Court upholds conviction of representative

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal appeals court Wednesday upheld the conviction of Rep. Charles C. Diggs Jr., who took kickbacks from staffers and had government paychecks issued to persons who handled his personal affairs.

In a 2-1 decision, a U.S. Court of Appeals panel upheld all 29 counts that led to Diggs' jury conviction a year ago and a three-year prison sentence that he has not started serving.

"The defendant defrauded the public of not only substantial sums of money, but of his faithful and honest services," said the majority opinion by U.S. Circuit Judge Malcolm Richard Wilkey.

The Michigan Democrat's press secretary, Joan Willoughby, said, "We're not making any statement pending review of the decision."

The jury found that the financially troubled congressman defrauded the government of nearly $103,000. He inflated the salaries of three staff members so they could kick back part of the money, which went to pay his House expenses and personal bills.

The jury also found that Diggs placed two persons on the government payroll who did little or no work for the House — his personal accountant and a bookkeeper at his Detroit funeral home.

Carter petitioned to re-impose controls on fuel

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 100 House members petitioned President Carter Wednesday to re-impose price and allocation controls on home heating oil, diesel fuel and other middle distillates.

In a letter to Carter, 102 congressmen said refiners' profit margins are rising twice as fast as the cost of oil itself. They added:

"If profit margins remain at current levels, American consumers will pay between $5.2 billion and $7.4 billion more in higher distillate prices over the next year."

The bipartisan group of House members said that when controls were lifted from distillates in 1976, "Congress was assured that adequate supplies and real competition would insure equitable prices for American consumers."

"We believe that neither of those conditions exists today," they said.

Then-President Ford removed price and allocation controls from middle distillates in 1976, saying ample supplies of such products made controls unnecessary. Middle distillates consist primarily of heating oil, diesel fuel and kerosene.

STATE DEPT. STANDS FIRM AGAINST IRANIANS

Carter freezes Iran's assets

By BROOKS JACKSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — President Carter froze billions of dollars of Iranian government assets in the United States Wednesday as the conflict between the nations escalated into what one official characterized as "economic political warfare."

At the same time, the State Department took its hardest line yet toward the Iranians, insisting that students who seized the U.S. Embassy and some 60 American hostages must agree to release the captives before there can be any negotiation of U.S.-Iranian relations.

Carter ordered the freeze of Iranian assets under the International Emergency Economic Powers Act after authorities in Tehran threatened to pull Iranian money out of the United States. The Iranians said they have some $12 billion in assets in the United States, but U.S. officials said the total is less than $6 billion.

Carter, saying the Iranian move was a threat to the national security, foreign policy and economy of the United States, declared a "national emergency to deal with that threat."

Administration officials said the freeze, which does not affect assets of private Iranian citizens including the deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, has the support of congressional leaders and other foreign governments.

THEY SAID IT should not trigger any disruption of financial markets or increase the risk of seizure of U.S. assets in Iran, which are valued at about $400 million.

A Treasury Department official, who declined to be identified, said Carter's emergency declaration empowers him now to take further economic actions against the Iranians.

"You shouldn't discount possible further steps," this official said.

Treasury Secretary G. William Miller said the freeze was unrelated to the continuing siege of the U.S. Embassy and was taken "purely in response to Iran's threat to pull out its money."

Treasury Secretary G. William Miller also indicated additional measures could be taken, saying, "I don't think we can foreclose options in the future."

BUT HE REFUSED to speculate on future actions, saying, "We don't intend to do anything that would add to tensions."

Miller said the freeze was unrelated to the continuing siege of the U.S. Embassy and was taken "purely in response to Iran's threat to pull out its money."

Meanwhile, U.S. officials said they knew of no change in the condition of the hostages, held (continued on page 3)

Carter willing to help space program

By HOWARD BENEDICT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — President Carter expressed full support for the manned space shuttle Wednesday and said he is willing to spend extra money to help correct its problems, space agency officials reported after an hour-long White House meeting.

A few months ago, the president probably wouldn't have taken such a personal interest in the program. But a series of technical setbacks have delayed the maiden launching more than a year, threatening the shuttle's vital and growing national defense role.

The White House is counting on it as a major tool to verify Russian compliance with arms limitation agreements, and the delays prompted Carter to ask for Wednesday's personal briefing from Dr. Robert Frosch, administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

"The president expressed support in the program and confidence in it and stated his full expression of the national need for the program," Frosch told reporters afterwards.

"HE IS CONCERNED about the national security uses," the NASA chief said. "He is also concerned about the general usefulness as a scientific tool and as a tool for commercial utilization of space and as an important piece of U.S. technological process."

Frosch said Carter asked about the technical, financial and management problems which have been plaguing the program, including the failure of a critical engine test last week.

"The burden of my message to him was that these are not major or intrinsic flaws with the engine, that this is a typical engine development set of problems," he said. "It takes time to fix, but they really are the kinds of things that one expects to find in testing."

FROSCH RECENTLY TOLD Congress that the shuttle project has been underfunded for years and that he intended to ask for "several hundred million dollars" extra to help put it back on track.

Asked if Carter's support extended to the additional money, Frosch replied: "Even at the extra cost."

He said the exact amount of additional money he will request has not been determined, but it is believed to range between $300 million and $500 million.

Chrysler assured loan

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Treasury Secretary G. William Miller predicted Wednesday that Congress would swiftly approve the Carter administration's proposal for $1.5 billion in federal loan guarantees for the financially beleaguered Chrysler Corp.

Miller offered his prediction to reporters as he outlined the administration's case for the guarantees before the Senate Banking Committee.

Asked whether he thought Congress would approve the rescue plan by the end of the year, Miller replied: "Oh, yes."

Miller also said he thought there was a "reasonable prospect" that Chrysler could come up with the additional $1.5 billion in new financing on its own that the administration is requiring as a condition of the loan guarantees.

Miller testified that without government help, it is likely that Chrysler "will face an insolvency and a reorganization under bankruptcy," events he said would be disruptive. Chrysler, the nation's third largest automaker, also says it faces bankruptcy without government assistance.

MILLER APPEARED BEFORE the Senate committee after the House Banking Committee voted to require Chrysler to produce energy-saving cars and other equipment as a condition for receiving assistance.

The House committee, by a 30-7 vote, adopted an amendment calling for a plan "which focuses on the national need to lessen United States dependence on petroleum."

The amendment, sponsored by Rep. Henry Reuss, D-Wis., the committee chairperson, was supported by the administration. Reuss said the amendment was necessary for his support of the bill.

The Reuss amendment would require Chrysler to agree to an energy-saving plan "satisfactory" to the treasury secretary. Reuss said this would permit the administration to require unspecified energy-saving measures in addition to the national fuel economy standards all auto manufacturers are required to meet.

"The amendment requires that the Chrysler plan concentrate on producing transportation and energy equipment that will reduce our dependence on petroleum," Reuss said.

THE AMENDMENT ALSO would authorize aid to any other company that was prepared to make energy-saving vehicles at plants Chrysler had abandoned or planned to abandon.

Reuss mentioned as an example Chrysler's Dodge Main plant in Hamtramck.

Iran's assets

since Nov. 4 in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran. In addition to the approximately 60 American hostages, the Iranians also are holding 36 other embassy employees, believed to be Indian and Pakistani nationals.

Following a briefing for members of Congress by Miller and State Department officials, Rep. Clarence Long, D-Md., said "I didn't get the feeling there was any progress" toward winning the release of the hostages.

THE STUDENTS WHO seized the embassy have demanded the return to Iran of the shah, who is hospitalized in New York undergoing cancer treatment.

U.S. authorities have refused to return the shah and, as Secretary of State Cyrus Vance departed Wednesday for New York, officials took their hardest line toward the Iranian demands.

"There is no way this government can or will negotiate under the gun of its own people being held illegally," said State Department spokesperson Hodding Carter.

Vance went to New York to try to block the U.N. Security Council from discussing Iranian complaints about the United States. Spokesperson Carter said that if Iran is successful in getting the Security Council to hear its complaints, "the United States, in effect, is being put on trial."

Shortly after President Carter's action early Wednesday, Treasury Secretary Miller said the freeze would be in effect indefinitely.

GEORGE SALEM, a Wall Street banking analyst with Bache Halsey Stuart Shields, said U.S. banks have an outstanding total of $2.5 billion in loans to Iran. He said the loans are concentrated among the 10 largest U.S. banks, with Bank of America, Citibank and Chase Manhattan holding the largest Iranian notes.

Miller told reporters the administration had been prepared for Iran's threat and the order to freeze Iranian assets already had been drafted and only needed Carter's signature.

The treasury secretary said he first learned of the Iranian threat at 5 a.m. EST and spoke to Carter by telephone at 5:45. He said Carter signed the order at 8 a.m., delaying to give officials time to consult with other governments.

The treasury secretary also said the freeze was not aimed at cutting off trade between the United States and Iran, although both nations have now barred trade in oil. Miller noted that Iran could pay for U.S. shipments of food and other goods with money held in banks outside the United States.

Parachute not connected to unsolved crime

KELSO, Wash. (AP) — The FBI says it has ruled out any connection between a partly buried parachute found in a wooded area of southwest Washington and the 8-year-old disappearance of skyjacker D.B. Cooper.

The parachute was found by logger Darrell G. Ray and turned over to Cowlitz County sheriff's deputies Monday, after a friend told Ray the discovery might be a clue to the nation's only unsolved skyjacking.

But Bill Williams, an FBI spokesperson in Portland, Ore., said Tuesday, "We have determined after examining the chute that it is not related to the case at all, even though it was found in the general area where Cooper left the plane."

A man using the name of Cooper boarded a Northwest Airlines jet headed from Portland to Seattle on Nov. 24, 1971. While airborne, he threatened to blow up the plane with a bomb he claimed to have in a briefcase unless he was given $200,000.

After the plane landed in Seattle, Cooper freed the passengers and was given the money and four parachutes. He ordered the plane to fly to Reno, but opened the rear boarding ramp of the Boeing 727 somewhere en route — believed to be over southwest Washington — and bailed out.

No trace of Cooper or the money has been found.

Records indicated that Cooper was given white parachutes, Williams said, while the parachute found in the woods was orange and white.

SORRY, GEORGE

YOU'RE TOO MUCH

Some people pay a quarter a day for their newspaper. But if you wanted to spend that much for the State News we'd have to say "Sorry that is too much." You see this newspaper costs about 3¢ a day. You'd get a dime back and four days free for a quarter. A good deal for your money, and a good deal more than anything else that is available.

For only 3¢ a day you receive a daily update of what is happening around campus, around the state and around the world. It is news you can use, presented in such a way that makes reading it enjoyable. And the best part of all - it is written especially for you - the MSU student.

Each term you are charged a price for your newspaper that helps pay for the newsprint it is printed on. Even though the bulk of the costs are paid through advertising, the price you pay helps cover the newsprint and the many features you get, and have come to expect, from the State News. At winter registration, you will be asked to approve a modest increase of 50¢ per term (the first increase in over 15 years). We need your support to continue producing the State News exactly the way you like it.

Airline services vital to Lansing

United Airlines would like to reduce its number of daily flights out of Capital City Airport from eight to two; a reduction in service of 75 percent. If United drastically reduces its service to Lansing without finding a replacement airline, the Lansing-area will suffer a considerable loss. The Civil Aeronautics Board must realize this and must force United to continue to service Lansing until another airline is available. An extensive period of planning would be required before another company would be able to begin service to the Lansing area. Consequently, a replacement airline should be given an adequate amount of time to move into Lansing before United reduces its services. As the capital of Michigan, it is imperative that Lansing has consistent air service. Many Lansing-area businesses need the access to major cities United offers. Without quick access to other cities, some businesses may be forced to leave Lansing, and new businesses might be dissuaded from moving here. If Lansing loses any of its businesses because of a lack of available flights, then the Lansing area will also lose valuable jobs.

Students who fly home, and other Lansing area residents will also suffer if a replacement airline is not found. Without an airline offering flights to other major airports, namely those in Detroit and Chicago, those people will have to find other modes of transportation. This will increase the time and expense of traveling.

In the first nine months of this year, United Carried approximately 180,000 passengers out of Lansing and the four other mid-Michigan cities where it wants to limit service. This is too large a number of people to ignore when reducing the availability of air travel.

Iranian protests are misguided

Signs displayed at recent MSU anti-Iran demonstrations such as "Deport Iranians — Import Heineken's" are both immature and irresponsible. The actions in Iran should be condemned, but Iranians in America and particularly Iranian students — should not be belittled with those actions.

Iranian students are being treated as scapegoats for the hostage situation in Iran. This is so because all Iranians are viewed as supporters of the Iranian government and its policies.

Some Iranians support the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's recent actions, but they should not be attacked because of their personal beliefs, especially in a "free" country like the United States. There are also many other Iranians who disassociate themselves from Iran's hostilities and admit that Iran is poorly and inappropriately governed. Why demonstrators wish to discriminate against and continually badger these people is inscrutable, because most Iranian students are here only to get as good an education as possible. In doing so, they can do little else but help themselves and their country.

Many Iranians are strangers in what is becoming a strange land. Aiming prejudiced attacks toward them will only alienate them and degrade American society. America's image as a melting pot for people of all lands should not be marred by unfair protests against Iranians.

Solving the situation in Iran calls for calm deliberations, not emotionally and racially biased protests.

Rally's mistakes cause for review

Yesterday's rally at the capitol will be totally ineffective in addressing the problems of increasing tuition rates if no steps are taken to continue focusing attention on the situation. Though the rally was a fiasco, the concept was a good one. Rallies in the past — most notably those in the '60s against the Vietnam war — were very effective in focusing attention on an issue and introducing various solutions to correct problems involved with it.

Rallies may have the potential to be effective, but yesterday's rally had limited potential since the idea was introduced. An issue as serious as tuition should not have been treated in an elementary, juvenile manner. The sponsors of the rally made the event sound like a carnival, instead of a serious attempt by a group of concerned students to address an important problem. Prizes for banners and lavish posters are only appropriate for a parade or festival; not for a serious event. Concentrating on supporting a festival somehow detracts from revealing the gravity of the tuition issue.

Not only was the rally treated with a lack of seriousness usually given to issues of this importance, but it was also poorly organized. The rally's poor timing was a direct casualty caused by its lack of responsible organization. The first mention of possible tuition increases came last spring. The time to organize the rally against higher tuition would have been then, not this November, when many students are preparing for finals. Problems may be addressed more effectively before final decisions are made, not after them. The argument that students needed to wait until Spring, when the legislature has made a final decision on the exact amount of the increase is invalid.

'LASH' LARROW

Let's fight to block those tuition hikes

I'm at my usual spot in the Union, my petitions laid out on my card table, and this student I know goes on by without even giving a nod. Then he does a double-take and comes over.

"Gosh, Lash," he says. "I didn't recognize you. No beard, that double knit suit you've got on, that Harry Truman bow tie. What's with the get-up? You speaking at the tuition rally today?"

"You bet I am!" I say enthusiastically. "How can you be for raising the state's appropriation?" he asks. "You know Michigan's tax system is regressive; it takes a bigger bite out of a poor family's income than it does from a rich family. Most MSU students come from affluent families, too. They can more easily afford a tuition increase than the poor can a tax increase."

"If you knew your economics, sonny," I say patiently, "you'd know the state can't raise the tax burden on the rich or their savings will dry up. They won't have money left over to invest in the industries that keep Michigan's economy strong and vibrant."

"I see by The State Journal where you're one of MSU's top administrators, Lash, makin' big bucks," he smirks. "I don't see you putting your bread into new industry in Michigan."

"But wouldn't a tax hike to get more dollars for higher education be a hardship on the working poor? I'd think even you'd be able to see that's unfair, Lash."

"Negative," I say. "On the contrary, it'll be the best thing ever happened to 'em. Their taxes go up, all they have to do is get of their duffs, get out there and hustle for more bucks. You won't see 'em idling their time away guzzling beer in pool halls then, no sir!"

"I know you're a respected econ prof and all that," he says, "but you don't seem to realize how unfair your attitude is. You don't know your workers, either. I work at the Oldsmobile factory part-time, and I've seen how much overtime the older workers down there have to put in just to make ends meet. They can't afford higher taxes, Lash!"

"If the tax bite gets too rough for 'em," I explains, "they can go on welfare. That'll solve their personal problems, and Washington will pick up the tab."

"Wouldn't that compound the problem?" he wonders. "Somebody's taxes will have to go up if more people climb onto the welfare fells."

"You wouldn't say that if you'd been paying attention in your econ classes," I scolds. "You'd know that nobody pays higher taxes when Uncle Sam pays the bill. The federal government simply turns on the spigot, and the money gushes out."

"Wouldn't that be inflationary?" the creep worries. "One of my profs told us prices go up when there are too many dollars chasing too few goods."

"Not according to a theoretical break-through I've just published," I tells him. "What the computer shows is that when you integrate federal deficit spending on welfare with states' regressive tax systems, everybody benefits. Economists with the federal government are already calling it 'Lash's Law'."

"Sounds pretty theoretical to me," he says. "How does it work?"

"Your workers who get those federal welfare checks will spend all their dimes as soon as they get 'em," I explains. "And with the state's regressive tax system you're complaining about, the more folks we have on welfare, the faster the state's coffers fill up, right?"

"With those extra bucks in the till, the state can increase its appropriation for Moo U. no sweat. It'll have money left over for prison, and for mental health, too. We won't have to raise tuition, then!"

Juvenile antics detract from game

As a senior at MSU, I've enjoyed watching many fine football games at Spartan Stadium. Win or lose, the experience of seeing 70,000 plus fans pulling for the same goal has been rewarding.

Last Saturday afternoon, however, my hope and confidence in young people was obliterated by the moronic behavior of many student "fans." In particular I refer to the activities of the students in section 16. People were making hard, heavy slush balls and letting them fly from 60 rows up. I saw an elderly woman hit in the back of the head. A girl trying to get back up to her seat was struck in the forehead. The MSU band was bombarded. Even the Spartan football team was peppered. An ABC cameraperson was pelted, and people wonder why certain universities get bad reputations and declining appropriations from state legislatures.

What sickened me the most was that a few guys started taking potshots at a man in a wheelchair on field level. The man did not appear to have to have the physical ability to avoid the snowballs.

When a snowball did strike the wheelchair, the thrower and a friend of his danced with glee.

To the crowd's approval, not one snowball was hurled at "Zeke the Wonder Dog" while the dog was preparing for the half-time show. Unfortunately, the human beings in the stadium were not treated with the same respect given the dog! If this respect had been given, I would not have had to sit there with a sad, nauseous feeling.

Sincere feelings

Reading Dave Janssen's contemplative Midnight Ramblings, in which he described his thoughts while soaking up the Abrams Planetarium presentation, was a refreshing experience.

More than that — it hit home and gave me (and I'm sure a few others) the chance to sit back and say "yeah, I've felt exactly the same way." Those moments of reflection on life's experiences and the reasoning behind those experiences were beautifully expressed. Pure mind searching times when the kaleidoscopic elements of what makes up our waking hours is examined and questioned.

Thank you, Mr. Janssen, for your input, your foresight in writing down your thoughts and your courage in sharing those personal reflections with the MSU community.

Keep up the laughter. Sure, it sometimes only serves as a masquerade for the pain and idealistic hopes you harbour, but at least you've realized there is the potential for people to make things better in this world.

Commission urges sheriff's department to quicken travel voucher investigation

By SUSIE BENKELMAN
State News Staff Writer

The sheriff's department was told Tuesday to "speed things up" in its investigation of county commissioners' travel vouchers.

A resolution to urge the sheriff's department to conduct the investigation in an "expedient fashion" was passed Tuesday night by the Ingham County Board of Commissioners.

The investigation began last week after the sheriff's department asked County Controller Fred Todd for the commissioners' travel vouchers and reimbursement requests for 1976 through January 1979.

County Commissioner Mark Grebner, D-East Lansing, called the investigation "strictly political and done only for political purposes."

He said the sheriff claims the investigation is tied to one conducted on a former veteran affairs director who was caught turning in false claims.

Sheriff Kenneth L. Preadmore was unavailable for comment.

"Basically they wanted to hassle us," he said. "Actually they asked for four of the commissioners' vouchers first, then asked for the rest of them later to cover it and look good."

Todd said he received a verbal request for vouchers of the four commissioners and five days later, he received a written request for all 21 of the commissioners' vouchers.

When asked if the initial requests were for Grebner, Jess Sobel, D-East Lansing; Thomas Mitchell, D-Williamston; and former commissioner Pat Ryan, Todd said, "That's a pretty good guess."

The four commissioners are the recent target of a recall move by a local citizens' group who claims they are "anti-law enforcement." The charge refers to the 1980 budget, adopted Sept. 23, which deletes funding for nine positions in the sheriff's department.

Todd said the controller's office may have little difficulty getting together the vouchers for 1976 and 1977 because the sheriff's department has asked for "a lot of detail."

Grebner said he has been questioned in the investigation by a detective. He said they asked him questions about where he has lived and who his landlords have been since 1970.

"They asked me if I had ever approved a mileage voucher for someone else knowing it was false," he said. "I don't approve vouchers. I don't even own a car."

Grebner was one who opposed the resolution because of his claims that it is a form of political pressure.

RESIGNATION ASKED FOR

Discord on ASMSU student board

By PAUL CURTIS
State News Staff Writer

An ASMSU student board member Tuesday night asked the College of Arts and Letters "to wake up and recall" their representative to the board.

Fletcher Spears III, University College representative, called for the resignation of Henry Sosa, representative of the College of Arts and Letters from the student board.

In a letter to the board, Spears accused Sosa of working against the best interests of the board, not with them.

"I call on the College of Arts and Letters to rid their college of their incompetent representative," Spears said.

"I CALL ON you (Sosa) to show some guts and resign your position as board representative from the College of Arts and Letters," he said.

"Henry, you don't belong in a representative position, and you don't belong on the ASMSU Student Board," he added.

Commissioner sues radio station for libel

By SUSIE BENKELMAN
State News Staff Writer

County Commissioner Mark Grebner filed a libel suit Tuesday against a local radio station and one of its reporters Tuesday charging that a newscast aired Nov. 1 was damaging to his reputation.

The suit, filed in 54-B District Court, names Robert N. Runyon and MegaMedia, Inc., owner of WFMK, as defendants in the $10,000 suit.

The newscast stated that Grebner, an East Lansing Democrat, had been indicted for failure to pay Lansing income taxes for the past three years.

The suit charges that Runyon "either knew the statements were false, or acted with reckless disregard as to whether they were false." It also says that MegaMedia, Inc., failed to exercise care and failed to attempt to verify the story from other sources.

The newscast said that Grebner works in Lansing and is therefore liable for Lansing income tax provisions.

GREBNER SAID HE consulted with the city attorney who told him that if he did owe Lansing city income taxes, they would amount to about $150.

"They ran a piece saying I was a criminal, and it was heard by 30 to 40,000 people," Grebner said.

Grebner said the station aired a retraction that day, but that it implied that he had not "yet" been indicted.

Grebner said that Runyon had previously told him that Runyon's sources in the story were Robert Black, Lansing's assistant to the mayor, Sharon Whipple, administrative assistant to the sheriff's department and Arlo Earegood, chief deputy sheriff.

"Those were the three names he gave me at the time," Grebner said. "But then he had denied it and now it's not admissible in court."

THE NEWSCAST ALSO stated that former County Commissioner Patrick Ryan was indicted for failure to pay his city income taxes. Ryan has been served with a summons of failure to pay $149.50 in city income taxes for 1976 through 1978.

Runyon, the suit states, acted with "malicious intent to injure the good name and reputation of" Grebner.

Corrections

An article in Monday's State News incorrectly reported that a car impounded by campus police for having no license plates belonged to Stevie Wonder, based on information supplied by the Department of Public Safety.

Campus police said Wednesday that a passenger in the car gave the impression the car belonged to Wonder and that the car had no registration to prove ownership.

Police said that the car is titled to Lee Garrett of West Hollywood, Calif., based on license plates Garrett later produced for the car.

Police also earlier identified Garrett as Garrett Lee, they said, due to a mistake in reading a computer printout from California.

"I've tried to get along with Henry. I've tried to work with him," Spears said, "but no more."

The argument between the two board members stems from problems in the Space and Allocation and Personnel Committee, headed by Spears.

The committee, which has been interviewing applicants for a College of Social Science representative, has no written criteria for interviewing applicants.

SOSA'S MAIN COMPLAINT with the SAP committee is that they have no written criteria for interviewing and appointing students to various committees and boards.

"Space Allocation and Personnel is under the opinion that they need to do all their appointment and interviews because they are busy," Sosa said.

"There is no criteria for interviewing, so this is putting the cart before the horse."

The SAP committee "appoints people to almost every committee on campus," Sosa said, but "what do they really know about those committees?"

"I dare say close to nothing," he added.

"THEY (THE PEOPLE being interviewed) did not know what they were being appointed for, and neither did Space Allocation and Personnel."

Sosa said he had no intention of resigning, and added he has the support of his constituents.

Sosa called the appointment of social science representative Scott Denison a "fantastic blunder."

"The social science representative (situation) is absolutely the last straw. I can bring pressure to bear. I am strong in the College of Social Science," Sosa said.

"If they don't appoint someone with decent criteria, I'll do all in my power to recall the social science representative."

In other action, ASMSU Comptroller Jim Peterson presented budgets for ASMSU and suggested the board not raise the student tax to ASMSU.

Some of the services would have to be reduced, but "we can get by on our current budget," Peterson said.

The board also voted Bruce Studer, ASMSU chairperson, to a seat on the Athletic Council.

Rodgers said that it was written in your contract that it is company policy to either repair or replace any damaged equipment they rent out. He said that although it is against regulations to make any refunds he would return $40 of the $45 you paid. Looks as if you can now afford to purchase about six new records for your stereo.

In my final year as an MSU student, I made the unforgivable mistake of neglecting to order a 1978-79 Red Cedar Log. I assumed that, as in previous years, it would be possible to purchase a copy in local bookstores. But to my chagrin, none of the bookstores anticipated such a thing. After contacting the Red Cedar Log office in August, I was told that whatever limited supply there might be, would be sold at the MSU Bookstore sometime late September or early October. What can you do to help me get my hands on a Red Cedar Log?

Trouble Shooter has added your name to the list of persons in the same predicament. Workers at the Red Cedar Log said that the 1978-79 edition was completely sold out. However, they are compiling a list of people who still want last year's copy. If the demand is great enough and another batch of books are printed, you will be among the first people notified. Until then, it looks as if you will have to rely upon your memory.

SCHAFFER ONE-ACTS

Acting redeems bad scripts

By MARY TINNEY
State News Reviewer

When I heard that the MSU Department of Theatre was sponsoring the two one-act dramas by Peter Schaffer, I was excited. Schaffer's Tony-winning play Equus was a fantastically sensitive and perceptive study of the human mind and its vulnerability. I guess I went to these plays expecting more of the same. I didn't get it.

These two companion pieces by Schaffer, The Private Ear and The Public Eye are not bad belong to Don Weingust as the flighty, emotional detective who teaches Sidley a little bit about his wife and his life. Weingust is great. He looks the part and he enjoys the part... his spontaneity and innocence are fun to watch and his timing brings laughs in spite of the predictable material.

Estelle Goda is good too, as Sidley's wife, Belinda. I saw her first in this summer's production, Crime on Goat Island. She has survived the transition from drama to comedy very gracefully and her performance

Bob (Brian O'Sullivan, center) watches his friend, Ted (Bernie White), move in on Doreen (Linda Goetz) in the MSU theatre department production of Peter Schaffer's The Private Ear.

There are moments of humor in both plays, but the humor is sit-com level and rarely deserves more than a smile.

plays, but never once do they rise above the level of mediocrity. The sentiments and insights that they offer are so banal and predictable that one wonders why anyone would actually sit down put them to paper.

It's difficult to criticize a production of plays as nondescript as these. Even the best performances and effects can get lost in uninspired dialogue, but these two student directed plays do deserve some applause and recognition in spite of this.

The first play, The Public Eye, is directed by undergraduate Bruce Marr. It concerns a man, Charles Sidley, who hires a private detective to spy on the suspected activities of his shamefully liberated wife. As it turns out, the man who is hired is more involved in the case than Sidley would like. The play is full of cute little chauvinistic remarks and dime-a-dozen insights that it is impossible to take too seriously. Maybe in 1962 when this play was written the situation would have been credible. Now it's merely silly.

The brightest moments

here is another plus in the play.

The problem with Rob Jones as Charles Sidley is that he is supposed to be 40 years old and he looks 20. He overcompensates for this with a brusqueness of manner that gets extremely irritating after a while. If he could tone down the mannerisms and play up the physical characteristics, his character would work much better.

The second play, The Private Ear, fares a little better... at least in the beginning. Directed by Dennis Martin, a graduate student who recently directed the summer Shakespeare in the Park outdoor theatre series, The Private Ear is the story of a classical music buff who has trouble relating to women and to the world in general. This play actually has some amusing lines and situations, but it's all ultimately lost in the mire of sentimentality and predictability.

There are some good performances here, especially Bernie White (seen recently in Dracula as the musician's disgustingly conformist friend, Ted). He plays the role as if he knows it well (come on Bernie, own up!)

Brian O'Sullivan as Tehaik (after Tehaikowsky) has some marvelous moments, most of them after he gets drunk and loosens up. Before that his awkward gait is exaggerated and he tries so hard to be "goofy" that he comes close to destroying the appeal of his character.

The end of the play is almost pitifully sentimental, both due to the situation and to the lighting which symbolically fades out on Botticelli's Venus, and makes you feel like screaming for a little subtlety.

There are moments of humor in both plays, but the humor is sit-com level and rarely deserves more than a smile. In spite of this, some good performances make it a worthwhile way to spend an evening. You've got until Saturday, Nov. 17. Showtime is at 9:15 p.m. in the Arena Theatre. Admission is $1.

You are what you wear?

Last week a placement assistant for MSU Placement Services conducted an interview workshop for women in which she outlined the best method of getting a foot in the employment door. Her message was simple: dress conservatively from head to toe and stay away from colors, fancy shoes and pantsuits.

That's not all (it's never all when you're trying to get a job). To further cast MSU graduates into the conservative mainstream of faceless applicants, she referred to the students as "products" that must be properly packaged.

The idea of blatantly encouraging people to conform is as ridiculous to me as it is frustrating, since I realize that many of the placement assistant's comments, although sad, are probably true. That is why weekday afternoons in Placement Services look like a business luncheon. Students barely out of the throes of blue jeans and T-shirts fidget with their ties and smooth their dresses every five minutes just so the employer won't think he might be making a bad choice. The trick is to be cunning, so cunning that it looks like you wore the thing every day of your life and that it truly reflects you — the conservative, ordinary, unthinking you. Employers love these qualities.

And for a woman, the situation strikes me as having a lot more angles or consequences. Most men can easily avoid wearing loud and offensive suits on any occasion, like plaids or bazooka bubblegum pink. However, according to the placement assistant's advice, a woman could be misread just by the pants she wears. If a woman goes in for an interview wearing a pantsuit, she's too radical to type and file. If she strays from a nice safe gray or beige, she's probably a coquette. And if she is hired by a sexually aggressive employer embodying such views, that's where the trouble really begins.

Affirmative action aside, the situation in the interview office never seems to change. People are still harshly judged according to how they dress and such criterion can literally make or break the candidate. It all seems so silly, as if the way you dress really has anything to do with your abilities. Employers know it doesn't, and students do, too. The insistence on perpetuating this game of "clothes make the person" has eliminated any sense of style and has replaced it with one style — The Style. And that's supposed to tell enough about you to secure a job.

It is supposed to increase your chances, but at the cost of surrendering your individuality. And after four years of learning how to find yourself, why the University encourages us to flush that knowledge down the drain is beyond me.

Politics Of Culture

The placement assistant is right in one respect. We are turning out products in pretty packages — and in record numbers. What we learn or experience here doesn't have much to do with our success in the job world. By the time we go looking, we're suited up for and beaten back by the almighty employer, who lays down the rules for you: if you want to work for me, you've got to be this way.

Are we not men? We are interviewees.

IDOLATRY

THE HOLY TRINITY - how "holy" is it?

Deuteronomy 6:4 "Hear, O Israel: The Lord our God is one Lord"

Is your Christian faith based upon the traditions of men or upon the Word of God?

JESUS CHRIST IS NOT GOD

never was and never will be

1 Timothy 2:5 "For there is one God and one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus."

The "holy" trinity is never mentioned in the Bible. Those who propound this view are in error if the Bible is the Word of God. Sincere followers have been misled by the teaching that Jesus Christ, the Son of God, is God. The doctrine of the trinity is not Christian but pagan.

We challenge you to come and hear the truth about Jesus Christ, the Son of God

Spyro Gyra

Spyro Gyra will be bringing their unique brand of fusion music to Dooley's for two shows Sunday at 8 and 10:30 p.m.

Originating in Buffalo, N.Y., in late 1975, the band started out playing the bar scene in western New York. Grabbing a few hours of studio time whenever they could, the band gradually built up a self-produced debut album Spyro Gyra in 1977. The album earned the group a place on six different Billboard charts, the band was voted "Most Promising New Pop-Instrumental Group" by Record World magazine, and a single called "Shaker Song" became one of the rare instrumental songs to make it onto Top-40 radio.

The success of their first LP prompted them to sign with Infinity Records, and with this new financial backing they released a second album, Morning Dance. The group's music is very melodic, because as saxophonist Jay Beckenstein has said, "I like beautiful melodies and easy to understand rhythms."

Tickets for Sunday's show will be available at the door for $7.50, or they may be purchased in advance for $6.50 at Dooley's and both Recordlands.

Music for peace tonight at Gables

The Lansing area Peace Education Center will sponsor a benefit with old-time string bands and folk musicians Thursday night at Coral Gables for two shows.

"Singin', Strugglin', and Strummin'" will feature a first show with five folk singers and their ballads of freedom, feminism, and justice at 7 p.m. The second show, at 9:30 p.m., features the folk-bluegrass string bands (Lost World String Band and Bosom Buddies) and admission to one or both shows is $3 for adults and $1.50 for children.

Barbara Thibault of the Peace Education Center explained the purpose of the benefit.

"The donations go toward the center, which serves as an alternative resource center with extensive files and periodicals concerning a broad range of peace and justice issues, some material not available elsewhere. The center also initiates and facilitates programming — from seminars to marches — on these pertinent peace and justice issues."

Among the PEC's special "Task Forces" are the Mobilization for Survival group which with other local groups organized the recent anti-nuclear march on Lansing. The group's concerns also cross into halting the proliferation of nuclear weapons. Another task force is the Southern Africa Liberation Committee which aroused and fueled the drive to divest MSU holdings in South Africa. Other forces tackle world food and hunger concerns, third world struggles, anti-draft and militarism issues, and most recently efforts toward freedom and aid to Nicaragua and Cambodia.

Thibault said of the concert, "There is an upsurge in the use of music and cultural art for political causes in this country. We feel music is crucial in educating and energizing people behind our various undertakings. Someone once said that you can measure the health of a people's movement by their use of music. The early 1900s labor ballads, or the freedom songs associated with the Black movement, or the recent feminist music is all an example of culture and politics coming together."

The 7 p.m. show has been planned to be sensitive toward children in the audience — parents are encouraged to bring their kids. The tickets are available at Elderly Instruments, the Peace Center, The Book Co-op or at the door.

CHARLES GETS 22 IN INTRA-SQUAD GAME

Sloppy play mars cager tuneup

By BILL TEMPLETON
State News Sports Writer

The final basketball game the Spartan cagers played last season was a spectacular contest which saw them win the national championship against the likes of Larry Bird and previously unbeaten Indiana

State University.

Tuesday night, the Spartans looked anything but spectacular as the green squad beat the white, 82-62, in the annual intra-squad contest at Lansing Eastern High School.

"It's always hard to split the squad up like you have to in these games," said MSU coach Jud Heathcote, "and besides Terry Donnelly, there really weren't anything more than flashes of brilliance by the other players."

LEADING THE GREEN team were 6-foot-8 senior co-captain Ron Charles with 22 points and 6-foot-7 junior transfer from Oakland Community College, Kurt James, with 18.

A point which disturbed Heathcote, however, was that Charles played a mediocre first half and then came to life in the second, while the direct opposite was the case with James.

"James looked good in the first half (14 points)," Heathcote said, "and then he was almost invisible in the second half."

"The same was true for 'Bobo' (Charles), he played a good second half, but was almost invisible in the first."

the same type of shots from the baseline in the second half that had failed to drop for him in the first half.

JUNIOR RICK KAYE led the white team with 18 points, followed by junior Mike Brkovich with 12, and senior Mike Longaker with 11.

Rounding out the white team's scoring were University of Arkansas transfer Steve Bates and Detroit freshman Herb Bostic with eight points each, while East Lansing freshman Bill Cawood added two.

One player who was missing from Tuesday night's lineup was junior standout Jay Vincent, who missed the game with a foot injury.

IN ADDITION, VINCENT'S No. 44, which he wore at Eastern, will be retired following Vincent's brother Sam's high school career. Sam currently wears No. 44.

"Jay will work out with the team Monday," Heathcote said, but he won't be in the scrimmage Tuesday, will work out again Wednesday, and then we'll play it by ear."

Heathcote, although not pleased with the caliber of play Tuesday night, did offer his team a thought as he left the lockerroom. "We'll play better than this... I think."

Don't judge Brammer by stats; he's still All-America caliber

By ADAM TEICHER
State News Sports Writer

Statistics don't always tell the truth. In fact, sometimes they outright lie.

MSU tight end Mark Brammer has 22 receptions this season, the lowest total in his four years as a Spartan. Does this mean Brammer, a first team All-America selection by the Football Writers Association of America as a junior last fall, is slipping?

No way. There is more to Brammer on the football field than just catching passes.

"MARK BRAMMER'S BLOCKING is so good he could make the All-Big Ten team without catching a pass all season," said MSU football coach Darryl Rogers. "Whenever you run to the outside on the side Brammer's on, you usually have room to run."

Rogers added that the reason Brammer has not caught more passes this season is that he is drawing more coverage.

"That's part of the reason," Brammer concedes. "But we just don't throw as much this season and that also contributes. That's just the way things work out sometimes."

But as Rogers said, Brammer's main value is as a blocker. "I like to throw a good block, but I take pride in catching passes too," the blond Traverse City native said. "I like to do both. I'm just as happy to spring somebody with a block. I think you have to take pride in both to be good at both."

Yet while this may be Brammer's best season, he admits it's been a trying one.

"IT'S BEEN PRETTY frustrating in the fact that we haven't done nearly as well as we thought we would at the start of the season," he said. "That's the most disappointing thing — we are a better team than our record shows."

IN REGIONAL TOURNEY PLAY

Spikers face challenge

By virtue of its second-place finish in last weekend's state championship in Mt. Pleasant, the MSU women's volleyball team begins play Friday in the regional tournament in Columbus, Ohio.

The spikers were extended an at-large bid to the tourney, one of seven in the 12-team field.

State champions Central Michigan, Ohio State, Purdue and Illinois State universities and the University of Wisconsin, were given automatic bids.

Besides MSU, Cleveland State, Miami (Ohio), Indiana and Southern Illinois universities received at-large bids, along with the universities of Cincinnati and Illinois.

The tournament consists of four pools with three teams each, followed by the quarter-finals, semi-finals and championship play.

In the Spartans' pool will be

Miami and Illinois, with play slated to begin at 9 a.m. Friday in Larkins Gym and St. Johns Arena.

The spikers will face Miami in a 9 a.m. match, with a 3 p.m.

contest scheduled against the Fighting Illini.

MSU takes its 26-15-8 record into the weekend tourney, where Purdue reigns as defending champion.

GRADUATING ENGINEERS

Have you considered these factors in determining where you will work?

1. Will the job offer challenge and responsibility?
2. Will your future employer encourage job mobility?
3. Will your future employer encourage, support and reward continued professional education?
4. How much choice will you have in selecting your work assignment?
5. Big starting salaries are nice — but what is the salary growth and promotion potential in the job?

6. Can you afford the cost-of-living in the area?

At the Naval Weapons Center we have given these things a lot of consideration and believe we have the answers for you.

Foreign engineers in U.S.

"Lubash said he has no use for American contract engineers," Wall said.

According to the Engineering Manpower Bulletin and the Projections of Education Statistics prepared by the U.S. Department of Health Education and Welfare, freshmen and graduate enrollment has increased in engineering schools since 1973.

Another problem is basic economics. The aerospace industry has lost some of the best engineers to other professions and in order to get these people back they must pay large salaries.

THE COMPANIES CLAIM they can't pay it. The AEA claim they won't pay it. The salaries of engineers are determined on a supply and demand basis, but there is some controversy over the current supply.

Lubash said his company hires foreign engineers because there is a shortage of qualified American engineers willing to move to Los Angeles and Seattle, Wash.

"The only shortage of engineers are the ones who'll work for nothing," Wall said. The use of foreign engineers is stifling the flow of American engineers to higher levels, Wall added.

Richard J. Kuntz, executive director of the California Society of Professional Engineers, said there has been a rumble over the hiring of foreign engineers for many years.

The subject has been discussed since the early 1970s, and there has been preferential treatment through immigration, Kuntz said. Immigration authorities let the companies bring these people in, he added.

KUKUDA SAID ONE engineer received a letter from LPL openly stating only United Kingdom citizens were being hired.

"That's illegal. I can't stress how illegal it is," Kukuda said.

But Lubash disagrees.

Lubash said the letter was not sent to an American or a United Kingdom citizen, instead it was sent to "someone from France."

Lubash added that Kukuda is obviously trying to "drum up interest in the lawsuit."

"He should do the trying in court," Lubash added.

HURWITZ SAID IT is quite possible "the letter was sent to a French citizen."

"I don't care what he (Lubash) reads into it," Hurwitz said.

LPL also sent a letter to its employees stating it would renew visas.

"It's clear from those letters, from LPL to its employees, they never intended to hire them on a temporary basis," Kukuda said.

However Lubash said the labor department did not tell LPL that renewal of visas was illegal.

THE AEA IS also charging that the companies have laid off American workers while keeping aliens on the job.

Hurwitz said he was laid off by Rockwell and engineers there are now working overtime. He added three other engineers were laid off by McDonnell-Douglas. Hurwitz said that 200 to 300 foreign engineers received certificates while Americans were being dismissed at Rockwell.

One engineer said he and a fellow worker were dismissed from McDonnell-Douglas while United Kingdom citizens were retained.

"They gave us the excuse that they didn't think we could handle the project they had for us," he said. "I've been in this business for 30 years and I think I could handle anything they gave me.

"I'm an American and it teed me off that I'm walking the streets and the aliens have got jobs," he added. "As long as American engineers are walking the streets why should any company hire a damn alien?"

"WE HAVE A right to these jobs," he added.

Hurwitz added that McDonnell-Douglas told him they dismissed the Americans because the company had a "moral obligation to the English people."

Hurwitz cited another case where an American engineer was being paid $16 an hour while English workers were making $7 at Northrup Corp. The corporation attempted to lay the worker off, but the AEA stepped in and pointed out that there were aliens working in the same department.

Hurwitz also said he and another engineer had been with CDI up until last spring when the AEA began looking into the alien situation.

Hurwitz said there are hundreds of jobs at CDI, "but since I protested I am unemployed."

JOSEPH SEIDERS, CORPORATE counsel for CDI, said he could not comment on Hurwitz's charges without looking at the specifics of the case.

As an attempt to stop the hiring of foreign engineers the AEA has asked for an injunction on all renewals of visas, is asking for the U.S. attorney general to deport foreigners who are here illegally and will introduce a bill to congress that would put certain restrictions on the hiring of aliens.

If passed, the bill would empower either AEA or a special task force to monitor the hiring of aliens by the engineers industry. If an alien is hired instead of an American, then the company would have to justify its decision.

The task force would then decide whether the hiring was justified; if not, they would request that an American replace the alien.

Currently, the labor department and the Council of Engineers Scientist Organization (CESO) have established a resume referral service that lists the qualifications of American engineers.

AEROSPACE COMPANIES CAN check with the CESO referral service when hiring engineers. This allows Americans to apply for jobs that might be listed for aliens. The company decided which workers they want, but they must tell the labor department whom they hired and why they were hired.

This is the second such service on the West Coast. In 1970-71 the California Society of Professional Engineers and the Department of Labor started a similar service. The service lasted only two years.

Kuntz said this was because neither the engineers nor the employers used the service.

"You don't go to a state employment agency for professional help," Kuntz said. "Engineers don't apply for unemployment."

Kuntz added that engineers who have not received formal academic training but have "come up through the ranks" use these services. These people generally have two years of academic training and maybe 10 years experience. But because they do not have four years of academic training the market seems void of qualified engineers.

The situation is compounded by a cyclical market that rises and falls every seven years.

Tomorrow's story will discuss the engineering job market.

UFW's Cesar Chavez on campus

United Farm Worker President Cesar Chavez will speak at MSU at 11:30 a.m. today in the second floor parlors of the Union.

Chavez will be in Michigan until Saturday seeking support for the UFW and the boycott of "Red Coach" lettuce.

The Red Coach lettuce company is the nation's third largest producer of lettuce and the focus of the UFW's strike in California.

The visit is Chavez's first to Michigan since the grape boycott of the early 1970s.

Chavez has spent the past 17 years attempting to organize migrant workers into an effective union.

In 1952 he became an organizer for the Community Service Organization, a self-help civic action group formed in California's Mexican American barrios.

Chavez left the organization to form the UFW after failing to convince the service group to organize farm workers.

The 1965 farm worker strike against Delano grape growers brought Chavez and the plight of the migrant workers national attention.

A Harris survey conducted in 1975 showed that 17 million adults supported Chavez and the grape boycott.

Sewing contest finals Saturday

Sixteen finalists in the Make-It-Yourself-With-Wool contest will compete for the state title 9 a.m. Saturday at the MSU Union.

The contestants will model their garments before a panel who will judge the clothes on the basis of fit, style and construction.

First prize in the contest is a trip to San Diego, where the national contest winners will compete.

All contestants will model their clothes at noon in Jacobson's Apparel Store Dining Room and at 1:30 p.m. in the second floor in Jacobson's Ready-to-Wear Department.

Make-It-Yourself-With-Wool is an annual sewing contest open to anyone in the state between the ages of 10 and 24.

Entries are divided by age into three categories — pre-teen, junior and senior. Only junior and senior contestants may compete at the state and national levels.

The clothing must be sewn, knitted or crocheted with the materials used made of at least 60 percent wool.

Anyone interested in participating in next year's contest should write Patricia Tirrell, 700 Tirrell Hwy., Charlotte, Mich. 48813.

Students protesting education costs march on Capitol

A crowd of about 150 MSU students marched on the state Capitol Wednesday in protest of higher education costs and further tuition increases.

While marching to the Capitol from Beaumont Tower, students chanted "two-four-six-eight, can't afford to graduate."

Gathering at the side entrance of the Capitol, students listened while legislators and MSU faculty and administrators voiced their support of the protest.

Zolton Ferency, associate professor of criminal justice, said everyone recognized that college education costs a lot of money but the burden of supplying that money rests with the state government, not students.

"There was a time when a college education was a luxury, but that has passed, Ferency said. 'A college education is a necessity.'

"The MSU administration is unfair in telling faculty that if it wants a pay raise, it will have to get it from student tuition," he said.

Rep. Lynn Jondahl, D-East Lansing, said the legislature is "not adequately supporting public higher education," even though money for non-public schools has been increased.

MSU Board of Trustee Aubrey Radcliffe said "change will come only when enough people speak out and give 'em hell."

It remains to be seen, however, whether 150 students out of 44,000 will be able to raise enough "hell" to implement change.

(Clockwise from upper left) Many students vent their frustrations at the Capitol with a sea of signs over rising tuition costs at MSU. Meanwhile, passers-by look on with skepticism. At one point, the protesters marched into the Capitol to get their message across more directly. Zolton Ferency, MSU associate professor of criminal justice, drives home a point to the students standing outside the Capitol as Sen. William Sederberg looks on. However, it appears mere words were not enough to placate some of the more angry marchers.

Groups to file protest against theatre dept.

By PAMELA PENN
State News Staff Writer

Members of the Native American Council and the Concerned Indians of Michigan are planning to file a complaint with the Michigan Civil Rights Commission against the MSU theatre department.

In a meeting held Tuesday with Leslie Rout, assistant to President Cecil Mackey, and Frank Rutledge, chairperson of the theatre department, the organizations said the complaint will be filed to protest the department's selection of plays.

The Native Americans complained that plays like "Indian Captive" which was to be performed by Toybox Theatre Nov. 23, depict the cultural values of ethnic groups.

Although the theatre department has decided to cancel the production, the Native Americans said they are not dropping the issue.

JOE ROBINSON, A representative from the Concerned Indians of Michigan said that the complaint would be filed to make sure other plays offending Native Americans and other ethnic groups would not be chosen as a means of educating others about minorities.

Diana Lualhati, Coordinator for the Native American aide program said she became concerned about the content of the play after noticing an ad for the play in the State Journal.

"The title alone is damaging," she said. "It draws up the whole mystique about savages who kidnap and rape white women."

Lualhati and other members of the Native American Council read the script written by Charlotte Chorpenning in the 1930s and reported that many of the Native American customs and the images of their ancestors had been falsely represented.

George Cornell, a Native American instructor in the MSU Department of Racial and Ethnic Studies also read the play and agreed it created negative concepts about the Native Americans' cultural practices and moral beliefs.

CORNELL MET WITH members of the east and expressed his concern about the show being presented to small children who might be left with an inaccurate image of what Native Americans were.

Although students and faculty agreed the show be canceled, Rutledge said he did not feel the play was stereotyped when he chose it.

"I didn't think we were kicking Indians or that aspects of the play showed a falseness about Indian culture," Rutledge said.

Lualhati and members of the Native American Council suggested that a board with members from minority councils be chosen to read and choose plays that best portray the importance and values of their cultures.

RUTLEDGE SAID HE did not know if this would work.

"I don't think the theatre department would be willing to submit to censorship," he said.

"There's something in every play that will offend someone," Rutledge added. "and people won't want to work with stories about minorities because they will be afraid of offending them."

Lualhati said a board of representatives from each ethnic group was formed, the faculty could be introduced to better written and more exciting plays written about minorities.

Education majors needed for selection committee

Education majors interested in joining a committee to select a new dean for the College of Education must submit their applications by noon Nov. 19.

The current dean, Keith

Goldhammer, will resign, effective July 1, to teach classes in the college's Department of Administration and Higher Education.

Student applications for one undergraduate and one graduate position may be picked up in 134 Erickson Hall.

Student applications for one undergraduate and one graduate position may be picked up in 134 Erickson Hall. Students dually enrolled in the college can also apply. Late applications will not be accepted.

A time commitment of approximately three hours each week is required of the students.

LANSING FAMILIES TO BENEFIT

Shaw Hall collects cans for needy

A pop and beer can collection contest to benefit disadvantaged families in the Lansing area during the holiday season is in its fifth week at Shaw Hall.

The 10 floors of East and West Shaw Hall are competing for a prize of $40 in floor funds, said Mark Flashner, social committee co-chairperson for the hall's student government.

After four weeks, $535 in returnable cans and bottles has been collected, Flashner said. The winning floor will be determined by the most cans collected by each resident.

The winner so far is "St. Elmo's Fire," the fifth floor of East Shaw, Flashner said. Its residents have gathered 19 cans or bottles each.

The contest will end Sunday, he said. Flashner hopes the final figure will be over $700. The Shaw Hall Senate, which is sponsoring the drive, will donate $60, he added.

A check for the total amount collected will be presented to Betty Swaynie, of the North Side Action Center in Lansing at the senate meeting Sunday. The meeting will be held at 8 p.m. in the Captain's Room in West Shaw.

The center will use the money to make up food baskets for distribution to disadvantaged Lansing families during the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays.

Larry Owen elected as E.L.'s 20th mayor

Larry Owen was elected as East Lansing's 20th mayor after he, John Czarnecki and newly-elected Ralph Monsma were initiated as councilmembers Wednesday.

Owen, a four-year incumbent, was selected by the councilmembers to replace former Mayor George L. Griffiths, who served on the council eight years.

Griffiths did not seek re-election to concentrate on his insulation contracting business.

Owen said his immediate concerns as mayor are to put the Dayton Hudson issue to rest, to build better relations between East Lansing and the neighboring communities and to diversify the tax base.

"It's in our community's best interest and in Lansing's best interest that we work together," he said.

Owen was nominated by Councilmember Joan Hunault, who has previously worked with Owen on city issues and campaigns.

"I am very much impressed by his qualifications and the manner in which he solves problems," Hunault said.

He is decisive, includes others in discussion and is able to formulate problems clearly, she said.

Winter shipping raises environmentalists' concern

By KARL BLANKENSHIP
State News Staff Writer

Consumers could get lower prices on everything from automobiles to electricity if ships are allowed to sail on the Great Lakes during the winter months, a U.S. Army Corps of Engineers official said.

"Lower transportation costs ultimately result in lower costs to the consumer," explained A.J. Nicholson of the Corps of Engineers.

Because of the amount of shipping done on the Great Lakes, the Corps has asked Congress to permanently extend the shipping season on the lakes to Jan. 31, adding six weeks to the normal eight-and-one-half month season.

However, there is a catch to this plan.

IF THE TRADITIONAL shipping season is extended to include all or part of the winter months, taxpayers will pick up the tab and Michigan will suffer the environmental consequences.

And as far as the state of Michigan and environmental groups are concerned, when the lakes and their connecting waterways begin to freeze over in a few more weeks, they may stay frozen.

The Corps has experimented for the last eight winters with a program to see if ships can sail the Great Lakes year-round.

Although the Corps proved it is technically possible to ship in the winter months, environmentalists are far from pleased.

"They haven't done one damn environmental study in the eight year history of this program," said Wayne Schmidt, staff ecologist of the Michigan United Conservation Clubs (MUCC).

MUCC, REPRESENTING ABOUT 430 Michigan conservation clubs with about 100,000 members, was the first organization to oppose winter navigation, taking a stand on the issue in 1977.

Prior to that time, there hadn't been any real concerted opposition to the program," Schmidt said. "Everyone looked at winter navigation as too big and too bad to even touch."

Things have changed since 1977, and now opponents to winter navigation include both the states of Michigan and New York.

The fate of winter navigation may be partially settled this week when a Senate subcommittee is expected to approve an amendment proposed by Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., to the Water Resources Act of 1979. Levin's amendment would restrict winter navigation until better environmental studies are done.

His plan would allow shipping to Jan. 31, 1980. But for the following two years the shipping would stop on Dec. 15, the traditional end of the Great Lakes shipping season. This would allow intensive environmental studies to be done.

During the fourth year of Levin's program, shipping would continue until Jan. 31 to see what impacts it would have.

IT IS ESSENTIAL that environmental studies be done, explained Linda Gustitus, an aide to Levin, because "the environmental impacts could be enormous."

"What the Corps wants to do is to continue to have the navigation and not do the environmental studies, or do them sometime in the future," said Christopher Shafer, of the Great Lakes Coastal Unit of the Michigan Department of Natural Resources.

Shafer said there is potential for environmental damage in the narrow waterways which connect the Great Lakes.

Ship propellers, which have to work harder in the winter to push through the ice, may stir up sediments that would smother fish egg spawning grounds in those waterways, Shafer said.

Also, icebreakers in those areas would push ice ashore, possibly causing shoreline erosion, he added.

"THE OTHER REALLY horrible thing is the possibility of an oil spill," said Gustitus. "Nobody has ever figured out how they would clean up the oil once it gets under the ice."

One problem with the Levin bill, however, is that adequate environmental work still may not be done.

Schmidt said two years is not enough time to do the studies, but that it is "probably the best we're going to get right now."

Charles Liston, an MSU assistant professor of fisheries and wildlife, said he is also dissatisfied with the amount of time allotted for environmental studies.

The U.S.S. Saturn was lodged on the ice in the St. Mary's River last year during the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers' winter navigation demonstration project. This year concluded the Corps' eight-year study to prove the feasibility of winter shipping on the Great Lakes.

"You're talking about a system in which just a degree above nothing is known," he said of the Great Lakes waterways.

Liston and a group of MSU students have been doing research connected to winter navigation in the St. Mary's River.

NOT ONLY IS two years not enough time to study existing conditions, one year of shipping may not be enough to tell if there will be any impacts, Liston added.

After shipping has been going on for 10 years it will be such a big industry no one would want to stop it, even if adverse effects (continued on page 14)

Rhapport's editor-in-chief has high hopes

By STEVEN FROMM

The Residence Hall Association newspaper, Rhapport, is now being published consistently every two weeks with a substantial improvement in quality, said the publication's new editor-in-chief, Scott Glatstein.

"We're still looking for a photo editor and a layout editor," said Glatstein, "but I don't think it'll be a problem. I expect a much larger staff quite soon."

Glatstein hopes to draw attention to Rhapport and attract new staff members by holding a public meeting in 117 Berkey Hall at 7 tonight.

"We want to make ourselves known by this meeting," Glatstein said. "I want to see plenty of freshmen there and I hope they'll help to critique the first issue. I want to hear what they expect from Rhapport."

RHAPPORT DISAPPEARED AFTER the sparse, four-page Welcome Week edition of Sept. 21. The delay in publication was caused by resignation of former editor-in-chief Josephine Scott, who, according to Glatstein, "quit for personal reasons."

Glatstein, a senior bio-chemistry major from New York City, took over as editor of Rhapport on Nov. 1, after answering an advertisement in The State News.

One of Glatstein's first tasks, was to re-organize the newspaper, whose offices are located in 323 Student Services bldg. The Rhapport now has a staff of 20, including news editor Steve Cates, advertising editor Allan Stromquist, 10 staff reporters and five freelancers.

The first issue published by the new staff came out on Nov. 9. "We put that issue together in just a week," Glatstein said. "It's a bit rough, but it's a substantial improvement over the Welcome Week issue. Imagine what we can do when we're settled, organized and coming out every two weeks."

Glatstein and his staff have ambitious plans for Rhapport. "We want to change the image of Rhapport drastically," Glatstein said. "We want to pick it up out the basement."

Glatstein said he believes that since there are no holdovers from the last staff, it will be easier to reset and establish the goals of Rhapport.

"We're all new to this game," he said, "but luckily we agree on our own concept of what Rhapport should be."

THE FORMAT OF Rhapport will focus on covering stories of interest for residence hall students. Glatstein said there will be constant investigation into problems concerning residence hall living.

"In addition to the investigative reporting, we'll have a column of 18 to 24 briefs of upcoming residence hall activities," Glatstein said. "Then, in the following edition, we'll have a review of those activities."

Rhapport's central theme will deal with what Glatstein calls a "definite and positive rise in dorm spirit."

"At this point Rhapport is going to feed off of dorm spirit," he said. "Hopefully, in the future Rhapport will be a catalyst of dorm competition. Students will want to do more to see their dorm publicized."

Glatstein said that Rhapport will cover some campus events, but he has no intention of attempting to compete with The State News. "We're going to report and emphasize the events that The State News doesn't cover," he said.

"I'VE GOT A LOT of people on this staff who are dedicated and willing to put in extra hours," he said. "They're going to make this paper work."

Glatstein's immediate goals are to increase the over-all quality of Rhapport and to eventually expand it to 12 pages.

Glatstein concedes that it is unusual for a bio-chemistry major to be an editor, but he took the job because he "wanted to accomplish something concrete" before leaving MSU.

"I wanted to see the Rhapport become a viable, established piece of communication," he said. "I hope that we can set standards of quality and responsibility that will make the structure of this paper strong, so that it will survive the constant change of editorship."

Great American Smokeout encouraging smokers to quit

By KAREN GOODWIN
State News Staff Writer

The tobacco business is a conspiracy against womanhood and manhood. It owes its origin to that scoundrel, Sir Walter Raleigh, who was likewise the founder of American slavery.

John H. Kellogg

If you've been waiting for an excuse to stop smoking, today could be your day.

The Great American Smokeout, which is sponsored by the American Cancer Society, is an annual national event held to encourage millions of Americans to be non-smokers for one day.

Interested persons should sign pledge cards, which tally the numbers of participants, at area Burger King and Arby's restaurants.

Smokers have good reason to quit, according to the American Cancer Society. Lung cancer is the leading cause of cancer deaths among men, with the death rate among women steadily increasing. Only about 10 percent of lung cancer patients are saved, the cancer society said, and this year 98,000 are expected to die of the disease — the equivalent of about 268 a day.

BESIDES LUNG CANCER, cigarette smoking has been known to trigger larynx and bladder cancers, as well as colds, gastric ulcers, chronic bronchitis, emphysema and heart disease conditions. These smoking-related disorders are estimated to cause some 325,000 premature deaths each year, according to the society.

In Michigan, several efforts are being made to discourage smoking.

State Sen. R. Robert Geake, R-Northville, introduced a bill last spring to prohibit smoking by both minors and adults in public schools.

Geake said the bill would include adults in order to protect children from seeing smoking as acceptable behavior. The Senate Education Committee will review the bill at 4 p.m. today in 401 of the Capitol's Committee Room.

A local meeting of Smokers, a national smoking cessation organization, will also be held at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, Nov. 20 and Thursday Nov. 29 at the Albert Pick Motor Inn, 1427 W. Saginaw St.

For last year's Great American Smokeout day, 3.6 million smokers quit, 10.4 million cut down, and 2,400 were not smoking two weeks later, the cancer society said.

EIGHT SHIPS, 125 CREWMEMBERS HELD

U.S. fishing boats seized by Peru

By DAN TEDRICK
Associated Press Writer

SAN DIEGO — Eight U.S. tunaboats have been seized by Peru for fishing too close to its border. The ships and 125 crew members are under heavy guard in the part of Talara, a tuna industry spokesperson here said Wednesday.

In a series of swift actions, Peruvian gunboats surrounded the seiners and took them over, apparently without gunfire, the American Tunaboat Association said.

The big fishing boats were "between 75 and 100 miles" from Peru's shores, an association spokesperson said. There were believed to be 125 crew members aboard the San Diego-based vessels. Two Ecuadorian tunaboats also were reported to be in Peruvian custody.

Michael Zolezzi, assistant general manager of the association, said the U.S. boat owners face penalties of "$200,000 to $250,000" each, representing fines of $360 per net ton of tuna aboard.

The United States refuses to recognize the 200-mile offshore limit claimed by Peru, Chile and Ecuador as far as it applies to the migratory tuna. But U.S. fishermen have been encouraged by the State Department to buy licenses from those nations, which generally cost $50,000 and are good for 60 days.

There was no indication when the Americans would be released.

"As far as we can tell, the men are being treated quite well," Zolezzi said. "They're still on board. We know none of them have been taken to jail."

The Stacie Antonette and

Jeanne Lou were boarded Monday. Then the Peruvians on Tuesday seized the American Eagle, the Gina Karen, the Osprey, and the Connecticut Yankee. About midnight, the Jeannine and Sea Encounter joined them at Talara under armed escort.

A spokesperson at the U.S. Embassy in Lima said a consular official was being sent to Talara to "see what's going on so we can act in a consulting capacity."

"There really isn't much to negotiate because their laws are pretty clear," said Ernest Pegg, deputy chief of mission for the U.S. Embassy.

The most recent previous seizure of a U.S. seiner by Peru was in January, when the San Diego-based Don Juan was captured and fined $198,126. After that, the United States embargoed Peruvian tuna, but a State Department spokesperson said Wednesday that no embargo has been ordered in the latest seizures "and none is contemplated."

The Don Juan's troubles were the first since 1973 in the decade-old sea war over tuna fishing. Six years ago, 26 seiners were seized and fined a total of $756,300. Almost all the money was eventually recovered by the Americans through special appropriations by Congress under a law acknowledging the boats were carrying out their nation's fishing treaty policies.

In 1971, Ecuador detained 53 U.S. boats and collected $3 million in fines.

Lansing votes to lease building for establishment of auto museum

An automobile museum may open in Lansing by the spring of 1980 following action taken by the City Council Tuesday.

The council voted to lease a city storage building at 240 Mill St. to the R.E. Olds Museum Association for use as a museum devoted to the history of automobile production.

Richard Neller, president of the association, said he hopes to raise about $245,000 for the museum which would house antique cars, and other exhibits involving the history of Lansing. He said the association has raised about one third of its goal.

The next steps in getting the museum opened involve selecting a full-time director and reconstructing the roof, Neller said.

IN OTHER ACTION the council voted to submit an application to the Lansing School District to purchase Maple Hill School, 640 Maple Hill Ave., and about seven acres of vacant land behind Horsebrook School, for $1.

Ivan Love, executive director of Capitol Area Community Services, told the council that the organization is interested in leasing the school from the city to house part of its Head Start program.

Love said the service organization was willing to pay for bringing the school up to code requirements.

William Brenke, Second Ward council member, said he had reservations about purchasing the school because the city will be getting into the "real estate business."

He voiced fears that if the city purchases the school, it might be left with a building that no one would want to use.

"I HOPE THE city does not get left holding the bag. The school district should have made the transaction," Brenke said.

Councilmember-at-Large Richard Baker said he had reservations about buying the Horsebrook property without buying the school itself.

"We are taking half a loaf when we could take a whole loaf," Baker said.

Baker said he wanted to keep the school within the city's possession, suggesting the possibility that the building might need to be reopened eventually.

He said he was definitely against the selling of the Horsebrook school to private interests, noting that the Greater Lansing Board of Realtors plans to bid for the building.

Campaign funds disputed

CHICAGO (AP) — The head of President Carter's campaign in Illinois says a $5,000 contribution by Mayor Jane Byrne to the campaign of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy may be illegal.

Byrne announced on Tuesday that she was making the contribution from the proceeds of an Oct. 15 fund-raising dinner that helped pay off her 1979 election campaign debt. Carter was the main guest at the dinner, held last month in McCormick Place.

But Robert Torricelli, director of the Carter campaign in Illinois, said that unless she has registered her own campaign committee as a political action committee under Federal Election Commission rules, the contribution would be illegal.

It could not immediately be determined whether the mayor's campaign committee met FEC guidelines that would allow the $5,000 gift.

Byrne campaign officials have not said how much was raised at the dinner. Edward Burke, her brother and campaign treasurer, was not available for comment, nor was Michael Sneed, the mayor's press secretary who is taking a post in the Kennedy campaign.

ELEVEN DAYS AFTER the fund-raiser, Byrne endorsed Kennedy, previously, she had supported Carter without actually endorsing him.

She said she had hoped having Carter in Chicago would boost his standing in the state, but that polls taken afterward convinced her Carter's slide could not be reversed.

"It's one thing to change sides in a political campaign," Torricelli said Tuesday. "It's another thing to take part of the funds that President Carter helped raise for the mayor and give it to the president's chief opponent."

Byrne retorted that she had told Carter's staff his presence would make no difference in the amount of money raised.

A spokesperson for the FEC in Washington, Sharon Snyder, said Wednesday that a local political committee could contribute up to $5,000 to a federal election as a political action committee if it met certain conditions.

The guidelines, she said, are having the local committee registered as a political action committee; having contributions from 50 or more people, and having already contributed to the campaigns of five candidates for federal office. Snyder said that unless those conditions are met, the local committee could donate only up to $1,000.

She said such local committees sometimes segregate money expected to be sent to federal campaigns so that it is not mixed with money that is unacceptable under federal rules, such as direct contributions from corporations or labor unions.

Club sponsors party for area food bank

Door prizes will be available in exchange for canned food from 4 to 7 p.m. today at Dooley's restaurant when the MSU Marketing Club presents a "T.G. with the Profs."

For all those that bring one canned good or a 50 cent donation, there will be a party following the presentation, said Steve Taylor, marketing club president. The money and food will be donated to the Ingham County Community Food Bank.

East Lansing merchants have donated the door prizes, Taylor said. Among the prizes are gift certificates for pizzas, clothing and records.

The basketball tickets being sold are for the Jan. 11 game at Pontiac Stadium between the Los Angeles Lakers, featuring Earvin Johnson, and the Detroit Pistons, with Gregory Kelser.

The marketing club bought a block of 300 tickets, of which 200 upper arena seats remain, Taylor said. The club has also chartered buses to travel to the game.

The cost for a ticket, transportation and beer is $10 for club members and $12 for non-members. They will be available at the party and from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday at the marketing club office on the third floor of Epley Center.

Scandinavian study applications available

Scandinavian Seminar is accepting applications for the 1980-81 academic year in Denmark, Finland, Sweden or Norway.

Following a three-week language course, students pursue individual study projects in Scandinavian specialty schools.

Based on a written evaluation of their work, most college students receive full or partial academic credit for the year.

The $4,900 fee covers tuition, room, board and all field trips in Scandinavia. Interest-free loans and some partial scholarships are available.

For information, write to Scandinavian Seminar, 100 E. 85th Street, New York, N.Y. 10028.

Environmentalists want study of Great Lakes

were shown, he said.

Currently, no law actually prohibits navigation on the Great Lakes during the winter, but due to the modifications of the shipping lines, it does not pay to do so without government financing.

However, Nicholson said taxpayers would be repaid in the form of economic benefits reaped from the project.

The Corps estimates that a Jan. 31 extension would amount to $13 million in benefits while costing only $5 million.

Schmidt referred to this type of economic benefit as "the trickle down effect."

IF A STEEL company saves a dollar a ton on iron ore, Schmidt said, the savings would supposedly trickle down to the consumer. "Anybody that believes that," he added, "probably believes in the tooth fairy."

A report prepared for the New York Department of Transportation entitled "A Critique of the Recommended Plan of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers," agreed that "benefits claimed by the Corps for the recommended plan are dramatically overstated and the costs understated."

The report, which helped influence New York Gov. Hugh Carey to take a stand against winter navigation, also said season extension alone is not the Corps' goal, but is "only the first step in an enormous investment program."

The Corps is currently finalizing a feasibility report for a year-round shipping season on the Great Lakes and an 11-month shipping season on the St. Lawrence Seaway.

This program would initially cost over $1 billion, as it would require massive re-tooling of the Great Lakes system, including channel modifications, underwater dams and ice booms — to name a few.

The program would also require approximately $100 million each year to keep it going. The Corps estimates the economic benefits of such a system would exceed $300 million a year.

BUT THE NEW YORK study questioned whether Canada would support navigation through the St. Lawrence Seaway, making the Corps' plan less economically feasible.

Although Canada does not have an official policy on winter navigation, a study done for the Canadian St. Lawrence Seaway Authority concluded that an extended navigation season would "have costs far in excess of their benefits to Canada."

Without Canada's cooperation, winter shipping can only be done on the four upper lakes where the main beneficiaries would be iron ore mines and steel mills, Schmidt said.

"It's clear the real impetus behind winter shipping is the steel industry," he added. "There's no doubt about it."

With that type of operation, "Michigan bears the greatest burden or has the greatest potential for (environmental) impact," Shafer said.

PENNSYLVANIA AND OHIO would get iron ore, he added, much of which comes from Minnesota mines.

Michigan is left with two bottlenecks which ships must sail through — the St. Mary's River connecting lakes Superior and Huron and the St. Clair River connecting lakes Huron and Erie. And those narrow connecting waters are where environmental damage is most likely to happen, Shafer said.

Those sites are also fish spawning areas and the St. Mary's River in particular is one of the best sport fishing areas in the Great Lakes, Shafer said.

"We're just guessing at the impacts," he added, "and that's not the way to make a decision — based on ignorance."

Shafer said the Corps had years to do the environmental studies but did not. Michigan officials will continue to withhold support of winter navigation until adequate studies are done.

However, Nicholson said the studies would have cost $150 million.

BUT, SHAFER SAID, that would be the price to study the entire Great Lakes system.

The only place needing such studies, he said, are the bottleneck areas, at a cost of no more than $1.5 million.

Yet even if Congress does not approve winter navigation it does not mean the operation will stop.

The Corps can keep the locks at Sault Sainte Marie open beyond the end of the traditional navigation season in order to meet "the reasonable demands of commerce" said Bill McClarnon, project manager for the Corps of Engineers' navigation season extension survey report.

The Corps has already received requests that the locks remain open for several weeks beyond Dec. 15, McClarnon said.

The Corps, therefore, is currently considering a season extension to Jan. 8, plus or minus one week, if Congress does not act.

THAT PLAN, ACCORDING to Corps estimates, would cost about $350,000 and provide $4.5 million in benefits.

However, the DNR believes that would violate the Federal Coastal Zone Management Act of 1972, Shafer said.

That act states the actions of a federal agency have to be consistent with the coastal management program of the state.

The failure of the Corps to do environmental studies in the area are inconsistent with the Michigan policies, Shafer said.

"What we're concerned about," he added, "is that the environmental is protected in the area."

SCHMIDT SAID THAT if proper environmental studies are not done and the Corps continues shipping, MUCC will go to court.

"If they think they're going to go ahead and start shipping without doing any environmental studies — they're wrong," he said.

Academic senate lacking support

The Academic Senate failed to reach quorum Wednesday for the second year in a row.

A quorum of 235 faculty members is needed for the senate to vote. However, only 75 attended the meeting.

In light of this, President Cecil Mackey urged faculty members to consider an alternate body that the faculty would respect and want to represent them.

"If a structure works as poorly as this, we ought to have the gumption to try something else or do away with it," Mackey said.

Mackey said the structure should gain more widespread support from the faculty than what he has seen.

The type of governing body needed is one which is chaired by one of its own members and sets its own agenda, he said.

Mackey also reported that negotiations of the 1980-81 University budget requests between MSU and state Legislature have begun.

"The outlook is not particularly encouraging," he said. "The executive branch anticipates a tight year."

However, Mackey said that the overall tone of the hearings have been pleasant and useful.

Board approves Ryan's substitute

An East Lansing woman was appointed Tuesday to represent Ingham County's 19th District, replacing the recently resigned Patrick Ryan.

Maribeth Somers, 35, of 1135 Marigold Ave., was unanimously approved by the Ingham County Board of Commissioners to represent the district until a special election is held in early 1980. Ryan resigned Nov. 2, saying he was "exhausted" from recent personal and political pressures. He represented the 19th District which includes part of Lansing, East Lansing and Lansing Township.

Somers was recommended to the board by the Democratic caucus members of the board.

The board also approved Tom Hoisington, D-Lansing, as chairman pro tem of the board until 1980 when he may take over the chair. The position of chair pro tem was also left vacant by Ryan.

In other business, the board voted to break away from the regional concept of criminal justice funding and approve federal legislation which allows the funds to be directed immediately to the county rather than through a regional commission.

Tom Hoisington said the method would give the county more control over the spending of the funds.

The Federal funds for criminal justice projects are now channeled through the Criminal Justice Coordinating Council of the Tri County Regional Planning Commission.

Commissioner Thomas Brennan, D-East Lansing, said the council is kind of an "unorganized hodge podge, with Ingham always prodding the two other counties along trying to get things done."

"That's why this would be a great advantage," he said, "It would give us total control over what's being done with the money."

Commission to discuss E.L. grant

Proposed uses for the 1980-81 funds from the Community Development Block Grant will be discussed by the East Lansing Housing and Community Development Commission 7:30 tonight in 54-B District Court, 301 M.A.C. Ave.

The grant, which totals more than $2 million for three years, was given to East Lansing by the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development to be used for low- or moderate-income housing developments.

The commission will also discuss what action should be taken, if any, in regards to the eviction of 43 residents who lived in the upper level of the East Lansing State Bank, 100 W. Grand River Ave., this past summer.

The residents were evicted because the bank wanted to remodel the building.

Universe's age and size recalculated

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press Writer

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — Three astronomers say the discovery of a mistake in the way distances in space are measured means that the universe is only about half as old and half as big as they previously thought.

The scientists who noticed the apparent error say the universe is only nine billion years old, not 15 billion to 18 billion years, the usually accepted figures.

The discovery, which still must be double checked by other scientists, could upset many theories about the age of stars and the evolution of the universe.

The new work was performed by one astronomer at Harvard and two in Arizona. They found a major error in Hubble's Constant, a yardstick that scientists use to figure out the distance between objects in space.

THE RESEARCHERS FOUND that the constant, which is the ratio of speed to distance, should be almost twice as large as previously thought.

"If the Hubble Constant is about twice as big as it was thought to be in the past, that means that the age of the universe has dropped down to nine billion years," John P. Huchra, a staff member of the Harvard-Smithsonian Center for Astrophysics, said in an interview Tuesday.

Besides being only half as old, he said, the universe is only half as big as previously thought.

"The distance to the furthest point in the universe is the velocity of light times the age of the universe," Huchra said. "Since we have now scaled down the age of the universe by a factor of two, that means that everything is half as distant."

Previously, scientists had believed that Hubble's Constant was 50 kilometers per second per million parsecs. A parsec is 3.26 light years. Now, Huchra says, the constant is 95 kilometers per second per million parsecs.

HUCHRA DEVELOPED THE new figure with Marc Aaronson of the University of Arizona and Jeremy Mould of the Kitt Peak National Observatory in Arizona.

Astronomers believe that the stars and planets have been rushing outward ever since the "big bang," the giant primordial explosion that most scientists believe started the universe.

Huchra and his companions found that other astronomers erred by failing to take into consideration a motion of the earth that is independent from its rush outward into space. This is the tendency of the earth to fall inward toward the center of its supercluster of stars.

"No one had ever inserted a correction for the infall rate of the local supercluster," Huchra said. "If you get the velocity wrong, you get the Hubble Constant wrong."

George B. Field, head of the astrophysics center, said: "There is going to be a lot of scrambling and trying to make sense of things if this result is correct. I think the first response of the scientific community will be to verify it and frankly to attack it."

State job guide in braille

A braille version of "A Handicapper's Guide to State Employment" has been produced by the Michigan Department of Civil Service.

A program for handicappers who are at a competitive disadvantage in the regular examination process is outlined in the pamphlet.

Handicapper applicants must meet the certification requirements set up by either the state Bureau of Rehabilitation, the state Commission for the Blind or the Veterans Administration to be eligible for the special classification to work for the state.

After being declared eligible for a state employment classification, applicants must fill out a civil service form listing the counties in which they wish to work.

The applicant must then meet the education and experience requirements for the classification.

The applicants name is then placed on top of an employment referral list with a handicapper designation beside the name to aid in affirmative action programs.

The applicants may then be contacted by state agencies for interview and, if hired, they will be employed for a six month probationary period.

At the end of six months, applicants will be given permanent Civil Service status and will be eligible to compete for promotional examinations.

The pamphlet is available through the Department of Civil Service, 320 S. Walnut St., P.O. Box 30002, Lansing 48908.
