

Judge orders MSU to reinstate John Hildebrand

By LOUISE WHALL
State News Staff Writer

Regardless of any future appeals by the University, a federal judge has ordered MSU to reinstate John R. Hildebrand as an associate professor of social science spring term.

U.S. District Judge Wendall A. Miles also ruled at a hearing Thursday the University should find temporary employment for Hildebrand until spring term.

Miles said he would release a written judgment today which would also indicate the amount of back pay and punitive damages Hildebrand should receive.

Kenneth Laing Jr., of Maclean, Seaman, Laing and Guilford, the Lansing law firm representing Hildebrand, is asking for approximately $381,000 in back pay plus legal fees. Laing said it is up to the University to make another motion to appeal.

LAING AND HILDEBRAND could not comment on the case until the written judgment is handed down.

Hildebrand's ordeal started more than 10 years ago when he was dismissed from the University in August 1969. No formal faculty grievance procedure existed at that time so no reasons had to be given to non-tenured faculty members who were dismissed.

In 1970 Hildebrand filed two unfair labor practice charges with the Michigan Employment Relations Commission but his case was rejected. The state courts also refused the case.

He then filed suit in the Federal District Court in Grand Rapids in 1971 against the MSU Board of Trustees. University officials and two colleagues, charging denial of his constitutional guarantees of freedom of speech and of due process of law.

At the end of a five day hearing in October 1974, a jury ruled Hildebrand should be granted tenure with back pay. Miles said the jury's decision was an advisory ruling. He ruled against Hildebrand in March 1977.

LAING APPEALED MILES' decision to the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati, Ohio. He charged Hildebrand did not have a fair trial.

Last month, a federal jury ruled Hildebrand's first amendment rights were violated by his discharge from MSU. The jury ordered reinstatement, $249,292 in back pay and $100 in punitive damages. Douglas Dunham, former chairperson of the department of social science, and Clinton A. Snyder, professor of social science, were ordered to pay $50 each in punitive damages.

MSU general counsel Leland Carr Jr. filed a motion to appeal the federal court jury decision on Jan. 21. The appeal was filed with the U.S. District Court of Western Michigan in Grand Rapids where Thursday's hearing was held.

U.S. will not impose sanctions against Iran

President Carter's registration plan includes women

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter will call for the registration of women for the military draft, White House officials said Thursday.

The White House scheduled an announcement for Friday detailing the president's plans for the entire draft registration program.

The president's proposal, disclosed by officials who asked not to be identified, is a sharp break with historical precedent. It will be the first time that a president has suggested registering women for the draft.

Carter decided to include women in the program despite a warning from House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill that it would not pass the Congress.

The president probably will limit registration to persons 19 and 20, though full details were not made available.

Carter announced plans last month in his State of the Union message to resume draft registration, citing an increasing military threat from the Soviet Union.

Although he remained mute on the question of whether he would include women, he has previously taken the position that any such program should include women.

In recent weeks, Carter's decision has been foreshadowed by statements from administration officials and the president's wife, Rosalynn, who urged registration of women.

Currently, there are about 150,000 women in the military, out of a force of more than 2 million. However, women still are banned by law from combat.

Though Carter has the power to resume registration of men, Congress would have to change a law to include women.

INVESTIGATES N.J. SENATOR

FBI prepares cases

By ROBERT M. ANDREWS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The federal case against Sen. Harrison A. Williams Jr. was described Thursday as among the strongest in the FBI's political bribery investigation which has implicated eight members of Congress.

As FBI agents interviewed members of the New Jersey Casino Control Commission, which figured in the allegations against Williams, the House of Representatives turned its attention to the ethics of the manner in which the FBI conducted its 16-month inquiry.

In advance of the House floor debate, FBI Director William Webster told an Oklahoma City news conference his agency had "followed the rules of law" in its undercover operations. He denied any entrapment of members of Congress.

Allegations have been made against as many as 20 public officials and 10 business persons after FBI undercover agents, posing as wealthy Arabs or representatives of Arab interests, paid nearly $500,000 in cash in exchange for promises of political favors and other services.

Williams, a New Jersey Democrat, is reported to have told FBI agents on videotape that Joseph Lordi, chairperson of the casino commission, helped him save $3 million for developers of the Ritz hotel-casino project in Atlantic City. Lordi and Williams have denied involvement in such a deal.

IN ADDITION, GOVERNMENT sources said last weekend that Williams last August had accepted stock in a titanium mine in return for a promise to help obtain government contracts for a venture backed by an Arab sheik.

Officially, sources close to the investigation say all eight members of Congress remain subject to possible grand jury action, although the government considers its case against Rep. John Murtha, D-Pa., to be the weakest.

Williams was reported in the Washington Star and the New York Daily News to be a (continued on page 13)

Ford execs chose not to fix Pinto to save money, former vp testifies

By LISA LEVITT
Associated Press Writer

WINAMAC, Ind. (AP) — Ford Motor Co.'s Pinto subcompact could have been modified for $6.65 per car to withstand rear-end collisions at 30 mph without fire risk, a former Ford executive testified Thursday in the automaker's reckless homicide trial.

Instead, top company officials decided against correcting defects in Pinto fuel tanks to save money, said Harley Copp, an engineer who was a Ford vice president for European operations and later was in charge of crash tests at Ford's Dearborn headquarters.

Ford is charged with reckless homicide in the August 1978 deaths of three young women in a 1973 Pinto sedan that exploded when hit from behind by a van near Goshen, Ind.

The state contends that Ford knew Pinto fuel tanks were likely to explode in rear-end collisions but sold the cars anyway without making repairs or warning the public.

The trial ended its fifth week Thursday, and chief prosecutor Michael A. Cosentino said he expected to wrap up his case next week.

COPP, THE KEY prosecution witness, told the Pulaski Circuit Court jury the 1973 Pinto was designed to withstand a 20 mph rear-end crash involving a 4,000-pound vehicle.

Copp said that in August 1969, at a product strategy meeting with then-Ford President Lee A. Iacocca and other Ford executives a proposal to increase the safety standard to 30 mph was rejected "because of cost and ensuing problems."

In April 1971, at a product review meeting, it was determined that the Pinto could be modified to withstand a 30 mph rear impact at a cost of $6.65 per car, Copp said.

Chief Ford attorney James F. Neal objected that the $6.65 estimate was for the 1974 Pinto and that company executives decided at the same meeting to keep the 20 mph rear-impact standard for the 1973 model.

However, Judge Harold R. Staffeldt allowed the testimony and introduction of a Ford document concerning the meeting, adding that Neal could try to show inaccuracies later.

Copp also told the jury that the rear structure and fuel tank design of the 1973 Pinto were "grossly inadequate, probably the weakest I've seen in cars in the last 10 to 12 years."

HE CRITICIZED THE crush space between the gas tank and the bumper, the strength of the floor pan above the tank, the design of the fuel tank filler tube — which he said caused it to pull out during a rear-end collision — and the size and shape of the tank itself.

If the 1973 Pinto had been designed like other subcompacts at the time, it would have been able to withstand a rear-impact crash at 15 to 40 mph without fire risk, Copp said. "As illustrated in this case, these people would have survived if the fuel tank had not caused a fire," he added.

Previous testimony has indicated a 30-35 mph difference in speed between the Pinto and the van involved in the Indiana crash.

Ford announced in June 1978 that it was recalling 1.5 million Pintos and Mercury bobcats for fuel system modifications. The repair kits were distributed in September 1978 — a month after the Indiana accident.

Copp, who retired in 1977, demonstrated how various pieces of the kit would fit the fuel tank. Included were a filler pipe which could be inserted deeper into the tank to prevent it from pulling out in a rear-end collision and a plastic shield to prevent the tank from being punctured. ## New hope for release of hostages

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The United States, encouraged by signs that Iran's new government is anxious to end the hostage crisis, announced Thursday it will not formally impose long-promised economic sanctions against that country.

State Department spokesperson Hodding Carter explained the policy reversal by saying the administration does not want to take this step while diplomatic activity continues.

He did not elaborate. However, reports have circulated in recent days indicating that Iran would be willing to release the 60 American hostages held in Tehran in exchange for the establishment of a U.N.-sponsored international tribunal to investigate alleged crimes of the deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

Trade between the two countries was effectively cut off last November after the American embassy and the hostages were seized by militants. However, the administration had said it planned the additional step of issuing regulations to formalize a suspension of all trade except for food and medicines.

SECRETARY OF STATE Cyrus R. Vance had reiterated that policy only a week ago. But it had become apparent lately that the administration was reluctant to issue the regulations in light of indications of Iran's increasing flexibility on the hostage question.

Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher said Thursday the United States is postponing the implementation of the trade embargo because of a "tactical decision" taken with the hope that progress might be made toward releasing the hostages "if diplomacy were given the opportunity to work."

He said the United States finds some reason for hope in the fact that Iran's new president also has been named head of that country's revolutionary council, thereby apparently giving him the central authority to negotiate.

Christopher also made clear that he does not believe the release of the hostages is imminent.

"I would not want to indicate a solution is right around the corner," Christopher said. "I would counsel against raising expectations of a very early resolution of this crisis."

Registration, draft discussion picks up momentum

Libertarians urge resisting draft with civil disobedience, protests

By TIM SIMMONS
State News Staff Writer

A statement urging civil disobedience as a means of resisting draft registration will be released in Washington, D.C., today by the Libertarian Party.

The Libertarian Party advocates the abolishment of registration and drafting for war, calling it "nothing but short-term slavery."

The party recently filed more than 26,000 signatures requesting a spot on Michigan's primary ballot and is expect-ted to be on the 1980 election ballot in 47 states, said Eric O'Keefe, Michigan coordinator for the Libertarian Party.

The statement to be made by the National Committee of the Libertarian Party states: "We endorse civil disobedience as an appropriate moral and practical means of resisting mandatory registration and the draft."

THE PARTY MAY also advocate resistance actions such as picketing registration offices, physically blocking entrances to buildings and burning draft cards, said Steve O'Keefe, organizer of MSU Libertarians.

The resistance statement was adopted by the National Committee of the Libertarian Party at its February meeting.

MSU Libertarians are also endorsing the anti-draft rally on Feb. 13 at Beaumont Tower sponsored by the MSU chapter of the Public Interest Research Group of Michigan.

A speaker from the Libertarian Party will make comments concerning the draft during the rally, Steve O'Keefe said.

Draft evaders to get low priority in Canadian immigration process

OTTAWA (AP) — The Canadian government does not want to harbor U.S. draft dodgers, in the event of a renewed draft, and would put them at the bottom of the immigration priority list, Foreign Minister Flora MacDonald says.

MacDonald said Wednesday the Progressive Conservative government is not considering any legal changes to bar United States citizens from Canada in the event they do not want to join the U.S. armed forces.

However, bureaucratic methods in place now would be used to discourage draft dodgers from coming to Canada, she said, as thousands did in the 1960s and early 1970s to avoid fighting in the Vietnam war.

"Given the number of people who want to come here, they wouldn't be given top priority," MacDonald said in a telephone interview from Winnipeg.

Immigrants are judged on a point scale that takes into consideration various factors such as language, education, job skills and family connections.

Officials have said any change in these factors would have to come from legislation or a Cabinet order. MacDonald said in the interview: "Nobody is talking along those lines."

Draft dodgers would be placed on the bottom of entry lists after "people who have been waiting for a long time — an awful lot of people," the foreign minister said.

Her remarks came as President Carter was preparing to announce whether the United States will register women between the ages of 18 and 20 for military draft. Carter last month announced resumption of draft registration.

MURDER OF 12-YEAR-OLD

Bundy convicted again

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Theodore R. Bundy, an articulate killer already under a death sentence for murdering two sorority sisters, was convicted Thursday of killing a 12-year-old North Florida schoolgirl.

A circuit court jury returned guilty verdicts on kidnapping and first-degree murder charges in the death of Kimberly Diane Leach after deliberating for 7 hours and 15 minutes.

Bundy, 33, is already on Death Row, awaiting execution in the bludgeoning deaths of two Florida State University women.

The former law student showed no emotion as the verdict was read, sitting with a hand to his chin and watching the jurors.

The verdict came two days before the second anniversary of the day Leach, a brown-haired seventh-grader, disappeared from her Lake City, Fla., junior high school.

Circuit Judge Wallace Jopling said Bundy will be sentenced Saturday. Under state law, the jury hears a second "penalty phase" of the trial and can recommend death or life in prison. The judge is not bound by the recommendation.

The jury of five men and seven women began deliberating the case Wednesday after 2 and one-half weeks of testimony.

Prosecutors Jerry Blair and Bob Dekle told the jury Bundy stole a white van at FSU, kidnapped Leach from her school, raped her twice and killed her. Her decomposed body was found in an abandoned hogshed April 7, 1978, two months after her disappearance.

Bundy was convicted last July in the deaths of two FSU women, and is under a double death sentence in that case. The former Tacoma, Wash., resident has also been charged with murder in Colorado and was convicted of kidnapping in Utah.

Dekle told the jury Bundy raped the girl twice and suggested her throat was cut with a hunting knife Bundy bought.

ety, a national group consisting of about 200 chapters, has declared Feb. 18 through Feb. 26, National Anti-registration Week.

Chapters across the country, including MSU Libertarians, will hold demonstrations and host speakers during the week, O'Keefe said.

Libertarians have gained the biggest amount of support from campuses, he said. MSU Libertarians were able to collect about 6,000 signatures from MSU's campus in helping to place the party on the primary ballot.

"This far surpassed any other campus in Michigan," O'Keefe said.

Copp also showed the jury a fuel tank from a 1973 Chevrolet Vega, which he said was superior in design to the Pinto. The Vega fuel tank was longer and more uniform and would expand 30 percent before breaking when hit from behind, Copp said.

Open primary — Ferency

By SUSIE BENKELMAN
State News Staff Writer

MSU associate professor Zoltan Ferency met with election officials Thursday to discuss his request for a ruling which would open up the process for selecting Democratic presidential candidates and convention delegates.

The request, Ferency said, calls upon election officials to either declare the May 20 open primary the only legal procedure for selecting delegates to the national convention, or demand that Democratic caucuses are open to everyone and not controlled by any artificial requirements.

Ferency said the rights of voters were violated when the Democratic Party chose the closed caucus method of choosing presidential nominating delegates.

Democrats are using the closed caucus method this year because the National Democratic Party rules forbid the selection of presidential primary delegates through the use of open primaries.

THE NEW SELECTION process has been adopted to limit participation in the nomination process to Democrats only.

Party officials say President Carter has indicated he will not participate in the open primary and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., has indicated he probably will not. California Gov. Edmund G. Brown, however, has said he will participate in the primary.

"The issue is two-fold," Ferency said. "One, should the Democratic party hold an open primary and give everyone a chance to vote, or should they hold it in closed caucuses?"

"And, if they do hold it in caucuses, should they open them up as widely as possible and give everyone a chance to vote?" he said.

"When you hold caucuses instead of an open primary, you limit participation to a very few," he said. "If you limit participation to a very few, you can control the caucuses and decide who will go to the national convention."

"BY THIS KIND of action," Ferency said, "the people of Michigan have had their rights violated. They are preventing us from casting our ballots."

The memorandum was filed Wednesday with the Board of State Canvassers, the Secretary of State and the Director of Elections.

Ferency's memorandum also requested the secretary of state prepare rules that would prevent any one voter from voting more than once in the primary.

"If the Democratic party member goes to the caucuses, he can then turn around and vote in the Republican primary," he said. "When hundreds of thousands of people are allowed to vote, you don't have so much political control."

The memorandum states that according to procedures set by the Democratic State Central Committee, participation in the caucuses will be limited to certain classes of individuals.

PAUL MOORADIAN, assistant to the state chairperson of the Democratic Party, said that to attend caucus meetings, one must either be a 1978 elected precinct delegate, a 1979 party member or a 1980 party member.

Party fees which are suggested by Democratic officials are $10 per membership, $3 for full-time students and $2 for retirees.

"Obviously we would like to have people donate money," he said. "But a lot of people say 'I don't have the money' or 'I don't want to pay.' In our plan, it says no one will have to pay to participate."

Earning gap still exists for women graduates

By LESA DOLL
State News Staff Writer

Societal stereotypes concerning proper "girls' and boys' jobs are an important explanation of the earning gap that still exists between men and women employees, said Patricia Curran, director of the Office of Women and Work for the State of Michigan.

Although blatant discrimination is prohibited by civil rights laws and other provisions, the way a woman sees herself as a worker may cause her to accept a "traditionally female" job that pays less.

"Women do not see themselves as workers," Curran said at a Women's Studies Colloquium this week. "We get jobs, but we don't have careers."

Curran explained that women hold a very small percentage of jobs on the job market, filling traditionally female careers in clerical work, nursing, teaching and social work.

"Inequity is really a result of the lesser value given to those kinds of jobs that are traditionally female."

"The theory (has been) that the male is the breadwinner and has to earn the money," she said.

Although women are beginning to expand into non-traditional jobs at increasing rates, even college graduates fall prey to the stereotype of "proper women's jobs."

In a recent report, compiled by MSU Placement Services, female students receiving bachelor's degrees between August 1978 and July 1979 earned approximately $1,000 less in their first jobs than the average MSU graduate.

Broken down, the report shows a concentration of females with traditional majors in communications, education and the health professions.

JACK SHINGLETON, placement director, said the minority of women graduating with degrees in technical and non-traditional fields are making the same, and in some cases more, than men with comparable degrees.

"It all boils down to supply and demand," he said. "Many employees are trying to increase the number of women in the non-traditional jobs such as engineering, computer science, accounting and industrial science. The supply has not been there. It's now developing."

Shingleton said a promising career for women now is engineering. He said the percentage of women bachelor's degree candidates in the field is now 7.02 percent, a definite improvement over the 2.3 percent figure compiled by Placement Services in 1975.

Shingleton said although the percentage of women employed at entry level positions has greatly increased, there are still "tremendous barriers" facing women trying to get into middle and top management positions.

Shingleton agrees that women, on the average, are accepting employment that pays substantially less in comparison to a man's or a non-traditionally employed woman's salary.

"When you are talking about overall average, we also tend to find women take underemployment more than men," he added.

WOMEN MAKE UP 42 percent of the work force, according to a 1979 U.S. Department of Labor report, and make only 57 cents to every dollar earned by a man, as reported in a 1980 study.

This may be due to the fact that in the expanding work force, men are rapidly promoted into higher positions, while 80 percent of women employees have remained clerical workers, said Joanna Stark, chairperson of the Ingham County Women's Commission.

"The faster rise of income for males in high level jobs has overwhelmed the rise in income of a clerk-typist," she said. "It's very hard for women to catch up because they're underrepresented in higher paid classifications."

"Women are socialized into thinking they can only do low income types of things," she said.

Many contend that women are earning less because society has placed a lesser value on "female" careers. Traditionally "male" jobs often earn more because historically the man has been considered the supporter of the family, Curran said.

"PAY INEQUALITY EXISTS because there are traditional positions for women and traditional positions for men," said Stark.

The draft: conscientious objectors need strong cases to convince local draft boards

By NUNZIO LUPO
State News Staff Writer

People with deep moral, ethical or religious opposition to war simply do not walk in and persuade draft boards to grant them conscientious objector status.

If a person is to be successful, it simply takes more time and thought than that.

Conscientious objectors must first decide their beliefs are strong enough and must prepare a case that is good enough to convince local draft boards, according to draft foes.

And, representatives of anti-draft groups agree, now is the time to prepare a case to go on record as a conscientious objector.

SINCE PRESIDENT CARTER'S plan to renew draft registration was announced, the option of conscientious objection is being considered by some people for the first time in almost a decade.

And though specific procedures for filing for conscientious objection status have not been released, draft foes agree that success depends on building a strong case.

The MSU chapter of the Public Interest Research Group in Michigan will soon be distributing cards and information to people who are interested in seeking this option.

The first step, advises PIRGIM-MSU staff member Jim Grossfeld, is for people to decide whether they have deep enough convictions to file for C.O. status.

"We're not encouraging folks who honestly are not C.O.'s to pursue this," says Grossfeld, who is also a co-organizer for the Michigan Committee Against Registration and the Draft.

"WE ARE URGING that all people consider their beliefs and feelings about war."

Conscientious objection is not an across-the-board status. Federal law in the past has recognized two types of conscientious objectors. They are:

• Conscientious objectors — Persons who, by reason of deeply held moral, ethical or religious beliefs, are conscientiously opposed to participating in war in any form.

• Noncombatants — Persons who are conscientiously opposed to participating in war in any form, but who do not object to performing noncombatant duties in the armed forces.

Conscientious objectors also include selective objectors, who oppose certain wars on the grounds that they are "unjust," and nuclear pacifists, who object to participating in a nuclear war or a war they believe could become a nuclear war.

Federal law, if it remains the same, would not recognize selective objectors.

People who feel they fit into one of the categories of conscientious objectors have several options.

PIRGIM WILL BE distributed (continued on page 12)

Masked pie thrower strikes

The phantom chef has struck again!

Economics instructor Mary E. Cookingham was lecturing her Economics 324 class in 120 Berkey Hall at about 1 p.m. Wednesday when an individual dressed in white and wearing a white mask entered the classroom and hurled a pie at her, campus police said.

The chocolate cream missile was deflected by Cookingham's arm, police said, and struck a blackboard.

The assailant escaped, police said, but the case is being considered as an assault and battery. Cookingham said she probably will not press charges if the culprit is caught.

"I reported it so it won't happen again," she said.

Correction

In Thursday's article on the ASMSU Student Board, Ken Passiak, College of Human Ecology representative, was quoted as saying the ASMSU constitution should not rule over the Student Board.

Passiak actually said that he wanted to see the answer to the question, "Does the code and constitution rule ASMSU, or does ASMSU rule the code and constitution?"

MSU student surrenders, arraigned on drug charge

An MSU student, who escaped Tuesday from police custody in connection with a campus cocaine arrest, was arraigned on drug charges Thursday shortly after surrendering to campus police.

Lyman Briggs freshman Catherine A. Jackson, 565 W. Holmes Hall, was arraigned before Judge R. William Reid in Mason District Court on charges of delivery and conspiracy to deliver cocaine, and escaping from police custody.

Jackson was released on $5,000 cash bond and is scheduled for a preliminary examination at 1:30 p.m. Feb. 14 in Mason.

Department of Public Safety Maj. Adam J. Zutaut said

Jackson appeared at DPS headquarters with her parents and surrendered at about noon Thursday.

Jackson was arrested by Metro Narcotics Squad and DPS officers in her room Tuesday afternoon, police said. Four other students and former students were also arrested Tuesday on related charges.

Police said they confiscated two ounces of cocaine in the arrests, worth about $3,200.

U.S. not absolved

It is becoming more difficult to regard Soviet actions in Afghanistan as anything more than colonial conquest. At first, the avoidance of overreacting to the invasion was a crucial factor in the United States' holier-than-thou condemnation of Soviet troop movement across the border. That precautionary strategy has been lost, however, in a sea of warnings, threats and outright willingness to defend American interests with troops in the Persian Gulf.

But there is something to be said for the fervency of Americans in opposition to the Soviets. There is also something to be said of what lurks beneath the about-face of several Third World countries now opposing the Soviets rather than allying themselves with them.

In our case, U.S. response has made little attempt to temper itself; it has instead led the pack in international denouncement of the invasion and sponsored the push to boycott next summer's Olympic Games. That can only be expected, for in the U.S.-Soviet push-pull relationship, each side has traditionally played on the mistakes of the other.

What strikes as being unpredictable however, is the solidarity of countries backing the wishes of the United States. Obviously, there is a common element of displeasure shared by America and the Muslim countries participating in the denouncement. The United States abhors imperialism; Muslim countries are enraged that a superpower has invaded a country of religious allies. But there is more.

The Soviet invasion, as abhorrent as it may be, has somehow sparked more criticism than similar crimes committed by other countries, including the United States. When the Soviets crossed the border, even before they reached that border, the United States was watching, ready and waiting to round up support for its condemnation of the invasion. Where was our harsh disapproval when the Chinese invaded Vietnam? Hardly a smattering of displeasure came from the Carter administration. And why did pleas from several African nations to boycott the 1976 Olympics in Montreal because of Western sports links to South Africa go unheeded?

Objectively speaking, the United States cannot be absolved of all guilt when it comes to criticizing Soviet intransigence. It held up the SALT II treaty, tried to circumvent the issue by griping over Soviet troops stationed in Cuba and has pushed for a steady buildup of nuclear arms in European countries. And our most recent action finds us preparing for war over a possible Soviet advance to the Persian Gulf. The response almost equals any Soviet actions we label aggressive.

But apparently, when a superpower wants something it gets it. The United States is asking for an international boycott and the world, for a number of reasons, is responding in our favor. We have opposed the boycott from the beginning based on our aversion to mixing sports with politics. We still feel that a show of Soviet athletic prowess will not, as feared, cloud the issue of aggression and promote Soviet ideology. Yet the overwhelming support for a boycott renders invalid the argument against allowing the Olympiad to clash with political belief. Regardless of the desire to keep the two separate, world reaction to the Soviet invasion has enmeshed them.

'LASH' LARROWE

'Hell no, I won't go!'

I'm up on top of The Rock over by Beaumont, fumbling with my matches but it's so wet and cold I can't get one to light. Students are hurrying on by, heading for class or the Union, not paying me any mind. Finally, this skirt stops and look up at me. "Hey, Lash!" she laughs. "What you tryin' to set on fire up there?"

"I'm trying to burn my draft card," I tell her. "But nobody's watching," she objects. "What's the point of burning your draft card when nobody's around to see you doing it? And what are those cute little badges you got on your jacket there? They look like something you fished out of your kid's box of Cracker Jacks."

"They just happen to be a Good Conduct Medal, a Purple Heart, and a Silver Star," I say haughtily, sliding down off The Rock. "I read where they handed out medals in World War II for doin' guard duty at the PX, Lash," she chuckles. "But however you got 'em, why would you burn your draft card now?"

"A peacetime draft is against the Constitution," I intone. "The 13th Amendment they put in there prohibits involuntary servitude, you know. If I wind up back in the Army swabbing out latrines, that's sure as hell involuntary servitude, yessir!"

"What about World War II?" she asks. "The U.S. had a draft then, didn't it? Did you call that involuntary servitude, Lash?" "That was wartime," I say. "The U.S.A. don't pay no attention to the Constitution in times of crisis, everybody knows that."

"I'm for the draft, myself," she tells me. "If we stick with a 'volunteer army,' you know yourself the ranks will always be filled up with the poorest of the poor, Lash: Blacks, Chicanos, Native Americans, poor Whites. Don't you think it's wrong in a democratic society to have our wars fought for us by soldiers who're so poor and uneducated the only place they can go is into the military?"

"Negative," I snap. "If those folks your heart bleeds for don't like it in the Army, hey, they can always take a job in an auto plant or a car wash. If they're willing to work, that is."

"You claim to be a world-famous economist, Lash," she sneers. "You should know they don't have a choice between the Army and private employment. The auto plants have been laying off workers for months now. There's no way a Black who doesn't have seniority is gonna get a job at GM or Ford."

"And here's another reason I'm for the draft," she goes on. "If we have a military force made up of Blacks and Chicanos, the Pentagon is much more likely to take off on military adventures like Vietnam than if the sons of the middle class are serving in the Army, too."

"You may call 'em 'military adventures,' I bristles. "I say when them Russkies go stickin' their snouts into peace-loving countries like Afghanistan, it's up to Uncle Sam to teach 'em a lesson, send 'em yippin' back behind the Iron Curtain with their tails between their legs."

"I hadn't thought of it that way," she admits. "But if we only have a small professional army instead of a big conventional military force, Lash, aren't we a lot more likely to resort to nuclear bombs to teach the Russians a lesson? Have you thought about that?"

"I'm way ahead of you, sister," I says. "It'll be a valuable learning experience for us. We try out a few tactical nukes in combat conditions, it'll help get the bugs outa the hardware. We'll get some applications of nuclear power to the energy crisis, too, for sure."

"If we do have a draft though," the turkey persists, "it'll include women, right? That'll make it easier for us to get the ERA passed, the way the country went for the 18-year-old vote when the boys were off serving in Vietnam in the '60s. You're into civil liberties, Lash. Surely you're with us on that?"

"Wrong again," I tell her. "If you ask me, the place for you girls is in the home, takin' care of the kids, cookin' the meals for your hubbies, not outa'tin' a bazooka on some foreign battlefield."

"You're pretty ancient, Lash," she sneers, "but you seem to be in good shape. If that Purple Heart is for real, you must've got it for a head wound, the way your mind's all messed up."

"Call it a head wound, call it shell shock, I don't care," I says, "so long as the VA keeps layin' that $48.65 disability pay on me every month."

LETTERS

Good riddance Darryl Rogers

An Open Letter to Darryl Rogers: Goodbye, Darryl Rogers, and good riddance. Personally, I have never felt you were the coach others said you were.

You rode the coattails of Eddie Smith and Kirk Gibson into the limelight and you rode out twice as fast with last season's performances. In actuality, last year was the first true indication of your coaching abilities.

You assumed the head coaching duties at MSU under no pressure. The NCAA probation was a pain to all except you. It was a scapegoat when things went wrong and allowed you the luxury of three "non-years" to build a winner.

Some will say you did build a winning team. After all, it would have been us at Pasadena two years ago if it hadn't been for probation, right? But, sir, what we must never forget is that Smith and Gibson were a product of Denny Stoltz's recruiting and given the quality of the players you inherited, any high school coach in the country could have done what you did.

It was a real learning experience, wasn't it? You should have learned that in college athletics you cannot ride on the laurels of your exceptional players because after they leave, the true abilities of the coach come shining through. Just ask Jud Heathcote. He'll tell you all you need to know about that.

In closing, Darryl, I must say you are really one smart cookie. Isn't it ironic you should leave MSU to be a head coach at a school that is sure to be placed on probation before the first whistle of spring practice blows? This way, you can fulfill a dream by coaching at a school you've always wanted and yet have an ace in the hole (Probation Syndrome) if things go a little sour.

More on travesty

To Mr. Mark Elie and Susan Julien in reply to your comments about the Mayo Hall party:

If we had tortured a live chicken to death as a climax to the Mayo rock party, there certainly would be a parallel between our action and those of brutal researchers, sealers who club pups and skin them alive, and the frat cat killers. However, it should be pointed out that this was a fryer from Meijer's suspended in a plastic bag — some burlesque Damocles's sword or macabre mistletoe — perhaps an offensive display but certainly not the callous disregard for life you imply.

Is joking about death the same as causing death? Is mocking one's impotence in the face of death, be it one's own or that of a being in whom one has invested considerable emotion and/or talent the same as degrading the life one cherishes? I think not. Who are you to judge another's expression of despair? Death is a travesty. Most of us have seen enough of death in its many guises to know what it is. You've got no monopoly on that awareness, or on compassion, or on anguish.

Iran in trouble

I wish to address the Ayatollah Khomeini: Dear Most High Holiness:

I feel I must warn you of a very grave danger. The danger is not from me; I am merely an American citizen. Though I am angry about what has happened in Iran, I pose no threat to either you or your subjects. What news I bring you transcends what has happened in your country. I pray you get this message before it is too late. What I speak of is this:

In a very short time, the bear will get hungry again. When he does, he will burst through your back door. When he does, we will not be able to help you. You have blinded us, and turned us into cripples. This is what the bear has been waiting for. He senses that we are helpless to help you; it is now his turn. Afghanistan was dinner; Iran will be dessert. Unless you let the eagle roost and the honeybee gather, the bear will tear you to pieces.

Please reconsider,

Allah Akbar!

Wanted: funding

If anyone had considered the idea absurd when it was first proposed, no one is laughing about it now. Strange as it might seem, MSU's basketball team came one step closer to moving off campus last week when Lansing Mayor Gerald Graves called a press conference to reveal the latest developments in the downtown "100 Block Project." The second phase of that project, a proposed 18,000-seat entertainment and sports arena, cannot be built unless the University agrees to become its primary tenant. And judging by the easy self-assuredness with which Lansing officials discuss the project, one might surmise that MSU has already signed on the dotted line.

Such is not the case, and hopefully never will be. Pointing fingers at University administrators would be easy in this instance, but to do so would only be to ignore a painful set of financial facts. Granted Jenison Fieldhouse, whether one calls it a "barn" or a "box with seats," is a less than desirable place for a Big Ten university to hold a sporting event. Granted, what the University really needs is a new facility on campus. The only obstacle in its way is money — tens of millions of dollars of it.

Fortunately, the idea of an on-campus facility has not been swept under the rug — not yet. MSU President Cecil Mackey appointed a committee in November to study the feasibility of an on-campus arena, and if there is one attribute the committee will need, it is an imaginative approach to raising money. A survey last year revealed that the majority of MSU students was willing to pay for the arena through higher tuition fees; that, however, came directly on the heels of an NCAA basketball championship and before the latest round of tuition hikes. Soliciting contributions from alumni seems to be an acceptable solution on the surface. But we would question the feasibility of drawing millions of dollars from former students who are still reeling from the University's attempt to underwrite the $17 Million Enrichment Program.

VIEWPOINT: EMPLOYMENT

Selection of coach was bungled

By FRANK J. BLATT

Perhaps you have seen the TV ad which shows a letter, flying like a magic carpet from New York to Los Angeles in under 15 seconds, while the announcer proudly describes the marvels of IBM technology that make such high speed communication possible; and all that at a cost of but 8 cents per letter! What it does not tell you, of course, is that before you can get that great bargain you must invest perhaps $30,000 in some fancy equipment.

Now at MSU we have invested a system of rapid communication that puts IBM to shame. The administration has been careful to keep this invention under wraps, perhaps until patents are secure, but they did let the cats out of the bag accidentally in all that confusion with multiple athletic directors and coaches. There it was for all to see.

On page 6 of the MSU News Bulletin, for Jan. 24, 1980, there appeared the first official announcement of the opening of a position as athletic director for MSU, over a big banner MSU IS AN EQUAL OPPORTUNITY EMPLOYER, and, by God, there, on page 1 of the very same issue, I read that the new boss has just hired Doug Weaver for the job.

Now talk about rapid communication! No sooner is the job posted than it is filled. And talk about efficient operation! My hat is off to our new vice president for operations; he really knows how to operate.

But just as with the new fangled IBM system of mail delivery, here, too, there is just one hitch. Prospective job applicants can't get wind of these high-paying positions at MSU unless they are tuned into our top secret system of instant communication.

Now, I don't really expect the big boys in the castle by the Red Cedar to play by the rules, at least not the rules they fashion for the rest of us. But, for God's sake, let's cut that hypocritical garbage about equal opportunity. Let's not go through the silly pretense of advertising openings if the fix is in or the job is already filled. Think of the poor slob who, in good faith, applies for one of these jobs and is sent the usual form letter about inadequate qualifications, or is rejected following a pro forma interview. His ego is deflated, he has insomnia worrying about bad breath or other failings, and may even wind up paying good money to some shrink to put him straight, when he could have been told right off: Go home, bud, you are not a member of the club. Let's cut that bull about equal employment opportunity unless it is for real. For custodial jobs, perhaps, though I have heard that even in that department everything isn't always quite kosher.

Trustee Radcliffe, our staunchest advocate for bringing Blacks into positions of responsibility at MSU, was remarkably subdued at recent board meetings. Surely, he must know of many outstanding Black assistant coaches who might have been excellent candidates for the job of head coach at MSU.

Blatt is a professor of physics.

'New military bloc system'

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — A Soviet delegate said Wednesday the United States was increasing its naval forces in the Indian Ocean with a view to creating a "new military bloc system" in the region.

Delegate Leo Mendelevich told the U.N. Special Committee on the Indian Ocean a large-scale arms race would develop there unless the situation were reversed, because the Soviet Union could not ignore a threat to its security.

He endorsed the committee's object of making the Indian Ocean a zone of peace, but questioned whether that was realistic under current circumstances.

Leftists holding eight

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Armed leftists occupying the Spanish Embassy vowed Wednesday to hold the building and eight hostages, including the Spanish ambassador, "until our demands have been satisfied."

Leftist high school students also continued their occupation of the Education Ministry, holding Education Minister Eduardo Colendres and hundreds of other hostages.

The students invaded the ministry Tuesday demanding a 40 percent reduction in tuition at private colleges, expanded enrollment at free public universities and dismissal of some ministry officials. A spokesperson for the students said they ranged in age from 13 to 18, and the occupation was peaceful. It was not known if they were armed.

U.S. may rejoin ILO

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Cabinet-level committee has unanimously recommended that the United States rejoin the International Labor Organization, which this country quit in 1977 after complaining that the U.N. group had grown too pro-Soviet, administration sources said Wednesday.

A memo from the committee, headed by Labor Secretary Ray Marshall, was sent Monday to President Carter, who is expected to approve the proposal within the next 10 days, allowing the United States to return to the ILO in time for the opening of its annual conference in June, said the sources, who asked not to be identified.

Nuclear plant upsets group

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — A coalition of anti-nuclear power groups says it will try again to occupy the Seabrook nuclear plant site in New Hampshire. The Coalition for Direct Action at Seabrook said Wednesday it is planning the May 24 action because of "the ineffectiveness of appealing to a government controlled by corporate self-interests."

Demonstrators tried to occupy the plant construction site on Oct. 6. That action ended after an all-day stalemate between protesters and state police at fences surrounding the site. Twenty people were arrested.

'Used as Uncle Tom's tool'

Lagos, Nigeria (AP) — Muhammad Ali, arriving in Lagos to solicit support for President Carter's anti-Moscow Olympics stand, told an airport news conference: "I am not a sellout to the Black man. I am too wise to be used as Uncle Tom's tool."

The 38-year-old former heavyweight boxing champion arrived Wednesday night at Murtala Muhammad airport on the third leg of his tour of Black Africa as Carter's special Olympics envoy.

At his previous stops in Tanzania and Kenya, Ali caused the U.S. State Department serious embarrassment when he said he would not have accepted the assignment had he known of African resentment over U.S. links with South Africa — which has a policy of apartheid, or racial separation.

Cronkite will retire

NEW YORK (AP) — Walter Cronkite says everyone has to retire sometime — but he plans to stick around as anchor of the "CBS Evening News" for a while yet.

Speaking through CBS News' press department, Cronkite confirmed Wednesday published reports that he had told network executives he would like to leave the show, which has been the ratings leader since 1968, no later than November 1981, when his contract expires.

Cronkite, 63, has said he would like to devote more time to other journalistic endeavors. He suggested that CBS had "wanted to know what my intentions are" because two other CBS reporters Dan Rather and Roger Mudd, were being courted by competing networks.

Warheads pose threat to U.S.

TOKYO (AP) — The Soviet Union has deployed (SS-20 medium range) ballistic missiles capable of carrying nuclear warheads in an area along the Shilka River, which joins the Amur River at its upper reaches near the far-eastern border between Siberia and China, the newspaper Asahi reported Thursday.

Quoting military sources in Tokyo, the mass-circulation paper said all of China, as well as Japan and Korea are within the range of the Soviet missiles. Parts of India, Indochina and the Philippines also are within range, it said.

The sources were quoted as saying that the missiles also pose a threat to U.S. warships deployed in the Pacific.

Bush: 1970 campaign finances 'clean'

By GEORGE ESPER
Associated Press Writer

MANCHESTER, N.H. — George Bush declared Thursday "my record is clean" and said his bid for the presidency would not be scarred by fresh reports alleging campaign finance improprieties 10 years ago.

Bristling over a published report questioning anew the propriety of his receipt of $106,000 from a Nixon White House slush fund during his unsuccessful 1970 Texas campaign for the U.S. Senate, Bush said:

"We reported what we received under the law in existence at the time. We complied with the law. Everyone says we have a clean bill of health. Were not in violation of any statute, federal or state."

Bush, who lost that race a decade ago to Democrat Lloyd Bentsen, was responding to a report carried in Thursday's edition of The Los Angeles Times, based on documents the newspaper said were obtained under the Freedom of Information Act.

THE TIMES REPORT confirmed one published by Newsweek magazine in 1974, which was attributed at the time to unidentified White House sources.

The Times said the documents, included in reports of the Watergate special prosecutor now in the National Archives, say more than half of the money — $55,000 — was in cash and went unreported.

"I did report it," Bush maintained.

"My record is clean and no story like this is going to have an adverse effect on it," he said.

While the 1970 transactions apparently did not violate federal law, the Times said, acceptance of the money and failure to fully disclose the funds as required by Texas law raised questions of propriety and shed new light on Bush's relationship with the Nixon White House.

CONTACTED IN HOUSTON, attorney Leon Jaworski said that in his days as Watergate special prosecutor, he had no department more determined to investigate every "nook and corner" than his campaign contributions branch. "And never once did they bring in a single complaint of any kind that involved George Bush," said Jaworski, a Democrat who is a member of Bush's presidential steering committee.

Jaworski said the department "investigated everything they could. Bush just simply was not involved. Now that is the short and long of it."

In Washington, Bush campaign chairperson James Baker issued a statement saying:

"The Los Angeles Times report of 10-year-old contributions to George Bush's 1970 Senate race from the so-called Townhouse fund is a rehash of stories which have appeared in the major newspapers and newsmagazines of this country on at least two prior occasions.

"CAMPAIGN LAWS IN 1970 were far different than federal and state laws enacted in response to abuses which occurred in the presidential election of 1972," the statement said. "Ambassador Bush's 1970 campaign was handled in compliance with the federal and state laws then applicable," it said.

Bush told reporters in New Hampshire that he was aware of the origin of the money.

"As in any other campaign, we were told who it was from, and it was reported in accordance with the law in existence at the time," he said.

Bush said the matter was investigated not only by Jaworski's office, but by congressional committees and the Texas secretary of state.

"IT WAS LOOKED at when I was up for confirmation to the CIA," said Bush, who subsequently served as director of the intelligence agency.

"I was given a clean bill of health by all three. There was no violation," he said. "It's just surprising that it keeps popping up even though all three of these looks proved we were OK and in compliance."

The secret White House fund, code-named Townhouse because it was operated out of the basement of a Washington townhouse, caused three of Richard M. Nixon's campaign workers — Jack Gleason, Herbert Kalmbach and Harry Dent — to plead guilty to election law violations during the Watergate scandal, the Times noted.

The newspaper said that before 1973 state campaign laws were not strictly enforced in Texas, partly because they were filled with loopholes. However, the oath signed when filing final campaign reports required that "all gifts and loans" received by the candidate and his campaign managers be fully shown, it said.

Bush's 1970 Harris County finance chairperson, James L. Bayless, called that report "a damned lie . . . There are absolutely, unequivocally no grounds for this report."

Senate approval sought for 'U' appointments

By TIM SIMMONS
State News Staff Writer

Former MSU Trustee Michael Smydra's resignation has triggered a resolution which would require state Senate approval of the governor's appointments to university governing boards.

Although elected officials normally hold office for a full term, a recent increase in resignation has enabled Gov. William G. Milliken to set a dangerous precedent by appointing officials for long periods of time, said Sen. Jackie Vaughn, D-Detroit.

Senate Joint Resolution "O", introduced by Vaughn, requires all gubernatorial appointments to state elective offices be subject to Senate confirmation.

Because Vaughn's resolution calls for a constitutional change it must first be approved by a two-thirds majority of the House and Senate. The resolution's final fate will then be decided by Michigan voters.

MILLIKEN'S REPLACE-

MENT FOR Smydra, however, will not be affected by the senator's proposal because of time limitations.

Milliken must replace Smydra by March and Vaughn does not expect the issue to reach Michigan voters until August.

Smydra, an East Lansing democrat, resigned from the MSU Board of Trustees two weeks ago amid controversy concerning unauthorized expenses he billed to the University.

Hakoshima: tedious mime

By MARY TINNEY
State News Reviewer

Mime is — or can be — a hypnotizing art. The intense concentration and attention to detail that are the chief requirements of the art of mime can be just as much a part of the way that an audience views the mime — at least, that will be the audience response to an artist with the proficiency of Marcel Marceau. Yass Hakoshima, the Japanese mime who performed in Fairchild Theater Wednesday night as part of the Lecture-Concert series Lively Arts and Choice Series, unfortunately didn't consistently perform with that kind of hypnotizing proficiency.

Hakoshima is the son of a Japanese opera singer mother and an archeologist father. At an early age he was interested in music, literature and both classical and modern Japanese dance and later studied modern dance in New York City. He also trained in mime with the master Etienne Decroux, who taught Marceau.

Hakoshima began his professional career in the late 1950s as a member of the first Western Pantomime group in Tokyo.

According to one critic, who notes that Hakoshima continually tests the limits of his genre, "Where it serves his purpose, he integrates contemporary Japanese and Western music, real objects, sound effects and pure dance movement into his searching surrealistic number, always deepening their dramatic — and sometimes comedic — intensity."

Hakoshima's performance Wednesday night was, admittedly, a new experience for me. The only mime I had ever seen before was Marceau, and that was on television. Perhaps it was because of my unfamiliarity or my expectations, but for me Hakoshima was a rather tedious disappointment.

First it must be noted that Hakoshima is not a mime in the tradition of Marcel Marceau. Whereas Marceau concentrates on small and specific occurrences, Hakoshima's art is much more general and expansive. He is more of an interpretive dancer — it is only occasionally that he concentrates on an object the way the Marceau does. The few skits in which he did this were, in fact, the most successful of the show. For example, in a skit entitled "Balloon" we see Hakoshima toss about a bright yellow balloon until it appears to get heavier and heavier and take on a life of its own. It is mime at its best — the simplicity of the illusion is masked by the man's lovingly detailed treatment of it.

But most of the time Hakoshima seemed to be merely drifting about the stage — quite elegantly but not very interesting. Skits such as "Fisherman" and "Spell," at first were quite fascinating, but gradually — as the man hopped and whirled across the stage — without being able to focus on any concrete descriptive action, the fascination turned to boredom.

The second part of the show fared far better than the first — with skits such as "Dream" and "Surgeon" offering that much needed focus with an added touch of humor. And Hakoshima's final skit "Eagle" was a touching and tragic portrait of a hunted bird.

There was also one particularly interesting skit entitled "Pulse" accompanied by the constant rhythmic beat of a Japanese folk drum which explored with humor and sensitivity the harried and hurried ways that we live our lives — Hakoshima is alternately a secretary, a "macho man," a rock singer, and a drug addict. Between each characterization Hakoshima runs in mime, trying to keep up with the unfaltering beat. It was the most provocative and successful skit in the show.

But all in all Hakoshima's skits seemed a little confused and uneven. Perhaps the rambling and sometimes surrealistic mime theatre of Yass Hakoshima is an acquired taste. I heard mostly negative comments as I left Fairchild. One in particular pretty much summed the evening up . . . "I feel like I've just been dreaming for two hours and can't remember exactly what about."

THIS WEEKEND

What if they like, uh, gave a weekend and, uh, like, uh, nobody came? Ya know man? I mean, like . . . like wow. For this weekend, at least, I'm in there. Can you relate?

BIG DEAL DEPT. Don McLean ("American Pie," remember?) is here this Saturday with Stuart Mitchell for two shows at 8 and 10 p.m. in the Erickson Kiva. Mariah says it's just about sold-out, in fact advance ticket sales end today at noon. But there will be a precious few unpicked-up tickets on sale at the door Saturday night for $7, the advance price is $6.

Also this weekend at Erickson Kiva is Showcasejazz's Sunday concert of Freddie Hubbard. He'll be here for two shows at 7 and 9:30 p.m. Tickets are $6 in advance at the Union ticket office, Flat Black & Circular, and Warehouse Records II — it'll be $7 at the door.

CONCERT DEPT. Ten Pound Fiddle presents Leo Kretzner, the dulcimer virtuoso, in Williams Hall at 8 tonight. Admission is $3.

In a more classical direction, today brings contemporary clarinetist Gerard Errante to MSU for a free 8:15 p.m. concert in the Music Auditorium. Sunday's the real big day. That afternoon in the Music Auditorium, Dale Clavenger conducts a French horn clinic. That evening at 8:15 p.m. Clavenger joins the Wind Symphony for a concert in Fairchild Theater. Admission is $3.50 and $1.50 for students (you can get tickets at the Union ticket office (second floor) or 116 Music Bldg.). Also at 8:15 p.m. at the Kellogg Center, the Kellogg Chamber Music series continues with a mixed chamber recital (admission is $3.50, students $1 — they're available at the Union ticket office).

THEATRE DEPT. Susan Griffin's Voices, a lyrical one-act play will be presented at 10 tonight and Saturday in 49 Auditorium. It's about five women of different backgrounds and experiences sharing their lives through poetic monologues. This is the Lansing area premiere and will be performed by the MSU collective of women theatre students.

Lu Ann Hampton Laverly Oberlander plays in the Arena Theatre at 8:15 tonight through Saturday. Phone 355-0148 for information.

Okemos Barn Theatre presents Mrs. McThing tonight through Sunday. Call 349-4340.

Finally — isn't there a lot of theatre in town? — is the comedy For the Use of the Hall, presented by the Arts Encounter Theatre Troup at the BoarsHead Theatre (425 S. Grand Ave.). It's playing at 8 tonight through Sunday. Call 372-4636 for information.

MOVIES DEPT. New films in town! Spartan triplex is showing Cuba, about revolutionary Havana. Meanwhile, the State Theatre is bringing American Gigolo, another macho street-stud picture with Richard Gere — Travolta turned this one down. George Segal and Natalie Wood star in the light comedy, The Last Married Couple in America at the Meridian 8. The same theater will also show a special preview of the new Neil Simon comedy, Chapter Two at 7:45 tonight.

It's a diverse selection on campus this weekend. Director's Choice Film Series is presenting Disney's Winnie the Pooh and The Reluctant Dragon. It's at 7 and 9:30 tonight at Fairchild Theater and admission's $1.50.

RHA presents The Frisco Kid, the Grateful Dead Film — stay clear of those fanatic Deadheads this weekend if you cherish your safety — and George Lucas's thoughtful yet uproarious American Graffiti, which was the height of a long '50s-'60s national nostalgia craze which the film originated. Call 355-0313 for times.

Classic presents Padre Padrone (My Father, My Master) a moving film about a man's Sardinian child-through-adulthood (at 7:30 and 9:35 tonight in 109 Anthony Hall). The other Classic is the truly classic Sunset Boulevard with Norma Desmond, the silent-film siren (Gloria Swanson) and MAX! and a scintillating Billy Wilder halcyon Hollywood story (At 7:30 and 9:30 p.m. Saturday in 109 Anthony Hall, Sunday at 8 p.m. in 336 Union). All films $1.50, or $1 with RHA pass.

Some other films include: Simabaddha (The Target), a free film in B-104 Wells Hall presented for South Asia Week. Holden Late Show's Morocco with (sigh) Marlene Dietrich in G-8 Holden basement, at 8 and 10 p.m. Admission $1.50, free with RHA pass. The Latin American Film Series presents Los Olvidados (The Young and the Damned) — they went and made my biography — at B-106 Wells tonight at 8 and I'm not sure if there's admission. There's Wifemistress, with Marcello Mastroianni and Laura Antonelli — Playboy's sex symbol of 1979 (Showtimes are 7:30 and 9:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday in 100 Engineering Bldg. Admission is $2, $1.50 with RHA pass). In his religious writings, Ayatollah Khomeini said that it was strictly forbidden for women to have sex with animals — it was a pleasure reserved for men, providing the animals were of the other sex. Well, you gotta have SOME morals, right? Old Ruhollah would sure be fired up about Animal Lovers, where men and women get it on in the barnyard. It's disgusting! (Friday and Saturday nights at 7:30, 9 and 10:30 p.m. and midnight in B-102 Wells Hall; admission is $2.50).

ABRAMS LULLABY DEPT. Ah, the puns never stop. MSU's planetarium continues with The Universe Game. Phone 355-4672.

KRESGE DEPT. Kresge presents Robert Hansen's figurative paintings and Karl Wolter's modern art in an exhibit beginning this Sunday. Hours are from 1 to 4 p.m.

TELEVISION DEPT. Marianne Faithfull, the faithful Rolling Stones associate, writer and no doubt inspiration for "Sister Morphine," will be on Saturday Night Live with host Chevy Chase. She will perform the less graphic songs from her album Faithless.

The Jam: 'Setting Sons' from rising stars

By JOHN NEILSON
State News Reviewer

They say that the Clash is "the only band that matters."

Not so.

With their death-or-glory, rock-n-roll-in-enemy-territory, revolution-rock bravado the Clash have brazened their way into innumerable headlines and more than a few Best of Year/Decade/Century lists, including my own. And they deserve all the credit they get (wait for Bill Holdship's article for the details). But if they choose to hide behind the slogan that graces their new double album, they'd better make sure they live up to it, because there's at least one band that could take it away from them in a fair fight.

The Jam aren't as well known in this country as the Clash, who have always shown more flair for self-promotion. In fact, when the Jam appeared in Detroit last spring at the Punch & Judy Theatre only a few hundred people showed up to witness what may have been the year's most exciting concert. They were truly great that night, and judging by that show and their new album Setting Sons (Polydor PD-1-6249) it's clear that the Jam may be the only band that can rival the Clash in terms of their vision, honesty, and sheer musical strength.

The Jam are led by Paul Weller, a 21-year-old prodigy with the soul of Ray Davies and the hands of Pete Townshend. Like Davies, Weller displays remarkable insight into English life — the hopes, the fears, and the aspirations, grand and petty alike. This ability to grasp the Big Picture, however, detaches the viewer from the often-irrational things he sees, so Weller also shares Davies' longing for simpler times and sanity of some sort (or at least some personal shelter from a world gone mad). Most of Weller's songs come from one of these two perspectives, and he delivers them all with a disarming passion that leaves no doubt as to the sincerity of his words.

Weller's strongest claim to greatness, though, is the fact that he is one of the new wave's most gifted guitarists. His style is firmly based on the sound of Pete Townshend circa My Generation through Sell Out — a fact which initially led many to brush off the Jam as Who imitators — but over the course of the band's four albums Weller has developed to the point that it's obvious that the comparison is only superficial.

The fact that the Jam is a three-piece band means there is no room for any slack, and this may be one of the keys to their high-energy sound. Bassist Bruce Foxton weaves driving and imaginative lines through and around Weller's explosive chording, and Rick Buckler underpins it all with his precision drumming. The three of them manage to create an amazingly full sound in concert, and on Setting Sons what little overdubbing there is makes them sound even better.

The new album is basically a concept album, although in this case the concept is less of a narrative than a framework for Weller's pictures of English society and the effect that society has on people. Among the major targets are corporate systems and war, both of which grind up people for their own particular ends and destroy the bonds of feeling and caring between them in the process. The seeming inevitability of succumbing to one or the other is summed up in "Burning Sky" when Weller sings "... we've all grown up and we've got our lives and the values that we had once upon a time/seem stupid now 'cause the rent must be paid/and some bonds severed and other made."

"Burning Sky" opens the album on a churning, majestic note that sets the tone for the whole album, but the song that follows is a real musical oddity. "Smithers-Jones" — a Bruce Foxton song sending up the Corporate Man — is played by a string section scored by Pete Solley (producer of the Romantics LP), and despite the absence of their usual instrumentation it works surprisingly well. It's worth noting that where previous Jam songs of this nature were acidic put-downs of the character involved, "Smithers-Jones" shows a high degree of empathy for him.

"Saturday's Kids" and "The Eton Rifles" look at the illusions of English youth from a perspective of real class consciousness. The former deals with the directionless lives of the working class kids — "the real creatures that time forgot" — who hate the system because they're supposed to although they don't have any real grasp of what it is. The latter (which was a single in England) is directed more toward some of the youthful aristocrats at Eton who "composed a revolutionary symphony/then went to bed with a charming young thing." The side ends with the album's most upbeat song, a blistering re-make of "Love Is Like A Heatwave" that could give Linda Ronstadt a cardiac arrest.

Side two starts off with four of Setting Sons' best songs.

"Girl On The Phone" is the tale of a very strange modern-day relationship ("the girl on the phone keeps ringing back ... she's telling me this and she's telling me that"), while the other English single "Strange Town" is a stranger's view of how cold people can be. The latter song features some exquisite lead guitar breaks and is an excellent song overall.

In "Private Hell" Weller paints a remarkable portrait of the disintegrating inner world of a woman who might be Mrs. Smithers-Jones, and the fact that it is so convincing is amazing in light of Weller's relative youth. The three remaining songs form a trilogy of sorts about a circle of friends broken up by a war. "Thick as Thieves" is a poignant look back on their carefree childhoods before being taken away to be "Little Boy Soldiers," while the final song "Wasteland" is every bit as bleak as the title suggests.

Some of the magic in rock music, however, is the way even the bleakest visions can be paired to exhilarating music that offers passion and hope behind the words, and Setting Sons is a perfect example of this. It's a great album by a band that not only matters now but will keep getting better with time.

Destroy All Monsters

Two Ann Arbor bands will be featured at the fifth Dooley's "I Don't Like Mondays" new wave show. Headlining the concert will be Destroy All Monsters. The band features Michael Davis, formerly of the MC-5, Ron Ashton from Iggy's original Stooges, and a female lead singer named Niagara who comes across as a necrophiliac's delight.

The Monsters may be remembered by local rock fans as the opening act for the Ramones at Dooley's during the summer of '78, and the headlining act at the first Olds Plaza "punk" party. The band has released two singles on an independent label and recently completed a tour of Europe. Rock fans should be forewarned that the band doesn't sound like either the Stooges or the MC-5, and they are the type of group you either hate or love.

Opening the show will be the Cult Heroes, who also performed at the first Olds Plaza party. Paul Kirby of Variety magazine called the band "a most promising new rock combo."

Doors open at 8:30 p.m. Admission is $3 at the door.

Icers face Polish team

By BILL TEMPLETON
State News Sports Writer

The MSU hockey team receives a break from its rugged Western Collegiate Hockey Association schedule this weekend, as the Spartans icer will play the Polish Olympic team at 7:30 tonight in Munn Ice Arena.

Tonight's game, the lone contest in nearly two weeks for the Spartans, will serve as purely an exhibition game.

The game with the Polish Olympic team will not count on the Spartans' overall record, but should still afford fans an entertaining game.

"They play the European style of wide-open hockey," said MSU assistant coach Shawn Walsh.

MSU IS THE last of three colleges to host the Polish team this week. In its two games previous to its encounter tonight with MSU, the Polish team lost to Bowling Green State University 5-4, while beating the University of Michigan 9-2.

"They had jet lag or something in the game against Bowling Green," MSU coach Ron Mason said, "and then they came back and outmuscled Michigan on almost every turn."

Mason noted the Polish team has good skaters, controls the puck very well and is a system-oriented team.

"They're very strong too," Mason said. "Their power play is devastating, and we'll have to play our best game of the year to beat them. They're a well-oiled machine."

Mason said there probably will not be a lot of hitting in the game, as Mason said it does not seem to be the style of game the Polish team plays.

"WE'RE GONNA HAVE to try and prevent them from getting a lot of shots on our goalies," Mason said, "and contain them when they have the puck."

The Spartans, although not involved in WCHA action until next weekend, will use the game with the Polish Olympic team to stay sharp during the layoff.

MSU currently holds down the eighth and final playoff spot in the league standings with a 9-13-0 mark and 11-18-0 overall record. The icer's next league action will pit the Spartans against cellar-dwellers the University of Denver in a pair of home contests on Feb. 15 and 16.

"After a two-week rest from league play, we should be fresh enough for our final six games to keep up the intensity for both games of a series," Walsh said.

Mason said that all of the Spartan players will see a lot of playing time in the game against the Polish Olympic team, with the exception likely to be junior defenseman Dan Sutton who sustained a charley horse to his upper left thigh in last week's series against the University of Minnesota.

Sophomore goaltender Doug Belland, who played his first game since late December against Minnesota, may or may not see action tonight.

SEASON COMES TO CLIMAX

Wrestlers host Michigan

By JIM MITZELFELD
State News Sports Writer

The MSU wrestling season comes to a climax when the Spartans host the University of Michigan at 7:30 tonight in the IM Sports-West Arena.

The two teams tied 18-18 in MSU's opening meet of the season and have very similar records. MSU coach Grady Peninger said the two teams would hold nothing back for this one.

"We'll just have to be ready for them," Peninger said. "You can throw the records out the window when these two teams get together. It's a hot rivalry, that's for sure."

MSU hosts the University of Pittsburgh at 7:30 p.m. Saturday after Friday's emotional affair.

THE SPARTANS DROPPED both of their meets last weekend to the nation's No. 1 and No. 2 teams on their trip through Iowa, putting their won-loss mark at 8-6-1. MSU possesses a 4-1-1 Big Ten mark compared with the Wolverines 4-2-1 record in the conference and 8-4-1 mark overall.

U-M did not fare any better than the Spartans on its recent trip through Iowa losing to both Iowa State University and the University of Iowa and then dropping a meet to the University of Minnesota.

In the first meet at Ann Arbor the Spartans won six of the 10 matches but the Wolverines managed to pull out a draw by pinning two MSU wrestlers.

Five of the six Spartans who won their matches the first time will be in action for MSU this evening. MSU's 142-pounder, Jeff Therrian, who is 17-3 this season, is expected to handle Mark Pearson whom he decided by a 7-2 mark earlier. Shawn Whitcomb, Jim Ellis, Greg Sargis and Jeff Thomas were other MSU winners in the opening meet.

Fourteen dual meets later, both teams are considerably different than they were for the first meeting and Peninger knows it.

"There's going to be some very different matchups this time around," he said. "There will be six or seven matches that could go either way."

Peninger added the 126, 134, 150, 158 and heavyweight matches would all be key battles.

LINDSAY, CASSLEMAN TO COMPETE

Stars return for MSU Relays

By WILL KOWALSKI
State News Sports Writer

Two former Spartan track greats, Herb Lindsay and Bob Cassleman, will return to Jenison Fieldhouse Saturday and compete in feature races when the Spartans host more than 500 athletes at the MSU Relays.

Preliminary races will begin at 12:30 p.m., while the finals in the long jump and triple jump will be held in the afternoon. The finals in other field events will begin again at 6 p.m., with the finals in the track races starting at 7:30 p.m.

Lindsay is currently considered a top candidate for the 1980 U.S. Olympic team in the 5,000 and 10,000-meter events, and was recently chosen the No. 1 distance runner in the country by Track and Field magazine.

Lindsay earned All-America honors in cross country and won three Big Ten track titles in the two and three-mile events for MSU from 1974 through 1977.

ON SATURDAY HE will run in the Invitational two-mile and his competition will include All-America Bill Lundberg and former University of Michigan star Mike McGuire.

Also running against Lindsay will be current U-M distance runner Dan Heikkinen, MSU runner Martin Schulist, and former Eastern Michigan University great Gordon Minty, who now teaches in MSU's College of Education.

Cassleman, who finished his Spartan career in 1974, will compete in the special 600-yard run, the same event in which he won Big Ten honors in four consecutive years.

Cassleman twice received All-America recognition for his distance running, and recently he has been active in AAU meets while running for a Pacific Coast club.

Cassleman has never been beaten on the Jenison track, but the Spartans Calvin

Thomas and Tyrone Williams, U-M's Gardner, and the University of Miami's Darryl Sargeant will try to break that unbeaten streak.

Current MSU All-America senior Randy Smith will also try to keep his string of victories intact. Smith has never lost in the 60-yard dash in Big Ten meets or at the MSU Relays, and with his best time of 6.0 in the event he is only two-tenths of a second from the world record of 5.8.

SMITH'S CLOSEST COMPETITOR will be Greg Miller, a native of Flint, who currently runs for the University of Tennessee.

Spartan senior Andy Wells heads the field in the 60-yard high hurdles. Wells placed first in both the U-M and Western Michigan University relays recently, and has a personal best time of 7.2. Trying to beat Wells will be two University of Tennessee runners, Anthony Hancock and Tom Garth, both of whom are football stars for the Volunteers.

MSU's distance medley relay team of Thomas, Michael White, Tim Kenny and All-America Keith Moore, who recently qualified for the NCAA finals, will be hotly challenged by squads from U-M and Western Michigan.

White, who qualified for the NCAA meet last weekend at the Western invitation in the mile event with a time of 4:05.7, is considered by Spartan coach Jim Bibbs as the catalyst of the distance medley corps and will run the third-quarter leg in the medley race.

In the high jump, MSU's Paul Piwinski will be trying to make it over the 7-foot-1 and one-quarter inch level to qualify for the nationals, after making it over the 7-foot mark twice this season.

Women cagers in Big Ten tourney; face Indiana in quarter-finals

By BILL TEMPLETON
State News Sports Writer

The MSU women's basketball team takes its 9-8 season record to Madison, Wis., this weekend for the Big "Nine" championship tournament where it is seeded sixth.

The University of Michigan will be the lone Big Ten school absent from this year's event, due to its commitment to play in another tournament.

Play begins today in the Wisconsin Fieldhouse, and will conclude Sunday, with the championship finals slated to begin at 4 p.m.

The Spartan cagers, runners-up a year ago, begin play today with a 3:30 p.m. contest against Indiana University.

MSU, which has not played the Hoosiers this season, beat them a year ago in the quarter-final round. Should the Spartans win their first game, they will play the winner of the University of Wisconsin-University of Minnesota game at 6 p.m. Saturday.

THE TOURNAMENT IS a single-elimination event, thus spelling a departure from the field after just one loss.

Other quarter-final matchups find No. 1 seeded and defending champion Northwestern University going up against the winner of the Purdue University-University of Illinois game and Ohio State University facing the University of Iowa.

About their first opponent in the tournament, the Spartans' head coach Karen Langeland compared Indiana to MSU.

"I think their record is about 15-10 this year," she said, "but they've had a lot of the same problems that we've had."

"They're a very young team and they've had a lot of injuries, but they've got a good team."

LANGELAND NOTED INDIANA'S inconsistency as well. "They beat Northwestern, which isn't easy to do, but then they lost later to Ohio State. So they've been up and down."

The Spartans have been the perennial bridesmaid in the Big Ten tournament, finishing second in three of the last four years, and in the third spot once.

This season marks the fifth year that a tournament has been held to determine a conference champion. With the exception of Northwestern winning the title last year, Ohio State swept to three consecutive championships.

MSU will count heavily on senior co-captain Mary Kay Itnyre and sophomores Deb Traxinger and Nanette Gibson in this weekend's play.

Itnyre leads the team in both scoring average and rebounds, while Traxinger leads the team in assists. Gibson, following a 17-point performance in last Tuesday's 93-76 win over Oakland University, seems to be recovered from an injury that has kept her on the Spartan bench for most of the year.

Four dual meets for fencing team

The MSU fencing team will meet two Big Ten foes as well as a pair of non-league opponents this weekend as the Spartans reach the halfway point of their schedule in Kenosha, Wis.

The Spartans take a 2-4 season record into Saturday's competition in Kenosha, Wis. against conference powers Northwestern University and the University of Wisconsin. Host University of Wisconsin at Parkside and Lawrence University round out the five-team field.

MSU will fence each school as a separate dual meet although Lawrence will field a squad in only the foil competition.

MSU coach Charlie Schmitter said he is hoping his squad can win three of the four matches.

"If we're lucky, we could win three," he said. "But as long as we look respectable, I'll live with that."

Schmitter said defending Big Ten champion Wisconsin is "down a bit this year." But he added that Northwestern, which finished fourth at the conference championships last year, is "fairly strong."

He called Wisconsin at Parkside more "in our position" while noting that Lawrence has an "informal" squad.

MSU senior Bryan Peterman, who has compiled a 19-6 mark in epee, is MSU's main weapon. Junior Brian Morrow has 13 victories in sabre for the Spartans while senior Dennis Brauning has the team's best mark in foil at 10-11.

SPARTANS' NEXT ACTION AT OHIO STATE

Gibbs leads gymnasts over WMU

By WILL KOWALSKI
State News Sports Writer

Led once again by junior standout Marvin Gibbs, the MSU men's gymnastics team readied itself for this weekend's meet in Columbus, Ohio, by downing Western Michigan University, 251.10-244.85, Wednesday night.

Spartan coach George Szypula was quite pleased with the squad's overall performance against the Broncos, and said the victory gives the team good momentum for Saturday's match-up against Ohio State and Ball State universities.

"The Western meet was good preparation and an attitude developer for Ohio State," Szypula said.

"We scored 251 against Western, but at Columbus we'll have to hit around 260 to win. It's going to be a close, tough meet, and Marvin's going to have to be at his best."

GIBBS PLACED FIRST in the floor exercise and on the pommel horse and took seconds on the rings, vault and parallel bars at Western to take first in the all-around with a 53.40 score. It was the second highest all-around score of his career.

"Marvin did little things wrong here and there, but as a whole he really sparked and impressed a lot of people," Szypula said.

Also having a good outing was MSU freshman Bart Acino, who tied with teammate Ivan Merritt in the floor exercise and took first on the rings. Acino's 50.60 third place all-around total was his highest of the season.

Merritt additionally placed third in the vault and Pete Roberts, usually the Spartan's No. 1 performer in the event, placed fifth.

Ohio State has been hitting around 263 per meet while Ball State will be a bit easier to handle as it has been averaging only 247.

Beardsley honored

MSU Assistant Athletic Director Bill Beardsley has been named "Business Manager of the Year" for 1979 by colleagues from schools around the nation.

The award, sponsored by the College Athletic Business Managers Association, was presented at the recent CABMA convention in New Orleans held in conjunction with the NCAA meetings.

Beardsley also was elected first vice president of the group for 1980 and in 1981 will ascend to the presidency.

Beardsley is in his eighth year as business manager for Spartan athletics and has been associated with MSU since 1961.

Keze joins Zeke in frisbee frolics

What more could Spartan football fans ask for at halftime than cheerleaders, marching bands, and Zeke, the Wonder Dog, a halftime fixture since 1977. Well, this fall there will be an addition to Zeke's halftime show when his companion Keze joins the act.

Keze (pronounced Keyzee) is a chocolate labrador retriever whom owner Gary Eisenberg is training to follow in Zeke's pawsteps.

Keze is now 4 and one-half months old and Eisenberg plans to work her into the act with Zeke in at least a few Spartan halftimes this fall.

"Even if she's not truly proficient at catching yet, it will be a nice contrast on the field," Eisenberg said. "It will get her used to the crowd gradually. After all, Zeke was two when he first appeared at halftime."

For the past few months Eisenberg has been working indoors with Keze on catching balls and sticks because winter frisbee is rough on her sensitive puppy teeth.

The majority of learning is from Zeke's example, Eisenberg said. Keze is fascinated watching Zeke catch frisbees, he added.

Eisenberg acquired Zeke as a companion during his sophomore year at MSU. The frisbee catching was spontaneous, he said.

"Keze is more of a planned puppy," Eisenberg said. "I'm taking the best of the training techniques I used with Zeke and using them for her," he said.

Eisenberg intends for Keze to be Zeke's eventual mate and hopefully breed them someday. He hunted for a puppy for about a month before he bought Keze from a family in Perry.

"She has super retriever instincts," Eisenberg said. "She came from a fine hunting stock."

"Zeke was a little bit jealous at first but it's starting to diminish by this point," Eisenberg said.

The name "Keze" was chosen by Eisenberg from 1,500 entries in a "name Zeke's protege" contest. Valerie Howell of Mason sent in "Keze" as an anagram of Zeke's name. Howell will come to a Spartan football game next fall to throw a frisbee for Keze at halftime.

Rumors started last fall that Zeke was going to retire this year when Keze made a cameo appearance at a halftime show.

Eisenberg said the rumors are false and that Zeke is NOT retiring this year.

Zeke has a touch of arthritis in his right rear hip but so do millions of Americans, Eisenberg said. He is not leaping as much as he used to because it is the landing that hurts him somewhat, he said.

"Zeke has a very independent mind," Eisenberg said. "If he doesn't want to catch it (the Frisbee) he won't."

Zeke still loves a hard workout, Eisenberg said. This winter, Eisenberg and Zeke have been running a little and practicing to keep in tone.

UNACCEPTABLE ACCOUNTING PRACTICES

Houk asks for audits of commissioners

By MOLLY MIKA
State News Staff Writer

The Ingham County Prosecuting Attorney Tuesday requested an audit of the Ingham County Board of Commissioners' expense and attendance accounts.

Peter Houk's request followed his review last week of Sheriff Kenneth Preadmore's initial investigation of the commissioners' expense vouchers and attendance payments.

Commissioners receive $30 for each board or committee meeting attended. The commissioners themselves keep track of their attendance and turn in attendance vouchers for payment.

After reviewing the sheriff's interim report, Houk concluded the county had not been following acceptable accounting practices prior to 1978 regarding these accounts.

HOUK SAID HE had two reasons for referring the investigation to the State Local Government Audit Division of the Department of Treasury.

"Neither this office nor the county sheriff have the expert resources to conduct an audit of this nature to determine whether the alleged discrepancies were due only to poor accounting practices," Houk said in a release.

Furthermore, the nature of the public debate between the sheriff and some commissioners, he said, makes it appropriate to involve an independent third party "to ensure public confidence in the local system of justice."

Although specific names of those under investigation have not been made public, Commissioner Jess Sobel, D-East Lansing, said "anyone who has ever crossed the sheriff's path" is under investigation. Sobel said that includes himself.

"The sheriff's political harassment of the commissioners is an outrageous abuse of his power," Sobel said.

COMMISSIONER MARK

GREBNER, D-East Lansing, said he is pleased that he and possibly 12 other former or present commissioners are under investigation.

"It's just lunacy," Grebner said. "I'm pleased with the action because it really makes it clear how far the sheriff is willing to go."

Grebner said he believes the list includes "liberal Democrats" on the finance committee who cut funds of the sheriff's department: commissioners Sobel, Tom Mitchell, D-Williamston, former commissioner Pat Ryan, D-Lansing, and himself.

Also under investigation, Grebner said, are commissioners Steve Thomas, R-Okemos, and Frank Guerriero, R-Mason, and former commissioners Sen. William Sederburg, R-East Lansing, Rep. Debbie Stabenow, D-Lansing and County Clerk Lingg Brewer.

Grebner's attorney, Richard Kinkade, said the auditors will check the bookkeeping to decide if the commissioners make unauthorized payments to themselves.

If the auditors find evidence of stealing, Houk said he would refer the case to the Attorney General for criminal prosecution.

Since the auditors need to review thousands of documents, the audit will probably

Honors society opens chapter

The Golden Key National Honor Society, an organization recognizing outstanding academic achievement, recently started a chapter at MSU.

Membership criteria is based solely on academics, making it different from many other societies that also emphasize extra-curricular achievements said Brian Hoban, chapter vice president.

Members must be juniors or seniors and have at least a 3.5 grade point average. Lifetime membership in the society is $35.

Golden Key was started by the current national president, James W. Lewis, at George State University in 1977. The society was formed to honor academic excellence in all fields.

The Golden Key will hold a reception for prospective members at 8 p.m. March 4 in Parlors A, B and C of the Union.

Those students who qualify for membership in the society will receive invitations by mail.

Plans for a tutoring program will be discussed at the reception, giving members the opportunity to get involved in helping other students, Hoban said.

For more information, members can contact chapter advisor, Mimi M. Sayed, W-30 Holmes Hall.

Dayton Hudson mall plans ready

By SUSIE BENKELMAN
State News Staff Writer

Plans for Dayton Hudson's Cedarbrooke Shopping Center are ready for approval and need only minor revisions, East Lansing planners said Wednesday at the Planning Commission work session.

The plans, submitted to the planning staff by the Warren Holmes-Kenneth Black Company for Dayton Hudson Properties were approved by city group manager, Brad Pryce. The Planning Commission will either approve or reject the plans at its regular meeting, Feb. 13.

Pryce approved the Cedarbrooke plans and recommended they be adopted with only minor conditions, namely a road widening at one entrance and the redesign of technical parts of a storm sewer system.

Dan Chappelle, chairperson of the Planning Commission said he expects the commission to approve the plan at next Wednesday's meeting.

"I have an idea it will go through. I have a hunch anyway, because of the amount of time we spent on it," he said.

The mall is to be located in the northwest part of East Lansing adjacent to US-127 and Lake Lansing Road. The site also includes 24 acres in Lansing Township.

If approved, the mall will sit on 55 acres of land which will be encircled by a road. Behind the mall will be a sedimentation pond and lake, which will be used by residents of the area and will not be open to the public, said Dan Swantko, project director for Dayton Hudson Properties.

The $22 million structure will be comparable to, but substantially smaller than the Fairlane Town Center in Dearborn and other two-level malls, Swantko said. The proposed mall area would take up approximately 495,000 square feet.

The two-level oblong structure will have a large department store at each end. Dayton Hudson's criteria for renting store sites to merchants will be their merchandising abilities, financial status, and the variety of shops Dayton Hudson feels would be an appropriate mix, Swantko said.

Commissioner William Beachler expressed discontent with approving the plan without a model or a picture of it because, he said, it is difficult to visualize the plan.

In other business, the commission discussed a plan submitted by East Lansing State Bank to renovate its office at Abbott Road and West Grand River Avenue. The $1.75 million project would consolidate the bank's offices to a main office in downtown East Lansing.

The bank proposes that centralizing its main activity would reinforce the downtown as the hub of business and commercial activity.

The project will be financially assisted by the Economic Development Corporation by the use of tax exempt industrial revenue bonds.

The offices would displace several vacant apartments in the upper part of the bank. Although the housing is vacant, the EDC is concerned about any loss of housing to the area, planner Jim Ravensway said. The EDC Act allows the corporation to finance replacement housing for any EDC projects, he said.

COGS OK's travel money for vet. medicine student

The Council of Graduate Students approved a $600 travel appropriation for a veterinary medicine student to attend two national meetings of the student chapter of the American Veterinary Medical Association.

Elaine Dornton, a delegate to the student chapter, requested the funding at the COGS meeting Wednesday night. Dornton will go to Baton Rouge, La., this month and to Washington, D.C., in July to meet with the national student chapter of the AVMA.

Dornton said Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., is working on a proposal to take the Guaranteed Student Loan program out of the federal government and make it a private corporation. She also said the Health Professions Loans Act will expire on Sept. 30, 1980, severely cutting funds for medical students.

Dornton said the AVMA is trying to organize efforts to fight federal legislation that would reduce funds for graduate students.

The Council also discussed the Employment Forum held last week. An evaluation will be made on whether to hold the forum again next year, because of the low attendance at this year's event. Approximately 85 people attended the panel discussions.

The total expenses for the Forum were approximately $1,850 and council members said that the low turnout may not justify future expenditures.

The council tabled a motion to appropriate $500 to establish an account at the Computer Center. The account would be used to do a computer analysis of the evaluation forms students filled out at the Employment Forum. The motion was tabled pending a more complete presentation of the pros and cons of doing the computer analysis.

ting registration cards from the Central Committee for Conscientious Objectors, a non-profit organization founded in 1948 to aid individuals in matters of conscience, war and militarism.

PIRGIM has ordered 2,000 C.O. cards, which people send to the Philadelphia-based organization to be kept for the record.

PIRGIM will also be distributing C.O. forms from the National Interreligious Service Board for Conscientious Objectors, which allow C.O.s to state their reasons for objecting to participating in the military.

The NISBCO form will be available at a PIRGIM-sponsored anti-draft rally scheduled for noon Wednesday in front of Beaumont Tower.

NISBCO forms and COCO cards will also be available in the PIRGIM-MSU office, 22 Student Services Bldg.

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION and cards on the C.O. option can also be obtained by writing the CCCO, P.O. Box 15796, Philadelphia, Penn., 19103.

Larry Spears, C.O. campaign program director for the CCCO, said his organization has a packet of information for people who are interested in the C.O. option.

The Rev. Richard Preston of the St. John Student Center, 327 M.A.C. Ave., said the Catholic Archdiocese of Lansing will also be accepting statements for the record from people who seek C.O. status.

U.S. will not impose sanctions

Nonetheless, State Department spokesman Carter said it is not clear whether Iran has backed down from its long-standing demand that the deposed shah be returned to Iran as the price for the release of the hostages.

But for the second straight day, the new Iranian president blasted the young Moslem radicals publicly, called them "rebels against the government." And the Revolutionary Council, led by Bani Sadr, took action against them, restricting their access to national radio and television.

It appeared Bani Sadr was trying to undercut the militants' status as revolutionary heroes in preparation for a resolution of the hostage crisis being worked out behind the scenes.

A Kuwait newspaper, the weekly Al Khadaf, reported from Tehran that the release of the approximately 50 American hostages at the embassy was "imminent." The paper, which did not identify the source of its information, said the number of militants at the embassy had been reduced from 400 to 50.

IT SAID U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim was trying to persuade Bani Sadr to "pressure the students to leave the embassy and have them replaced by regular Iranian troops."

Waldheim has been trying to work out an arrangement whereby an international commission would be established to investigate the alleged crimes of the shah's regime, in return for release of the hostages. But U.N. officials say the timing of the release — whether it will be as the commission begins its work or after it is completed — remains unsettled.

Adding to the confusion, some Iranian officials still say they believe the hostages cannot be freed until ousted Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi is returned to Iran to stand trial, which has been the militants' constant demand.

Bani Sadr launched his attack on the militants Wednesday after they said in a national broadcast they had found documents in the U.S. Embassy showing that the national guidance and information minister, Nasser Minachi, had "close links" with the CIA, and Minachi was arrested by revolutionary guards without government authorization. The Revolutionary Council later ordered Minachi released, and the freed minister, who denied the charges, challenged the militants to confront him with the documents.

IT WAS THE second such arrest. In November, former government spokesperson Amir Abbas Entezam was arrested after the militants broadcast similar allegations against him. In both cases Tehran observers said the documents appeared to indicate relatively innocent contacts between the officials and the U.S. Embassy.

The Council on Thursday ordered the state-owned broadcast system not to allow the embassy militants any more air time to publicize such allegations. The Council said it would first review any incriminating documents the militants find.

In a second rebuke of the militants, Bani Sadr denounced them in a front-page editorial in Tehran's leading newspaper, Kayhan.

"Why do those students who call themselves followers of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini violate the constitution by their illegal acts?" he asked.

Senate approval sought

The resolution would prohibit Milliken from filling elective positions based solely on patronage or personal reasons, Vaughn said.

"Because of health problems, social mobility or employment responsibilities, we are finding more and more instances of elected officials not completing their term of office," he said.

Vaughn's proposal would affect gubernatorial appointments to elected state officials including the State Board of Education and the Michigan Supreme Court.

FBI has strong case against Williams

strong target for federal prosecution. Quoting unidentified Justice Department sources, the papers also listed Reps. Michael Myers, D-Pa., and Richard Kelly, R-Fla.

The Star said other strong cases were being prepared against Reps. John Jenrette, D-S.C., and Raymond Lederer, D-Pa. Instead of those two, the Daily News listed Reps. Frank Thompson Jr., D-N.J., and John Murphy, D-N.Y., as other prime targets.

A lawyer for Murphy asked the FBI and the Justice Department to turn over any sound or visual recordings of Murphy, under the Freedom of Information and Privacy Acts. The government had no immediate response.

ON WEDNESDAY, Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti conferred by telephone with New Jersey Attorney General John J. Degnan. It was not known what they discussed.

At the Capitol, Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., chairperson of the Senate Ethics Committee, conferred with aides to decide how hard to press the Justice Department for evidence developed in the FBI investigation.

Heflin said it is possible the committee could issue subpoenas for material it needs in pursuing its own investigation. The committee has voted unanimously to conduct a "preliminary inquiry" into allegations against Williams.

A similar inquiry will be held on allegations against Sen. Howard Cannon, D-Nev., chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee, concerning his handling of trucking deregulation legislation and a real estate transaction in Las Vegas which Cannon acknowledged discussing with a representative of the Teamsters union. The Cannon matter is believed unrelated to the FBI bribery investigation.

FBI OFFICIALS SAID Wednesday that Cannon had been told there is "no pending investigation" against him, but the Senate committee indicated it still intended to look into the matter.

Heflin said Justice Department officials probably will meet with members of the ethics panel to discuss whether they can conduct parallel inquiries in the bribery case. Civiletti says the department will resist turning FBI evidence over to congressional committees for fear of jeopardizing prosecution of criminal suspects in the case.

At a news conference Thursday, Kelly elaborated on his contention that he took $25,000 in cash Jan. 8 from some suspicious persons — whom he later learned were FBI agents — because he was conducting his own investigation of wrongdoing. Kelly returned most of the money to the FBI on Sunday.

Kelly criticized the press and charged that the FBI had "placed me and my family in jeopardy." He said he did not expect to be indicted because his intent was not to take a bribe but to investigate the bribers.

Nate Lang, Senior Manufacturing Development Engineer

"We are one of the most automated, computer controlled, silicon growers in the world."

"One operation is capable of monitoring 25 crystal growers. By 1982 we will be developing crystals with melt sizes up to 38,000 grams. . . That's what I like about Delco Electronics. We are doing things in a very big way, but it's still a very relaxed atmosphere that encourages creative thinking. You have an opportunity to learn and understand different technologies and to work in a lot of different areas. I have been here seven years and I've worked in the metallurgy laboratory, the SEM laboratory process area, the metallization area, wet chemical process and the crystal growing area. It's nice to know that you're working for a company that offers so many different opportunities and a competitive spirit that breeds success. We work on tomorrow's world every day at Delco Electronics. It's exciting. Come to Kokomo and see why . . . the future is . . . Delco Electronics."

We will be on campus to meet Electrical Engineers, Chemical Engineers, Mechanical Engineers and Industrial Engineers.

Chrysler's '79 losses a record

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. lost $1.097 billion last year, more than any other U.S. company ever has lost on its day-to-day business.

The deficit — $3 million a day — was close to what Chrysler predicted — $1.073 billion — when it applied for federal help last summer. It amounts to $17.18 per share.

The struggling No. 3 automaker lost $205 million or $3.54 per share in 1978. Before the car market collapsed last spring, it was forecasting a break-even year.

But the market slump dragged Chrysler's worldwide sales down 19 percent to 1.8 million, resulting in a fall in revenue of 12 percent from 1978's $13.6 billion to $12 billion.

FOURTH QUARTER REVENUES fell 24 percent from $3.99 billion to $3.05 billion. The fourth quarter loss amounted to $376 million or $5.77 per share versus a profit of $43.2 million or 61 cents per share in the final quarter of 1978.

Several corporations have reported larger losses but they always included one-time write-offs from such activities as plant closings. Chrysler's is the biggest to arise solely from operations.

Ford Motor Co. is expected to show a loss of about $1 billion from its North American car and truck operations for 1979 and perhaps 1980 as well. Ford, however, is much larger than Chrysler and its overseas profits will give it the third best year in its history.
