Three more RAs resign from Case

By JOHN PATTISON
State News Staff Writer

Six Case Hall resident assistants have resigned and more may leave.

Three of the resident assistants, Andrea Bennett, Marie Foley and Maureen Mucha resigned Jan. 7 because of an incident involving their possession of allegedly stolen rental refrigerators. Timothy Mitchell, the resident assistant on 4 North Case, resigned Jan. 9, following a policy disagreement with Jackie Hicks, Case Hall resident director. On Jan. 7, Mitchell was placed on probation and refused to fulfill the probation stipulations.

Also Peter Rothschild and Kathleen Rogers, resident assistants on 4 South Case, resigned Monday for personal reasons, according to letters they submitted to Hicks.

However, the first three women who left Case were given a choice of being fired or resigning, a hall staff member said.

MITCHELL SAID HE resigned because of Hick's unreasonable probation conditions. His probation requirements included 17 additional meetings with staff members during winter term, a meeting with Hicks once every two weeks and that he invite a graduate advisor to all his floor meetings.

Mitchell said he was put on probation because of his negative attitude towards the hall's upper advisory staff.

"The conditions and the tone of the letter were disgusting," said one staff member. "They demonstrated no trust in Tim." "I didn't feel I could meet that list of expectations," Mitchell said. "I asked for some flexibility in the expectations and I was told there could be none."

Mitchell quoted Hick's letter as stating, "If these expectations are not met then we will have to discuss more serious personnel actions."

"I PERCEIVED NO steps between probation and dismissal," Mitchell said. "I felt my resignation was better now than whatever consequences I would face at the end of the term."

Mitchell is currently working on a field study as part of his curriculum in James Madison College. He said this field study is very important to his major and would have been slighted if he fulfilled Hick's terms.

"I personally think none of that would have helped me become a better RA," Mitchell said.

Another problem Mitchell said he had was fulfilling intangible demands, such as displaying a positive attitude and acting professionally. He said these terms were subjective, and their definition varied depending on who used them.

Students of Mitchell's floor complimented his work performance and said they felt a loss when he resigned.

"I THINK HE was excellent," said Daniel Doyle, a junior in accounting. "He had a good working relationship with students on the floor and in the dorm."

"If you were down about something he'd sit down and try to bring it out of you," said one floor member.

"We had no complaints about him," said another.

Many floor members felt bitter towards Hicks for the letter that led to Mitchell's resignation.

"Our floor lost," one resident said. "We're feeling it right now." Approximately nine floor members have applied for Mitchell's position and there is a possibility one may receive the job.

"I THINK A lot of the RAs have lost respect for the upper advisory staff," said a hall staff member. "There's been a lack of communication between the staff and RAs. I think Jackie's realized that and she's trying to implement more open communication."

Hicks refused to comment on her relationship to the staff and individual resident assistants. She said she was not at liberty to discuss Mitchell's probation, or why Rothschild and Rogers resigned.

"There have been resignations; those people chose to resign," Hicks said. "I have no comment beyond that."

Rothschild said he resigned due to differences in styles of leadership between himself and the staff. Rogers could not be reached for comment.

Hicks said the resignations would not adversely affect Case Hall but it would take time to choose new resident assistants.

"We have over 70 applications for the positions," Hicks said.

VICE PRESIDENTS SHUFFLED

Mackey proposes change

By DEBBIE CREEMERS

State News Staff Writer

Under a reorganization plan to be presented to the MSU Board of Trustees at their next meeting, MSU President Cecil Mackey has shifted the responsibilities of many top administrators.

If adopted, the two-tiered structure would have six vice presidents working under Provost Clarence L. Winder, vice president for academic affairs, and Kenneth W. Thompson, vice president for operations.

"Organizationally, all vice presidents are on the same level. They have equal status on an organizational chart," John Bruff, D-Fraser and chairperson of the board, said Thursday.

But Bruff added Winder and Thompson would have much more responsibility under the new outline, with two vice presidents working under Winder, and four working in an operations team headed by Thompson.

Under the proposed outline, Thompson's title would be changed to vice president for finance and operations and treasurer. He would assume many of the responsibilities of Jack Breslin, currently executive vice president and vice president for administration and state relations.

EXECUTIVE VICE PRESIDENT would be dropped from Breslin's title, which would be vice president for administration and public affairs.

Roger E. Wilkinson, treasurer and vice president for business and finance, would become associate vice president for business and finance under the proposed outline.

Wilkinson lost authority over the data processing department earlier when Thompson was given responsibility for it in December.

The change took place after James L. Lennon, director of the MSU department of data processing, resigned following an investigation of his personnel practices.

Another investigation of the department's hardware and software equipment was also conducted Nov. 4 and 5 by James H. Melton, director of data processing at Texas Tech University.

Advising administrative data processing to "remember the lessons of the past as it plans for the future," Melton stated in the report that "Management must be able to anticipate problems and resolve them before they begin."

THOMPSON WAS SCHEDULED to assume authority over the administrative data processing department after Mackey completed his administrative reorganization, Wilkinson said. Lennon's resignation provided a natural break for the transition, he added.

Grievance filed by 'U' custodians over scheduling

By LESA DOLL
State News Staff Writer

If employee requests are not met, MSU custodians will go into final arbitration and "a strike may be called," said Tony Kroetsch, chief union steward of Local 1585.

A formal grievance was filed Thursday against MSU by the union following the implementation of a custodial shift change.

Employee discontent, which culminated in the union move, has grown since the workers were placed on the new shift, said Jeff Allen, a district night steward.

The change, implemented on Monday, was instigated by Custodial Services Supervisor Larry Mueller. Many buildings formerly on a 10 p.m. to 6:30 a.m. shift have switched to a 4:30 p.m. to 1 a.m. schedule.

MANY OF THE buildings involved are used for night classes.

Employees claim the new schedule presents problems, such as loss of transportation, little personal time with their families and parking problems.

"Morale is so low that you don't want to do anything," said Margaret Burley. "People should be happy in their work. It's a doggone shame it has to be this way when it's not necessary."

The management, however, feels the change is necessary.

WHEN ASKED WHY he made the change, Mueller refused to comment.

Ted Simon, assistant vice president of the physical plant, said the new shift would be better for the building.

"The scheduling here has always been to suit the usage of the building," he said. "We find we get better results (with the new shift)."

He said he felt the buildings would get cleaned more effectively because of the change, and that they would be more likely to find employees willing to work the 4:30 p.m. shift. "We're sure the majority are in favor of the move," he said. "We have enough buildings

They're (the management) treating them like animals to a certain extent. Rumor from a lot of them says that they'd get out as long as he's (Mueller) there. — Jeff Allen, a district night steward.

left on the third shift and anyone who wants it can apply. We've had turndowns from people who'd rather be on the new shift."

STILL, EMPLOYEE SENTIMENT indicates the workers are very unhappy with the change.

"They're (the management) treating them like animals to a certain extent," said Allen. "Rumor from a lot of them says that they'd get out as long as he's (Mueller) there."

Burley said many of the buildings are not getting cleaned on the new schedule. Most have classes in them until 10 p.m., and the remaining time is not sufficient to clean the entire building.

"I was up mopping last night, and people were there until 11 p.m.," she said. "When I went to wax, people had mud on it (the floor). You can't wax a floor with mud on it."

DON PULVER, ASSISTANT building head at Berkey Hall, said buildings were not in bad condition now, but would be when it snows.

Simon said he thinks the whole issue will gradually "fade away." He said no change could "please everybody."

"We intend to work within the requirements of the contract," he said. "If we don't comply, we have everything to lose."

He said the grievance would be processed as soon as they receive it, and that it would be given "all due consideration."

Gold hits $800 mark in wild N.Y. trading

By KRISTIN GOFF
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — The price of gold broke through the $800 barrier Thursday for the first time ever, only two days after it hit $700. One trader described the market as "absolutely nuts."

In New York, prices of up to $815 a troy ounce were quoted before the price settled back slightly at the close.

At Republic National Bank, a major dealer, gold finished at $792 an ounce, up $48 from Wednesday. On the Commodity Exchange, the price of a gold contract for delivery this month closed at $802 after trading as high as $820 an ounce earlier in the day. That was $58 above Wednesday's close.

Silver prices also continued to rise, reaching $48.70 a troy ounce Thursday, prompting GAF Corp. to boost prices of industrial and medical films and papers by as much as 107 percent.

The action followed last week's announcement by Eastman Kodak Co. that its film prices would rise by up to 75 percent.

Silver, a major component of film and photographic paper, sold for $6 an ounce at the beginning of 1979.

SOME BULLION DEALERS cited an unsubstantiated rumor of a Soviet invasion of Iran as the igniting force behind the gold surge.

"The magnitude of the rally, not only in gold but in grain, seems to indicate the rumor is being believed," said one trader. After the market closed, the Pentagon said there had been no invasion.

Analysts have said that much of the push on gold prices is coming from Middle East buyers who see gold as a haven for their funds in a time of political and economic uncertainty.

The surge came after prices fell in early trading on profit-taking sales. After trading as low as $715 an ounce earlier in the day in New York, the price rose above $800 an ounce by early afternoon.

Journalism school chairperson to be OK'd

By BEN WELMERS

State News Staff Writer

Elizabeth Yamashita will be the next chairperson of the MSU school of journalism, pending final approval of the Board of Trustees, Erwin Bettinghaus, chairperson of the College of Communication Arts and Sciences said Thursday.

Bettinghaus said he will make the recommendation to the board this weekend and the acceptance should be nothing more than a formality.

"I don't see how the board can overlook this outstanding recommendation," Bettinghaus said. "She is highly professional. There is no question she is qualified for the job."

Yamashita, who was born in Australia, received a bachelor's degree in economics from the University of Sydney, Australia.

She earned both a master's degree and doctorate in journalism from Northwestern University where she has been a professor for the past 15 years.

She is also chairperson of the editorial department of the Medill school of journalism and director of the division of graduate students at Northwestern.

Yamashita has worked in the United States and Australia as reporter and editor for various financial magazines.

Women in Journalism, a professional organization, honored Yamashita as woman of the year.

A committee of journalism professors, including graduate and undergraduate representatives has been searching for a replacement for former chairperson of the school of journalism, George A. Hough, III, who left MSU in August for a position at the University of Georgia.

Andrew Young to teach MSU course; other rights activists possible lecturers

By D. R. KINSLEY
State News Staff Writer

Andrew Young, former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations will lecture at MSU next term, said Jack Pitts, director of student affairs in the College of Urban Development.

World Conflict and Development: New Dimensions and Strategies for Change, will be the title of the course in which Young is expected to give five lectures, Pitts said.

"We have built it (the course) around some of the things Andy has been doing," he said.

The course will consist of 10 recitation sections to be taught by MSU faculty and staff and 10 lectures given by Young and other human rights leaders yet to be confirmed.

"NOT ONLY WILL Mr. Young be lecturing, but other African and human rights leaders will be also," Pitts said.

Other suggested speakers include Donald McHenry, current U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations; Melissa Wells, a member of the U.S. mission to the U.N.; and Salin Salin, Foreign Minister of Tanzania.

Robert Green, dean of the College of Urban Development, worked with Young during the civil rights movement between 1965 and 1967. Since then Young has given numerous guest lectures 1965 and 1967. Since then Young has given numerous guest lectures at MSU.

Young resigned as U.S. Ambassador to the U.N. in August 1979 after meeting with a representative of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Gold prices

said there was very little selling of gold so that prices were bid up with relatively few trades.

In London, gold closed at $760, a record close for that market, before the New York surge began. That was up from Wednesday's $752.50 close and followed a plunge to $730.50 in mid-morning trading.

In Zurich Switzerland, gold closed at $730.50, compared with $760 at the close Wednesday.

The price of gold at this time last year was $225 an ounce. The price rose to $300 on July 18 and hit $444 in October.

The boom resumed after Iranian militants seized American hostages on Nov. 4, and the price topped $500 the day after Christmas. The $600 barrier was topped Jan. 3 and the $700 mark fell Tuesday.

The dollar was mixed Thursday in what foreign exchange dealers in Frankfurt, West Germany, described as lively trading.

Young to teach at MSU

Young spoke on campus last term about the PLO and his resignation. He said at the time, "Everything that I have done, I thought was in the interest of my country. I wasn't looking for any trouble, I was trying to be a good nigger."

YOUNG WILL LECTURE on the various subjects of global politics, human rights and the significance of the civil rights movement for the world.

The main topics the course will cover include:

- concepts and theories of world conflict;
- dimensions of human and societal development;
- the quest for decency and third world struggles; and
- reflections on the changing world scene.

Young's first lecture will be

April 8 at 3 p.m. The room has yet to be scheduled but Pitts said they are seeking a lecture hall with a seating capacity of 300.

Oregon war

ALBANY, Ore. (AP) — A boat shop owner says he plans to resume his war of words — in the form of a 30-foot sign — with an industrial neighbor.

LeRoy Pruitt made the pledge after a court order which originally prohibited the billboard two years ago was dissolved in court. The company had abandoned a libel suit which it filed in response to the first showing of the sign.

VP changes

Thompson confirmed that the change had been contemplated since he arrived.

"It would have been accomplished at a later date anyway," he said.

Joseph Dickinson, vice president for University development, and Connie Stewart, vice president for University relations, would retain the same responsibilities under Thompson's authority.

Winder would keep his title and responsibilities under the academic hierarchy overseeing Moses Turner, vice president for student affairs, and John Cantlon, vice president for research and graduate studies.

Leland W. Carr, University attorney and vice president for legal affairs, would become a "general counsel" under the arrangement.

Mexico may mediate U.S.-Iran crisis

By The Associated Press

A series of diplomatic talks by Mexico's ambassador to the United Nations prompted reports in New York Thursday that America's southern neighbor is taking an active role in mediating the U.S.-Iranian crises.

Mexico's U.N. mission, however, denied it had any formal proposal or plan of action and said it was only offering to be helpful.

The Mexican ambassador's meetings coincided with reports that Mexico was initiating a move in the Security Council to set up an official U.N. inquiry commission to look into complaints by Iran against the deposed shah and his regime.

According to the reports, Mexico sought to work out an agreement with Iran to release the 50 U.S. hostages held in Tehran at the same time the inquiry starts.

AMBASSADOR PORFIRIO MUNOZ Ledo met for 1 and one-half hours Wednesday evening with U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, and earlier he conferred with U.S. Ambassador Donald F. McHenry. Munoz Ledo was scheduled to meet Thursday with the U.N. Security Council president, French Ambassador Jacques Leprette.

The militants holding the hostages insist they will not release them until former Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi is returned to stand trial on charges of corruption and other alleged crimes.

Asked about the reports, Mexican mission counselor Francisco Correa-Villalobos said: "A Mexican proposal does not exist. Mexico is offering to be helpful in this difficult situation."

Asked whether Mexico was endorsing a plan for an inquiry simultaneous with release of the hostages, Correa replied: "This is one of the possibilities that the secretary-general has mentioned. We are definitely not making such a proposal."

A spokesperson for Waldheim, Rudolf Stajduhar, described the two men's meeting as involving "exploratory talks by the Mexicans" and said Munoz Ledo had "outlined some of their ideas regarding the Iranian situation."

U.S. spokesperson Jill Schuker, asked about McHenry's talks with Munoz Ledo, said Mexico was one of a number of governments trying to help in the Iranian situation.

IN PARIS, THE French daily Le Monde reported from Tehran Thursday that a political party leader had hinted Iran's presidential elections, scheduled for Jan. 25, might be postponed a week.

The paper's correspondent attributed the hint to a Dr. Ayat, member of the commission of experts of the Islamic Republican Party. The correspondent said Ayt, whose first name was not given, is a leader of the party closest to Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

The party's candidate withdrew from the running, the paper said, because it was discovered that he was of Afghan origin and only people of pure Iranian stock are allowed to participate.

Gymnastics gains popularity with athletes, spectators alike

Olga Korbut's outstanding gymnastic performances in the 1972 Olympics brought America to its feet and created a wave of enthusiasm for the sport that has swept the country from coast to coast.

The popularity of gymnastics in Michigan can be seen in the dramatic increase of non-collegiate programs.

The number of Michigan high schools that offer girls gymnastic programs has nearly tripled from 52 in 1971 to 140 in 1979.

Many private clubs have sprung up across Michigan to satisfy the training needs of those gymnasts below the high school level of competition.

MSU's women's gymnastic coach Michael Kasavana said the quality of gymnasts entering the college ranks has improved tremendously over the last five to six years.

"When I came to MSU," Kasavana said, "the kids were coming here with two to three years previous experience. Now they have six to seven."

The sport as a whole has gone through a number of changes.

New technology in the apparatus allows new skills to be developed. At the same time, younger gymnasts have become a dominating force in the sport.

Sue Novak, director of gymnastics for the Lansing Gymnastic Center said gymnasts lose flexibility with age. Modern skills require young, light and strong bodies.

"Today's gymnasts," Novak said, "are peaking at age 16 or 17 and men slightly later."

Novak added that young women are attracted to gymnastics because it is one of the few sports women can participate in and still look feminine. Gymnastics has also gained popularity as a spectator sport. Kasavana said the sport has the potential for sellout crowds.

"At Penn State," Kasavana said, "gymnastics is the second largest spectator sport. They average 8,000 to 9,000 spectators per event." He added that with large numbers of spectators, gymnastics could produce large amounts of revenue for college athletic departments.

Afghanistan easy target for Soviets to control

By ELYSE GOLDIN
State News Staff Writer

Due to the lack of communication within Afghanistan, that country became easy target for the Soviets to achieve strategic control, MSU history professor Harold Marcus said.

Marcus was one of five MSU professors participating in a panel discussion on the Afghanistan crisis Wednesday in the Union. About 500 students attended the discussion.

Marcus has traveled in Afghanistan and is an expert on the region. He said the Soviet intervention required little effort, in part, because of Afghanistan's poor communication system.

There is only one continuous road in Afghanistan extending from one border to the other, he said. Because that road is comprised of harsh terrain, communication is weak and tactical control is made increasingly difficult for Afghans, he added.

BRIAN SILVER, professor of political science, said there are apparently only three motives why the Soviet Union chose to invade Afghanistan.

He explained first that past Afghanistan governments have attempted to control the varied views of rebellious ethnic groups in the area. Silver said that the now fallen regime of Hafizullah Amin's was losing power amongst the groups and Amin was too weak of a leader to propagate Soviet interests there.

"There is strong evidence that Amin's regime was losing the battle against countryside rebels," he said.

"The Soviets were losing a lot of money in the struggle . . . and they were going to continue losing if they didn't get stronger," Silver said.

SECOND, SILVER SAID the Soviet Union had little control over Amin, who was involved with struggles against other Marxist leaders.

"Amin's stance was critical of Iran's Khomeini, while the Soviets were trying to play it cool with Khomeini," he said.

Finally, the Soviets had been training and preparing Afghanistan's current president Babrak Karmal to succeed in Afghanistan, Silver said. The only way the Soviets could effectively put Karmal in power was to use military force.

Although the Soviets may have had reasons to encroach Afghanistan, Silver said they probably miscalculated the response by the United States.

He said Russia did not fear an American military intrusion since forces were immobilized due to the Iran situation. Nonetheless, the U.S. reaction has probably been much stronger than the Soviets anticipated.

ROBERT SLUSSER, professor of history, said armed forces play a larger role in the Kremlin now than they have in the past.

The Afghanistan invasion represents a historical turning point in Soviet policy, Slusser said.

"The operation was botched . . . and a major blunder" on the part of Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev, he said.

Because Brezhnev's power was not solely his own but a collectivity of leadership, Slusser said the Soviet president was unable to make decisions on his own.

"Brezhnev, on his own could not on the spot say 'yes, let's take it over,'" Slusser said.

SINCE HE WAS a permissive leader, Brezhnev allowed pressure groups to have their independent views and would grant their wishes, he said.

"It is the case of a decision (to invade Afghanistan) taken on military grounds . . . by civilian authorities," Slusser said. "The disarray of leadership is clearly illustrated."

Slusser said the Soviet decision to invade Afghanistan was not made by a leadership conscious of the possible outcome and the move to invade would lead to the fall of the Brezhnev regime.

Alan Fisher, professor of history and a Mid-East specialist said there are many oppressed ethnic groups in the area that would prefer autonomy.

The Baluchis (of Baluchistan), whose borders cross those of Afghanistan, Iran and Pakistan are among those ethnic groups most troubled in Afghanistan.

FISHER SAID THAT Middle Eastern ethnic groups are of a different nature than those in the United States. For that reason, Americans have always been in a disadvantageous position to understand and deal with those countries, he said.

"Since the 1960s, the U.S. has decided not to interfere with Iran and areas of ethnic minorities," he said.

Marcus attributed the steady decline of American power in the Mid-East during the last 10 years to non-desirability to interfere. He said that although the U.S. government remains interested in the region, the government is hesitant to intrude following the experience in Vietnam.

Fisher denied the existence of a "militant Islam" or "Muslim world." He said that there are many different "Muslim worlds" comprised of multitudinous communities.

Muslim opinion was divided on Iran but not nearly as divided on the Soviet invasion into Afghanistan, Fisher said.

William Lammers, professor of history, was the mediator of the panel discussion which was sponsored by the Undergraduate History Club, the Russian and East European Studies Program and the Mid-East Studies Committee.

RHA president Hoffman resigns from post

Residence Hall Association president Christine Hoffman resigned from her position at the RHA meeting Wednesday.

Hoffman, a junior majoring in business, cited "financial and academic reasons" for her resignation in a letter read by vice president Carol Purdy.

"I was shocked, I really was," said Howard Heinrich, Bailey

Hall representative. "I do feel Chris ran RHA very effectively," Heinrich said.

Hoffman, a resident of Mason Hall, was elected president spring term 1979. She had previously served as a representative for Wilson Hall, where she had been active in student government.

At the meeting, Purdy moved to vote on a new president. It is in the best interests of RHA to have an official president instead of an interim president until the regular elections are held, said Jim Wall, area director of Residence Hall Programs.

Purdy, a senior majoring in retailing, was elected with only one abstention. Purdy has been a member of RHA since spring term 1978, representing Campbell Hall.

Frank Cox, a junior in James Madison College, was elected to fill the vice presidential position vacated by Purdy. Cox, a resident of Akers Hall, was formerly the executive assistant for representative training.

Both Purdy and Cox will serve until the regular elections are held at the end of this term.

The $1,000 homecoming.

You could win $1,000 just for doing what you should have done months ago!

That's right. Just for bringing your money 'home' (to your credit union) you'll have a chance to win $1,000 — and you'll start earning interest daily at 6 1/2% annual rate. Both should make nice additions to your savings.

If you have a savings or checking account at a bank or savings and loan, all you have to do is stop by the credit union with your passbook or other proof of the account and fill out a Sight Draft. You'll receive a drawing ticket on the spot.

Your credit union will take care of all the details of closing your account at the other financial institution and transferring your money to the credit union. And for every $500 transferred to your credit union, another drawing ticket with your name on it will go into the drawing automatically.

If you'd prefer to close an account somewhere else in person and bring or mail your money to the credit union, you'll still be eligible for the drawing.

So do what you should have done months ago — transfer all your money to the credit union where it'll start earning more for you every day.

Hurry! Feb. 15th is the last day for a chance to win the $1,000 prize.

Refugee center serves humanity

Mere physical distance has always had a way of softening and blurring our view of tragedies overseas — consider Biafra, Guyana, Bangladesh. But often a single episode close to home can bring the profundity of world events into startling focus.

Such was the case recently when MSU graduate Nguyen Van Thuy arrived in East Lansing with his family of nine, having spent three years in a Vietnamese prison, 30 agonizing days adrift in an overcrowded fishing boat and another several months in a squalid Indonesian refugee camp. For many of us who had viewed the refugee problem only through the comforting veil of a television screen or a newspaper page, the true horror of war had finally struck home.

If Thuy's arrival could be thought of as an omen of sorts, it was apparently taken at heart. Through the volunteer efforts of faculty in several University departments, a University Resource Center for Refugee Resettlement has been established on campus to provide a clearinghouse for information and resources for Indochina refugees. If properly administered, the program should do a lot to knock down the bureaucratic and cultural roadblocks impairing the smooth relocation of Asian refugees who are, by any terms, the living casualties of war.

The refugee center, established as a six-month pilot project within the Department of International Studies, will hopefully be paralleled in other states as well as on the national level. The need for resettlement projects is obviously great — Michigan already has about 5,000 refugees and another 300 are arriving every month. Given the international efforts to transcend ideological differences in meeting human needs, that number stands to increase, and Michigan has a moral obligation to shoulder its part of the resettlement burden.

This, we believe, presents an ideal opportunity for MSU to make good on its claim to the title of "World University." Churches, civic organizations and local governments in Michigan have taken admirable steps toward accommodating the overflow of Vietnamese and Cambodian immigrants, but a statewide effort requires the intellectual and physical resources that only a major university can offer. And MSU, as the state's land-grant institution, seems to be the ideal choice.

Void widens in diplomacy crisis

No matter what course American diplomacy may take with Iran, a void of misunderstanding is destined to exist between the two nations. The West finds it difficult to comprehend anti-American sentiment in a country that once accepted our modernization, technology and armaments. Resultingly, protests in Iran take the form of ingratious hate demonstrations in the eyes of the American viewer, who sees plenty of anti-imperialist slogans and burned effigies, but knows none of the reasons behind such actions.

Americans watching the evening news may get the impression that a majority of Iran's 34 million people romp through the streets yelling "Death to America" like it was their daily jog. The fact is, while hundreds of vehement protestors parade near the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, the rest of the country remains relatively docile. Moreover, the American press prefers to document the actions of Iran's radical minority rather than analyze the causes of an embassy takeover or the holding of hostages.

To some, the issue is black and white: Iran is in violation of international law and should be punished. To Iran, the issue is revolution and instability. When Iran's Revolutionary Council wielded its sword of censorship at the American press this week, barring reporters from the country, its intention was to stop an unending flow of pro-western reports that have portrayed Iran's domestic problems as the only news worth mentioning.

Americans are hearing more about Iran's domestic problems — secession of Kurdistan and Azerbaijan — than they are about America's geopolitical legacy and to what extent it is to blame for the unrest. The press has acted more as an agent for the Carter administration's battered diplomacy than raconteurs of Iran's longstanding dispute with foreign domination. It has failed to present the story without slanting the issues in favor of the West.

Once political stability in Iran is obtained, revolutionary leaders may be more sympathetic to the West. Indeed, while we understand Iran's action, we would not want to see it close itself off to the West for good. But for now, the action seems to have broader implications than mere censorship. It is misunderstanding, coupled with a rising tide of resentment that continues to widen the gap between Iran and the United States.

Olympic boycott good idea

American prestige is at a nadir around the world. Iran is holding Americans hostage. Russia is invading other countries, but we don't get to do the same anymore. Bert Parks has been fired. And moreover, we haven't even been doing too well in the showcase of patriotic prowess, the Olympics. We need something big to draw us out of the depths; something bigger than say, Howard Baker.

But, yes, there is a solution! (Part one) It goes something like this: First, the United States should boycott the 1980 Summer Olympics in Moscow. That'll put those Ruskies in their place, and teach them that they can't push us around. In fact, an Olympic boycott will probably make them see the errors of their evil imperialistic ways so upon hearing word of a possible boycott, they'll probably back out of Afghanistan. And if we do this thing right, Russia might leave Czechoslovakia and Hungary, too. In fact, with a little bit of luck, the boycott might incite Russia to give up communism in general and take up tried and true democracy.

But, if we boycott the Olympics, what will happen to all of our dedicated athletes who have spent years training hard just for a shot at the gold (even before it was worth so much)? What will happen to the millions of dedicated television watchers who look forward to plopping down in their favorite chairs, with a six-pack in one hand and a remote control channel selector in the other, to watch the Olympics? And especially, what will happen to NBC and the Pepsi Cola Co.? They worked so hard to gain exclusive advertising rights at the Olympics.

(Part two) Let's hold a Free-World Olympics in place of the games to be held in Moscow. That could be bigger than x-rated video tapes. We can invite all of the Third World countries to come and be a part of our big Olympic party, which will show them just how nice we really are. The way things are going, we should be able to get countries such as Pakistan and Egypt to come, in addition to all the good ol' boys like Britain and Israel.

One tangible benefit from holding a Free-World Olympics would be that the United States will be able to win a lot more gold medals than we would if we had to contend with Russia, East Germany, Albania and other Communist countries. We can give the CIA something to do to ensure that we win enough of the gold; we'll have it infiltrate any free world Olympic teams that appear able to win a healthy share of gold medals. The CIA would then poison (or do something just as subtle) their leading athletes.

Gold is getting very expensive, and we better do something to make sure we can afford to pay for any gold we give out. We can give, in lieu of gold medals, some of our grain or our arms (we have plenty of both lying around) to the country of the winning athlete's choice.

We can hold this big bash right here at MSU. Our athletic facilities, certainly, are among the best in the world. Think of all the word prestige the United States (and MSU) will get when the bleachers of Jenison Fieldhouse are flashed across the TV screens of the world. We'll have the canoeing and rowing events on the Red Cedar River. After this, no one will subject us to international ridicule.

Of course, we'll get Bert Parks to serve as master-of-ceremonies for the Free-World Olympics. If you think about it, you will see that perhaps he best represents the United States and its ideology. Moreover, he doesn't have any other pressing obligations, and Johnny Carson loves him. Would we want anyone but Parks as a symbol of America and its traditions.

We'll get Lash Larowe to serve as Parks' assistant.

President Carter gets The State News. I bet he reads it every morning right after The New York Times. Let's hope he's reading this, and that he acts quickly on the formation of a truthful and just Olympics.

Shift change was inconsiderate

Never have I seen one man, in so little time, cause so much pandemonium. I am a student who has been working for Custodial Services for three and one-half years. In that time I have worked with many people, learned the system and seen other managerial practices and procedures succeed and fail.

I can understand the intent behind the new changes you are implementing. The department has needed a major straightening up for some time. There are a select few who have not been earning their pay. I have seen some employees go for days without doing any work. However, the majority of the people put in a good night's work. Granted, some people can't do as good a job as others, but they try, and they are doing the best they can. After all, how many college graduates want to be custodians all their lives?

If you had concentrated your crackdown on those who are failing to do their jobs, the other employees would have supported your effort. Everyone knows who the "goof-offs" are. Some of them are even living legends!

However, disrupting an entire shift to get at a few has caused a great deal of discontent and dissension. Your choice of methods was unfortunate. It could have worked. Some people aren't going to change no matter what you try. Others are going to work less, just out of spite.

I wish you luck, because indications are that this shift change is going to be another failure. In fact, it already is — you have lost the respect of your employees. If they won't respect you and your orders, who will?

VIEWPOINT: AFGHANISTAN INVASION

Soviet invasion threatens peace

By JAMES A. HAMILTON

In a front page story in the Jan. 8 State News, MSU professor Robert M. Slusser predicted that the Russian invasion of Afghanistan signals the end of Leonid Brezhnev's reign as Soviet ruler. According to Slusser, a professor in the Russian studies program, "The Russian intervention in Afghanistan was an irresponsible mistake . . . The entire thing was a very bungled operation . . . Brezhnev is no longer credible as a detente leader . . . he will be out of power in a matter of months."

Certainly Brezhnev will be out of power within a few months. More to the point, he will be dead. But, not for the reasons stated by Slusser. Brezhnev is aging and feeble. He suffers from cancer, heart disease and the effects of two strokes. A bad head cold would finish him off. With Moscow's frigid February ahead, we do not require an accredited soothsayer and Slavis authority to predict his demise.

To satirize the foolishness of such astrologists, political scientists, and other entrail readers would require the gifted wit of Jonathan Swift's Bickerstaff Papers, and beyond my scope. However, there is a more sinister and dangerous kind of foolishness inherent in Slusser's comments that compels reply.

Slusser has missed the point of the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan. This is no "bungled operation." It is a highly co-ordinated military offense, to which the Soviets daily commit thousands of new troops in order to assure its success. And success seems certain. It will not be "The Russian Vietnam" as some commentators would have us believe. The Russians do not engage in less than well executed measures.

Unlike America in Vietnam, the Russians have the will to do the things necessary to assure victory. They immediately seized the capital of Kabul, the center of Afghan national resistance. They have merely to mop-up in order to absorb Afghanistan, either as a subservient satellite like Hungary or Czechoslovakia, or as a Soviet Republic such as Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Armenia, Georgia, Azerbaijan, Turkmenistan or the Ukraine.

For a scholar of Russian history, Slusser seems to be sadly ignorant of recent Russian history. The Russian intervention in Afghanistan is clearly not out of character, as the above examples indicate. Afghanistan wasn't a mistake, miscalculation, or aberration. It was, and is, Soviet policy.

The real point of the Afghan invasion is that detente is dead. If Americans believed that detente meant the Soviets would modify or abandon their national aims in order to please us, then it should be obvious by now that detente has never existed. It should have been obvious long ago, as the list of Soviet aggressions around the globe has gone on unabated despite the rosy rhetoric of reapproachment. The Soviets pursued detente as a means to their ends. The invasion of Afghanistan is merely another means.

Yet, some cherished faiths die hard, even in the face of sustained and overwhelming evidence that this is a false faith. This is especially true of the Soviet-accommodationist faith of some liberal college professors. When Slusser implies that Brezhnev will fall from power because "he has lost his credibility as a detente leader," Slusser is merely whistling in the dark. He assumes that there is a pro-detente constituency within the Soviet government with sufficient power to topple an uncooperative leadership.

If this faith had any substance, the Afghanistan invasion would have been a mere stillborn suggestion of some over-zealous KGB type, rather than Soviet policy. In an attempt to salvage the detente faith, Slusser has tried to separate Brezhnev from the actions and policies of the Soviet Union. But, Slusser is grasping at straws; no such distinction can be made. Russia is ruled by a tyranny. Man and state are synonymous.

Slusser calls the Soviet invasion "irresponsible." In an earlier age, an age that did not mine words, it would have been called treacherous or vicious. After all, even a murderer can be "responsible" for his act. It is quite another thing to expect nations to act on the basis of some understanding of justice and virtue in their relations.

The Russians can afford to act "irresponsibly" precisely because there is no one to force them to do otherwise or to punish them for violating international law. The very choice of the word "responsibility" underlies our current weakness, our inability to deal with violations of international law, our helplessness in the face of the crises that constantly besiege us.

Our current weakness is the consequence of policies promulgated by Slusser and many of his fellows. These are policies of appeasement and self-abasement and insufficient readiness. America has been misled by her liberal intellectuals, who argued that America should not be "the policeman for the world." But without a decent cop on the beat, the world now abounds with vice.

The liberal humanistic rhetoric of America's academic community disguises a lethal substance, one that they push naively and which we, for the most part, have swallowed innocently. Nevertheless, the effect will be terminal unless we demand an awakening to reality. It is time that we begin re-educating our educators. I suggest that the State News send one copy of The Gulag Archipelago to our professor of Russian history.

Carter to speak on Mideast

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's State of the Union speech next week will deal almost entirely with Afghanistan and the continuing crisis in Iran, the president's press secretary said Thursday.

White House spokesperson Jody Powell said the Wednesday speech to Congress and the nation will present "the implications of these crises for American policy at home and abroad."

Carter has been known to be working since at least last week on a report on the overall problems the United States is facing in Southwest Asia and in its long-range relations with the Soviet Union.

Powell said at a White House briefing for reporters that the main points Carter will develop in the State of the Union address are that the U.S. response and Carter's approach "to the situation are pretty well in hand."

"The president will devote the major portion of the State of the Union address to the threat to international peace and security created by the invasion of Afghanistan and to the continuing crisis in Iran," the spokesperson said.

In previous years this annual address has dealt with both foreign and domestic policy. In addition to his speech Wednesday night, Carter will make public on Monday a longer written message dealing in more detail with the issues facing the nation.

Three killed in Ireland bomb

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — A bomb blast tore through one car of a commuter train as it rolled through the Belfast suburbs at the Thursday evening rush hour. Police said three persons were killed and at least 14 others were badly injured.

Official sources said two of the dead were believed to be IRA men transporting the device to Belfast.

Bombs were found on two other trains before they could explode.

The explosion shattered the middle car of the three-car train carrying mostly office workers from Lisburn, 10 miles south of Belfast, to their homes in the capital.

The blast, which occurred four miles from Belfast, started a fire and sent terrified passengers, some burned and blackened, jumping to the tracks and scrambling up embankments.

A second bomb was spotted on another train and carried to the platform at Greenisland, north of Belfast, where it exploded. First reports said there were no injuries.

Police said a third bomb was found on a train halted in Belfast's York Road station and taken to the platform. It did not go off.

Brown not writing off Iowa

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. declared Thursday he is not writing off Iowa and vowed that he is in the Democratic presidential race to stay, even "if I have to hitchhike and finance it out of my own pocket."

Apparently stung by reports indicating he was about to withdraw from competition in Monday night's Iowa precinct caucuses, Brown said he was only changing campaign strategy in the farm-belt state.

On his arrival at Los Angeles International Airport, the governor confirmed he was urging his supporters to vote "uncommitted" at the caucuses, the first step in the selection of delegates to the Democratic National Convention this summer.

Brown also assailed President Carter for refusing to participate in the debate that had been scheduled for Jan. 7 by The Des Moines Register & Tribune. Brown, Carter and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy were to appear in the debate, which was canceled when Carter withdrew.

Egg throwers plead innocent

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Three people accused of throwing eggs at Sen. Edward M. Kennedy D-Massachusetts outside a Newark club pleaded innocent Thursday to assault charges.

Municipal Court Judge Betty Lester ordered the man and two women, said to be sympathizers of the Communist Workers Party, to report for trial Feb. 1.

She said they could be released after posting $1,000 secured bond or $250 in cash.

They were identified as Louise Sinesio, 25, and Fay Chiang, 24, both of Jersey City, and Alexander T. Young, 30, of New York City.

The three were arrested Wednesday night amid an egg-throwing protest aimed at Kennedy, who came to Newark to attend a private, $1,000-per-person cocktail reception at the Essex Club.

In addition to assault, they also were charged with resisting arrest and creating a disturbance.

Khomeini associate at Mayo

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — An Iranian described as a close associate of Iranian ruler Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini has left the Mayo Clinic after four months of treatment for bullet wounds, the Rochester Post-Bulletin and NBC News reported Thursday.

Sheikh-ul-Islam Hujat Al-Islam Razi Shirazi, who was shot in the thigh, wrist and arm in an assassination attempt last July, left Rochester last week for an undisclosed destination in Texas, possibly in Dallas or Houston, the newspaper said in a copyright story. NBC and the newspaper said Shirazi was admitted to the United States in September under the same type of visa issued to the deposed shah of Iran — a humanitarian visa for health reasons.

The shah's later arrival in New York precipitated the seizing of hostages still being held in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

A Mayo Clinic spokesperson declined to comment Thursday on Shirazi, saying simply, "There is no one by that name registered at the clinic."

U.S. studying Olympic site move

By MICHAEL PUTZEL

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The Carter administration is considering trying to set up rival Olympic Games in some city other than Moscow, hopefully in a Third World country, White House sources said Thursday.

The sources, who asked not to be identified, said it's not clear who would attend at a site not sanctioned by the International Olympic Committee.

But they said the proposal is among several options being studied by White House and State Department officials considering ways to punish the Soviets for their military intervention in Afghanistan.

One official acknowledged that U.S. withdrawal from the Moscow games or a move to establish an opposing international competition could jeopardize the 1984 Games, scheduled to be held in Los Angeles.

It has not been decided, another source said, whether the United States would want a rival Olympics to be held at the same time as those in Moscow or at another date to permit athletes to participate in both.

But this official said Christopher did not ask allies to boycott the Games and that in each country "there is a strong body of opinion that believes in the Olympics."

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher declared her government's support Thursday for moving the Olympic Games from Moscow. A boycott has found sympathy, but little official favor, among other NATO allies.

Canadian Prime Minister Joe

Clark was the first Western leader to call publicly for moving the Games from the Soviet capital.

Sources said White House counsel Lloyd Cutler has told the president the administration has no legal authority to order its team not to participate in the Soviet Union this summer because, although the team plays under the national banner, it is organized by the private U.S. Olympic Committee and is not under government control. U.S. members of the international committee also have been cool toward a boycott.

THE ADMINISTRATION nonetheless has been actively seeking public support for a possible boycott and could put considerable pressure on the committee to stay home or send the team to an alternate site.

Any such action would require the support of a majority of the 86 voting members of the U.S. Olympic Committee's executive board, which meets Jan. 25 in Colorado Springs, Colo.

The options now under consideration at the White House, sources said, include a simple refusal to participate in the games if they are held in Moscow, an active effort to persuade the International Olympic Committee to move the event to another city, which some committee officials already have said is impossible at this late date, or an effort to organize a rival round of games.

Having a Third World nation act as host for the Games rather than the United States or one of its military allies could give the rival games more drawing power among non-aligned nations, the source said.

State Department sources said earlier in the week that it would take strong Third World support to make a boycott or a change in the site of the Games successful.

Meanwhile, presidential press secretary Jody Powell said the United States is not considering any action to prevent the Soviet Olympic team from participating in the Winter Olympics scheduled to begin in Lake Placid, N.Y., on Feb. 13.

on 90-day duty.

The Pentagon sources said there are indications the Soviet command is in the process of bringing regular replacements from European Russia and elsewhere to relieve reservists in Afghanistan. The Russian regulars, in turn, probably are being replaced in their former units by reservists, the sources said.

In another development Thursday Pentagon sources in Washington, said the Soviet command is starting to send regular army soldiers to replace reservists who made up a significant part of the force that went into Afghanistan last month. The sources, who declined to be identified, said the Soviet divisions moved into Afghanistan last month included a number of reservists the past 20 months. Western diplomats in the capital said a lull in the fighting was continuing Thursday, but told of fighting last week in which the rebels first captured, then lost a town near the Soviet border.

Loud explosions heard in Kabul on Thursday were described by travelers arriving in India as excavation blasts in hills near the city. However, Gen. Mohammed Zia ul-Haq, president of Pakistan, quoted "many reliable sources" as saying shots were exchanged at a fort on the southern outskirts of Kabul. He said the gunfire apparently was between Afghan army troops and Soviet troops.

Usually reliable sources in Kabul reported that the rebels a week ago seized the town of Talqan, capital of Takhar Province in northeastern Afghanistan.

The rebels burned down a military garrison, killed the chief of police, the town governor and the province's chief accountant, but there were unconfirmed reports Afghan government troops subsequently recaptured the town, the sources said. They gave no details of the fighting there.

Thursday's State News incorrectly identified a robbery suspect arrested by Lansing police as Harry Dexter. The correct name is Harvey Dexter.

INTERFERED IN INTERNAL AFFAIRS

Afghanistan expels American journalists

KABUL, Afghanistan — The Soviet-backed government ordered American journalists out of Afghanistan Thursday, accusing them of biased reporting and "interference in the country's internal affairs."

The expulsion order, relayed through the U.S. Embassy here, goes into effect Friday. It came three days after Iran ordered American journalists from that country. The Iranian order also is effective Friday.

In Moscow, the Soviet news agency Tass quoted an Afghan Revolutionary Council decree as saying "phony" American correspondents were "practicing in fabrications and insinuations, one being more absurd than the other. Their aim is to step up tension in our country, disrupt the normal life of the Afghans."

"We cannot but qualify the activities of the above-mentioned journalists as flagrant interference in the affairs of the sovereign state of Afghanistan. That is why the Revolutionary Council has taken a decision to expel the American journalists from Afghanistan," Tass quoted the decree as saying.

The Americans refused, and summoned U.S. Embassy officials who then met with the officers at the hotel and said afterward there had been "a misunderstanding" that would be cleared up Thursday.

A scuffle began when one of the officers tried to shield his face from television cameras. An overzealous young Afghan tried to help by tossing a blanket over the officer, who had to punch his way free and had his cap knocked off.

The Moslems have declared holy war against the succession of three Marxist governments who have ruled the country for the past 20 months. Western diplomats in the capital said a lull in the fighting was continuing Thursday, but told of fighting last week in which the rebels first captured, then lost a town near the Soviet border.

Loud explosions heard in Kabul on Thursday were described by travelers arriving in India as excavation blasts in hills near the city. However, Gen. Mohammed Zia ul-Haq, president of Pakistan, quoted "many reliable sources" as saying shots were exchanged at a fort on the southern outskirts of Kabul. He said the gunfire apparently was between Afghan army troops and Soviet troops.

Usually reliable sources in Kabul reported that the rebels a week ago seized the town of Talqan, capital of Takhar Province in northeastern Afghanistan.

The rebels burned down a military garrison, killed the chief of police, the town governor and the province's chief accountant, but there were unconfirmed reports Afghan government troops subsequently recaptured the town, the sources said. They gave no details of the fighting there.

In another development Thursday Pentagon sources in Washington, said the Soviet command is starting to send regular army soldiers to replace reservists who made up a significant part of the force that went into Afghanistan last month. The sources, who declined to be identified, said the Soviet divisions moved into Afghanistan last month included a number of reservists

Almost all of the 50 or 60 American journalists now in Kabul, the Afghan capital, arrived in the past three weeks — after the Soviet Union sent up to 100,000 troops into Afghanistan to try to put down a rebellion by Moslem Afghan insurgents.

Afghan army officers went to the Intercontinental Hotel on Wednesday night and demanded the American correspondents return their passports.

The Americans refused, and summoned U.S. Embassy officials who then met with the officers at the hotel and said afterward there had been "a misunderstanding" that would be cleared up Thursday.

A scuffle began when one of the officers tried to shield his face from television cameras. An overzealous young Afghan tried to help by tossing a blanket over the officer, who had to punch his way free and had his cap knocked off.

THE ROMANTICS

A return to rock innocence

By BILL HOLDSHIP
State News Reviewer

A lot of rock fans — especially those in mid-Michigan — have anxiously been awaiting the release of the Romantics' debut LP entitled, appropriately enough, The Romantics (Nemperor NUZ 36273). The State News first ran an article on the band during the summer of 1978, but many rockers had already heard the Romantics' first independent single, "Little White Lies," many months before.

In fact, the Romantics were the first Michigan new wave band to gain recognition and become "local favorites" through little else than word-of-mouth. (In turn, they are the first Michigan rock 'n' roll band to sign with a major label since the Midwest onslaught of the late '60s.) Ironically, the Romantics first gained recognition during a period when all music with a return to the basic spirit of rock 'n' roll was commonly referred to as "punk rock."

As a result, the Romantics — all four members are natives of Detroit's "notorious" east side — were often called Michigan's

The Romantics — Jimmy Marinos, Wally Palmar, Rich Cole and Mike Skill.

Trick, Joe Jackson, the Ramones and the Police.

Of course, they were house favorites at Bookie's in Detroit, the band, expressing regret that he had passed up the Cars and Cheap Trick and didn't want to make the same mistake three times in a row. Peter Solley (the Sports, Wreckless Eric) was called in to produce, and the tracks for the debut LP were laid down in about 21 days at Coconut Studio in Miami Beach, Fla.

The Romantics is a very good — almost great — rock 'n' roll record, although it is a little disappointing. That may seem like a contradiction of terms, but everything about the LP is perfect except the mixing and production. Solley has given the Romantics too much of a treble/tinny sound, and the band's incredible hard-edge has been toned down as a result. It's a real shame because one can only imagine what a phenomenal pop producer like Nick Lowe or Dave Edmunds could have done with this great band.

This isn't to say that The Romantics isn't worth hearing or even owning. It's just that the LP doesn't fully illustrate what the Romantics are capable of onstage, and East Lansing can expect A LOT MORE when the band comes to Dooley's this Monday night. But despite the poor production, the other main ingredients are still visible. The tight, melodic pop and the "teen dream" romantic lyrics make the Knack's wimpy sexual fascism pale in comparison. And anyone who still believes you can't dance to rock hasn't heard the power of songs like "Little White Lies," "What I Like About You" (the single) and "Gimme One More Chance." This is the same type of music bands like the Dave Clark Five and the Hollies gave us in the mid-'60s before cynicism took control of rock 'n' roll's soul.

In a recent phone interview, Jimmy Marinos — the Romantics' drummer — said that the band is "basically satisfied" with the album, although they do feel there were "a few technical things that could have been done a little better." However, Marinos added that the trade magazine reviews have been favorable, and that The Romantics is on close to 100 radio playlists, including several in New York City, Chicago and Miami.

Marinos mentioned that the band is leaving on a three-to-four month tour of the East (continued on page 7)

"We've got roots and influences from just growing up in the '60s and listening to the radio. It's still basic three to four chord rock, but I think we're tackling it with more vengeance and more of an '80s feel."

best "punk" band, even though they have been playing the same British Invasion-flavored power pop since the band's origin in February 1977. At a time when Beatlesque power pop seems to be the dominant force in most new commercial American rock, one can only wonder why it took perhaps the first band to revive the style so long to produce a commercial release.

It's not that the Romantics weren't ready for success. Fame has seemed inevitable ever since the band played its third (!) gig, opening for Steve Miller, Peter Frampton and J. Geils in front of 80,000 people at the Silverdome. The band spent the next two years extensively touring the club circuit, in addition to opening shows for such headlining acts as the Cars, Rockpile, Cheap but the Romantics' reputation grew stronger with rave reviews for their performances at Toronto's El Macombo and such New York clubs as Max's Kansas City and Hurrah. The latter gig led the New York Rocker journal to ask the musical question: "Will the Romantics be the first to bring true power pop to the American masses?" (East Lansing got its first taste of the Romantics when the band performed at Coral Gables last November.)

The band recorded a second single — "Tell It To Carrie" — for Bomp Records, Greg Shaw's California-based new wave label. Soon thereafter, Nat Weiss — president of the CBS-affiliated Nemperor label — signed

THIS WEEKEND

Superbowl weekend, right? I'll take the Steelers by 30 points — no, that's too conservative. Forty or 50 should do it. Now if you don't like football, there are alternatives albeit some are unfortunately sold-out.

MUSIC DEPT. Ah, le beaux arts! Ah, musique! Ah, pretentione! It's a fine arts weekend, that's for sure. On Friday, it's the prestigious Juilliard String Quartet, which will perform at 8:15 p.m. in Fairchild Theater. It's sold-out, but that's hardly a surprise for the world's finest quartet. On Saturday, the Beaumont String Quartet, featuring MSU music department faculty, will perform the premiere of James Niblock's Quintet for String Quartet and Seven Tempered Piano with pianist Ralph Votapek. The piano is returned around the seven white notes. You can also hear Mozart's Quartet in D minor (K 417 b), and Schumann's Quartet in F Major (Opus 41, No. 2). It's in the Kellogg Center Auditorium at 3 p.m. Tickets are at the MSU Student Union box office: $3.50 for adults, $1 for students. ATTENTION: Here's the new music department events hotline, 355-3345!

THEATRE DEPT. Two plays for your enjoyment this weekend. One is Arena Theatre's suspenseful Dial M for Murder, just Friday and Saturday at 8:15 p.m. and a 2:15 p.m. Saturday matinee — BUT, it's sold out. So why not see Arts Encounter Theatre Group's production of Neil Simon's The Good Doctor at the Center for the Arts (the BoarsHead Theatre) tonight, Saturday, and Sunday at 8 p.m. Admission is $3, or just $2 if you're a student. It really is a fun time.

MOVIES DEPT. The Christmas distribution slump is over as new films begin to come to town. One that should draw attention is super-filmmaker Stanley Kramer's The Runner Stumbles, with Dick Van Dyke and Kathleen Quinlan as a priest and a nun who fall in love, another Kramer "values" film. It's based on a first play written by a Detroit playwright. It opens at the Meridian 8 tonight. Also coming to the Meridian is the Lansing return of Apocalypse Now.

On campus, RHA presents the Cannes-winning flagwaving unions-against-the-ignorant Norma Rae with an excellent Sally Field, the animation spectacular Wizards, and the fun-and-filthy Slap Shot with Paul Newman and a lot of hockey violence. For times and places call 355-0313.

Classic Films presents Andy Warhol's Trash, which from a moral standard lives up to its name. It's about low-life in New York City, and it's X-rated. (At 7:30 and 9:30 tonight in 109 Anthony.) On the other end of the film spectrum is Jean-Luc Godard's Weekend, a socio-political message-comedy about a self-destructive society. Truly a classic. (Saturday 7:30 and 9:30 p.m. in 109 Anthony; Sunday at 8 p.m. in 336 Union). All Classic Films are $1 with RHA pass, $1.50 otherwise.

Our friends at Beal Cinema have provided a sophisticated array of entertainment. Deep Throat and The Devil in Miss Jones alternate Friday and Saturday in B-106 Wells (Throat at 7 and 9:30 p.m. and midnight; Jones is at 8:15 and 10:45). Admission is $3.50, $2.50 for students. STOOOOOOOOGES!!!! Two full length features The Three Stooges in Orbit and The Three Stooges Go Around the World provide Stooze fans with a full THREE HOURS of stoozes!! This Stooze-athon is just $1.50 in B-104 Wells (Orbit at 7 and 10:15 p.m.; World at 8:35 and 11:40 p.m.).

Other attractions around here are Frontline Cinema's Saturday showing of The Temptation of Power, about pre-Khomeini Iran. It's long. From 12:30 to 6 p.m. It'll be shown at the Central United Methodist Church, at Ottawa and Capitol streets in Lansing. The Latin American Studies Film Series presents The Given Word at 8 p.m. in B-102 Wells for $1.50 admission with RHA pass.

KRESGE AND ABRAMS DEPT. Kresge Art Gallery continues its exhibition of Carl Toth's photos and Kreimark art protis tapestries. Hours today are from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., and from 1 to 4 p.m. over the weekend.

Meanwhile, Abrams Planetarium is playing The Universe Game, a humorous (yes, Abrams attempts their first funny show) program designed to allay all those fears and misconceptions about astronomy. Times are Friday and Saturday at 8 and 10 p.m. and Sunday at 4 p.m. Admission is $1.50, $1 for us students, and 50 cents for kids 12 and under.

Duke Tumatote: an East Lansing R&B institution

By J. WAZZ

Duke Tumatote gave the crowds at Lizard's Underground everything they wanted and more last weekend. About 700 rowdy people got to see their rhythm and blues idol from the south side of Chicago Friday and Saturday nights, while many more were left waiting in line.

"We never have lines that go all the way up the stairs and out the door except when the Duke comes to town," said Tom Beaveis, a Lizard's employee. "He draws a certain kind of crowd. They're a hard-livin', hard-lovin', and hard-drinkin' bunch."

Duke reflected the crowd's enthusiasm — on stage — as he wailed on his custom-made, pearl-inlaid, Gibson guitar and excited them with his booming vocals and relentless energy.

Off stage, a sincere, modest and much calmer Duke talked about his music and his life.

Duke's band, the All Star Frogs, which consists of L.V. Hammond on base, James Mitchell on keyboards and Robin Steele on drums, has been together for 10 years. The band tours 16 states, playing mostly clubs. Duke said the only thing he really doesn't like about touring is that he has to leave his wife and 7-month-old daughter.

The 32-year-old William (alias Duke) Tumatote Jr. began his musical career playing drums in his early teens. By the time he was 17, he had taken up the guitar.

Although he's never tried to purposely imitate anyone, as a kid he looked up to blues artists Muddy Waters and Mose Allison. He was also influenced by Albert King, B.B. King and several old Motown artists.

When asked to describe his music, Duke laughed and answered "It's good. Actually, it's rhythm and blues with some rock flavoring and contemporary overtones in it."

Duke and the All Star Frogs have recorded two albums. Their first, Red Pepper Hot, was recorded in 1976. Their latest, entitled Naughty Child, will be released in a couple months. Neither album is available right now, because their recording company is being bought out by a new label. Both albums, however, should be in the record stores within two months.

The Duke said his fans can look forward to the new album being a lot more spontaneous than the first. "It's real alive," Duke commented.

Duke tries to project a happy, positive spirit in his music.

"Some people get to do what they want to do, and other people don't. We do, so as a show of gratitude we want people to enjoy it. It isn't meant to have any heavy political or social overtones to it. And if there is, it's only by innuendo. If I can slip something in that's not malicious, I'll do it. We just like to play around with everything."

When asked how he accounts for the wildness that he inspires in the crowds, Duke admitted, "I don't know what it is. If I knew, I'd bottle it. All I know is that we enjoy playing. We want the audience to have fun and we're having fun ourselves, so we say either get into the spirit of it or go home."

He went on to say that

Duke Tumatote

Friday night's crowd was kind of scary. "They were more out of control than I was. I had to stop and explain that if everyone is standing on tables and chairs and someone gets hurt, I'm going to feel real bad."

A part of his regular touring circuit, Duke has been playing at Lizard's, 224 Abbott Road, for almost four years. He said he really enjoys performing in East Lansing.

"It's a nice feeling to know the people like you and look forward to seeing you and it's exhilarating to have them be so anxious to participate."

The only qualms he has about playing at Lizard's, Duke said, is its size — he hates to see people waiting in line.

"Our music is designed to make people forget about what's bugging them and standing in line for 40 minutes is not my idea of a good time."

Commenting on some of the newest musical directions, such as new wave, Duke stressed that it's not what people play but how they play it that's important.

"Any kind of music is legitimate as long as the musicians are really into it," he concluded.

Michigan's Romantics return to rock 'n roll innocence

Coast and Southwest immediately following the Dooley's date. The tour will consist of mostly headlining dates in clubs and small auditoriums.

"It's going to be a little different on the road this time around due to the album," said Marinos. "I still can't imagine actual fans who know our songs coming to see us."

The band plans to record a second album in the spring or early summer. The album will be followed with another short American tour before the Romantics embark on their first European visit.

Marinos added that the Romantics have been labeled everything from "punk rock" to "power pop" during their brief time together, but he feels that labels are rather meaningless in the end.

"You could take our songs and strum them on an acoustic guitar, and people would probably call us folk-rock," he said.

"I'm cautious of labels and comparisons. People are always comparing us to bands like the Kinks (whose "She's Got Everything" the Romantics cover on the LP) and other '60s British bands. Of course, we've got those roots and influences from just growing up in the '60s and listening to the radio. It's still basic three to four chord rock, but I think we're tackling it with more vengeance and more of an '80s feel."

Marinos last statement is a fact. Although power pop appears to be the general trend of the times, the Romantics' brand is so original that it's really difficult to make accurate comparisons. My friend, John Neilson, probably came closest when he remarked — after hearing the LP for the first time — that "they sound like the Clash playing power pop." Well, it's not exactly the Clash — but I can guarantee that this is the toughest power pop you've probably ever heard.

Rock fans of all kinds would be well-advised to check out the Romantics at Dooley's Monday night. It's only a matter of time before these guys are BIG. Doors open at 9:30 p.m. Advance tickets are available for $5.50 at Dooley's and the Disc Shop.

The Union Cafeteria...

Very few students are aware that the Union Bldg. has a Cafeteria in the lower level of the building.

There are so few places left that serve such a wide variety of home-style cooking that we thought you might want to know about us. We have many choices of vegetables at every meal — everything from fried eggplant, turnips, and baked acorn squash, to the all-time favorites such as green beans, corn and spinach. We have just as wide of variety in our entree selection. Two types of fish at every meal & casseroles, quiche, souffle moussaka and lots of other delicious unique items. Our salad counter features homemade dressings, assorted sandwiches, fruited jello molds and all types of fruit and vegetable salads. Of course we have chef salads for all of those people dieting. Many homemade desserts are made every morning by our baker, Mary Lou.

Come into the Union Cafeteria someday and give us a try. The second best thing about us is the waiting — there isn't any.

You'll be eating five minutes after you walk in (if you can make up your mind what you want). And the best thing about us is our prices! Where else can you go and get a full home-style meal for less than three dollars? Nowhere but here!

Smith layup does it for Spartans, 62-61

By ADAM TEICHER
State News Sports Writer

Jenison Fieldhouse has seen hundreds of basketball games in its 40-year existence, but probably has not witnessed anything like Thursday's MSU-University of Wisconsin encounter.

In what has become a typical MSU finish, the outcome was in doubt until the final buzzer. This time, though, it was the Spartans who were victorious.

With the Spartans down by one with six seconds remaining, Jay Vincent fed Kevin Smith for a lay-in to give MSU a 62-61 win over the Badgers, its first Big Ten victory and a measure of revenge. Remember if you will that Wisconsin bumped off the Spartans 83-81 in the regular season finale a year ago when guard Wes Matthews hit a 60-foot shot at the final buzzer.

Things looked grim for MSU with just 18 seconds remaining when Wisconsin's Joe Chnelich hit one of two free throws to put the Badgers in the lead 61-58.

With six seconds to go Terry Donnelly hit a five-foot jumper to slice the lead to one. But Wisconsin still had the ball.

Wisconsin guard Dan Hastings in-bounded the ball underneath the basket following Donnelly's bucket.

Badger coach Bill Cofield described the play. "Claude (Gregory) and Wes (Matthews) bumped into each other and threw our timing off." Hastings threw the ball out of bounds setting up the Vincent to Smith connection and the two points.

Wisconsin still had time to get off a final shot but a desperation full court pass was picked off by Smith and the Jenison floor was mobbed.

"A piece of cake," cracked Spartan coach Jud Heathcote, who has seen his team lose three of its first four Big Ten games in the final minute. The Spartans are now 1-4 in the conference, Wisconsin 2-3. "A break finally went our way," the coach added, more seriously.

The Badgers, who trailed 34-30 at halftime, shot only 38 percent from the floor in the game, but had 20 more attempts from the charity line and made good on 17 of their 23 shots as opposed to just 2 of 3 on the night for MSU.

Matthews, a slick performer, had 27 to lead all scorers. Vincent was once again MSU's top scorer with 24. Smith had only six on the night, but the sophomore guard from Birmingham had the biggest two.

Heathcote said MSU's strategy on Wisconsin's final desperation attempt "was to kill ourselves if they made the basket."

The way things were going before Thursday night, don't be sure he wasn't serious.

Mike Brkovich goes in for a layup in MSU's first Big Ten win of the season Thursday night.

Rogers leaves, for sure

By ADAM TEICHER
State News Sports Writer

As has been expected for some time now, Darryl Rogers resigned Thursday night as the MSU football coach to take the similar position at Arizona State University.

Rogers joins former MSU athletic director Joe Kearney, who resigned Tuesday to take an identical position at the Tempe, Ariz., campus.

Rogers, who in his four years at MSU compiled a 24-18-2 record, was in Tempe Thursday meeting with school officials. He was unavailable for comment, but the school has called for a press conference at 10 a.m. Arizona time Friday in the football stadium to introduce Rogers to the press.

Attention now turns to the selection of a new athletic director and a new football coach for MSU. Rumors have focused on the possibility of Dick Tamburo, an MSU football player from 1950 through 1952.

TAMBURO IS THE athletic director at Texas Tech University in Lubbock, Texas, where he was hired by current MSU President Cecil Mackey when Mackey was the president of Texas Tech.

A source in the Texas Tech athletic department said that he talked with Tamburo Thursday morning. The source was told by Tamburo that the last time Tamburo had talked with Mackey was in August, the day before Mackey left for MSU.

Tamburo also said the last time he had talked with anyone connected with MSU was in September, when he just wanted to check budget figures.

The Texas Tech football coach, Rex Dockery, also may be headed to MSU. Dockery is a favorite of Mackey, who selected him two years ago to head the Red Raider football program over the protests of the former Texas Tech athletic director, J.T. King.

Dockery was selected the Southwest Conference's coach of the year in 1978 after seeing his team go 7-4. The Red Raiders fell to 4-6-1 in 1979.

Other names mentioned as possible candidates for the coaching vacancy include two Pittsburgh Steeler assistant coaches, Roland Dotsch and George Perles. Both played for MSU during the 1950s.

A third name mentioned in connection with the coaching job is another former MSU player, Earl Morrall.

Icers host Michigan Tech

MSU hockey coach Ron Mason can reach a milestone in his career this weekend should the Spartans ices take both games in their series with the Michigan Tech Huskies.

Mason is two wins away from the coveted 300-mark in his coaching career, which began 13 years ago at Lake Superior State College.

But the Huskies will be tough to beat, even though the series will be staged at Munn Ice Arena, and the Spartans know it.

The series begins at 8 tonight and will continue Saturday with a 2 p.m. contest.

"TECH IS A very pressurized team," Mason said. "They're physical, they force errors, and they can dominate you in your own zone."

"We'll be trying to capitalize on their overaggressiveness, and if we can, we'll be winners." Mason also said that if home ice means anything at all, "we'll play very well."

Michigan Tech is 13-8-1 overall this season and 7-6-1 in Western Collegiate Hockey Association play, good for fifth place.

The Huskies are led by sophomore center Rick Boehm's 10 goals and 23 assists for 33 points.

OTHER MICHIGAN TECH players to watch this weekend will be freshmen forwards Mike

Lauen and Steve Murphy, and junior defenseman John Haddad. Lauen has clicked for 15 goals (continued on page 9)

Grapplers on road to face Wildcats

By JIM MITZELFELD
State News Sports Writer

The MSU wrestling team will travel to Northwestern University Saturday to try and beat the Big Ten's most improved wrestling squad.

The Wildcats finished ninth at the Big Ten meet last year but this year they boast a 5-2 record.

They surprised everyone earlier this year with a 22-20 upset over UCLA on the Bruins' own mat. And the Wildcats were only beaten by nationally-ranked California State University at Bakersfield by two points.

"They are supposed to be the surprise team of the league," said Spartan coach Grady Peninger.

The Wildcats lost their second meet of the season last Saturday to the University of Michigan by a lopsided score and Peninger called the loss a "real shocker."

NORTHWESTERN WILL BE led into battle by heavyweight Mike Weitzman. Weitzman is ranked as the No. 5 heavyweight in the nation.

MSU's Shawn Whitcomb defeated him in the Big Ten tournament last year, but is a doubtful starter because of a recurring back problem.

If Whitcomb, who is undefeated in dual meets, doesn't wrestle against the Wildcats, junior Dan Dudley (4-1) will take his place.

"Dudley would have to be considered a heavy underdog in that one right now," Peninger said.

The rest of the Spartan lineup will be exactly the same one Peninger used in upsetting Penn State University Monday night.

ALONG WITH WEITZMAN Northwestern has several other strong wrestlers with whom the Spartans will have to contend.

The Spartan's Harrell Milhouse will wrestle Dan Scotten at 118 pounds. Peninger said Milhouse would have to be a slight favorite on paper.

Peninger termed the 134-pound battle between MSU's Jeff Thomas (5-2) and Northwestern's Rich Wilhelm (8-5) a "toss-up."

Jeff Therian shouldn't have too much trouble with Northwestern's Don Pryor (11-6).

BUT PENINGER FELT it would be the upper weight divisions where the Spartans would get their best test, especially with Whitcomb listed as a doubtful.

The Wildcats 190-pounder Craig Jennings (7-3) is expected to have little trouble with MSU freshman Scott Shepard who has had to wrestle over his weight class since the Spartans lost Mark Severn for the year.

"They have some good kids," said Peninger. "We're kind of mismatched in the upper weights. Both Shepard and Steve Foley are wrestling above their weights."

Peninger feels the loss of 177-pound specialist Jim Ellis has been a real burden on the Spartans.

"We're working to get Ellis back in the lineup, but there is no telling when he'll be back," Peninger said.

The Spartans hottest wrestler right now is 126-pounder Chuck Joseph, who according to Peninger, has been wrestling "unbelievably."

Tracksters meet midwest foes at invitational

By WILL KOWALSKI
State News Sports Writer

Coach Jim Bibbs of the MSU men's indoor track team still sees a couple of areas that need improvement on his squad, and with any luck at all those areas can be dealt with this weekend.

The Spartans travel to the Eastern Michigan University Invitational Saturday where they will face a number of Mid-American Conference schools, plus the University of Michigan.

Bibbs is hoping to improve in a few events, especially in the 600-yard dash and the long jump, two events in which MSU was swept by the University of Wisconsin in last week's 69.5 to 61.5 loss.

"With the work we've done in practice this week we're confident that Tyrone Williams and Rob Murphy will do better in the 600," Bibbs said.

"And in the long jump, Jerome Judd, James Pippins and Jamie 'Shoes' Huffman continue to show progress, so we're intending to make a good showing."

Bibbs feel that MSU's best performance will be in the relay races where the leader will be senior All-America Keith Moore. Moore won't compete in any individual events but is involved in a pair of relays.

First, he'll be in the distance medley relay with Calvin Thomas, Tim Kenny and Mike White, and then will perform with Kenny, White and Jeff Lewis in the two-mile relay.

The mile relay team consists of Gerald Kane, Tyrone Williams, Kenny and Thomas.

The Spartans' other All-America runner, Randy Smith, will compete in both his specialty, the 60-yard dash, and in the 300-yard dash.

Also adding back-up strength for Smith in the 60 will be Andrew Williams and Juan Muhammad.

In the high jump, Bibbs will send an all-freshman bunch into competition, led by Paul Piwinski who tied for first against Wisconsin last week by clearing the 7-foot, one-quarter-inch level. The others are John English, Darryl Dismond and Tom Elzinga. Triple jumpers will be Erwin Homann and Jerome Judd.

Individual events will sport Martin Schulist and Mark Mesler in the three-mile and Ted Unold in the mile run.

MSU pole vaulter Jim Stewart will be kept out of competition due to a pulled muscle he sustained while placed first in the Wisconsin contest. In his place will be Steve Friedrich.

There will be no team championships awarded at the invitational, only individual performances, and Bibbs believes that the Wolverines will give the Spartans their toughest match-ups.

The other Mid-America teams, aside from Eastern Michigan, include Western Michigan University, Central Michigan, the University of Toledo, and Kent State University.

COMPETE IN BUCKEYE INVITATIONAL

Women tracksters travel to Ohio

By JIM MITZELFELD
State News Sports Writer

With the distance runners as its strength, the MSU women's indoor track team will compete in the Lady Buckeye Invitational this weekend in Columbus, Ohio.

The 15-team invitational hosted by Ohio State University, will feature track powers Ohio State, Indiana University and the University of Pittsburgh, Penn State University, and the University of Kentucky.

Last year was the first year MSU entered the tournament, finishing in third place behind Ohio State and the University of Tennessee.

"We have a very good shot in the distance events," MSU coach Nell Jackson said in regards to her team's chances this year.

LISA BERRY WILL try to improve her fine effort of last weekend, when she competes at 3,000 meters along with Spartan Cynthia Wadsworth.

Jackson predicted Spartan Kelly Spatz would finish in the top three in the 1,500-meters. Sue Richardson, who ran her best time ever in the two-mile last weekend, should also finish high in the 1,500.

Spartan runner Pam Sedwick, who finished second in the 800 meters last year at the Lady Buckeye, will be trying to win that event this time around. Sedwick's time in MSU's opening victory was very close to last year's winning mark, according to coach Jackson.

While Jackson is leary of Ohio State and Indiana, Buckeye coach Mamie Rollins fears MSU.

"If we have problems with any team at this meet, I expect it to be MSU," she said.

The Spartans are coming off an opening season win over the University of Michigan and Western Ontario University last weekend.

MSU will unleash a new member of the team Friday and Saturday in Barbara Douglass. Douglass is a transfer student from the University of Texas and will run in the 800-meter.

"She's close to Pam (Sedwick) in the 800-meters and she's also a good miler," Jackson said.

Freshman sprinter Judy Brown will compete in the 400-meters and mile relay.

"I think Judy may surprise some people," Jackson said. "There's a very strong possibility she'll finish close to the top of the pack in the 400."

and 10 assists this year for 25 points, while Murphy has seven goals and 16 assists for 23 points.

The 6-foot, 190-pound Haddad has three goals and 13 assists for 16 points, adding scoring punch to a defensive corps which is anchored by sophomore Jeff Johnston.

Tech has used three goals in its games this year, but the two it will probably use this weekend are sophomore Darcy Way and junior Frank Kriebler. Way is 4-0 this season with a 3.25 goals-against average, while Kriebler's record stands at 5-5-1 with an average of 4.33 goals per game.

MASON WILL NOT be the only coach in Munn Ice Arena who can achieve a milestone this weekend, because two wins for the Huskies gives 24-year veteran John MacInnes 500 victories in his career.

"I respect John as one of the top coaches in the country," Mason said, "but I'd hate to give him his 500th win. I don't respect him that much."

Mason is a bit wary of the fact that so little time separates the two games, and noted that depth of his team may enter into having to play two games in such a short period of time.

Calculators are helping solve Olympic scoring problems.

Get a problem solver that's solving problems in the real world.

The more your courses approach the problems of the real world, the more you need a calculator that's already there.

These two programmable calculators from Texas Instruments can take you from your engineering courses right into the ranks of professionals like the ones who created the complex programs to simplify and speed up scoring at the Winter Olympics.

The TI Programmable 58C lets you spend your time learning concepts instead of working problems. $130*.

Perhaps your current calculator can solve advanced engineering problems, but you'll probably spend a lot of time doing it. With the TI-58C's 480 program steps or up to 60 memories, plus 170 keyboard functions and operations, you'll be amazed at just how much of the work the TI-58C will do for you.

The TI-58C has a Constant Memory feature that lets you lock a program in the machine — even when it's turned off. You can program the calculator as you learn in class and use it later to review the concept and work the problems. You can store results or data in the calculator, even if you turn it off, for later use.

The TI-58C will seem like more than a calculator — its computer-like capabilities let you design your own programs or use Texas Instruments' unique plug-in Solid State Software™ modules with ready-to-use programs. A Master Library module (included with the calculator) has 25 basic programs in math, statistics, and other areas of general interest. Twelve optional library modules include programs on applied statistics, advanced mathematical routines, electrical engineering, business decisions, and much more.

With all of its capabilities and functions the TI-58C is simple to operate using TI's AOS™ algebraic operating system. The AOS entry system lets you enter problems the way they are written — from left to right — and handles up to 9 levels of parentheses in accordance with the rules of algebraic hierarchy.

With the TI-58C you'll also get a copy of Personal Programming, an owner's manual that'll help get you started in programming — even if you've never programmed before.

The TI Programmable 59 goes from engineering to the Winter Olympics. $300*.

The reason the Winter Olympics chose the TI-59 for verifying scoring results at many events is the same reason it can help you get all you can from your courses — versatility.

Up to 960 program steps or up to 100 memories plus 4 types of display testing, 10 user flags, 72 labels, and 6 levels of subroutines let the power of programming help you make short work of complex problems.

Even with all the TI-58C's functions and operations at your command, the TI-59 responds to simple AOS algebraic entry system control. So the calculator becomes part of the solution — not part of the problem.

The TI-59 uses Texas Instruments Solid State Software modules and comes with the Master Library module. You also get the added versatility and capability of magnetic cards to record your own programs. With them you can also tie into programs on modules for extended programming routines.

You'll get a copy of Personal Programming with your new TI-59 that'll help you get all the power we put into it. And the book can start you programming even if you've never tried it before.

If you're starting on the way to a career in engineering get a calculator that'll help you get there. And get one that'll continue to serve you well on the job.

See the whole line of advanced Texas Instruments calculators at your college bookstore or at other TI dealers everywhere.

CAN HELP SOLVE PROBLEMS

Counseling centers help

By CINDI DUBEY

Problems. Everyone has them. Most people deal with them individually.

You might, however, want to deal with your problems in another way — through counseling.

Some 16,000 East Lansing residents, including students and community members, sought confidential help in 1979 through the Listening Ear, 547 1/2 E. Grand River Ave., and the MSU Counseling Center.

The numbers may seem large, but surprisingly, most of the problems were not. Instead, they were everyday crises that most people experience at some point in their lives.

Depression, stress, lack of motivation and boyfriend/girlfriend break-up constitute most of the problems the approximately 8,000 students bring to the MSU Counseling Center every year, said counselor Charles A. Bassos.

Bassos said that problems with romantic relationships are often traumatic, but common. Difficulties in relationships often result in problems dealing with separation, identity and the validity of love, he added.

Another major problem in any college community, and particularly in one of this size, is loneliness, said Wayne Berry, a counselor at the Listening Ear.

Social maladaptiveness, or inability to cope in a new environment, is also a frequently-encountered problem, said Joseph C. Ansfield, psychiatrist at Olin Health Center.

Ansfield said that stress is also a problem area, but an inspecific one because it can be brought on by many factors. These include school, social difficulties, graduation anxiety and sexual identity crises.

Although these everyday problems constitute most of the concerns dealt with by the MSU Counseling Center and the Listening Ear, many students hesitate about contacting these agencies because they are afraid that someone will find out. Both agencies, however, stressed their rules of absolute confidentiality.

"Basically, what we (the Listening Ear) are is a safe place," Berry said.

Bassos said that the Counseling Center is a place where one can go to help to understand oneself.

At the Counseling Center, 207 Student Services Bldg., a counselor is available weekdays from 8 a.m. to noon and 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.

After 5 p.m., emergencies are handled by Olin's resident psychiatrist.

All services through the University are free to anyone carrying seven or more credit hours.

The Listening Ear, a free social service, is open 24 hours and can be reached by calling or stopping by.

The Listening Ear is staffed by approximately 75 volunteers who have undergone an extensive 70-hour empathy-training program.

The staff is equipped to handle all types of emergency emotional problems along with almost any other difficulty that might arise, Berry said.

Berry said he encourages people to let the Listening Ear help.

"You don't have to worry about being rejected by a voice on the phone," Berry said.

The Listening Ear also provides a referral service, sexual assault counseling and a speaker bureau.

Unusual weather has many effects

By LINDA M. OLIVERIO

State News Staff Writer

Wondering when you will be able to go skiing this winter? With the mild, rainy weather the Lansing area has been receiving, it may be a while yet.

"We have had very cold temperatures the last two years," said Clark Hartwig, a National Weather Service weather specialist. "This winter December and January have been unseasonably mild."

Average January temperature is 22.6 degrees. The temperature this year has averaged about 23 degrees, Hartwig said. Last year at this time the average temperature was 16.1 degrees.

THE AVERAGE AMOUNT of snowfall the Lansing area receives in January is 11.4 inches, Hartwig said. So far in this January, Lansing has had 2.3 inches. In 1979, 27.1 inches of snow fell compared to 1978 when 34 inches fell.

The warm winter weather may have an effect on fruit trees and blooming plants.

MSU horticulture professor Donald Dewey said fruit trees need a certain amount of time when the temperature is below 35 degrees.

"I doubt low temperature dormancy has been met," Dewey said. "We're more concerned if low temperature has already been met because the trees would bloom early and could be injured by later low temperatures."

If flowers such as tulips sprout, Dewey said, and low temperatures set in, the sprouts will die. If this happens the plant can bloom again that year, but will be less vigorous.

"WE ARE CONCERNED about the lack of snow cover," Dewey said. Snow is an effective insulator for plants, and protect them from damaging frosts.

Without a snow cover, frost could reach as far as 40 inches underground. Dewey said this could create problems for people whose homes have water pipes around 40 inches underground because the pipes could freeze.

Shops that sell ski clothing and equipment are also feeling the effects of the unseasonable weather.

First Down, 127 E. Grand River Ave., has had a "tremendous" drop in sales, said Paul Enfield, a First Down clerk.

"When people start freezing they come in and buy winter clothes," Enfield said. He added First Down is expecting an increase in sales when there is a decrease in temperature.

Michigan resorts plan skiing weekend

By United Press International

Twenty-eight of Michigan's 55 public ski areas plan to be open this weekend, with generally hard pack or granular conditions and bases up to 35 inches.

The Automobile Club of Michigan reported the following snow bases in inches and slope conditions. Areas are open daily unless otherwise noted:

Southeast Michigan — Alpine Valley, 10 to 16, hard pack; Mount Brighton, 10 to 18, granular; Mount Holly, 1-12, granular; Pine Knob, 2-10, heavy.

West Michigan — Boyne Highlands, 18 to 35, hard pack; Boyne Mountain, 15 to 30, hard pack; Caberfae, 4 to 16, hard pack with bare spots; Cannonsburg, 10 to 14, hard pack; Crystal Mountain, 12 to 36, granular; Hilton Shanty Creek, 12 to 24, hard pack; Nub's Nob, 3 to 17, granular with bare spots; Schuss Mountain, 5 to 26, hard pack with bare spots; Sugar Loaf, 10 to 20, hard pack.

When it's unseasonably warm and rainy in the middle of January, spring chores can be taken care of well ahead of time. Lynwood Cotton of the grounds department takes advantage of the mild weather to prune some of the trees around campus. It's that much less he'll have to do in case a blizzard hits in late April.

Cattle-testing bill goes to Senate

UPI — The Senate Environmental and Agricultural Affairs Committee gave unanimous approval Thursday to a bill speeding up cattle testing it hopes will "take Michigan out of the PBB era."

The measure, which now goes before the full Senate, requires the state Department of Agriculture to complete analysis for the toxic fire retardant in 998 untested herds in an effort to give most Michigan cattle an all clear signal.

It also allows the state to clean up highly contaminated areas at 22 Michigan farms at an estimated cost of $1.35 million.

PBB was manufactured by the Velsicol Chemical corp. in 1973 and accidentally mixed with cattle feed by the Michigan Farm Bureau, touching off contamination of many farms and forcing the slaughter of millions of animals.

"The testing process has gone on for two and a half years ... we now have come to a point where less than 2 percent of cattle contain PBB," said Sen.

John Hertel, D-Harper Woods.

Calvin Lutz of the agriculture department said, of 9,200 herds slated for testing two years ago, only 998 remain under the program. The remainder have been found free of the substance and exempted from analysis.

Tenants may be eligible for refund from HUD

By MICHAEL VEH
State News Staff Writer

Some Lansing residents may be among the 750,000 people eligible for part of the $60 million settlement resulting from a class action suit against the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Lansing area developments covered by the settlement are: Canterbury Commons, Cedar Place, Coronado Gardens, Cranbrook Manor, Edgewood Village, Embassy Apartments, Friendship Manor, Huntly Villa I and II, Moore Hall, Paddock Farms, Pebble Creek, Pinebrook Manor, and Woodbridge Commons I and II.

Tenants living in HUD Section 236 housing between Feb. 1, 1975 and Sept. 30, 1977 may receive as much as $500 if they beat the Jan. 31, 1980 deadline for filing claim forms with the Claims Processing Center, a Housing Assistance Foundation release said.

The settlement is the result of 11 lawsuits against HUD for failure to follow section 236 guidelines dealing with subsidized housing projects.

SECTION 236 REQUIRES HUD pay the increasing costs of property taxes and utilities to prevent rent increases in low-income housing.

The refunds are available to tenants who paid more than 25 to 30 percent of their adjusted monthly incomes for rent.

Some project owners — those involved in bringing about the lawsuits and those who did not raise rents during the lawsuits — will also be able to receive refunds.

The $60 million will come from HUD's "excess rental reserve fund" and will not come from tax money, according to HAF information.

The fund comes from excess rent receipts collected on Section 236 developments. The procedure outlined by Congress allows development owners to pay all program operation costs, make a certain percentage profit and then turn excess rents over to HUD to be placed in the fund.

HUD NORMALLY USES the fund money to pay the subsidies of the lower-income tenants.

The Claims Processing Center, which was set up to answer questions about the settlement, sent out claim forms to the owners of Section 236 developments in late October. The owners were instructed to distribute claim forms to all tenants.

Claim forms were also mailed directly to former tenants who have moved from the development if the project owner provided a forwarding address to the Claims Processing Center.

Persons unsure if they are eligible for a refund should contact the apartment owner or manager or look at their lease or other forms that were filled out when they moved in.

Claim forms are available to people who write to the Claims Processing Center at Clerk of the U.S. District Court, P.O. Box 60864, Los Angeles, Calif. 90060, or by contacting the Housing Assistance Foundation, 935 N. Washington Ave., Lansing 48906.

All claims received before Jan. 31 will be processed and evaluated and refund checks will be sent in the spring.

Winter festivities despite lack of snow

Only one thing will be missing from the Lansing "Winter Fest" carnival — snow.

Unseasonably warm temperatures have put somewhat of a damper on the festivities, but Lansing recreation officials will do what they can to make the weekend enjoyable.

Events get underway at 7 tonight with a figure skating exhibition at the Lansing Ice Arena, 1475 Lake Lansing Road, and an open family skate at 7:30 p.m.

Saturday's activities lead off with a curling match at 10:45 p.m. at Washington Park, 2700 Washington Ave.

At noon, there will be a handicapped ice skating exhibition at the Lansing Ice Arena, which will be followed by a precision skating exhibition.

Highlighting the three-day event will be a "Winter Celebration Dance" which will be held at 7:30 p.m. Saturday at Royal Scot Golf Course.

London bomb blast kills Arab student

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE
Associated Press Writer

LONDON — A bomb blast ripped through the fifth floor of a hotel near Marble Arch in central London Thursday, killing a young Arab and injuring three other persons. Police were investigating the possibility the dead man was a terrorist bombmaker.

A second bomb exploded in the rubble five hours later, reportedly injuring a police scientist.

The first blast — from a bomb estimated to weigh several pounds — occurred at about 7:30 a.m. in a fifth floor guest room at the 702-room, Mount Royal Hotel. It blew down walls and ceilings in five adjoining rooms.

Police identified the dead man as Mohammed Soltani, 22, of the Persian Gulf sheikdom of Bahrain. He had registered as a student, they said.

COMMANDER PETER DUFFY, head of Scotland

Yard's anti-terrorist squad, said Soltani was very close to the bomb when it exploded, but it was too early to determine whether he had been assembling bombs and what their possible purpose was.

"What this man was doing there we are not able to say as yet," said Duffy, who led detectives searching the hotel with dogs trained to sniff out explosive substances.

Only one of the injured, West German hotel guest

Gerhard Buhme, was hurt seriously enough to be admitted to a hospital for treatment. He suffered burns and cuts.

Streets around the hotel, which overlooks London's Oxford Street shopping artery, were sealed off by police after the first blast.

About 400 guests, many of them Middle Easterners and many barefoot and in nightclothes, had been evacuated when the second bomb went off in the rubble.

AN UNOFFICIAL REPORT said one police specialist was injured in the second explosion, and several other officers within 20 feet of the bomb narrowly escaped injury.

Duffy said it was too early to tell whether the blasts at the Mount Royal signaled a resumption of Arab terrorism in London after a 1 and one-half year lull.

The last attack occurred in August 1978, when gunmen attacked a bus.

Lawmaker wants suit against Velsicol

A Saginaw lawmaker Thursday asked Attorney General Frank Kelley to take action against Velsicol Chemical Co. over the dumping of toxic wastes in Gratiot County and said yet another dump site may be found there.

In a letter to Kelley, House

Republican Floor Leader Michael Busch called for criminal and civil action against Velsicol for its disposal of radioactive waste and other toxic substances in the county. The firm buried 150 tons of low-yield radioactive waste at a site in Bethany Township in the county. The firm insists it had federal permission for the disposal.

The former Michigan Chemical Co., now Velsicol, also manufactured PBB at its now defunct St. Louis plant and dumped other waste containing about 80 tons of the toxic fire retardant in a county landfill.

The federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission plans to study whether the Bethany Township waste could be linked to cancer cases in the area.

Busch, whose district includes Gratiot County, said he is afraid there may be five or more as yet undiscovered waste dumps in the county.

Busch said he has turned over to the state Department of Natural Resources and anonymous tip he received concerning a previously unpublicized burial site in the county which Velsicol allegedly used to dispose of toxic chemicals.

He declined to tell the location of the site and said it is not clear exactly what types of materials were allegedly deposited there.

"Velsicol officials have been less than candid and I think intentionally holding back information for at least the two years I've been working with them about how much waste is buried and where it is," Busch said.

Legal action may force the company "to get serious about meeting the obligations of cleaning up the mess it left behind," he said.

"The company has been sued for negligence with respect to the PBB catastrophe but no one has initiated action against the firm to make it pay for damage it has apparently done to the land and ground water of Gratiot County," he said.

The DNR currently is contemplating legal action against Velsicol for failing to submit an adequate plan for cleaning up the plant site and ridding the nearby Pine River of contamination leaking from the facility.

Overhaul requested 'friend of court'

(UPI) — The Michigan Women's Commission Thursday called for an overhaul of the state's 60-year-old friend of the court system to make it more responsive to the needs of today's families.

The commission's recommendations came in a report entitled "In the Best Interests of the Child: A Study on the Friend of the Court."

The report calls for statewide funding of the friend of the court system, which represents the interests of children in domestic cases. It also endorses the use of wage assignments to guarantee child support payments are made.

Lt. Gov. James Brickley accepted the report on behalf of Gov. William G. Milliken.

"The need for structural change within the friend of the court is partly due to the fact that the office was created 60 years ago," said Nan Frost-Welmers, the chair of the women's commission. "It was difficult to predict what the needs of the family would be in 1980," she said.

"The numbers of divorces have spiraled upward as has the cost of living. Expected societal roles for mothers and fathers have undergone basic change. The assumption that mother is the best parent to retain custody of the children is no longer accepted," Frost-Welmers noted.

The report said statewide funding of the friend of the court system is needed to eliminate the disparity between staffing and salary levels in various parts of the state. It noted the system is self supporting, generating more revenue than it needs.

Personal income increase equals '79 inflation rate

By R. GREGORY NOKES

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — If it hadn't been for rising taxes, Americans would have finished 1979 in a virtual draw with inflation, Commerce Department figures showed Thursday.

The Commerce Department said total personal income increased 12 percent during the year to a total of $2,022.5 trillion. The increase nearly matched the rate of inflation.

At the same time, Americans' saving rate fell to a 30-year low.

Meanwhile, the Commerce Department said housing starts fell 14 percent last year, although they surprisingly edged upward in December.

A TOTAL OF 1,742,500 new housing units were started during the year, down from 2,020,300 in 1978. The decline was expected as a consequence of the government's actions to raise interest rates as part of its campaign to control inflation.

However, there was a 0.3 percent increase in December to 1,527,000, although building permits continued their downward slide, dropping 5 percent to 1,204,000 units. The figures were at seasonally adjusted annual rates.

While overall income increased last year, taxes rose at a faster rate, up 15.8 percent. The result was that after-tax income increased only 8.7 percent, which trailed the rate of inflation.

The figures, contained in the government's year-end report on personal income, illustrate how inflation slices into income in two ways, once through higher prices and again through higher taxes.

The tax increase occurs because Americans demand more income to keep pace with rising prices. But as incomes rise, Americans are automatically pushed into higher tax brackets, so that a greater share of their income goes for taxes.

SOCIAL SECURITY TAXES also increased significantly during 1979.

Relief from this jump into higher tax brackets could be provided in a tax reduction. However, President Carter has decided against recommending a tax cut in the 1981 budget he will send to Congress on Jan. 28.

Per capita income, after subtracting taxes, was $7,653 last year, an increase of $614 during the year. Per capita tax payments were $1,357, an increase of $175.

Americans obviously drew on their savings to maintain their living standards as the savings rate fell to a 30-year low of 4.5 percent of income. That was the lowest since 1949 when it was 3.6 percent. Savings were 4.9 percent of income in 1978.

The savings rate in November was 3.3 percent, the lowest for any month since the department began keeping monthly figures in 1959.

ALTHOUGH THE FIGURES weren't complete, it seemed likely the savings rate fell even further in December since spending increased and savings were down.

Personal income increased 1.1 percent in December, the same as in November, when income hit the $2 trillion mark for the first time. Personal income includes income from all sources, including wages, rents, dividends and government benefits.

Income from wages and salaries increased 1 percent in December to a total of $1,282.5 billion. Income from those two factors was up 11.3 percent for the year.

Personal income expenditures rose $32.6 billion in December, double the $16.3 billion increase in November. Personal savings were $44.9 billion in December, down from $60.9 billion in November.

The Commerce index showed prices increased 9.8 percent for the 12-month period ended in November, while the CPI measured the increase for the same period at 12.6 percent.

CADA orientation meeting

The Council Against Domestic Assault will be holding an orientation meeting Jan. 22 for women interested in participating in a counselor/advocate training program.

The meeting will be held from 6 to 10 p.m. in Room 202, Community Services Building, 300 N. Washington Ave., Lansing.

CADA is currently renovating a house in Lansing which will be used as a shelter for battered women and their children.

The shelter, which will accommodate about 20 women and children, will hopefully open in about a month, said CADA

Director Marsha Macomber.

A $2,469 grant from Ingham County now awaits Board of Commissioner approval.

If the funds are approved, they will be added to $47,519 of federal funds, which will be handed over to CADA to help pay for operation of the shelter.

Iran focus of discussion; topics are culture, crisis

The crisis between the United States and Iran will be discussed from 12:30 to 6 p.m. Saturday at Lansing's Central United Methodist Church, 215 N. Capitol Ave. at Ottawa Street.

Topics to be explored include the American involvement in Iran, how the crisis is related to oil, and Iran's history and culture.

Films, panel and group discussions will be part of the afternoon's event.

The discussion is sponsored by the Coalition of Concerned Americans and various community and religious groups.

Everyone is welcome to attend. A $2 fee will be charged.

Hostages in Iran to write home

By ROBERT M. ANDREWS
Associated Press Writer

American hostages in Tehran, apparently as a Christmas gesture by their captors, have been allowed to write home expressing thanks for messages of support and appealing — in the words of one — for "prompt action to free us from this terrible situation."

Wrote hostage Robert C. Ode: "We feel that we have been abandoned by our government and the American people."

One of Ode's letters was received and read by President Carter on Wednesday. White House spokesperson Jody Powell said it was clear the hostages were unaware of the steps the United States had taken to try to obtain their release.

Powell speculated the Ode letter might have been intended by his Iranian captors to fuel American impatience and "pressure the United States into taking some action that would amount to yielding to blackmail or rewarding international terrorism." Powell said he had no information on which to base that theory.

IN RAWALPINDI, Pakistan, the Pakistani president described a reported U.S. aid offer of $400 million over two years as "peanuts." At a news conference, Zia said, "If this is true... this is terribly disappointing. Pakistan will not buy its security with $400 million. That amount will buy greater animosity from the Soviet Union which is now more influential in this region than the United States."

In Tehran, Iran, Tehran Radio said the text of a resolution read at the end of a "multi-million-strong" demonstration denounced the "blasphemous colonialism in the east." Afghanistan is east of Iran. The resolution reportedly continued: "The Iranian nation denounces the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan and wishes success to the combatant Afghan brothers who are waging battle against iniquitous Soviet intervention and for the independence of their land."

Among the letters received this week by government officials and families, well-wishers and newspapers from Milwaukee to Landisville, N.J., was one from Marine Sgt. Kevin Hermening of Oak Creek, Wis., to his father.

Hermening, writing Dec. 15, expressed hope he would be home by Christmas 1980, but said "I even doubt that."

Another Marine, Cpl. William Gallegos, 21, of Pueblo, Colo., was more optimistic. In a thank-you note to Lisa and Jodi Gurbisz, young sisters in Bayonne, N.J., who had sent a Christmas card to the hostages, Gallegos said: "Your prayers will soon bring us home."

THE MOST GRAPHIC letter to surface was hand-written by Ode, 64, a retired foreign service officer from the Washington suburb of Falls Church, Va. He was serving temporarily at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran when it was seized Nov. 4 by Iranian militants demanding that the United States return the exiled shah for trial.

In the letter, dated Dec. 26 and received Wednesday by The Washington Post, Ode, who is the oldest of the hostages, wrote: "We are being kept in semi-darkened rooms; our hands are tied day and night; bright lights are kept burning all night and because of the constant noise it is almost impossible to sleep."

"In 53 days I have been given only three brief exercise periods in the fresh air and only four tasteless and unripe oranges; two hard boiled eggs, one small bottle of fresh milk and a few pressed dates to supplement an otherwise monotonous and too starchy diet."

Ode said he believed mail had been withheld from the hostages, and that they were denied visits by U.S. government representatives, given no news of any kind, and were forbidden to talk to each other in the same room.

Ode said the hostages had no idea what the United States was doing in their behalf. "I can only ask that with your power of the press," he wrote the Post, "that you do everything possible to bring pressure on the responsible leaders in our government to take prompt action to free us from this terrible situation."

State Department spokesperson Hodding Carter said Thursday that Ode's letter, which appeared to be genuine, was among those received by 16 persons across the country in the past few days from nine of the American hostages held in Tehran.

"We would hope that this indicates a new willingness on the part of the captors to allow the hostages to communicate with the outside world," Carter said.

Great Depression topic of conference

Two MSU professors will be among nine speakers at a conference on the Great Depression to be held Saturday in the Kellogg Center.

Craig Harris, professor of sociology, will discuss "Primary Production in the Upper Peninsula." David Anderson, American Thought and Language professor, will speak about "Proletarian Literature."

Harris will discuss the population flow from the cities of Michigan back to rural areas in the Upper Peninsula during the first half of the 1930s.

"It was a way people adapted to the economic depression, by moving back to the land," Harris said.

Anderson will focus on the nature of proletarian literature by discussing several books written by Michigan authors during the '20s and '30s.

The conference, sponsored by the Program in American Studies and financed by a grant from the Michigan Council for the Humanities, will begin at 9 a.m. and run through the day. A registration fee of $5 will be charged.
