

WORK IN PROGRESS

A leading progressive magazine for those interested in what's behind the news.

Political debate

Labour trends

Resistance

Political trials

SUBSCRIBE NOW!

Phone: (011)
403-1912/403-1586

Or write to:
SARS
PO Box 32716
Braamfontein 2017

Southern African Review of Books

TAKE ADVANTAGE OF OUR SPECIAL SUBSCRIPTION OFFER

On taking a subscription to SARB, you can buy one or all of the following RECENTLY PUBLISHED books at the SARB book club discount price:

	UKPP	SARB
Rob Turrell Capital and Labour on the Kimberley Diamond Fields 1871-1890 Cambridge [hbk]	£25.00	£18.75
Lan White Magomero. The Story of an African Village Cambridge [hbk]	£19.50	£14.65
Adelaide Tambo Oliver Tambo Speaks. Preparing for Power Heinemann [pbk]	£ 4.95	£3.70
Tim Jenkin Escape from Pretoria Kliptown Books [pbk]	£ 5.00	£3.75
Michael Dingake My Fight Against Apartheid Kliptown Books [pbk]	£ 5.00	£3.75
Shula Marks (ed.) Not Either an Experimental Doll Women's Press [pbk]	£ 5.95	£4.45
Steve Davis Apartheid's Rebels: Inside South Africa's Hidden War Yale [pbk]	£ 6.95	£5.20

UK postage free; Overseas postage £1.50 per book

(Book Club to be paid for in sterling)

Payment by cheque, credit transfer (Nat West, 106 Finchley Rd, NW3 5JN, acc. 22970991) or Girobank, (Booth, Merseyside, acc.5991005)
Southern African Review of Books, 25A Greencroft Gardens, London NW6 3LN.

SARB annual (4 issues) subscription rates (please tick appropriate ☐)

	UK	Eur & Ovs/Surface	Ovs/Air
Individuals	£5 (US$10)	£8 (US$16)	£10 (US$20)
Institutions	£10 (US$20)	£13 (US$26)	£17 (US$34)
Supporting	£20 (US$40)

NAME _____

ADDRESS _____

Western libraries subscribe to African journals.

This review endeavours to draw attention to some of the material published in southern Africa over the last two years. It does so, admittedly, mainly in relation to the most flourishing of African academic publishing settings, Zimbabwe, where a large English-speaking audience, educational development, and the competition between established and new publishers have combined to stimulate a relatively large flow of books.

One of the impulses towards publication in southern Africa is to set the record of struggle straight, to name the heroes. I found this in Zimbabwe, where nearly 30 years after the events authors are anxious to claim honour for unnamed heroes of the independence struggle. I was shown an unpublished manuscript which posed the question: 'Who were the first stone-throwers?' and allocated the honour to the people of Chimurenga village. Nephew Tembo's The Likou Burton Killing, published by Apple Books, describes his book as 'just the beginning of the work in compiling the full list of freedom fighters'. ... I promise to unravel more facts and names and add them to the book as they become available.' In his foreword Hydam Dingwaya Banda gives this listing a contemporary significance:

I am delighted to record that UNIP, the Party which Nephew Tembo tirelessly helped to build to what it is today, won independence on 24 October 1984 and is still in control. The 64 million dollar question, however, remains: is the Party after dedicated and devoted supporters or mere numbers? Put it another way: is it after quality or quantity, conviction or convenience? ... Whatever happens, the Party will do well to keep a list of its forebears.

An ironic note to this foreword recalls that in the October 1983 General Election both Banda and Tembo lost their seats. This leaves a tantalising ambiguity hovering over the book. Is it an attempt to remind the young of the revolutionary legitimacy of those who ran the party and the state? Or is it the lament of a defeated Old Guard, replaced by technocrats and managers?

No such ambiguity hovers over the books arrayed in the bookstall at Jan Smuts airport in South Africa, where I was compelled to spend some hours while waiting for a connection to Botswana. The bookstall is exclusively devoted to accounts of the Rhodesian war of the 1970s. These one can buy in paperback narratives of the heroic deeds of the Salomo Scouts or the SAS, and more impressively, accounts of the heroism of the white population of Unstaid under bombardment, or picture-books illustrating how to deal with land-mines. These all carry an unequivocal message for South Africa: that heroism is not

This summer I visited the universities and capital cities of six African countries from Addis Ababa to Gaborone. I was struck, of course, by the almost insuperable obstacles to the publication of academic books by African scholars. Even in Nairobi, in the midst of unparalleled expansion of secondary and university education, publishers are showing only at the school text-book market and the flow of reprinted historical monographs which once made possible an internal Kenyan historiography, independent of and indifferent to the Euro-American academic world, has dried up. It is no solution for universities to establish their own presses — the University Press in Dar es Salaam has a back-log of over 140 accepted manuscripts. Moreover, when academic books are published in one African country, they are impossible to obtain in the bookshops of its neighbours. Only in Gaborone, with Botswana's internationally traded currency, do the bookshops offer material published in Nairobi and Harare alongside that published in Botswana and South Africa.

But despite all this, the obstacle was not, in fact, insuperable. Determined academics can and do publish, sometimes forming their own companies to do so. The radical libertarian Faculty of Law in Dar es Salaam maintains a flow of publications; new journals spring up, even if not all of them survive. Proudpoint Western academics can only admire these triumphs of perseverance, this urgency to communicate. Yet we get all too few chances to admire. Books published in Africa are seldom advertised or reviewed in Euro-American journals and few

PSYCHOLOGY IN SOCIETY

Psychology in society is a journal which aims to critically explore and present ideas on the nature of psychology in apartheid and capitalist society. There is a special emphasis on the theory and practice of psychology in the South African context.

Subscription rates (3 issues)

Southern Africa:	Individuals	R10.00
	Institutions	R15.00
Overseas and Foreign:	Interested subscribers should contact the editorial collective at the address given below.

There are back copies from Number 5 (May 1986).
The current issue is Number 9 (February 1988)

Editorial address: Psychology in society
P.O. Box 17285
Congella 4013
South Africa

TRANSFORMATION

is a South African journal serving as a forum for analysis and debate about this society and the surrounding region.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES (4 ISSUES)

	Southern Africa	United Kingdom (Sterling)		North America (US dollars)
		Airmail	Surface	Airmail	Surface
Individuals	R14.00	14.00	10.00	$20.00	$14.00
Institutions	R28.00	28.00	24.00	$40.00	$34.00
Single issues	R 4.50	4.50	3.50	$ 6.50	$ 5.00

Issues one and two are sold out. Copies of issue number three and four are still available. Please indicate clearly the issue from which you wish your subscription to start.

Contributions to be sent to:

TRANSFORMATION, c/o Economic History, University of Natal,
King George V Ave, 4001 Durban, South Africa.

Subscriptions to be sent to:

TRANSFORMATION, PO Box 37432, 4067 Overport, South Africa.

Subscription to TRANSFORMATION: rate from number

Name:

Address:

.....

.....

.....
